Presidential Order Forward Step; But Proclamation Alone Not Enough

DEMOCRACY took a great step forward last week when the President issued an executive order requiring that all contracts awarded by the government to defense industries shall contain a provision that industries accepting such contracts shall agree that they will not discriminate against a worker on account of race, color, creed or national origin, but that such worker shall be considered for employment solely upon the basis of personal qualifications.

We want to emphasize that it was a victory for democracy rather than a victory for colored Americans. America can not save its soul and proclaim that it is fighting for democracy so long as any segment of the population suffers from discrimination.

However, aside from the above stated basic principle, the Executive Order does denote a trend helpful to colored Americans. It is the first time since Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation that a President of the United States has used his great powers to attempt to secure equality of opportunity for colored people.

But no executive order enforces itself. No law is itself effective. There must be forces which make it work. This is the essential point which colored Americans must keep constantly before them.

So that the intention may become a reality, colored people must struggle and fight on two fronts:

(1) They must prepare themselves, regardless of the sacrifice. Not even an executive order can make a man operate a machine unless he is prepared.

(2) They must see that no straw bosses make ineffective the Presidential order. For example, two young colored mechanics, well trained, were sent to the Pennsylvania Employment Bureau to be placed on jobs. The functionary refused to send them out because they were colored.

That is the kind of thing that must be fought vigorously. Some prejudiced individual, who occupies a "two-by-four" job, sets himself up as the dictator who determines who shall and shall not get a job. It is the duty of colored people to use every method at their command to get rid of that type of person in the State Employment Bureau and in every other office which has to do with employment. Petty officials can prevent the carrying out of policies if they want to. It is just as important to have fair-minded clerks as it is to have liberal executives.

Finally, colored Americans must learn that justice and right must be fought for the same as anything else. It is only secured by a struggle. Appeasement is outmoded. It is our firm belief that the Executive Order issued by the President was the direct result of the threatened "March on Washington" by 10,000 colored Americans. Rights are simply do not work.

JUN 7 1941

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Although varied opinions have been expressed here on President Roosevelt's recent fireside chat, several Harlem leaders interviewed last week condemned the President for his continued silence on discrimination in the defense set-up.

Their views follow:

EUGENE K. JONES, executive secretary, National Urban League: "President Roosevelt left no doubt in the public's mind as to his attitude toward the threat to our democracy which Hitlerism makes more imminent daily.

"United America can destroy this world menace, and there is no longer any excuse whatsoever for any person in America to sabotage the complete mobilization of our man-power by any un-American act such as the denial of defense work or defense service because of race, creed or color."

White Disappointed

WALTER WHITE, executive secretary of the NAACP: "The President's speech means one thing and one thing only—war. Perhaps that is the only language that the dictators understand. I listened with interest as an American—and with disappointment as a colored man.

"America is not prepared to fight a major war and her state of preparation is cut down by 10 per cent or more because of the stupid racial prejudice which shuts colored citizens out of employment in the national defense program. I listened in vain for some word from the President about this."

Powell Scores Silence

DR. ADAM POWELL, Jr., co-chairman of the Greater New York Co-ordination Committee: "The speech doesn't mean anything to me until the President makes a strong pronouncement regarding colored people. All this talk about fifth columnists and who is right and who is wrong means absolutely nothing until he comes out as commander-in-chief of the army, the navy and the air corps and abolishes the practice of jim crow."

DR. CHANNING TOBIAS, senior secretary of the colored work division, National YMCA Council: "There is little new in the address. I think it was what most of the people of the country have been thinking and while the people do not want war, they are willing to do whatever is necessary to preserve what freedom there is in our country.

"Of course, there are those of us who feel that there is a lot to be done at home yet, and would hope that whatever is done, democracy may come to mean more for colored people than it does today."

FULL CITIZENSHIP

Under "What the People Say" on this page is a letter written by one of the most learned and progressive ministers in Chicago—Dr. Harold M. Kingsley of the Church of the Good Shepherd. Because of its positive, uncompromising tone together with the peculiar circumstances of its origin, we deem it appropriate to comment on this letter.

The separation of soldiers' camps into colored and white sections, the lack of library and recreational facilities for the Negro trainee, and the recent declaration made by the Secretary of the Navy that democracy would blow up the navy, disturb Doctor Kingsley. He believes that if democracy carries with it sufficient explosives to blow up the Navy, then the Navy should be subjected to the test. Moreover, he is strongly of the opinion that something should be done toward the abolition of segregated induction, racial division in camps, exclusive racial personnel in the Navy, and all other practices that contravene democracy. He writes:

"This war situation certainly presents some paradoxical situations to the already harassed Negro. First, Oswald Garrison Villard (former editor of the Nation) said that the Negro is approaching the war without enthusiasm. Mordecai Johnson (president of Howard university) recently at a Roundtable of Christians and Jews gave us a dramatic illustration of what Hitler might be thinking about these soft spots in our American life.

"The best position that we poor ministers can take is this: that war is a barbaric and unchristian institution; that we can only justify it on the same ground that we would defend ourselves against robbers and predatory animals; that we must always hope that our enemies may some day be clothed and in their right mind again and rejoin the brotherhood of humanity."

In saying that we should fight at the same time the battle for full citizenship rights and the battle for the ideals of America, Doctor Kingsley makes a point that should be weighed carefully by all those who believe that democracy is the only form of political government which gives promise of an abundant life to racial minorities. He says:

"Our difficulties in American life are a family quarrel, and while we fight among ourselves we must present a solid front against outside foes.

"I am clearly convinced that we should not wait to win the battle of full citizenship completely and finally before we take up the defense of our country. In fact, according to the Constitution of the United States both our property and our lives are subject to the call of the government as the price for the limited democracy that we may enjoy.

"Fifth column activities will put Negroes in a much weaker position than they are now. It is sound wisdom that we fight both of these battles at the same time—the battle for full citizenship rights and the battle for the ideals of America as presented in our foreign policy by President Roosevelt."

If more of our leaders were as frank and unequivocal as Doctor Kingsley, the Negro masses would have a clearer perception of the role they are to play in the crisis that threatens. Our people are divided, confused and bewildered. All this is caused by the silence maintained by our top leadership.

OPEN LETTER TO WICHITA SCHOOL BOARD

JUN 20 1941

To R. P. Jackson, president; Carl Johnson, Paul White, Wilbur H. Jones, John D. Bryant, J. J. O'Connor, Dr. Claude Holmes, Harrie Mueller, W. D. Critzer, Mrs. Cora Fulton, H. B. McKibbin, Oscar Blase, members of the Wichita Board of Education, and to L. W. Mayberry, superintendent, and J. C. Wobodin, supervisor of industrial arts, who are the board's executives in charge of vocational training:

America faces war! In preparation of defense, the federal government is calling all its man power for service either in industry or in arms. As early as last September, through the U. S. office of education, the school systems were asked to prepare a reservoir of trained labor, and Congress appropriated money for the purpose. Director Studebaker at the very outset made plain that Negroes were to be included among the trainees. He said Negroes were to be trained even though they were not usually employed in the crafts for which this training would prepare them.

Since that time three other government authorities have emphasized the need of having Negroes trained for defense employment: 1. Messrs. Knudsen and Hillman, in charge of the Office of Production Management, went so far as to ask those to whom they gave defense contracts to make answer whether or not they were taking steps to use employable Negroes. The U. S. office of employment under the social security set-up which is in charge of the federal side of the state employment bureaus, is the agency through which the OPM is to be informed of any refusal.

2. The employment bureau has taken a hand in getting Negroes trained by directing the local employment bureaus to refer Negroes for employment the same as whites, and ordering them to report refusals to use them.

3. The President, vested at this time with extraordinary powers over industry in order to meet the nation's emergency, has asked industry to employ Negroes without discrimination. To indicate the urgency of their employment, he has directed the OPM to "take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man power."

Members of the Wichita school board, the nation's need makes the case for Negroes who have sought to be trained in the vocational school you are operating. But instead of its welfare dictating your policy, you have eith er of your own choice refused them or you have let the wishes of others lead you to refuse them. Your supervisor, J. C. Woodin, explains that this is an emergency—there is no time to train Negroes.

Let's see whether training Negroes is a waste of time, as Woodin implies. No less person than the head of the aviation division of the national defense says that the adequate arming of America for air defense will require several million men. Acting on that warning, one aircraft manufacturer in the East has put 1,200 Negroes into training. The Douglass company in California is already employing several Negroes in highly technical capacities, a fact which proves their race's ability to do the work. In other defense callings, such as ship building and steel manufacture and fabrication, Negroes by the thousands are at work. The claim that Negroes cannot become efficient aircraft workers stands unproven. Men like Kindelberger have said that, but never having hired any Negroes whatever, their statement represents their thinking not their experience.

But why argue? A notable section of the United States for the first century or two was built by black hands. The product of their skill still stands, and is bragged about. The Natchez pilgrimage mansions and the French Quarter which is New Orleans' pride, were built by black men while they were in slavery. It is sheer nonsense to say that today when they have education, they are not as competent as their fathers were.

There is still another reason why you school authorities should have opened up vocational training to Negroes besides the nation's need. If you are wishful and do not see the danger that threatens, if you discount defense preparations, still you hold public office! You are sworn officials, under oath to carry out the law! The law requires equal education. Race and color are not a lawful reason for keeping any citizen from whatever schooling the public treasury provides. You have violated that law!

The case brought in Coffeyville some years ago to compel the junior high school to admit a Negro child was won. It was won agains this week in Topeka. Your own good common sense tells you that the same principle is involved where a vocational school raises the bar.

It is beyond me how any man in the United States who values the democratic principle of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness it confers upon him, can refuse that same boon to another. It is done, but as I say I do not understand the prejudiced person's thinking. The Bible states a great truth when it says that he who hates his brother and yet insists that he loves God, shall first make peace with his brother. In the same way I think the truly democratic American would take delight in practicing the principle he professes.

But you of the Wichita school system have not been good Americans by choice. So we must insist that you respect your oath of office enough and carry out the law because it is the law.

In the Gaines case brought in Missouri to compel the state to give a law education to a Negro, because it had at Missouri university a school of law for whites, the U. S. supreme court said definitely and beyond appeal that equal education must be provided. That is the issue in Wichita in this vocational school. Not Mayberry, nor Woodin, but the law is the master. The United States from President on down through every agency engaged in preparing the national defense, asks that you train Negroes equally with other workers. That wish should be your supreme desire!

Must your city and you be shamed by having this training, so vital to the nation, wrung from you by the government, or by appeal to law? Or will you turn your back on your past mistakes and hasten to enroll Negroes for vocational training at once? In 24 hours you can change policy. Make that change! Hitler has already enough helpers in this country without aid from officials elected in a state where equality is woven into the very web by the makers of its customs and constitution.

WITHOUT A JOB

HERE'S AN EXAMPLE of the type of discrimination that the National Committee for the Negro March on Washington is fighting to end.

All the members of the graduating class in the School of Aeronautical Engineering of New York University were immediately placed with airplane manufacturing companies except Douglas Watson, who happens to be a Negro.

Young Watson, who is the son of Municipal Court Justice James S. Watson, and Mrs. Watson of Harlem, won the first prize (the Voight Medal) for the best aeroplane design awarded by the University. He applied to a dozen airplane plants in all sections of the country for a place to do his bit in the National Defense Program but was turned down because of his race.

This is but one of hundreds of similar cases throughout the country that make it imperative that action, official action at Washington, and not words, is needed to change the policy of those companies filling defense orders, and of the Southern-dominated departments of the federal government itself which say that a man's skin must be white before he is capable of serving his country in any except the most menial jobs.

AMERICA'S TENTH MAN AND [illegible]

An editorial on this page a w[illegible] ago called attention to the fact that N[illegible]roes were being discriminated against in d[illegible]fense industries. Statements issued by both President Roosevelt and the Office of Production Management have cited evidences of discrimination which were not based upon inferior ability of lack of training, but upon color alone.

There was not a single objection raised to these statements; there were a number of commendations from both white people and Negroes.

The Advertiser knows that among its readers there are men and women who would not subscribe to the principal that defense jobs should be assigned on the basis of productive ability alone. Nevertheless the absence of any spoken or written objection to this principal indicates a heartening awareness that the production of ships, planes and guns cannot be hampered by racial prejudice.

The N. A. A. C. P., the most vocal organization representing Negroes, plans a "March of Jobs" in Washington to dramatize the problem of the Negro jobless. "Nothing we can think of would do the colored man in America so much harm as participation in a gesture like this at a time whent he country is in a supreme crisis," John Temple Graves, II, comments on this plan. The Advertiser agrees.

The President and the Office of Production Management, the supreme authorities on labor policy in defense, have stated in clear terms that discrimination in defense jobs is contrary to national policy. Companies with defense contracts have been urged not to follow such discriminations. It is true that in such industries as airplane manufacturing, these pleas have been disregarded.

But a "March of Jobs" in Washington will not solve the problem. An act of Congress would not help the situation. The desired policy has already been accepted as a national policy.

If America's "tenth man" is to be allowed to share his maximum responsibility in defense—and so contribute to his utmost in defense—the policy already announced must be adopted by factories with the support of public opinion in local communities. It is a great deal easier to conduct a demonstration in Washington than to arrange for surveys and conferences in a thousand local communities. But the latter will do a great deal more good.

The theme will have to be that in every instance where a Negro is denied a defense job because of his race, somebody is refusing to make use of a potential asset. There are no defense plants in Washington. Potential employers are not going to rush to a parade wtih offers of jobs.

Negro leadership should be active in a thousand communities making surveys of the workers available, their skills, their experience, and the type of jobs they can fill. Every earnest white leader who is conscious of what this country is up against should be cooperating to see that Negroes are permitted to fill jobs for which they are equipped.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—Most recent evidence of the beneficial results the Negro is securing from the impending worldwide disaster came in the form of an editorial in that sedate pillar of Southern respectability, the Montgomery Advertiser of Wednesday, June 18. The Advertiser, a newspaper, has for some time been catering to Negro interests. But most of their best stands on the part of the Negro bore the stigma of shawkish patronage and the stamp of the "yes-but" school of argument.

On Wednesday, however, the old lady of Montgomery could bare it no longer and went down the street of equality doing a "congeroo". Said the Advertiser in the first leaderette of the day:-

"This discrimination, as President Roosevelt pointed out in his memorandum to the OPM, is entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. It is the result of unreasoning prejudice on the part of either workmen or employers. It is not confined to any one region and is perhaps more systematic and universal in the West Coast aircraft industry than in any other place.

"Fundamentally the Negro has about as great a stake in the fight between the New Deal Order as any other group.

"The spectre of a Hitler-dominated world with repression and cruelty aimed at every racial minority, falls heavily upon him.

"The American Negro has demonstrated a loyalty and willingness to bear his share in the responsibilities ahead. This time, as 27 years ago, selective service calls upon him to serve in direct proportion to his numbers.

"There is small wonder that Negro leadership has been concerned, and at times angered by the systematic exclusion of members of this race. This is an exclusion entirely unrelated to questions of social relationships. It is either economic, or is based on the whimsies of color prejudice.

"To turn away a skilled workman simply because he is a Negro is a blow against the cause for which all of us are fighting. In the first place, our nation needs every ounce of its productive energy; to sacrifice to any degree the contribution that this one-tenth of our population can make is foolish. We need to maintain a healthy economic system during this emergency, and this cannot be done if the ravages of unemployment fall disproportionately on a single population group. Finally, and of importance to all of us, the issue at stake and the issue which all of us are being called upon to sacrifice for is the survival of democracy. Now, more than ever before, we need to strive to be unlike, rather than like the sowers of hatred and prejudice.

"If some Negroes are to be called upon to risk their lives for $21 a month, simple justice requires that other Negroes be given an opportunity to fill jobs building ships, guns and planes. Ability, not color, must determine fitness to serve. . ."

Hampton President Asks Roosevelt To End Service Bias

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va., June 26—Hailing President Roosevelt's memorandum last week to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the Office of Production Management, as a statement that further unites all Negroes and other minorities in a complete effort to defend, preserve and improve this democracy," President Malcolm S. MacLean of Hampton Institute wired the Institute's thanks to President Roosevelt for this powerful statement and added that "we hope that this policy can be speeded up in practice and effect in the armed forces as well so that ambitious and able young men may fly fighting ships, man naval guns and be trained in the new mechanized divisions."

Dr. MacLean's complete telegram to President Roosevelt on Monday, June 16, follows: "We who are responsible for educating and training for both the defense effort and for continued building of this democracy are deeply grateful for your powerful statement of policy against discrimination to the Ofice of Production Management this morning. Your statement further unites all Negroes and other minorities in the complete effort to defend, preserve and improve this democracy. We hope that this policy can be speeded up in practice and effect in the armed forces as well so that ambitious and able young men may fly fighting ships, man naval guns and be trained in the mechanized divisions."

Industry Is Not the Only Jim Crow Offender, Mr. Roosevelt

We are glad to note that the march on Washington to protest against discrimination in the army, the navy and defense industries is to go on.

The President's excellent memorandum directed William S. Knudson and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the Office of Production Management, to take immediate steps to deal with exclusion of colored workers from industry.

Mr. Roosevelt thus backs up OPM's own appeal to industrial leaders sent out April 11, 1941, and the President's fireside chat of March 17, 1941, in which he called for national unity.

But industry paid little or no attention to OPM then. The question is, will it listen to the President?

Our view is that it will not; but that OPM now has the direct order from the White House to write into defense contracts a clause stipulating that there shall be no color bar in hiring workers. It can take any other positive action it desires to carry out the President's wishes.

The President can go further, the committee in charge of the march on Washington believes. He can issue an executive order that will affect jim crow in the army, the navy, the air corps and defense industries. The memorandum to OPM mentioned above is not so inclusive. It mentions only private industry.

Take the armed forces, for instance. In New York, Illinois, Massachusetts and many other States, all races attend the public schools together and there is no State or municipal color line.

But New Yorkers who are drafted must go into jim crow army and air corps units and are not accepted in the navy at all except as cooks, waiters and flunkies.

There is more race discrimination in the U.S. Government agencies than there is in most States.

The march on Washington is a fair notice to the government that it must haul down its own color line first, and then say to industry, "This is the way to do it."

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

At Long Last

After eight years as Chief Executive, Franklin Delano Roosevelt has at last struck the evil forces of race prejudice and discrimination a deadly blow. An executive order signed at 2:05 Wednesday afternoon at the White House directed labor and defense industries to disregard race in employing workers is, in effect, a second emancipation proclamation. The first was a guarantee of physical freedom; this should mark the beginning of a new economic era for colored Americans.

The white press has reported the President's order as an item of casual interest. The reporters either did not know the drama which preceded the edict or for reasons peculiar to the narrow minds of the prejudiced omitted mention of those incidents which made history in the nation's capital Wednesday .

For the first time in American history, an American President has bartered with colored Americans.

The scheduled March-on-Washington of 50,000 Negroes protesting discrimination in defense industries was not to the President's liking. Through the First Lady he had requested A. Philip Randolph and Walter White to call it off. But the plans went on. Mr. Roosevelt issued a vogue and weak statement denouncing discrimination. Personally he asked the leaders to call off the march. The plans were nearing completion and line of march had been published. Then on June 25, A. Philip Randolph, Thurman L. Dodson, Rayford Logan, and Eugene Davidson were called into conference Wednesday with Fiorella La Guardia and Aubrey Williams, the last two acting for the President. Still Presidential determination was that the march must not take place. Four Negroes, as courageous and uncompromising as any that have ever been known as leaders, countered with the determination to abandon the march only if by so doing the object of the march could be obtained.

The President's edict was written in that session by those four colored Americans and the two agents of the President.

Without the march of 50,000 on July 1, 1941, Negro leadership accomplished all that they could have gained by that parade. If events of the next few months justify it, they are emphatic that the march will still be held.

SPEAKER RAPS DISCRIMINATION AGAINST NEGRO

Blames Jim Crow Tactics For Sorry Plight Of Southern Workers

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — One of the most important conferences held in connection with the Negro's participation in national defense was that of the Negro Woman's Committee for Democracy in National Defense, held at Howard university Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Particularly effective was the discussion in which Miss Pauline V Meyers of Richmond, Va., took part Miss Meyers, speaking during the panel on "Negro Women and Organized Labor" stressed the unfortunate condition of the Negro worker in the South and pointed out that the majority of all workers referred to were in the south and employed in the lowest brackets of the industries in which they were engaged.

Miss Meyers scored point after point in her allotted time and was given by unanimous consent additional time to continue blasting away at the serious condition which confronts Negro women throughout the south.

Also on the same panel discussion was Miss Sabine Martinez, organizer of the Cleaners and Dyers union of the CIO. Miss Martinez followed the general pattern laid down by Miss Meyers and thrilled her hearers with her description of the actual working conditions confronting Negro women in the cleaning and dying industry.

Two other panels, health, housing and recreation; and training and employment in defense industries were conducted Saturday at the university. In the evening, Mrs. Sue Baily Thurman presented an "Inter-American Night" including lectures, dancing, arts crafts and such of the Latin-American countries—the whole being a notable contribution to the general success of the event.

Civil liberties was discussed Sunday morning at the panel which heard Atty. Ruth Whitehead Whaley, Selma Hirsch of the Council for Democracy and Dr. Doxey Wilkerson of Howard.

The mass meeting Sunday afternoon in the chapel listened to fine speakers, in Mrs. Mary Church Terrell and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune as well as Mrs. Crystal Byrd Fauset and Miss Florence Kerr, who is assistant commissioner WPA.

The meeting closed on Monday with the final panels discussing the youth problems, farm security and the general morale of the Race. Findings and reports of the committees closed the sessions.

Out of town delegates included Miss Beatrice Edmonds of Richmond, Miss Pauline Meyers of Richmond, Mrs. Ora Brown Stokes also of Richmond; Marguerite M.Adams, Charlotte, N. C.; Hubbardine Daniels, New Orleans; Mrs. Carrington Davis, Baltimore; Laura E. Gates, San Antonio; Helen B. Grossley Dover, Del., Alma Illery, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Audley Moore, Mrs. Louise J. MacDonald; Miss Sabina Martinez, Mrs. Ruth Whitehead Whaley, Mrs. Justine Williams, Mrs. R. F. Tanner, Ferroll Vincent Smoot all of New York City; Annabelle Sawyer, Topeka, Kans.; Frankie Taylor, Boston; Irene Patton, Chattanooga, and Miss Lucy Humers, Union, Pa.

"I am too practical to feel," he said with emphasis, "that because of the issuance of this order there will be a great change overnight. I am certain, however, that the avenue has been opened and that we have the vehicle with which to bring to the attention of the proper authorities any forms of discrimination that might rise against any minority group within the defense industries."

March Was Postponed

The meeting was sponsored by the March-on-Washington Committee in the form of a "victory celebration" of the President's order. The scheduled march which was to have taken place Tuesday, July 1 was postponed as a result of the order.

Because of his long record of fairness as mayor of New York Mayor LaGuardia, many, believe, was the guiding force behind the move to have the President sign the order that purports to give a larger share of democracy to one-tenth of the population in view of the growing national crisis.

Not a Complete Victory

"I do not consider this a victory celebration," Mayor LaGuardia said, 'but I do rejoice that a wrong of long standing has been recognized."

He said he does not believe that any group is entitled to any special privilege or consideration and likewise none should be discriminated against.

"I have never appointed a Negro because he is a Negro, but have never discriminated against a Negro if he is competent to fill the job." This remark as were many others was greeted by spirited applause.

Continuing further, Mayor LaGuardia said: "Our country is now face to face with a grave crisis and finds itself in a period of emergency. It is the duty of all citizens to provide the necessary weapons of defense. We are all citizens and we only ask to do our part." In a sober vein he reminded his hearers that the committee had done its part to open up the way and now it is the duty of Negroes themselves to gain the competence and the necessary qualifications in order to fill the jobs.

Flew from Boston

He was late arriving due to the fact he flew in from Boston where he had spoken earlier to a conference of Governors.

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and organizer of the March-on-Washington Committee said that the local March committee has been ordered to remain intact to see if the order of President Roosevelt is carried out. He urged workers who are qualified to register at the various employment agencies throughout the country to be in line for jobs as they arise.

He said he was aware that the order does not overcome "discriminations in the Federal offices of the Government." He read the text of the order for the benefit of those who had not had the opportunity to read it.

"We Hate Hitlerism"

Walter White, NAACP secretary, said Negroes in America have a double reason for wanting to see Hitlerism destroyed. "We hate Hitlerism not only in Germany but in Mississippi and in the District of Columbia as well." He [illegible] militant sustained and organized public opinion will be necessary to carry out the order effectively.

Miss Jeanette Welsh of the Nonpartisan Council of Women told of the Negro woman's role in defense.

M. P. Webster, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters reviewed the fight Negroes have made and are now making to gain full membership in the American Federation of Labor; J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of Elks, portrayed the Negro's unfailing loyalty and patriotism from Crispus Attucks to the present time and predicted that if Hitler started across the Atlantic "black soldiers would meet him in the mid-Atlantic, put him in chains and present him as a gift to President Roosevelt on Capitol Hill."

Dodson Presided

Thurman L. Dodson was master of ceremonies. The invocation and benediction were given respectively by the Rev. Robert W. Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Temple and the Rev. Hampton Gaskins, pastor of Liberty Baptist Church. Musical numbers were given by the Dixie Harmonies Quartet and Miss Ruth Logan. Miss Virginia Williams led the audience in community singing.

"Wrong of Long Standing Has Been Recognized," Says Civilian Defense Chief

In a sincere talk straight from the shoulder, Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia of New York warned a gathering of more than 2,000 persons assembled at the Watergate, Tuesday night, that the executive order signed recently by President Roosevelt, giving equal opportunity to Negroes in defense, was not a panacea for all the ills of racial adjustment.

THE AMERICAN NEGROES HAVE AT LAST SMOKED THE PRESIDENT OUT IN THE OPEN AND MADE HIM TALK

The memorandum issued by the President, on official discrimination against the Negro on the defense program, is not worth the paper it is written on; and will not get the Negro any more jobs under the Office of Production Management, or any other department of Government employment, than he is receiving now. The President in good conscience must confess that the Negroes smoked him out, and made him say publicly, whether he approved or disapproved the un-democratic policy of his administration, discriminating against American citizens; on the defense program, on the ground of race and color.

Following the lead of the National Baptist Union-Review, the official organ of the National Baptist Convention of America; Dr. Green L. Prince, president, ninety per cent of the Negro press have continued to bombard the President's administration; until he had to say something whether what he said, changed the status of Negro participation in defense work. The Negro press and pulpit have done the race and country a good job and have served notice on the New Deal at Washington; that the race may not be able to do anything about the President's policy; but it was not going to take the injustice lying down on its back without the most vehement protestation that the human heart could make.

We agree with A. Phillip Randolph, head of the Pullman Porters' Association, when he said, there is nothing conclusive in the President's memorandum. It is not an official executive order, or a proclamation directing the Office of Production Management to change its policy of race discrimination, and give the race an equal opportunity to earn money on the defense program with other citizens. In consequence of which, Mr. Randolph said, that the mobilization for the march of citizens on Washington would be redoubled to the end. The President is afraid of the militant protest Mr. Randolph is leading against racial discrimination. He knows it will open the eyes of the Nation; and expose the fallacy of the President's efforts to guarantee democracy to foreign people, and deny in the same breath deliberately, the same privileges and rights to his people at home, on the ground of race and color. We are inclined to ask the question; what is the matter with any government that will pawn the lives and property of its citizens to give freedom and opportunity to aliens and deny these same privileges to citizens at home, on the ground of race and color? If the President has power and authority to seize the property of citizens; take over their mines and factories and operate them under military rule, by executive order, why can't he say to those holding Government contracts on our production program, you must give citizens jobs without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude. God only knows what sort of a Government we have. The devil does not know; all he knows, is, that those in charge of such a government are headed his way, and he is making preparation to give them a hot reception when they reach their destination.

The President is visibly on the "spot," and all liberty loving Negroes who love freedom more than they do, a "meal ticket," are going to fight to keep him on the "spot"; until he quits substituting politics for their Constitutional rights and privileges. If the President wanted the Negro to have work on our defense programs; all he would have to do; would be to say: Knudsen and Hillman; "cut discrimination out," and it would be cut out. And the Negro would have all the work he could do on all defense production projects. Knudsen and Hillman were appointed by the President and their duties were fixed by executive order; the President is their superior officer and they are his inferior officers, and must take orders from him or get out. Mr. Knudsen was chosen to head the Office of Production Management, because of his special fitness as a producer. One of his special qualifications for the job, was, as President of the General Motors Automobile Company, he didn't permit a Negro to have a job above that of a janitor, and worked more than 200,000 men daily.

Our President is a dictator, clothed with all the power and authority of a Hitler or Churchill, and he can do anything he wants to do. If he chooses to, he can create emergencies and provide for their cure or let them run their course. Whatever power or authority he did not assume to meet emergencies, that he discovered; he frightened Congress into conferring further dictatorial powers upon him by the Lease-Lend Bill. Since then, he has declared that an unlimited emergency exists; and if in his wise judgment, he thinks it is necessary for him to suspend the Constitution and its amendments; declare himself Emperor of America and return all Negroes to the South as slaves, he has the power and the authority to do so; and there is none to stop him, if he commands the Army and Navy to carry out his executive or military orders. If the President can seize the property of private citizens; public utilities, factories and mines, why can't he make some of those holding billions of dollars JUL 4 1941 Government defense contracts; give capable, deserving and worthy Negroes jobs, that they may make some of the money the Government is paying to white people making them millionaires? Is it the policy of the administration to keep all the Negroes on relief, on half rations and half pay, and take all white people off relief, and put them on production defense jobs at full wages and short hours? God forbid.

Long Road Ahead

When Mayor Fiorella La Guardia of New York, told an audience of three or four thousand colored Americans at the Water Gate last week that the executive order signed by President Roosevelt on June 25 was the "recognition of a wrong of long standing," his remark was applauded to a resounding echo over the still waters of the Potomac.

Those who saw and heard La Guardia will long remember the occasion and those words. His comment on the document showed greater courage and honesty than usually typifies the administration's spokesmen in dealing with Negro affairs. La Guardia was sincere and his words rang true.

"Not the celebration of a victory," he called the evening's program but the "occasion for rejoicing that a wrong of long standing has been recognized." There followed a challenge to colored workers to prepare themselves for placement in the defense industries. Qualifications and competence must be the basis upon which the Negro worker is placed on the payroll of defense industries. As Mayor of New York City, where he declared "civil service is on the level," he said that he had never appointed a Negro because he was a Negro and he had never failed to appoint one if he was qualified. JUL 12 1941 Mayor's employment policy is the employment policy which the Negro desires to have adopted by the federal government as well as private industry in or out of the defense program.

The Negro asks no favor because he is a Negro, but he is more and more vigorously protesting the discrimination heaped upon him because of his color.

It is fortunate that one with Mayor La Guardia's outlook occupies his position of importance in the national defense set-up. In any council where our interest is concerned it is good to know that we have a friend who is as forthrigpht, emphatic, and sincere at the conference table as upon the speaker's platform.

His audience that July night had the feeling that if Defense Administrator La Guardia has his way the March-on-Washington, which has been postponed for a time, will never be necessary. His audience felt, too, that Fiorella La Guardia with his wealth of experience in American public affairs was also sympathetic with the repeated warnings to local committees of the March-on-Washington movement to remain organized, to watch developments.

That recognition was a rejoicing. A hard, long road lies ahead. To wrong of long standing has been assume too much energy in premature ing that wrong. But let us not con- necessary preliminary step to right- ure a-

THAT OPM COMMITTEE

The President's recent executive order authorized the establishment of a five-member committee on fair employment practice in the Office of Production Management.

We believe that the purpose of this committee is primarily to stop discrimination against workers because of so-called race, color, religion or nationality.

Since the only persons likely to be discriminated against in defense industry are Negroes, Jews, Catholics and Americans of foreign extraction, we believe that the committee should consist of two Negroes, one Jew, one Catholic and a citizen of foreign origin.

Negro members should predominate on the committee because most of the discrimination in defense industry has been against Negroes.

There should be a Jewish member because there has been considerable discrimination against Jews, and there bids fair to be more.

There should be a Catholic member because of recent disclosures of discrimination against Irish Catholics.

And because of the growing anti-alien hysteria egged on by various newspapers and selfish interests, there is danger of injustice to citizens who were, or whose parents were, of foreign birth.

The Pittsburgh Courier is interested in doing away with all discrimination of an unfair nature against all workers, whether white or colored, Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant, because it recognizes that only when all discrimination of this sort is ended can Negroes be safe.

The President would be doing a fine thing if he made this committee truly symbolic of national unity in the manner we have suggested.

A FORMAL ORDER BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

barring discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups in defens industries is an important move in defense of democracy. The order is to be implemented by a committee set up in the Office of Production Management, which will receive and investigate complaints and take "appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid." As Mr. Roosevelt said in an earlier statement, "No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad." The fact that an order against discrimination was necessary is a wry commentary on the weaknesses of our democracy. We hope that the President's little emancipation proclamation will be vigorously enforced.

Shall The Negro Get Work?

The president recently felt it necessary to protest against a Jim Crow line in employment in defense jobs in towns and cities. The Negro, for all the apparent progress of his race, seems now caught in a more desperate position than even he knew in the past between a land where there are few places for him and the towns where there are no jobs for him.

This is an American problem of special significance to the South. In recent years huge numbers of Southern Negroes have moved to the cities of the North. Indeed today the largest communities of Negroes in the world are north of the Mason and Dixon Line. But millions of Negroes remain in the South and always will remain. That means that when, on the land and in the town, he is progressively shut off from a chance to work, the burden of his dependency on the region will increase. This is tragedy for the Negro, but it is a tragedy from which his white neighbors do not escape.

Indeed, this increasing economic plight of the Negro is one which puts a growing load on the South's advance. No region can afford the luxury of carrying a race which in large degree is not allowed to work for itself. But the process, shown in census figures, moves in that direction. Discrimination against the employment of Negroes in the end comes to a white insistence that white men be allowed to support Negroes in idleness. If that makes sense this is a silly world. Yet that seems to be the direction in which discrimination against the Negro in town and country employment is leading.—The Raleigh News and Observer.

Fears U. S. Scandal In Race Prejudice

By the United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Owen A. Knox, head of the Michigan Civil Rights Federation, today told the House Judiciary Committee that "continued army and navy discrimination" against Negro service men would result in a "national scandal."

Mr. Knox, appearing in support of a bill which would prohibit discrimination on a basis of race, creed or color by firms holding defense contracts or by government agencies, said discrimination was habitual" in advancement of Negro officers in the army and in acceptance of Negro men for naval duty.

CONDITIONS Negro soldiers are meeting daily in army camps throughout the nation [illegible] not what one would expect to find in a democracy. JAN 9 1941

This is not the speculation of an editor sitting in his chair in a newspaper office. Nor is it the impression of a reporter who has visited these camps.

It is, instead, much more significant. It is the conclusion reached by young men, some of whom volunteered their services, who live day in and day out in these camps and know from personal experience what conditions are.

The following are excerpts from letters received from young men in army camps by Elizabeth Galbreath, women's editor of the Chicago Defender, who has been carrying on an extensive correspondence with the soldiers.

The complaints voiced by the boys through their letters have been gathered together and forwarded to the War Department in Washington with a request from the Defender that they be investigated and that a report be made back to us.

FORT CUSTER, Mich.—"Three soldiers were accused of rape while they were in Wisconsin. Later the girl involved and the state dropped the charges. The boys claimed innocence. Yet they were retained in the guard house at Fort Custer. A few days ago a m[illegible] took the boys out and beat up one of them so that he required hospital attention. The other two boys in order to avoid a similar beating at that time were forced to admit guilt."

CAMP LIVINGSTONE, La.—"We are all very much disgusted by the conditions we found here. We have been restricted to the camp area to avoid trouble, as we have heard many rumors that colored soldiers are being mistreated in the city of Alexandria. It seems that the north and south each control an army of their own. In as much as we are members of the northern army, we will have to return north. The Negro soldiers of the south are ordered not to have anything to do with us."

Camp SHELBY, Miss.—"The colored cab company was put out of business by the whites. Since Camp Shelby has started to grow, there have been about four new cab companies established, and the whites won't let any colored cab company operate. It seems as though colored should operate for the Race troops."

PROVING GROUND, Ill. — "There are two cases of mumps. And for three weeks none of us has been allowed to get out. No colored relatives or friends have been allowed to enter the grounds, yet as many white persons as ask are allowed to enter. White paper boys. white soldiers' kids, and officers' friends coming in for parties are welcomed. They stay on the 'hill,' and we can't go up there at any time, not even to mail a money order. I can't see any difference in this place than in camps in the South. When a post has something contagious, no one is supposed to enter and no one is supposed to leave. They are not supposed to make a line between the colored and white. This dump is a burning hell on earth."

CAMP SHELBY, Miss.—I don't find things good here at all. Things are terrible. I could disclose some very important news. Could the paper send a reporter here? After a reporter was here some time ago it made things a little better. The white people are very, very unkind to colored, even to soldiers of high rank. This is a sad experience for me. I didn't know much about the South until I came here, but I find the whites like anything but real men. I wonder if the N.A.A.C.P. could send a special investigating committee here. There has been quite a litle incident happen here. It is bad not only in camp but in surrounding towns."

CAMP SHELBY, Miss.—"Mistreated soldiers wrote the war department about the conditions at camp. An inspection general came to investigate. On the day that the inspection officer came to camp, it was to have been made possible for the individuals who wished to have an interview with the office, instead an whole company was sent out on detail that day which kept the men away from the officer. The army is getting very rotten every day. After the men couldn't see the inspection officer, many of them drew up a petition and signed it. They tried to get this presented through an interested officer, but failed."

CAMP SHELBY, Miss.—"When a Negro soldier buys ice cream in the white post exchange, he has to go outside and eat it.

"Some companies are so terrible until their soldiers don't get time to rest at all. They don't stay clean, and their clothes are wrinkled and dirty.

"This camp being a Jim Crow place, there is no theatre for Negroes. No show of their own. Some companies kill the spirit of their soldiers."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a letter to President Roosevelt last week, Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council with affiliated organizations of the National Negro Business League, National Baptist Convention, the Bishops' Council of the A. M. E. Church and the National Negro Insurance Association, recommended and urged the appointment of the five-member Special OPM Board to prohibit discrimination against the employment of Negroes in the Government and National Defense jobs as authorized last week by Executive Order 8802, entitled "Re-affirming the policy of full participation in the Defense Program of all persons regardless of race, creed or national origin and directing certain action in the furtherance of said policy."

Leaders of the white race recommended and highly acceptable for membership on the OPM board to prohibit discrimination in employment, presented and urged upon the President. Chairman, Herbert Agar, editor, Louisville Courier Journal; Robert Allen, columnist of Merry-Go-Round, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Malcolm S. McLean, president of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.; Dr. Buell Gallagher, president of Talledega College, Talledega, Ala.

Members of the colored race recommended and highly acceptable for appointment to OPM board created by Executive Order 8802, are: Dr. C. B. Powell, president of Victory Life Insurance Company and editor of New York Amsterdam Star-News; Attorney Earl B. Dickerson, alderman of Second Ward, Chicago, Ill.; Attorney Leonard Lewis, general counsel of Afro-American Life Insurance Company, Jacksonville, Fla.; Hon. L. C. THERE IS ONE THING THE AMERICAN NEGRO MUST STOP DOING – THANKING WHITE FOLKS FOR GIVING THEM THEIR LEGAL RIGHTS

To His Excellency,
President Franklin D. Roosevelt,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

Your recent pronouncement in connection with the practices of discrimination in our great Defense Program, especially in its reference to Negro workers, will be powerful in its effect upon the morale and unity of Negro citizens and laborers.

Only time can tell and demonstrate the far-reaching effect of this noble and just statement:

"Labor stringencies are appearing in many areas; fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discriminations against Negro workers has been nation-wide.....This situation is a matter of grave national importance and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively.

"As chief executive of the nation, I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that all holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the utilization of available and competent Negro workers."

Representing twelve church denominations, more than 300,000 communicants of the Chicago Interdenominational Council of Negro Churches, we herein express our appreciation and complete approval of your noble expression and high purpose to make American Democracy function in America.

We pray that Your Excellency, with the high executive authority entrusted to you in the special emergency under which the nation now labors, will set the example in our national life, through executive order, that all forms of discrimination in the National Defense Program shall be completely eliminated, and thus implement the expression and purpose of Your Excellency in your noteworthy pronouncement.

We further pray that Your Excellency will not fail to bring to bear upon unions, labor unions and other organizations that may be related to the Defense Program, the fact that our government will not tolerate any form of un-Americanism.

The Chicago Interdenominational Council of Negro Churches:
Bishop James A. Bray, Pres.
Rev. U. S. Robinson, Sec.

Special Committee of the Executive Committee:
Rev. J. M. Evans, Vice-Pres.
Rev. H. M. Marbly
Rev. H. B. Hawkins, Chrmn. Ex. Brd.
Mr. A. L. Foster, Chicago Urban League
Rev. U. S. Robinson
Rev. A. E. Bennett
Rev. B. F. Smith.

The above men who issued and published the above resolution to the world sought to render their race a lasting service, but fell into error, which is second nature with Negro leadership. Thanking white folks for what is already ours by every moral and legal right, written in the books of God and man, is a confession of an inferior complex. Negroes must stop thanking white folks for rights, privileges and opportunities that white folks have been robbing the race of for two hundred years more or less. We must stop begging and thanking white folks for rights, privileges and opportunities that the law and God have given us. We thank the President or even commend him for issuing an executive order, cutting out discrimination on our defense program, after he had been forced to do so by an aroused public sentiment? The white folks have had a monopoly on all the defense work since its beginning; yet, they have not and will not pass a sanctimonious set of resolutions, thanking the President for their jobs. Then, why should the Negroes thank him in the light of the President's failure to do so, until he was forced by public sentiment that he could no longer resist?

When we give thanks for what belongs to us, we vacate our rights as citizens, and confess that we are creatures of public charity. We ought to stop looking to other people to finance our schools and churches; our Y. M. C. A.'s and other racial institutions, and finance them ourselves. If we ever command the respect and confidence of other people, we must "tote our own skillet." Within our racial body we do not expect that portion of our race that depends upon the other portion of the race to carry them on. We make our own grade in racial value and worth; and we need not expect to be labeled in value, or among the things that other races do, any more than we mark ourselves to be, by what we achieve within the race and contribute to civilization along with the contribution of other races. White people do not ask Negroes to contribute to them from any source whatsoever; and Negroes ought not to expect white folks to carry them along any more than white people expect Negroes to carry them along. That does not mean that we should not accept any assistance that our white neighbors desire to offer us, but it does mean that when it comes to the rights and privileges that God and the laws of our country give us, not to beg them, but take them.

From other parts of the country come reports of a slight liberalization of employment policies in defense plants.

What we have got so far is only a drop in the bucket, but it is much more than we would have received had we kept our mouths shut.

We shall get more opportunities in national defense work in proportion to the skill and persistence of our agitation.

The most important organization is that in each community, and the effectiveness of local organizations depends upon the intelligence and militancy of its leadership.

Streams of letters converging on Washington from all sections of the country will continue to have good effect on the President and the members of Congress.

Mass meetings are valuable to hammer home to the people the necessity of carrying on this fight.

National defense is costing a tremendous sum and Negroes are helping to pay for it every time they buy anything.

MAY 31 1941

It is grossly unfair to tax an underpaid and largely jobless people for the defense of democracy and then deny them democracy in employment in the businesses made possible by their tax money.

On the military and naval front we are making little or no headway.

This is largely due to the fact that we have been fooled by the extension of the barriers of segregation in the Army into believing that some big gains have been made.

While it is true that Negroes are now serving in many branches of the military service from which they were previously barred, they are serving in segregated units, and this is undemocratic although, unfortunately, not un-American.

We must not be satisfied with segregation, no matter how attractive it may appear.

Regardless of what Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox may say, discrimination can and will be ended in the Navy Negroes help support.

It will be ended by organized agitation of Negroes and liberal whites, as will discrimination in the Army, Coast Guard and Marine Corps.

We have the greatest opportunity since 1865 to break down government-sponsored and condoned inequality.

Let us take advantage of it and continue our agitation until we get what we want.

AGITATION AND DEFENSE

Constant agitation of a minority of militant Negroes for equality of opportunity in national defense work is beginning to bear fruit.

MAY 31 1941

Buffalo's Bell Aircraft Company has hired 30 Negro workers and the Curtis-Wright Company in the same city has hired two colored engineers and is training seven Negroes in special courses.

The Cheyney Silk Company in Hartford, Conn., has employed a number of Negro girls.

The Lake City Ammunition Company in Kansas City, Mo., has Negro bricklayers helping to build its plant.

New Republic
New York, N. Y.

SIR: I am a selectee stationed at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The boys in my company and regiment are from the New York area. The majority of them are volunteers. The most usual reason for their enlistment is unemployment. They volunteered with the idea: (1) that they might learn a trade, for most of them are unskilled; (2) that they would get away from oppressive conditions at home caused by unemployment; or (3) that they wanted to "get the year over with."

Nowhere is there even a whisper of a desire to "contribute our defense effort." On the contrary, the boys in my camp positively jeer at the words "democracy" and "American life." They remember the slogans of the last war very well. They have seen "No Help Wanted" signs too often. They don't like Hitler, but they don't want to fight him, except, of course, if he comes over here. This is expressive of the failure of democracy to impress a love and awareness of its values and symbols upon us.

Speaking of democracy: My lieutenant was lecturing us on military courtesy, when one of the draftees asked whether we had to salute Negro officers, of whom there were many stationed nearby. He replied, "Whenevah ah see one, ah try to duck around a building, but once in a while ah cain't avoid them, so ah salute. Ah'd advise you to salute them too, but stay away from them as much as possible."

I know that the salvation of the progress we have made and will make depends upon England's ability to stand off and eventually defeat the Axis. No aid from the United States, to my mind, is too much to achieve this. But the values I hear praised are material ones: "What is democracy without a job?" The army's emphasis is completely on military discipline and efficiency. They take our attitude for granted. The only thought given to morale is to provide a ping-pong table, baseball games and B movies.

WILMINGTON, N. C., June 5—Although Camp Davis, where more than 6,000 colored soldiers will ultimately be trained, is actually located at Holly Ridge, this stop on the railroad "ain't nothing but a whistle," in the same sense that "chicken ain't nothing but a bird." The real town, so far as the soldiers are concerned, will be Wilmington, 25 miles away.

Both races in Wilmington realize that the soldiers, white and black, will soon be upon them. Public officials and private citizens have been fighting through a maze of technicalities, money matters and misunderstandings to try to work out a reasonable program of providing recreation for the men who are to come.

When your correspondents visited Camp Davis, it was about 60 per cent incomplete. The most complete area was that already assigned to the colored soldiers by Brigadier General Crawford, commanding officer. No white soldiers were present. A station complement, composed of details of fire fighters, service men and quartermaster workers, had been placed at the camp and, for the time being, a CCC company was installed in the barracks of the prospective soldiers.

BUILT BUILDING FOR WHITE TROOPS

An increment of white selectees reached camp some time after midnight April 30 and a cadre of colored soldiers came later in the day.

The big issue, so far as colored citizens were concerned, up until the time the soldiers arrived, was provision of a recreation building in the city of Wilmington. A building, costing $10,000, had already been constructed for the white boys.

Originally, an understanding had been effected with city councilmen and county commissioners to erect two buildings, each to cost $10,000, one for Negroes and one for whites.

But the white building was constructed first and something happened.

What happened was that a conference on morale was held in Washington and plans laid to build recreation centers in camp towns throughout the United States. Congress was to be asked to appropriate a large sum of money to help these cities build. When Wilmington learned that it might get some Federal money, the city fathers took a firm grip on the $10,000 allotted for the Negro building and said, "Let's wait to see what will happen in Washington."

As a result, nothing has been done.

BEGGED, PLEADED, STORMED, WITH COUNCIL

Lieut. Col. R. D. Brown, who will have command of two of the three colored regiments to be trained at Camp Davis, has begged, pleaded and stormed with City Council. And Col. Brown is a passionate pleader. But his pleas get nowhere against the expectation of Federal money.

Aiding Col. Brown and rendering splendid service in conditioning whites and blacks to properly receive the Negro troops has been the colored Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington. One of the jobs it did was to list all the available housing in the city for the use of men who would stay in town.

Among the citizens who have taken the lead in this work have been Presiding Elder Herbert Shaw of the A.M.E. Zion church; Dr. Robert R. Taylor, retired vice-principal of Tuskegee institute; Dr. John Avant and Dr. F. F. Burnett. They enjoy the unrestricted confidence of the miltary officials and the respect of city and county officials, but even they have not been able to shake the city fathers loose from the $10,000 that was supposed to go for a Negro recreation hall.

These colored leaders and the military officials shake their heads to show their exasperation when they realize how a little rumor of a hand-out from Washington can wreck the best-laid plans of civic and military leaders.

Nevertheless, they are carrying on industriously in every way they can. Presiding Elder Shaw met the first contingent of colored soldiers to arrive and extended a welcoming hand. He is a young, handsome, energetic leader of the church, who is a real man's man. Dr. Avant, one of the oldest physicians and surgeons in point of service in the city, remembers the good old days in Wilmington when Negroes did not take a back step. He has to be shown how to step backwards to get good footing these days.

Dr. Taylor is the Nestor of the group. His roots go back deep and far in the life of Wilmington. Back in the days of President Taft, he interceded with the Chief Executive to have Congress allot some unsued public land for Negro educational purposes. But a smart lawyer for the Boadd of Education in Wilmington showed that Congress had not and could not use language designating the gift for any class of citizens and, as a consequence, Negroes never got the land, although the Board of Education did.

Foster Flavorial Burnett is doubtless one of the busiest physicians and civic workers, South or North, today. He conducts his own clinic, employing assistant physicians and three nurses, works at the local hospital, gives the benefit of his wisdom and industry to all types of civic work and business enterprises and never says he has had enough.

Negroes And Defense

A Nation that has set itself up as a defender of democracy becomes a vulnerable target for totalitarian attack from the inside as well as the outside when it denies to a substantial minority of its own citizens the opportunity to participate fully in its defense program. Hence it is eminently fitting that an organization such as the Council for Democracy, which seeks to inculcate faith in democracy by helping to make it work, should be concerned about the problem of the Negro in defense industries. The council has brought together in a pamphlet data from official and unofficial sources testifying to the existence of widespread discrimination against Negro workers.

The aircraft industry is said to be an outstanding example of exclusionist policies. But it is far from being an isolated instance. We are told that the "evidence is uniform, even monotonously so, of deliberate exclusion of skilled Negro workers from industries clamoring for just such skill." Particularly disheartening is the denial of training facilities that would fit Negroes to undertake skilled work. In some cases these avenues are closed by employer action; in other cases, by discriminatory trade-union policies. When training is provided for Negroes, moreover, it is often inferior to that open to whites. Nor is prejudice confined to the civilian field. As the Council for Defense states, it exists in the Army and Navy as well, the Navy being the worst offender. No Negroes at all, as a matter of fact, are accepted in the Navy except as mess boys.

Of course, this record of discrimination is a familiar story. The defense program simply throws into high relief the injustice and, in fact, the stupidity of policies that prevent the full and effective utilization of all our much-needed reserves of man power in a national emergency. But, much as we may deplore the situation, violent denunciation or coercive policies designed to overcome discrimination will not provide the needed corrective. Progress can best be made by frank and free discussion of the problems of the Negro in industry. Such discussions have already borne fruit, for a number of the country's leading corporations with large defense contracts have recently informed the OPM of their intention to provide an increased number of jobs for Negroes. One large aircraft manufacturer has even admitted Negroes to training classes. The Army and Navy could, if they would, assist this program by encouraging employment of Negroes on defense work in leased plants.

Of course, many employers honestly fear to take on Negro labor because of the danger that friction might hamper operations. But the exceptional demands of the defense program are a challenge to individuals to take that risk, for aside from the need for man power, it is the test of that democracy for the defense of which the Nation is organizing. "Basically," as the council says, "it is a problem in human and group relations, best solved locally by all the avenues of good will and mutual understanding."

Organizations such as the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries and the Council for Democracy have done a great public service by appealing for fair, nondiscriminatory treatment of colored citizens. Government agencies, too—notably the United States Employment Service and OPM—have been endeavoring through publicity and by persuasion to break down barriers to the employment of qualified Negroes. President Roosevelt has now recognized the gravity of this problem by urging industry to open the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers. Although the President emphasizes the Nation-wide character of the discrimination against Negroes, he also pleads for minority groups discriminated against because of their national origin or their religion. While this latter kind of discrimination is localized, it is sufficiently widespread to have deprived many conscientious workers of access to defense jobs in communities where there is an actual scarcity of labor. The economic waste and the shortsightedness of such exclusionist policies are obvious. However, the President—rightly—is much more concerned about the effect of arbitrary discrimination upon the Nation's morale, and the appeal is for the abandonment of practices based, as he says, upon the very theories which we are fighting abroad. There can be only one kind of response from Americans who sincerely believe in the principles upon which our democracy was founded.

WILMINGTON, N. C., June 5—Although Camp Davis, where more than 6,000 colored soldiers will ultimately be trained, is actually located at Holly Ridge, this stop on the railroad "ain't nothing but a whistle," in the same sense that "chicken ain't nothing but a bird." The real town, so far as the soldiers are concerned, will be Wilmington, 35 miles away.

Both races in Wilmington realize that the soldiers, white and black, will soon be upon them. Public officials and private citizens have been fighting through a maze of technicalities, money matters and misunderstandings to try to work out a reasonable program of providing recreation for the men who are to come.

When your correspondents visited Camp Davis, it was about 60 per cent incomplete. The most complete area was that already assigned to the colored soldiers by Brigadier General Crawford, commanding officer. No white soldiers were present. A station complement, composed of details of fire fighters, service men and quartermaster workers, had been placed at the camp and, for the time being, a CCC company was installed in the barracks of the prospective soldiers.

BUILT BUILDING FOR WHITE TROOPS

An increment of white selectees reached camp some time after midnight April 30 and a cadre of colored soldiers came later in the day.

The big issue, so far as colored citizens were concerned, up until the time the soldiers arrived, was provision of a recreation building in the city of Wilmington. A building, costing $10,000, had already been constructed for the white boys.

Originally, an understanding had been effected with city councilmen and county commissioners to erect two buildings, each to cost $10,000, one for Negroes and one for whites.

But the white building was constructed first and something happened.

What happened was that a conference on morale was held in Washington and plans laid to build recreation centers in camp towns throughout the United States. Congress was to be asked to appropriate a large sum of money to help these cities build. When Wilmington learned that it might get some Federal money, the city fathers took a firm grip on the $10,000 allotted for the Negro building and said, "Let's wait to see what will happen in Washington."

As a result, nothing has been done.

BEGGED, PLEADED, STORMED WITH COUNCIL

Lieut. Col. R. D. Brown, who will have command of two of the three colored regiments to be trained at Camp Davis, has begged, pleaded and stormed with City Council. And Col. Brown is a passionate pleader. But his pleas get nowhere against the expectation of Federal money.

Aiding Col. Brown and rendering splendid service in conditioning whites and blacks to properly receive the Negro troops has been the colored Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington. One of the jobs it did was to list all the available housing in the city for the use of men who would stay in town.

Among the citizens who have taken the lead in this work have been Presiding Elder Herbert Shaw of the A.M.E. Zion church; Dr. Robert R. Taylor, retired vice-principal of Tuskegee institute; Dr. John Avant and Dr. F. F. Burnett. They enjoy the unrestricted confidence of the miltary officials and the respect of city and county officials, but even they have not been able to shake the city fathers loose from the $10,000 that was supposed to go for a Negro recreation hall.

These colored leaders and the military officials shake their heads to show their exasperation when they realize how a little rumor of a hand-out from Washington can wreck the best-laid plans of civic and military leaders.

Nevertheless, they are carrying on industriously in every way they can. Presiding Elder Shaw met the first contingent of colored soldiers to arrive and extended a welcoming hand. He is a young, handsome, energetic leader of the church, who is a real man's man. Dr. Avant, one of the oldest physicians and surgeons in point of service in the city, remembers the good old days in Wilmington when Negroes did not take a back step. He has to be shown how to step backwards to get good footing these days.

Dr. Taylor is the Nestor of the group. His roots go back deep and far in the life of Wilmington. Back in the days of President Taft, he interceded with the Chief Executive to have Congress allot some unusued public land for Negro educational purposes. But a smart lawyer for the Boadd of Education in Wilmington showed that Congress had not and could not use language designating the gift for any class of citizens and, as a consequence, Negroes never got the land, although the Board of Education did.

Foster Flavorial Burnett is doubtless one of the busiest physicians and civic workers, South or North, today. He conducts his own clinic, employing assistant physicians and three nurses, works at the local hospital, gives the benefit of his wisdom and industry to all types of civic work and business enterprises and never says he has had enough.

Negroes And Defense

A Nation that has set itself up as a defender of democracy becomes a vulnerable target for totalitarian attack from the inside as well as the outside when it denies to a substantial minority of its own citizens the opportunity to participate fully in its defense program. League Broadcast To Make Public Aware Of Barriers Negroes Face

NEW YORK CITY—(SNS)—Continuing its campaign to make the general public of America aware of the fact that discrimination against skilled Negro workers is being practiced daily in the nation's defense industries, the National Urban League will present a one-hour coast-to-coast radio program over the Columbia network on Sunday afternoon, March 30, from 5:00 to 6:00 p. m. EST.

Among those expected to take part in the program are Marian Anderson, Ethel Waters, Bill Robinson, Joe Louis, Eddie Matthews, Anne Wiggins Brown, Kenneth Spencer and a host of other nationally known Negro stars. The bands of Louis Armstrong, John Kirby, Ella Fitzgerald and Duke Ellington will contribute several numbers each.

Speakers invited include Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Mayor of New York; Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Eugene Kinckle Jones, executive secretary of the National Urban League; and a representative of the Office of Production Management in Washington.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has donated its full facilities for this one-hour program, including the asisstance of its writing and production staff.

The program is being arranged for the Urban League by Edward Lawson, managing editor of OPPORTUNITY; and Miss Ann Tanneyhill, assistant in charge of guidance and personnel of the League's Department of Industrial Relations.

Kindelberger Says 'No Negro Skilled Workers' Despite Their Training

MAR 21 1941

Bomber Plant Will Hire 10,000 Men, But Colored Americans Can Get Jobs Only as Janitors

MAR 21 1941

James H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation company which will operate the government bomber plant at Kansas City, Kas., said Monday, March 17, that under no circumstances will his company employ Negroes as aircraft workers or mechanics.

The plant, for which ground was broken a week ago in the Fairfax airport district, will employ 10,000 persons, Mr. Kindelberger said, but Negroes will be used only as janitors.

"We will receive applications from both white and Negro workers," Mr. Kindelberger said by long distance telephone from Inglewood, Cal. "However, the Negroes will be considered only as janitors and in other similar capacities."

The North American president said that even if Negroes are trained as aircraft workers, they can get jobs only as janitors.

"There will be some jobs as janitors for Negroes," he said. "Regardless of their training as aircraft workers, we will not employ them in the North American plant."

"While we are in complete sympathy with the Negro, it is against the company policy to employ them as mechanics or aircraft workers.

Maintain Same Policy

"We use none except white workers in the plant here at Inglewood and the plant in Dallas and we intend to maintain the same policy in Kansas City."

The statement of Mr. Kindelberger Monday was the first definite information that the Kansas City Negro Defense committee had received from the company on the employment of Negroes in the bomber plant being erected by the government and to be operated by North American under contract.

Up to that time, Negroes have anticipated the wide employment of Negroes as skilled workers in the bomber plant. They were assured of jobs by the civic leaders of Kansas City, Kas., prior to the bond election held February 11 to determine whether the city should purchase the Fairfax airport as a testing field for the planes to be made at the plant.

When ground was broken at the bomber plant site Saturday, March 8, Negro citizens were issued special invitations and tickets to sit in the reserved section.

Planning Training

The school boards of both Kansas Cities have been making plans to train white and Negroes alike for employment in the bomber plant. Assuming that in a national defense industry, all qualified citizens, regardless of color would be employed, preparations are being made to train Negroes and whites in the skills necessary for employment in the bomber plant.

The bomber plant is being erected by the United States government on property owned by the municipality of Kansas City, Kas., where the population is 20 percent Negro. The bombers to be made in the plant will be tested on a field for the purchase of which the voters of Kansas City, Kas., have just passed a bond issue of $750,000.

Negro citizens of both Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kas., aroused over the statement of J. H. Kindelberger that no Negro mechanics will be hired at the bomber plant, sent telegrams, night letters and letters to President Roosevelt Monday night and Tuesday protesting the discrimination.

Telegrams also were being directed to Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri, who is chairman of a senate committee investigating conditions surrounding national defense contracts.

AIRPLANE CO. DEFIES U. S. IN STAND ON BIAS

'Can't Force Us To Hire Negroes,' Consolidated Tells NAACP Group

SAN DIEGO, Cal. — "The United States cannot force us to hire Negroes." So declared the Consolidated Aircraft corporation to local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People officials this week.

On the other hand, many Negroes have completed aircraft training in the public schools here, but despite the dire need of airplane companies for even semi-skilled aircraft workers, Negroes are not given jobs.

Dr. W. C. Crawford, city superintendent of schools, speaking to the San Diego Race Relations Society at the white Methodist church here, stated that Negroes have the "absolute" right to receive training in aircraft courses in the public schools.

According to Edgar N. Gott, vice-president of Consolidated, "Negroes will be employed as in the past in positions which they, as individuals, are capable of filling."

Positions filled "in the past" at Consolidated by Negroes are those of lavatory attendants. There are nine such attendants. There are 16,000 whites employed at the aircraft plant.

Gott's claim is that white workers will not work with Negroes, despite the brilliant record made by Joseph Dunning, stress analysis engineer at the Douglass plant in Santa Monica, which employs over 30,000 workers.

There has not been a trace of trouble between Dunning and his fellow workers and it has been hoped that this would do away with such prejudices on the part of aircraft officials who profess to believe to the contrary.

Newest Aircraft Factory Built By Government Funds ---Closed Tight To Negroes

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Negro citizens muttered threats of violence and an all-out protest demonstration against the un-American stand of J. H. Kindelberger, president and general manager of the North American Aviation, Inc., who declared that Negroes "would only be hired as janitors."

"Regardless of their training as aircraft workers, we will not employ them in the North American plant. While we are in complete sympathy with the Negro, it is against the company policy to employ them as mechanics or aircraft workers," Kindelberger declared last week.

The North American Company is one of the corporations built by Federal funds, and therefore it was expected that, in accordance with the discrimination clause of the defense setup made by the President, that Negroes would be hired.

Firm In Stand

Although NAACP, Urban League, and other civic group officials protested this drastic action towards the Negro, Kindelberger remained firm in his statement.

MAR 27 1941

"We use none except white workers in the plant here in Englewood and in the plant in Dallas and we intend to maintain the same policy in Kansas City," he declared.

Negroes have anticipated their wide employment as skilled workers in the bomber plant. They were assured of jobs by the civic leaders of Kansas City, prior to the bond election held February 11 to determine whether the city should purchase the Fairfax airport as a testing field for the planes to be made at the plant.

Governor Distressed

The statement of Kindelberger was the first definite information that the Kansas City Negro Defense committee had received from the company on the employment of Negroes in the bomber plant being erected by the government and to be operated by the North American under contract.

Governor Payne Ratner of Kansas, after reading the statement by Kindelberger stated:

"I think it is terrible. I'm distressed, shocked. It is un-American. I do not believe President Roosevelt will stand for this policy."

MAR 27 1941

Mayor Don C. McCombs of Kansas City, stated that he had received a promise from Kindelberger several months ago that Negroes would be hired.

"I will wire him immediately and find out what he intends to do," the Mayor stated, "I will not comment until I have heard from him."

Citizens were urged to send telegrams, letters to President Roosevelt, their senators, and to Sidney Hillman, of the Office of Production Management of the National Defense in Washington.

In a letter addressed to William S. The interview with Mr. Kindelberger, he went on, "lays bare the fact that the aircraft industry does not intend to use Negroes, even if trained, in skilled and semi-skilled positions.

"But the article does not state a further fact. Not only will Negroes not be given the chance to become trained, but the Negro vocational school in Kansas City, Mo.—in a segregated system through it is—is to be utilized for classes of white trainees, from which Negroes are to be barred."

JANITOR JOBS WILL NOT HOLD RACE'S LOYALTY

Walter White Tells OPM Head Jim-Crow in Air Plants Harbor Danger

APR 5 - 1941

NEW YORK—The employment policies in national defense industries which bar Negro workers, or limit them to janitor jobs "cannot command their full loyalty and unstinted support" of the national defense program, it was declared in a letter this week from the NAACP to William S. Knudsen, OPM director.

The N.A.A.C.P. cited for Mr. Knudsen an interview given to The Kansas City Star on March 17 by J. H. Kindleberger, president and general manager of North American Aviation, Inc., of Inglewood, Cal., in which Kindleberger is quoted as saying, "under no circumstances" will Negroes be employed by his company except as janitors, "regardless of their training as aircraft workers."

The N.A.A.C.P. letter declared the Kindleberger pronouncment was the "most brazen" that had been made, and continued:

"We recall your statement that as director of OPM, you have no authority to force plants to employ Negro workers.

"But we believe that such policies as those announced publicly by Mr. Kindleberger and practiced throughout the aviation industry, and in scores of other plants, constitute a menace to the united effort demanded by President Roosevelt and yourself, and as such deserve the serious consideration of OPM.

APR 5 - 1941

"In his radio address to the world on March 15, Mr. Roosevelt stated: 'There is not one among us who does not have a stake in the outcome of the effort in which we are now engaged.'

Executive's Campaign Against State-Wide Discrimination On

Continuing his campaign to abolish job discrimination in New York State against racial and religious minorities, Governor Herbert H. Lehman last Saturday appointed a special committee of 27 members of both races "to consider methods of dealing with the problem of discrimination against various minority groups" in employment on defense contracts.

The special committee, whose duty it will be to study the problems of job discrimination especially against the Negro in New York, will meet and function under the chairmanship of Miss Frieda S. Miller, state industrial commissioner.

In his letter of invitation to industrial leaders, manufacturers, editors and publishers, social workers, labor leaders, churchmen and others to accept membership on the committee, Governor Lehman said, in part:

"It is a serious challenge to the sincerity of our desires to defend and strengthen our democratic way of life when trained, experienced, willing workers who need jobs are refused an opportunity on grounds which are obviously un-American."

"I continue to get evidence of the difficulties still being encountered by various minority groups in their efforts to find employment and to make available to industry and the country's defense effort their skills and interest and active support."

"At a time when the need for extending industrial activity is calling forth the utmost effort of both public and private organizations, it is unpardonable defeatism for us not to find a way to use the labor resources which these minority groups represent. Experience clearly indicates the loss of productive resources which such a course entails.

The Negro leaders invited to serve on the committee are: Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League; A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Dr. Channing H. Tobias, senior secretary in charge of Colored Work in the Young Men's Christian Association.

Other persons asked to get behind the governor's program are:

Also, Henry Heide, president Henry Heide, Inc.; the Right Rev. Robert F. Keegan, Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York; Frances Kellor, American Arbitration Association; Richard Lawrence, president Bankers Commercial Corporation; George LeSauvage, Frank Shattuck & Co.

Also Emil Rieve, president Textile Workers' Union, (C.I.O.); Beardsley Ruml, director Second Federal Reserve District; David Sarnoff, president Radio Corporation of America; Alfred Schoellkopf, president Welfare Council of New York City, and William H. Winans, director industrial relations, Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation, New York City.

Speaking by radio to Jackson Day dinners on March 29, President Roosevelt called upon the nation with all its resources to help block the dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

APR 12 1941

How can we prepare to defend our country, President, unless you say the word which will open the kitchen doors of the navy and put a gun, instead of a dishcloth, into the hands of patriotic colored Americans?

Pursuit Of Democracy

SAYS PRESIDENT CAN HALT DISCRIMINATION IN THE ARMY AND NAVY

BY MARJORIE MCKENZIE

JUN 14 1941

NOW that the spell is broken, now that the resonant tones of the President's voice and the compelling force of his personality have receded from memory, the cold and clear intent of the words in his last address has gained the intelligent understanding of a befogged and wo[illegible] America. The control of the legion problems in national defense have been taken into his strong and purposeful hands, no bones about it, and we shall have some leadership and action. As an indication of exactly what this means, Mr. Roosevelt made short shrift of any possible delay in settling the airplane strike on the West Coast. We are quite aware that he knows the difference betwen a bona-fide labor dispute and the stupid activism of Communnists and their strange assortment of dupes and sympathizers, so we agree that some national house-cleaning is in order.

Miss McKenzie

WE ONLY point out the scope of the President's unlimited emergency powers and his skill in exercising them, because there is another defense problem which has been lying supine on his desk for lo these weary weeks and months. This is, in fact, a matter about which the Negro press, a certain bloc of Negro leaders and a liberal section of white America have recommended to the Administration for action, to the point of mutual boredom. The Administration has demonstrated an unmistakable facility for edging around things it doesn't care to deal with directly. In the going on nine years that many of us have supported it, no bold and unreserved step anent our situation has been taken.

BEAUTIFUL WORDS

We have been beguiled by some beautiful words and phrases of a very comprehensive kind, such as "There shall be no divisions of party or section or race or nationality or religion . . there is not one among us who does not have a stake in the outcome of the effort in which we are engaged." We were lulled by declarations of this sort. We thought we could afford to bide our time. We hoped that when the President was through playing politics, he would make a fearless display of his honest convictions about our problems. Until this moment, there have been, as usual, "divisions of race"—in the Army, in Selective Service, in civilian life. Even worse, there have been exclusions of race—of us—in the Navy, in the Coast Guard, in defense industries. Unfortunately, we are a people of great and enduring patience and boundless faith. We waited and believed that Mr. Roosevelt was going to act, to carry out his promise.

OUR PRESIDENT is a man in whom the imagination leaps and dares beyond the puny dreams of those who follow his star. There is a course open to him as the Defender of Democracy which would commit him safely to the immortal company of men like Jefferson and Lincoln, who helped create that democracy. This course, which is his solemn duty, he has overlooked or else considered inexpedient. What surging, thrilling feeling would come to his heart and mind, should he pause to realize that with a simple, everyday gesture like signing an executive order, he could free thirteen million American men and women from slavery. Lincoln freed only three and a half million!

HOW CAN HE RESIST?

How has Mr. Roosevelt resisted the awful appeal of such power? Surely he entertains only affectionate contempt for the Southern Senators and Congressman swinging on his coat-tails. We think he would enjoy a sort of Puckish pleasure in shocking the 18th century prejudices from their barnacled minds. What could they do, for instance, if he were to proclaim, "Discrimination in the Army and Navy is hereby abolished?"

WOULDN'T HE achieve a Zeus-like touch by just telling employers (as he told the airplane strikers) to get into line on this question of hiring us in defense jobs? If he were to say, just conversationally in a press conference, that he was going to see that the Bill of Rights, the 14th and 15th Amendments are enforced in Washington, D. C.—it being his Presidential duty under oath to defend the Constitution, we could start living like human beings the very next day.

IS THERE ANY WAY?

Is there any way our leaders in high places might persuade Mr. Roosevelt to place these soul-filling, history-making activities on his summer agenda? We are going to march on Washington 50,000 strong [illegible] soon. We shall be inquiring how far down the list the President is with his work. We feel confident that, in the interests of national unity, which is superior to the preservation of caste and class, the answers will delight the democratic world.

Democracy In Defense

For many months now, we have been hearing charges that Negroes have been systematically excluded from employment in certain defense industries, particularly in aircraft factories whose very existence was made possible by government contracts. These charges have been investigated by responsible newspapers and national publications and found to have basis in fact.

Skilled Negroes—graduate engineers, technicians, mechanics—have been excluded purely upon the ground of their color, from employment in factories which were admittedly short of trained personnel and were desperately endeavoring to secure it. The Labor Division of the OPM has been deluged with complaints alleging this sort of discrimination, has looked into many of them and has found them unfortunately to be substantiated.

The point has been reached where President Roosevelt is forced to take cognizance of the situation. His appeal to the nation to put an end to discrimination against loyal minority groups in defense industries is so eloquent and reasonable that we shall quote from it extensively, since its power would be diminished in any paraphrase.

"No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism," says the president, "can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "even more important for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial. national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities . . ."

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national crigin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

We believe that the president's appeal will be heeded by all truly patriotic employers and workers, whose devotion to American ideals and the high cause of world democracy is genuine and surpasses mere lip-service. Human prejudices are of course often deep and tenacious, but they do yield to reason and to better acquaintance with the object of prejudice.

American Negroes and other minority groups who have been the victims of discrimination in defense employment are on the whole anxious to serve America and to strike a blow against the man who in the world today is the outstanding exponent of all the darkest and most loathsome prejudices with which the frail human mind is afflicted. We must not bar any Americans from taking part, to the best of their ability, in the common struggle.

This means not only permitting the skilled to exercise their skills, but furnishing all groups with equality of opportunity in securing the training that they desire and that the country needs. The Negro, particularly, is caught in a vicious circle in this regard. He is barred from securing training in many skilled occupations on the ground that, if trained, he would not be permitted to engage in the occupation because of his color. Training, as well as employment, must be equally available to all.

DEMOCRACY AND NATIONAL DEFENSE

The attitude of the American Negro toward national defense is very well known. The Negro press and such powerful organizations as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Urban League have blasted unremittingly at the discriminatory practices of the army and navy and the industrial plants engaged in filling defense contracts.

The position of these agencies that articulate the demands of the black masses has been logical and uncompromising from the beginning of this world crisis. No unreasonable plea has been made; no request inconsistent with avowed tenets of free government has been advanced. What the Negro has asked and is asking is what any loyal American citizen would ask, that is, full participation in the defense of his country.

The statement, signed by 60 representative Northern and Southern citizens and released early this week by Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, president of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation and chairman of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries, is an encouraging sign, showing that there are some intelligent Americans whose consciences are disturbed by the despicable and indefensive manner in which the American Negro is treated in this national emergency program.

In part the statement reads:

"Justice for Negro Americans in the program for national defense is a searching test of American democracy. Our concern for democracy in Europe or elsewhere lacks reality and sincerity if our plans and policies disregard the rights of minorities in our own country.

"It seems especially important to observe these in letter and spirit in our national industrial defense program in a year when we have voted overwhelming support to make our country a great

'arsenal' for the democracies."

The signers include Governor Lehman, Mayor La Guardia, William Allen White, university presidents and leaders of industry, labor and religion, and many other personalities whose names stand for decency and fairplay.

In New York City, the afternoon paper called P.M. has devoted many of its issues toward a campaign for jobs for Negroes in the major defense industries. Its editors have sent telegrams to all industrial plants inquiring into their policy with respect to employment of black labor.

After giving space in its news column to the problems affecting Negroes in the present emergency program, the conservative New York Times declared editorially that:

"A nation making an all-out effort cannot neglect any element in its population. If it is engaged on the side of democracy it must leave the doors of opportunity open to all, regardless of race."

If these urgings with their unanswerable arguments fail to move Washington officialdom and the industrial tycoons to take steps that will guarantee an equitable adjustment, democracy to the American black man will have lost its meaning, promise and hope. It will then be a ghastly mockery to prate about national unity for the defense and preservation of a political system that denies elementary common rights to a black minority."

F. D. R. Orders OPM To Utilize Manpower Regardless Of Race

WASHINGTON—(AP) — President Roosevelt has ordered the OPM to see to it that defense industries fully utilize the nation's productive manpower without regard to race, religion or national origin.

In a memorandum addressed to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, OPM directors, the chief executive Sunday night said many complaints had reached him that "fully qualified" Negroes and others were being turned away from the gates of industry on grounds "entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity."

"This situation," he declared, "is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively."

The president said he had been told the "discrimination" against Negro workers has been nation-wide and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities.

With "labor stringencies" appearing in many areas, he asserted it was "imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with the problem" and that he expected the OPM to take "immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

PRESIDENT ASSAILS RACIAL JOB BARRIER

Reports Wide Complaints of Ban on Negroes in Defense Work, Asks OPM to Act

STRESSES NEED FOR LABOR

'Even More Important' Is Need to Refute Theories We Are Fighting Abroad, He Says

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 15—Stating that he had received complaints of nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, President Roosevelt called upon the Office of Production Management today to take immediate steps to deal effectively with this "grave" situation.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors, Mr. Roosevelt said that "no nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries."

Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with its effectively

"I note with satisfaction that the Office of Production Management has recognized the seriousness of this situation, and that on April 11, 1941, it addressed a letter on the subject to all holders of defense contracts. As Chief Executive of the nation I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that, 'all holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.'

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

BARS BIAS IN DEFENSE WORK

Poletti Says State Council Will Not Tolerate It

Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti, who is coordinator of the State Defense Council, said yesterday that his organization would "go after" employers or union officials who discriminated against minority groups in defense industry jobs.

Mr. Poletti spoke at a communion breakfast at the Hotel Pennsylvania attended by about 600 members of the St. George Association, who had participated in communion service at St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, 207 East Sixteenth Street.

"As coordinator of the State Defense Council," Mr. Poletti said, "many cases of discrimination have been brought to my attention. We check every complaint, and we have found many complaints to be true, particularly in complaints brought by Negroes, although they are not the only minority groups that are being discriminated against. You just let us know and we will go after the employers, and the unions too when they are involved."

Newbold Morris, President of City Council, presided at the breakfast. He is honorary president of the association, of which the chapters in the Department of Welfare, Department of Correction and Third Avenue Railway System participated. He introduced Walter Case, an organizer for the Transit Workers Union, C. I. O., in the Third Avenue System, who spoke of the St. George Association as a force for raising the moral and spiritual level of its members.

Welfare Commissioner William Hodson said that further social reforms in the United States would have to wait until the war "which threatens our American way of life" is over.

NEW PAMPHLET EXPOSES NEGRO IN DEFENSE

Dr. Robert Weaver A Contributor

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Spurred on by the publication of a pamphlet, "Negroes in Defense," local publications editorially defended the position of the Negro in the United States today and asked that the condition be remedied through the efforts of individuals and organizations so that there would be no such stigma remaining to discredit this Democracy in the eyes of the world.

The publication, one of a series produced by the Council for Democracy, a New York organization, is full of concrete facts and evidence that the Negro is being discriminated against unjustly and points out specific examples of what is being done against the Negro.

Quoting from several articles, one of which is supposed to be Hitler's "Nazi Plans for Negroes" one item states, "the freeing of the slaves was one of the two great catastrophes of the present civilization." Enlarging on this particular line, the booklet points out injustice after injustice.

Fights For Minority

The Council for Democracy, an organization sponsored by two well known social organizations, in the past has remained in the background and was content to offer its services and assistance to other organizations fighting injustices to minority groups in the United States. But when the council, whose main offices are at 285 Madison avenue, New York City, found the results were not what it expected it jumped into the battle itself and began pounding away for civil rights and liberties for these minority groups.

One of the other features of the organization is a monthly release which sets forth for newspaper publication, articles and information pertinent to national questions.

Dr. Weaver Contributor

In preparing this newest booklet, which is now ready for release and will be sent upon application and purchase price of 10 cents, the council sought the advice of some of the best minds in the Negro cultural group. They included Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Dr. Ira DeA. Reid, Dr. Joseph C. Houchings, and many others whose names are well known in similar fields.

Included in the board of directors are some of the outstanding personages in the United States, from various fields. The purpose of the organization as expressed in its own statement is "This council exists to work and spend in the defense of the democratic system and the aggressive promotion of that idea."

White Pilates, Judases And Hitlers In National Defense Taken To Task

By M. BEAUNORUS TOLSON
Washington Tribune Columnist

In the first World War the Negro fought to make the world safe for Democracy. Today he fights to make Georgia and New York and the Capital safe for the Negro. Where Democracy is not—there is the place to fight. If we must die, we shall not die like hogs. Negro appeasers, compromisers, and Uncle Toms are catching hell.

This is the New Year. This is the New Negro. I'm glad to be alive in these times that try men's souls. Right is dynamite. The Negro people are right in their battle for economic equality, political freedom, and social justice, Democracy, crushed to earth in the District of Columbia, will rise again!

And now I come to the white Pilates and Judases and Hitlers in our misnamed National Defense. National pertains to a people having social homogeneity and mutuality of interests. Therefore, there can be no National Defense if white Pilates and Judases and Hitlers crucify Democracy on a Jim-Crow cross.

White America, you can't fight Hitler successfully if your banners are labeled FOR WHITES ONLY. You have to put up Democracy—or shut up! A billion yellow men and brown men and black men are calling for a showdown.

Gap Between Theory And Practice

Sunday, President Roosevelt made an eloquent appeal for national unity. It was translated into six languages and broadcast. The nations of South America heard it. South of the border there are millions of people of African descent. They are going to put our Democracy to a rigid test. They are going to tell Uncle Sam to practice what he preaches. Those South American democrats don't know anything about Jim-Crow signs.

Now let us take a glance at "Life" magazine for December 30, 1940. Here's a concrete example of the gap between theory and practice. "Life" shows ninety pictures of defense chiefs and their subordinates in the Defense Commission, the War Department, and the Navy Department. I don't recognize a single Negro. Barzynsky is here; Sambo is missing.

The professors tell me the Negro is the submerged tenth. Now I find he's the submerged Zero in the National Defense. God bless America! Because the Jim-Crow National Defense is trying to damn America.

For White Only —Always

JAN 16 1941

Everywhere the Negro turns he runs into the sign, FOR WHITES ONLY. President Roosevelt tells us that the very existence of the United States is at stake. But this tragic situation has not caused our good white citizens to lay aside their ancient prejudices.

"Time" magazine for November 25 carried a full-page advertisement of the United Gas Pipe Line Company, in the Deep South. It tried to persuade industrialists to put factories down there because there was plenty of Labor—"native, white, reliable, and intelligent." The National Urban League protested against this gross, undemocratic practice. They got the same results that the NAACP got from Mr. Roosevelt on the Anti-Lynch Bill.

Mr. Morgen Jenson reports the case of Ernest Bosley, one of the fifteen men fired from Uncle Sam's navy, because he refused to submit to Jim-Crowism. Mr. Bosley thought he had a wonderful opportunity of serving his country by becoming efficient at the Norfolk Training Station. He discovered that no black man could rise higher than officer's cook and officer's steward. Uncle Sam's navy believes in keeping the Negro "in his place." And that place is waiting on white folk and mopping decks!

When these high insults are mentioned to the Big White Boys, they do one of three things: wash their hands, like Mr. Sidney Hillman; sell out Democracy, like Cotton Ed Smith; use Hitlerian methods, like Senator Bilbo. So far as the Negro is concerned, the National Defense is composed of white Pilates, Judases, and Hitlers.

No Negro was fooled when the agedracy; but we [illegible] Colonel Benjamin Davis was made anot flunkies Brigadier General, at the tail-end of a hot political race. Negroes want jobs—not the political crumbs that fall from the White House table. You can't fill 14,000,000 dark bellies with a few political plums!

Dr. Rayford Logan And His Committee

Our salvation lies in a militant, united front. In my cynical moments, I've been against committees. In many cases a committee is a scientific way of doing nothing. But from the facts at hand, I believe Negroes should support the National Committee for Participation of Negroes in National Defense. Dr. Rayford Logan is the chairman of this organization. He is ably supported by such co-workers as Ambrose Caliver, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Roy Wilkins, William J. Trent, Frederick S. Weaver, George Schuyler, Robert C. Weaver, William Hastie, and others.

Billions are to be spent on National Defense. Common sense says the Negro should get his share. And he'll have to fight like hell for it. Negroes must get into the army air corps, the airplane factories, the munition plants, the marine corps, the signal corps, the coast guard, the dental corps, and other activities.

It is not going to be an easy task. The few Negroes appointed to the National Defense can do little by themselves. This is an age of mass pressure. Negroes should flood Congress and the White House with tens of thousands of letters. Don't forget the white Pilates and Judases and Hitlers camping in the Capital.

Nobody is going to give you your rights on a gold platter. The meek shall inherit the graves. According to President Roosevelt, this is a Democracy. In a Democracy you have a right to demand economic equality, political freedom, and social justice.

We want jobs in the National Defense. There will be no compromise. There will be no appeasement. The white Pilates and Judases and Hitlers cannot stop us. We will not be sold down the river as we were in the first World War. We shall defend Democ-

Major General Says War Wipes Out Color Line

JAN 11 1941

WASHINGTON

Some War Department officials are not as anti-colored as is generally believed, if an article written by Major General Hanson E. Ely, which appeared in the Infantry Journal, December, 1940, is to be taken as an indication of the way one official feels. He writes:

"At Soissons there was put between the first and second divisions, the Moroccan division which was one of the best French divisions. It included the Foreign Legion. It was composed of men all the way from white to black.

"We have in this country to a large extent a sort of antipathy against other races, but after you have been in a few serious battles, that feeling goes away, you don't care whether a man is black, chocolate or white; all you ask is that he will fight and when you are banking on him on this flank you can know that he generally is going to be there.

"The first and second divisions were glad to have that Moroccan division in between them in the fight at Soissons.

All Lives Alike

"They didn't care what their previous history was; all they asked was that they fight and do their part, because when it comes to getting killed, all men's lives are to them alike. After a hearty dinner and with our normal faculties, in discussing these things we say we want this or that; but go back in history, and see what your real reactions in time of battle will be; you don't care what color a man is, and if he is good enough to show you he can command other men, beyond what the ordinary man can do, he goes just as high as anybody and his soldiers will carry on under him.

"It isn't a question then of what they like, but whether they have somebody that will prevent their being sent to the hereafter before their time."

Private Jim Crow

AN EASY way to test the "democratic' character of the national defense program is to look into the Jim Crow military policy of the United States armed forces. In October President Roosevelt reaffirmed segregation of Negroes as official army procedure. Negro reserve officers have been passed over for promotion. Negro draftees are relegated to work battalions. Air corps, marine corps, chemical service, medical corps, engineering corps—all are closed to the Negro.

Ernest Calloway, educational director of the United Transport Service Employees of America (AFL), has asked exemption from the draft because of this discrimination. Mr. Calloway, whose union comprises red caps, has appealed from the decision of his local draft board placing him in Class 1-A, although he is single and without dependents, "until such time that my contribution and participation in the defense of my country can be made on a basis of complete equality." He protested "the practice of relegating special types of service to Negroes and refusing their service in other branches of the armed forces, as neither conducive to effective morale nor obeying the spirit and letter of the Constitution of the United States. To me, the present United States army is the most anti-democratic institution in American governmental life."

Urge Governor to Oust Biased Draft Official

NEW YORK—Removal of a white local draft board chairman in Jamaica for making "vicious and slanderous" statements against colored men in connection with the appeal of a case involving a colored draftee who sought deferment was asked of Governor Herbert Lehman, last week, by the NAACP.

The draft official, Edward Warnke, chairman of local board No. 261, is charged with having sent a memorandum including the following statements to the appeals board in connection with the case of Leon Melvin, who sought deferment on the ground that he had dependents:

Charges Lax Morals

"This particular case is common in our particular board. We have a large colored population and there seems to be no regard for moral or financial responsibility and some get tired of one woman and then decide they can live with someone else . . .

"It is the consensus in this board that this type of registrant know very little about the truth. It is our opinion that a year's military training will do a great deal to straighten this gentleman out."

JAN 4 - 1941

In a letter to the governor, which pointed out that Warnke has shown himself to be unfit to serve on a draft board, the association said:

Unfit to Hold Job—NAACP

"We respectfully submit that any person holding such views and who so gratuitously would slander an entire race is unfit for service in the drafting of men who may go forth to die for democracy.

"We, therefore, respectfully urge that Mr. Warnke be removed as chairman of local board No. 261 and from any other position in connection with the selective service.

FWA Administrator Bans Color Line On National Defense Housing Work

JAN 16 1941

THE bitter struggle to integrate Negro skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled Negroes into the national defense program was given a "lift" last week, when Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody issued an executive order banning discrimination against Negro labor on the defense housing program.

Carmody went further. He set up machinery to formulate a policy that would guarantee the employment of Negro workmen and to handle complaints of violation of the order.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Urban League are both engaged in a nationwide movement to have Negro workmen employed by private contractors who have contracts to perform work for the national defense program.

Billions of dollars of contracts have been and will be let to private firms which ordinarily do not employ Negro labor. This work will be paid for out of tax funds, levied on all the citizens, irrespective of race, creed or color. Whatever might have been the policy of these firms in the past, the proper governmental agencies should see to it that insofar as government contracts are concerned, there be no discrimination against Negro labor, skilled, semi-skilled or unskilled.

THE TRIBUNE has been publishing a list of contractors who have been awarded government contracts. If you are competent to do any of this work, make application; if you are refused, do not accept it quietly. Send your complaint in writing to this newspaper, give facts, names of employment officials, reasons for refusal, et cetera.

America can not defend Democracy abroad while denying it to its own citizens at home. If the children and grandchildren of colored citizens are to help bear the awful tax burden required by the national defense program, it is only fair that they be permitted to share in the benefits of the progam as well.

The executive order against discrimination will amount to less than nothing unless it is enforced. Its enforcement depends largely upon colored citizens themselves. The Government can not know of cases of discrimination, unless those who are discriminated against bring the complaints. Every individual or group which is discriminated against must yell loudly. This newspaper will do its part to help make the complaints effective.

Mass Meeting Denounces Jim Crow in Army, Navy

FEB 1 1941

Resolutions denouncing the discrimination practiced in the armed forces of the United States, by which one-tenth of the citizenry of this republic is set apart and denied the right to defend our country on terms of equality with the rest of the population, were adopted by several hundred colored and white citizens at a mass meeting in the Metropolitan A.M.E. Church Sunday.

The speakers included: Congressman John C. Robsion (Dem., Ky.), and Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic national committee-woman from Pennsylvania; Eugene Davidson, administrator of the New Negro Alliance; Dr. Rayford Logan, of the committee on participation of Negroes in the National Defense Program; Dr. Charles H. Houston, former Howard University Law School dean and World War veteran.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, is the only one of the listed speakers who failed to appear. He sent a message which was read to the assembly.

Sponsors of Meeting

The huge assembly was sponsored by: Interracial Commission of which Dr. Charles Edward Russell, venerable Washingtonian, is chairman; Washington Council of the National Congress; Committee on participation of Negroes in the National Defense Program, N.A.A.C.P., Washington Industrial Union Council, and the New Negro Alliance.

The resolutions which met the unanimous approval of the meeting were:

"RESOLVED, That this mass meeting of Americans assembled here enters a most earnest protest against the disgraceful discrimination now practiced throughout the armed services of the United States, by which one-tenth of the citizenry of this republic is set apart and denied the right to defend our country on terms of equality with the rest of the population.

"We denounce this discrimination as a flagrant violation of the first principle of the democracy this nation professes and as a violation of the Declaration of Independence upon which the American Republic was founded and still rests. So long as 10 per cent of its citizens are debarred from serving it merely because they happen to have a darker complexion than the rest, to speak of democracy is a bitter jest.

Discrimination Extended

"We denounce further the extension of this medieval and indefensible superstition, now ruling absolutely the Army and the Navy, to the civilian activities of preparedness and the national welfare.

"We demand for all citizens full and equal participation in the vocational training programs, in all employment incidental thereto, and in all industrial and governmental occupations.

"We demand that in all factories and plants engaged in defense work there shall be no more exclusion of Americans on the ground of their complexion.

"The remedy for these intolerable conditions, which before the world must stamp as hypocritical our professed devotion to democracy, lies in the hands of our Government. With a word, the Government can open all services, military and civil, to all of its citizens upon the basic equality intended by the organic law of this land, and we demand that our government utter that word now.

"This nation is called upon to unite for the national protection at a time of imminent peril. To speak of a nation as united when one person in ten is segregated and denied a just share in the common defense is the gross absurdity of the ages. It should be eliminated before the rest of the world loses all faith in American integrity."

Poppycock!

Over and over again persons in key positions say whites and black will not work together in the national defense. Since the huge white majority must be used, if that quarantine against the blacks exists, then Negroes cannot be employed at all.

But does that quarantine exist? It takes more than the saying to prove that "White sailors will not serve with Negroes" as Secretary of the Navy Knox is quoted as saying elsewhere in this paper. Nor is an employer qualified to speak for workers as does the personnel officer of the new bomber plant to be built in Kansas City, Kansas. He says his company has "no policy respecting Negro workers," but that whites will not work with them. How does he know that? If he were a workers representative, he might speak with authority. But he sits on the other side of the table. He is not in a position to say what whites will do when Negroes step into production beside them.

Adequate proof that this much talked of quarantine is simply an excuse for refusing to consider whether old custom should give way to new necessity is to be found in the outcome at Ft. Riley. Even after the Negro carpenters had been organized under the wing of the white carpenters, and had a local union which stood equal in their district council, a contractor employing men of that craft said whites would walk off the job if he employed Negroes. He was persuaded to make the trial. The Negroes are at work, more have been employed since the first and whites work beside them. The contractor's prophecy failed of fulfillment. Likewise we believe that Secretary Knox and manufacturers of defense material will find Negroes accepted wherever they employ them.

For Americans white and black whose roots in this soil both began three centuries ago and whose lives have intermingled ever since, the races working together will be nothing new. For the English, French, German, Italian, Slav and Scandinavian who have not good will for each other in Europe but who work together here, it is only another step in tolerance. Instead of these key persons being true prophets, what they say is the sheerest poppycock, which the slightest test will disprove.

But poppycock passes for Solomonian wisdom unless challenged! Negroes will not get work unless the casual opinions of men who do the hiring are controverted. This personnel manager has 10,000 to 15,000 jobs which he is going to give to the best hands he can get. He is certain to think those with some training are better than those with none. As conditions are the agencies entrusted with giving training, that is the school and the N. Y. A., follow a general policy of training only those who will be given jobs. It follows that Negroes will be refused training if it is believed that they will not be employed. So out of untested personal opinion the quarantine is born, as formidable and deadly to Negroes' opportunities as if it was the fact. For that reason this poppycock must be put down! A. Philip Randolph, labor leader and by reason of that doubly qualified to speak for Negroes, says:

"One thing is certain and that is if Negroes are going to get anything out of this National Defense which will cost the nation 30 or 40 billions of dollars that we Negroes must help pay in taxes as property owners and workers and consumers, WE MUST FIGHT FOR IT AND FIGHT FOR IT WITH GLOVES OFF.

For work, Negroes should petition, demand, vote and do everything until democracy, the principle which this country professes to defend, is actually applied in the steps it takes in preparing that defense.

NEGRO CHARGES ARMY OFFICERS UNFAIR TO RACE

Chicagoan Claims Draft Exemption on Grounds Of Discrimination

CHICAGO, Jan. 4 (UP).—Ernest Calloway, Negro, educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of America, said today he was asking exemption from military service under the Selective Service act because the United States Army discriminated against Negroes.

He said he had filed an appeal from the decision of his local draft board, placing him in Class 1-A, subject to call. He said he was single and had no dependents, but asked exemption from military training "until such time that my contribution and participation in the defense of my country can be made on a basis of complete equality."

Calloway revealed that he accompanied return of his draft questionnaire with a statement saying the army's "practice of relegating special types of service to Negroes and refusing their service in other branches of the armed forces is neither conducive to effective morale nor obeying the spirit and letter of the Constitution of the United States."

"To me, the present United States Army is the most anti-Democratic institution in American Governmental life," the statement said.

Negroes and Defense Jobs

The Northern Virginia Daily

THE RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH charged recently that discrimination was being practiced against skilled Negro workers in defense industries and urged that this policy be abandoned both in the interest of the national defense, which is now hampered by a shortage of skilled labor, and also out of justice to the Negro workers themselves. Full national defense, it argued, cannot be achieved so long as a large body of skilled workers is prevented by arbitrary rulings and subtle prejudices from putting its capabilities to maximum use.

We think THE TIMES-DISPATCH'S argument rests on a sound basis. It seems like grim irony that we, the most highly industrialized nation on earth, in this period of world crisis, when the safety of our country itself and all that we hold dear is threatened, should find the mobilization of our industry crippled and our defense preparations seriously delayed by a double shortage of skilled workers and machine tools. In such circumstances, ordinary common sense would seem to dictate that we make the fullest use of our resources of skilled labor, and use it where it is most needed, regardless of whether it is white, black, blue or brown.

We do not know to what extent discrimination against skilled Negro workers is practiced in defense industries throughout the country. Our Richmond contemporary asserts that "in Virginia and in other States," it is "hampering the arming of the country and contributing to the lag in national defense." We are informed by other sources that labor unions bring in skilled labor from other States, passing over skilled Negro workers in Virginia, and permit the employment of the latter only as common labor. We do know that some of the Negro schools are doing a splendid job in vocational and technical training.

Aside from the defense aspects of the large-scale exclusion of the Negro from the skilled trades, most thoughtful people realize that Negroes suffer many injustices because of their historical background and minority status. Vocationally, they have largely been denied access to the mechanical trades. This has forced them to be content with common labor employment or to aspire to the professions, thus dividing the race into two widely separated groups. This has served to deprive Negroes of the stabilizing influence of a great middle class, whose sound judgment charts the course of recial progress. The Negro's progress since his emancipation, the development of his intellect and character, his good citizenship and loyalty to the land of his birth, would seem to entitle him to a greater degree of respect and a larger opportunity for development than he has been given thus far.

No Discrimination Against Negro Laborers, Data Shows

Survey Made of Labor Represented On Local Defense Projects

Charges of discrimination against Negroes in the defense industries of Newport News and vicinity, recently brought by a Negro union and others, are refuted by figures gathered in a survey of defense industries made by the Daily Press.

Negroes are being employed on all defense projects, and are represented in the skilled, the semi-skilled and the unskilled trades. And all employers flatly deny that there is discrimination, although only white carpenters are being employed at Fort Eustis at this time, the hiring agent there stating that "you can't change a custom overnight."

But there are 5,800 men now working at Fort Eustis, of which number 2,300 are Negroes, both skilled and unskilled. George L. Zuidema, sole hiring agent, says that "we are hiring and have hired 100 per cent colored cement finishers, yarners, caulkers, asphalt rakers and broom operators. Skilled colored mechanics are placing all of our sewer lines and a large proportion of our water lines, doing practically all our road work, and colored laborers are doing all our excavating, backfilling and placing of all concrete."

The Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company employs at this time 13,600 men, of whom more than 4,000 are Negroes. The lowest paid gets 40 cents an hour and the highest paid more than a dollar an hour, the Negroes working in the skilled, the semi-skilled and the unskilled trades. Skilled trades include riveters, chauffers, chippers and caulkers, wood caulkers, bolters, drillers, reamers, riggers, machine operators, machinists, bricklayers and many other occupations.

The Virginia Engineering company, which is building the naval housing units to the north of the city, employs about 800 men. Of these 55 per cent are Negroes and the remainder white. Most of the Negro labor is unskilled, but the foreman says that there is no discrimination and that Negroes are hired for all jobs for which they are fitted, there being no discrimination whatsoever.

V. P. Loftis, contractors, building Marshall Courts housing project, is employing 380 men, of whom 189 are Negroes. Negro labor on this project includes 1? bricklayers, 14 carpenters and 16 cement finishers all skilled. Also there are the following Negro laborers: two making 60 cents an hour, one making 75 cents an hour, 32 brick tenders at 50 cents an hour, three laborers at 45 cents an hour, and 109 laborers at 40 cents an hour.

Harbor Homes

Woodcrest and Rosoff, building the Orcutt and Harbor homes housing projects, also employs about 50 per cent Negro labor, skilled and unskilled. There are 100 men on the Orcutt homes project, half of them Negroes, and 200 men on the Harbor homes project, half of them Negroes. Superintendent Judd says that preference is given to local labor, that there is no discrimination against Negroes and that if a man can show he is a skilled workman and is needed he is hired, regardless of his color.

The Dravo Construction company, Pittsburgh, is employing 260 men building shipways at the shipyard. Of these 260 men 80 are semi-skilled and of this 80 there are 41 who are Negroes.

The McLean Construction company is completing a job at the shipyard and now is employing about 60 men, about half of whom are Negroes. There has been no discrimination here, say those in charge. Most of the labor has been supplied through the unemployment bureau.

The unemployment bureau has on its active list at this time about 1,700 men and women, of whom about one-third are Negroes. But among this number of Negroes are many persons who want jobs as waiters, chauffeurs, and the like. The majority of those on the list are unskilled. How many are actually out of work at this time is not known, for the lists are checked only every two months.

In the list of names signed to the protest against alleged discrimination against Negroes recently made by the Peninsula Trade and Labor union, there are many persons not listed in the directory of either Newport News or Hampton. Moreover, some of those whose names are listed are listed as laborers or helpers, whereas the union declared it was composed of 250 "skilled mechanics."

Negroes And Defense Work.

Maryland's Negro National Guard unit, the first separate company, has been ordered into Federal service and will be inducted into the Army March 10. Secretary of War Stimson has notified Governor O'Conor that the company of about 75 men and four officers had been called up. It will be assigned to the 372 Infantry and will train at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

The United States has not engaged in a war in which its colored people did not bear arms. They are Americans, the same as the white people, and their patriotism is not open to question. They have proved their loyalty to country on many battlefields. They have proved it in other ways, and they should not be denied rights that other American citizens enjoy.

But it appears that Negroes are being denied some of those rights. The American Association for the Advancement of Colored People declared the other day that they are "almost uniformly shut out of employment" in defense industries. In a telegram to William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, the Association said this discrimination was particularly true in airplane manufacturing, "because the Aeronautical Workers Union constitution bars Negroes from membership."

There has been considerable complaint on this score. It comes from many sections. John M. Carmody, Administrator of the Federal Works Agency, advised the Hampton Institute Builders Conference last week that an immediate investigation would be made of reports of discrimination against Negroes on national defense housing projects in Tidewater Virginia. The result of the investigation has not yet been announced.

Negroes have followed the Flag in all the wars in which the United States has been involved. They have done their full part in those wars, at the front and at home. They have fought and sacrificed along with their white friends, and they are ready to do so again. Many of them are now in training camps and many more will go. The Government does not draw the color line in drafting men for military service, and the line should not be drawn in defense work. The colored people, who do their share in the national defense, should have their share of defense employment. The Government is not responsible for the discrimination against them, but it should find means of removing the discrimination.

NEGROES HOLD PANELPROGRAM

Consider Places in Defense Set-Up

Negroes should give no more loyalty to a program than the program gives to the Negro. That was the consensus of a panel discussion yesterday afternoon at Trinity Baptist church, Thirtieth street and Chestnut avenue, sponsored by the Newport News Negro Teachers' association in connection with the observance of Negro history week.

A committee was selected to consider what action should be taken to assist the Negro under the defense program, it having been pointed out by several speakers that discrimination against Negro workers in the skilled field was apparent in the Peninsula section. William A. Miller, president of the association, presided.

Speakers included Roscoe Lewis, instructor at Hampton institute and principal author of the WPA writers project, "The Negro in Virginia;" J. R. Picott, principal of John Marshall school; Dorothy E. Palmer, William Hale Thompson, Mrs. Nora Bell Taylor and Gladys Davis, teachers in the city school system, and S. A. Haynes, editor of the Norfolk Journal and Guide.

Also L. F. Palmer, principal of Huntington high school, speaking from the floor, urged that democracy be practiced among Negroes, one to another.

The decision to select a committee and the opinion that the Negro should give no more loyalty to a program than it gives to him came during discussion of the question, "Should the Negro Participate in the Defense Program?"

Thompson offered parts of a letter, quoted from the adjutant general's office, saying that the government now is not in a position to make a change in regard to the Negro's participation in the air corps and the navy. He said that he had written to President Roosevelt concerning the question and that the answer was received from the adjutant general.

This announcement came in connection with consideration of the question, "To what extent is the Negro being discriminated against in the army and navy, being excluded from the air corps, and being denied jobs on defense projects?"

It was said during the discussion that the Negro is not employed in forms of work in connection with the air corps and has only menial positions in the navy.

The following list of 12 questions were considered at the panel discussion:

1. To what extent is the Negro being discriminated against in the army and navy, being excluded from the air corps, and being denied jobs on defense projects?
2. Since the Negro is being refused jobs on defense projects should he refuse to serve in the various branches of military service?
3. Should the Negro be a conscientious objector?
4. Should the Negro participate in the defense program?
5. Does the Negro suffer or benefit from wars which involve America?
6. Does war or the threat of war make this country more democratic?
7. Will an Allied victory mean increased equality for the Negro?
8. Will increased federal power over defense projects offer greater opportunities for the Negro?
9. Is the Negro likely to enjoy more or less democratic treatment if the war is extended over a long period of time?
10. Did the last war enable the Negro to enjoy more of the benefits of American democracy?
11. Is the Negro likely to lose all he has gained after war and the threat of war have been removed?
12. If Germany wins the war and America becomes a besieged nation, would the Negro be benefited?

No Army Air Training For Race Until October---Then It'll Be Jim Crow

MAR 29 1941

The War department admitted Monday in a release titled "Additional details of plan for Negro squadron" that all Negroes recruited for service in the Army Air Corps will be sent to the jim crow unit to be established near Tuskegee institute in Alabama.

This detail, omission of which from earlier releases on the subject, had created the impression that Negroes would be integrated into the air corps without respect to race.

The second release, came after a spokesman for the National Airmen's association last week accused the War Department of attempting to deceive and mislead the Negro public.

MAR 29 1941

At the same time James L. H. Peck, who has written a book and several magazine articles on aviation criticised the jim crow pursuit squadron to be established in the South.

Peck Scores Jim Crow

In an interview with Nell Dodson of the Associated Negro Press Peck declared:

MAR 29 1941

"I am not interested in the U. S. air corps at present. Not only that, but I want to go on record as being strongly against the new jim-crow unit for colored pilots!

"I wouldn't be in favor of it even if it meant gold-plated air planes for our boys. Unfortunately, there is a general idea on the part of the public that this will be an ice-breaker and will open the way. It's accepting the idea that a half-loaf is better than none. Had we organized to fight this thing from the very beginning, we might have had the whole loaf."

He pointed out that the National Airmen's association, as well as many of the recognized Negro authorities on aviation have also been opposed to the project.

"It's not the technical training that will be lacking," Peck explained, "because as set down in the orders every phase of instruction will be the same as that given to white air corps cadets. But the facilities contemplated at Tuskegee will not give colored pilots the same atmosphere of army life, military discipline and morale that white cadets get at such U. S. training bases as Randolph field and Pensacola. This is the atmosphere so necessary for building service morale and proper respect for army disciplinary authority."

Makes Prediction

Peck was silent for a moment and then he said in a curiously firm voice: "I think one of these days America will be on its knees begging for every available pilot it can get, whether he's black or white!"

MAR 29 1941

Peck's attitude is not one of "sour grapes." He's been approached on entering the army air corps via a sort of backdoor route. He wants none of it.

And that's the best in this country can offer to a pilot whose technical and practical training are such that he writes regularly for national aviation publications like Aero Digest, Popular Aviation, Popular Science, and the New York Times magazine section.

His book "Armies With Wings," published last January, put him in the foremost ranks of present-day aeronautical authorities, and the book he's now working on "So You're Going to Fly," will have a market even before the ink's dry on the manuscript. March edition of Harper's carries his latest article, "Bomber to Britain."

In addition to being a member of the National Airmen's association he's a member of the National Aeronautic association, and Aircraft Owners and Pilots association.

Begin Training Oct. 1

The jim crow unit at Tuskegee to be known as the 99th Pursuit Squadron, will require the training and commissioning of 33 flying cadets to be pilot officers, and transfer or commissioning of 6 to 14 non-flying officers, and the enlisting and training of 276 soldiers for duty as mechanics and other technical specialists.

MAR 29 1941

Training of pilots will be started about October 1, at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala. Applications for flying cadet appointments will be received by Corps Area Commanders.

Standards for appointment will be the same as for white applicants.

Enlisting of the 276 soldiers for duty as mechanics and other technical specialists will be started immediately. They will be recruited in various sections of the country and will be sent to Chanute field for training starting April 1.

Upon completion of training at Chanute field the men will be transferred to Tuskegee to serve as maintenance crews for the pilot training school. Each Negro candidate for enlistment must be a high school graduate and must pass aptitude tests to determine his suitability for attendance at an Air Corps technical school.

Enlistment Quotas

A nucleus of 14 enlisted men from existing colored units has been ordered to Chanute field to prepare for the reception of the recruits for processing, issuance of uniforms, inoculations, and basic military training. Instructors will be furnished from Scott field, Belleville, Ill., and Lowry field, Denver, Colo.

The 276 recruits will be enlisted for three years at stations with the following quotas: Mitchel Field, New York, 40; Bolling Field, D. C., 40; Maxwell Field, Alabama, 60; Patterson Field, Ohio, 30; Chanute Field, Illinois, 50; San Angelo, Texas, 30; March Field, California, 26.

The technical courses to be given at Chanute Field, number of students and the time required for training are as follows: Air mechanics, 151 students; 22 weeks; Instruments, 4 students, 8 weeks; Parachute riggers, 3 students, 8 weeks; Metalworkers, 2 students, 14 weeks; Welders, 2 students, 14 weeks; Teletype Maintenance, 4 students, 8 weeks; Armorers, 14 students, 12 weeks; Radio operators and mechanics, 26 students, 22 weeks; Clerks (technical), 12 students, 16 weeks; Clerks (administrative', 40 students, 16 weeks; Telephone maintenance, 2 students, 22 weeks; Automobile mechanics, 3 students, 22 weeks; Machinists, 2 students, 17 weeks; Electricians, 2 students, 4 weeks; Weather observers, 6 students, 12 weeks; and Weather fore-

Both Flying Cadets And Ground Crew Being Enlisted Now

WASHINGTON — Barriers of race and color dropped slightly this week as the U. S. Air Corps actually began enlisting Negroes for the 99th Pursuit Squadron, with a total of 309 set for present purposes.

In New York, Alabama, Ohio, Illinois, California, Texas, and right here in the District of Columbia, scores of bright-looking Negro lads traveled to designated air fields to apply for places both in the ground service and in the combat division.

Between now and April 1, 276 men are to be enlisted as mechanics and other non-flying personnel, while 33 are to be enlisted as flying cadets.

Came on Crest of Protest

This move on the part of the War Department came as nation-wide protest continued against the continued policy of keeping Negroes out of some branches of the service, and as the Senate prepared to start hearings on April 1, on a resolution calling for investigation of the armed forces as regards discrimination against Negroes.

The 99th Pursuit Squadron, will not only admit Negroes, but will be composed entirely of Negroes, except for officers, in keeping with the Army policy of racial separation.

All applicants are to apply to Corps Area Commanders. The application center for the Philadelphia area is Bolling Field, Washington, D. C.

War Department Explains

Creation of the squadron, the first tactical unit in the Air Corps using Negroes, requires the training and commissioning of 33 flying cadets to be pilot officers, and transfer or commissioning of 6 to 14 non-flying officers, and the enlisting and training of 276 soldiers for duty as mechanics and other technical specialists, an official announcement of the War Department explains.

Training of pilots will be started about October 1 at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

Standards for appointment as pilots will be the same as for white applicants, who must be unmarried, and must have passed their twentieth but not their twenty-seventh birthday. They must have completed at least two years of college work or pass a written examination which demonstrates the equivalent education.

Flying cadets are paid $75.00 a month and receive $1.00 a day ration allowance. The Tuskegee course of training will require 30 weeks. Upon successful completion of the course, a flying cadet is eligible for appointment as second lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve and is subject to call to active duty.

At least four of the non-flying officers for the squadron will come from existing ground units of other arms of the service, according to the War Department. All Army and Corps Area commanders have been notified that four Negro officers, lieutenants or captains, are to be detailed to the Air Corps for one year of non-flying duty Any Negro officers desiring this detail may make application to their commanding officers. These officers will be needed about September 1 1941.

MAR 27 1941

Two Officers To Study

Two more prospective Negro non-flying officers will enroll as students April 7 at New York University in engineering courses utilized by the Air Corps in training many of its engineering officers.

Upon completion of their work there these two students will go to Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., to complete their training.

The 276 soldiers for duty as mechanics and other technical specialists, will be sent to Chanute Field for training starting April 1. Upon completion of training at Chanute Field the men will be transferred to Tuskegee to serve as maintenance crews for the pilot training school.

Each Negro candidate for the ground crew must be a high school graduate and must pass aptitude tests to determine his suitability for attendance at an Air Corps technical school.

A nucleus of 14 enlisted men from existing colored units has been ordered to Chanute Field to prepare for the reception of the recruits for processing, issuance of uniforms, innoculations, and basic military training. Instructors will be furnished from Scott Field, Belleville, Illinois, and Lowry Field, Denver, Colorado.

The 276 ground service recruits will be enlisted for three years at stations with the following quotas:

Mitchell Field, New York	40
Bolling Field, D. C.	40
Maxwell Field, Alabama	60
Patterson Field, Ohio	30
Chanute Field, Illinois	50
San Angelo, Texas	30
March Field, California	26

The technical courses to be given at Chanute Field include: air mechanics, instruments, parachute riggers, metalworkers, welders, teletype maintenance, radio operation, telephone maintenance, weather forecasters, and so on.

Army Wants Parachute Jumpers, But Makes No Provision for Negroes.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Although the United States Army has just started recruiting some 1,500 officers and men for new parachute units, the same Jim Crow policy in respect to these units prevails as in the Marine Corps.

APR 5 1941

The Courier immediately contacted Judge William E. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and inquired if any provision had been made for Negro recruits.

Mr. Hastie informed The Courier that there is no present position for Negro parachute recruits.

Negroes' Plight in Defense Jobs Brought to Attention of U. S. Over Columbia Network

APR 5 1941

NEW YORK—The National Urban League, the Columbia Broadcasting System and a galaxy of Negro stars combined to tell America with dignity and without rancor that the Negro is not getting his share of jobs in the National Defense Program during a coast-to-coast broadcast, Sunday from 5 to 6 p.m.

APR 5 1941

It was perhaps one of the most dramatic broadcasts to the American public since the invention of radio. The idea was no less fantastic than that of the "Martian invasion" broadcast given a few years ago by Orson Welles for the simple reason that here was a segment of the American people asking the greatest democracy on earth to give them a chance to serve their country during a national emergency.

Among those who participated were: Marian Anderson, Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, Jeo Louis, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, Ethel Waters, Eddie Green, Eddie South and his Violin, Edward Matthews, and the bands of Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong and John Kirby.

Speakers on the program were: Charles Poletti, lieutenant governor of the State of New York; Elmer A. Carter, editor of Opportunity and a member of the New York State Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board; Hubert T. Delany, New York City Tax Commissioner, and Eugene Kinckle Jones, executive secretary of the National Urban League.

APR 5 1941

Miss Anderson broadcast from Montreal, Canada, where she was appearing in concert. Miss Waters sang from Detroit, and Joe Louis was interviewed by John C. Dancy, director of the Detroit Urban League, from St. Louis, where the champion is training for a fight with Tony Musto. Floyd C. Covington, executive director of the Los Angeles Urban League, spoke briefly during the West Coast section of the broadcast which featured Duke Ellington and his band and Rochester. The broadcast was arranged for the Urban League by Edward Lawson, managing editor of Opportunity and Miss Ann Tanneyhill, in charge of the league's guidance and personal service.

No Place for Jim-Crowism

The determination of the Negro people to win their full citizenship has been manifested in the sharp protests from them and from the progressive movement against the discrimination of the "national defense" program.

MAR 31 1941

To assuage this protest, President Roosevelt made an election maneuver of appointing a Negro Brigadier General for the first time in the history of the country. And now, also for the first time, Negro recruits have been permitted into a special pursuit air squadron. But jim-crowism still remains throughout the army, navy, air and marine corps.

In fact, this special pursuit squadron, which is to be set up at Tuskegee, Ala., is itself jim-crow, and is therefore a violation of the constituitonal rights of the Negro people. It is all the more shameful that the Roosevelt Government tries to palm it off as meeting the demands of Negro Americans for the enforcement of the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments.

The principal of jim-crowism, in any form whatever, is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. Any idea of equality for the Negro people through jim-crow arrangements is a pure myth. Jim-crowism, segregation and discrimination are for the purpose of breaking the developing unity of Negro and white, playing white workers against Negro workers, and imposing upon the Negro people inferior status and conditions. The jim-crow policies of the "defense" employers to whom the Administration gives juicy contracts, is resulting in the wholesale denial of jobs to Negro workers.

No "defense" machinery can be for democracy when it enforces fascist policies against the Negro people; nor can the Roosevelt government deny responsibility for such deliberate and planned Hitlerism.

PROTEST DISCRIMINATION IN ARMY, NAVY, AIR CORPS AND INDUSTRIES WITH CONTRACTS

JAN 31 1941

NEW YORK.—Mass meetings protesting government-sponsored discrimination against Negro citizens under the National Defense program were held in at least 24 states Sunday, Jan. 26, which was designated by the N.A.A.C.P. as National Defense Day.

The nation-wide protest campaign sponsored by the N.A.A.C.P. through its branches, found outlets in the following cities, according to a preliminary survey: New York city, Brooklyn, The Bronx, Jamaica and Peekskill, N. Y.; Detroit, Mich.; Wilmington, Del.; Monroe, La.; Charlotte and Rocky Mount, N. C.; Montclair, Elizabeth, Newark and Jersey City, N. J.; Springfield, Mass.; Hartford, Conn.; Chicago, Ill.; Newport, R. KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas Citians celebrated National Defense Day by holding two protest mass meetings, one on the Missouri side and one on the Kansas side of the Kaw river.

The meetings were held as sequels to the giant mass meeting held on December 8 when 6,000 persons filled the arena floor of the Municipal auditorium to protest against discrimination in the program which is preparing America to defend democracy.

In Kansas City, Mo., the meeting was sponsored by the Youth Council of the N.A.A.C.P. branch at the St. Stephens Baptist church. Young speakers were Solomon Gates, president of the Kansas City, Kas., youth council, who spoke on "The Negro and Defense Work;" Miss Bettie Albert, office clerk at the Yates branch Y.W.C.A., "Woman's Part in National Defense;" Keith Pittman, president of the Lincoln high school senior class, "The Negro in the Armed Forces;" and Dovie Patricia Jones, president of the Kansas City, Mo., youth council, "Introduction of the Defense Program." Miss Lillie Bryant presided.

In Kansas City, Kas., the program was held at the First Baptist church with Bishop John A. Gregg as the principal speaker. The first half hour of the program was broadcast over station KCKN.

National defense was the subject of a third meeting held at the Kansas City Forum at the Centennial M. E. church where Thomas V. Holland, former judge of the Municipal court, was the speaker.

ARMY, NAVY EXCLUSION IS RAPPED

FEB 8 1941

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—In spite of the 13th Amendment and its message of freedom, the Negro's right to a stake in American democracy is challenged by an economic servitude based upon low wages and the indifference of trade unionism, Dr. Charles H. Wesley, head of the Department of History at Howard university, declared Wednesday in an address on "The 13th Amendment—A Milestone in the Emancipation of the Negro."

Speaking of the Negro's part in the Civil War, the well known historian stated: "More than 178,000 Negroes shouldered the musket and 150,000 of them were in the Quartermasters' Corps. There were 141 companies of Infantry, seven of Cavalry, twelve of heavy artillery and one of light artillery.

"What a challenge the deeds of these soldiers were to men who championed their cause! They demonstrated that they were worthy to be free.

"What an indictment their deeds become to those who would keep Negroes out of the Army and Navy today or restrict them to certain branches of these services."

DR. CHARLES H. WESLEY DENOUNCES ARMY AND NAVY RACIAL POLICIES

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In spite of the Thirteenth Amendment and its message of freedom, the Negro's right to a stake in American democracy is challenged by an economic servitude based upon low wages and the indifference of trade unionism, Dr. Charles H. Wesley, head of the Department of History at Howard University, declared Wednesday in an address on "The Thirteenth Amendment—A Milestone in the Emancipation of the Negro."

Speaking of the Negro's part in the Civil War, the well known historian stated: "More than 178,000 Negroes shouldered the musket and 150,000 of them were in the Quartermasters' Corps. There were 141 companies of Infantry, seven of Cavalry, twelve of heavy artillery and one of light artillery.

What a challenge the deeds of these soldiers were to men who championed their cause! They demonstrated that they were worthy to be free.

"What an indictment their deeds become to those who would keep Negroes out of the Army and Navy today or restrict them to certain branches of these services."

Dr. Wesley delivered his address in Founders Library at Howard University in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Proclamation of the Adoption of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

In this same connection the Library of Congress has installed an exhibition of historical documents illustrative of the contributions of the Negro to American culture.

Dr. Wesley climaxed his address by urging colored people as a group to carry forward the battle for new freedom which shall result from the breaking of the chains binding the education, art, literature, politics, economic and social life of the Negro.

VICTORY IN LOUISVILLE

JAN 25 1941

The suit filed against high War Department officials by Yancey Williams, Howard university student and aviator to compel them to accept his enlistment in the Army Air Corps, emphasizes how little real progress has been made in de-Hitleri ing U.S. defense.

There is something bitterly ironic about a perfectly healthy Negro who is a licensed pilot being turned down by the Air Corps while the government makes the welkin ring with cries about the shortage of eligible candidates for the Army Air Corps.

Despite all the ballyhoo, we have made very little headway in ending jim crowism and discrimination in the Army, little more in defense industry, and none whatever in the Navy and Marine Corps.

They are not now and never have been admitted to the Marine Corps.

There are no Negroes in the Engineer Corps, the Signal Corps, the Army Air Corps, the Tank Corps, the Chemical Warfare Service or any other of the special branches except as laborers.

We are getting a worse run-around on Negro officers than in 1917.

Not a dozen of the 600 Negro reserve officers have been called to active duty.

The Naval Reserve from which officers are being commissioned as midshipmen after a brief period of training, is closed to Negroes.

Negroes are still being barred from all the schools of the various arms and services of the Army.

The Army Nurse Corps is a lily-white outfit, although there are hundreds of colored girls who are registered nurses.

Defense industries turning out rifles, cannon, airplanes, tanks, armored cars, pistols, machine guns and military equipment of various kinds, hire no Negroes save in rare instances.

JAN 25 1941

There is only one way to fight these evils: by organizing in every city, town and county a livewire Negro defense committee to support the fight locally and in Washington, morally and financially. No one else will.

Draft Jim-Crow

MANY draft boards have had to revise their quotas because Negro housing units were not ready for occupancy and, therefore, colored draftees must remain at home.

The country is in the throes of a war hysteria which may terminate in war at any time. If and when that time comes trained men will be needed to defend the country. Experience in our last war showed that there was little time left to train men for combat service after the declaration of war. That was brought home to us when many soldiers were sent to France with only a few weeks of military training. Obviously, such soldiers were ill-prepared to defend themselves against well trained opponents.

It takes between twelve and twenty-four months to train a soldier. He must not only know what to do in a given situation but must be able to act without giving much thought to it. His mind and body must be so coordinated and synchronized as to make him move and act automatically when in the face of danger.

The jim-crow policy the army is keeping Negroes from the training camps. In the event of war within the next year the masses of Negro draftees will be wholly unprepared. That fact will be a good excuse to assign them to labor batallions and to the more ardous tasks of digging ditches and washing dishes. If, of course, the necessity arises when a few thousands soldiers must be sacrificed in battle, as sometimes happens, it is not unreasonable to place your untrained soldiers in the front ranks to act as shock absorbers and cannon-fodder for the trained men in the rear-guard.

We abhor this un-American policy of the War Department in jim-crowing Negro soldiers who, too, are willing to die that democracy might live. We cannot reconcile the logic of its policy with the democratic process which is expected to accord equality of opportunity to all citizens. If Negroes must fight to maintain the democratic ideals of this country it is only reasonable to expect them to train and fight under conditions consistent with the very highest ideals of democracy and Americanism. And this, we regret to observe, they are not preparing to do.

England has seen fit to change its policy concerning permitting black aviators into the Royal Air Force. At the outbreak of the war Negro flyers were denied entrance in the R. A. F. Somewhere along the line England remembered that she is supposed to be fighting a war for democracy. Negro flyers are admitted into the R. A. F. Perhaps her back-to-the-wall position might have influenced her tolerance in these regards.

It is hoped that the greatest democracy in the world will, too, revise its policies concerning racial restrictions in the armed forces of the nation.

Seek Congress'nal Probe of Jim Crow In Nat'nal Defense

JAN 25 1941

Action Taken by NAACP Board Which Will Urge Bill with Teeth in It

NEW YORK. — Introduction in Congress of a resolution calling for a Senate investigation of the status and treatment of the Negro in the national defense program will be sought by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, it was announced here, this week. According to officials of the organization the name of the senator who will introduce the resolution will be made known within the next few days.

The announcement followed action taken by the association's board of directors at their monthly meeting held here at the NAACP's national headquarters, 69 Fifth Avenue. At the meeting the board, following a lengthy discussion of the question, voted to seek a Congressional investigation into every phase of the defense program, particularly the nation-wide discrimination practiced against Negroes in the matter of employment, by firms holding federal contracts, and the refusal of vocational training to Negroes in defense training classes, a project financed by the government.

The investigation would also include a thorough probe into the discrimination against Negroes in the Army, Navy, Army Air Corps, Medical reserve, and in the operation of local draft boards throughout the country.

The resolution will call for public hearings, the announcement said, and the taking of testimony from officials of the Army, Navy, trade unions, and the submission of information gathered by the association as a result of two national surveys now nearing completion.

In the event that discrimination is not abolished after the investigation, the announcement said, the association will seek the introduction of bills in Congress to require inclusion of Anti-discrimination clauses in all industrial defense contracts financed in whole or in part by the federal government, and to amend the National Labor Relations Act by denying the protection of this act to unions which discriminate either directly or indirectly against Negroes.

In making the announcement officials of the organization stated that they would "leave no stone untouched," in pushing the investigation to the limit.

Things U. S. Senator Didn't Know

United States Senator Gerald P. Nye, astute representative in the upper chamber from North Dakota, and generally regarded as one of the country's elder statesmen, probably lost some prestige when he admitted during a speech in Harlem that he was unaware of any discrimination against Negroes in our national defense program.

The Westerner, paired with Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, led the senate's fight against H. R. 1776, the so-called dictatorship bill, which put the United States on record for its "all-out" campaign to save Great Britain. During the debate, both senators showed keen knowledge of affairs across the oceans. At the very moment all the noise was being stirred up over the British Aid Bill, a move was afoot in the senate for an exhaustive investigation of discrimination against Negroes.

We wonder where the senator has been all this time. But that is water over the dam. Now that he has been told that THERE IS DISCRIMINATION against Negroes, and since the body of which he is a member is investigating that discrimination, we earnestly urge Mr. Nye to insist on a thorough job. Among the things the good senator might expect to hear—that is, if he is really interested are that:

1. Negroes still are not given equal opportunity in the army, are given practically no opportunity in the navy, and are barred from the marine corps,

2. According to reports, the British government has requested the United States not to send Negroes to the West Indies island to work on bases construction there regardless of qualifications, and

3. Manufacturers with government contracts for defense orders have openly stated that they will not hire Negroes in any but menial capacities. (This in spite of the fact there are thousands of skilled and semi-skilled Negroes available).

These are just a few of the things the senator will learn if he listens in on the senate hearings, soon to begin, and learning them, as a United States senator, he can certainly help do something about them. Too, the senator can use his influence to see that the investigation goes to the heart of the problem and does not result in mere surface-scratching and pussyfooting.

What It Means to Be a Flunky in the Navy

DEC 13 1941

By JULIO FLETCHER

SAN JUAN, P.R.—I am writing this letter in the hope that it may help save other boys from being victimized as I have been in the service of Uncle Sam.

Desiring to serve my country in this emergency, I joined the naval reserve in September, 1940, at the age of 18, and was called to active service the following December. I was told that many opportunities for occupational training would be open to me, but since then I have discovered this to be false.

A colored boy in the navy is allowed to become nothing more than an officer's servant, and as such is ofttimes subject to even more than verbal abuse.

No Chance to Advance

Besides this, he can never be anything more than an officer's servant. I might add that all officers are not gentlemen.

The second and I think the most important thing is the color line which is always apparent.

DEC 13 1941

One of the shore patrol members here in San Juan where I am stationed dislikes colored people and has been heard on numerous occasions to make remarks about them which are obscene and vile to say the least.

Beaten by Officer

In October, I was at a public resort here and became involved in a controversy. The police settled the matter peaceably when this shore patrolman, Harry K. Spedden, in company with another patrolman, came upon the scene.

Without any justification, I was given a severe beating by these two men with their night sticks, as a result of which I had to stay in the hospital for nearly two weeks.

To add to this, I am being held as a general court-martial prisoner and have been confined to the naval jail for nearly a month, with the prospect of serving an additional sentence of many months in a naval penitentiary.

Charged with "Assault"

At my trial it was obvious that there are two laws for the navy—one for the white man and which ever one they wish to apply at the time for colored men.

DEC 13 1941

One of the statements attributed to Spedden, which was recorded at my trial, was: "If I had my way, I would kill all you n-----s."

The strangest part of this is that I am charged with assaulting Spedden. How ridiculous this becomes when one learns that I did not regain consciousness until nine hours after the beating.

Naturally, the reason for the assault by the authorities is all summed up in the well-worn phrase of "self-defense," hence, the charges against me.

Witnesses Disagree

However, witnesses do not agree with this version, but what weight do they carry if they are colored and testify for another colored man?

This is not the first, but I can safely state, the fourth known assault by this authority upon colored sailors.

I firmly believe that should the AFRO take steps to investigate conditions of colored men in the navy it would not find them any too pleasant.

Conditions in stations away from the United States are more deplorable than those in the States.

The only way for a colored man to succeed in the navy is for him to allow himself to be treated as a buffoon, not as a man. If he does this he may "succeed," which means he may get a raise in pay and be relieved of most o the more distasteful chores.

Discrimination and Negroes

THE RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH declares that although an average of around 300 white carpenters are employed continuously on the construction of the Army supply depot on the Bellwood tract below Richmond, "not one Negro carpenter has been employed there." Since the work has been in progress for more than two months, having been started the middle of September, it is impossible to escape the conclusion that Negro carpenters are not wanted on that particular job and that none are going to be employed.

According to THE TIMES-DISPATCH, there are 41 Negro carpenters in the recently organized Negro carpenters' union in Richmond who are available at any time for work on the Bellwood project. The fact that none but white carpenters have been given employment on the project, despite the availability of more than twoscore Negro carpenters, indicates that the Army is not following the policy inaugurated by the OPM, at the President's behest, of seeing that Negro labor receives its due share of work on defense projects.

Somebody might do well to ask the President about this at one of his press conferences when he returns to the White House from his vacation trip to Georgia. Presumably the evident discrimination against Negro labor on the Army project at Bellwood is not in accordance with the President's expressed wishes that Negro workmen be given proper opportunity for jobs on defense projects.

CLAIM CONTRACTOR DISCRIMINATES ON HOUSING PROJECT

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19—Suit was filed in Circuit Court Friday against the St. Louis Housing Authority, the United States Housing Authorty and 12 contractors seeking to restrain them from alleged discrimination against skilled Negro labor on the Carr Square Village Low Cost Housing Project for Negroes.

Filing the suit on behalf of the group of eight skilled workmen, was the legal committee of the St. Louis branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Attys. Joseph L. McLemore, Robert L. Witherspoon, Henry D. Epsy and Roy Lowe.

The suit charges that no skilled Negro labor is being used on the Carr Square project, although, under terms of the contract, 35 per cent of the unskilled and 3.2 per cent of the skilled work should be given to Negroes.

USE WHITE LABOR

Both Steele and Mathews are members of the St. Louis Local A.F. of L. of Brickmasons, in good standing and have been turned down at both the Housing Project as well as the Small Arms Plant.

The plaintiff's point out, in their petition that the federal provision sets forth that "The Local Authority will require that there shall be no discrimination because of race, creed, or political affiliations in the employment of persons for work on the project."

These men, all listed as skilled men and in good union standing, assert that they have applied to the contractors for jobs as skilled workers on the project and have requested the United States Housing Authority and the St. Louis Housing Authority for the enforcement of the provisions of the contract. It further is asserted that the Authority has refused and is continuing to refuse to employ them or any other Negroes as skilled workers on the Carr projects, and that white skilled laborers have been and are being used in the construction, building and erection of the project.

A further conference with Berry Cravens, secretary of the local Authority by Attys. McLemore and Espy Thursday afternoon, November 13, failed to bring forth any promise that Negroes would be put to work in skilled capacities. The suit followed.

In August, it will be recalled, a mass demonstration was staged in and around the project site by a large number of race organizations. Since then, there have been numerous protest meetings of all kinds, there has been a conference at the City Hall, called by Mayor William Dee Becker in his executive chambers, conferencesw ith housing authorities, local and federal, but always a stalemate.

Above it all, stands forth the fact that St. Louis' two paid-up and qualified bricklayers, although working on other union jobs in the city, have been unable to get jobs!

Holding the main contract is the J. E. Dunn Construction Co. Subcontractors, also listed as defendants are the George F. Robertson Plastering Co.; Vickery Contracting Co.; Gus T. Handge & Son Painting Co.; Western Sheet Metal Works; Missouri Roofing Co.; Centrol Architectural Iron Works; H. A. Dailey, Inc., Mid-City Plumbing and Engineering Co.; Kupferle-Hicks Heating Co. and A. B. Reinschmidt Company.

Plane Factories Reverse Policy On Race Workers

FEP Hearings Scheduled To Begin Monday

LOS ANGELES, —(ANP) —The wild and wooly west, which less than a year ago boasted of its economic vigilante-ism against Negroes in defense industries, was neither wild nor wooly this week as the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice prepared to open its first public hearing on defense discrimination here Monday.

Throwing the spotlight on this frontier section, the FEPC was scheduled to reveal through its hearings just what the government has accomplished in its drive against employment bias, and also what additional steps must be taken if unions and employers are to be forced to observe Executive Order No. 8802.

RESULTS SEEN

The government's achievements attained through the cooperation of FEPC and OPM with the offices of Dr. Robert C. Weaver of the Negro employment and training branch and Dr. Will Alexander of the minority groups branch are appreciable in this section.

Typical of this progress has been the breaks in the military aircraft front which was widely publicized a year ago. As the committee hearings opened Monday, four of the six leading manufacturers of aircraft were employing Negro workers in their plants where only one Negro skilled workers six months before.

On the other hand, though, two of the large companies still had no Negro employes and the FEP was expected to crack down on their management of one and the closed shop union of the other for their barriers against colored workers.

The good side included:

1-Lockhead-Vega Aircraft Company, which two months ago announced a sensational change in employment policies and began the immediate hiring of Negroes in all crafts in which they were skilled and trained. Fifteen Negro production workers went to work in this plant at once and more than 100 were called in for tests and interviews.

2-North American Aviation, Inc., which called in its first five Negro production workers in Kansas City, Kansas, last week, indirect repudiation of the March statement of J. H. Kindleberger, president, that Negroes would only be employed as janitors and custodians.

3-Douglas Aircraft corporation, the first of the West Coast companies to employ Negro skilled and semi-skilled workers, which has increased its number of Negro employes in this category in the last for weeks.

4-Consolidated Aircraft company which is still negotiating with OPM for the employment of Negro skilled workers, but which has attempted to escape the scrutiny of FEP by hiring more than 135 Negro janitors and unskilled workers in the last few weeks.

TWO ARE ADAMANT

The two plants which the OPM agencies failed to crack and which they are reported to have certified to the FEP are the Vultee Aircraft company, whose president has not yet retracted his statement that "only members of the Caucasian race" will be employed in his plant, and the Boeing Aircraft company in Seattle where Negro workers are still barred through a closed shop contract held by the International Association of Machinists. This same machinists' union is bitterly opposing the integration of Negro workers into the Vultee plant in Nashville.

Chief among these has the close cooperation between the offices of Dr. Weaver and Dr. Alexander and the Committee on Fair Employment Practices. Soon after the committee picked Los Angeles as the scene of its first hearing, representatives of the Negro employment and training and the minority groups branches concentrated their efforts on the West Coast area and put the pressure on recalcitrant employers and union officials. The threat of certification to the FEP is credited with the quick results in some cases.

The breaks on the West Coast front have not been confined to the aviation field. Recently Negro shipfitters who had complained to OPM, were hired for the first time in the Todd and Moore shipyards and in the diesel engine shops in this area.

Outline Steps Taken To Aid Race Workers

Pamphlet Is Issued by Labor Division, OPM

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(S N S) —How President Roosevelt and the Office of Production Management are seeking to secure full participation of all American minority groups in the national defense program is explained in a 19-page pamphlet, "Minorities in Defense," released today by the Labor Division of OPM.

The pamphlet outlines steps taken since July 12, 1940, to end defense discrimination, and describes the functions and duties of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, the Negro Employment and Training Branch, and the Minority Groups Branch of the Labor Division of OPM.

RECEIVES COMPLAINTS

According to the pamphlet, the Committee on Fair Employment Practice receives all complaints of defense discrimination and investigates them through the field staffs of the Negro Employment and training, and the Minority Groups Branches of OPM. If neither Branch is able to adjust a complaint, the case is then certified to the COFEP for further action and redress.

In addition to serving as a Board of Appeals to the two OPM Branches, the Committee (1) deals with the problem of discrimination in government service; (2) maintains contact with contracting agencies of the Government concerning enforcement and non-discrimination clauses in defense contracts; (3) establishes contact with state and local agencies on discrimination in employment and coordinates their programs, and (4) maintains contacts with minorities organizations and with other organizations and key individuals.

The Negro Employment and Training Branch, whose chief and staff members serve on Federal and Regional Labor Supply Committees in nine cities, broadens job opportunities for colored workers through (1) systematic visits to industrial employers; (2) regular surveys of training facilities, and (3) constant contact with the Bureau and Employment Security and local offices of the United States Employment Service to secure the placement of Negro workers through approved governmental agencies.

SEEK INTEGRATION

Similarly, the chief and staff members of the Minority Groups Branch, which is concerned with the problems of all racial minority groups including the physically handicapped) other than Negroes, serve on Federal and Regional Labor Supply Committees and seek the integration of members of these groups into the defense effort.

All complaints of racial or minority discrimination should be addressed to Lawrence W. Cramer, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Social Security Building, Washington, D. C., although many investigations and employer contacts are made by field representatives of the two OPM Branches.

RACE DESIGNATION STANDARD IS REPLY TO NAACP PROTEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—The "N" badges for Negro workers used at the Philadelphia Navy Yard have been made standard by the Navy department, according to a letter to the NAACP from Ralph A. Bard, assistant secretary of the Navy.

Bard said that the badge was developed for emergency use at a West Coast Yard and that by instructions of the Navy department was made standard "some six months ago." He asserted that the letters "W" (for white) and "N" (for Negro) are inconspicious and cannot be construed to be discriminatory.

RAISES FURTHER OBJECTION TO USE

The NAACP replied on Friday, October 31: "The question is not," it said, "whether the designation is 'discriminatory' or not. It is humiliating, insulting, and unnecessary. It offers a gratuitous affront to Negro American citizens by labeling them (as though a man with a colored skin needed to be labeled) in much the same manner as the labels used by the Nazis to designate Jews from so-called Aryans in Germany."

In reply to the Navy's statement that "many others" are labeled according to race, the NAACP asked, "What others?"

The association also pointed out that the Navy has gone far afield in this matter, and reminded Bard that private industries employing both colored and white workers have not found it necessary to use any such designation on badges.

DRAFTEE DISLIKES ARMY

"I would rather be sent to prison than to the army because I have read in the papers where colored soldiers have been mistreated."

So declared William Bowers, 27, when he appeared in federal court last Wednesday on a charge of violating the Selective Service Act.

Judge George H. Moore who heard the case informed Bowers the court was prepared to accommodate him with a sentence of thirty months.

Bowers registered for army service, giving his correct name, but a false address. When he was arrested through a routine investigation by police officers and asked to show them his registration card he said he had torn it up.

Investigation revealed when he registered he gave the address of a flop house where he did not live. His draft board officials had been unable to locate him.

Bowers claimed he read so much material about how colored soldiers were being treated that he preferred prison to army life.

Frank W. Clegg, attorney for Bowers, asked Judge Moore to permit the defendant to be carried before the draft board and fill out his questionaire and be classified for army service.

It was at this point that Judge Moore asked Bowers to state his choice whether he would rather be sent to prison or be given a chance to go to the army if his board desired to send him.

Clegg appeared dumbfounded when Bowers said he would prefer the pen to the camp. He was on his way late last week to serve

AME CONFERENCE ENDORSES NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 23—(ANP)—The 66th annual session of the African Methodist Episcopal church, with Bishop Noah W. Williams presiding, went on record in ringing language in support of national defense but in opposition to discrimination against Negro workers in its meeting this past week. Among the resolutions which were passed was one pledging loyalty and another condemning un-American practices.

"Realizing that the church of the living God is the only heaven ordained institution for the bringing of peace on earth, we of the Kansas conference go on record as endorsing the national defense program of the President of the United States," the resolution began.

"We have, however, had our attention through the Negro press and pulpit, called to the alarming practice of discrimination in the national defense setup. Negro carpenters, mechanics, and engineers of all sorts are denied the right of joining the ranks of organized labor. Because of the denial of the right of organization black hands cannot help in the mighty industrial effort that will cause this nation to be so armed until no foe will dare put his foot upon our shores.

"The Kansas conference goes on record condemning such practice as unhealthy for our vaunted democracy. The Negro has shed his blood on every battlefield Glorious has been the bravery and valor of the Negro soldier. The pages of American history are illuminated with the valient deeds of men of color.

"Be it hereby resolved that since the Negro has played such a dominant role in the development of this nation, that our official heads of government take such action as necessary to see that discrimination, segregation, and jim-crowism ceases in our industrial program.

"We say that if Uncle Sam will strike the chains that bind the hands of Negro labor, the Negro will make the tanks and artillery; he will take the wings of the eagle and fly the planes. He will navigate the battleships of our glorious nation that sail the seven seas; he will be willing to shed his blood and continue to be loyal that we may remain one nation, indivisible, with charity and justice for all." The resolutions were presented to Bishop Williams by the committee which included M. C. Knight, T. W. Green, Jr., R. A. Adams, F. Jesse Peck, R. S. Everett, G. W. Reed, D. M. Cole, Mrs. Lottie White, Mrs. Freda Wilson and Mrs. Gertrude Clark.

Fight for Negro Rights—A Fight for Democracy

New York, N. Y.

Enclosed please find copy of a letter I sent to the Chicago Defender:

"I read your editorial in the Defender recently in which you express approval of the views of Rev. Harold Kingsley expressed in his letter to your paper dealing with the war and Negro people. Certainly there is need for clarity on this issue. For that reason I feel impelled to answer the 'progressive and learned' (as you call him) Dr. Kingsley.

"The worthy Doctor's major premise that 'it is sound wisdom that we fight both these battles at the same time—the battle for full citizenship and the battle for the ideal of America as presented in our foreign policy by President Roosevelt.' Is the 'learned and progressive' minister so naive as not to see that the battle for full citizenship of the Negro people is a battle against the Roosevelt foreign policy and its supporters. Is he so blind that he cannot see that Mr. Roosevelt and his foreign policy finds among its most hearty and consistent supporters the 'economic royalist' and the Southern Bourbon who wield the lynch rope around the necks of the Negro people.

"A fight for full citizenship, practical in its implications, including the right to work, decent housing, buoyant, health, freedom of person and from discrimination, is a fight against these people. The Roosevelt foreign policy receives its most consistent support from the chief enemies of the Negro people. Let the 'learned and progressive' Doctor look at the record of the poll tax Congressmen on every 'Roosevelt policy' that drives the country deeper and deeper into the war.

"Negroes are against the war. They have learned their lesson of 1917, even though privilege and philanthropy has many a henchman to whip up the war drums like the 'learned and progressive' Doctor. Negroes want real democracy, jobs and freedom. To get that they are learning that they have to fight against the Roosevelt foreign policies, Wall Street and Southern lynchers that they represent, the chief barriers that must be eliminated before Negroes will have full citizenship. Hence a fight against the war is a fight for Negro rights, a fight for democracy."

Negro Hired; Workers Quit Negro Fired

HENRYETTA, Okla.—(ANP)—Another strike by CIO workers over the hiring of a Negro skilled workman developed last week at the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company plant here and was settled Thursday when the colored man was fired.

A Tulsa contracting firm employed the Negro to mix concrete on a job at the glass plant. Immediately the Glass Workers Union, CIO, protested and about 250 went on strike, leaving their jobs.

They charged their contract with the company banned the hiring of Negroes. The company agreed not to use colored labor and the strike was called off with work resuming Friday morning.

"President's Executive Order Being Flouted By Industrialists"--Scott

Only Relatively Small Numbers of Negroes Being Employed in Defense Industries—Scott Asks When Will America Learn the Lesson of the Hour—Unity.

By EMMET J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—Some weeks ago, in reviewing President Roosevelt's executive order No. 8802, seeking to open the channels of defense employment to Negro applicants and eligibles, this chronicler referred to it as "a gesture of good will," pointing out at the same time that, while the order had been well received and widely praised, its real value would depend upon effective enforcement.

Doubts and fears were freely expressed at the time by Negro organizations, and many of those deeply interested in overcoming the discriminations and prejudices so widely rampant, that Industry would go through with the program. It was felt that it would find a way to evade the clear intents of the order.

Soon, also, it became apparent that Government officials were busy sabotaging it by technical interpretations not in accord with the letter and spirit of the directions received by them.

DOUBTS AND FEARS

Those doubts and fears are now being realized. Recent surveys of the status of the Negro in defense industries convincingly indicate that negligibly small numbers are being employed, and to use the words of Elmer A. Carter, editor, Opportunity Magazine, official organ of the National Urban League, "lip service only has been rendered (by many plants) by so-called token employment of a half dozen Negroes or less. There are many plants engaged in defense production which have openly defied the order and declared that under no circumstances will they employ members of the Negro race." Those so far employed are mainly in custodial service, he declares.

Mr. Carter holds a responsible position in the Democratic administration of New York State as a member of the Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board of the Department of Labor. His loyalty to race has always transcended political loyalty.

Regretfully, he has been compelled to recognize the patent fact that coldblooded and ruthless racial discrimination against Negro citizens in defense industry continues despite the rosy hopes indulged by enthusiastic partisans who declared, when the order was announced, that a new Emancipation Proclamation had been issued.

Abraham Lincoln was more realistic. He did not feel that honeyed words and phrases alone could cure atrocious evils.

THE COUNTRY HAS SUFFERED

Greviously as the Negro has suffered from the gross injustices inflicted by labor organizations and industry during this defense period, the country has suffered more.

After months and months of preparation, calling for billions and billions of dollars for expenditures, production is still far behind schedule. The men in the camps are reported as being discouraged, bored, disheartened. Anxious as they are to have a part in destiny's great play, they are unhappy because, as they say, adequate implements of war for training have not been provided.

Supplies are alarmingly slow. Full quotas of war weapons have not been provided. After a year of expansion and prepartaion, the Army of 1,441,500 is still months away from adequate combat efficiency. There is an amazing lack of equipment. Complaints are also being made of shortages of men.

Trucks, ambulances, rifles, machine guns, munitions, airplanes armor plate, essentials of modern equipment as prescribed by Army organization tables, are not adequately forthcoming.

INCREASED NEGRO PERSONNEL NEEDED

The men shortages in the Army, already referred to, can readily be met, in part, by a revision of the table calling for 92,345 Negro officers and soldiers. The population-percentage calls for approximately 150,000. Here would be added personnel of 57,655.

No attempt is here made to account for the acute shortages in equipment. That story is being told in newspapers every day. It is a catalogue of confusions, of oversights, of mistakes, trial and error, strikes and baffling procedures.

One part of it, most surely, is the concerted effort to deny Negro men and women employment in the effort to provide our country with the needed essentials of the all-too-probable war in the offing. Production could have been hastened. Equipment provided. Discouragement among officers and men abated. Grumbling stopped and our war machine geared to an all-high.

WHEN WILL AMERICA LEARN?

When will the enlightened elements of America learn the lesson of lessons?

That, there is no permanent gain in subjecting, by coercive force, any of our population groups to an attempted inferior status of citizenship and general recognition in meeting our common tasks and responsibilities;

That, discontented elements in the body politic, chafing under restrictions, and subject to unfair practices, calculated to embitter and destroy their better instincts, present a situation calling for remedy;

That, such practices react upon the moral and spiritual forces of the country, and ultimately reduce us all to a common level, far below the heights our civilization is capable of achieving.

N. Y. DAILY REVEALS STORY BEHIND 366TH

NOV 1 1941

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—In a special dispatch from Fort Devens, Mass., last Saturday's New York Times carried an article stating that the 366th Infantry Regiment of colored troops stationed there were kept from the First Army war games now going on in North Carolina to avoid "possible racial difficulties." The same reason was given in a Pittsburgh Courier story three weeks ago when it was revealed that orders for sending the troops down to the Carolinas had been rescinded.

Navy Wants Only White Mechanics

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 30.—Although the Navy is seeking an unlimited number of mechanics, including all classes of aeronautical technicians from engine workers to instrument specialists, for immediate service with the air arm of the two ocean fleet, only white persons need apply.

Qualified white mechanics may enlist at immediate ratings up to petty officers, first class, and at pay grades consistent with their civilian experience, but colored men may enlist in the messman branch only and in the rating of mess attendant, third class.

Both white mechanics and colored messmen must be American citizens between the ages of 17 and 50.

The appeal for mechanics is urgent at this time because the Navy faces the possibility of a shortage of mechanics soon. Nevertheless, only white applicants will be accepted.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

Editor, The Mobile Press Register:

I notice President Roosevelt's committe on fair employment practices has taken a step in the right direction by inviting direct complaints from any workers barred from defense industries because of racial discrimination. The committee has asked that such complaints be written directly to their offices in the social security building in Washington.

It proposes to hold public hearings in such cases or make representations to the President. But much more is needed. Some little progress has been made breaking down job barriers against negro workers—the heaviest victims of this type of discrimination — but not nearly enough. In numerous instances, the names of the employers and factories which practice discrimination are known along with their insidious methods. The biggest need is for stern government action to prevent such un-American and unlawful policies. It was upon the insistent struggles of the negro people in unity with trade unions and white progressives that President Roosevelt set up the fair employment committee.

These struggles are now more important than ever in order that the nation may have full advantage of its productive human resources for national defense and to crush Hitler. Employers who practice racial discrimination in hiring workers are violating not only the rights of the negro and other minorities, but are seriously impeding the defensive strength and unity of the nation at a critical moment.

Urban League

By JESSE O. THOMAS.

A letter from any job-seeker who has been denied a job in a defense industry because of his race, creed, color or national origin is enough to initiate an investigation by the President's committee on fair employment practice, it was explained today by Lawrence C. Cramer, executive secretary.

Any person who has reason to believe that his race, creed, color or national origin has prevented his obtaining a position or promotion in the federal civil service may also submit his complaint in the same way.

It is not necessary for an aggrieved worker to have a lawyer draw up any formal papers, it is explained, but it is necessary that the complaint furnish adequate information to permit the committee to act, and as the investigation proceeds it may be necessary to have the complaint submit a notarized copy of his charges. But to get an investigation started by the committee only a clear, fact-giving letter is required.

The fact-giving letter, according to Cramer, should tell the following:

1. The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, and its location (street, city and state).

2. Whether the discrimination alleged is because of (a) race, (b) creed, (c) color or (d) national origin.

3. The race, religion or national origin of the person making the complaint.

4. The type of job, position or classification for which application is made.

5. The qualifications of the complainant for the job he seeks (including his education and work history, and his civil service status, if he has passed a civil service examination).

6. Date when complainant applied for the job which he was denied.

7. Date when he was refused employment or admittance to a training course.

8. Name of person refusing position (if available).

9. Reason given for refusal.

10. Statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin.

12. Name and address of persons alleging discrimination.

If primary investigations and contacts show that a firm, government agency, defense training school or union, has actually practiced the discrimination charged, and if primary contacts fail to remedy the situation, then the committee moves to other steps, which may include a public hearing, notification of other government agencies that a firm with defense contracts is endangering national unity and workers' morale by practicing discrimination in violation of government policy, or the making of representations to the President.

Navy Insists On "N" Badges

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The "N" badges for colored workers used at the Philadelphia Navy Yard have been made standard by the Navy department, according to a letter to the N. A. A. C. P. from Ralph A. Bard, asistant secretary of the Navy.

Bard said that the badge was developed for emergency use at a West Coast Yard and that by instructions of the Navy department was made standard "some six months ago." He asserted that the letters "W" (for white) and "N" (for "Negro") are inconspicuous and cannot be construed to be discriminatory.

The N. A. A. C. P. replied on Friday, October 31. "The question is not," it said, "whether the designation is 'discriminatory' or not. It is humiliating, insulting, and unnecessary. It offers a gratuitous affront to colored American citizens by labeling them (as though a man with a colored skin needed to be labeled) in much the same manner as the labels used by the Nazis to designate Jews from so-called Aryans in Germany."

In reply to the Navy's statement that "many others" are labeled according to race, the N. A. A. C. P. asked, "What others?"

The Association also pointed out that the Navy has gone far afield in this matter, and reminded Bard that private industries employing both colored and white workers have not found it necessary to use any such designation on badges.

FT. BRAGG M. P. TELLS HOW SOLDIERS FARE IN SOUTH

OCT 24 1941

OKLAHOMA CITY, October 23—(ANP)—"It's hell to have a soldier in the south," declared Technical Sgt. William Brown, who was here Saturday on leave from his military outfit in Hattiesburg, Miss., attending the funeral of a relative. Sgt. Brown was formerly attached to the 24th infantry at Fort Bragg, and is now with a company of colored engineers.

He stated that he made his wife move from Hattiesburg in order that he would not get in trouble regarding her. He did not want his wife insulted by poor whites meeting her on the street while she was shopping in the business section of town and telling her "Nigger," get on back down in your part of town."

"I have a car," said the sergeant, "but if you'll believe me the white folk don't want me to drive it. Twice whites have driven up beside me and told me to get off the highway."

The non-com said that the engineers build roads, bridges, airports, do drafting, surveying and study methods of water purification. They are also taught how to blow up bridges and Brown says that he can get rid of any bridge so quickly it would make one's head swim. He told of his taking an engineering course at Fort Belvoir in a class of 250, seven of whom were colored.

On the Fort Bragg incident, Brown said that he was stationed there shortly before the rift occurred.

"I served as MP for a long period," stated Brown. "One night I had to work almost all night riding the buses to protect colored soldiers. White MP'S were on the warpath that night and several of them were attempting to herd Negro soldiers with drawn guns.

"On one occasion when a cheap carnival came to town they made Negro soldiers remain in town for eight days when a white woman with the carnival alleged she had been insluted by a Negro.

"Shortly after this, while serving as MP down in the Negro section, I had to arrest two white soldiers for chasing Negro women; but nothing is ever done about this sort of thing.

"We really got it in the neck under Pat Hurley. From 1922 to 1936, there was no advancement for a black trooper in the 24th, but since that time things have materially changed. I think this war scare has benefited Negro soldiers tremendously.

Brown, who said his home is in Georgia, remained in the army 17 years before receiving a promotion.

Charge Violation Of Articles Of War By Arkansas Incident; Ask President To Direct Prosecution

President Roosevelt has been asked to settle the dispute between the War Department and the Department of Justice over jurisdiction in prosecuting Arkansas state troopers who threatened and insulted members of the 94th Engineers division last August 10, and slapped Lieutenant Donald Curry, an officer in command.

In a letter to the Chief Executive Friday, October 24, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People declared:

"There seems to be no dispute as to the fact that a crime has been committed. If it is true that the state troopers were deputized by the military authorities and if they acted as military police, then they violated the Articles of War, especially Section 1536 of Title 10 of the United States Code.

Articles of War Violated

"Regardless of whether the state troopers were deputized or not," the NAACP said, "they violated Section 54 of Title 18 of the United States Code which provides:

"If two or more persons in any State, Territory or District conspire to prevent, by force, intimidation, or threat any person from accepting or holding any office trust, or place of confidence under the United States, or from discharging any duties thereof; or to induce by like duties as an officer are required to be performed of his lawful dismeans any officer of the United States to leave any State, Territory, District, or place, where his charge of the duties of his office, or while engaged in the lawful discharge thereof, or to injure his property so as to molest, interrupt, hinder, or impede him in the discharge of his official duties, each of such persons shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than six years, or both.'

The Association pointed out that failure by officials to take affirmative action when Negroes had been victims of previous unprovoked assaults gave courage to the people in Arkansas to extend their disrespect for the uniform of the United States to the white officers in charge of the company.

"Failure to act in this instance will encourage further disrespect for the United States uniform which will lead to additional unprovoked assaults," the NAACP asserted.

WHITE SOLDIERS CHEATED

White soldiers in Army camps are being cheated of the proper share of recreational facilities in order that the jim crow policy of the War Department may be maintained. Army camps have one service club for every 5,000 Negro soldiers, but only one service club for every 17,000 white soldiers. Other recreation facilities indicate that white soldiers are being short-ended in the same proportion.

The War department doubtless regards these inequities as favorable to the Negro. They are not and Negro citizens do not want any such favoritism. White soldiers and black soldiers should receive the same and neither group should be discriminated against in any particular.

A policy of segregation always leads to discrimination, regardless of what those in the War Department responsible for such a policy may think about it.

At the present time, nearly 30,000 Negro selectees have been "passed over" by the Selective Service System in the various states.

In a letter to The Courier this week, President Roosevelt acknowledges that this is true. But the President justifies the action by pointing to the provision of the Selective Service Act which stipulates that no soldier shall be inducted until the Army is prepared to offer him shelter, food, clothing and the other requisittes of a soldier in training.

The actual truth is that this provision has not been complied with so far as Negro soldiers are concerned. There must be special shelters and special areas for Negro soldiers in the segregated system.

Between now and December an undue proportion of Negroes is to be released from the Army. That can only mean that many of these men will only be partially trained.. General Marshall himself in asking that the term of service be extended acknowledged that the job of training a soldier could not be done in a few months.. But these ill-trained Negroes are to be turned out to await the call to duty later.

They are doubtless being released in order to make room for those who have been "passed over" in the special shelter provided for Negroes by the War department.

Thus the vicious circle of segregation unrolls, cheating white soldiers of recreation facilities on one hand and reducing the period of training for Negro soldiers on the other.

United States Appeasement Policy

THE United States Army has begun to retreat before it meets the enemy. It has made concessions and compromises. It has adopted an appeasement policy with respect to principles that would have made the late Chamberlain of England look like an amateur.

The most recent act of the army which confirms our point of view was the decision to keep the colored 366th regiment in the state of Massachusetts instead of sending the troops South for the most modern type of army training. Although the reason for making such a decision was not disclosed, the evidence of the past places any interpretation of such a decision beyond the category of speculation.

There have been retreats and compromises all along the line when the question of full and equal participation in the military program by Negroes was raised. The administration at a precocious time announced that failure to segregate colored troops in the army would be destructive of military morale. Subsequently, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, whose previous views toward Negroes were thought tolerant, delivered a fascist version of the Negro's place in the navy when he gave the "dog-wagging-the-tail" statement that colored sailors would not be promoted beyond the mess branch of the service for the reason that they could not keep discipline. This was appeasement, pure and simple, calculated for southern approbation. The outright refusal of the War Department to permit Negro pilots to train at the same flying fields and in the same manner as white pilots was a catastrophic concession made in one branch of the military program where there had been no custom or tradition to uphold it.

The latest step of the army is going just a bit too far. It is actually making itself weaker in order to appease the South.

We take it that the South is still smarting over the fact that colored troops fought with the Union forces and that it came out second best. Since that time it hasn't thought much of colored soldiers in uniforms.

If colored troops are not trained in the South where the most modern methods of warfare have been provided, how can they meet the efficiency required in these days of blitzkreigs? A reasonable view of the situation should reveal to the most ignorant and the least informed that the colored troops are not preparing to fight for colored people, as such, but for the entire United States. To weaken any part of the army's preparations for training makes appropriate application of the chain-and-its-weakest-link adage.

OCT 1 9 1941

We are in the midst of a crisis. It is the biggest one our present civilization has faced. The world has never witnessed a conflict so massive in form and so catastrophic in its outlook as the present war. Our own civilization hangs in the balance. It will take everything the democracies have to assure the continuity of the principles which we believe should not perish. The country, therefore, has no time to entertain intolerant views to its detriment.

The soldiers of the 366th regiment should be sent to train wherever it is necessary to send them. The United States Army should be prepared to see that they are treated as its soldiers wherever they go. If the South is the place that they should go we say, SEND THEM SOUTH.

Embassy Takes Hand in Matter

Letter from W. White To Prime Minister Gets Some Action

OCT 18 1941

Charging the Churchill government with race prejudice and discrimination against Negroes in British agencies, Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, recently placed a five-count bill of particulars in the lap of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, demanding an end to Hitler policies in democracies at war. The letter in which the charges were preferred was dispatched by Pan-American clipper on September 26.

The letter emphasizes to Mr. Churchill, "You have with unsurpassed eloquence appealed to the peoples of the world to help Great Britain destroy Hitler and Hitlerism and to keep freedom from being extinguished. You have in stirring language denounced the racial theories on which Hitler has built a sinister philosophy and a diabolic war machine. But these instances reveal that England is no less guilty of racial arrogance than is Nazi Germany unless the leaders of the British government summarily order the abolition of such discrimination.

"Such racial demarcation must not only be abandoned during the war, but the same freedom from prejudice must be manifested at the peace conference. Unless such theories are abandoned, other and more destructive wars will follow as inevitably as the night does the day."

Mr. White urged that the British and American governments make the four freedoms apply to the color line and that the five types of discrimination and other demarcations based on color or race be immediately wiped out.

Five days after the letter was dispatched, Colonel R. L. Benson, military attache of the British embassy in Washington, called the N. A. A. C. P. national office by long distance telephone expressing great concern over it and particularly over the case of Dr. Walter King, cited as an instance of prejudice. During the conversation, Colonel Benson said that he would like to "get to the bottom of things a little more" and asked for a copy of the letter.

Negro Doctor Refused

One case of discrimination pointed out to Mr. Churchill was that of Dr. Walter W. King, of New York City. In reply to urgent appeals recently made for American doctors to come to England to minister to the wounded, Dr. King volunteered through the American Red Cross. He was informed by Dr. G. D. Williams, medical administrative assistant of the Red Cross, in a letter dated May 23:

"It is true that only white citizens of the United States are eligible for the doctors for Britain project. The American Red Cross did not set the standards which are being followed. The American Red Cross is acting upon instructions and cannot deviate from them."

TO GIVE BUS SEATS TO WHITE CIVILIANS

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 9—(ANP)—Privates Fred Croston and Randall Wilson were absent without leave Monday morning when the roll was called in their units at Fort Bragg. The reason was that every Fayetteville-bound bus that left the Union station here was loaded with whites and these two soldiers and several civilians were ordered to wait for the next bus. This happened four times. The group waited and waited, but were unable to get a bus until 8 o'clock Monday.

Upon ariving at their units, the two soldiers, Croston and Randall, were met by their battery commander with a menu of two weeks extra duty for being AWOL.

Their explanation was not accepted. The two were unable to get the bus concern to explain over the telephone that Negroes were not alowed to get on a bus going to Fayetteville at long as there were white people who could use the back seat.

The ordinary Southern practice of Negroes riding back seats seems to be bygone memories. In most cases, Negroes going to Raleigh by the bus are forced to stand most of the 65-mile journey.

F. D. Asked to Punish Ark. Troop Attackers

NOV 1 1941

NEW YORK—President Roosevelt has been asked to settle the dispute over jurisdiction which is delaying prosecution of State troopers who last August threatened and insulted members of the 94th Engineers Division near Gurdon, Ark.

Involved in the dispute are the War Department and the Department of Justice, the latter disclaiming jurisdiction because military police allegedly sought the assistance of the Arkansas State troopers.

A white officer in command, Lieutenant Donald Curry, was slapped during the incident, which occurred while the division was en route from Michigan to maneuvers.

Violation Conceded

In a letter to the Chief Executive Friday, the NAACP declared:

"There seems to be no dispute as to the fact that a crime has been committed. If it is true that the State troopers were deputized by the military authorities and if they acted as military police, then they violated the Articles of War, especially Section 1536 of Title 10 of the United States Code.

"Regardless of whether the State troopers were deputized or not, they violated Section 54 of Title 18 of the United States Code which provides:

Law Quoted

" 'If two or more persons in any State, Territory or District conspire to prevent, by force, intimidation, or threat, any person from accepting or holding any office, trust, or place of confidence under the United States, or from discharging any duties thereof; or to induce by like means any officer of the United States to leave any State, Territory, District, or place, where his duties as an officer are required to be performed, or to injure him in his person or property on account of his lawful discharge of the duties of his office, or while engaged in the lawful discharge thereof, or to injure his property so as to molest, interrupt, hinder, or impede him in the discharge of his official duties, each of such persons shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than six years, or both.' "

Previous Neglect Blamed

The association pointed out that failure by officials to take affirmative action when colored persons had been victims of previous unprovoked assaults gave courage to the people in Arkansas to extend their disrespect for the uniform of the United States to the white officer in charge of the company.

"Failure to act in this instance will encourage further disrespect for the United States uniform which will lead to additional unprovoked assaults," the NAACP asserted.

COMMITTEE CALLED DEFENSE LEADERS FOR BIAS PROBE

By EDGAR G. BROWN

WASHINGTON, July 10. (ANP)—The 12,000,000 colored citizens of the country are entitled to the facts on the postponement July 1 by the Senate Investigation Committee of Congress on Discrimination Against Employment of Negroes in 35 billion dollars of national defense contracts with nearly 90 per cent of all the important industries of the country going at full blast under government orders to be ready to "Stop Hitler!"

1. President Roosevelt did not hold up Senate action, nor did he fail to speak out and take drastic action through Executive Order No. 8802, entitled, "Reaffirming the policy of full participation in the defense program of all persons regardless of race, creed, or national origin and directing certain action (creation of a five-man board) in the furtherance of said policy," after several conferences with the leaders of March on Washington.

2. The Senate investigating committee headed by Senator Harry S. Truman (Dem., Mo.) and Senator Carl A. Hatch (Dem., N.M.) author of the famous Hatch law barring political activity by government employees and prohibiting racial discrimination in WPA employment and U.S. Civil Service, which resulted in elimination of pictures as a requirement in Federal examinations surely did not do anything to bamboozle the 12,000,000 colored citizens or to attempt to stymie the Senate investigation of race discrimination. These distinguished members of the S.S. Senate and many others from the North and South were all for a complete and thorough-going senatorial hearing with witnesses of the Negro people discriminated against; responsible, great and powerful industrial leaders of the airplane, auto, steel and manufacturing works put on the stand to testify under oath, as well as high government officials, who let the National Defense contracts in the U.S. Navy, U.S. Army, U.S. Treasury, and OPM.

LABOR LEADERS CALLED

The mighty and lordly labor leaders of A. F. of L., C.I.O. and their affiliates were on the list of the Senate committee to testify also under oath on the long and vicious practice of barring Negroes from vitally important unions thereby offering millions of Negroes only the lowest paid jobs or starvation. No, the Congress and the Senate investigating committee was on the square and ready to go ahead for three days, June 30, July 1 and July 2, 1941, with this most transcending race business since the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation. At last it was possible to get at the bottom of the Negro's economic slavery for the past 75 years in a complete and scientific manner backed by all the power and constitutional authority of the U.S. Congress.

3. The Negro masses looking for good jobs, and the half million 100 per cent colored Americans, skilled and unemployed now on $15 a month WPA jobs did not ask the senate investigating committee to postpone action "indefinitely," and thereby do nothing to afford them an equal opportunity for the $10 and $15 a day jobs in national defense as other Americans have been and are now enjoying in all sections of the country.

ORGANIZATIONS UNITED

4. The National Urban League, with its 45 branches in all parts of the country and its devoted and trained leadership for 25 years dedicated to the supreme task of securing industrial jobs and opportunities for Negro workers did not ask for a postponemnet of the senate investigation of discrimination. The National Urban League and its local secretaries were on hand July 1, and ready with a complete and authentic record of cases to present to the U.S. Congress and its senate investigating committee on race discrimination.

5. The Pittsburgh Courier's National Defense Committee, headed by Dr. Rayford Logan, Howard university, and Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent of the Washington schools, were ready and anxious to testify with all the facts before the senate committee on racial discrimination. These distinguished Negro educators had twice been called to the White House in the past six months because of their militant and ceaseless championing of the race's interests over the years and especially their activities before the House and Senate committees on army, navy and national defense appropriations during the recent sessions of Congress. They had labored long and faithfully with the incomparable backing of a publication with a large national circulation touching Negroes and their welfare everywhere. These gentlemen, nor their sponsor, The Pittsburgh Courier, did not ask for delay, after fighting the cause to the point of immediate hearing on all fronts of racial discrimination by the U.S. Congress.

6. The National Negro Congress, led on by its indefatigable secretary, John Davis, was ready and had agreed to bring forward the revelations of the signal campaign to pen up the Martin Airplane plant in Baltimore at which they had labored for several months. The NNC had a mass of data from all parts of the country and desired no further delay.

7. The Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority had its permanent Washington office of the Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, headed by Miss Jeanette Welsh, had labored most successfully with the senate committee and its legal representatives, Messrs. Fulton and Clarke, to make possible the hearing on June 30, July 1 and 2, with the National Council of Negro Women, headed by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, they had scheduled a national defense conference for women for the same dates, thereby providing a full opportuity for colored women from all parts of the country to have an opportunity to present the tragic disadvantages of the Negro woman worker under the discriminatory practices of race and sex in government and industry. These devoted and inspiring women of the race asked for no delay. They had prepared the way and insisted on going ahead.

8. The United Government Employees, Inc., which has been most active and effective for the past five years in advancing racial matters before Congress, was joined by the National Negro Council in insisting on immediate hearings by the U.S. Senate Investigating Committee. The NNC's program has the endorsement of the National Baptist Convention, Inc., U.S.A.; the Bishops' Council of the African Methodist Episcopal church; the National Negro Insurance Asociation and the National Baptist Sunday School Congress and B.T.U.

These organizations have sufficient correspondence and other evidence secured from its own action in a preliminary survey obtained as a result of the House of Representatives military affairs committee's hearings two months ago to occupy the time of senate committee's members and investigators for weeks. The U.G.E. and National Negro Council feel morally bound to speak out against any forces hidden or open which for any selfish or venal reason would at this late date insist on delay and appeasement.

KNIFED RACE

9. No organization or leader with the exception of Walter White and the NAACP insisted upon postponement of the immediate hearings by the senate investigating committee according to the record.

10. Finally, Walter White and the NAACP, which seems to be a one-man affair in this instance has bamboozled and stuck a dagger in the back of the long sought immediate and urgently desired senate investigation of national defense discrimination against the employment of millions of Negroes everywhere despite the all-out effort for democracy and the Negroes eternal loyalty, patriotism and faithful support as taxpayers of the United States Government, which is now spending billions authorized by Congress. The worst blow has been delivered by the one we had taken to our bosom.

White can only right this wrong to 12,000,000 coolred citizens at this time by joining publicly and at once, with all other Negro leaders and organizations for immediate hearings by the senate investigating committee on race discrimination in employment of Negroes by industries with national defense contracts before congress adjourns and goes home with most Negroes still on the relief rolls or in the army. This is the time for unity of all American citizens. Traitors of the country and traitors of the race should be silenced for the duration.

THE World TODAY

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

LIFE magazine's special defense issue dated July 7, performs the miracle of covering the whole field of defense without showing a single Negro except a maid and two stable boys. You wouldn't think there were nearly 100,000 colored boys in uniform or that some of the crack infantry, artillery and anti-aircraft units were composed of Negroes.

LIFE, despite occasional little flirtations to get Negro circulation, remains cautiously lily-white. It leans over backward not to offend any of its Negrophobic readers. It labors always to bolster the ideology of racial separatism, sometimes crudely, sometimes subtly. Its editors have the courage to bait Hitler and urge foreign war, but not the courage to educate its 3,000,000 subscribers to a more democratic viewpoint.

Of course LIFE is not alone. It is singled out because it is so powerful. The American daily newspapers at best are more concerned about fighting for democracy abroad than at home. There is something almost pathetic about their yelling about the menace of Hitler while remaining clamlike about the much more real menace of Hitlerism right around the corner or right in their newsrooms and editorial offices.

A NATION can only be defeated from within. It cannot stand unless it is united physically and spiritually, and yet most of these newspapers and magazines adopt a policy of destruction of national unity. They have been guilty of the most shameless hypocrisy where we are concerned, remaining mum about evils that cry to heaven for exposure, and pretending all is well in the face of the worst crimes against justice and democracy.

LIFE might have found a few Negro soldiers to photograph. There are some in almost every camp, fort and barracks. This would have shown that all elements of the population were participating in the defense program; that Negroes, too were preparing to repel the invader if and when the invasion started. It would have contributed much to national morale, especially among Negroes. But, no, if they couldn't picture any Negro soldiers shooting craps or wolfing watermelon, they decided to carry no pictures.

COMPARE THIS with the Negro-owned newspapers and magazines. Each issue carries pages of pictures of Negro soldiers on duty in all parts of the country with intelligent textual comment. If it were not for the Negro press, what would we know about colored soldiers in the Army and how they are faring? Of course some will say they are "supposed" to do this. And one might well reply, "Yes, and you are supposed to support them, too."

SECOND EMANCIPATION

The Executive Order by President Roosevelt, as part of his Fourth of July Proclamation, may go down in history as a second Emancipation Proclamation, for this is the second time in history of this country that an Executive Order affecting the Negro directly has been issued. The first was issued by Abraham Lincoln in 1863 outlawing human slavery in this country.

In his proclamation of June 25 President Roosevelt ordered all federal departments and agencies dealing with vocational and training programs to take special measures to avoid discrimination. Henceforth all agencies must include provisions in defense contracts to avoid discrimination in employment because of race or color. At the same time a special committee within the OPM was set up to investigate complaints of discrimination.

This action by the President came only after political pressure to have the March on Washington called off had failed, and the committee had assured Mr. Roosevelt that only an executive order would halt the march. The leadership of A. Philip Randolph and Layle Lane in organizing the movement was an important factor in gaining the victory for the Negroes.

However, as Mr. Randolph pointed out in calling off the march, the act of the President does not meet the vital and serious issue of discrimination against persons on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin in various departments of the government itself. This is particularly true in the armed forces of the country where discrimination is most rife.

Nevertheless it is a partial victory, and if the order is enforced in industrial plants holding government contracts, thousands of jobs should be immedidately available to Negroes.

Now that the President has gone this far, it shoud not be hard to convince him that "the democratic way of life within the nation" makes it necessary for the federal government itself to set the example for private industry by abolishing discrimination in all departments of the federal government.

While many individuals and organizations cooperated in the mass movement that brought about the executive order, it is our opinion that most of the credit for this victory is due Miss Layle Lane who initiated the movement through the suggestion of Oswald Garrison Villard, who in a letter contributed to Miss Lane's column on this page early this year, said that Negroes did not realize the power they possessed as a group. Said Mr. Villard:

Now if 13,000,000 white Americans wanted a just bill they would get it, because they would make life miserable for Congress, would become such a pressure group that newspapers would fall in line and public sentiment would swing to them.

Miss Lane, with the assistance of Mr. Randolph, got busy and formed a committee to make the Negro a pressure group for jobs in defense industries. The movement soon gained nationwide support and local committees were formed. With united support of the Negro press, the movement attracted the attention of government officials who were quick to realize that the publicity resulting from the march could be used by the dictator nations to prove that there was no real democracy in this country. The executive order followed when other efforts to have the march called off failed.

Evidenty, Mr. Villard was right when he said that the Negroes need to become a pressure group. Pressure during the last Presidential campaign caused the President to name Benjamin O. Davis a general, and the changing of the War Department policy to the extent of giving the Negro a proportionate part of the personnel of the U. S. Army and pressure caused the executive order ending discrimination in defense industries.

Perhaps if we continue to exert pressure on the government, we can secure a federal anti-lynching bill and a change in the policy of the Navy Department and other federal bureaus as they affect the Negro.

We congratulate the President on his issuance of his executive order and hope that he will have the courage to extend it to all branches of the federal service, so that it can be truly said, ours is a democratic government. —New York Age.

ROOSEVELT'S EXECUTIVE ORDER

President Roosevelt's executive order of last Wednesday, setting up the machinery for the correction of abuses practiced against Negroes in the National Defense program, is regarded by all of us as one of the most significant pronouncements that has been made in the interests of the Negro for more than a century.

We have felt all along that the proverbial Rooseveltian courage would assert itself, especially when the masses gave impressive evidence of their determination to fight against gross economic and social injustices. That President Roosevelt did not issue the order any sooner may well have been due to lack of concentration on the part of the Negro people on specific matters affecting their economic interests. Had we been quick to sense the direction in which the National Defense program was leading us, we would have perfected the necessary technique that brought us the results of last week.

A. Philip Randolph, however, foresaw all that months ago, and he predicted in an article written in one of our weekly papers, that only mass pressure will tear down the mounting walls of prejudice. In this article he suggested the need for immediate mobilization of all Negro organizations for a mammoth march on the Capital of the nation in order to register our protest against intolerable discrimination in the defense industries. But it took time for the masses of the people to realize the gravity of the situation and the timeliness of the Randolph suggestion.

Randolph was not discouraged by the apparent lethargy of the people. He worked incessantly toward organizing a solid front. For he knew that this was probably the last opportunity the Negro would have to voice his disapproval of economic abuses that have been practiced with impunity against him. Although speeches were made and letters written by scattered individuals expecting to effect thereby a change of attitude among those who are guiding the national defense program, there was no perceptible evidence that these methods would yield fruitful results. However, the moment that it became clear that the Negro had at last awakened to the effectiveness of the technique of mass pressure—when Mr. Randolph's suggestion for a march on Washington began to loom as a formidable reality—instantly beneficial results were obtained.

It is therefore correct to assume that what happened in June of this year could have happened in December of last year. In all fairness to President Roosevelt, it must be said he would have acted long ago had he been convinced of the collective wish of the Negro people to participate fully in the national emergency program. Doubtless he was misinformed by some of our false leaders who have access to the White House as to the mounting resentment of the masses against the abuses in our defense industries. A Philip Randolph therefore opened the eyes of the President and at the same time demonstrated to the doubting Thomases among us, that only mass action can pry open the iron doors that have been erected against America's black minority.

Both President Roosevelt and our brilliant leader, A. Philip Randolph, must be congratulated for their effort to bring some measure of democracy to the people who have been most faithful to this nation in peace and in adversity. We hope that other measures will follow which will give substance and meaning to our citizenship.

RATIO IS LOPSIDED, LAUTIER REVEALS

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10—Outside of selective service trainees, the ratio of colored to white personnel in the Military Establishment is lopsided.

The strength of the Army is estimated at 1,413,000 officers and enlisted men. The strength of the colored personnel totals 69,405 officers and enlisted men, according to Major General Emory S. Adams, the Adjutant General.

The disproportion is greatest in the ratio of colored to white commissioned officers. Latest available figuress how 14,700 officers in the Regular Army. Of that number only six are colored. In the National Guard there are 21,800 officers. Of that number only 227 are colored. Reserve officers on extended active duty total 51,500. Of that number only 26 are colored.

Warrant officers in the Regular Army total 758, of whom eight are colored. In the National Guard there are 256, of whom three are colored.

There has been approximately a 600 per cent increase in the number of colored enlisted men in the Regular Army in the past year, but the figure still remains comparatively low. Enlisted men in the Regular Army total 489,000, of whom only 26,888 are colored. Enlisted men in the National Guard total 268,000 whom only 1,585 are colored. Of the 568,000 selective service trainees in the Military Establishment 40,662 are colored.

FEP Asks Letters From Job Seekers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—A letter from any job-seeker who has been denied a job in a defense industry because of his race, creed, color or national origin, is enough to initiate an investigation by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, it was explained Thursday by Lawrence W. Cramer, Executive Secretary, in answer to numerous inquiries which have come to the Committee.

Any person who has reason to believe that his race, creed, color or national origin has prevented his obtaining a position or promotion in the Federal civil service may also submit his complaint in the same way.

This simple method of filing complaints was decided upon by the Committee, Cramer explained, in order that the least job-seeker, or the unemployed, might find no difficulty in having his grievance redressed in keeping with the President's Executive Order of June 25 which set up the Committee, as one step in re-affirming the policy of the United States "that there shall be no descrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, color or national origin."

NO LAWYER NEEDED

It is not necessary for an aggrieved worker to have a lawyer draw up any formal papers, it is explained, but it is necessary that the complaint furnish adequate information to permit the Committee to act, and as the investigation proceeds it may be necessary to have the complainant submit a notarized copy of his charges. But to get an investigation started by the Committee, only a clear, fact-giving letter is required.

That fact-giving letter, according to Mr. Cramer, should tell the following:

1. The name of the firm, agency, school, or union against which the complaint is made, and its location (street and city, and state).

2. Whether the discrimination alleged is because of (a) race, (b) creed, (c) color, or (d) national origin;

3. The race, religion, or national origin of the person making the complaint;

4. The type of job, position or classification for which application is made;

5. The qualifications of the complainant for the job he seeks (including his education and work history, and his civil service status if he has passed a civil service examination);

6. Date when complainant applied for the job which he was denied;

7. Date when he was refused employment or admittance to a training course.

8. Name of person refusing position (if available);

9. Reason given for refusal;

10. Statement of additional facts and circumstances indication discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin;

11. Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination;

12. Name and address of person alleging discrimination.

JUST NEED FACTS

To those who have asked if it is "all right" to get help in preparing the conplaint, Mr. Cramer said that as long as the letter provides the facts and is written in good faith, the Committee does not mind the methods by which it is prepared.

After a complaint has been received, the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice utilizes the staffs of the Negro Employment Management Branch and of the Minority Groups Branch of the Office of Production Management for making primary investigations, but maintains its own field and office staff in the Social Security Building, Washington, D. C., for special investigations and office work.

If primary investigations and contracts show that a firm, government agency, defense traingin school, or union, has actually practiced the discrimination charged, and if primary contracts fail to remedy the situation, then the Committee moves to other steps, which may include a public hearing, notification of other government agencies that a firm with defense contracts is endangering national unity and workers' morale by practising discrimination in violation of government policy, or the making of representatations to the President.

Mr. Cramer pointed out that the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice has only such powers as given it in Executive Order No. 8802; to receive and investigate complaints of discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, or national origin, as a "prerequisite to the successful conduct of our national defense production effort, "to quote the words of the Executive Order.

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, July 1.—As a result of a persistent drive by Negro and progressive organizations, initial steps toward breaking down the solid wall of jim-crowism in defense industries seem to have been made at a few important plants.

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of OPM's Negro Employment and Training Branch, declared in a report to associate OPM director Sidney Hillman that the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. at Chester, Pa., has promised to hire 750 additional skilled and unskilled workers.

Sun officials said the additions will be a 100 per cent increase in the number of Negro workers at their yards.

John G. Pew, president of the company, has told OPM officials that Negroes are now engaged in practically all departments, and that when the employment peak is reached many of the present workers would be promoted to supervisory positions. He said the 750 Negroes now employed constitute 10 per cent of the company's working force.

Weaver also reported that the Cramp Shipbuilding Co. has accepted an OPM suggestion that 100 Negroes be trained in pipe-fitting, welding, sheet metal work and electrical defense courses at Philadelphia for anticipated employment at the company's yards.

In addition, Weaver declared, West Coast unions have made an agreement with shipbuilders there for the transfer of Negro building trades workers to shipbuilding yards for immediate construction employment.

The developments announced by Dr. Weaver were the first concrete results from the President's executive order on Negro discrimination in the training and hiring of workers in defense industries.

A proposal for the issuance of such an executive order was first made by the Natinoal Negro Congress about a year ago.

The Negro Congress has urged recently that the executive order now be implemented by anti-discrimination legislation along the lines of the bill introduced by Congressman Vito Marcantonio.

USHA Chief Says Negroes Not To Be Segregated

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 30—The non-discrimination labor policy of the United States Housing Authority is in no way abrogated by the stabilization pact between government agencies and the American Federation of Labor, Nathan Straus, USHA administrator, declared this week.

In a memorandum addressed to all Local Housing Authorities, Mr. Straus re-affirmed the labor policy of the United States Housing Authority which requires as evidence of non-discrimination, that Negro skilled and unskilled workers receive stipulated minimum percentages of all wages paid construction workers on projects developed under United States Housing Authority supervision.

The stabilization pact between government agencies engaged in defense construction and the building and construction trades department of the A. F. of L., the memorandum asserts, "in no way abrogates the established non-discrimination policy of the United States Housing Authority relative to the employment of Negro labor.

"Local housing authorities, when designated to act as agents of the Federal Works Agency in the development of Lanham Act defense housing projects, will be guided by the non-discrimination policies promulgated by the Federal Works administrator."

The memorandum cited the President's Executive Order against discrimination in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin." Under the nondiscrimination policy in the public housing program, Negro workers employed on slum clearance and defense housing projects have earned approximately $15,000,000.

Accompanying the memorandum were copies of the President's Order and nondiscrimination regulations of the United States Housing Authority and the Federal Works Agency. This Order declared it to be the duty of employers and labor organizations "to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries,

In a memorandum addressed to all Local Housing Authorities, Mr. Straus re-affirmed the labor policy of the United States Housing Authority which requires as evidence of non-discrimination, that Negro skilled and unskilled workers receive stipulated minimum percentages of all wages paid construction workers on projects developed under United States Housing Authority supervision.

The stabilization pact between government agencies engaged in defense construction and the building and construction trades department of the A. F. of L., the memorandum asserts, "in no way abrogates the established non-discrimination policy of the United States Housing Authority relative to the employment of Negro labor.

"Local housing authorities, when designated to act as agents of the Federal Works Agency in the development of Lanham Act defense housing projects, will be guided by the non-discrimination policies promulgated by the Federal Works administrator."

The memorandum cited the President's Executive Order against discrimination in employment. This Order declared it to be the duty of employers and labor organizations "to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin." Under the nondiscrimination policy in the public housing program, Negro workers employed on slum clearance and defense housing projects have earned approximately $15,000,000.

The indifference of Washington officials to the repeated pleas for abolition of segregation and discrimination in the army and the military camps, brings sharply to the forefront the urgent questions of the national unity for effective defense of democracy. In the eleventh month since President Roosevelt and the Congress have declared the existence of a state of emergency there is widespread anxiety and concern expressed by representatives of the most varied sections of opinion over the slowness of the national government to recognize the legitimate demands placed before it by the Negro constituents; over the delay in the enforcement of the anti-discrimination clause in industrial contracts; over the failure to take punitive measures against those sections of southern communities which have intimidated, terrorized and assaulted Negro soldiers; and over the symptoms, revealed in the navy and war departments, of reactionary forces in high places hampering the maximum drive for unity.

How then is the Negro to generate genuine enthusiasm for defense of democracy in the face of bold denials of his citizenship rights and open hostilities to his economic interest? What inspiration is there for him to spill his blood in the preservation of a political system or a social philosophy that confers scarcely any appreciable benefits on him? Why should he make voluntary sacrificial offerings to an unjust and deaf god of American democracy? These are questions which agitate the minds and souls of millions of despairing Negroes. That such issues should come to the fore in the midst of feverish preparations for bolstering national security, is more regretted by black America than by official Washington.

The most serious responsibility rests on the members of the "black cabinet" —that group of Negro advisers who have access to important administrative heads, and, who, so they say, enjoy the confidence of the Chief Executive. They could, if they would, do a great deal toward remedying the weaknesses in the present policy of the various federal departments. By so doing they would immeasurably strengthen the government for the fulfillment of the urgent measures which this critical hour of the world conflict requires. Our good brothers in Washington are not doing that. Instead they have elected to follow with astonishing precision the traces marked out for them by selfish, irresponsible, lying politicians. So long they are able to grow rich and fat on Uncle Sam, so long will they remain insensible to the plight of their less fortunate brothers.

For all intent and purposes the Negro has no "representative" in Congress, he has come therefore, to look upon the "black cabinet" as a medium through which his woes and wounds might attract the attention of some Christians in high political places. But the "black cabinet" that enters the White House by the kitchen door, has not the fortitude to tell the Big White Father what he should know and do about the black masses crying in vain for the right to enjoy the blessings of democracy. We suspect that the "Kitchen Cabinet"— which by the way is a more correct designation than black cabinet—makes common cause with the detractors who say the hell with the Negro masses. But we say these men have already discredited themselves and betrayed our people either by commission or omission. They should be kicked out to make way for real men and true champions of the race.

GARY, Ind., Oct. 16—The regional conference of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing committee, meeting at the Knights of Columbus hall here Sunday, condemned in a sharp worded resolution, segregation and maltreatment of Negro soldiers in the U. S. army, and called upon President Roosevelt and all CIO unions to take effective action to remedy the situation.

The resolution, sponsored by Rayfield Mooty of the Wilson & Bennett local of the SWOC and Curtis Murray, president of the Federated Metals local of the American Smelting & Refining company, was passed without a single dissenting vote from the 500 delegates representing 53 steel workers locals in the Chicago area, according to reports from the Negro Labor council.

After recounting the various forms of discrimination to which Negro troops are subjected in the army and in various local communities, the resolution warned that:

"Such abusive and unfair practices on the part of citizens of a democracy tend not only to shatter the morale of the United States armed forces, but also give rise to the very conditions that we are pledging ourselves to crush." . . .

Particular attention was attracted to a section of the resolution which called upon President Roosevelt to communicate with governors and local officials of all states, "urging them to use their influence and authority to obtain the proper respect and treatment for all American soldiers."

Letter Points Out Discrimination By British Agencies

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—Addressed personally to Prime Minister Winston Churchill, a letter setting forth five types of discrimination on the part of British agencies operating in this country, was dispatched by Pan-American Clipper September 26, by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The letter, written by Walter White, NAACP executive secretary, urges that the British and American governments make the four freedoms apply to the color line and that the five types of discrimination and other demarcations based on color or race be immediately wiped out.

Publicity on the letter was withheld until this week because of the custom of not revealing contents of communications to the head of a government until the communication has had an opportunity to be received and acted upon.

WANTS TO GET AT BOTTOM OF THINGS

Five days after the letter was dispatched, Colonel R. L. Benson, military attache of the British Embassy in Washington, called the NAACP national office by long distance expressing great concern over it and particularly over the case of Dr. Walter King, cited as an instance of prejudice. No copy of the letter was sent the Embassy, but copies were received by the American Red Cross and the British War Relief Society.

During the conversation Mr. Benson stated that he would like to "get to the bottom of things a little more" and asked for a copy of the letter.

After pointing out the importance of America's 13 million Negro citizens in the national life and saying that the succession of discriminatory acts on the part of these British agencies are "building bitter resentment against Great Britain among certain elements of the population of the United States,' the five known cases where Negroes were discriminated against were listed.

NO ANSWER RECEIVED

The NAACP told Churchill, "You have with unsurpassed eloquence appealed to the peoples of the world to help Great Britain destroy Hitler and Hitlerism and to keep freedom from being extinguished. You have in stirring language denounced the racial theories on which Hitler has built a sinister philosophy and a diabolic war machine. But these instances reveal that England is no less guilty of racial arrogance than is Nazi Germany unless the leaders of the British Government summarily order the abolition of such discrimination.

"Such racial demarcation must not only be abandoned during the war, but the same freedom from prejudice must be manifested at the Peace Conference. Unless such theories are abandoned, other and more destructive wars will follow as inevitably as the night does the day."

No answer has yet been received.

Minnesota Negro Offers Unique Defense Problem

By BEN PEERY

Prior to the feverish efforts of manufacturers, and the Government itself to speed work on contracts vital to defense needs, the problem of Negro labor was rapidly solving itself.

Unions were bending every effort to organize sepia workers in all branches, and they were being accepted, and fairly treated by white unions. With the coming of a topsy turvy defense setup, organizations ,even those dormant for years, sprang up to presumably protect the interests of the group. Negro applicants, it was claimed had been turned down by many, possibly all too many industries.

Delegation after delegation sought conferences with the powers that be to no avail. More and more race grievances were discovered. Probably the first effort to correct the entire situation, came when all organizations sent delegates to form a Council of Negro organizations.

With the fusing of effort, the objective was apparently lost sight of. Only one organization in the entire city remained aloof and decided to hew the line of job getting. The American Legion by this act did make some progress, but in was negligible. It did, however, secure a promise from all Legion organizations to go down the line fighting discrimination in industry.

Meanwhile the Council of Organizations resolved itself into a Negro Defense Committee, bending its entire effort to have Negroes admitted to the State Home Defense Forces. The fact that jobs are excluded from their program leaves the people in a state of flux.

Living Conditions

Persons not residing in Minnesota, regardless of need, can hardly appreciate the calamity of being jobless in a country where temperatures in the 30 belows are not unusual; where the cheapest coal averages from seven to nine dollars a ton; where rents are rarely under twenty-five dollars, and general living costs are supposedly the third highest in the country.

Relief has been exceptionally easy, and WPA during the past few years, has offered an easy solution to the problem of living, but because of the heavy expenses incurred by all mitigating agencies, with the coming of each new industry ,some portion of the relief setup disintegrates.

The Governor of the State, Harold E. Stassen, is taking an active interest in the induction of Negro labor into defense industry. He has called personally on some of the larger employers to urge consideration for Negro workers.

Perhaps the most outstanding of his efforts is the one where he was successful in securing a definite promise that colored men will be employed in the recently organized New Brighton, forty million dollar defense plant.

Northern Pump, oldest and most criticised of local defense industries, claim that they do not discriminate in employment and say that they will play twenty dollars a head to anyone who can furnish precision machinists, regardless of color.

Plant Seeks Negro Mechanics

Honeywell Heat Regulator, one of the larger defense contract firms, recently hired its first Negro, and within two weeks promoted him, stating that his knowledge of mechanics justified the act. They are asking for more if they can qualify. Actually, very few skilled Negro mechanics have been jobless, even during the depression era.

Meanwhile, most active of groups fighting discrimination, the Negro Defense Committee, openly say, "We do not want jobs, we want admission to the State Home Defense Force."

State and Federal officials say, "We want to help you, but the power to grant Negroes the right to serve with white units, rests with the President. Can we help you find a job "

U. S. Appeasers Are Anti-Negro, Chicago Alderman Tells Rally

Fight to Destroy Hitlerism Bound Up With Fight for Negro Rights, He Says

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—The Negro people are inseparably bound up with the national defense program for the military annihilation of Hitlerism, E. B. Dickerson, Alderman of the Negro community of Chicago's South Side declared at a conference of trade union, professional and business people held here at the Wabash YMCA.

Alderman Dickerson, a member of the Fair Employment Practice Committee of the Office of Production Management in pointing out that Chicago Negroes were taking a lead in the struggle against the Nazi oppressors, declared.

"There are forces in this country just as surely as there were in France who are seeking to sell out our national interest to Fascism. These people are mortal enemies of my people. They constitute our fifth column.

STAKE NEGROES HAVE

"The fight for the military defeat of Hitler is a fight for the rights of the Negro people. There is no surrender of the political, economic or cultural demands of the Negro people in this struggle. If Hitler wins there will be no progressive forces in America outside the concentration camps to fight the battle for the rights of the Negro people and we will find ourselves again enslaved.

"Let us remember the stand taken by the immortal Frederick Dohglass in the Civil War and draw our lessons from it. Frederick Douglass knew that the winning of the war was the paramount issue, that if the North lost the fight, the struggle to end slavery would have been set back a hundred years. He called upon the Negro people to make this their major fight knowing very well that in this struggle decisive concessions would have to be made to our people. The Emancipation Proclamation came out of the fight. Dooglass was right

"Today every demand of the Negro people is inseparably bound up with the development of national unity for national defense for the purpose of annihilation of Hitler and the destruction of Hitler."

Miss Thyra Edwards, a prominent Negro leader, was elected secretary-treasurer of the conference.

Widespread discussion developed over Dickerson's call for all-out aid to Britain and the Soviet Union. The overwhelming opinion supported his position.

The conference set up a Policy Committee and a number of other committees including, trade union, women, youth, finance, publicity and a Speakers Bureau.

Gibson Named To Employment Committee

Two Investigators Named To Staff At $3,800 Per Year

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — Truman K. Gibson, well known young Chicagoan who has been serving as assistant to Judge William Hastie as assistant civilian aide in the war department, has been named assistant to executive Secretary Lawrence Cramer of the Fair Employment Practice committee. The committee which was appointed by President Roosevelt after the "March on Washington" was postponed, has a membership of six, William Green of the A. F. of L.; Phillip Murray of the CIO; Ald. Earl B. Dickerson of Chicago; Milton Webster of the Sleeping Car Porter's Brotherhood also of Chicago; David Sarnoff of RCA and Mark Ethridge of Louisville who is chairman.

Investigators who have been appointed for the committee include G. James Fleming, former newspaper man of Philadelphia and Eugene Davidson of Washington. Gibson's salary is reported at $5,600 per annum while the investigators get $3,800.

"NEITHER THE WAR DEPARTMENT NOR PRESIDENT LINCOLN CONDEMNED MASSACRE OF FIFTY-FOURTH NEGRO DIVISION OF THE U. S. ARMY," SAID FRED DOUGLASS.

Rochester, N. Y.—Speaking at the ceremonies in commemoration of Frederick Douglass here Wednesday, August 3, Walter White, executive Secretary of the NAACP, pointed out the parallel between the stand Douglass took against mistreatment of Negro soldiers in the Civil War and that being taken by Negroes of the country today.

DOUGLASS WROTE ON AUGUST 1, 1863, THAT HE COULD NOT FURTHER HELP TO ENLIST COLORED TROOPS IN THE UNION ARMY BECAUSE, "THE IMPRESSION SETTLES ON ME THAT COLORED MEN HAVE MUCH OVERRATED THE ENLIGHTENMENT, JUSTICE AND GENEROSITY OF OUR RULERS AT WASHINGTON." HE WROTE OF THE MASSACRE OF THE 54th (NEGRO DIV.) AND STATED THAT NEITHER THE WAR DEPARTMENT NOR LINCOLN HAD CONDEMNED IT.

MINNESOTA BOTH WHITES AND BLACKS PROTEST JOB BIAS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—(ANP)—White and Negro citizens of the twin cities rubbed elbows at a mass meeting sponsored by the Minnesota Negro Defense Committee, Tuesday night, in the Hallie Q. Brown Community House, to hear Governor Harold E. Stassen defend himself against charges of discriminating against Negroes in Minnesota Home Defense force.

Rev. Clarence T. R. Nelson, pastor of Cumphor Memorial Methodist Church and publicity chairman of the defense committee, gave a brief review of the committee's fight to have Negroes enlisted in Minnesota's home defense program. Following this Frank L. Alsup, chairman of the committee, in his introductory remarks, told the governor that the people would not be interested in his speech if it were on any other subject than that which they had gathered together to hear.

Governor Stassen's address for the most part was given over to the citing of instances to show that he is not and never has been prejudiced nor ever done anything in his public career that could be labeled discriminatory to the Negro. He referred to his association with Negroes in the R. O. T. C. and as a pullman conductor, saying "I am against discrimination and that has been my attitude from the cradle." He lauded the work of Atty. Raymond Cannon, Mill City, Minn., and Lawrence Tarver, St. Paul, in compiling a report fo rthe inclusion of Negroes in the defense force of the state, and remarked that it was their suggestion that the organization of a jim-crow unit in the home defense program would be inadvisable.

Blame for discrimination of colored was placed upon the United States Army officers in the force who are following the army code of placing Negroes in separate units. To the charges of the governor that the committee had been unfair to him, J. Nathaniel Smith St. Paul, defended the committee's action in asking that practices of discrimination be wiped out. Smith said that the committee had been informed by Representative Melvin Mass that the U. S. govenment had nothing to do with the state militia, hence the committee requested Governor Stassen to issue non-discrimination roder.

In answer to the governor's statement that he would work with the committee to make a test case of the discriminatory army code, Cecil Newman, editor and publisher of the St. Paul Recorder and Minneapolis Spokesman, challenged the governor to strike the first blow in the fight by the issuance of an order to the effect that Negroes be inculcated in Minnesota home defense, to which the governor replied he could not do that.

No Discrimination In War Department, Hastie Asserts

Fifty Colored Clerks And Stenographers Are Given Jobs

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(CNS)—Declaring that an erroneous impression is being created about the employment of colored clerical and stenographic workers in the war department, William Hastie, civilian aide to the secretary of war, last week pointed out that this was as much a part of his job as seeing that proper things were being done for the enlisted personnel of the army.

Since January 1, some 50 colored clerks and stenographers have been taken on in the department, says Hastie, exclusive of a large number of Negroes as messengers, laborers and custodial workers.

When the department asks the civil service commission for a large group of stenographers they are put in the stenographic room which has in the past been referred to as a pool.

LATER ASSIGNED

From here, they are gradually taken into private offices as their services are needed. Their pay begins immediately they are assigned to the department. From this initial pool, they are signed out to the various offices.

"No doubt the assignment of colored stengraphers has been slow from the start", said Mr. Hastie, "in fact, it was slower than it should have been, but things are beginning to change a bit. More more colored stenographer are being used in white offices. Now no colored stenographer is in the pool more than two weeks. The work has been speeded up considerably and the transfers are coming through faster than ever.

"A previous newspaper story" said, Mr. Hastie, "confused what is a colored section of the Civilian personnel division with a previous report that Negro girls were being segregated. These girls, about six in number, are attached to that office and have a separate room for themselves.

DIFFERENT ARRANGEMENTS

"Scattered through the department are all types and all kinds of arrangements for colored workers. In some offices, they work together with the whites and in others there are all colored units.

"One section exists in the department where there is a colored chief over colored and white personnel This is in the procurement division of the finance office. There are about ten workers in this office. Of course, this man in charge has a high rating in the civil service system".

Continuing, Mr. Hastie pointed out that the war department is scattered throughout the city occupying some 17 buildings and an accurate check on the ever changing personnel is difficult. However the trends in the policies of the department are more and more away from the segregated units and toward the integration of colored workers with whites.

"I would be the last person in the world to attempt to whitewash a situation," said Mr. Hastie with reference to the previous story "and were it true, I would want to clear it up. But sine this is not the fact, I am relating the conditions as they exist in the department to point out specifically that the war department at present is not discriminating against Negro workers."

BEHIND DEFENSE DISCRIMINATION

The newspaper PM of New York has joined The Pittsburgh Courier and the Negro press generally in an "all out" attack on color discrimination in national defense and national defense industries.

We welcome the aid of this powerful daily newspaper as well as that of the sixty white and colored, Southern and Northern leaders who last week signed the Phelps-Stokes Fund plea. Many daily newspapers have aided with favorable editorial comment.

The problem is by no means a simple one because we are confronted here with one of the many and increasing manifestations of the rising American Fascism; of the metamorphosis of "the world as we know it" into the "New Order."

The revolution going on in all countries is away from the individualistic competition and divergent interests characteristic of capitalism as reflected in political democracy, and toward the so-called monolithic state characterized by centralized control of industry and commerce, the one-party system, and destruction or curtailment for the sake of economic and military security, of the freedoms laid down in all democratic constitutions.

Straws in the wind are the insistent appeals for unity of thought and action, for merging of differences between the two dominant political parties, for centralized control of news in newspapers and over the radio, for abrogation of the right of labor to strike, for squelching of divergent opinions and for military adventures in other lands in pursuance of a "destiny."

Behind the propaganda for war is not merely the desire to aid Britain and defeat Hitler, but the opportunity war will afford those in power to expedite the inauguration of a Fascist civilization in this country.

By BAXTER LEACH

CAMDEN, N. J.—To talk about democracy and the "equality of races" is sheer hypocrisy when all about us are evidences of discrimination in industry, in government and in some instances even in the Church organizations declared Bishop David H. Sims in his response to an address by the Mayor of this city at the welcome exercises to the sixty-ninth annual session of the New Jersey Annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church here on Wednesday evening.

The Mayor in his welcome address made a plea for a 'united people' in the present emergency to sustain the American way of life and that the Democracies should not perish from the earth. Calling the Mayors' attention to the failure of industry to give the Negro a chance in America, Bishop Sims said "there is discrimination here in Camden where the Negro is virtually an economic slave. It is high time we stopped preaching "equality of opportunity" and practice it. If we are sincere then why not give the Negroes some of the jobs here in the Defense setups and in other industries here where he has been denied jobs for the last ten years despite the fact that Camden is one of the greatest manufacturing centers in the country?" the Bishop said.

"We talk about being 'united with England' we are not united here. If we are going to have a united people it means that we must set our house in order. I want to see it happen in Camden." Bishop Sims continued.

Replying to the Rev. Norman W. Pauling, President of the Ministers Alliance (white) Bishop Sims said that the Church has been the biggest coward in the last 100 years. "We are tired of hypocrisy—we do not believe in kitchen religion—we believe that God Almighty meant for the Negro to have the same right as any other race—we have got to get serious about christianity."

Fair Labor Unit To Meet Every Week--Etheridge

Sessions Started Monday; "Job Must Be Completed"

WASHINGTON, D. C. (SNS)—The six-man committee on Fair Employment Practice, appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate and act on complaints of discrimination in defense employment, will meet here regularly once a week, every Monday at noon, beginning July 28, and continue this schedule indefinitely "until the job is done", according to an announcement made by its chairman, Mark Ethridge.

Ethridge, Vice President and General Manager of the Louisville, Kentucky Courier-Journal made the announcement at the Committee's first press conference, held here in the Security Building, Fourth and C Streets, Southwest, where the Office of Production Management is housed.

Questioned by newspapermen on the procedures to be followed by the Committee, Ethridge said that the group had held only one "get-to-gether" meeting thus far, and no plans for the operation of its program have been worked out. He said the Committee will appoint an Executive Secretary shortly, who will receive all complaints and then spend the first few meetings working out precedures for hearing complaints.

There is no limitation set upon the scope of the work which the Committee may cover as he understands the order, Ethridge said. He made it clear that he expected the group to be faced with some tough problems which will necessitate expert legal advice.

Camp Prejudice Redounds To Benefit Of Colored Officers At Fort Bragg

FORT BRAGG, N. C., May 22.—The etiquette of racial relations or race prejudice takes strange forms. Sometimes the victim of racial prejudice gets the better of the situation.

An example is found in the mess hall where white and colored doctors and white and colored nurses eat at Fort Bragg. Separate tables are provided for the colored doctors and nurses with signs on them, "This table for colored nurses" and "This table for colored doctors."

Service in the mess hall is cafeteria style for everybody but the colored doctors and nurses. The white doctors and nurses must take trays to the counter, select their food, then carry it to their tables.

But a waiter is provided for both colored doctors and nurses who brings their food to them while they sit.

The colored doctors and nurses sit and are served. The white doctors and nurses stand and serve themselves.

That is how the great god Prejudice crosses himself up.

Your correspondent was touring the engineering projects of the 41st Engineers with Col. Wood, the commanding officer, a native of Elizabethtown, N. C. No one could have been more courteous, considerate and solocitous than Col. Wood who was accompanied by a white major. He took his time to cover what must have been a 100-mile tour of engineering projects and patiently explained all details. He was also careful about the comfort of your correspondent and photographer. They couldn't ask him for anything that he would not give.

But lunch time found the party far afield where a project required a detachment of the engineers to live away from their barracks in tent camps. The colonel asked the officers in charge for lunch. It was happily provided. The party entered the tent kitchen where the cooks had filled plates and placed them on a table.

Your correspondent and photographer picked up plates and cups of lemon punch and took them to tables outside the kitchen in a cleared space made by the men. They sat down and ate.

The colonel, who was the host, and the major also picked up their plates. But they did not follow your correspondent and photographer to the table on the outside. They stood and ate while your representatives sat and ate.

And the great god, Tradition, was satisfied.

After lunch, we proceeded on our tour of inspection with no holds barred.

SLIGHTLY EFFECTIVE EMBARRASSMENT

There is no doubt that the hue and cry Negroes have raised over color discrimination in national defense and defense industries is proving very embarrassing to the hypocrites in high places who protend to be deeply concerned about perpetuating freedom and equality of opportunity in the world.

The bombardment of politicians by various Negro and interracial committees is beginning to have its effect, if only slight at present.

Several newspapers owned by white people have recently come out strongly against these vicious discriminatory practices that keep Negroes in an economic ghetto, and all this agitation has helped.

Here and there a company is bowing to public clamor and hiring a few Negroes, some in skilled capacities, but we need expect no Utopia, because much of this protesting on the part of prominent white people is insincere.

The white newspapers who have been most outspoken editorially against color discrimination in defense do not themselves employ any Negroes, save in very minor and lowly capacities.

MAY 24 1941

The New York newspaper PM, which recently sold 75,000 copies in Harlem when it took up the cudgels against racial discrimination in defense industries, employs Negroes only in menial capacities and is largely owned by Marshall Field whose Chicago store discriminates against Negroes and does not even encourage their patronage.

Negro newspapers, led by The Pittsburgh Courier, started the fight against color discrimination in national defense and defense industries. This is now being taken up by sundry suddenly-formed committees of "leaders" conscious of another opportunity to bask in the limelight.

They started the real campaign of embarrassment by informing the Negroes and preparing them for the big struggle for defense jobs, whereas the various committees seem to be concentrating on enlightening white people about this discrimination—as if they didn't know!

Although The Pittsburgh Courier and other Negro newspapers started the anti-discrimination campaign in defense and have given the work of other groups generous weekly publicity, it is illuminating that no Negro editor or journalist has been asked to serve on these committees or to speak on their programs.

In this connection it is interesting to have the N. A. A. C. P. announce its speakers against defense discrimination at its forthcoming Houston conference, and to find that not a single person who inaugurated this campaign is to have a place on its program!

It seems to be the same with the committee heading the projected "March on Washington" scheduled for July 1. This will be a gesture not without value, although the carfare of 10,000 people might be more wisely expended.

However, these efforts all aid in the fight against American color discrimination in national defense. They annoy and embarrass, and cause many thoughtful white people to doubt the high moral principles spouted by Washington politicians and industrialists suddenly converted to democracy.

The greatest value of these efforts lies in the effect on Negroes themselves, for in the last analysis nobody can solve the Negro's problems but the Negro.

He must be interested, informed and organized to fight intelligently for his selfish interests, or all the pleading in the world will be amiss.

WE ADMIT IMPATIENCE

From the four corners of America come protests against racial discrimination which is being practiced against the American Negro in this country today. There are few instances of where our group gathers but there come resolutions calling upon the President and the Congress of the United States to act definitely and swiftly against discrimination against the colored people in government offices, army and navy and particularly in the national defense program. Our protests and our cries are loud and long. We are told by many to be quiet; to have patience. But we think sometimes that we have already waited too long. The gall of the yoke is hard to bear, especially when we see the other fellow enjoying the things to which we are justly entitled, but are denied. Patience has her virtues to be sure, but there is no use of talking patience to a pig whose neck is under a fence rail.

Negroes Not Wanted'

Sir,—We, the undersigned officers and members of the Peninsula Trade and Labor Union, an organization of 250 Negro skilled mechanics, voice our indignant protest against the open and discriminatory practices of all contractors holding Government national defense contracts on the Virginia Peninsula. We specifically call your attention to the defiant attitude of George L. Zuidema, contractor's executive officer and sole hiring agent, Fort Eustis, Va., in refusing to employ any skilled Negro workmen on the Fort Eustis defense project.

In December, 1940, at the request of Fort Eustis contractors, the Virginia State Employment Office in Newport News issued an urgent radio call for 1,200 carpenters. All Negro carpenters who applied were informed by E. P. Hornlein, employment manager, that no Negroes were wanted. On January 31, a call for 2,000 carpenters was issued through the same source. All Negro carpenters who responded were emphatically told again that Negroes were not wanted. The same situation applies to every skilled trade on defense projects in this vicinity.

Official representatives of this union have repeatedly by personal conference with George L. Zuidema sought employment for skilled Negro craftsmen with no success. We urgently request an immediate investigation of the situation at Fort Eustis and other defense projects in this area. As loyal American citizens we demand the right to contribute our skills in the cause of national defense, as well as our lives, if necessary.

Washington, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Secretary of War Stimson today told a delegation from the American Youth Congress that "the colored population will be represented by its proportionate representation in the United States Army."

Stimson gave an impromptu talk to pickets who paraded in front of the War Department with placards charging "Jim Crow" discrimination against Negro troops.

He told the youth they ought first "to be sure of the facts."

"I am the first Secretary of War," he said, "to have appointed a colored officer to be a brigadier general in the United States Army, that is, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis.

"I am the second Secretary of War who has appointed a colored person as civilian aide to the Secretary of War. And, finally, I am now starting the organization of a pursuit squadron to be composed of colored personnel, including pilots." The squadron, he explained, would be organized and trained at Tuskegee, Ala. Training of some of its personnel already has been started by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, he added.

The Negro and Democracy

Sir,—You and your paper are to be commended for the true Americanism, liberalism and courage exhibited in your many editorials regarding the discrimination of the Negro in the defense projects. You have done much to call attention to America's hypocrisy in her democracy. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. The Negro is a part of this American chain. Why should our white fellow countrymen try to help break this chain? Is America willing to crumble and fall just because hypocrisy has gotten into her democracy or just to keep the Negro from sharing the glory in our present defense program? Can any one prove that the Negro has ever shirked his duty to his country?

Let us recall that he helped the white man win his independence from England; that he played his part in the War Between the States, and when Congress declared war on Germany in 1917, the whites called him and he answered their call. Like hounds unloosed and eager for the life blood of their prey, sprung they forth and fought bravely in the thickest of the fight. He wasn't discriminated against then, he was a brother and a comrade. Why has he been forgotten? Why not let us be true Americans and give the Negro his rights as an American citizen in this national defense program?

Skilled Negroes Available?

Sir,—Your editorial of January 19, "Negroes and Our Defenses," to my mind brings to the surface some real facts affecting Negro mechanics.

The cause given by you as a handicap to Negro mechanics was well stated, but do you think this is the reason they cannot get jobs? We admit we have a few skilled mechanics, but the training the majority of Negroes get in vocational schools in this section does not equip him with sufficient knowledge of any trade to make him a skilled workman. Do we have practical instructors that know enough about the trade they are teaching to teach Negroes?

In Richmond we spend thousands of dollars yearly teaching Negroes trades. I should like to know how many Negro boys and men we have masters of the trade they were taught. How many have gone and are in trade schools seeking technical training to become skilled workmen?

I think an investigation should be made by an impartial committee familiar with mechanical and industrial work to make a survey of the vocational work given Negroes in our schools.

If these students are securing the kind of training necessary to make them masters of their trade, why cannot they get work to do? The field for skilled Negro workmen is wide open but we do not have them.

What do we get for the thousands of dollars spent yearly for teachers? Do they teach, advise and encourage students to follow the work they are best suited for? If so, why do we have fewer Negro mechanics than any other vocation? If Negroes do not want trades then it is folly to spend money on material and time giving it to them.

Again, if the training they receive does not fit them to fill jobs as skilled workmen, and they are forced on the public along with the large army of jacklegs, what are we to hope for?

I do hope your editorial in question shall be the opening of a solution to the Negro mechanical problem. I do hope you will come on the premises and see to it that Negroes are given the proper instructions, both practical and technical.

I believe the real reason Negroes are not employed is because we do not have sufficient skilled Negro workmen to fill the demands. They do not have the proper mechanical training to give them the proper background to enter shops as apprentices. I think I am safe to say the skilled Negro workmen in this section received their training before the city and State started industrial work.

Don't you think we should have some evidence of skilled Negro workmen for the amount of money spent at present?

Thanking you for your editorial and whatever consideration giver this matter. R. W. JOHNSON.

'Negroes and Our Defenses'

Sir,—The interracial committee of the Young Women's Christian Association, with membership from both the Central and Phyllis Wheatley Branch, at its recent meeting on January 28 discussed the discrimination which is being made against Negroes in Virginia by the National Defense Program, as to employment of skilled workers and also training classes for such workers.

Several members mentioned the very excellent editorials against this discrimination which appeared in recent issues of The Times-Dispatch. Our committee was unanimous in expressing its appreciation of this service toward better race relations and toward the maintaining of democratic ideals.

In behalf of the committee, we are writing to express to you its sincere thanks and to wish for you continued success.

THE telegram from Newport News signed by many skilled Negro mechanics, which is published at the head of today's Voice of the People, shows that most of the skilled jobs on defense projects in the Newport News area are still being denied to Negroes. It states that as recently as January 31 "a call for 2,000 carpenters" was issued by the Virginia State Employment Office, at the request of Fort Eustis contractors but "all Negro carpenters who responded were emphatically told again that Negroes were not wanted." The message goes on to declare that "the same situation applies to every skilled trade on defense projects in this vicinity."

While the telegram has nothing severely critical to say about any individual or organization except a contractors' executive officer at Fort Eustis, its signers must realize that while the contractors are not guiltless, the inexcusable situation which has arisen goes back, in the final analysis, to the unwillingness of certain A. F. of L. labor unions to admit Negroes to jobs. These unions have imported white union men from out of the State, it is understood, rather than give the jobs to Virginia Negroes who are competent to do the work. We are informed that all the unions which are discriminating against skilled Negroes in this respect are affiliated with the A. F. of L. The constitution of the C. I. O. specifically forbids such racial discrimination.

In criticizing the A. F. of L. unions in question, we refuse to be placed in the category of those who are seeking to break down organized labor, or any part of it, under the guise of promoting national defense. Legitimate criticism of organized labor is not only proper but in the best interests of the unions themselves, for once the public becomes convinced that they are hampering defense for selfish ends, many safeguards they now enjoy are apt to be abolished.

It may not be clearly demonstrable today that the abovementioned ruling of the unions against Negroes is seriously hampering defense. But even so, this will be demonstrable before long, since the shortage of skilled workers will become altogether too obvious, when the defense program goes into high gear and most of American industry gets on a round-the-clock, six or seven-day-week basis. Consequently the issue of hampering defense is expected to arise in acute form in the not distant future.

We violate no confidence when we reveal that the Virginia Defense Council has taken this important matter under careful advisement, with a view to arriving at a solution. The council's executive committee is on record as opposing any discrimination in defense projects on racial grounds, and the council may have something to report, ere long. Meanwhile, it is hoped that the United States Government also is considering ways and means of ending the unwarranted and unpatriotic policy under which skilled workers are being refused the right to utilize their skills in defense of their country.

Missed The Point

THE esteemed Newport News Daily Press, which has the knack of hitting the point, missed it entirely in an editorial entitled "Work For All," which is reprinted on the opposite page in the collection of editorials from the Virginia daily press on the employment of skilled Negro workers on defense jobs.

This question was originally brought up in Virginia by the Journal and Guide in a series of articles dealing with discrimination against the Negro craftsman, not only in Virginia, but all over the country, North, South, East and West. It happened that the Fort Eustis project fell within that category of construction projects upon which it had been definitely established that Negro carpenters were not hired—because they were Negroes. The contractor himself, told the Journal and Guide this much.

The point is not that colored people do not find much employment in Newport News and on the whole Peninsula. The question is not that hundreds of Negroes are employed in the Newport News shipyard, or by other industries on the Peninsula. The question is not one involving the employment of Negroes as common laborers or servants in hundreds of white homes on the Peninsula. That is accepted as fact. Indeed, there is no complaint concerning the employment of colored persons generally on the Peninsula, except, perhaps, as skilled craftsmen.

The Journal and Guide does not know to what extent the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company and the Chesapeake and Ohio terminals employ Negro skilled labor. We have not gone into this question. We do know, however, that both of the above named industries have been liberal in the employment of Negroes, for which employment they have the gratitude of the entire race.

* * *

This has been established by competent investigators, not only in the Peninsula area, but at Camp Lee, near Petersburg, in the Norfolk area and in other sections of the State.

The ghastly discovery in this situation is the determination to fix a policy that permanently excludes the Negro from gainful employment. Even the Daily Press would surely agree that any such policy leads the Negro to disaster. No segment of the American population so large as the Negro constitutes can maintain a decent standard of living upon the wages earned by wholly unskilled workers. No permanent economic structure can be maintained wholly on so frail a substructure.

The Negro workers seen on building projects in Newport News and elsewhere are unskilled laborers. For example, of the 84 carpenters employed on the Orcutt Homes Defense Housing Project for Negro Workers, 83 were white. The Negro wants to perform unskilled labor, of course, but he also wants a job that calls for a skilled workman if he is qualified for it.

We are certain that the Daily Press would learn something rather startling if it should inquire to what extent the city of Newport News gives financial support to the efforts of its splendid high school to provide Negro youths with such vocational training as would fit them to efficiently hold jobs of a gainful nature in Newport News.

The entire educational system in our State, as elsewhere, as it functions for Negroes, is archaic, except in a few scattered instances. The whole system has a paper framework for vocational education, but it does not have the facilities for giving the instruction. The system as it now stands presupposes that every boy is going through college. If he misses college—as is true of 85 per cent of the cases—he is helpless. If he goes through college the training—in a majority of the cases—is so inadequate that he is hopeless. We hope the Daily Press will explore this whole question. It offers a fertile field for constructive service.

It is facetious in any one to designate the ordinary common labor jobs which Negroes faithfully perform at starvation wages from day to day as "defense jobs"—"for they defend the Negro year in and year out against want." That they have not "been the means of his arriving at a comfortable economic status" is testified by the miserable slums, poverty, ill health, low purchasing power, ignorance and crime prevailing in our midst.

No Americans have been more loyal to their country than Negro-Americans. None have shed their blood more freely for national defense. It is a travesty that in this crisis which confronts them they should be told that a chance to earn merely a bare living constitutes their participation in the defense program.

Glenn Martin's Jim Crow Policy Still Under Fire

FEB 8 1941 BALTIMORE

Continuing their protests against the Glenn L. Martin Company's policy of hiring only white workers, officials of the Maryland Youth Congress announced this week, that they have communicated with Sidney Hillman, member of the advisory council of the National Defense Commission in Washington.

The letter pointed out that the Martin Company has approximately 18,000 white persons on its employment list, and has repeatedly refused to consider the request of organizations here to employ colored.

In part, the letter to Mr. Hillman read:

Letter to Hillman Quoted

"As you know, the Glenn L. Martin Company has received government contracts amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars. Our government, in turn, taxes all the citizens, both colored and white.

"Common decency demands that a corporation like Martin, making huge profits from the people, should extend equal opportunities to all who are qualified.

"We call upon you, Mr. Hillman, as a member of the advisory council of the National Defense Commission, to use your high office to compel the Glenn L. Martin Company to provide jobs for colored. The defense of our country cannot be based on the economic involvement of any part of the people. ALL the people must participate."

Undemocratic Discrimination

Sir,—The accusation appearing in The Times-Dispatch, January 27, charging The Times-Dispatch with "enlisting in the great crusade to change the traditional relationship between the white and colored races," is indeed a great tribute, although the author of that statement apparently meant it to be anything but a tribute of honor. Our good friend paid his respect unwittingly in using the term "traditional relationship," I am sure he will understand, is quite different from a valid, honorable, just, Christian relationship. Anyone acquainted with the monstrosities of "the traditional relationship between the white and colored races," if he has any intelligence or religion above that of a barbarian, or savage, should applaud the heroism and fair-mindedness of a journal or journalist who will enlist in "the great crusade" to change these monstrosities.

Personally, I believe The Times-Dispatch deserves the commendation of every loyal minded, democratic American citizen who wants to see democracy survive, America defended and antidemocratic practices and philosophies destroyed from our country, for in taking the stand it has on the issue of "Negroes and Our National Defense," The Times-Dispatch has pointed out the dangers as well as the injustices involved in the widespread discrimination against Negroes in the national defense program.

It is a vision which any far-sighted person should be able to see, for in this discrimination is manifested not only totalitarian policies but the subtle undermining of the nation's defense through the limitation of its defense personnel. Those people who urge so arduously discrimination in national defense, and criticize those who attack it, have no base for their position but the blindness of their prejudice. They are the false citizens of a democratic America who would rather see the country sold into the hands of foreign powers by spies and secret agents than have a Negro enjoy the full privilege of an American citizen in the program of defense.

Take a look at some of the arguments advanced in favor of discrimination in national defense. There is a lot of nonsense about Negroes will not be accepted in the Navy or Army on a social level, therefore they must necessarily be eliminated therefrom. We are told that white sailors and soldiers will not obey a Negro commanding officer; that Negroes are inherently inefficient; that they want social equality, and that the best way to solve the whole problem is to make the Negro accept the fact that God made people to differ in the color of their skins and that should be reason enough for the impossibility of bringing about harmony between the two races except by making the Negro accept the status of the inferior! It is easy to make such ignorant statements as generalities, when no evidence or proof for them is given. Such things are easy to say, but hard to prove, and those people who indulge in them never advance a single statistic nor concrete example to prove their point. They are the ones who "read history not with their eyes, but with their prejudice.

Let Negroes Work

The Staunton News-Leader

AT FORT MEADE this week, thousands of carpenters, plumbers and other mechanics were seen at work and as they passed out of the reservation in their cars. Scarcely 10 Negroes were among them. No charge of discrimination has been made at Fort Meade, where most of the Virginia troops go next month, but THE TIMES-DISPATCH charges discrimination at Camp Lee, near Richmond, and on construction projects in and around Newport News.

If Negro mechanics are not being used on defense jobs, it is safe to assume that it is not due to governmental policy or to the contractors. Employment of labor and nearly all questions involving the workers are dictated by the unions, which are charging a fee of from $50 to $70 for the right to get a job on a camp construction project. This fee can easily be made a bar to most Negro workers by the simple expedient of requiring "cash on the line" instead of collecting it in installments out of the pay roll. There is an impossible hurdle for the Negro in some camps because certain unions refuse to admit him to membership. Builders having contracts with such unions would be confronted with strike threats were they to employ Negroes.

Discrimination in defense work should not be tolerated because it is unjust and un-American, and because it retards the defense program. There are thousands of skilled Negro mechanics who should be on jobs that have been seriously retarded by the employment, at high wages, of unskilled white labor.

The nation makes a grave mistake in permitting discrimination against Negro workers at any time. It is an even more serious error to permit any group to block the use of them on defense projects. Negro manpower must be used to the full in both the industrial and military phases of defense, and it can be used without harmful friction if intelligence is applied to working arrangements, housing, and the military service. The Negro race is loyal, patriotic, and ready to do its full part in the present emergency. It should not be embittered by discrimination on the part of a few individuals or groups whose attitude in no way reflects the majority sentiment of the American people.

T2Y 'Work for All'?

THE editorial republished on this page from the Newport News Daily Press seems to contradict what THE TIMES-DISPATCH has been saying about the denial of jobs to skilled Negroes, but a close reading shows that it merely bears out our contentions. We never said that Negroes were denied all work on defense projects in the Newport News area. On the contrary, we stated specifically that whereas large numbers of Negroes have jobs in that area, they are almost all jobs requiring only unskilled or semiskilled workers.

We also stated that whereas the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company employs many Negroes, it admits none to its fine apprenticeship school. Does the Daily Press wish to take issue with that declaration?

So when our friends on that excellent paper declare that we seem to be "laboring under the misapprehension that there is discrimination against the Negro in defense projects in Newport News," our reply is: What evidence is there that we are under a "misapprehension"? There is nothing in the Daily Press editorial which even partially substantiates that assertion.

'Negroes and Our Defenses'

Sir,—The editorial in the January 19 Times-Dispatch, "Negroes and Our Defenses," seems to indicate that The Times-Dispatch has enlisted in the great crusade to change the traditional relationship between the white and colored races.

It is hardly a coincidence that this editorial appeared in the same issue with a communication from the Rev. R. S. Anderson, describing his experience as a Negro in the United States Navy. As pastor of a large church, no doubt the Rev. Anderson is intelligent enough to understand that there is no place for the Negro in the Navy, because politicians will not allow the Navy to recognize the fact that some men have black skins and others have white; and that they have never been able to meet as social equals. The same thing is true of the Army. Both Army and Navy authorities state a simple fact when they say that enlistment of Negroes would destroy the efficiency of the service. Anybody not blinded by that prejudice they are so ready to condemn in others, will admit that very few white men will take orders from Negroes; and that these few are not very efficient. If there is to be any place for the Negro in either the Army or Navy, it will be necessary to have separate regiments and ships for each race. It will also be necessory to limit the authority of officers to members of their own race. No other system has ever worked.

Several groups, of which the Association for the Advancement of Colored People seems to be the leader, have been agitating the race issue since the early 1920's. Most of the agitation deals with the difficulties which Negroes encounter in trying to find work. But the real motive springs from an idea that they can some how force white people to accept them as social equals.

Since the early 1930's the Negro equality drive has enjoyed the distinguished patronage of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. It is now well supplied with money, and the threat of war has provided a heaven-sent opportunity for it really to go places.

In urging Southerners to address themselves to this problem, The Times-Dispatch is entirely correct. But is it going to help national defense?

Three generations of Southern people, white and colored, have learned by trial and error, a way to live together with a minimum of friction. The Negro has a better chance to work in the South than anywhere else in the United States. He also has, in his own schools, churches, social and fraternal organizations an opportunity to work out his problems in his own way. Every trade or profession is open to the Negro in the South. But this is not true in those sections of the nation where the color line is not recognized. By accepting the fact that God made some people with black skins and others with white, and that there is no possibility of actual social equality between them, and then recognizing this fact in the laws of the land, it is possible for the two races to live and work in harmony. No other plan has ever really succeeded.

Before jumping to too many conclusions about highly skilled Negroes being denied work, it is well to reflect that in many instances this skill exists only in the Negro's imagination. Here in the South there has never been much discrimination in hiring men so long as they could do the work. It is true that discrimination is increasing. But this increase is due to agitation by union men who want to keep the skilled trades white. A good part of it is also caused by this agitation for social equality. Doctrinaires should not be too hasty in condemning the white workman who fears Negro competition.

Work for All

The Newport News Daily Press

CERTAIN newspapers in the State, foremost among them THE RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, seem to be laboring under the misapprehension that there is discrimination against the Negro in defense projects in Newport News. The Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company is the leading defense project in the State of Virginia. Representatives from Richmond, Staunton and Winchester who undertake to comment editorially on a situation regarding which they have no first-hand information are invited to appear on Washington Avenue in Newport News and watch the men coming from work at the shipyard. The number of Negro faces among the crowd of workmen will soon reveal the truth of the situation.

Likewise the representatives of these journals might visit the Chesapeake & Ohio Terminals, where large numbers of Negroes are steadily employed. We have personally inspected building projects in this city and have seen not once, but many times the Negroes engaged in work upon them. We have noted Negroes everywhere in this community in their usual pursuits.

We know that there is an actual shortage here of competent houseworkers both male and female. We know that Negroes coming to this section from North Carolina who are semiskilled workers have been able to obtain jobs.

THE City of Newport News sustains one of the finest plants in the State for the education of the Negro youth. But we do not believe that there is adequate co-ordination between this school and the community for placing young Negroes in touch with job openings. We have suggested before that an employment department operated by the school would facilitate the placing of youths in touch with a desirable job.

There is little reason why a person, white or colored, who has some skill and a sense of responsibility cannot find work on the Peninsula at this time. There is no guarantee that the work will be exactly of his choosing. But work is available and can be had by those who seek it, if they really wish to work.

Work on housing projects in this community, which seems to bear the burden of the complaint of discrimination against the Negro, is very temporary. The bulk of the building will be completed before many months have elapsed. Work at the shipyard, at the C. & O., in the barber shops, in the hotels, in cleaning establishments, at service stations, in the schools, upon the waterfronts, goes on year in and year out and supplies a living for the steady, reliable Negro population, who are the co-operative citizens of this community. These are the real defense projects. For they defend the Negro year in and year out against want, and have been the means of his arriving at a comfortable economic status in this section.

PRESS OPINION

NEGROES AND OUR DEFENSE

In Virginia, and in other States, unfair discrimination against skilled Negro workers is hampering the arming of America, and contributing to the lag in the defense program. "All-out" defense cannot be achieved, so long as a large body of skilled men is prevented by arbitrary rulings and suble prejudice from putting its capabilities to maximum use.

This is wholly aside from the injustice involved. In a Commonwealth with some 700,000 Negro citizens out of a total population of 2,677,000, it is only right and proper that such a large element be given an adequate share in the benefits of the defense program. Morover, if 700,000 Virginia citizens are discriminated against in the program, and something like 15,000,000 Negroes in the country as a whole, the effect on national morale and on the prospects for national unity, are apt to be serious.

Camp Lee affords a well-nigh perfect example of the sort of exclusion of skilled Negro workers which is going forward in this State. Hundreds of carpenters, bricklayers, roofers and other skilled members of the building trades are at work on the construction of that great cantonment, but there is understood to be only one Negro among them. It is understood, furthermore, that white men are being brought in from other States and given these jobs, although there are skilled Negro workmen in Virginia thoroughly capable of taking them.

In the Newport News area, the story apparently is the same, although there is conflicting evidence on the point. The Norfolk Journal and Guide quotes George L. Zuidema, contractor's executive officer at Fort Eustis, as saying that while he had "seriously considered hiring colored carpenters," he had not done so, "due to the fact that we have sufficient white carpenters to meet our requirements." The Journal and Guide points out, however, that the State Employment Office "in near-by Newport News is still calling for white carpenters, and a large sign on its door reads plainly 'Carpenters Wanted'." Mr. Zuidema is said to have made the above-quoted declaration, in response to an inquiry from Representative S. Otis Bland, who had received a petition from 25 Negro carpenters desirous of working on defense construction in the area. It was stated that over 1,100 Negroes are employed in this particular contractor's organization, but that they are all performing tasks requiring no skills.

It is in the skilled trades that shortages are being experienced in the defense program throughout America, whereas there is ample common labor to take care of all requirements, certainly for the present. But if skilled men are to be left idle, simply because they are colored, the shortages in this field may grow worse, instead of better, and the defense program, so vital to America's survival, may fail.

The skills, actual and potential, of the Negro ought to be utilized to the fullest. In so far as it lies in their power, any contractors who are not giving Negroes their rightful share of the skilled work for which they are fitted, should endeavor to rectify this injustice. And agencies for the training of Negro workers in skilled trades should everywhere be developed and encouraged.

It is only by some such steps as these that America's skilled workers can be fully mobilized for the gigantic task of making this country ready for any emergency. —Richmond Times-Dispatch.

JIM CROW AND NATIONAL DEFENSE
(From Interracial Review)

The District Bar Association in Washington has its own library housed in a government-owned building. We presume that this is perfectly within the law.

The association, however, like many another Washington organization bars Negroes from membership. It also bars women. This, too, though hardly edifying in an organization of lawyers we assume is thoroughly legal.

Even if either prohibition by itself is entirely within the law, taken together, they place the bar association in the rather compromising position of excluding Negroes from a government building. Whether or not this is legal we do not know. But Atty. Huber I. Brown, by bringing suit to oust the group from their present quarters proposes to find out. We sincerely hope he succeeds.

The whole matter was the basis for news articles once again when the bar association held a meeting on Christmas eve during which a majority group of insurgents attempted to alter the association's policy. Lacking the necessary two-thirds vote. they failed. But not before Henry I. Quinn, past president, had had his say. "I stand against any proposition," he declared, "that is against American principles and gives the slightest indorsement to racial prejudice." He called upon the association to "meet this problem as American men who refuse to be parties to a hypocritical move of this sort."

The spectacle of Jim-Crowism among members of the bar at the very seat of our national government during a period when the press, the legislatures, high government officials, both major political parties and the nation generally are calling for strong national unity to make our defense program effective is not a spectacle to reassure true patriots.

Jim Crow is a sorry enough beggar at any time. His friends are, wittingly or not, in peace or in war, betrayers of national unity and enemies of the republic. In a time of grave national crisis, they are breeders of dissension and conflict when national unity is essential.

Germany's need for quantity production of babies to inherit the earth remains somewhat speculative.

Injustice on the Peninsula

A CIRCUMSTANTIAL account of the difficulties experienced by skilled Negro workers in getting jobs on defense projects in the Newport News area, appears in the February 1 issue of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, and bears out our contention that defense is suffering in that area through the failure of those in charge to utilize every available skilled man.

The Journal and Guide says in a detailed account of its inquiry that some of the contractors in lower Tidewater "made no effort last week to comply with the executive order of JOHN M. CARMODY, Federal works administrator, banning discrimination against Negro skilled and semiskilled workers." It goes on to speak of their "defiant attitude, recourse to subterfuges and reprisals."

No concessions from contractors and foremen were secured during the past month on this issue, a group of representative Negroes reported, after visiting "all national defense projects in the Peninsula area," the account in question declares. This group was headed by CHARLES HILL, president of the recently organized Peninsula Trade and Labor Union, composed of Negroes banned from employment, under existing regulations.

It is stated that after first being told by one Fort Eustis contractor that no carpenters were being hired, they were told by a construction foreman that if they could find 40 Negro carpenters on the Peninsula, he would put them to work. They returned shortly thereafter, the account goes on, with the 40 names asked for, only to be told by the surprised foreman that 700 Negro carpenters were needed. The foreman finally admitted "reluctantly" that if he employed Negro carpenters, "the whites would walk out."

If this account is accurate, we are confronted with a situation wherein the contractor seems to be "out in front," but the ultimate responsibility rests with the white workmen, specifically the unionized workmen. If this is a typical case, there apparently isn't going to be any satisfactory solution until the unions either admit Negroes or allow non-unionized Negroes to work on these projects.

Two large housing jobs in Newport News are employing practically no Negroes, except laborers, the article says. One had a good many skilled Negroes on it in November, but most of these have been discharged, whereas on the other there were 63 Negro workmen, but only one was holding a skilled job last week, the Journal and Guide says.

This is the sort of thing THE TIMES-DISPATCH is trying to do something about. If Virginia, and the country as a whole, refuse to utilize all citizens to the fullest in the interests of national defense, they will be recreant to their duty in a great international crisis. Moreover, they will perpetrate a gross injustice upon a large body of persons eager to do their part toward making America strong.

Light on a Grave Injustice

The Norfolk Journal and Guide

ALL thoughtful citizens of the State should be grateful to THE RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH for its searching editorial inquiry into the exclusion of skilled Negro mechanics from defense construction work. The subject is covered thoroughly by THE TIMES-DISPATCH, in two editorials entitled "Negroes and Our Defenses," which we are printing in full on the opposite side of this page.

This whole question calls for a thorough examination by the responsible citizenry of the State, because it undermines the foundation of any reasonable or decent living standard for Negroes. This serious situation has developed to its present appalling proportions during the past two decades, although it has been in the making during the past 50 years. It is due to a combination of circumstances which reflect discredit upon democracy. One factor involved has been the desire of organized labor to protect its interests by controlling apprenticeships.

The idea there has been to keep the skilled labor crafts from being overrun, and to insure competent workmen. The idea would have been reasonable had not the organized craft unions excluded Negroes both from unions and from apprentice schools. Such a practice has resulted in bringing about the acute problem confronting Negroes both from unions and from apprentice schools. Such a practice has resulted in bringing about the acute problem confronting Negroes skillfully trained in many private and State technical schools, both on the college and high school level. When a Negro mechanic possessing all the skill required for the job at hand applies for employment he finds that the Government work is controlled by a contractor, who, nine times out of ten, is under contract with the unions, which by ritual, by-laws and practice, exclude Negroes from membership.

We are then under a Government which legalizes the labor union and legislates it into a place of power in the nation; which gives it the right to bargain exclusively for work and wages, while the union at the same time excludes from either work or wages a whole segment of American citizens.

Indefensible Discrimination

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

SENATOR WAGNER of New York charges in a letter to Director Knudsen of the office of production management, that some aircraft plants working on defense contracts have been guilty of "flagrantly violating" defense project rules forbidding contractors to discriminate against workers because of race or color. Barring Negroes from employment on such projects, declares the New York senator—> mocks the very principles of democracy we are preparing to defend—the very principles of equality and human dignity which the President has proclaimed as the essential basis for lasting peace and world reconstruction.

Even more glaring is the similar discrimination against Negro workers reported in connection with the defense housing projects, for whereas airplane construction calls for skills that only a small proportion of Negro workers possess, housing construction calls for skills possessed by Negro workers in large number. The Federal works administrator, proceeding under the act of October 14, has instructed companies executing defense housing projects that—

> There shall be no discrimination by reason of race, creed, color or political affiliations, in the employment of persons, qualified by training and experience, for work in the development of defense housing at the sites thereof.

DESPITE these Government instructions, discrimination against Negro workers solely because of their color, continues to be the rule. They are employed in the unskilled, day-labor classifications, but seldom as skilled carpenters, bracklayers, etc.—in Southern defense projects hardly at all. Contractors might be willing to abandon this discrimination, but apparently the unions are not. Between union ostracism and contractor anxiety to avoid labor troubles, the skilled worker with a dark skin is cheated of his right to participate on an equitable footing in the work-benefits of the national defense program. The able-bodied Negro male is good enough to be drafted as a soldier to fight the nation's battles, but not good enough to be given a job befitting his skill in building the nation's barracks.

We can think of no form of discrimination as stinking with injustice as this. It cries for correction. It cries first to organized labor which sits at the first toll gate, and second to the Government of the United States which is under the highest moral obligation (to say nothing of its legal obligation) to prevent one element of the working citizenship from destroying the equal rights of another element in public works paid for out of the public purse.

Editorial Comment

(Richmond Times-Dispatch)

In Virginia, and in other States, unfair discrimination against skilled Negro workers is hampering the arming of America, and contributing to the lag in the defense program. "All-out" defense cannot be achieved, so long as a large body of skilled men is prevented by arbitrary rulings and subtle prejudice from putting its capabilities to maximum use.

This is wholly aside from the injustice involved. In a Commonwealth with some 700,000 Negro citizens out of a total population of 2,677,000, it is only right and proper that such a large element be given an adequate share in the benefits of the defense program. Moreover, if 700,000 Virginia citizens are discriminated against in the program, and something like 15,000,000 Negroes in the country as a whole, the effect on national morale and on the prospects for national unity, are apt to be serious.

Camp Lee affords a well-nigh perfect example of the sort of exclusion of skilled Negro workers which is going forward in this State. Hundreds of carpenters, bricklayers, roofers and other skilled members of the building trades are at work on the construction of that great cantonment, but there is understood to be only one Negro among them. It is understood, furthermore, that white men are being brought in from other States and given these jobs, although there are skilled Negro workmen in Virginia thoroughly capable of taking them.

Negroes Not Hired, They Said

Sir,—I am writing you to ask space in your valuable paper on "The Negro and Defense." I have read with much satisfaction your series of editorials on the subject; also the many comments favorable in other editorial columns printed by you.

I think you have rendered an inestimable service: (1) to the Negro who finds himself helpless in a great emergency; (2) to call attention to America's hypocrisy in her democracy. For whatever may be said to the contrary, America, in this particular instance, as well as many others, is making herself the laughing stock of the world when she glibly speaks of democracy. And what is happening in America today is mightier than that will some day happen to her.

I feel personally the humiliation which is shared by hundreds of Negroes who have applied for work and were denied.

I was one of the thousands who answered the clarion call of my country to fight a foreign foe upon a foreign soil, to make the world and America "safe for democracy." I, like many others, did it gladly and with patriotic zeal. I went to France and remained nine months, returning to Camp Lee, and at the same time was honorably discsharged as a skilled mechanic in carpentering.

But to my amazement and astonishment, when my brother and I applied for work in this national emergency, when everywhere the whole country is geared to its full capacity in adequate preparations for defense, I was told that no Negroes were hired, simply because they were Negroes.

I believe in unions; in fact, I have been a member of the A. F. of L. for years. My membership at present is in New Jersey. If the union must control labor policies wherever a state of emergency exists in this hour, then our democracy is also crumbling.

In this hour of approaching national peril, in this hour of fast crumbling democracies, in this hour when new interpretations are being given to the meaning and function of governments everywhere, when open discriminations are more keenly felt, I think it well for all well-meaning and well-functioning democracies to see to it that their texts and sermons correspond. America is no exception.

The Negro's Right to Work

Sir,—Your paper is to be commended for the courage and liberalism displayed in your editorials regarding the discrimination against the Negro in the defense projects. You may rest assured that all citizens who really mean what they say about democracy and unity are in accord with your point of view on this question.

True to the old adage, "If you step on my corn, I'll be the one who hollers," the Newport News Daily Press was touched at a sore spot and was not ashamed to let it be known through their editorial under the caption of "Work for All."

It must not have been so surprising to find that such descrimination really exists, nor to find that someone disagreed with you in revealing your observations, but I am sure it was astonishing to learn that a newspaper having the reputation that the Newport News Daily Press is supposed to have, would have the audacity to challenge such a rightful stand as taken by you.

May you and others, too, who have a democratic mind, continue to speak for the right in this way until all America is truly the land of the free. Then we won't have to do so much worrying about whether this is the home of the brave or not.

Solid Front Asked In Fight Against Discrimination In National Defense Program

FEB 8 - 1941

Flays Edgar Brown and Emory Smith

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—At a huge mass meeting, which heard Congressman John Robinson, Mrs. Mildred Guffey Miller, sister to Senator Guffey, Capt. Eugene Davidson, administrator of the new Negro alliance; Dr. Rayford Logan; Atty. Charles Houston and Charles Edward Russell, resolutions were adopted condemning the discriminatory practices of the defense program and the armed forces of the United States.

In his opening address, Dr. Russell called upon the entire race for unity of purpose and a solid front to the forces mitigating against the Negro in his efforts to obtain better conditions in the United States.

Dr. Russell declared that the group now running the country had less right to be called Americans than did the 10 per cent of the population whose ancestors had been here longer than had the whites. Emphasizing the extreme loyalty of the Negro to the country, Dr. Russell asked why then was the prejudice against him so strong He had not been found wanting in any capacity but the reason, according to the speaker, was the survival of an insane superstition of race consciousness and caste system, based on color which long ago had been disproved by science.

Capt. Davidson spoke of the loyalty of the Negro as that of "a man for his master" and decried the kind of loyalty which permitted '-a certain leader to take a group to the White House after the Early kicking incident in Harlem, and tell the President's secretary "that's all right, boss; that little kick waren't nothing." He also decried the "loyalty" which permitted another man to "sit on the platform at the recent jim crow inaugural celebration, clad in a tuxedo, grinning while white folk praised him for the little musical program he had arranged."

Without calling names, Capt. Davidson flayed these two men, referring to Edgar Brown of the United Government employees, and to Emory B. Smith, chairman of the colored entertainment committee f or the inaugural celebration.

Mrs. Miller, sister to Sen. Guffey, brought greetings from the senator and said in the course of her address that in her opinion, the discriminatory practices against Negroes in the army are due to the famous Brownsville episode away back in Theodore Roosevelt's administration.

Congressman Robsion declared that if any other minority group had been subjected to the indignities that Negroes have scffered in the past, there would have been revolution and bloodshed in his country long ago. He also said that the United States was not in fear of any attack from without, it was from within that she would have to be protected. He cited several instances from history to prove his point and wound up his remarks by saying that the government need have no fear of such things happening as far as the Negro was concerned, and he hoped that the dawn of a brighter day was at hand for the Negroes of this country.

-'Any country with from 9 to 10 million of unemployed men with families to feed, has a right to stand in fear and that was what this nation feared the most,' 'the congressman said in discussing his topic. This slap at the administration was the only thing said which may have been construed politically, although the "Black Cabinet" was largely represented and very watchful of what transpired.

Illness Delays Plans for Bias Probe in Senate

WASHINGTON

Final arrangements for introduction of a resolution for a Senate investigation of discrimination against colored persons in the national defense program were completed here this week but introduction was delayed by the illness of Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, who, with Senator W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, is sponsoring the probe.

FEB 1 5 1941

In conferences held here this week by Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, preparations were made to expedite action by the Senate committee to which the resolution will be referred. An immediate preliminary hearing has been promised after which the resolution will be brought before the Senate for action.

NAACP, Urban League Busy

In preparation for the hearing the National Urban League and the NAACP are gathering and correlating all available material on discrimination by employers and labor unions, and the NAACP is preparing similar material on discrimination in the armed forces.

A list of witnesses is being prepared which will include not only government officials, employers and labor union heads but qualified colored persons who have been barred because of their color from the army, navy, air corps and industrial plants.

The NAACP has issued a call for bonafide information on discrimination in any phase of the national defense program. It urged that persons who have specific information rush it to the NAACP at 69 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Negroes File Protest Over Work Status

Hampton Conference Takes Grievance Direct to President Roosevelt

Charge Unfairness

Discrimination Cited in Membership Fees Demanded by Unions

Hampton, Feb. 11.—A resolution charging discrimination in the employment of Negro workmen on national defense housing projects, was telegraphed to President Roosevelt and 12 other key Government officials tonight by the Hampton Institute Builders' Conference and National Builders Association, meeting at Hampton Institute.

The 580-word resolution charged "numerous firms holding Government contracts and certain organized labor groups" with "subtle and illegal collusion for the purpose of evading Government 'racial discriminatory' clauses in order to exclude skilled Negro workers from a full participation in national defense construction work."

Fort Eustis Cited

It cited specifically the Fort Eustis construction project near here, where it was said that not a single Negro carpenter had been employed, although "approximately 2,000 white ones" have jobs there.

George L. Zuidema, hiring agent on the Fort Eustis project, appeared before the conference yesterday to relate that approximately 2,300 of the 5,800 workmen on the project are Negroes. He said these included cement finishers, yarners, caulkers, asphalt rakers, broom operators, men laying sewer lines and water lines, and laborers doing excavating, backfilling and placing of concrete.

Labor Groups Denounced

The resolution said:

"We wish to go on record as denouncing the action of numerous firms holding Government contracts and certain organized labor groups in their subtle and illegal collusion for the purpose of evading Government 'racial discriminatory' clauses in order to exclude skilled Negro workers from a full participation in national defense construction work. Evidence has been presented to this body, proving without question that skilled Negro workers are barred from skilled labor in the construction of barracks that the same workers may be called upon to occupy in the service of their country. We point out specifically the Fort Eustis project, with 2,300 Negroes out of 5,800 workmen, yet with not a single Negro carpenter employed—though approximately 2,000 white ones have been given employment. It is clearly evident on this project, as on others, that skilled Negro workmen are shunted into unskilled occupations while skilled labor, by collusion of contractors and labor unions, is restricted to white workers. We state as our conviction that, in these crucial days, Negroes must be allowed to work on a democratic basis if they are to be expected to fight for democracy. We deny that a sacrifice of democratic principles in defense construction must be made in the interest of efficiency. We consider that the exclusion of Negro workmen from certain skilled defense occupations for which they possess full qualifications constitutes a flagrant violation of the spirit of democracy. We point out that the employment of skilled Negroes as helpers to skilled white mechanics, but with wages approximating those of laborers, amounts to racial discrimination—in direct violation of Government ruling. We state that in certain sections there is a conspiracy between Government employment agencies, contractors' hiring agents and certain labor unions, aiming to restrict skilled employment to white workers.

Discrimination Alleged

"We wish to point out that in this defense emergency the Federal Government has gone on record against racial discrimination yet racial discrimination continues. Since various Government agencies are the first party to contracts between and with defense contractors, since the taxpayers' money is paying for national defense—we insist that the democratic participation of the Negro in the defense program can be insured only if the Government implements the existing racial discrimination clause with specific percentage and enforcement provisions that contractors cannot evade.

"It is our sober conviction that the violation of the spirit of democracy during a period when we are told that democracy must be preserved is undermining the morale of a large segment of the American population, some of whom have been called for military training, and others of whom expect to be called shortly.

"Evidence has been presented at this conference that a vicious circle exists to exclude the skilled Negro worker from defense work. Government employment agents say that if contractors "ask for potatoes they can't give them onions." Contractors tell skilled Negro workers that they must have union cards. Union officials triple their membership fee and then refuse cards to skilled Negro workers when they produce the money.

"Finally, we call to your attention the fact that defense of democracy in this troubled world becomes an empty phrase unless all of the defenders can live and work according to democratic principles.

"William E. Lee, president, National Builders' Association."

Others Get Resolution

Adoption of the resolution was the principal business of the second-day sessions of the three-day conference devoted to defense construction and the Negro.

Among other Government officials to whom the resolution was telegraphed were John M. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, who has promised an immediate investigation of charges that racial discrimination is being practiced on Federal defense housing jobs in Tidewater Virginia. Conference spokesmen said it also went to General Somerville of the War Department, Nathan Straus, administrator of the U. S. Housing Authority, and others.

Not the Voice of the Negro People

• The President's war program is intensifying discrimination against the Negro people in "defense" industries and in the armed forces. But A. Phillip Randolph is one hundred per cent for it.

Mr. Randolph has a mighty strange way of fighting for his people. In fact he is writing a series of articles, the aim of which is to hog-tie the Negro people to the war chariot of the Roosevelt Administration.

His latest article even goes so far as to urge the Negro people to support the war-dictatorship bill and the British empire. Actually, British imperialism is fighting to protect its slave pens in South Africa; Mussolini is fighting to protect his slave pen in Eritrea. Both are fighting merely to determine which shall wield the whip over the Ethiopian people.

There is nothing for the Negro people to choose between either of the bandit imperialists. Their stake is with the oppressed colonials against both imperialist belligerents.

As for the war-dictatorship bill, it is an intensification of all the fierce oppression of the Negro people under American imperialism, plus leading them to death in defense of this imperialism. As James W. Ford, pointed out in his interview with the Sunday Worker: "No section of the population has felt the disastrous effects of the President's fake 'defense' as keenly as the Negro people."

The role of Randolph, and other Negro leaders such as Walter White, is similar to that of the wage-cutting Social-Democrat Sidney Hillman. The policies of Randolph and White lead to surrender of the fight against "defense" discrimination, to say nothing of abandonment of the anti-lynching and anti-poll tax bills which are vital to the fight against rising fascism in America.

It is clear that Randolph does not speak for the Negro people. That can be seen from the action of the Negro trade unionists in Chicago who are participating with the American Peace Mobilization against the war-dictatorship bill. It can be seen from the growing unity of the Negro people, with labor and progressives, in opposing the Hitler-like jim-crowism of the "defense" program. The Negro people, as they have shown in the past, will know how to repudiate those leaders who come to them peddling the policies of their imperialist enemies

Ethridge Heads Probe of Negroes

WASHINGTON, July 19—(AP)—Mark F. Ethridge, vice-president and general manager of the Louisville Courier Journal, was appointed by President Roosevelt today as chairman of a committee to investigate complaints of discrimination against negroes seeking work in defense industries and the government.

Other members are:

The committee was created under an executive order of June 25 which reaffirmed the policy of the government against discrimination in the hiring of defense and government workers because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

Serving without pay, the committee will investigate complaints and take steps to redress grievances.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — James M. Robinson, 1915 Brooklyn avenue, is a young man 26 years of age who wants to get a job in the North American Aviation plant when it opens near Fairfax airport sometime within the year.

He is now on WPA but he wants to work in private industry. He wants to carry his own weight. He doesn't want to rear his sons on a relief job.

Because of his talents, he was summoned to the central WPA office recently and interviewed on his qualifications to enter a defense training "refresher" class.

The WPA interviewer found that he was good material for the sheet metal class. He found that Robinson had had experience in radio and model airplane construction. Since he was a boy in knee pants, Robinson has been building model airplanes.

Some of his models were so good that they won numerous first, second and third prizes in model airplane contests held at various times under the sponsorship of the Chamber of Commerce.

The WPA interviewer gave Robinson the letter above and told him to take it to Joe Williams, director of the defense training program, at the Manual Training high school

The letter reads:

Mr. James M. Robinson

Dear Sir:

You have been selected for a referral to the Training Program. Please report to Manual High. School, Fifteenth and Forest Avenue, at 11:30 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 22, 1941.

Present this letter to Mr. Joe Williams.

Very truly yours,
Howard C. Williams,

Sheet Metal Worker District Manager

When Robinson reported to Mr. Williams, the defense training program director told him that there is no sheet metal class for Negroes in Kansas City and that the class at Manual is for WHITE BOYS ONLY.

Robinson told him that he wanted to prepare for a job in the bomber plant, but Mr. Williams said that "no Negro is going to get in my class."

Mr. Williams wrote the notation in the left-hand bottom corner of the letter, "Colored. This Is a White Class."

Robinson is within the draft age. He is wondering what he and other young Negroes of his age will be fighting for when they are drafted into the army. "Did they say it was democracy we are fighting for?" Robinson asked in a puzzled voice.

Won't Withdraw Suit Against War Heads

H. U. STUDENT CONTINUES CLAIM DESPITE ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW NEGRO AIR UNIT

Despite the War Department's announced creation of the country's first Army Air corps with a Negro personnel, Yancy Williams, 24, Howard University engineering student, will not immediately withdraw a suit filed in the U.S. District Court as the result of rejection as a flying cadet because of his race, Wendell L. McConnell, the youth's attorney, stated this week.

Mr. Williams, who holds a private pilot's license issued to him on May 6, 1940, by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, filed suit on Wednesday against Secretary of War H. L. Stimson and four major generals in their official capacities, in behalf of himself and "other Negroes qualified for the air corps."

To Begin in February

On the following day, the War Department stated that a pursuit squadron with Negroes both as officers and ground crew, in line with a policy of including colored persons in every branch of the Army, would begin actual training in February.

McConnell requested the N.A.A.C.P. to furnish attorneys to cooperate with him on the case. The N.A.A.C.P. assigned Thurgood Marshall, its special counsel; and W. Robert Ming, Jr., and Leon A. Ransom, both members of the National Legal Committee to cooperate in the preparation and filing of the case.

"Our suit," said Mr. McConnelly, "will be allowed to remain in the court until we have definite assurance from the War Department that Mr. Williams and other qualified Negroes will be integrated into the air corps. Mr. Williams's application still stands."

The officers named along with Secretary Stimson as defendants in Mr. Williams's suit are: Major Generals C. C. Marshall, chief of staff; E. S. Adams, adjutant general; Henry S. Arnold, deputy chief of staff of the Army Air Corps, and W. S. Grant, commanding general of the Third Corps Area.

Amendment Violated

Mr. Williams asks the court for a declaratory judgment and injunction to determine whether or not the practice of the defendants in enforcing and maintaining the policy whereby colored citizens are regularly excluded from appointments as flying cadets of the Air Corps on account of their race is unconstitutional as deprivation of liberty and property without due process of law within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

The student, who had been rejected by the Army because there were no facilities for the training of colored airmen, sets forth his various qualifications in his petition as follows:

He is an unmarried draftee, with no dependents, and has satisfactorily completed more than half of the credits required for a degree in the Howard University School of Engineering. Character, physique, and health are all listed as excellent.

Completed Two Courses

Mr. Williams sets forth that he completed his primary air training course offered under authority of the Civil Aeronautics Administration at Hybla Valley, Alexandria, Va., and the secondary training course at Auburn Field, Auburn, Ala., in August of 1940. He called attention to the fact that before being admitted to the secondary course, he was passed as physically fit by the Army medical board at Bolling Field, Va.

During November, he continues, in accordance with regulations of the War Department, application for appointment as a flying cadet was made to General Grant. The application was accompanied by three letters of recommendation signed by persons of recognized standing in the District and by a certificate from the registrar of Howard University certifying the subjects pursued.

Review Is Denied

Notwithstanding his compliance with all the requirements of the War Department, Mr. Williams asserts that he was notified by General Grant that "he refused to consider the application on its merits, solely on the grounds that the plaintiff was a Negro."

The petitioner states that he sought a review of his case, but this too was denied him on account of his race.

Mr. Williams emphasizes that the United States are engaged in appointing and training flying cadets at present and that the chief of staff was publicly stated that pilots must be tripled.

So great is the need for pilots, the petitions points out, paid advertisements are presently being inserted in leading publications soliciting young qualified men to seek appointments in the air corps.

Circulates Hand Bill Asking For White 'American Citizens'

MAY 9 - 1941

NEW YORK—Branded as rank discrimination and willful ignorance of the recent appeal by Sidney Hillman, co-director of the Office of Production Management, to employers to forget race bias in the present emergency, a handbill has just been issued by the Sparrow Aircraft Company, Inc., asking for "white American citizens" to register for training courses in the company's division at Wichita, Kansas.

Coming close on the heels of the statement made by J. H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation company, who said he would hire Negroes "only as janitors" no matter how well trained, this new near-Nazi action is being vigorously opposed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP warned in a strong statement that continued denial of democracy to the Negro people will not work to the best interests of national unity.

"In spite of the Kindelbergers and companies like Sparrow, Negroes remain firm in their determination to help the country through its great crisis," said the NAACP. "But more than in any previous emergency, this segment of the population is alert to denials of its democratic rights and is becoming more and more impatient with discriminatory practices."

A letter of protest has been sent to Sidney Hillman by the NAACP.

SAYS H. R. 3994 IS STALLED BY HOUSE APATHY

Bill's Author Prepares To Petition Speaker For Legislative Action

MAY 10 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Unless the House judiciary committee, headed by the poll-tax Congressman, Hatton W. Sumners (Dem., Texas) takes action soon on H.R. 3994, a bill which would slap heavy penalties on defense industrialists who discriminate against colored workers, as well as heads of government agencies who practice jim crow, Representative Vito Marcantonio of New York, author of the measure, will take action by placing a petition on the speaker's desk, he declared last week.

When 210 Congressmen have signed the petition, the bill is automatically removed from the jurisdiction of the judiciary committee, and may then be brought to the floor of the House and voted upon.

At the time he introduced the bill on March 13, the fiery New Yorker described the measure as a direct challenge to the "good faith" of President Roosevelt's leadership. He pointed out at that ime that the administration's "profession for democracy is dependent on whether or not it supports this bill."

Senate Resolution 75, a similar measure, which was introduced last February by Senator Warren Barbour (Dem., N. J.) has been pigeonholed by members of he sub-committee on education and labor, headed by Senator Schwartz of Wyoming, it has been learned. Senator Schwartz is said to have urged the committee members last week to vote the bill out favorably, but the majority voted to table it and postpone action.

A report has been current for some time that public hearings would be held on he bill, but nothing has come of it. The bill would authorize an appropriation of $25,000 to investigate discrimination in national defense. Co-sponsors of

MAY 6 - 1941

Washington does not need to be told that any cause with which Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes' name is identified is worthy of support. During his long years of residence here as canon of the Washington Cathedral, Dr. Stokes was an active participant in most of the movements to improve civic and social conditions in this community. Accordingly when he, as chairman of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries, appeals to the Nation at large to work for removal of discriminations against competent Negro workers, he will be listened to with respect. But the name is subsidiary to the appeal, and the plain commonsense of this particular appeal will spring to the eyes, as the French say. The fact that skilled Negro craftsmen are being denied employment in industries handicapped by labor shortages has been frequently mentioned in official reports of the United States Employment Service. From the standpoint of those concerned only with speeding up the defense program, such exclusion must seem indefensible.

MAY 6 - 1941

However, the committee rightly bases its plea for fair play upon other considerations. "Justice for Negro Americans in the program for national defense," it declares, "is a searching test of American democracy. Our concern for democracy in Europe or elsewhere lacks reality and sincerity if our plans and policies disregard the rights of minorities in our own country." "It seems especially important to observe these in letter and spirit in our national industrial defense program in a year when we have voted with overwhelming public support to make our country a great "arsenal for the democracies." This statement, carrying the signatures of a distinguished group of publicists, and leaders of business, labor and the churches, is unanswerable. No sincere believer in the democratic principles of equality of treatment, without regard to race, color or creed (which the Supreme Court, incidentally, recently reaffirmed in respect of the Negro on our railroads) can fail to be moved by such a forthright appeal.

WASHINGTONN, D. C. — A pledge of the support of the Republican minority in the senate for senate resolution 75 was given May 2 by Senator Charles L. McNary, minority leader.

Senator McNarry told Walter White. NAACP secretary, that the utmost effort will be given by the Republican members to get S.R. 75 out of committee.

"The proposal to put off consideration of this resolution," said Senator McNarry, until late summer or early fall is ridiculous. We must strive for full democracy here if we are to carry on an effort to preserve democracy in the world."

Mr. White urged all interested persons to send friendly but firm telegrams MAY 10 1941 Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, urging the committee to report the resolution favorably, and not to combine it with any other investigation.

All organized groups, such as clubs, churches, labor unions, lodges and other, are urged by the NAACP to pass resolutions endorsing S.R. 75 and send them to the senators from their states asking that they be inserted in the Congressional Record.

Seventeen Negro Leaders Ask End of Bias on Defense Work

President Roosevelt was urged yesterday to order the inclusion in all defense contracts of clauses forbidding discrimination against applicants for employment because of race, creed or color. The plea was made in an open letter signed by seventeen Negro leaders, all supporters of the economic and foreign policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

The letter declared that Negroes had found it virtually impossible to obtain jobs in aircraft factories and other defense industries and that instances had been reported of Negro youths denied admission to government training schools for defense mechanics.

Warning that "the utter failure to provide justice for Negroes in the distribution of new defense jobs" had been used by Nazis, Fascists and Communists as a vehicle for attacks on the whole preparedness effort, the Negro leaders appealed to the President to take steps to rectify the situation.

Executive Order Asked

Included among the steps suggested were the writing into defense contracts of requirements that employment be given to qualified persons without regard for race or religion and the issuance of an executive order prohibiting discrimination in the armed forces and in the government training program for defense jobs.

"We do not expect you, Mr. President, to get rid of race prejudice," the letter said. "We know full well that that task must be accomplished in the long run by an increase in the enlightened self-interest and genuine democratic feelings of the white population as well as by the character and conduct of Negroes in cooperation with their fellow-citizens as together they strive to improve our democracy and gain greater economic security and justice for all.

"But we do expect you to use your high office to prevent race prejudice from being translated into discrimination by the government or by private concerns or agencies which are dependent upon the government. We believe wholeheartedly in the defense of democracy, Mr. President, but we do not believe that we can rely for a sturdy and valiant defense of democracy upon people who do not in their hearts genuinely believe in democracy.

Warning Is Given

"Those who practice or complacently tolerate race discrimination are not 'all-out' believers in democracy and we solemnly warn you and our fellow-citizens that they will prove untrustworthy in the hour of democracy's greatest trials."

The signers included A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Elmer A. Carter, member of the State Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board; the Rev. Dr. George E. Haynes of the Federal Council of Churches, Walter White and William Pickens of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Gertrude E. Ayer, principal of Public School 24.

Other signers were Assistant District Attorney Eunice H. Carter, Layle Lane, vice president of the American Federation of Teachers; Professor Ralph J. Bunche of Howard University, Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee; the Rev. A. Clayton Powell Jr., the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes; Noah C. A. Negro Women To Fight For Defense Recognition

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A large group of women met here on last Sunday to lay plans for a huge conference from June 29 to July 1, inclusive, and to discuss the possibilities of such a meeting ending up with participation in the huge demonstration for national defense recognition planned by the Non-Partisan council of the AKA sorority.

Responding to the call were representatives from Delta Sigma Theta; the YWCA, the Federal Council of Colored Women's Clubs; the National Council of Negro Women; the Women's auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; the Chi Eta Phi sorority of nurses; the Sigma Gamma Rho; the Civic forum; the Daughter Elks; Teachers union; College Women's Clubs; Epsilon Sigma Iota, the legal sorority; and Zeta Phi Beta.

TENTATIVE PLANS

In the initial meeting, the women assembled at the YWCA and heard the tentative plans. Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune endorsed the idea and suggested that her group would be pleased to work with the women in this new move.

At present, it is planned to hold panel discussions on the place of Negro women in the defense plans, and outline a program to be presented to the government asking for fuller participation of Negroes in this work and for the elimination of the racial barriers that now face Negroes in all walks of life.

Projecting their program beyond the present emergency as recently declared by the President, the women plan to present a long range program for the future benefits of Negroes.

ALL WOMEN INVITED

It is hoped that women, young and old, from all walks of life will take an active part in this convention, which is to be held in Washington. Representative women from business, direct of all citizens."

Election of the Rev. S. Arthur Devan, former chaplain at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., as director of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, to succeed Dr. Paul Dwight Moody, who resigned recently to return to his position as president of Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt., was announced at the same time. The Southern Presbyterian Church, which on May 27 voted to join the council, was formally received into membership.

FDR Defends Negro Labor

WASHINGTON, [AP] — Asserting that he had received complaints of nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, President Roosevelt called upon the office of production management Monday to take immediate steps to deal "effectively" with this "grave" situation.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors, Mr. Roosevelt said that "no nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "very, very important," he added, for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

Personnel Administrators Hit Job Discrimination

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Blasting discriminatory practices against Negroes in civil service, the report of the Council Personnel Administrators is one of the "hottest" documents to reach President Roosevelt's desk recently, sources close to the administration declare.

Going into full detail of discriminations, it is reported the document states "there has been no justification for the cruel and unjust treatment accorded Negroes under present procedures."

The result of months of study by the personnel administrators of the 32 governmental agencies operating in the city, this report is one which has been eagerly awaited and as soon as it was submitted to the President, action was expected.

STRANGE SILENCE

Nothing has been said of the report, nothing has been released, but it is known that it made the "boys" on the Hill strangely silent.

The report, laid on the President's desk sometime back, plus the urgency of the Fair Employment committee, is believed responsible for the recent issuance of the executive order of the governmental agencies banning discrimination in the employ of Negroes under the civil service.

Action Back Of President's Recent Order

An inking of what the report contained was bruited about town early in the week but it was discussed in whispers and in an "off the record" manner.

Five Negroes were sent to the war department to take positions as clerks or stenographers. The personnel director refused to accept them. They in turn notified someone, ((believed to be Sec. McReynolds at the White House) and the order went back to the war department to place these applicants on the job, the next morning. They went to work.

As far back as early spring, the Council of Personnel Administrators has been at work on this problem.

Meeting with the various Negro department heads, they sought the advice of these officials and discussed at length problem of integrating the workers into the regular set-ups or of establishing segregated units.

REPORTED TO PRESIDENT

To the everlasting credit of the council, it went on record and so reported to the President that it was for complete integration of Negro workers along with whites.

The report is one of the most important documents—even as important as the original executive order of June 25 to the industrial plants, since it gives Negroes an opportunity in the many bureaus of the government. And since there are a million people on the pay rolls of the government it is hardly going too far afield to expect that at least 10 per cent of these employees will be Negroes.

Profiting by the report, Negroes accepted under the civil service will be amenable to all the rules and regulations thereof, with regard to promotions and othr benefits now enjoyed only by the whites.

LEGION MAY MAKE ISSUE OF ARMY BIAS

Race Vets Seek Aid Of Comrades In Fighting Discrimination

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—(Special)—Legion posts from all sections of the country here for the annual American Legion convention, have brought to the convention resolutions condemning the treatment of Negroes in the armed forces of the United States.

The legionnaires reflect the ever widening resentment evident throughout the nation. Resolutions asking the convention to go on record as condemning the present discrimination in the armed forces have come from different posts in the West, Mid-West and the East.

Last month the John R. Marshall Post of Illinois sought to have the Illinois Department to take such a stand. Leaders in American legion ranks from the East backed by groups from all parts of the country, are marshalling forces to present to the resolutions committee as solid a front as possible.

Sentiment is solidly behind an effort to have the convention through the resolution committee endorse such a resolution and failing in that the matter may be forced to the floor of the convention.

The Negro is largely represented here at this year's convention. From all parts of the country, men who saw service overseas during the first world's war have come to participate in the festivities.

There is no color line. Hotels, restaurants, taverns and night clubs alike have thrown open their doors to the visiting throng. The parade Tuesday started at 9 a.m. and lasted until far into the night. It was a colorful and spectacular event. Few legion posts above the Mason and Dixon line were without Negro representatives.

Speakers Echo Keynote

It was sounded by Governor Julius Heil of Wisconsin and Mayor Carl F. Zeidler in their addresses of welcome and by United States Senator Harold H. Burton of Ohio and other speakers.

Said Governor Heil, as the Legionnaires cheered:

"United as never before, 130,000,000 loyal Americans stand ready to protect and defend against all aggressors this beloved country of ours. It is a wonderful thing that you are able to meet like this in peaceful assemblage at a time when the very spirit of democracy is threatened."

The duty of industry, labor, business and government is to unite in thought, understanding and action, pleaded Mayor Zeidler, who referred to the "ruthless warfare" and "the desperate character of fighting in Europe between the western democracies and Hitler's Nazis."

DETROIT, Sept. 13.—Negro and white unity to smash Hitlerism was the theme of speeches by Negro State Senator Charles Diggs, and State Senator Stanley Nowak, at a joint picnic to further their joint candidacy for Detroit City Council which was attended by more than 4,000 people at Paris Park last Sunday.

Senator Diggs called upon the Negro people to join hands with the whites in joint struggle against the menace of freedom and democracy, Hitler.

"Only through determined struggle and united ranks, supporting the policy of all aid to Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China, those nations fighting to smash Hitler, can our own freedom and liberty be safeguarded," said Diggs.

Senator Nowak, speaking of the mounting organized movement among the Polish people against Hitlerism, said he greatly appreciated the stirring appeal of his fellow State Senator Charles Diggs.

Nowak denounced the appeasement forces in America and pointed to the extreme urgency of defeating their well-financed efforts. "There is not one of them, the Lindberghs, Wheelers, Coughlins, Gerald L. K. Smiths and the whole pack of them, that the auto workers have not seen in full cry against when they were fighting to unionize the auto plants," he said.

A Beginning Against Job Discrimination

• News of the first breach in the wall of job-discrimination against Negro workers in national defense is a tribute to the persistent struggles of the Negro people and their white supporters which resulted in the President's recent executive order. The Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. at Chester, Pa., has announced that it will increase employment of Negroes by 100 per cent, integrating them into skilled jobs. Likewise, the Cramp Shipbuilding Co. has declared that 100 Negro workers are to be trained for highly skilled courses in anticipation of employment at its plant.

Although small, this is a significant beginning toward the breakdown of a pernicious policy used not only against Negro Americans, but other minority groups including the foreign-born.

With Hitler's unprovoked assault upon the Soviet Union, the national and social security of this country are now greatly endangered. Those who practice job discrimination, and thus thwart the utilization of all the country's human resources, are themselves guilty of imperilling the fight against Hitlerism at home and abroad. The monopoly employers, the munition makers and defense manufacturers, who carry out a policy of job discrimination, are undermining the welfare of the entire population and should be dealt with sternly under President Roosevelt's executive order.

The fight for employment of Negroes, and against all manifestations of jim-crowism in the armed forces and civil life, is an integral part of the fight against Hitlerism here and everywhere. The Negro people represent one of the most potent anti-fascist sections of the population, and their heartstrings are touched as never before by Hitler's attack upon the one country where there is freedom for all minority groups.

These two encouragements in the fight against job discrimination should be utilized by the Negro people and all other progressive and labor forces to see that observance of the President's executive order becomes a uniform reality throughout the land.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Abolishing U. S. Jim Crow

There is every indication that President Roosevelt meant business when he issued the order banning discrimination in Federal jobs. This story from Washington is a case in point.

"Five Negroes were sent to the War Department to take positions as clerks or stengographers. The personnel director refused to accept them. They, in turn, notified a high-ranking Government official (believed to have been Secretary Reynolds at the White House) and the order went back to the War Department to place these applicants on the job or else there would be a new personnel administrator in the War Department the next morning. They went to work."

Two things are evident in the placement of the five Negroes in the war department. First, discrimination and segregation in the setup are unnecessary and can be done away with, if persons in authority issue the proper orders, and second, Negroes must stand up and fight for their rights if they expect them to be respected.

Obviously, the personnel director of the war department would not have hired the Negroes if he hadn't understood the White House meant business, but the matter would not have gone back to the White House for additional pressure if someone had not been determined to see that the President's order was obeyed.

In issuing executive orders prohibiting discrimination in defense plants and in Federal Civil Service, President Roosevelt has made available to Negroes thousands of jobs from which they have previously been barred.

Whether they get these jobs will depend on their own activity. Personnel directors in government departments, long accustomed to turning Negroes down, are not going to be any to eager to mix their staffs, nor are officials in defense plants going to put down the welcome mat for Negroes.

But the chief executive has decreed that discrimination must go; by his action, he has said The United States must set the pattern for true Democracy if it proposes to seek the establishment of true Democracy throughout the world.

It is now the Negro's task to test this new pronouncement of the President. He must demand jobs in defense industry, and he must also demand his share of jobs in our federal government. Any attempt to prevent his integration into these divisions must be reported at once. The old practice of withdrawing to avoid embarassment must be discontinued. The other fellow must be put on the defensive.

Complaints In N. Y., Chicago To Be Heard

Secretary's Desk Piled High With Correspondence

WASHINGTON—(A N P)— The six man OPM Fair committee made its first call on President Roosevelt Wednesday morning, accompanied by the executive secretary, Lawrence Cramer. Absent were Philip Murray of the CIO and William Green of the A. F. of L. John Brophy substituted for Murray. Their discussion with the President was brief, but they presented the recommendations of the Council of Personnel Administrators which moved to eliminate discrimination against colored persons in the hiring of goverment workers.

Mark Ethridge, the chairman said the committee had received only scattering complaints to date but these were being investigated.

LOS ANGELES HEARING

Oct. 1 and 2 have been set as the dates for the committee meeting in Los Angeles, where it will conduct an investigation on complaints against discrimination against minority groups.

Similar hearings are scheduled for New York City and Chicago but no date has been set for these.

The committee revealed that it had received reports of discriminatory practices in several areas, including the West Coast aviation industries. Open sessions will hear complaints from organizations and individuals and then hold conferences on the problems presented with the government's training, labor supply and employment agencies in that area.

Col. F. J. McSherry, director of OPM's Defense training branch, told the committee that he is immediately placing 200 new Negro trainees in west coast schools in anticipation of future needs resulting from changes employment policies on the part of some defense industries.

NEW YORK CASES PREPARED

New York has been reported to the committee where four companies are said to be discriminating in employment. Chairman Etheridge and Lawrence Cramer were instructed to prepare these cases for action by the committee.

Sec. Cramer's desk is piled high with correspondence and complaints which yet have not been gone into. His secretary is busy with the details of the committee, having to reply to all letters, those seeking positions with the committee, of which there are quite a number and other complaints.

Several newspaper men have applied to the committee, it is reported, for positions, investigation, etc., and after discussing the applications in conference, they are referred to Mr. Cramer's office for reply.

Sidney Hillman Sends Letters To All Holders Of Defense Contracts

APR 18 1941

Urges Them to Use All Available Negro Workers Before Recruiting Labor From Outside Local Areas

WASHINGTON. — Declaring that bans against Negro employment and training are extremely wasteful of our human resources and prevent a total effort for national defense, the Office of Production Management this week urged all holders of defense contracts to utilize available Negro labor resources in their own communities before recruiting additional labor from outside their local areas.

"In many localities," OPM stated in a letter to all defense contractors, "qualified and available Negro workers are either being restricted to unskilled jobs, or barred from defense employment entirely.

"Because of this situation, Negro workers of skills and aptitudes are not being included in many of the training programs for defense. Such practices are extremely wasteful of our human resources and prevent a total effort for national defense. They result in unnecessary migration of labor, in high rates of labor turnover, and they increase our present and future housing needs and social problems for defense workers." APR 18 1941

The full text of the letter, which was signed by Sidney Hillman, Associate Director, follows:

To All Holders Of Defense Contracts:

"Current reports on labor market developments indicate skilled labor shortages in a number of fields vital to defense production. This trend towards stringency, apparently acute in many sections, threatens to become more general within the next three months. Artificial factors, however, are tending to aggravate this increasingly serious situation. In some of the occupations in which employers have reported shortages, for instance, there are good workers available who are not being hired solely because of their racial identity.

"In many localities, qualified and available Negro workers are either being restricted to unskilled jobs, or barred from defense employment entirely. Because of this situation, Negro workers of skills and aptitudes are not being included in many of the training programs for defense.

"Such practices are extremely wasteful of our human resources and prevent a total effort for national defense. They result in unnecessary migration of labor, in high rates of labor turnover, and they increase our present and future housing needs and social problems for defense workers.

"All holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.

"The Office of Production Management expects defense contractors to utilize all available local labor resources before resorting to the recruiting of additional labor from outside their local areas. Our programs of training and labor clearance are being established in accordance with such a policy. APR 18 1941

"In many sections of the nation there are today available labor reserves of Negro workers. Plans for their training and employment in capacities commensurate with their individual skills and aptitudes should be undertaken at once."

APR 12 1941

A Congressional Committee headed by Congressman A. J. May (D. Ky.) of the House Military Affairs Committee, Wednesday, heard protests from various sections of the country in connection with discriminatory practices of scores of plants holding billions of dollars in National Defense contracts. APR 12 1941

This matter was brought to the attention of the committee through the action of the National Negro Council, directed by Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employees.

Confronted with hundreds of letters of protest from Negroes and under questioning by Congressman Paul W. Shafer (R. Mich.), Sidney Hillman, associate-director general of the Office of Production Management, professed no personal prejudice or toleration of injustice.

Approves Training Plan

Mr. Hillman said, "We are familiar with this racial situation and not only have we issued orders prohibiting discrimination in employment on account of race, but we are right now giving further study to implementing our instructions. We have approved a plan to provide equal training for Negroes to qualify for the 250,000 skilled workers needed in the expanded airplane industry to meet immediate National Defense needs."

At this point Congressman Shafer reminded Director Hillman that Congress has the power to pass additional legislation to guarantee and enforce all Americans constitutional rights for a job and full representation regardless of race or color in defense contracts.

Talked With Kindelberger

William Knudson, director of the OPM, pointed out in a half-hour conference with a committee of the National Negro Council, following his testimony before the Congressional committee, that he had talked personally with J. H. Kindelberger, president and general manager of the North American Aviation, Inc., who will head a huge bomber plant in Kansas City, and whose recent action in stating he would hire Negroes only as "janitors," aroused 5,000 Negroes to a mass demonstration.

Mr. Knudsen said he has known Kindelberger for a number of years and felt sure Negroes would be given consideration in employment.

He was also insistent that his past record as head of General Motors shows he had given employment to thousands of Negro workers and he further recognized their fine workmanship and dependability. APR 12 1941

He denied having any interest in denying an American his rights on account of color nor would he fail in any instance to use all his powers, personal and official, with any industrialist or labor leader who practiced discrimination in this hour of the nation's defense program.

Detroit Group In Blast

DETROIT.—While most people here are still commenting favorably about the radio program over a nation-wide hookup sponsored by the Urban League Sunday, March 20, at which time a plea was made for jobs for Negroes in industry in connection with the defense program, one organization here known as the Atlas Power group, strikes a sour note and severely criticises the program in particular and the Negro in general.

The Atlas Power group, headed by Arthur Reed, is circulating leaflets entitled, "Claim Your Heritage", with a sub-head: "Don't Let Injury Follow Insult". After having made an overture of no apologies for the statements, the leaflet said of the "supposedly Negro leaders": "We heard 'Mammy' Ethel Waters, Uncle Toms and the professional flunkies, Bill Bojangles' Robinson, Rochester, Joe Louis Barrow and others. Such a program was the most dastardly insult and show of ignorance ever heaped upon the heads of a race or a group of people." APR 17 1941

The pamphlet takes a slap at ministers, churches, religion and Negro business. He says Negroes have no right to even dare to approach the great industrial leaders while Negroes will spend $35,000 to $100,000 for amusement places for "a pleasure drunk race."

"Our most worthy champion, Joe Louis", the leaflet expounds, "and even his managers have no background but that of the average poor Negro, yet thousands of the same class of which they were birthed stand by and see them squander thousands of dollars on such things as golf links, amusement farm, riding academy, club houses and petty insurance companies."

Mr. Reed, head of the Atlas Power group, is an inventor of sorts. He has a brake which he has been endeavoring to manufacture for some time. The sale of stock in the company he represents has not been satisfactory and it seems that the group is sore with the world because the race cannot see the prospects of the company's future development. He strikes at the ministers because, as the leaflet says, the preachers would not allow him to sell the idea in their churches and solicit funds for its manufacture.

The power group has a yen to build factories and employ the masses of Negroes and wants it to be done with Negro capital, having refused white interests. They say the thing that has kept the race poor is the fact that "we have $200,000,000 worth of churches and $198,000,000 worth of Masonic, Pythian, Odd Fellow, Elks and Woodmen temples and lodge property, but not a penny for industries of our own."

Navy To Continue Anti-Negro Policy

Detroit, Mich.—In a letter to Dr. J. J. McClendon, vice chairman of local draft board No. 3, the Navy department has reaffirmed its anti-Negro attitude.

The letter, signed by C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, states once more "the Navy Department, for some time past, has refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch.

Dr. McClendon had written the Secretary of the Navy asking information upon application of Negro youths for training in the United States Naval Aviation Reserve. The Nimitz letter stated:

"As you no doubt are aware, the Navy Department has, for some time past, refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch. This policy was instituted in the interest of harmony and efficiency aboard ship after many years of experience. The principles which dictated the adoption of that policy apply equally to the appointment of Negroes as officers, either in the Regular Navy or the Navy Reserve. This is no reflection upon Negroes, either as a race or individually. It is simply a matter of practicability. One does not install a part in a machine, no matter how excellent that part may be in itself, unless it will fit and work smoothly with the other parts. That' frankly, covers the Navy Department's attitude on this question. Negro officers aboard ship would form a small unassimilable minority which, despite anything we could do would inevitably form a source of discord that would be harmful to the Service." APR 4 1941

Dr. McClendon wrote, also, to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, who replied that he was "in complete agreement" with Dr. McClendon's letter to the Secretary of the Navy, and was writing himself to the Secretary.

DEFENSE JIM-CROW MUST GO

There is rank discrimination against Negroes in every department of the government, and this is common knowledge in Washington and elsewhere.

The Navy, which is asking 25,000 pilots, bars Negroes from every place except the kitchen.

The Army has recently made a superficial concession by placing Negroes in various branches of the service, but fundamentally there has been no change whatever but only an extension of the borders of segregation.

Negroes should be more concerned than they are about this wholesale, government-blessed jim-crowism and discrimination in the manufacture, transportation and use of armaments and munitions. APR 17 1941

CAN THE PRESIDENT END DEFENSE DISCRIMINATION?

Two of the most baffling problems confronting the United States today in the midst of its great defense program are the numerous strikes occurring in various industries throughout the nation holding government contracts, and the rank discrimination in all branches of the War Department and in the defense program against the American Negro.

Indications point to certain definite facts that our federal government cannot overlook if our defense program is to be perfected. Labor, through strikes, is demonstrating a protest against industry for some reasons which they call unsatisfactory to organized labor. The American Negro, through protest, has spoken out against discrimination in the defense program. All of this leads to one question since it is necessary that national unity come about in order to promote the defense program. That question is: Can the President of the United States end defense discrimination against the American Negro? The President has the power as chief executive in war times to issue an executive order to abolish discrimination in the Army, Navy, Marines, Air Corps and on all defense contracts awarded by the Federal Government to the various industries and manufacturers throughout the nation. The President can declare open shop in all industries holding government contracts and can cancel all contracts with industries discriminating against American citizens on account of color or race. Such procedure is not new in American history. It has been used before in times of defense emergencies and before national unity comes about in this crisis, it more than likely will have to be employed again. The nation is beginning to ask this question: "Why does Mr. Roosevelt, who is unquestionably a great humanitarian, and who undoubtedly believes in justice for the Negro, and who is positively against class distinction, and who has a certain definite program based on high ideals, not issue some order through his executive power in the interest of national unity and national defense? The President has acted in other emergencies, and it is believed by many that he should act now in one of the greatest emergencies that has faced the United States since he first took office. APR 18 1941

More and more the nation is realizing that the absolute necessity for national unity will force America to become aware of the danger that constantly threatens the democratic ideals at home. Western civilization cannot save democracy abroad when there is a laxity of its own democracy in its practicability and service to its own citizenry. When Hitler boasts that he adopted the pattern for his treatmeint of the Jews in Germany from the treatment accorded the Negroes in the United States we see a sad, sad picture. And it is high time that America clear its good name of hypocrisy in the practice of democracy. APR 18 1941

The Colored world has been the center of attraction in this entire conflict of Europe. The darker races of the world have certain ideals which they live for and which they are willing to die for. But it is up to their white brothers to determine whether democracy shall win or whether the dictators shall win, which leads men to a very simple lesson that they should not forget—and that is that all men are created in the image of God and of one blood, and that God made all the nations of the earth that will safeguard our national defense program; In America politics must be laid aside and a more serious approach must be made toward stopping so

The Negro has received severe criticism for his much internal strife if national unity is to come about. Would it be better to appease the die-hard Southern anti-Negro politicians or to make the hard boiled Southern Negro-haters realize that this country is on the verge of war, and that twelve million American white men has to strike for a few more cents in wages? We again raise the question: Can the President of the United States end defense discrimination, and will he end it? APR 18 1941

"Our most worthy champion, Joe Louis", the leaflet expounds, "and even his managers have no background but that of the average poor Negro, yet thousands of the same class of which they were birthed stand by and see them squander thousands of dollars on such things as golf links, amusement farm, riding academy, club houses and petty insurance companies."

Mr. Reed, head of the Atlas Power group, is an inventor of sorts. He has a brake which he has been endeavoring to manufacture for some time. The sale of stock in the company he represents has not been satisfactory and it seems that the group is sore with the world because the race cannot see the prospects of the company's future development. He strikes at the ministers because, as the leaflet says, the preachers would not allow him to sell the idea in their churches and solicit funds for its manufacture.

The power group has a yen to build factories and employ the masses of Negroes and wants it to be done with Negro capital, having refused white interests. They say the thing that has kept the race poor is the fact that "we have $200,000,000 worth of churches and $198,000,000 worth of Masonic, Pythian, Odd Fellow, Elks and Woodmen temples and lodge property, but not a penny for industries of our own."

Navy To Continue Anti-Negro Policy

Detroit, Mich.—In a letter to Dr. J. J. McClendon, vice chairman of local draft board No. 3, the Navy department has reaffirmed its anti-Negro attitude.

The letter, signed by C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, states once more "the Navy Department, for some time past, has refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch.

Dr. McClendon had written the Secretary of the Navy asking information upon application of Negro youths for training in the United States Naval Aviation Reserve. The Nimitz letter stated:

"As you no doubt are aware, the Navy Department has, for some time past, refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch. This policy was instituted in the interest of harmony and efficiency aboard ship after many years of experience. The principles which dictated the adoption of that policy apply equally to the appointment of Negroes as officers, either in the Regular Navy or the Navy Reserve. This is no reflection upon Negroes, either as a race or individually. It is simply a matter of practicability. One does not install a part in a machine, no matter how excellent that part may be in itself, unless it will fit and work smoothly with the other parts. That' frankly, covers the Navy Department's attitude on this question. Negro officers aboard ship would form a small unassimilable minority which, despite anything we could do would inevitably form a source of discord that would be harmful to the Service."

APR 4 1941

Dr. McClendon wrote, also, to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, who replied that he was "in complete agreement" with Dr. McClendon's letter to the Secretary of the Navy, and was writing himself to the Secretary.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (UP).—A Chicago draft board, in a formal ruling, agreed today with charges of a draftee that "deep-seated prejudices" against Negroes exist in the U. S. Army and Navy.

The opinion was given by local board No. 81 in rejecting the appeal of Ernest Calloway, Negro educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of America (Red Caps), from classification under 1A rating.

Calloway had contended he did not want to become a member of the armed forces because of racial discriminations. He said he based his objections "not only on religious grounds but also because such discrimination assigns Negroes to special undesirable types of service."

It its decision, the local board also ruled that Calloway could not appeal to the State Appeals Board

"It is the opinion of the board," the ruling said, "that the social ills of which Mr. Calloway complains are true, but this board is without power to remedy the said ills and affords no forum for their discussion and redress . . . therefore, the registrant is hereby placed in Class 1A."

Calloway said the board had "arbitrarily cut off all appeal and tied me up in red tape." He said he would investigate further legal steps in an attempt to appeal the ruling.

NEGROES ARE SEEN IGNORED IN DEFENSE

FEB 20 1941

Discrimination Is Charged at Urban League Meeting

Charges of discrimination against Negroes, both in the nation's armed forces and in defense industries, were made yesterday at the thirtieth annual meeting of the National Urban League at the Russell Sage Foundation, 130 East Twenty-second Street.

President Roosevelt was urged to call a conference to investigate and study methods to permit a fuller cooperation of Negroes in the nation's plans for war preparations.

Eugene K. Jones, executive secretary, in his annual report of league activities, declared that "we realize that the safeguarding of democracy demands the fullest possible contribution from all groups and that there is nothing that the Negro can possibly do today that is quite so important as contributing to our nation's welfare by aiding in national defense."

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, member of the National Advisory Committee on Selective Service, condemned segretation of Negroes along racial lines in the nation's armed forces. He urged Negroes to fight a "three-front war"; a war for citizenship rights, for conservation of the morale of Negroes as a race and for increased industrial opportunities for Negroes.

At the annual elections meeting of the league, the following were named to office:

New Members of the Executive Board—Judge Myles A. Paige, Court of Special Sessions, New York; Mrs. Regina M. Andrews, librarian, New York; Bishop William Scarlett, St. Louis; Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Officers of the Executive Board (elected for one year)—L. Hollingsworth Wood, president; C. C. Spaulding, vice president; Lloyd Garrison, vice president; Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, vice president; E. P. Roberts, vice president William H. Baldwin, vice president; Myles A. Paige, secretary; Charles Poletti, treasurer; Regina M. Andrews, assistant treasurer.

NAACP TAKES UP CALLOWAY DRAFT OBJECTION CASE

JAN 25 1941

Board Denies Jim Crow Appeal; Says It Can't Remedy Social Ills

CHICAGO — The local branch of the NAACP announced that it will take action in the case of Ernest Calloway, whose request for exemption from military service because "the United States Army denies me or any other Negro the right and opportunity to make an equal contribution to the welfare and defense of my country," was denied in a draft board ruling here Wednesday, January 8.

Calloway, educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of America (Red Caps), had his case officially referred to the NAACP on January 9, according to Ira Williams, president of the branch, after local draft board No. 81 had also ruled that the union official could not appeal his case to the State Appeals Board.

Admitting the truth of a statement made by Calloway January 1 in a letter to the board pointing out that "deep-seated prejudice," exist against me and other Negroes in the U.S. Army and Navy," board officials nevertheless ruled in a formal opinion handed down January 8 that:

"It is the opinion of the board, that the social ills of which Mr. Calloway complains are true but this board is without power to remedy the said ills and affords no forum for their discussion and redress. . . . therefore, the registrant is hereby placed in Class 1A."

In a letter to the New York headquarters of the NAACP, explaining the development of his case received a copy of the Selective Service questionnaire from the board, up to the present time, Calloway said:

Explains Reason

"In filling out the questionnaire, I indicated that I was a conscientious objector, and in doing this I attempted to amplify for the board, the possible trend my objections might take. I did this in the form of drawing a line from the phrase 'religious training and beliefs,' to the margin of the page and indicated certain social concepts which were my intention to incorporate into 'religious training and beliefs.' I placed a check in both squares to indicate my unwillingness to serve in any capacity. Also an informal statement was attached to the questionnaire (not sworn affidavit) outlining certain racial inequalities existing in the armed forces.

"In injecting the question of racial discrimination in the armed forces," he said, "it wasn't my intention to narrow it down to a purely 'racial issue,' as was later assumed by my draft board, but was prepared to consider it in a much broader perspective. . . "

Contending that the board did not have before it the full facts, and in denying him the right of appeal it acted in an "arbitrary" manner "contrary to the provisions established by the Selective Service Act," Calloway said:

"I was under the impression that I was supposed to receive from my Board Form 47 upon which to establish my formal case of conscientous objection. This I did not receive, but instead a card which placed me in 1-A classification with the instruction that I had five days in which to appeal this classification, if I desired. Attempting to comply with the five-day limitations, I presented the appeal notice before my board.

Learns from Newspaper

"Through a newspaper report, Friday, January 3, I learned that the board decided that my objection did not come within the definitions of conscientious objection to war by reason of religious training and beliefs, and refused to allow it, and further held that my case cannot be considered by the Draft Appeals Board.

"I maintained that I have not presented any formal case upon which the board may possibly arrive at a fair decision. As to the procedure the board has followed: it is arbitrary and contrary to the provisions established by the Selective Service Act and the instructions (form 5) issued to draftees at the time of registration. The informal memorandum I presented was merely to prepare the board for my formal and much broader case of conscientious objection on the grounds of religious training and beliefs which incorporate certain social concepts, and I feel that the board exceeded its authority when it refused to supply me with form 47 and to arbitrarily render its decision in the absence of this form and without proper hearing."

The complete text of the "informal statement" outlining his objections, which Calloway sent to the draft board January 1, follows:

"My objections of conscience to-wards participation in the Selective Service Training program extends beyond the pale of religious training and belief, and is based upon certain fundamental social concepts which are unalterably opposed to racial discrimination, be it in the army or the civilian life of the nation.

"As a Negro, I have accepted many of the responsibilities of my limited citizenship without benefit of a number of its blessings. To me, the present United States Army is the most anti-democratic institution in American governmental life. Its callous disregard for the elementary principles of fair-play with Negro citizens, reeks of 18th Century 'mercenarism' instead of an army, by, for and of the people.

Army Out of Step

"The constant refusal of this military branch of our government to pursue a non-discriminatory policy in its attitude towards all the citizens is far out of portion with the large measure of social, economic and political progress that has been made during the past few years in America. For a number of decades, the U.S. Army has withstood democratization, especially in its relations to Negroes, and there is no visible indication of an immediate change in this vicious racial status quo despite the fact that American democracy is preparing for its greatest struggle against the forces of ignorance, prejudice and dictatorship.

"The practice of relegating special types of service to Negroes and refusing their services in other branches of the armed forces is neither conducive to effective morale or obeying the spirit and letter of the constitution of the United States. When the U. S. Army denies me or any other Negro the right and opportunity to make an equal contribution to the welfare and defense of my country, it violates a basic right guaranteed to me by the Constitution.

"Therefore to insist upon my participation in the Selective Service Training program without giving me the guarantees of equality of citizenship in the operation of the armed service places certain liabilities upon my honor, integrity and self-respect. For these reasons, I cannot accept the responsibility of taking the oath upon induction into military service under the present anti-democratic structure of the U.S. Army, and ask to be exempted from military training until such time that my contribution and participation in the defense of my country can be made on a basis of complete equality."

Urge U.S. Senate Probe Of Industrial Jim-Crow

NEW YORK, Mar. 13—(ANP)—Declaring that America cannot afford today the luxury of a race prejudice that denies it the fullest degree of support for its defense program, Walter White, secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., called on "decent Americans" to register protest for the infringements of democracy and to demand immediate authorization of a Senate investigation into the "status and treatment" of the Negro in defense.

Mr. White made this appear in letters to New York newspapers and published Thursday in the Evening Post. A scheduled address for the same night had to be forgone owing to a hurried call to Washington.

Recounting the many rebuffs Negro applicants for work in defense industries had met with as well as the segregation policy being fostered by the federal government in the armed forces, the letter implored "ordinary citizens" to be vigorous in their articulation of their belief in "genuine democracy." If we do this, he said, "we won't as a nation be so vulnerable to the taunts of being hypocrite which are daily flung at us by Nazi Germany, South America and Russia."

The letter specifically named the Grumman Aircraft corporation, the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., the Republican Aviation Corp and the Sperry company, all in New York and holding almost $200,000,000 in government contracts, as firms that deny employment to Negroes. The presence of Michael Kane, former personnel director for the discriminating American Telephone and Telegraph company, in the defense set-up was pointed to. Kane is now training consultant to the Council of National Defense.

The unwillingness of William Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management to do anything about industrial discrimination was condemned as was the refusal of many vocational schools to enroll Negroes. Adding to the prejudiceed attitude the membership ban of labor unions, Mr. White labelled the situation a "vicious circle."

RELIGION and LIFE

THE NEGRO AND NATIONAL DEFENSE

The National Defense Program has brought into sharp focus the attitude of the nation towards its Negro citizens. Both in private industry as well as in all branches of the armed forces the Negro has been against a brick wall of discrimination and denial of the right to work and to fight. Such ruthless and vicious practices employed against any other minority group would probably lead to wholesale disloyalty and fifth columnist activities.

But, alas, the American Negro is so docile, tolerant and forgiving that he is willing to go on fighting for the chance to fight and to work for the defense of the nation for which he has evinced such enduring loyalty and patriotism.

In America, perhaps, as nowhere else on earth, democracy and Christianity are on trial in their treatment of the Negro. With what gusto some Americans talk about the love of God and the brotherhood of man, while at the same time doing everything imaginable to promote enmity and strife between various groups.

To us it is inconceivable that a Christian and a patriot could acquiesce, not even to mention engaging, in the deliberate discrimination against men and women, just because in the wisdom of God these men and women happen to be born of a different racial stock.

Millions of black men have died that democracy might reach the degree of efficiency that it now enjoys, and, if it is preserved, many more will die defending and preserving what they themselves have not yet enjoyed. Indeed, the test of whether American Negroes will be given the right to fight and work on equal terms with other Americans may also be the test of whether democracy as we know it is fit to endure.

Back of this war that has so agitated the minds of the people that no single individual in the world can escape, is a war of ideologies, and there will be no victory worthy of the name until right and justice triumph, whoever may win the war of arms.—Star of Zion.

MAR 29 1941

In an interview with the jobs and training commission of the Washington Youth Council last week, Judge William Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, urged young people to "put pressure on now to clip the wings of old Jim Crow."

Hastie urged that many Negroes sign up for the flying corps as there is a possibility, if pressure is used, that the original figure of 400 Negroes will be expanded.

"We have not made a beginning, not a dent, in discrimination," declared Judge Hastie. "I am completely in sympathy with your position in this issue. I am firmly against separate units (in the army) and I feel it is extremely important that youth groups, who after all are going into the armed forces, should make their feelings on this issue vocal. I hope that young people all over the country will let Washington know that they are opposed to segregation and that they want mixed units. Then we may have made a real beginning.

Prove We Can by Doing

Because it has not been done, some persons are always ready to say it cannot be done. Conservatism is a doubting Thomas. Yet nothing is better substantiated than man's insatiable ambition which has made it possible to sum up his history in a single sentence, "They said it could not be done, but he did it."

Before the Civil war the pro-slavery crowd—and some well meaning persons who hated slavery—united in saying that the poor slaves if left to shift for themselves would perish. Yet at that time thousands of free Negroes managed to maintain themselves. Now history repeats. After decades of limited employment when Negroes are clamoring for employment according to their merits, they are met with the charge that they cannot do this or that.

The case for slavery was controverted by the free Negroes who made a living. In like manner the claim that Negroes cannot do skilled work is knocked out completely by those who are holding skilled jobs. Yet because few hearers have the facts at hand, when generalities are made it is hard for Negroes to get a chance to prove they can do skilled work, even though it is a basic American principle that a man's labor is a right.

Refusal to hire Negroes in making airplanes has become a national issue now that J. L. Kindelberger has stated categorically that the North American Aviation company will not use them even if skilled. MAR 28 1941

Negroes are doing precision work, in sciences like biology, and chemistry. They have gone through the government's apprenticeship and been advanced to the rank of mechanic in its plants. In private industry they hold key positions which indicate the highest skill. Yet because they have been kept from working on planes, this engineer of the North American company has said they cannot make them.

How can anybody say that Negroes cannot make planes? The very fact that there is no proof that they can, means also there is no proof that they cannot. Because it is easy to accept things as they are, this engineer had interposed a reason for not employing Negroes which might have gone unchallenged had not his chief showed the wolf hidden under the cloak, by saying skilled or not, Negroes would not be employed.

Negroes are indignant at this limiting of their opportunity. America is not America if discrimination on account of race can bar anybody from working. Yet a practical step comes next—Negroes must prove that they can make good. They made good when they came out of slavery. Maybe the engineer honestly thinks Negroes cannot do precision work, but the United States government thinks they can. It is so sure he can that it is assembling a Negro flying unit. That means ground crews to service the planes as well as aviators to fly them. If Negroes can make the repairs they certainly can build the planes.

Progress has always had to crawl. Race and color gives us no detour around the difficulties usual for other men. Here is a case where "they say" we cannot. The only answer is the doing. Let's go!

APR 4 - 1941

Mayor Don C. McCombs of Kansas City, Kas., joined the Negro citizens of both Kansas Cities Sunday in protesting against the plan of the North American Aviation company to bar Negroes from employment except as janitors.

The mayor read letters that he has written J. H. Kindelberger president of North American, urging that the policy of excluding Negro skilled workers be changed.

Addressing the crowd of 5,000 citizens gathered in Memorial hall to protest the North American policy, the mayor said that he was glad to see so many present in an effort to correct something "which I say, if it goes into effect, is a wrong."

APR 4 - 1941

Mayor Booed

Mayor McCombs was not scheduled to speak on the program. He sat in the upper balcony during the first half of the proceedings. Attention was called to his presence when he sent a dollar to the collection table. He was then escorted to the stage by R. B. Brown.

The mayor was booed by some in the audience as he approached the platform but as he spoke and read letters showing that he has protested the discrimination, sentiment changed and the official was applauded. APR 4 - 1941

The boos came because the mayor had told the Negro voters of Kansas City, Kas., before the bond election that he had secured from Kindelberger the promise that Negroes would receive employment in the bomber plant. At the election, the Kansans voted to purchase Fairfax airport as a testing field for the bomber plant. After Kindelberger announced that the bomber plant would have only janitorial jobs for Negroes, the Negro voters felt that they were victims of "taxation without representation" and called upon the mayor to explain the promise.

Made No Statement

Up to Sunday, Mayor McCombs, suffering a throat ailment, had made no statement to clarify his position.

Standing before the vast audience, the mayor read two letters he has written to Kindelberger, under dates of March 11 and March 24, urging that Negroes be given a fair chance for employment in the bomber plant. APR 4 - 1941

After quoting the statement the Kansas City Star published as coming from Kindelberger the mayor wrote Kindelberger on March 24:

"It is quite possible that you have been misunderstood and erroneously quoted, and for that reason I am reluctant to believe that the above statements were made by you, and I would be very much disappointed if these statements, as alleged, are correct."

In the same letter, the mayor told the North American head: "The first time I had the pleasure of meeting you and discusisng the bomber plant, I informed you, definitely, that the properties adjacent to the Fairfax district were largely populated by splendid, thrifty colored people and asked if there would be an opportunity for them to obtain employment with your organization. In answer to that question, you stated, 'I love to work good colored people.....and there will be jobs for many colored people, but I will not tolerate riff raff of any race . . . and there will be jobs for many colored people."

"Prior to the bond election, I quoted you as making the above statements and many speakers, in behalf of the bonds, assured the Negroes that the government would not discriminate in employment in its defense program. The Negro citizens of our city have relied on this statement and were satisfied at the time they voted for the bonds.... this was shown by the splendid vote given by them in support of the bonds. APR 4 1941

"May I advise you that your statement has caused various comments to be made by reputable, fair-thinking citizens, who exceedingly regret that such a policy of your company, as announced in the Kansas City Star, would be followed in the bomber plant in our city, and they are sincerely hopeful that a policy fail to all who can qualify, be established.

"The taxpayers of this city have spent thousands of dollars in providing facilities to give the Negro youth the opportunity to educate themselves for duties other than domestic or servant jobs. If there is nothing more in this American life than menial labor for the Negro youth who graduate from high schools to look forward to, then what encouragement is there for the toiling parents of these young men and women to continue to make sacrifices so that their children can be educated.

"For the above reasons, I hope that you have been misquoted. However, if the statements that have been made are the policy of your company, then I am sincerely appealing to you, not only on behalf of the colored pepole, but many white people of our city, that your organization reconsider their policy and give the Negroes in this vicinity the opportunity to obtain employment at the plant for other positions than that of the janitor." APR 4 - 1941

The mayor said that he has not received a reply from Mr. Kindelberger.

Why F. D. Won't End Defense Jim Crow

APR 12 1941

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

President Roosevelt can issue an executive order tomorrow to abolish discrimination in the Army, Navy, Air Corps, Marine, and on all defense contracts awarded by the Federal Government, on account of race or color, and discriminations against colored people would promptly end.

There is no question about this. Nor is this procedure new. It has been employed before this defense emergency. It will be used again.

Why does not the President, who is unquestionably a great humanitarian, with definite and high ideals, issue such an order in the interest of national unity and national defense?

The answer is clear. APR 12 1941

President Roosevelt, though nominally believing in justice for the colored man, has not been positively and profoundly stirred and convinced that colored people are entitled to rights, economic, political and social, like all other American citizens, and that, like white citizens, are determined to fight for them. APR 12 1941

Would Appease Them

He is perfectly willing for colored people to be appointed with the status of half-men, if they are willing to accept it. He takes this attitude, not because he thinks it is right, but in order to avoid trouble with the die-hard Southern anti-colored politicians. APR 12 1941

OPM Asks End Of Jim-Crow

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Declaring that bans against Negro employment and training are extremely wasteful of our human resources and prevent a total effort for national defense, the Office of Production Management this week urged all holders of defense contracts to utilize available Negro labor resources in their own communities before recruiting additional labor from outside their local areas. APR 16

"In many localities," OPM stated in a letter to all defense contractors, "qualified and available Negro workers are either being restricted to unskilled jobs, or barred from defense employment entirely. Because of this situation, Negro workers of skills and aptitudes are not being included in many of the training programs for defense. Such practices are extremly wasteful of our human resources and prevent a total effort for national defense. They result in unnecessary migration of labor, in high rates of labor turnover, and they increase our present and future housing needs and social problems for defense workers."

The full text of the letter, which was signed by Sidney Hillman, Associate Director, follows:

TO ALL HOLDERS OF DEFENSE CONTRACTS:

Pursuant to the decision of the Office of Production Management, I wish to advise you as follows: APR 16 1941

Current reports on labor market developments indicate skilled labor stringency in a number of fields vital to defense production. This threatens to become more general within the next three months. Artificial factors, however, are tending to aggravate this increasingly serious situation. In some of these occupations, we are informed there are good workers available who are not being hired solely because of their racial identity.

The Office of Production Management expects defense contractors to utilize ALL available local labor resources before resorting to the recruiting of additional labor from outside their local areas. Our programs of training and labor clearance are being established in accordance with such a policy. In many sections of the Nation there are today available reserves of Negro workers. Plans for their training and employment in capacities commensurate with their individual skills and aptitudes should be undertaken at once.

In many localities qualified and available Negro workers are either being restriced to unskilled jobs, or barred from defense employment entirely. Because of this situation, Negro workers of skills and aptitudes are in many instances not being included in many of the training programs for defense. Such practices are extremely wasteful of our human resources and prevent a total effort for national defense. They result in unnecessary migration of labor, in high rates of labor turnover, and they increase our present and future housing needs and social problems for defense workers.

All holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency. APR 16 1941

Yours very truly,
Sidney Hillman
Associate Director General
Office of Production Management.

KNUDSEN BLAMED FOR JIM CROW IN WAR INDUSTRIES

APR 11 1941

"Great Dane" is Said to be Making U. S. A. Adopt Biased Policy

WASHINGTON, April 10 (By A. E White for ANP)—The A-1 stumbling block between the employment of Negroes in defense industries is the head of the Office of the Production Management—William Knudsen.

Recent developments have indicated that the policy of the huge industrial plants is being patterned after the policy of the General Motors company of which Mr. Knudsen is president, and which is desultory in the matter of employing Negroes.

Other developments as brought to light in the case of the North American Aviation, Inc., case, show that the president of that company, who brought down the wrath of the entire Negro population of the country on his head by his statement that he was not going to hire any Negroes in the Kansas plant of this company, except as janitors, is merely following the dictated policy of the controlling organization of North American Aviation, which happens to be General Motors.

That the North American Aviation is a subsidiary of the General Motors group was brought out in contracts awarded this company to the extent of over $133,000,000 in the initial contracts. General Motors itself has been awarded over $600,000,000 in defense contracts.

Mr. Kindleberger, president of the Kansas company, holds his position by virtue of the actions of the parent company, therefore, his actions are guided and determined largely by the policy established.

Mr. Knudsen has been approached time after time, it is alleged by persons interested, suggesting that he could solve the situation once and for all by issuing a statement to the effect that Negroes should be employed in these industries, but his replies have been very evasive and detrimental to the inclusion of Negroes. APR 11 1941

Pressure each week in growing stronger to relieve this "bottleneck" but the "Great Dane" remains adamant and for some reason or other refuses to concede to the wishes of his assistants, all of whom realize the necessity of bringing Negroes definitely into the program.

Mr. Knudsen's policy of barring Negroes from his own establishment is being cited by industrial leaders, and inasmuch as Knudsen was appointed by the President to his powerful post as head of the Office of Production Management, these industrialists feel safe in feeling that they are following an accepted practise.

Letter to Inform Bland Numerous Highly Paid Jobs Given Race on Cantonment Construction Project

Direct denial of charges made by the Peninsula Trade and Labor union, a Negro organization, that Negro skilled workers are being discriminated against in the defense construction now under way at Fort Eustis and elsewhere in this locality, was offered yesterday by George L. Zuidema, contractors' executive officer on the Fort Eustis project.

The Negro union's charges were made in a people's forum letter published earlier this week by the Richmond Times-Dispatch. It was signed by Charles Hill, president; P. B. McCowan, vice president; Isaac Johnson, business manager; Grady Anderson, secretary; Herbert Rice, assistant secretary; Samuel Ross, treasurer; Mercer Fauntleroy, chaplain; George Sturdevant, sergeant-at-arms; S. Rice, parliamentarian; and the entire alleged membership of the union.

Zuidema's rebuttal of the accusations is contained in a letter to the constructing quartermaster at Fort Eustis, and was made public by Zuidema yesterday. This letter indicated that it is a direct reply to a letter received by the quartermaster from Representative S. Otis Bland and telegrams from various Negro organizations. It was indicated by Zuidema that the letter will be forwarded to Bland at Washington.

Zuidema's letter reveals, incidentally, that there are now 5,800 workers of various crafts and trades employed in the construction going on at Fort Eustis incident to preparations for use of the former railway artillery post as a receiving camp for draftees. It is expected that 15,000 to 18,000 soldiers will be quartered there some time next spring.

The construction is being done by Pettyjohn-Weddle - Hofheimer Construction company.

'Defiance' Charged

In the Negro union's letter it is charged that Zuidema has evinced a "defiant" attitude in refusing to employ any skilled Negro workmen on the Eustis project. It also is charged that when the employment office issued a call by radio for 1,200 carpenters for the Eustis job last December, Negro carpenters who applied were informed by Hornlein that no Negroes were wanted; and that when a similar radio call for 2,000 carpenters was issued Jan. 31, all Negro carpenters who responded "were emphatically told again that Negroes were not wanted. The same situation applies to every skilled trade on defense projects in this vicinity."

The letter further avers that "as loyal American citizens we demand the right to contribute our skills in the cause of national defense, as well as our lives, if necessary."

Hornlein said that, insofar as the carpenters' trade is concerned, it is true that Negroes were not accepted.

"The call was for white carpenters," he said, "and we try to furnish what is wanted. If you ask for potatoes in a grocery store, they don't give you onions." He added that both white and Negro labor is used, but that the contractor is attempting so to arrange the roll as to obtain maximum efficiency.

Hornlein, however, emphasized that a large number of Negro workers on both skilled and unskilled trades are employed at Fort Eustis at present, many of them receiving as high as $1.10 an hour. The wage rate was confirmed by Zuidema in a telephone conversation yesterday.

Zuidema's letter says, apropos of the "defiant attitude" charge, says "I assure you and all others concerned that I have received each colored representative . . . with courtesy . . . and from each representative's attitude he was apparently satisfied at the conclusion . ."

Of the 5,800 men now working on the Eustis project, Zuidema's letter says approximately 2,300 are Negroes, both skilled and unskilled, and "we are hiring and have hired 100 per cent colored cement finishers, yarners, caulkers, asphalt rakers, and broom operators. Skilled colored mechanics are placing all of our sewer lines and a large proportion of our water lines, doing practically all of our road work, and colored laborers are doing all of our excavating, backfilling, and placing of all concrete."

Emphasizing the magnitude of the project and the time-emergency element, and the need for cooperation, Zuidema say his entire action will be done "after careful consideration of each problem as it arises, striving always to serve my God and my country to the best of my ability."

The readers'-column letter of the Negro union said:

Union's Statement

"We, the undersigned officers and members of the Peninsula Trade and Labor union, an organization of 250 Negro skilled mechanics, voice our indignant protest against the open and discriminatory practices of all contractors holding government national defense contracts on the Virginia Peninsula. We specifically call your attention to the defiant attitude of George L. Zuidema, contractor's executive officer and sole hiring agent, Fort Eustis, Va., in refusing to employ any skilled Negro workmen on the Fort Eustis defense project.

"In December, 1940, at the request of Fort Eustis contractors, the Virginia State employment office in Newport News issued an urgent radio call for 1,200 carpenters. All Negro carpenters who applied were informed by E. P. Hornlein, employment manager, that no Negroes were wanted. On Jan. 31, a call for 2,000 carpenters was issued through the same source. All Negro carpenters who responded were emphatically told again that Negroes were not wanted. The same situation applies to every skilled trade on defense projects in this vicinity.

"Official representatives of this union have repeatedly by personal conference with George L. Zuidema sought employment for skilled Negro craftsmen with no success. We urgently request an immediate investigation of the situation at Fort Eustis and other defense projects in this area. As loyal American citizens we demand the right to contribute our skills in the cause of national defense, as well as our lives, if necessary."

Text of Reply

"With reference to the letter received by you from Congressman S. O. Bland dated Feb. 4, 1941, and attached copies of telegrams from various colored organizations, the following is submitted for your information.

"On several occasions, I have been visited by and conferred with representatives of different colored labor organizations. As I recall Charles Hill, representative of the Peninsula Trade and Labor union, visited me to discuss the possibility of placing colored carpenters on this project. I was advised by him that he had 50 colored carpenters available.

"It is noted in the telegram to the Hon. S. O. Bland from Hill and others, that they have an organization of 250 Negro skilled mechanics of which 50 were carpenters.

"I especialy note that the congressman's attention is specifically called to my defiant attitude. I assure you and all others concerned that I have received each colored representative who has come to see me with courtesy, giving him all the time he desired, discussing with him the different problems he presented and from each representative's attitude he was apparently satisfied at the conclusion of our conference.

"It is further noted that I, as the contractors' executive officer and sole hiring agent on this project, have refused to employ any skilled Negro workmen. You are aware that this is not a statement of fact. We are employing skilled colored workmen on this project. At this writing, we have approximately 5,800 employes, skilled and unskilled. We are hiring and have hired 100 per cent colored cement finishers, yarners, caulkers, asphalt rakers and broom operators. Skilled colored mechanics are placing all of our sewer lines and a large proportion of our water lines, doing practically all of our road work, and colored laborers are doing all of our excavating, backfilling, and placing of all concrete. From the above it will be readily understood that we are hiring skilled and unskilled colored labor to a large extent.

"As you are aware, we have a very large project to complete and a very short time in which to do it. We have organized the different trades and labor in order that the highest degree of efficiency could be obtained. The status of the project at this time proves the efficiency of our organization which is producing results and I may add, with cooperation from everyone concerned.

"This is an emergency project which requires the best effort and cooperation that can be obtained from the people employed, both white and colored, with a minimum amount of agitation and criticism We are bending every effort to satisfy each individual. We endeavor to secure the maximum efficiency and production, giving each individual his opportunity to share in the project. Our operation on this job has not, and does not invite or justify unfounded critical charges of discriminatory practices.

"We realize the seriousness of the situation we are placed in due to the present foreign wars. We hope and are striving with all of our mental and physical power to push this project forward. We feel that we are serving the best interests of our country and as stated by Hill, I am not only willing to serve in my present capacity, but in any other position that my government and country desires.

"I have arranged a conference with the editor of a colored newspaper published by Haynes, who I understand is a high and upright citizen of Newport News, to be held Friday morning, Feb. 7 at 10. At that time it is my intention to discuss all of the problems and to endeavor to ascertain the reason for any criticism which has been so freely directed at me. My personal opinion is that such criticism is undeserved. I am neither biased nor have I closed my mind to a free and open discussion of the problems presented. I wish to further assure you that everything which I have undertaken or done in the past, or which I may anticipate doing in the future will be done according to the best dictates of my mind after careful consideration of each problem as it arises, striving always to serve my God and my country to the best of my ability."

Whites Fight Plan for Soldiers' Center

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. — (ANP)—A group of white citizens sent a letter to the city council this week protesting against the establishment here of a recreational center for colored soldiers from nearby Camp Custer.

Because there is no suitable place for soldiers of the 184th Field Artillery to congregate when they come to this city, the council appropriated funds to provide a recreational center. What will be done now is problematical.

MAR 15 1941

LANSING, Mich.—Declaring the present emergency to be one calling for national unity, in which "every citizen must be permitted to contribute his utmost," Governor Murray D. VanWagoner has called on Michigan industry to drop all racial bars in its employment policy.

MAR 15 1941

In a letter recently directed to all companies in Michigan holding defense contracts, he cited the announced policy of the National Defense Advisory Commission to use the nation's full man-power in developing an adequate defense, and continued:

"Every opportunity should be given colored citizens for work and on-the-job training. Thousands of qualified colored workers, registered with the State Employment Service, are anxious, able and available to contribute their share toward national safety.

"I strongly urge both employer and worker to extend to every loyal citizen, regardless of race or color, the right to participate in our industrial efforts of production for national defense."

Surgeon General Says All Must Serve in Dixie

Can't Conceive of Mixed Professional Staff, He Says

(By ANP)
WASHINGTON

No thought will be given to assigning colored doctors, dentists or nurses to centers where they might at any time be called upon to serve white soldiers, according to an official army announcement.

This determination to confine colored professional personnel to troops of their own race was emphatically declared by Surgeon General McGhee, Friday, during a conference with members of a committee from the National Medical Association.

All Bound for Dixie

General McGhee indicated further that the 120 physicians, 44 dentists and 56 nurses to be used in the army would all be assigned to posts in the South, where Fourth Corps Area troops will be stationed as follows:

Fort Bragg, N.C., 8,000; Camp Davis, N.C., 4,500; Camp Livingstone, near Alexandria, La., 6,000, and Camp Claiborne, La., 3,000.

The general, professing to represent Northern sentiment, said that under no circumstances could he see colored and white doctors working together in the same hospital or as examiners of recruits.

Can't Picture World War Scenes

Advised that colored physicians had served white soldiers in recruiting stations during the World War, he said it was inconceivable to him that colored doctors could work on an examining team with white doctors, and that no attempt would be made to integrate them into white medical teams.

The conference, arranged by William Hastie, a civilian aide to the Secretary of War, was attended by Dr. R. A. Dixon, dean of Howard Dental School; Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretary, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; Dr. A. N. Vaughn, president of the NMA, and A. W. Dent, president of the National Conference of Hospital Administrators.

Army officials present, besides General McGhee, were General Fairbanks of the dental service, and General Love of the medical service.

Say Negroes Being Barred From Work

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—(AP)—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said today that negroes were "almost uniformly shut out of employment" in defense industries.

In a telegram to William Green, AFL president who is now in Miami, Fla., for the federation's mid-winter executive council meeitng, the association said this discrimination was particularly true in airplane manufacturing, "because the aeronautical workers union constitution bars negroes from membership."

In a statement, the association asserted that unless some labor unions ceased discriminating against negroes, negro citizens would "have no other recourse" than to seek congressional legislation denying such unions the rights of collecting bargaining.

The AFL council was urged to lead the way in breaking down discrimination within the ranks of the AFL.

Unity and the Negro

To The News and Courier:

We, 13,000,000 negroes are justly confused and disturbed to hear our American leaders preaching and pleading for national unity, while we see them forever promoting the practice of racial division—isolation.

But, we realize that America's Jim-Crow policy is in direct accord with Communazie foreign policy to "confuse by propaganda, to divide by corruption, and to paralyze by intimidation". And it is as clear as noon-day that foreign agents are adding fuel to the Jim-Crow fire, inserting further the wedge of division.

Our countless deeds of bravey and heroism have served as an expressive plea for freedom and justice. In every battle for democratic superiority, negroes have turned the tide in America's favor.

Yet was are ignored, neglected, forgotten.

We know that American democracy must prove superior before national defense can or will command the respect of dictatorships. That's why we negroes relentlessly protest against, and expose the truth about, the corruptive evil of America's Jim-Crow policy.

Hearings On Discrimination In U. S. Defense Start April 1

WASHINGTON (SNS)—Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate committee on Education and Labor Monday announced the membership of the sub-committee to hold preliminary hearings on S. R. 75, which provides for an exhaustive investigation of discrimination against the Negro in the national defense program.

Chairman of the sub-committee is Senator H. H. Schwartz of Wyoming. The other members of the sub-committee of five are Senators Claude Peppers of Florida, James M. Mead of New York, Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin. It will be remembered that Senator Schwartz introduced the amendment to the National Defense Act to prohibit discrimination on account of race, creed or color.

According to present plans, the sub-committee will hold its first hearing on April 1 when Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will testify.

The Senate sponsors of the resolution—Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, Arthur Capper of Kansas, and Prentiss Brown of Michigan—will urge speedy adoption of the resolution and will emphasize the nature and extent of the discrimination the Negro is encountering which makes such Senate action necessary

SPEEDY REPORT

It is hoped that the sub-committee will make a speedy [illegible] after the factual material [illegible] established the need of an exhaustive Senate probe of discrimination. Senator Thomas has pledged speedy action by the full Senate committee on Education and Labor as soon as the sub-committee has acted. This will bring S. R. 75 to the floor of the Senate very shortly for a vote, provided it is not held up by the Senate Audit and Control committee of which Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina is chairman. Under the Senate rules, all measures which provide for expenditure from the Senate contingent fund must be passed on by the Adult and Control committee.

Walter White, NAACP secretary, who has been here most of the week working on the above steps, again urged that authentic information regarding discrimination, particularly in industrial plants filling contracts from the federal government for the defense program be sent to the national office of the NAACP, 69 Fifth Avenue, New York.

"WE'RE CONVINCED"

"We are convinced that if the American people only knew what is going on in the national defense program and fully understood how vicious is the discrimination the Negro is encountering, there would be country-wide indignation against those who are holding up defense because of their anti-Negro prejudices. The arrogance of such persons as J. H. Kindelberger president and general manager of North American Aviation, Inc., in stating 'that under no circumstances will Negores be employed as aircraft workers or mechanics' in the North American Aviation Company's plants is insufferable. When Negroes pay income, defense, or other taxes, they are paying Mr. Kindelberger's salary and building up profits for North American Aviation Company's stockholders. Negro Americans and decent white Americans have got to let Mr. Kendelberger and his kind know that they cannot get away with such brazen tactics. The NAACP is suggesting to the Senate committee that Mr. Kindelberger be invited, or if he does not accept the invitation, that he be subpoenaed to appear before it to explain his aping of Hitler in telling tax-payers and citizens that they cannot be employed because of race and color."

Ernest Calloway Sought Exemption from Draft Because of Mistreatment of Negro Soldiers in Armed Forces

CHICAGO. — The local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced that it will take action in the case of Ernest Calloway, whose request for exemption from military service because "the United States army denies me or any other Negro the right and opportunity to make an equal contribution to the welfare and defense of my country," was denied in a draft board ruling here Wednesday, January 8.

Calloway, educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of America (Red Caps), had his case officially referred to the N.A.A.C.P. on January 9, according to Ira Williams, president of the branch, after local draft board No. 81 had also ruled that the union official could not appeal his case to the State Appeals Board.

Admitting the truth of a statement made by Calloway January 1 in a letter to the board pointing out that "deep-seated prejudices," exist against me and other Negroes in the U. S. Army and Navy," board officials nevertheless ruled in a formal opinion handed down January 8 that:

"It is the opinion of the board that the social ills of which Mr Calloway complains are true, but this board is without power to remedy the said ills and affords no forum for their discussion and redress . . . therefore, the registrant is hereby placed in Class 1A."

In a letter to the New York headquarters of the N.A.A.C.P. explaining the development of his case from December 20, 1940, when he received a copy of the Selective Service Questionnaire from the board, up to the present time, Calloway said:

"In filling out the questionnaire, I indicated that I was a conscientious objector, and in doing this I attempted to amplify for the board, the possible trend my objections might take. I did this in the form of drawing a line from the phrase 'religious training and beliefs,' to the margin of the page and indicated certain social concepts which were my intention to incorporate into 'religious training and beliefs.' I placed a check in both squares to indicate my unwillingness to serve in any capacity. Also an informal statement was attached to the questionnaire (not a sworn affidavit) outlining certain racial inequalities existing in the armed forces.

Racial Discrimination

"In injecting the question of racial discrimination in the armed forces," he said, "it was not my intention to narrow it down to a purely 'racial issue,' as was later assumed by my draft board, but was prepared to consider it in a much broader perspective . . ."

Contending that the board did not have before it the full facts, and in denying him the right of appeal acted in an "arbitrary" manner "contrary to the provisions established by the Selective Service Act," Calloway said:

"I was under the impression that I was supposed to receive from my board Form 47 upon which to establish my formal case of conscientious objection. This I did not receive, but instead a card which placed me in 1-A classification with the instruction that I had five days in which to appeal this classification, if I desired. Attempting to comply with the five-day limitations, I presented the appeal notice before my board.

"Through a newspaper report, Friday, January 3, I learned that the board decided that my objection did not come within the definitions of conscientious objection to war by reason of religious training and beliefs, and refused to allow it, and further held that my case cannot be considered by the Draft Appeals Board.

"I maintain that I have not presented any formal case upon which the board may possibly arrive at a fair decision. As to the procedure the board has followed: it is arbitrary and contrary to the provisions established by the Selective Service act and the instructions (form 5) issued to draftees at the time of registration, The informal memorandum I presented was merely to prepare the board for my formal and much broader case of conscientious objection on the grounds of religious training and beliefs which incorporate certain social concepts, and I feel that the board exceeded its authority when it refused to supply me with form 47 and to arbitrarily render its decision in the absence of this form and without a proper hearing."

Outline of His Objectives

The complete text of the "informal statement" outlining his objections, which Calloway sent to the draft board January 1, follows:

"My objections of conscience towards participating in the Selective Service Training Program extends beyond the pale of religious training and belief, and is based upon certain fundamental social concepts which are unalterably opposed to racial discrimination, be it in the army or the civilian life of the nation.

"As a Negro I have accepted many of the responsibilities of my limited citizenship without benefit of a number of its blessings. To me, the present United States Army is the most anti-democratic institution in American governmental life. Its callous disregard for the elementary principles of fair-play with Negro citizens reeks of 18th century mercenarism instead of an army, by for and of the people.

"The constant refusal of this military branch of our government to pursue a non-discriminatory policy in its attitude towards all the citizens is far out of portion with the large measure of social, economic and political progress that has been made during the past few years in America. For a number of decades, the U. S. Army has withstood democratization, especially in its relations to Negroes, and there is no visible indication of an immediate change in this vicious racial status quo despite the fact that American democracy is preparing for its greatest struggle against the forces of ignorance, prejudice and dictatorship.

"The practice of relegating special types of service to Negroes and refusing their services in other branches of the armed forces is neither conducive to effective morale or obeying the spirit and letter of the constitution of the United States. When the U. S. Army denies me or any other Negro the right and opportunity to make an equal contribution to the welfare and defense of my country, it violates a basic right guaranteed to me by the Constitution.

"Therefore to insist upon my participation in the Selective Service Training Program without giving me the guarantees of equality of citizenship in the operation of the armed service places certain liabilities upon my honor, integrity and self-respect. For these reasons, I cannot accept the responsibility of taking the oath upon induction into military service under the present anti-democratic structure of the U. S. Army, and ask to be exempted from military training until such time that my contribution and participation in the defense of my country can be made on a basis of complete equality.

Only White Men To Be Inducted Into Army From New York City As Result Of War Dept. Order

Protests have been launched with the Selective Service headquarters in New York City over issuance of an order to local draft boards to select only white men in the January call for conscripts for the army. Negroes, according to the order, will not be inducted into service until camp facilities are available for Negro troops probably in the month of February.

The New York Age called headquarters at 331 Madison avenue to find out about the discrimination against Negroes and was informed that Selective Service machinery could merely carry out orders and requests of the War Department.

Lewis N. Clark, public relations man at headquarters, declared that to capitalize Negro, contrary to governmental policy. The promise was made that in the future releases would be more carefully checked to see that Negro was capitalized.

Call For Whites Only

The protested Selective Service order read in part:

"1. The Army has called for a total of 3663 white men to be furnished from the City of New York in the initial call for January, 1941.

"2. Your quota for this call is — men.

"3. If any of the men whose order numbers bring them within your quota call are Negroes, they will not be directed to report at the Induction Station. Instead 'Notice of Selection' (Form 148) will be sent to these men, and they will be called for induction as soon as camp facilities are available for Negro troops, probably during the month of February. For example, if the quota for your Board is fifteen men, and two out of the first fifteen men on the Order List are Negroes, the two Negroes will be given only the 'Notice of Selection' (Form 148), and the thirteen white men will be given 'Notice of Selection' (Form 148) and also the 'Order to Report for Induction' (Form 150).

"4. A copy of Form 148 is annexed hereto. Official printed copies will be issued in the immediate future. It is suggested that in the case of Negro selectees, the blank space on the third line should read "During February."

newspaper releases calling for 4,395 men to be inducted into the army in January had been sent out several days before the army had specified that the draftees were to be white men only because there were no facilities for housing Negroes. Mr. Clark said that a supplemental release would be sent to newspapers to correct the error. In the first release, all local boards were listed with the number of men to be inducted into service from each board. Many of the local boards listed have entire Negro registers.

Skilled Negro Workers Barred At Fort Dix, N. J., And Three Florida Air Fields, N. A. A. C. P. Reveals

Negro carpenters are being refused employment at construction projects now going forward at Fort Dix, New Jersey, and Negro skilled and unskilled workers are barred from working at United States Government air fields now under construction in three cities in Florida, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People revealed this week.

The revelation was made in connection with the association's survey of discrimination against the Negro in the operation of the government's national defense program throughout the country.

At Fort Dix, N. J., where construction firms working under government contracts are engaged in a huge building program to house troops, the NAACP learned that only three Negro carpenters are employed out of 350 carpenters working there.

Despite the fact that the Greater Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, an A. F. of L. union, which controls the job, has a large number of Negro members, many of whom have been in the union more than a score of years, the union has issued an order barring work to all except residents of the county. No Negro members of the union live in the county. The three Negro carpenters now employed at Fort Dix, got their jobs only after they made a strong protest.

More than fifteen Negro carpenters have been refused work at the camp during the past few weeks, although white carpenters who are non-residents of the county, are being employed daily.

Negroes Barred In Florida

At West Palm Beach, Fla., where the government is preparing to spend a million dollars to build one of the numerous air fields proposed for this section of the country, the County Commissioners have made it plain to local contractors that they prefer to have Negroes do what they term "agricultural work," rather than any type of skilled or unskilled work at Morrison Aviation Field.

An idea of how these Commissioners view the situation and also their estimate of the relationship of Negro women and children to agricultural work, is seen in the following newspaper account of the matter:

"County Agent M. U. Mounts said this morning that a recent survey of the Negro agricultural labor supply in the south end of the county did not show a threatened shortage, even if the construction of the Eighth Pursuit Wing Headquarters cantonment at Morrison Field drew off large numbers of Negroes. The county commission yesterday voted to ask contractors to adopt a policy of hiring only white unskilled labor to keep from disturbing the Negro agricultural labor supply. Commissioner C. Y. Byrd presented the motion.

"All builders and experienced men in construction trades questioned today agreed that Negroes will probably have to be hired for many tasks because sufficient white men would not volunteer. Raking hot asphalt and working in wet muck were suggested as two tasks at which Negroes would work better than white men. Mr. Mounts said the peak of farm labor demand on the Coast is in mid-December, about the same time the airport construction will be hiring large crews. But he said that with Negro woman and children working as pickers, as is their custom, no shortage would be felt.

Reports from Tallahassee, Fla., show that, despite the fact that scores of Negro skilled worker are available here, and have made application for work at the million-dollar air field construction job now going up, all have been refused, "while any white worker who has a saw or hammer is employed."

Ten Negro members of Local 805 Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, affiliated with the A. F. of L., were recently employed for two weeks at the United States Naval Air station in Pensacola, Florida, but were fired under the pretext that work had been caught up. Later it was reported, members of Local 737, whose members are white, were hired, in the place of the men dismissed. Both locals were chartered by the same union.

No Negroes On Draft Boards

In many sections of Florida, including Tallahassee, no Negroes are serving either on local or advisory draft boards, nor are any Negro physicians serving as medical aides with these boards.

The survey also reveals that no Negroes are serving on local draft boards in: Waterloo, Iowa; Casper, Wyoming; Memphis, Tenn.; Pueblo, Colo. None are employed as paid workers on these boards in: Waterloo, Casper, Memphis and Pueblo. Pueblo, Colo., is the only city in the list with Negro physicians attached to the boards. In none of the cities is a Negro employed on advisory boards.

The association announced that it is not only continuing the fight against the Navy Department's summary dismissal of the Negro messmen who protested against the intolerable conditions to which they were subjected aboard ship, but broadening this campaign to include a fight to raise the whole status of the Negro in the Navy from the level of messman to which he is now relegated.

"We want to see a veritable broadside addressed to the Secretary of the Navy in the form of thousands of letters," Thurgood Marshall, special NAACP counsel said, "in order that the Navy Department will understand that Negro citizens do not propose to submit meekly to this state of affairs. We urge all citizens to send letters to Secretary Frank Knox and to their Congressmen, urging them to abolish the Jim Crow set-up which relegates Negroes to the status of messmen, and gives them no chance to rise higher in the service, no matter what their qualifications or abilities may prove."

Job Survey Continues

The Association has distributed the third list of individual government contracts let to firms throughout the country. The list includes the name of the city, contractor, item, and the total contract price. Association branches have also received a survey questionnaire form to be used in gathering information. Branch committees are being set up to interview local plant managers about jobs for Negro workers.

Mass pressure as a means of stimulating social action is a familiar technique, and one which has yielded beneficial results where other methods have failed. Individual protests and pleadings however strong and well worded, do not have the effect of collective action.

The reason is clear. You may ignore the individual plea as being unrepresentative or as being the emotional outburst of a disordered mind. But you cannot for long ignore legitimate demands of organized groups backed by militant and determined followers—followers who are not ashamed to carry banners and parade for their cause.

In this connection Mr. A. Philip Randolph's suggestion calling for 10,000 Negroes to march on Washington, is timely and should be acted upon with dispatch if the objectives aimed at are to be achieved before it is too late.

Writing in a national weekly, Mr. Randolph asserts:

". . . Only power can effect the enforcement and adoption of a given policy, however meritorious it may be. The virtue and rightness of a cause are not alone the condition and cause of its progress and acceptance. Power and pressure are at the foundation of the march of social justice and reform."

Contending that power and pressure do not reside in the few, he adds:

"They lie in and flow from the masses. Power does not even rest with the masses as such. Power is the active principle of only the organized masses, the masses united for a definite purpose.

"Hence, Negro America must bring its power and pressure to bear upon the agencies and representatives of the Federal government to exact their rights in National Defense employment and the armed forces of the country. No real, actual, bonafide, definite and positive pressure of the Negro masses has ever been brought to bear upon the executive and legislative branches of the city, state, and national governments.

"Negroes could join this march from various sections of the country, from all trades, professions and callings, such as laborers, doctors, nurses, lawyers, teachers, mechanics, soldiers, women, and youth groups.

"Such a pilgrimage of 10,000 Negroes would wake up and shock official Washington as it has never been shocked before. Why? The answer is clear. Nobody expects 10,000 Negroes to get together and march anywhere for anything at any time. Negroes are supposed not to have sufficient iron in their blood for this type of struggle. In common parlance, they are supposed to be just scared and unorganizable. Is this true? I contend it is not."

There is no doubt that such a demonstration would have a desired effect upon Washington. It would not be necessary to mobilize 10,000. If we could get just 2,000 black folk to march on the Capitol demanding the "right to work and fight for our country," that would be an accomplishment of considerable import. Of course, larger the demonstration, quicker the result.

We should like to share Mr. Randolph's optimism that such a mobilization is possible. It is not possible to get Negroes to march in impressive numbers for denunciation of the miscarriage of justice in the case of the Scottsboro boys; it has not been possible to get them to march in protest against lynching, against peonage and poll-tax.

It is not difficult to get 50,000 or more black folk to march with the Elks, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Shriners or with the Ancient United Knights and Daughters of Africa.

To get 10,000 Negroes assembled in one spot, under one banner with justice, democracy and [illegible] their slogan would be the miracle of the century. However, miracles do happen. We fervently hope this one will happen before the battle of England is over, and in the manner prayed for by Mr. Randolph.

COMMENDABLE ACTION

The action of the War Department in relieving Colonel Charles B. Elliott as Ft. Bragg commandant and sending him to head the ROTC in Mississippi, is to be highly commended.

Colonel Elliott clearly demonstrated his anti-Negro bias before, during and after the recent tragic happenings at Ft. Bragg, and is in no small sense responsible for the lowered morale of Negro soldiers and civilians.

It is appropriate that such an officer should be sent to an atmosphere where his atttitude toward Negroes will be more appreciated and less directly harmful to the welfare of his country; although we believe he deserved to be court-martialed.

While Colonel Elliott has gone, the spirit which he represents still remains, we are sorry to say.

There are thousands of Colonel Elliotts in the U. S. Army, and if the War Department is really sincere in its desire to prevent further incidents like that at Ft Bragg, it should issue a special memorandum instructing all commanding officers to eliminate at once all discriminatory customs and practices throughout the Army and at all stations regardless of geographical location.

This must be done promptly if the Negro soldier is to really feel, in the recent words of Judge Hastie, "that he is wanted, needed and respected."

Clashes, ill-will, inefficiency and lowered morale are the inevitable consequences of a bigoted and wrong-headed War Department policy on the Negro which is as old as the Republic.

With greater power than any other agency to eliminate color discrimination and segregation, the War Department has fostered, encouraged and insisted upon it in its zeal to perpetuate racial separatism.

During the World War and the present preparations for another conflict, the War Department has never for an instant relinquished the idea that multiplication of a policy basically wrong can make things all right.

We repeat that the War Department's action in the case of Colonel Elliott is commendable, but we would be more confident about the future if it would adopt a new, broad democratic policy, and not limit its action to punishing individuals who happen to be merely too crude and inept in following American military tradition.

OPINION

THE SOUTH IS IN THE ARMY

Oases, green spots in the South's jim crow, are the Federal reservations and national parks, where no jim crow signs are permitted.

But the U.S. Army does not follow in the traditions of the National Government.

At Fort Knox, Ky., white non-coms live in the same building with colored outfits but have separate wash bowls, latrines and a lily-white dining room table.

At every Southern camp there is constant warfare between soldiers and bus companies over the seating segregation.

And any soldier has a better chance of being left alone by the Dixie cops if he leaves his uniform in camp and wears his civies.

However, how can the army ask for decent treatment of colored soldiers in Southern camps when it puts up "colored" and "white" signs itself.

All this raises this question: Do we want to get the army out of the South or the South out of the army?

SEPARATE TRAINING SCHOOLS FOR NEGRO ARMY OFFICERS

FULTON LEWIS, radio commentator, reported last week that a large group of responsible Negro leaders had asked the War Department to set up a "jim crow" school for the training of Negro commissioned officers. Inquiry revealed that the source of Mr. Lewis' information was Edgar G. Brown, head of the United Service Employees an organization of Negroes in the federal service.

The broadcast was disturbing to a large number of thoughtful Negroes who believe that such a poilcy is a step backward. During the last war, a separate training school for Negro officers was set up at Des Moines, Iowa, and as a result only Negro infantry officers were commissioned.

Under the present policy, Negroes are attending the Artillery School at Fortress Monroes, Va., the Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga.. and schools for many other branches of army life. The only segregated officers school is the Pursuit Squadron of the Army Air Corps which has been established at Tuskegee Institute, and many Negroes feel that it is better to not have members of their race in the Air Corps if they are to be segregated into separate units.

Walter White, executive secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., took the lead in opposing the proposed change in policy by the War Department and caused the following telegram, which was endorsed by an equally responsible group, to be sent the President and Secretary of War:

"We repudiate any and all requests that the present methods of training white and Negro officers in same camps be changed and that Negro officers be sent to segregated Officers Training Schools. Segregation has always led to discrimination and widening of chasms between races which menaces our country in this hour of peril. We petition you as Commander in Chief of Army and Navy to resist any backward step and to push forward in national defense program toward truest democracy without distinction of race, creed, color, or national origin."

We agree with Mr. White that such a change would be a step backward and urge our readers to join with him and others who are fighting this proposed change.

Soldiers Stood By And Allowed Civilian To Blackjack Negro Youth

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Charged with helping a civilian police officer to beat up a Negro soldier with one of their own blackjacks, two white military policemen attached to Camp Robinson in Louisiana, were recently sentenced to a month's hard labor, reduction in rank, and fined two thirds of their salaries by Major Lester Davidson, of Camp Robinson, court martial trial judge in the case. Major Davidson, in summing up the case against the men, was scathing in his denunciation of any indulgence of Hitlerism in the United States Army. In a direct appeal to the Negro people of the South, he gave assurance that the bill of rights would be upheld in and around his camp, which is located near Ruston, Louisiana.

The story of the court martial and Major Davidson's statement was carried in a recent issue of the Sioux City, Iowa, Journal, Davidson's home town.

Although War Department officials said they could not comment on the case until a report had been filed here, Col. L. A. Lovett, assistant public relations chief, indicated that the War Department had now come to regard severe punishment in such cases as routine.

MUST MAINTAIN MORALE

"Certainly the War Department is interested in doing everything possible to maintain the highest morale among all sections of the armed forces," he said, "and we want to keep the efficiency of our men up to a high level. We know that men will make mistakes, that is only human, but whenever these mistakes are made it is the policy of the War Department to correct them and punish those responsible."

The story of the case and Major Davidson's statement as it appeared in the October 2 issue of the Sioux City Journal, follows:

"The defendants were two white members of the military police who had been court-martialed on charges that they had aided and abetted in the beating of a Negro soldier by a white civilian near Ruston during army maneuvers.

"By ruling of the special court, the accused men were reduced from the rank of privates first class to privates, sentenced to serve one month at hard labor, and fined two-thirds of a month's salary.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS

The Shreveport Times gave the trial a writeup in considerable detail, indicating the significance apparently attached to the court's ruling.

"According to that newspaper, testimony was that the civilian, while driving a truck, got into a 'cursing altercation' with two Negro soldiers on the sidewalk; that when the civilian started to get out of his truck, one of the Negro soldiers drew a knife and two Negro civilians in the truck held the white civilian in the truck; that the civilian reported the matter to a civilian policeman, and that the civilian policeman picked up two M.P.'s (military policemen) and took the offending Negro soldiers into custody.

"It was alleged at the trial that the military policemen ordered the two Negro soldiers to get into the civil policeman's car; that the Negro soldiers were driven into the woods, that there one of the Negro soldiers was ordered to get out of the car and that the civilian truck driver then was allowed to beat the Negro soldier with a blackjack taken from one of the military policemen; that the military policemen did not report the matter to any senior officer.

"In his closing speech Maj. Davidson declared that the case involved a highly important principle of American citizenship. He said that colored folks in the south had learned not to expect justice from white neighbors, and that the verdict in this case would apprise them whether or not there was any more justice in the army and any more respect for the constitution and especially the bill of rights. He said persecution, intolerance and bullying were glorified in Germany, and it was just such things the new United States army was being organized to fight. If the Negro was to be treated unjustly not only in civil life, but in the army as well, why, asked Maj. Davidson should he want to go to war to help prevent another country from treating white people the same way?"

Lieutenant Oxley Admonishes His Race Not To Resent Handicaps And Discrimination Against Them On Defense Programs

It comes to the attention of the public, that Lieut. Oxley, supervisor of racial relation unit (whatever this unit is, or its functions are unless its duties are, to tell the Negro to stay in his place we do not understand), admonished his race at Minneapolis a few days ago, not to resent the many obstacles, handicaps and discriminations thrown into its pathway on the defense program; but to take these wrongs laying down, without complaint. Whether this report is true or not, the advice the Lieutenant is alleged to have given the Negroes at Minneapolis, expresses the general attitude of every Negro towards his race in the New Deal program. All of them take the position that it is their first duty, to apologize to the public for the administration's failure to give the Negro, a square deal at the Government's hand. Secondly, they play up what little the government is doing for the race, as an excuse for not doing more. Instead of appearing in the court of public opinion, to get more work, rights and opportunities to work, for their people, they are supposed to represent, they appear as apologists for those, who are robbing their clients without impunity.

According to press reports, Lieut. Oxley, went so far amiss from the point of defending the rights and privileges of his race; Attorney Schwartz, a white attorney, took him to task for his insincerity; and remarked, that if you Negroes paid officials on the Government payroll, were sincere about breaking down race discrimination; they would resign from their jobs in two weeks after their employment, or force a change in the government's attitude toward race, color or national origin. The Lieutenant lost his head and challenged Mr. Schwartz for a joint debate. The chairman of the meeting, who invited the white attorney to be presented; called the Lieutenant to order, and severely criticised him for the disorderly way he interrupted Mr. Schwartz, and defended the right of the white Attorney to be present. Lieut. Oxley, is advertised to the country as supervisor of race relations. Of course, we do not know what his job is, or what it means but we cannot conceive that it is any part of his functions, to roam over the country, lose his head in debate, and raise a row with white or black citizens, because they do not agree with him, or criticize his insincerity. The Lieut. must not forget that he is a public servant, and that his conduct is subject to public criticism; that the public is the judge of the worth or propriety of his public acts, and not he.

The Negro citizens throughout the country do not regard the Weavers, Oxley, Hasties, Browns or any other Negro on the government payroll, as their representatives; but as apologists or fronts to defend the democratic party for what it does or do for the Negro race as a part the citizen body of America. These men have never done anything in the interest of the race or their country to deserve the positions they hold, and were simply selected because of their theoretical education, paid for with white folk's money. Not even having had to struggle and sacrifice for their education, they do not feel like being ungrateful to the sources that made them theoretical scholars, by standing up for the rights of those they must live among and receive their sustenance from. The American white man has never selected a manly Negro, who stand out in the open and fight for an equality of rights and opportunities for his race, but has always selected an apologists, who felt that he owed the white man more for his education, than he did his race as an outstanding leader who would compromise principles for a dollar.

Lieut. Oxley is an outstanding example of this tribe of Negro leadership. No man on the payroll of another can fight for a policy that his employer does not approve, unless he is willing and man enough to place principles above commercialism. And there lies the secret of the failure of Negro leadership selected by white people to teach the Negro to stay in his place.

Minnesota Governor Is Named

Negro Citizens Denied Right To Volunteer

NOV 21 1941

ST. PAUL.—(ANP)—Injunction proceedings were filed Friday in federal district court by Lee K. Turpin against Gov. Harold E. Stassen, Adj.-Gen. Ellard Walsh, and other Minnesota militia officers to force them to admit him and other Negroes to the Minnesota Home Defense force.

Turpin and other Negroes of Minnesota, in answer to appeals for enlistments in the Home Defense force, volunteered and were turned down with the explanation that "no provision had been made for the enlistment of Negro-American citizens of the state in the Home Defense force."

The complaint filed set forth that solely because of the plaintiff's race and color the defendants (Stassen, et al) arbitrarily and illegally failed and refused to accept Turpin and other Negroes into Minnesota's Home Defense force.

Turpin's action was brought about as the result of a nine months fight by the Minnesota Negro Defense committee to secure the enlistment of Negroes in the Minnesota Home Defense force.

Dixie Leaders Brand Negro OPM Setup As Mere Buffers

NOV 25 1941

By J. ROBERT SMITH
(Staff Correspondent)

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Neither President Roosevelt's recent executive order banning discrimination in defense industries nor the influence of the Office of Production Management has in any appreciable manner tended to better the labor and economic conditions of the Negro in New Orleans, a survey made by the Star-News revealed this week.

Industries with defense contracts issued before the executive order are taking full advantage of the technicality that their discriminatory policies are still adamant since the executive order had no retroactive power. Since no contracts have been awarded New Orleans after the order and the city has most of what it is expected to get for a good many more months, the New Orleans Negro is therefore left completely out in the cold.

OPM Serves as Buffer

This correspondent in interviews with various Negro leaders who are fighting the issue learned that the Negro Division of the Office of Production Management is looked upon in these parts as a mere buffer between the powers-that-be in Washington and the Negro people.

They have accused Dr. Robert Weaver's representatives of confining for the most part their investigations of defense training and employment opportunities for Negroes to white labor representatives and white executives in charge of the defense program.

They also claim that Dr. Weaver's men made about two visits to New Orleans last year and about half-a-dozen this year and each time they remain about a day or two which is inadequate to learn the true conditions confronting the Negro.

Dr. Will Alexander who represents minority groups in the division is being severely criticized for promising opportunities which have not materialized. In a recent trip made here from Washington about four months ago, he is said to have stated at a mass meeting that when he went back to Washington he would authorize the training of Negroes in various skills essential to the shipbuilding industry and also intimated that this figure would run to several hundreds.

The promise according to informants turned out to be 20 bricklayers and 20 welders that are being trained.

With more than 2,500 welders needed in New Orleans, only 20 Negroes were recommended by OPM to be trained.

Superintendent of School Nicholas Bauer, taking advantage of the very low number suggested by OPM in a conference with a citizens' group a few weeks ago, said that the school board would definitely not sponsor courses in welding for Negroes.

"Sidney Hillman of OPM sent us a memorandum in which it was specified that we train only 20 Negro welders. We (the school board) concluded that since the number was so low, OPM did not want Negro welders and decided not to train any," the school board head s

Group Attacks Weaver's Office

Incensed about the tense situation, Clarence A. Laws, industrial secretary of the New Orleans Urban League, representing the citizens' group directed the following letter to Ira deA. Reid, consultant-in-charge for minority groups in Washington:

"I have just received and read with interest your letter wherein you make reference to a letter and information which I sent to you. I, too, have been advised that the Orleans Parish School Board has received instructions from Washington to train 20 Negroes in welding and 20 in bricklaying.

"These courses, we believe, will get under way in short, since the school board made announcements this week to the effect that a supervisor for welding school has just been named and a building leased for the purpose of opening a training school.

Seems A Joke

"I know that while you are interested in this matter it is not exactly within your province to do anything about it. I should like to say, however, that instructions from Washington to train 20 Negro welders seems almost as a joke when one realizes that more than 2,500 welders will be needed in New Orleans when the Delta Shipbuilding program reaches peak production.

"I talked recently with persons from OPM who were in the city representing the interest of minority groups in defense training and employment and pointed out that this recommendation seems as an effort on the part of someone up the line to pacify Negroes, rather than to help them to become fully integrated into the defense program.

More Absu

"More absurd than the training of the 20 welders is the instruction to train 20 fire bricklayers. As you no doubt know, bricklaying is a highly technical skill which requires many years to master so that it will be next to impossible to train Negroes to do this type of work so that they might qualify for employment in the shipbuilding program here.

"On the other hand there are several hundred Negro bricklayers in the community now, who are members of a labor union and who have years of training and experience but who are, presently, unemployed.

"I talked with the president and business manager of the bricklayers local this week and he informs me that any bricklayer not familiar with fire bricklaying could do the job if placed under an experienced foreman. He, too, felt that instructions might have been given to train Negroes in skills that seem more essential at this time."

Weaver Defends OPM

In answer to Mr. Laws' letter defending the stand taken by OPM, Dr. Weaver said:

"Mr. Ira deA. Reid has shared with me your letter addressed to him concerning the training of Negroes for defense employment in New Orleans.

"In your communication you state that it is absurd to train 20 Negro welders in light of the peak demand for 2,500 persons in this occupation in the New Orleans area. In this connection, I should like to point out that the peak has not yet been reached and the need for welders will grow progressively as time goes on.

"Secondly, the training program, which has been started, is a first step and will, as employment opportunities are secured, expand.

Training Comes First

"It has been our experience that we must keep our work in training and our advance in securing employment opportunities in some reasonable relationship to each other. Training, of course, comes first.

Warns Against Mistreatment Of Negroes

NOV 24 1941

Lucrative Fields For U. S. Fifth Columnists Seen

By C. E. CHAPEAU

DALLAS, —(ANP) — Warning was issued here Saturday by Bishop R. A. Carter of the CME Church to white Americans and the United States government in an address before the Dallas-Fort-Worth Annual conference concerning the lethargy and indifference they apparently are manifesting concerning mistreatment of Negroes in the southern states, particularly the mistreatment accorded Negro soldiers of the north and south who are training in southern camps.

"Older leaders among us are encountering serious difficulties in getting the younger element of Negroes to overlook race discrimination, segregation and racial difficulties imposed upon us by white people," the distinguished Chicago prelate said.

"I know the Negro wants to be loyal, and is loyal, but with eminent justification, there is a disposition to become impatient when we are grossly, constantly and continuously mistreated, discriminated against, segregated and disadvantaged in countless ways despite our long and unbroken record of loyalty to American and to American ideals," Bishop Carter said.

"Negroes have to fight two battles which others don't have to fight. In the first place, we are not like other racial groups who have to be drafted. we have to fight in order to get an opportunity to defend democracy; and then, in the second place, after getting the opportunity, we still have to fight those who are opposed to democracy. I warn white America that in this day when we need national solidarity, it is not advancing the interest of national unity to mistreat, segregate and deal unjustly with the Negro, who by any and all considerations and measurements of loyalty is America's best and most dependable friend. We older ones among the leaders are trying to hold the line. But I warn that these mistreatments provide lucrative fields for fifth columnists," the CME prelate said.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Neither President Roosevelt's recent executive order banning discrimination in defense industries nor the influence of the Office of Production Management has in any appreciable manner tended to better the labor and economic conditions of the Negro in New Orleans, a survey made by the Star-News revealed this week.

Industries with defense contracts issued before the executive order are taking full advantage of the technicality that their discriminatory policies are still adamant since the executive order had no retroactive power. Since no contracts have been awarded New Orleans after the order and the city has most of what it is expected to get for a good many more months, the New Orleans Negro is therefore left completely out in the cold.

This correspondent in interviews with various Negro leaders who are fighting the issue learned that the Negro Division of the Office of Production Management is looked upon in these parts as a mere buffer between the powers-that-be in Washington and the Negro people.

They have accused Dr. Robert Weaver's representatives of confining for the most part their investigations of defense training and employment opportunities for Negroes to white labor representatives and white executives in charge of the defense program.

They also claim that Dr. Weaver's men made about two visits to New Orleans last year and about half-a-dozen this year and each time they remain about a day or two which is inadequate to learn the true conditions confronting the Negro.

Dr. Will Alexander who represents minority groups in the division is being severely criticized for promising opportunities which have not materialized. In a recent trip made here from Washington about four months ago, he is said to have stated at a mass meeting that when he went back to Washington he would authorize the training of Negroes in various skills essential to the shipbuilding industry and also intimated that this figure would run to several hundreds.

The promise according to informants turned out to be 20 bricklayers and 20 welders that are being trained.

With more than 2,500 welders needed in New Orleans, only 20 Negroes were recommended by OPM to be trained.

Superintendent of School Nicholas Bauer, taking advantage of the very low number suggested by OPM in a conference with a citizens' group a few weeks ago, said that the school board would definitely not sponsor courses in welding for Negroes.

"Sidney Hillman of OPM sent us a memorandum in which it was specified that we train only 20 Negro welders. We (the school board) concluded that since the number was so low, OPM did not want Negro welders and decided not to train any," the school board head s

Group Attacks Weaver's Office

Incensed about the tense situation, Clarence A. Laws, industrial secretary of the New Orleans Urban League, representing the citizens' group directed the following letter to Ira deA. Reid, consultant-in-charge for minority groups in Washington:

"I have just received and read with interest your letter wherein you make reference to a letter and information which I sent to you. I, too, have been advised that the Orleans Parish School Board has received instructions from Washington to train 20 Negroes in welding and 20 in bricklaying.

"These courses, we believe, will get under way in short, since the school board made announcements this week to the effect that a supervisor for welding school has just been named and a building leased for the purpose of opening a training school.

Seems A Joke

"I know that while you are interested in this matter it is not exactly within your province to do anything about it. I should like to say, however, that instructions from Washington to train 20 Negro welders seems almost as a joke when one realizes that more than 2,500 welders will be needed in New Orleans when the Delta Shipbuilding program reaches peak production.

"I talked recently with persons from OPM who were in the city representing the interest of minority groups in defense training and employment and pointed out that this recommendation seems as an effort on the part of someone up the line to pacify Negroes, rather than to help them to become fully integrated into the defense program.

More Absu

"More absurd than the training of the 20 welders is the instruction to train 20 fire bricklayers. As you no doubt know, bricklaying is a highly technical skill which requires many years to master so that it will be next to impossible to train Negroes to do this type of work so that they might qualify for employment in the shipbuilding program here.

"On the other hand there are several hundred Negro bricklayers in the community now, who are members of a labor union and who have years of training and experience but who are, presently, unemployed.

"I talked with the president and business manager of the bricklayers local this week and he informs me that any bricklayer not familiar with fire bricklaying could do the job if placed under an experienced foreman. He, too, felt that instructions might have been given to train Negroes in skills that seem more essential at this time."

Weaver Defends OPM

In answer to Mr. Laws' letter defending the stand taken by OPM, Dr. Weaver said:

"Mr. Ira deA. Reid has shared with me your letter addressed to him concerning the training of Negroes for defense employment in New Orleans.

"In your communication you state that it is absurd to train 20 Negro welders in light of the peak demand for 2,500 persons in this occupation in the New Orleans area. In this connection, I should like to point out that the peak has not yet been reached and the need for welders will grow progressively as time goes on.

"Secondly, the training program, which has been started, is a first step and will, as employment opportunities are secured, expand.

Training Comes First

"It has been our experience that we must keep our work in training and our advance in securing employment opportunities in some reasonable relationship to each other. Training, of course, comes first.

Warns Against Mistreatment Of Negroes

NOV 24 1941

Lucrative Fields For U. S. Fifth Columnists Seen

By C. E. CHAPEAU

DALLAS, —(ANP) — Warning was issued here Saturday by Bishop R. A. Carter of the CME Church to white Americans and the United States government in an address before the Dallas-Fort-Worth Annual conference concerning the lethargy and indifference they apparently are manifesting concerning mistreatment of Negroes in the southern states, particularly the mistreatment accorded Negro soldiers of the north and south who are training in southern camps.

"Older leaders among us are encountering serious difficulties in getting the younger element of Negroes to overlook race discrimination, segregation and racial difficulties imposed upon us by white people," the distinguished Chicago prelate said.

"I know the Negro wants to be loyal, and is loyal, but with eminent justification, there is a disposition to become impatient when we are grossly, constantly and continuously mistreated, discriminated against, segregated and disadvantaged in countless ways despite our long and unbroken record of loyalty to American and to American ideals," Bishop Carter said.

"Negroes have to fight two battles which others don't have to fight. In the first place, we are not like other racial groups who have to be drafted. we have to fight in order to get an opportunity to defend democracy; and then, in the second place, after getting the opportunity, we still have to fight those who are opposed to democracy. I warn white America that in this day when we need national solidarity, it is not advancing the interest of national unity to mistreat, segregate and deal unjustly with the Negro, who by any and all considerations and measurements of loyalty is America's best and most dependable friend. We older ones among the leaders are trying to hold the line. But I warn that these mistreatments provide lucrative fields for fifth columnists," the CME prelate said.

Aframerica has never had a plethora of intelligent leaders. Most of those touted as leaders have merely been prominent individuals, often "good" boys or girls plucked out of the herd and placed on a pedestal. They acted as phonographs for the Negro's exploiters and bellwethers to lead the black masses astray. They were extremists when addressing the Negroes and reactionaries when conferring with their white sponsors. This deportment was not strange, since they had to keep both Negro masses and white philanthropists believing in them. There were always a few Negroes who came to prominence because of their intelligence and independence, and these commanded a limited following among Negroes, but usually none among the white ruling class, which naturally regarded them as "dangerous."

Now it looks as if we are in grave danger of soon having no leadership at all of the latter variety. More and more of those who are the material for real leadership are latching on to Federal jobs, which means that they can speak for nobody except the totalitarian-bent Administration. As the veteran newsman, Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, observed the other day, "A government will not long support or tolerate any agency, paid from the Treasury, which tells the unvarnished truth." The same thing, of course, holds true for a government employe, whether Federal, State or municipal. Those who would tell the truth and analyze fearlessly the various problems confronting colored people, cannot stay on Uncle Sam's payroll. The duty of such officials is to get the masses to support the policies of the Administration. Naive Negroes have long felt that having a lot of sleek Negroes wallowing in the Government trough represented some gain. Actually it is usually a loss.

This class in civil life is succumbing to the current ruling class propaganda with greater facility than the white middle class, despite the glaring facts of Negro existence. I find them parroting the propaganda of hypocrites and warmongers who loathe democracy and despise Negroes more than Hitler. Supposedly education should have prepared these people to see through this guff and glimpse a bit of the reality of national and international affairs. But, as I have often pointed out, education is to a very large extent mere indoctrination with the ideology of the ruling class, so that the more educated a Negro is, the more apt is he to be valueless to the black masses and valuable to the plutocracy.

There is possibly some excuse for those Negro "leaders" who live by the grace of plutocratic philanthropy, but what shall we say of the preachers, editors, labor leaders, etc., who depend only upon Negroes for their provender?

Some of the editorials and columns in Negro newspapers are beginning to sound as if they were written in the British Information Office or the Office of Government Reports. A visiting Martian might think, after perusing these periodicals, that Negroes enjoyed a real manhood status here which was being threatened by Nazi aggression, and which the Anglo-Saxon plutocracies were straining to defend to the death. Most of these misleaders write and talk as if they were not members of a despised and proscribed caste which will remain such regardless of which side wins, but were free men and women in a land of unrestricted opportunity. They are going around now lecturing the Negro people about national unity, which really means to keep your mouth shut about all wrongs and injustices until our plutocrats announce that the Roosevelt-invented emergency is over. By that time, of course, what little civil rights we have will be gone forever in a wave of regimentation that will turn such dictators as Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, Franco and Petain green with envy.

The plan to inaugurate Fascism by organizing a campaign against Fascism is in full swing. Negro so-called leaders are rapidly falling into line, mouthing the platitudes about democracy, repeating the specious slogans ground out by the Washington propaganda mill, trying to keep the Negro's attention diverted to persecution in Poland and forgetting that in Georgia which is just as bad. These people have all the forces moulding opinion on their side or available to them. Soon the few small voices crying in the wilderness for a realistic Negro understanding of world events will be stilled and the inarticulate and voiceless black masses will be frozen into inertia and slavery.

It is all quite saddening or, if you are a cynic, quite amusing.

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The eternal Race Problem, the Problem of the Negro, is ever present here in Washington in practically all discussions having to do with the speedup of defense production. During the past Summer, the President created another alphabetical agency, SPAB, The Supply Priorities and Allocation Board.

This agency, it was promised, would tangle with the overlapping bewildering chaos and confusion which envelopes the program of war preparation, and further, that orderly, coherent processes thereafter would be the order of the day.

The SPAB was the third revision of the President's organization for national defense and aid to the democracies. A fourth revision it is said, is now in prospect.

The miracles looked for have not been forthcoming. It is now proposed to set up an organization to deal with the quarrels between labor groups, with strikes in key industries, and with resultant defense delays.

NOV 22 1941

Promise And Realization

The difference between extravagant promise and realization is now so great that some drastic action must be taken, it is announced.

In discussing this new proposal, the Providence Journal declares that hardboiled observers in Washingotn are convinced that this new board is not likely to have any influence whatsoever in preventing stoppages in production, and poses this question which brings in the everlasting Race Question: "What, they ask, would it do with a case like this:

"A ship carrying thousands of tons of supplies and 276 passengers for one of our new outposts is about to sail when one of her cooks falls ill. The union is called upon to send a substitute. It sends a Negro. This white kitchen crew refuses to accept him and goes ashore. The union insists they go back to work. The captain, the owners of the ship, the Government whose goods and officials are to be transported, have nothing whatsoever to say about the matter. The strike is prolonged for five days before the union officials can settle the thing. The cost of the delay runs into heavy figures. Meantime winter approaches the outpost to which supplies are being sent. Perhaps that five days delay may compel expected work to be deferred until next Spring.

"This actual occurrence could hardly attract the attention of a great labor coordinating board, attached to the White House. It would be too trivial. But the defense program is shot full of trivialties like this."

This is not allegory; it is not a figurative representation. It is a predictable situation. The Negro is nearly always the stormy petrel, the bone of contention. Everything else must go by the board. Efficiency qualification counts not Color everything.

It has been shown over and over again, during the past 14 to 16 months, that men of high station, in Government, in Industry, and in Labor organizations, are more intent upon sustaining the old order than in perfecting programs of defense efficiency.

How much longer are these conditions to continue? How much longer, in our defense preparation, are we to gamble with the safety of the nation while we indulge the luxury of our antipathies?

How soon are we to be done with the irrelevant trivialities which proscribe the color of skin, and refuse to recognize instead the industrial skill and competence of those whose labors are necessary to complete the job ahead of us?

Our Financial Outlays

The time has come, it would seem, for Government—that is, the Administration, to deal vigorously with the forces which are at work obstructing its program by quarrels inside of Government, by threatened strikes if Negroes are employed, jurisdictional disputes, and violation of defense contracts.

Our war preparations during the month of September called for expenditures amounting to $1,347,000,000 a rise of 18 per cent over August, 1941.

Our total expenditures since July 1, 1940, amount to $10,560,000,000, not counting the huge commitments for October. Our national debt has climbed to $51,554,946,436.

These staggering figures. And the end is not yet in sight. The welfare of citizens of our country, taxpayers whose burdens grow increasingly heavy, the unsolved domestic problems of the hour,—all of these call for subordination of every petty hindrance, and for full equality of every citizen of our Republican in achieving that longer freedom in which we all have a profoundly important stake.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—Charges of racial discrimination in defense industries continue to be reported to the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, the N A A C P announced last week when it received copies of three more affidavits stating complaints.

Goodyear Emergency Corporation, near Jeffersonville, Indiana, manufacturers of bags of gunpowder, is charged with employing Negro women only as maids and janitresses. According to the sworn statement of the Reverend J. O. Clark, local NAACP president, one of the managers of the plant said the company had not decided to use Negro women for any other service. Rev. Clark states that a number of Negro women have made application for work other than as janitresses but have not been so employed while a large number of white women are working there in skilled capacities. He says that previous training in operating power machines is not required, as the plant trains its own workers.

CHARGES OPM WITH BIAS

Miss Mabel Hewlett of Philadelphia, Pa., with civil service ratios as a junior and senior typist and a junior stenographer, five years of experience as an office secretary and eleven months more as senior typist in the local Department of Public Assistance, complains to the FEP that she filed applications with and was interviewed by officials of the Finance Department of the U. S. Army, Office of the Finance Officer; the Philadelphia Naval Aircraft factory, supply department; OPM district office in Philadelphia, Division of Priorities, all of whom she accuses of making excuses and using red tape in order not to hire her. She bases her belief that she was discriminated against because of her race on the facts that a number of persons from the office where she is now employed have been hired by Federal agencies, and that her qualifications and experience are superior to many others she knows of who have been appointed.

TYPIST TURNED DOWN

Also rated by civil service as junior and senior typist and junior stenographer is Miss Lela Leverette of Detroit, Mich., who states in her affidavit that altthough she was certified three times, twice to the Detroit Tank Arsenal and once to the Chrysler corporation for work with the Navy department, by the Civil Service Commission, none of the three certifications has resulted in employment, although certification indicates full qualification for a job.

Miss Leverette states that she had two personal interviews and that at each she noted that her picture was attached to the file folder of her record. She took her examinations when pictures were required. She believes that it is because her race was known she was unable to get the jobs.

FEP Will Seek Remedy; Clean House Urged

Scoff at FDR's Executive Order To Industry

By ALVIN E. WHITE

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Negro employment in defense industies is being blocked and ha'ted by reactionary unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which control the work vital in many defense plants, and no amount of "paper records" will offset the actual records of these unions concerning Negro labor.

SEP 22 1941

The Fair Employment Practices committee recognizes this fact, it is believed, and will set about seeking some remedy if the unions themselves do not clean house.

The chief offender along this line is the American Federation of Labor, which with its numerous unions national in scope, refusing by one device or another admission of Negroes into the organization, scoff at the President's executive order to industry and literally thumb their noses at the FEP.

Although the AFL has from time to time gone on record in open convention as being "opposed" to the discrimination practiced against Negroes, nothing has been done to remedy a situation which is known to exist in the national unions.

FOUGHT BLACK MARK

As far back as 1934, it is reported A. Philip Randolph fought on the floor of the convention to have this black mark eradicated. The convention as a whole voted to "look into the matter" and authorized the president, William L. Green, to appoint a committee to see what could be done.

The chief sought out members of top-ranking unions, the mine workers, which was his own union, the barbers, the hodcarriers and two other groups and asked them to name a member to the committee of five to conduct the investigation.

John Brophy, now representing Phillip Murray of the CIO on the FEP, was one of those appointed and also named secretary to the group.

Hearings, public, were ordered held in Washington in the executive chambers of the AFL. These ran two days with a number of local persons appearing to testify before the group. Each told a story condemning the attitude of the A F. L. And as each story was told the picture was clearer and clearer that the AFL was even then on the spot.

SEP 2

UP TO GREEN

The committee then, at the end of the two days, sought to continue its work by having hearings in other key cities, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and other spots throughout the country.

Instead of moving on to do this, the group decided to put the matter up to Mr. Green, who was fully cognizant of what was being shown in the hearings.

Green vetoed the suggestion declaring it would cost too much and recommended that the committee make its report to a special executive committee instead of the convention which had authorized the group.

During the hearings, the committee asked the witnesses for specific acts and suggested remedies. Each person felt that an educational program carried on by the AFL would do much to eradicate the feeling against Negroes.

All national unions in the AFL have autonomy, which in common words is the same thing as states' rights so often heard discussed in connection with legislation concerning Negroes.

And on this is based the right of the unions to bar Negroes. But when the convention met the year following the hearings, A. Philip Randolph again insisted that the recommendations of the special committee be adopted. A bitter battle ensued, but the recommendations were shelved.

Brophy, in discussing the policies of the CIO, pointed out the constitution of his organization blasts racial discrimination in the second article, first paragraph, which states:

"To bring about the effective organization of the working men and women of America, regardless of race, creed, color, or nationally, and to unite them for common action into labor unions for their mutual aid and protection."

"There are prejudices existing among individuals in the CIO but we do not let them run the organization nor prohibit the membership of Negroes," said Mr. Brophy.

"In fact, my own union, the Mine Workers of America," he continued, "has a large Negro membership, and Negroes are in the majority in such sections as Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia and the western part of Tenn.

"Negroes are in all of our originating unions, including the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the International Ladies Garment Workers, the steel industry and the meat packing unions.

"When discrimination exists in the CIO unions it is in the management of the industry and not in the union, an example being the automobile workers.

"In the fight for social justice every industrial citadel of race prejudice must be captured to insure permanent gains.

"Public opinions bears down on workers and employers or anyone else and whenever it may be used, we are making progress. It will stimulate all bodies."

Through out the entire fight the Negro has waged against the prejudices of the AFL, the strident voice of Philip Randolph has rung out time and time again protesting against the injustices of the organization which even now is flaunting an executive order and because of its prejudice is withhold jobs from deserving Negroes in all parts of the country, especially in these industries which are vital to the conduct of the defense programs.

SEP

One company which has felt the barrier created by the AFL unions operating in its shops has several hundred millions of dollars worth of contracts for airplane construction, which the white union workers are determined to keep out of the hands of Negroes.

Some system is being devised whereby the AFL and Mr. Green, who has steadfastly refused an interview on the question, can state their objections to Negroes working in these unions, and why the recommendations made some seven years ago were never adopted.

Capital Jittery Over Negro March on Washington; Fear Job Demands Will Defeat F.D.R. Smokescreen

By James W. Ford

Roosevelt has been smoked out with belated and vague "promises" against Jim Crow in national "defense" industries. Without a doubt the Roosevelt Administration sanctioned the proposed "March to Washington" July 1, headed by A. Philip Randolph with the hope, that by throwing out a few sops, the Negro people would be "pacified" and stop demanding "too much." That is the intention of the Roosevelt statement.

JAMES W. FORD

But this maneuver is not working out as planned. Negro people throughout the country are determined, and are preparing to go to Washington to make their protests heard. They are determined to secure more real demands.

Backsliding on the part of the initiators of the March is in the making. With bitterness and fear Roosevelt and his agents are getting alarmed. This accounts for Roosevelt's belated statement in Monday's press; it accounts for the fact that Randolph was called to Washington over the week-end by Secretary Knox "to discuss the proposed March." It accounts for the fact that Hugh Johnson also admonished Randolph to call off the March as detrimental to the interests of the Negro people.

Yes, they are alarmed. Only last week Roosevelt called out troops against striking workers in California, which called forth nationwide protests from trade unions and other organizations of the working people. The toiling people are learning great lessons, lessons that they will never forget.

The Negro people must continue their fight against the whole jim-crow set-up. They must not allow any backsliding and turn-coating on the part of the initiators of the March to Washington. We have heard promises before. We must gather greater strength and unity by persistency and unity of action. Do not allow division in the ranks by a few promises. Demand the complete elimination of Jim Crow as a national policy, passage of the anti-lynch bill, abolition of the poll tax.

'Make Job March a People's March,' Says Negro Fur Leader

Lyndon Henry Demands Action from FDR, Not Words

The Negro people should, by all means, march to Washington on July 1, in spite of the fact that the "March on Washington" is sponsoring by a group of Negro Social Democrats and reformists and is designed to "tie the Negro people behind Roosevelt's war program."

That is the view of Lyndon Henry, Negro organizer of Local 88, Fancy Fur Dyers, as expressed yesterday in an interview with the Daily Worker.

"The Negro people SHOULD march, because they need jobs," Mr. Henry said, "and this demonstration will be an expression of their determination to get their fair share of the money this government is spending on so-called defense industries."

With the proper slogans—and he emphasized this point—"on the imperativeness of passing the anti-poll, the anti-lynch law and the Marcantonio anti-discrimination bill, rank-and-file marchers should be able to divert a feeble and compromise gesture into a tremendous demonstration for jobs and peace.

MARCH AGAINST JIM CROW

"The Negro people in this demonstration will be marching not only for jobs," Mr. Henry said. "They will be demonstrating against the present Administration's policy of discrimination—discrimination which is the more easily practiced in private industry because it is condoned or encouraged by the government. For that reason," Mr. Henry concluded, "the march must be more than simply a march; it must have the full character of a people's demonstration for all those rights the Negro people are supposed to enjoy under a democracy."

Asked what he thought of Roosevelt's "admonition" to Sidney Hillman and William S. Knudsen, of the Office of Production Management, regarding discrimination against Negroes, Mr. Henry replied spiritedly that until the President said how discrimination was to be stopped, and gave some evidence of taking steps to stop it, his words have no meaning.

"Suppose the big industrialists to whom Roosevelt made his statement still refuse to give Negroes jobs, in spite of the President's fine words," said Mr. Henry. "So what? What will he do about it? That is what I want to know."

Let the President's statement be put into law, with teeth in it, the Negro trade union organizer said. Or, better still, let him urge Congress to pass Marcantonio's anti-discrimination bill. That, he declared, would be a practical step toward helping the Negro people get jobs.

Dixie Town Won't Let Soldiers Ride Its Cars

FORT BRAGG, N. C. (ANP)—In the small town of St. Paul, N. C., a city ordinance was passed ordering soldiers off the city streets by 9.00 p. m. Negro soldiers said the rule was enforced only when Negro soldiers were seen. However the town has a populaton of 2,000 and only about 500 Negroes.

Four soldiers stationed at Fort Bragg who visited St. Paul recently by automobile were forced to walk out of town leaving their car. After a 10-mile hike they were picked up by a friendly white soldier. Returning to the small southern town the next day the owner of the automobile was ordered to tell "all N——r soldiers in Fort Bragg" to stay out of St. Paul.

Negro, White Want to Be Together, Privates Say

By Eugene Gordon

Time, early yesterday; place, vicinity of Harlem's YMCA, 180 W. 135th St. Persons interviewed, young Negro man. This was the question:

At Fort Bragg, N. C., a Negro and a white soldier were killed recently when a white military policeman's pistol was taken from him by a Negro soldier whom a number of MPs were beating. What lies at bottom of such tragedies and how can the cause be so removed as to make a real anti-Hitler force of our army?"

"The basic cause of tragedies like that is the jim-crow army," Waring Cuney, singer and poet from Washington, D. C., for the time being a resident of the "Y" declared. "If Negro and white soldiers were in the same units and went to town together, they'd be less likely to create friction with the native population."

"But official discrimination places a stigma on the Negro soldier in the minds of the people living near the camps. The cure, I repeat, is an army without jim crow—that is, a democratic army."

Eugene Jackson, who also lives in the "Y" bamed "fifth column activity on the part of reactionaries." There is a movement among these reactionaries, he said, against Negroes and Jews. These "fifth columnists" are, really, "nothing more than Hitler appeasers, people who would like to make peace with Hitler." Jackson continued:

"The people should demand that an investigation commitee purge the army of reactionary elements, so that we might have a really democratic army."

Private Alfonso Le... ber of the Medical 372nd Infantry, Fort ... had spent some ... Wheeler, Ga., not fa... Most of the Negro and ... soldiers there were from the North, he said, and "couldn't understand" the Southern "custom" that required segregated buses on the army reservation. Many of the white and the Negro boys, being from the same paces in the North, Leftwich said, wanted to be together.

"We colored soldiers knew before hand we'd be segregated on the buses in the town, but we did not think they'd have anything to do with where we sat on Uncle Sam's buses. They did, though."

Once, when some white soldiers sat indiscriminately among the Negro soldiers, a white MP got on the bus and yelled at the Negro boys to "get to hell to the back of this bus, you."

"Now, that causes friction and hard feeling where there wasn't any to begin with. Besides," said Private Leftwich, "they ought to give the colored military policemen some authority outside the camp. At present only the white MP has authority outside."

Lawrence Whisonant, YMCA Annex, 181 W. 135th St., graduate of the Howard University School of Music—splendid voice matches his splendid athlete's physique—thought the people should appeal to the President and to the Secretary of War to issue a proclamation "completely abolishing the jim-crow army—even at the price of great effort."

Most of the military policemen don't know how to "handle men," according to William H. Blanchard, a private in Co. ..., 22nd Quartermaster, Fort Dix. Private Blanchard added:

"We're all in the army for the same thing, colored and white, and that is to protect our country. All right. What's the matter, then, with giving us colored boys equal treatment with the white boys?"

Boeing Hires 1000 a Week—No Colored

NEW YORK — Employment at the Boeing Aircraft Company, whose alleged discriminatory policy is being investigated by the Fair Employment Practices Committee, reached a new high of 21,000 last week after ten weeks of hiring at the rate of 1000 persons a week.

Boeing will also lease the $15,934,480 airplane factory for which construction has been authorized at Renton, Wash., to make planes for the navy.

NAACP WANTS ALL DISCRIMINATION IN ARMY CAMPS ENDED

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Civilian Defense Administrator Fiorella H. LaGuardia has received requests that the President instruct the army to issue a directive abolishing all racial segregation in army camps and other places in control of the army; that Negro military policemen be placed on equal footing and equipped as are all other military police; that orders be issued assuring protection for Negr troops stationed in Southern areas and that law enforcement agencies should attend the illegal actions of state police and peace officers at Gordon, Ark.

Mr. LaGuardia received the requests from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People along with four affidavits from members of the 94th Engineers division stationed at Camp Robinson, Ark., who went AWOL rather than submit to intimidation by state patrolmen and civilians there.

The affidavits were made after the protest mass meeting held in Detroit, Mich., by the local branch NAACP last Sunday. The four men had made their way back to Michigan by hitch-hiking and riding freight cars, and their sworn statements underscored the vile treatment to which they were subjected.

The men testified that not only were colored troops forced off the highway at machine gun point by bands of whites, but their commanding officers were insulted and one white lieutenant, Donald Curry, was slapped by a patrolman. Protesting against the imperious demands of the Southerners to "get those damn 'n—rs' off the highway," the white officers were called "n—r-lovers" and "damn Yankees."

The NAACP placed the responsibility for race clashes in and around military camps on the government's policy of segregation. It stated that the episodes in Arkansas and North Carolina are the direct outgrowth of the philosophy of the War Department which caters to Southern segregation tradition. The NAACP emphasized the imperative need for a change in this philosophy.

Randolph's Red-Baiting Hurts Negro Unity Against Nazism

By Ben Davis, Jr.

No section of the population is more interested in the defeat of Hitlerism and in contributing to that defeat than the Negro people. The Negro people are overwhelmingly anti-fascist.

Practically without exception, the major organizations among the Negro people are on record for the defeat of Hitler and Hitlerism. This includes the National Negro Congress, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Southern Negro Youth Congress, innumerable women and civic organizations, to say nothing of the thousands of Negro workers in the trade union movement and also scores of Negro leaders and newspapers. There are many differences between these groups and leaders, but on the question of defeating Hitlerism there is unity although it has not taken an organizational form.

SUPPORT AID

As a whole this unity is marked by the next logical step which is that full aid should be given to the Soviet Union, Britain and all other nations which are fighting German fascism. It is marked also by the energetic protests and common with the treacherous gang of appeasers who cry "Communism" in Goebbels fashion in order to assist Hitler.

DIVIDES ANTI-NAZIS

Not only does Randolph assist the forces of disunity against Hitlerism abroad, but he tends to divide the movement fighting Hitlerism against the Negro people at home. The record of the Communists in fighting for Negro rights against Hitlerism has been seen in practice by the Negro people.

Randolph, who now finds the Communists "assaulting civilization," has himself sought and accepted Communist support, and it was received, when he was following a policy which was beneficial to the Negro people. But when he follows a policy which aids the pro-Nazi appeasers and which harms the interest of his own people, he will receive the support neither of the Communists nor any other progressive, Negro or white. Red-baiting is just what the appeasers need to sabotage the administration's foreign policy and to intimidate the struggle for Negro rights at home.

The recent job march to Washington was seriously hampered by Randolph's red-baiting. Likewise actions of the Negro masses against the manifestations of Hitlerism at home, particularly in respect to the armed forces, national defense industries and in federal civil service.

The desires of the Negro people that Hitlerism should be wiped off the face of the earth have been vastly strengthened and encouraged as the Red Army has been on the battlefield. The Negro people know—despite the libels in the reactionary press and especially among the appeasers today—that when Hitler attacked the Soviet Union he invaded the one country on the globe where racial prejudice is no more, discrimination a capital crime and where peoples of some 150 racial derivations live in equality, brotherhood and happiness. This great country represents the world of tomorrow; but it can do so only because it is ready to, and is standing as a bulwark of all that is decent and fine in civilization today.

With the Soviet Union generously giving her best sons for world democracy and bearing the brunt of the Nazi drive directed against Britain and the United States, those Negro leaders who still lump fascism and Communism together do not speak for the Negro people. Actually they are playing into the hands of the appeasers and the outright fascist enemies of the Negro and national security.

". . . Fascism and Communism are assaulting the citadel of civilization and human decency. Negro workers, like white workers, must choose the camp they will fight in. The answer is clear. It is the camp of democracy—the brotherhood of man in which there shall be no lines of race, color, religion or national origin."

DENIED BY FACTS

It is somewhat astonishing to find Randolph taking this stand in view of the obvious facts of the day, in view of life itself. His words scarcely make sense.

When, before Hitler treacherously invaded the Soviets, and while the papers were filled with deliberate slanders of a Nazi-Soviet "alliance," one could understand that Randolph's red-baiting was yielding to these provocative lies. One could understand but not justify, for Randolph, as head of an important union and a public figure, should know better. Not even this, however, is the bone of contention at the moment.

But certainly there can be no excuse whatever for lumping fascism and Communism together today as the whole world glories in the magnificent stand of the Red Army against the Nazis.

If Randolph wishes the defeat of Hitler, and the advancement of the cause of the Negro people and of labor, how can he fail to recognize the heroic resistance of the Soviet people? How can he fail to call for all-out aid to the Soviet Union, to Britain and to their allies as have some of the most conservative groups in the country?

The position held by Randolph is that of Lindbergh, with his "white supremacy" doctrines, by Norman Thomas, Sen. Wheeler, by the Hearst and Scripps-Howard newspapers, by the America Firsters, all of which are the fountain-heads of disloyalty and appeasement of Hitler. The appeasers are more and more exposing themselves as the advanced agents of Hitler in this country, as fifth columnists. The Negro people, never disloyal to the cause of democracy, have nothing in any effort to bring about the unity of the Negro people against fascist discrimination in America can be terribly impaired by such splitting tactics. The important victory won in the President's anti-Jim-Crow order last June was achieved because the Communists, unprovoked by such red-baiting, and other progressives plunged into the effort to insure unity of all forces of the Negro people and their supporters.

Once more Randolph is following this dangerous policy, and at an even more critical moment when Hitler's hordes are close to our gates and when outbursts of fascist violence have broken out against Negro draftees. When the Negro people are turning their attention toward the greatest unity with other Americans against Nazism, Randolph raises the false issue of "Communism."

But the Negro people will not be misled or side-tracked. Their heartfelt wish is that Hitlerism everywhere will be destroyed—and that aid on the greatest and most immediate scale should be given to the Soviet Union as well as to other foes of the common enemy. That is the camp which, we are confident, the Negro people will choose.

Iceland Hotels, Bars, Ordered to Ban Race

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 — Unconfirmed reports reaching here state that all cafes, theatres and hotels in Iceland were ordered to bar Negroes as soon as Americans took over. The order is said to have derived from the influence of southerners in the United States Navy.

It is further reported that Canadian white soldiers have created such a problem for Icelandic women that Icelanders who now catch their women in the company of Canadians shave off the women's hair and refuse to have any further relations with them.

Why Should Negroes Be Invited?

By JESSE O. THOMAS

At a regional meeting of the U. S. O., that is now being held on the roof of the Ansley Hotel, Negro delegates were humiliated and embarrassed even though they were accredited representatives of their various organizations when they came to register and to find the place of meeting. They were instructed to use the side entrance to the building and the service elevator.

OCT 8 - 1941

The basic program of United States Service Organization, as stipulated in a folder used during the financial drive for funds to operate, is to serve the religious, spiritual, welfare, educational and social needs in the armed forces and Defense industries of the United States. It stated its purpose also was to contribute to the morale of Defense forces and the community in which they are "based." Some 300 service clubs outside of and adjacent to camps and naval stations as well as Defense production cities representatives were included among the objectives.

The money was raised under the joint auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Catholic Community Service, the Salvation Army, Jewish Welfare Board and the National Travelers' Aide Association. Outside of the National Travelers' Aide Association, all the other participating organizations lay some claim to being infiltrated or permeated by religious influences.

Under these circumstances it would seem that those making arrangement for the conference would have considered a building where Negroes could have ascended and descended on the regular passenger elevator. If no such building could have been found, it seems logical to have excluded the Negro representatives from the list of invited guests. It is difficult to get the point of those promoting a meeting of this kind in the name of and ostencibly for the perservation of Democracy who would calculatively and deliberately embarrass and humiliate an element of those invited to attend the meeting.

How could any Negro leave a meeting of this kind enthusiastic about the political society which sanctions this kind of treatment of loyal, patriotic citizens, regardless of whether it is called "Democracy or "Aristocracy". As un-democratic as it may appear, it would be infinitely less embarrassing to self-respecting Negroes if they were not invited at all, rather than being invited and handled upon arriving at the seat of the convention as if they were the victims of some kind of contagious disease.

America is still deploring the treatment that Hitler is according minorities.

When funds were being organized through the financial drive for the current operation of this organization, Negroes' money was not taken at the "side entrance" or conveyed on "service elevators."

YOUTH SUES U. S. WAR DEPARTMENT

Was Barred From Army Air Corps

JAN 22 1941

Judgment Would Establish Rights Of Race to Enlist

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—A suit to compel officials of the War Department to consider his application for enlistment in the United States Army Air Corps as a "flying cadet," was filed here today by Yancey Williams, a student at Howard University.

The complaint which was filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, names as defendants Secretary of War Henry Stimson, Chief of Staff Major General George C. Marshall, Adjutant General E. S. Adams, Chief of Air Corps Major General Henry H. Arnold, and Major General Walter S. Grant, commanding general of the third corps area. The suit is being brought not only in his own behalf, William says in the complaint, but also in behalf of all other Negroes "similarly situated."

COMPLETED TRAINING COURSES

In his complaint, Williams, who has completed two years of college work at Howard University, alleges that he has successfully completed the primary and secondary training courses of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and holds a private pilot's license. He passed the physical examination by army doctors at Bolling Field last July. Williams says he met all requirements for application for appointment as a flying cadet, made out his application and transmitted it with all required references and records, to the commanding officer of the third corps area on Nevember 20, 1940. The Commanding General according to the complaint refused to consider the application on the ground that the plaintiff was a Negro.

Williams says he appealed to the Adjutant General and the Secretary of War, and on December 13, 1940 the appeal was refused solely because he was a Negro. The complaint also alleges that during that time and at the present time the defendant officials of the War Department have been advertising in newspapers and over the radio stations requesting citizens to enlist as flying cadets in the Air Corps of the Army of the United States.

The complaint alleges further: "That such conduct on the part of these defendants, who, in their official capacity as officers of the Government and the Army of the United States and charged with the duty of preparation of national defense in a period when the nation according to its cheif executive, the President of the United States faces the gravest emergency in its history, is a violation of the duty and obligation of these defendants to the citizens and government of the United States and contravenes the fundamental principles of the American democracy."

ASKS DECLARATORY JUDGMENT

The complaint asks for a declaratory judgment to establish the rights to Williams and other Negroes similarly situated, and for an injunction to require War Department officials to consider the application of Williams on its merits.

Wendell L. McConnell, of this city, is the student's attorney. McConnell requested the NAACP to furnish attorneys to cooperate with him on the case. The NAACP assigned Thurgood Marshall, its special counsel and W. Robert Ming, Jr., and Leon A. Ranson, both members of the National Legal Commmittee to cooperate in the preparation and filing of the case.

Williams, who is a member of the local branch of the NAACP, has enlisted the support of association's councils throughout the country. Madison S. Jones, Jr., NAACP National Youth Director, stated that the organization's entire youth forces will be mobilized to raise a national defense fund to help Williams prosecute the case.

Story of Jim-Crowism In 'Defense' Industries

By John Meldon

A copy of this slim 28-page pamphlet should be placed in the hands of every trade unionist in America, for within its pages there is contained a documented indictment of one of the growing scourges of American capitalism—the point-blank refusal of "defense" industry employers to hire Negro workers.

The pamphlet makes a searching inquiry into the increasing jim-crow policies of the defense industries, placing sharpest emphasis upon the closed-door policy of the airplane manufacturers. and proves, by giving salient facts, that Negroes are not barred from employment because of their allegd inability to qualify for skilled jobs—but are barred simply because they are Negroes.

The writers of the booklet have placed upon its front cover a letter from the Vultee Aircraft company, in California, in reply to one written by Mr. Robert C. Robinson, a leader of the National Negro Congress, in which the latter called to the attention of the aircraft company the fact that many Negroes were available for jobs in the plant. The answering letter of the compan, signed by its industrial relations head, Mr. W. Gerard Tuttle, is shockingly brazen in its open admissions—admissions which typify the attitude of the majority of the 'defense" employers throughout the country.

Not 'Policy' Of Company

The company's letter to Mr. Robinson stated:

"I regret to say that it is not the policy of this company to employ people other than of the Caucasion race, consequently, we are not in a position to offer your people employment at this time."

"Jim Crow" prints other similar statements emanating from the employers, meanwhile showing that there are thousands of Negro workers in this country, qualified in every possible way—through skilled training in industries, trade school training, many with years of experience, who are virtually told to go to hell by the employers when they ask for jobs.

"Jim Crow" points out that this policy of condemning Negro workers to the bread lines, regardless of their skill as workers, stems directly from the government, and refers to a request recently issued by the Cleveland Civilian Conservation Camps for "over 1,000 instructors in auto mechanics and drivers training for CCC camps."

The requirements listed by this government agency were "Age, 26 to 50, color white; sex male."

Points to Fountain-Head

The pamphlet takes a sharp crack at the fountain-head of this plague—like spread of "Negroes Wanted" by recalling that it was President Roosevelt himself who encouraged the employers when he publicly declared that Negro draftees would be jim-crowed in the U. S. Army.

This reviewer has made a broad survey of discrimination against Negroes in the East, particularly in the "defense" towns, and it is his opinion that to date, the pamphlet "Jim Crow" is the most effectively written expose of the entire set-up. This pamphlet should be read, and acted upon, especially by trade union memebrs, because the ban on Negroes in industry is a problem which the unions, both CIO and AFL have too long neglected. Once the white workers are aroused to the condition, they will realize that today, it is the Negroes who are barred, tomorrow, will be another category, and then, right down the line until unionists as such will be refused employment.

The fight for the right of Negroes to work in the industries is an integral part of the whole fight to save democracy from the savage blows being struck daily by the war-makers.

"Jim Crow" is must reading for all progressives.

LESTER B. GRANGER SUGGESTS HOLDING UP OF CERTIFICATION FOR SPECIAL TAX PRIVILEGES

NEW YORK. — A means by which the newly created Office for Production Management of the National Defense Advisory Commission might secure compliance of manufacturers with its "non-discrimination" order has been pointed out to Sidney Hillman, associate director of the agency, by Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League.

Mr. Granger laid blame for the virtual exclusion of skilled Negro workers from defense projects almost wholly upon the Advisory Commission's attitude that it could not enforce its stated policy because it did not possess the necessary executive authority.

Mr. Granger wrote Mr. Hillman that "the Urban League, during the past two months, has carefully gathered data from all parts of the country showing that the restrictions placed against Negro workers by a large part of American industry will not soon be relaxed, even in the interest of national defense, unless the federal government takes definite steps to show the need for such relaxation, as well as its insistence upon it."

Until the beginning of this year, Mr. Granger agreed, it was hardly possible for the Commission to enforce its ruling that firms receiving defense contracts give equal opportunity to workers of all races.

Production Office Has Power

Since January 1, however, he indicated, conditions have changed considerably: first with the creation of the new Office for Production Management, which has more power than the Defense Advisory Commission, and second, with the issuance of an order by the war department on January 4 which permits defense contract holders to obtain special tax privileges only when certified by the Advisory Commission after investigation. Certification may be made on one of three grounds — 1) a Certificate of Necessity; 2)a Certificate of Non-Reimbursement, and 3) a Certificate of Government Protection.

The Certificate of Government Protection may be issued when the commission's investigation shows that the government's interests are adequately protected in its agreement with the contractor holding a national defense contract.

The war department announcement further states that wherever the contractor is reimbursed directly or indirectly by the government for the cost of his new facilities, this Certificate of Government Protection is required in addition to the Certificate of Necessity before he can avail himself of the 60-month amortization period.

"The National Urban League holds that a contractor who arbitrarily refuses to abide by the National Defense Advisory Commission's policy of no racial discrimination in employment is not adequately protecting the interests of the government," Mr. Granger wrote.

'Not to Interest of Government'

"The interests of our government and the entire nation at this time demand that all groups in the population who are concerned with defending democracy shall feel themselves to have an active part in democratic processes and to be participants in the rewards of the democratic system.

"Industrial concerns holding defense contracts because of race are failing to protect the national interests in two ways. They are depriving the nation of the valuable skilled services of a large number of workers; they are also contriving to disrupt the morale of one-tenth of the nation's population.

"Among the greatest offenders in this respect are the aircraft companies of the country. Only two major aircraft concerns in the entire country have been reported to the National Urban League as employing Negro mechanics, and these employ only a few. According to the war department's announcement, several important aircraft companies have applied for Certificates of Government Protection entitling them to special tax privileges. The National Urbar League urges that such certification and special tax privileges be withheld as long as these companies persist in defying the public interest and refuse employment opportunities to Negro workers.

"We hold that such action by the Commission will have a salutary effect in several ways. It will maintain democratic principles by refusing to award public favors to concerns which set themselves against the public interest. It will put some teeth in a statement of policy which previously has been ineffective. It will greatly hearten the loyal but harried Negro citizens of America by giving a sign that they government is prepared to defend their social and political rights as part of our preparation for the larger national defense."

JAN 31 1941

By C. E. Chapman

JAN 31 1941

CHICAGO.—Expressing sharp and unequivocal disapproval of the shrewdly contrived and dexteriously executed policy of industrialists who are the beneficiaries of the National Defense program, the winter council of the Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis areas, unanimously adopted a set of resolutions protesting "the wide-spread discrimination, prejudice and unfair treatment of Negro citizens by scheming and designing industrialists in the national defense program."

Names Committee

Bishop J. A. Bray presiding bishop of the Sixth Episcopal district, which embraces Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Arkansas and part of Indiana urged that should be "nation-wide vigilance on the part of the ministers and the rank and file of the church to the end that the interests of Negro citizens will be adequately safeguarded."

Bishop Bray named the following committee which drew up the resolutions condemning discrimination against Negro citizens in the National Defense Program: Revs. J. C. Allen, Gary, Ind.; N. W. Clark, St. Louis; E. P. Murchison, H. W. Evans, W. J. G. McLin, B. J. Smith, Chicago; and G. Holbert, a Chicago layman.

After exporing certain purported conditions pertaining to discrimination against Negro citizens in the National Defense program, the committee said:

In this day when there is much emphasis upon the preservation of Democratic principles; and engaged as a nation in a National Defense program within our own borders; it is imperative that there be unified effort and solidarity of interests on the part of our citizenry.

"We, the special committee of the Chicago, St. Louis and Detroit areas, in winter council assembled, representing a constituency in excess of 20,000 followers of the Colored Methodist Episcopal church, do hereby, individually, severally and jointly, condemn with all possible emphasis the widespread discrimination, prejudice and unfair treatment which is accorded Negro citizens in the National Defense program.

Democracy at Home

"We solemnly affirm that we first need Democracy at home before we can consistently advocate Democracy abroad for anybody else. We condemn that one of the surest ways of giving point and strength to our appeals as a nation in the interest of Democracy, is to set our own house in order, first, by permitting the principles of Democracy to be practiced upon all citizens alike, without any regard for race, color or creed. It is unthinkable that our national government shall either sanction or permit certain' phases of Democracy to be enjoyed by one racial element of our national citizenry, and 'certain other' phases of Democracy for other racial elements. There necessarily must and will be democracy of the same kind for all, or there inevitably will be Democracy for none at all.

"We wish to register further with all possible emphasis as our most sober and matured judgment that we cannot have—and need expect to have—'certain parts' of Democracy for the citizens and certain other parts' for black or Negro citizens. Democracy is to be all-inclusive or else it will become all-exclusive, and when the latter occurs, Democracy ceases inevitably.

"We cite as concrete indication of general discrimination against Negro citizens in the National Defense program conditions which exist here in the Chicago area where contracts have been let for $90,000,000 to industrial plants in this area in the National Defense program, and that these industrial plants absolutely refuse to employ Negroes. We likewise view with alarm discrimination practiced in mobilizing man power for the emergencies in our governmental system, a government denominated a 'democracy' in which the theory of equal opportunity for all is so eloquently preached, but which is so lamentably poor and ineffectually practiced.

Cite Negro's Loyalty

"We readily submit for public gaze the Negro's record of loyalty to the Stars and Stripes, and his willingness to sacrifice for the nation as has been shown by the Negro whenever he has been called upon in the hour of national emergency and danger. We protest against all these and sundry other types of discriminations and injustices, holding our national and state governments responsible for the existence of such lamentable conditions.

"Finally, we advise our constituency to effect organized units in their several communities to communicate with their respective state and national representatives against the legislatures and the United States congress, transmitting to them definite protests against these notorious injustices and discriminations practiced against Negro people, who have been loyal at all times to our nation generally regarded as a democracy."

NEW YORK. — A means by which the newly created Office for Production Management of the National Defense Advisory Commission might secure compliance of manufacturers with its "non-discrimination" order has been pointed out to Sidney Hillman, associate director of the agency, by Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League.

Mr. Granger laid blame for the virtual exclusion of skilled Negro workers from defense projects almost wholly upon the Advisory Commission's attitude that it could not enforce its stated policy because it did not possess the necessary executive authority.

Mr. Granger wrote Mr. Hillman that "the Urban League, during the past two months, has carefully gathered data from all parts of the country showing that the restrictions placed against Negro workers by a large part of American industry will not soon be relaxed, even in the interest of national defense, unless the federal government takes definite steps to show the need for such relaxation, as well as its insistence upon it."

Until the beginning of this year, Mr. Granger agreed, it was hardly possible for the Commission to enforce its ruling that firms receiving defense contracts give equal opportunity to workers of all races.

Production Office Has Power

Since January 1, however, he indicated, conditions have changed considerably: first with the creation of the new Office for Production Management, which has more power than the Defense Advisory Commission, and second, with the issuance of an order by the war department on January 4 which permits defense contract holders to obtain special tax privileges only when certified by the Advisory Commission after investigation. Certification may be made on one of three grounds — 1) a Certificate of Necessity; 2)a Certificate of Non-Reimbursement, and 3) a Certificate of Government Protection.

The Certificate of Government Protection may be issued when the commission's investigation shows that the government's interests are adequately protected in its agreement with the contractor holding a national defense contract.

The war department announcement further states that wherever the contractor is reimbursed directly or indirectly by the government for the cost of his new facilities, this Certificate of Government Protection is required in addition to the Certificate of Necessity before he can avail himself of the 60-month amortization period.

"The National Urban League holds that a contractor who arbitrarily refuses to abide by the National Defense Advisory Commission's policy of no racial discrimination in employment is not adequately protecting the interests of the government," Mr. Granger wrote.

'Not to Interest of Government'

"The interests of our government and the entire nation at this time demand that all groups in the population who are concerned with defending democracy shall feel themselves to have an active part in democratic processes and to be participants in the rewards of the democratic system.

"Industrial concerns holding defense contracts because of race are failing to protect the national interests in two ways. They are depriving the nation of the valuable skilled services of a large number of workers; they are also contriving to disrupt the morale of one-tenth of the nation's population.

"Among the greatest offenders in this respect are the aircraft companies of the country. Only two major aircraft concerns in the entire country have been reported to the National Urban League as employing Negro mechanics, and these employ only a few. According to the war department's announcement, several important aircraft companies have applied for Certificates of Government Protection entitling them to special tax privileges. The National Urbar League urges that such certification and special tax privileges be withheld as long as these companies persist in defying the public interest and refuse employment opportunities to Negro workers.

"We hold that such action by the Commission will have a salutary effect in several ways. It will maintain democratic principles by refusing to award public favors to concerns which set themselves against the public interest. It will put some teeth in a statement of policy which previously has been ineffective. It will greatly hearten the loyal but harried Negro citizens of America by giving a sign that they government is prepared to defend their social and political rights as part of our preparation for the larger national defense."

JAN 31 1941

By C. E. Chapman

JAN 31 1941

CHICAGO.—Expressing sharp and unequivocal disapproval of the shrewdly contrived and dexteriously executed policy of industrialists who are the beneficiaries of the National Defense program, the winter council of the Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis areas, unanimously adopted a set of resolutions protesting "the wide-spread discrimination, prejudice and unfair treatment of Negro citizens by scheming and designing industrialists in the national defense program."

Bishop J. A. Bray, presiding bishop of the Sixth Episcopal district, which embraces Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Arkansas and part of Indiana, urged that should be "nation-wide vigilance on the part of the ministers and the rank and file of the church to the end that the interests of Negro citizens will be adequately safeguarded."

Bishop Bray named the following committee which drew up the resolutions condemning discrimination against Negro citizens in the National Defense Program: Revs. J. C. Allen, Gary, Ind.; N. W. Clark, St. Louis; E. P. Murchison, H. W. Evans, W. J. G. McLin, B. J. Smith, Chicago; and G. Holbert, a Chicago layman.

After exporing certain purported conditions pertaining to discrimination against Negro citizens in the National Defense program, the committee said:

In this day when there is much emphasis upon the preservation of Democratic principles; and engaged as a nation in a National Defense program within our own borders; it is imperative that there be unified effort and solidarity of interests on the part of our citizenry.

"We, the special committee of the Chicago, St. Louis and Detroit areas, in winter council assembled, representing a constituency in excess of 20,000 followers of the Colored Methodist Episcopal church, do hereby, individually, severally and jointly, condemn with all possible emphasis the widespread discrimination, prejudice and unfair treatment which is accorded Negro citizens in the National Defense program.

Democracy at Home

"We solemnly affirm that we first need Democracy at home before we can consistently advocate Democracy abroad for anybody else. We condemn that one of the surest ways of giving point and strength to our appeals as a nation in the interest of Democracy, is to set our own house in order, first, by permitting the principles of Democracy to be practiced upon all citizens alike, without any regard for race, color or creed. It is unthinkable that our national government shall either sanction or permit certain' phases of Democracy to be enjoyed by one racial element of our national citizenry, and 'certain other' phases of Democracy for other racial elements. There necessarily must and will be democracy of the same kind for all, or there inevitably will be Democracy for none at all.

"We wish to register further with all possible emphasis as our most sober and matured judgment that we cannot have—and need expect to have—'certain parts' of Democracy for the citizens and certain other parts' for black or Negro citizens. Democracy is to be all-inclusive or else it will become all-exclusive, and when the latter occurs, Democracy ceases inevitably.

"We cite as concrete indication of general discrimination against Negro citizens in the National Defense program conditions which exist here in the Chicago area where contracts have been let for $90,000,000 to industrial plants in this area in the National Defense program, and that these industrial plants absolutely refuse to employ Negroes. We likewise view with alarm discrimination practiced in mobilizing man power for the emergencies in our governmental system, a government denominated a 'democracy' in which the theory of equal opportunity for all is so eloquently preached, but which is so lamentably poor and ineffectually practiced.

Cite Negro's Loyalty

"We readily submit for public gaze the Negro's record of loyalty to the Stars and Stripes, and his willingness to sacrifice for the nation as has been shown by the Negro whenever he has been called upon in the hour of national emergency and danger. We protest against all these and sundry other types of discriminations and injustices, holding our national and state governments responsible for the existence of such lamentable conditions.

"Finally, we advise our constituency to effect organized units in their several communities to communicate with their respective state and national representatives in the legislatures and the United States congress, transmitting definite protests against these notorious injustices and discriminations practiced against Negro people, who have been loyal at all times to our nation generally regarded as a democracy."

Negroes and Our Defenses

From Richmond Times-Dispatch

IN VIRGINIA, and in other States, unfair discrimination against skilled Negro workers is hampering the arming of America, and contributing to the lag in the defense program. "All-out" defense cannot be achieved, so long as a large body of skil en is prevented by arbitrary s and subtle prejudice from putting its capabilities to maximum use.

This is wholly aside from the injustice involved. In a Commonwealth with some 700,000 Negro citizens out of a total population of 2,677,000, JAN 2 5 1941 right and proper that such a large element be given an adequate share in the benefits of the defense program. Moreover, if 700,000 Virginia citizens are discriminated against in the program, and something like 15,000,000 Negroes in the country as a whole, the effect on national morale and on the prospects for national unity, are apt to be serious.

Camp Lee affords a well-nigh perfect example of the sort of exclusion of skilled Negro workers which is going forward in this State. Hundreds of carpenters, bricklayers, roofers and other skilled members of the building trades are at work on the construction of that great cantonment, but there is understood to be only one Negro among them. It is understood, furthermore, that white men are being brought in from other States and given these jobs although there are skilled Negro workmen in Virginia thoroughly capable of taking them.

In the Newport News area, the story apparently is the same, although there is conflicting evidence on the point. The Norfolk Journal and Guide quotes George L. Zuidema, contractor's executive officer at Fort Eustis, as saying that while he had "seriously considered hiring colored carpenters," he had not done so, "due to the fact that we have sufficient white carpenters to meet our requirements."

The Journal and Guide points out, however' that the State Employment Office "in near-by Newport News is still calling for white carpenters, and a large sign on its door reads plainly "Carpenters Wanted.'." Mr. Zuidema is said to have made the above quoted declaration, in response to an inquiry from Representative S. Otis Bland, who had received a petition from 25 Negro carpenters desirous of working on defense construction in the area. It was stated that over 1,100 Negroes are employed in this particular contractor's organization, but that they are all performing tasks requiring no skills.

It is in the skilled trades that shortages are being experienced in the defense program throughout America, whereas there is ample common labor to take care of all requirements, certainly for the present.

But if skilled men are to be left idle, simply because they are colored, the shortages in this field may grow worse, instead of better, and the defense program, so vital to America's survival, may fail.

The skills, actual and potential, of the Negro ought to be utilized to the fullest. In so far as it lies in their power, any contractors who are not giving Negroes their rightful share of the skilled work for which they are fitted, should endeavor to rectify this injustice. And agencies for the training of Negro workers in skilled trades should everywhere be developed and encouraged.

ing these courses is about one-third that of the whites taking similar courses in the institutions which offer vocational training to whites, and as that is a slightly higher percentage than the proportion of Negroes to whites in the Virginia population, this is an excellent showing. Vocational training for both white and colored must be expanded and developed, but adult Negroes in Virginia are getting their share of this sort of schooling at the present time.

It may well be asked, however, what it boots a Negro to become a skilled carpenter or bricklayer at one of these vocational schools, if he can't utilize his skill when he completes the course. For, as we noted in this place yesterday, virtually no Negro workmen are being employed on the great defense construction jobs at Camp Lee, in the Hampton Roads area and elsewhere, except in unskilled or semiskilled jobs. Some are going North in search of work, and even there, they are experiencing difficulties.

Why should the State operate a Division of Trade and Industrial Education in its Department of Education, under the able supervision of Dr. B. H. Van Oot, and devote a great deal of time and thought to the training of Negroes in vocational skills, if these citibens of Virginia are to be denied an adequate opportunity to utilize the training they have acquired?. Why should the State collaborate with private industries in the conduct of apprenticeship schools, and join with the localities in financing some of them, if a group of citizens, representing 26 per cent of the population, is to be denied any benefits from those apprenticeship schools?

The situation which has grown up with respect to the lack of employment opportunities for Negroes in Virginia, is not anybody's fault, in the sense that the blame can be placed on any single doorstep. It is the result of an evolutionary growth, and of the interplay of forces. But it needs to be remedied. We hope to indicate some of the remedies in future editorials.

Granger Tells War Dept. to Enforce Rule

JAN 18 1941

"The War Department has power for the first time to enforce the National Defense Advisory Commission's ruling that firms receiving defense contracts give equal opportunity to workers of all races."

This is the view of Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League, in a statement to Sidney Hillman, associate director of the commission.

According to Mr. Granger, colored skilled workers are excluded from virtually all defense projects because of the commission's attitude that it cannot enforce its own policies.

3 Bases for Certificates

Under date of January 4, the War Department, Granger says, issued an order which permits defense contract holders to obtain certain special tax privileges only when certified by the Advisory Commission after investigation. Certification may be made on one of three grounds:

1. Certificate of necessity.
2. Certificate of non-reimbursement.
3. Certificate of govenment protection.

If the contractor is to be reimbursed for the money spent for plant or equipment within a five year period, he must have from the War Department, a certificate of necessity and a certificate of government protection.

The Urban League holds that a contractor who arbitrarily refuses to abide by the National Defense Advisory Commission's policy of no racial discrimination in employment is not adequately protecting the interests of the government, and this certificate can be held up until he agrees to do this.

Only two major air-craft concerns in the entire country are employing colored mechanics and those employ only a few. Mr. Granger says all the air-craft companies have applied for certificates of government protection entitling them to special tax privileges.

SEEK REMOVAL OF ALL WHITE DRAFT BOARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—Removal of a white local draft board chairman in Jamaica, New York, for making "vicious and slanderous statements against Negroes in connection with the appeal of a case involving a Negro draftee who sought deferment was asked of Governor Herbert Lehman this week by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The draft official, Edward Warnke, chairman of local board No. 261, in Jamaica, is charged with having sent a memorandum including the following statements to the appeals board in connection ith the case of Leon Melvin, who sought deferment on the ground that he had dependents:

"This particular case is common in our particular board. We have a large colored population and there seems to be no regard for moral or financial responsibility and some get tired of one woman and then decide they can live with some one else. . . .

"It is the consensus of opinion in this board that this type of registrant knows very little about the truth. It is our opinion that a year's military training will do a great deal to straighten this gentleman out."

In a letter to the governor, which pointed out that Warnke has shown himself to be unfit to serve on a draft board, the association said:

"We respectfully submit that any person holding such views and who gratuitously would slander an entire race is unfit for service in the drafting of men who may go forth to die for democracy.

"We therefore respectfully urge that Mr. Warnke be removed as chairman of local board No. 261 and from any other position in connection with the selective service. This should be done not only to remove a man who holds and expresses such vicious sentiments but also as an object lesson to others who may be inclined to slander any racial or religious minority or any part of our national population."

A previous complaint against Warnke, on the same grounds, had been launched with Col. Arthur V. McDermott, by Dr. John A. Singleton, president of the Jamaica branch of the association, when the association wrote to the governor.

ERNEST CALLOWAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (U.P.)—A Chicago draft board, in a formal ruling, agreed today with charges of a draftee that "deep-seated prejudices" against Negroes exist in the U. S. Army and Navy.

The opinion was given by local board No. 81 in rejecting the appeal of Ernest Calloway, Negro educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of America (Red Caps), from classification under 1A rating.

Calloway had contended he did not want to become a member of the armed forces because of racial discriminations. He said he based his objections "not only on religious grounds but also because such discrimination assigns Negroes to special undesirable types of service."

It its decision, the local board also ruled that Calloway could not appeal to the State Appeals Board

"It is the opinion of the board," the ruling said, "that the social ills of which Mr. Calloway complains are true, but this board is without power to remedy the said ills and affords no forum for their discussion and redress . . . therefore, the registrant is hereby placed in Class 1A."

Calloway said the board had "arbitrarily cut off all appeal and tied me up in red tape." He said he would investigate further legal steps in an attempt to appeal the ruling.

CHARGES OF NEGROES TERMED GROUNDLESS

Woodcock Says Civil Liberties Not Violated Here

Department of Justice officials said yesterday in Washington that an investigation of a complaint of police discrimination against negroes at Memphis had disclosed no violation of civil liberties.

They said that Amos W. Woodcock, an attorney for the department's Criminal Division reached the conclusion, after an inquiry, that there was no ground for Federal intervention at Memphis.

Mr. Woodcock reported he had discussed with Police Commissioner Joe Boyle charges of police harassment of negro stores and was told by Mr. Boyle that the unusual surveillance was part of a police effort to "clean up" Memphis.

Mr. Woodcock said he also talked to the police chief and county attorney general. He said he discussed the whole question of civil liberties with the officials. His report, it was added, concluded the inquiry.

Papers to be Filed in D.C. on Monday

JAN 11 1941

WASHINGTON

Local offices of the NAACP announced Tuesday that the association will file suit against the War Department Monday.

Attorneys will be Dr. Charles H. Houston, formerly special counsel for the NAACP, and Leon Ransome, professor at the Howard University Law School.

The suit, directed against the Secretary of War, asks the Federal courts to compel the army air corps to admit a qualified graduate of the Civil Aeronautics Schools.

Attorneys refused to give the name of the student who is permitting his name to be used.

It is understood that the association is basing its suit upon the non-discrimination clause in the Selective Service Act, which states:

"Any person, regardless of race or color, shall be afforded an opportunity for induction in the land and naval forces . . . also in the interpretation and execution of this act [Selective Service] there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color."

DRAFT BOARD DENIES ARMY "JIM CROW" APPEAL!

JAN 16 1941

Chicago, Ill.—The local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced today that it will take action in the case of Ernest Calloway, whose request was exemption from military service because "the United States Army denies me or any other Negro the right and opportunity to make an equal contribution to the welfare and defense of my country," was denied in a draft board ruling here Wednesday, January 8.

Calloway, educational director of the United Transport Service Employes of American (Red Caps), had his case officially referred to the N.A.A.C.P. on January 9, according to Ira Williams, president of the branch, after local draft board No. 81 had also ruled that the union officials could not appeal his case to the State Appeals Board.

Admitting the truth of a statement made by Calloway January 1 in a letter to the board pointing out that "deep-seated prejudices" exist against me and other Negroes in the U. S. Army and Navy," board officials nevertheless ruled in a formal opinion handed down January 8 that:

"It is the opinion of the board, that the social ills of which Mr. Calloway complain are true, but this board is without power to remedy the said ills and affords no forum for their discussion and redress . . therefore, the registrant is hereby placed in Class

EXCUSING THEIR CHIEF

JAN

The War and Navy departments of the national government are "not fully cognizant of the implication of democracy," says Opportunity Magazine, whose editors are among top-flight Negro New Dealers. They say further:

"They (Army and Navy chiefs) may receive orders from the Chief Executive, but unless he implements those orders in detail they will find a way to emasculate them."

These editors then proceed to lambast industry for the way it is showing race prejudice in preparation for national defense, refusing to give jobs to Negro Americans.

Colored New Dealers can always find an excuse for President Roosevelt failing to live up to their high recommendation of him as a regular "bleeding heart" for the down trodden Negro race. Mr. Roosevelt very notably takes care of a few of them and they in turn very competently take care of him with excuses for his failure to make the Presidency function in giving justice to the Negro in proportion to the strength that Negro voters have given the New Deal at the ballot box.

Now as a matter of fact, Mr. Roosevelt or any other President has power to make the Army, Navy or any other government unit respect his desire for the avoidance of racial discrimination in giving citizens work. All the President has to do is to say what he means and mean what he says. That is the way the other Roosevelt,—President Theodore Roosevelt—got his wishes respected.

Sues War Department For Refusing Him A Place In Air Corps

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A suit to compel officials of the War Department to consider his application for enlistment in the United States army air corps as a "flying cadet," was filed here by Yancey Williams, a student at Howard University.

JAN 25 1941

The complaint which was filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, names as defendants Secretary of War Henry Stimson, Chief of Staff Major General George C. Marshall, Adjutant General E. S. Adams, Chief of Air Corps Major General Henry H. Arnold, and Major General Walter S. Grant, commanding general of the third corps area. The suit is being brought not only in his own behalf, Williams says in the complaint, but also in behalf of all other Negroes "similarly situated."

In his complaint, Williams, who has completed two years of college work at Howard University, alleges that he has successfully completed the primary and secondary training courses of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and holds a private pilot's license. He passed the physical examination by army doctors at Bolling Field last July. Williams says he met all requirements for application for appointment as a flying cadet, made out his application and transmitted it with all required references and records, to the commanding officer of the third corps area on November 20, 1940, The commanding General according to the complaint refused to consider the application on the ground that the plaintiff was a Negro.

Williams says he appealed to the Adjutant General and the Secretary of War, and on December 13, 1940, the appeal was refused solely because he was a Negro. The complaint also alleges that during that time and at the present time the defendant officials of the War Department have been advertising in newspapers and over the radio requesting qualified citizens to enlist as flying cadets in the Air Corps of the Army of the United States.

EXECUTIVE ORDER CHECKS JIM-CROW

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Discrimination against Negro skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers on the extensive $281,000,000 defense housing program was banned this week through an executive order issued by John M. Carmodv. Federal Works Administrator.

Seeking to assure full participation of Negro workers in the employment phases of the huge construction program, Mr. Carmody, acting under the authority vested in the FWA Administrator by Section 11 of the Act of October 14, 1940, issued the following regulation under which all contracts must be prosecuted:

"There shall be no discrimination by reason of race, creed, color or political affiliations in the employment of persons, qualified by training and experience, for work in the development of defense housing at the sites thereof."

At the same time, the FWA Administrator established machinery to implement the Agency's non-discrimination policy and to handle specific complaints growing out of possible violations. Copies of the regulation were sent to all contractors working on defense housing and the executive order was published in the Federal Register on Thursday, January 9.

Mr. A. J. Sarre, the Director of Personnel of the Federal Works Agency, and Mr. W. J. Trent, Jr., who is the Racial Relations Officer in that office, will give special attention to the enforcement of the regulation against discrimination in work on the defense housing program.

Thirty-two defense housing projects, containing 13,035 dwelling units, will be constructed by the United States Housing Authority at an estimated cost of more than $45,000,000 in contracts.

Defense Job Equality to Be Enforced

WASHINGTON

Discrimination against colored skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers on the extensive $281,000,000 defense housing program was banned this week through an executive order issued by John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator.

Seeking to assure full participation of colored workers in the employment phases of the huge construction program, Mr. Carmody, acting under the authority vested in the FWA Administrator by Section II of the Act of October 14, 1940, issued the following regulation under which all contracts must be prosecuted:

"There shall be no discrimination by reason of race, creed, color or political affiliations in the employment of persons, qualified by training and experience, for work in the development of defense housing at the sites thereof."

At the same time, the FWA Administrator established machinery to implement the agency's non-discrimination policy and to handle specific complaints growing out of possible violations.

Contractors Notified

Copies of the regulation were sent to all contractors working on defense housing and the executive order was published in the Federal Register on Thursday, January 9.

A. J. Sarre, white, F.W.A. director of personnel, and W. J. Trent, Jr., racial relations officer in that office, will give special attention to the enforcement of the regulation.

$150,000,000 Allowed

The vast defense housing program includes the construction of an undetermined number dwelling units to be erected with the $150,000,000 appropriation authorized in the Lanham Act. A number of these projects are now under construction.

Thirty-two defense housing projects, containing 13,035 dwelling units, will be constructed by the United States Housing Authority at an estimated cost of more than $45,000,000 in contracts.

Other phases of the program include the bulk of the housing provided for in the War Department's share of the $100,000,000 housing allocation in the Second Suplemental Defense Appropriation Act.

The Secretary of War recently allocated $54,700,000 of this sum to the FWA for housing projects for families of enlisted army men and for married civilian army personnel. The Public Buildings Administration will construct a minimum of sixty-eight projects in this connection.

WOULD PUNISH GUILTY FIRMS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—A bill to prohibit racial discrimination against persons seeking employment in national defense industries was introduced in the House last Wednesday by Representative Thomas F. Ford, Democrat, of California.

The bill would make it unlawful for any person performing a Government contract to discriminate against any individual on account of age, sex, race or color in hiring workers. Any contractor engaged in national defense production, who violates this provision, would be subject to a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $10,000.

By the terms of the bill "person" is defined as "an individual, partnership, corporation, association, or any organized group of persons. "Government contract" is defined as "a contract with the United States for the construction for the United States of any building, machinery, equipment, or facilities, or for the furnishing to the United States of articles, materials, supplies, or services."

According to advices reaching Washington, the worst offenders in excluding colored men from employment are the aircraft plants to which millions of dollars in contracts have been awarded by the United States Army and Navy through the National Defense Advisory Commission.

So far the Commission has taken no action except to state in its statement of labor policy, which was approved by the President, that there should be no discrimination on account of age, sex, race or color.

The chief excuse said to be offered by aircraft corporations having national defense contracts is that white men will not work with colored men, although there are thousands of colored and white men working together in the automobile industry, the rubber industry and the iron and steel industry.

Want Open Probe of Treatment of Negroes in Army, Navy, Air and Marine Corps—Byrnes Committee Said by Walter White to Be Chief Obstacle—Job Discrimination to Be Stressed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—Plans have been completed for the introduction in Congress next week of a resolution calling for an investigation of the treatment of the Negro in the entire national defense program including the Army, Navy, Air and Marine Corps, with particular emphasis on jobs in defense industry, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced last Friday.

Walter White, executive secretary of the association, who spent sometime in Washington this week consulting with Senators and ironing out details of the resolution, will return to the Capital Monday. The resolution, which will be sponsored by a number of Senators, representing all sections of the country, will probably be introduced in the Senate during the middle of the week, Mr. White said.

CHIEF OBSTACLE. BYRNES COMMITTEE

"The chief obstacle to getting the investigation under way," he said, "appears to be the Senate Committee on Audit and Control, whose chairman is Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, long a foe of anti-lynching legislation, and reported to be President Roosevelt's choice for the U. S. Supreme Court." Other members of this committee, which will be asked to provide the funds for the investigation, are: Millard T. Tydings, of Maryland; Carl Hayden, of Arizona, and Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire.

According to the N.A.A.C.P. secretary, present plans call for public hearings when witnesses, including officials of the Army, Navy and others high up in the government, labor union officials and qualified Negroes who have been refused jobs in defense industry, will be heard.

"We are placing particular stress on the question of jobs," he said, "because it is here that Negroes have suffered most, despite the fact that in addition to $17,000,000 already appropriated, Congress will probably appropriate $25,000,000 more for industrial defense contracts during the current session."

Probe Of Defense Bias Will Be Sought

JAN

NEW YORK.—Introduction in Congress of a resolution calling for a Senate investigation of the status and treatment of the Negro in the national defense program will be sought by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, it was announced here. JAN 30 1941

According to officials of the organization the name of the senator who will introduce the resolution will be made known within the next few days.

The announcement followed action taken by the association's board of directors at their monthly meeting held here at the NAACP's national headquarters, 69 Fifth avenue. At this meeting the board, following a lengthy discussion of the question, voted to seek a Congressional investigation into every phase of the defense program, particularly the nation-wide discrimination practiced against Negroes in the matter of employment, by firms holding federal contracts, and the refusal of vocational training to Negroes in defense training, classes, a project financed by the government.

The investigation would also include a thorough probe into the discrimination against Negroes in the Army, Navy, Army Air Corps, Medical reserve, and in the operation of local draft boards throughout the country.

Will Seek Public Hearing

The resolution will call for public hearings, the announcement said, and the taking of testimony from officials of the Army, Navy, Air Corps, employers, leaders of trade unions, and the submission of information gathered by the association as a result of two national surveys now nearing completion.

In the event that discrimination is not abolished after the investigation, the announcement said, the Association will seek the introduction of bills in Congress to require inclusion of anti-discrimination clauses in all industrial defense contracts financed in whole or in part by the federal government, and to amend the National Labor Relations Act by denying the protection of this Act to unions which discriminate either directly or indirectly against Negroes.

In making the announcement officials of the organization stated that they would "leave no stone unturned" in pushing the investigation to the limit.

Discrimination Denied in U. S. Defense Work

FEB 11 1941

By the Associated Press

Hampton, Va., Feb. 10.—The Federal Works Agency will begin an immediate inquiry into alleged discrimination against Negroes on National Defense housing projects in the Tidewater area of Virginia, John M. Carmody, administrator, said today in a letter to the Hampton Institute Builders Conference.

This announcement was a highlight of the opening session of 200 colored builders from 20 States, who gathered to discuss the "Negro Builder and National Defense."

George Zuidima, hiring agent for contractors engaged in the construction of Fort Eustis, appeared before the conference to answer reports that skilled colored carpenters were being discriminated against there.

zZuidima said that "you can't change custom over night," but pointed out that 2,300 of the 5,800 employes at Fort Eustis were Negro skilled and unskilled workers.

Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secreetary of the National Urban League, who made today's principal address, charged that Carmody's pronouncement against discrimination was nothing more than a "pious wish."

"Efficiency isn't half so important as democracy," said Granger, in answering what he termed "specious pleas that the cause of efficiency in defense projects made it impossible to hire Negroes at this time."

DAILY EDITORIALS SCORE ARMY POLICY

FEB 22 1941

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 20—Leading Connecticut daily newspapers are backing the state administration in its controversy with army authorities over the acceptance of Negro draftees. In front page editorials the newspapers score the army over race discrimination and the ambiguity of their positions in preparing to defend democracy by engaging in the very undemocratic practices of refusing to accept the services of American citizens because of their color. They unanimously declare "it's a blot upon the country."

Army Wants Parachute Jumpers, But Makes No Provision for Negroes.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Although the United States Army has just started recruiting some 1,500 officers and men for new parachute units, the same Jim Crow policy in respect to these units prevails as in the Marine Corps.

The army order for the new white recruits was issued Saturday. APR 5 - 1941

The Courier immediately contacted Judge William E. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and inquired if any provision had been made for Negro recruits.

Mr. Hastie informed The Courier that there is no present position for Negro parachute recruits.

FULL CITIZENSHIP

Under "What the People Say" o n this page is a letter written by one of the most learned and progressive ministers in Chicago—Dr. THarold M. Kingsley of the Church of the Good Shepherd. Because of its positive, uncompromising tone together with the peculiar circumstances of its origin, we deem it appropriate to comment on this letter.

The separation of soldiers' camps into colored and white sections, the lack of library and recreational facilities for the Negro trainee, and the recent declaration made by the Secretary of the Navy that democracy would blow up the navy, disturb Doctor Kingsley. He believes that if democracy carries with it sufficient explosives to blow up the Navy, then the Navy should be subjected to the test. Moreover, he is strongly of the opinion that something should be done toward the abolition of segregated induction, racial division in camps, exclusive racial personnel in the Navy, and all other practices that contravene democracy. He writes:

"This war situation certainly presents some paradoxical situations to the already harassed Negro. First, Oswald Garrison Villard (former editor of the Nation) said that the Negro is approaching the war without enthusiasm. Mordecai Johnson (president of Howard University) recently at a Roundtable of Christians and Jews gave us a dramatic illustration of what Hitler might be thinking about these soft spots in our American life.

"The best position that we poor ministers can take is ths: that war is a barbaric and unchristan institution; that we can only justify it on the same ground that robbers and predatory animals; that we must always hope that our enemies may some day be clothed and in their right mnd again and rejoin the brotherhood of humanity."

In saying that we should fight at the same time the battle for full citizenship rights and the battle for the ideals of America, Doctor Kingsley makes a point that should be weighed carefully by all those who believe that democracy is the only form of political government which gives promise of an abundant life to racial minorities. He says:

"Our difficulties in American life are a family quarrel, and while we fight among ourselves we must present a solid front against outside foes.

"I am clearly convinced that we should not wait to win the battle of full citizenship completely and finally before we take up the defense of our country. In fact, according to the Constitution of the United States both our property and our lives are subject to the call of the government as the price for the limted democracy that we may enjoy.

"Fifth column activities will put Negroes in a much weaker position than they are now. It is sound wisdom that we fight both of these battles at the same time—the battle for full citizenship rights and the battle for the ideals of America as presented in our foreign policy by President Roosevelt."

If more of our leaders were as frank and unequivocal as Doctor Kingsley, the Negro masses would have a clearer perception of the role they are to play in the crisis that threatens. Our people are divided, confused and bewildered. All this is caused by the silence maintained by our top leadership——

Anti-Semitism in Congress

SUDDEN death in the House of Representatives last week highlighted one of America's most tragic problems: the growth of anti-Semitism. Rep. Michael Edelstein of New York suffered a fatal heart attack after replying to a vehement anti-Semitic outburst by Representative Rankin of Mississippi. The gentleman from the poll-tax South had indulged in Coughlin's gibbering about "international Jewish brethren" whom he held responsible for the war in Europe. This is by no means the first such anti-Semitic ranting on the floor of the US Congress—Representative Edelstein's answer, which brought on his death, was in reply not only to Rankin but to expressions of racial prejudice which he had heard since he entered Congress last year. These expressions have only grown more frequent since the outbreak of war.

Some of the press has tried to make Edelstein a democratic martyr, and Rankin a symbol of forces that oppose war. This, of course, contradicts truth. Anti-Semitism has been spread by both war camps, by the Coughlinites and Fords and by the Rooseveltians. The administration releases the Christian Fronters who cached arms stolen from the government; it furthers anti-alien drives which follow the Hitler technique; its "defense" industries discriminate against Jews as well as Negroes. And it is allied with a British government which coddles anti-Semitic Polish colonels in London. Edelstein was a loyal follower of this administration. So, indeed, was Rankin, who pretends to oppose war but voted for most administration war measures, including the Lend-Lease Act.

PVT. JAMES CROW.

Toward the close of one of his interesting stories from the southern camps John Thompson, a Tribune reporter, called attention to the fact that a considerable number of Negroes from the 6th [Chicago] corps area had been sent for training to Camp Davis, near Wilmington, N. C. Most of these young men were born and brought up in the north and are therefore having their first experience with Jim Crow laws. Needless to say, it is a distressing experience which the communities in the vicinity of Camp Davis, despite their enthusiasm for war, are doing little or nothing to relieve.

Too many of the camps have been located in the south in response to the political desires of southern congressmen, but there are still many posts in the north to which the northern colored boys could have been sent. The New Dealers talk a lot about their sympathy for Negroes, but they seldom give any evidence of it.

South Side, Chicago.
Workers Correspondence Dept.:

Negro Workers

Their cover is but a reflection of thein generala policy toward the Negro people. Stories by Octavus Roy Cohen, which appear in the Post quite often, portray the Negro as an easy-going gambling idler who never struggles except for petty things and then uses a razor for a convincer.

Recently the Post carried an article by a Negro reformist, Walter White, in which he bemoaned the fact that Negroes were being jim-crowed and discriminated against in the U. S. army and navy, and completely barred from the marine corps and had no chance to give their lives to extend the "four freedoms" (and American imperialism) to the corners of the earth. Thus the Saturday Evening Post waves a tiny American flag at the 13 million oppressed Negro people in the United States.

Examine the advertisers in the Post in any issue for years back. You will find the ads of General Motors, Fisher body, Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac, Nylon, Pyraline, Cellophane, Frigidaire, Duco, Delco and a score of others in the same family of which the profits flow to Delaware into the house of duPont, one of if not the biggest war profiteers. duPont who has never even pretended to be a friend of the Negro people.

There is no need to look for the editorial page of the Saturday Evening Post to determine its policies. They are stated very plainly on the advertising pages and occasionally, on the cover.

F. D. R. ATTACKS DISCRIMINATION IN DEFENSE JOBS

Reports Received Negroes Not Getting Share Of Work In Test

JUN 16 1941

WASHINGTON, June 15—(AP)—Asserting that he had received complaints of nation-wide discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, President Roosevelt called upon the Office of Production Management Sunday to take immediate steps to deal "effectively" with this "grave" situation.

In a memorandum to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors, Mr. Roosevelt said that "No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries." It is "even more important," he added, "for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention," he declared, "that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion, or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity. Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effect in many localities." . . .

"Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the office of production management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower."

NEGRO CHEMISTS NOT WANTED IN DEFENSE, SAYS

JUN 13 1941

NEW YORK—"We're good for dying—but how do we live?" asks Fitzgerald Bramwell, Negro chemical engineer, in FRIDAY'S current issue. Bramwell is a graduate of Cornell Union. He is highly trained in a profession now vitally needed in defense. Yet, though he has tried at the many plants where chemical engineers are in demand, he is not wanted.

In his article in FRIDAY Magazine Bramwell, who is thirty-two years old, physically and mentally fit for the practise of his profession, points out that he has trudged from plant to plant where in print and over the radio the executives have pleaded for trained help. Bramwell dwells on the ironic fact that the 'democracy' of the executives who are busily issuing statements about 'sacrifices' necessary for democracy is curiously 'color-bound.' It draws the color line when it comes to hiring competent Negroes for any jobs outside the most menial.

He names the Sperry Gyroscope Company as one which bars Negroes. Among the airplane companies he mentions Wright Aeronautical, Vultee Aircraft and Brewster Aircraft as firms which refuse jobs to Negroes. But these firms are only a few practicing the policy of the color line.

As Bramwell says in his FRIDAY article, "Jim Crow is King. Otherwise why should the color of a man's skin bar him from job opportunities? We are ready to fight to free the oppressed. But to us this also means liberation of America's Negro population which lives today under the bonds of a Fascism as deliberate as any Hitler has imposed on any conquered nation. Our Fight Is Right Here."

DEFENSE HANDLING OF NEGROES SCORED

JUN 12 1941

Council for Democracy Charges Discrimination by Industry, Army, Navy and Marines

'2D CLASS' CITIZENS SEEN

Pamphlet Says 'Dangerous and Stupid Policy' Is Threat to Unity of Nation

The Council for Democracy, a national organization headed by Raymond Gram Swing and "dedicated to propagation of American faith in democracy," issued a pamphlet entitled "The Negro and Defense" yesterday, charging that Negroes are being treated as "second class" citizens in the armed forces and defense industries.

After citing examples of discrimination by labor unions, aviation and other industries, and the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, the council particularly assailed the lack of training facilities for Negroes. It asserted the Negro was condemned to a vicious circles "in which manufacturers refuse to hire Negroes on the ground they are not trained, and schools refuse them on the ground there will be no jobs for those trained."

The pamphlet said "exclusion and humiliation of the Negro are complete" in the Navy and Marine Corps. "This attitude of the Navy and Marine Corps," it continued, "led to their being characterized by the Hampton Institute Conference on the Negro in National Defense as representing 'the most undemocratic and un-American aspect of our government.'"

Army Policy Attacked

Attacking the Army's policy "that Negroes shall be enrolled and trained in segregated units," it contends that at least this segregation should not be used as in the past to "degrade" Negro soldiers to work battalions, officers' servants and menial labor.

Negroes have been consistently denied the opportunity for Army aviation training, although it was noted a segregated air field is to be built at Tuskegee Institute. Late last year, it went on, the National Guard had fewer colored units than before the first World War.

Calling it "a dangerous and stupid policy which compels one-tenth of our population to fight simply for an opportunity to participate" in the American struggle to preserve democracy at a time when the nation needs all its manpower, skill and popular support from all groups, the council urged action "from the top and from the ground up."

"From the top," it declared, "such effort must take the form of control by the nation, through its command of the defense forces and of those agencies controlling the production of defense material."

Asserting that the government, in order to take such action, must have the backing of well-informed local opinion, the council urged community action by small local groups to break down discrimination against the Negro, including surveys to determine where non-employment of Negroes exists and of Negro health and housing, letters to the press, radio appeals and discussion groups.

Danger to Nation Seen

The council warned that if Negroes were allowed to be an "embittered and disillusioned people" they would become a danger to the nation in wartime and "fertile groun for subversive propaganda, agitation and unrest."

Since the booklet was prepared, said an addendum attached to it, information has reached the council that two of the companies cited as discriminating against Negroes have changed their policies. It found this hopeful sign of what public opinion could do toward "extending equality to the Negro."

The pamphlet was based on information supplied by a national panel of consultants, including Will W. Alexander, consultant on minority groups, OPM; Jonathan Daniels, editor, The Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer; Walter White, secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Professor Otto Klineberg, Columbia University; Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator; Dr. Joseph S. Roucek of Hofstra College, and Herbert J. Seligman, author. It was the third in the "Democracy in Action" series published by the council after being prepared by members of a panel of more than 300 American authorities in the social sciences, working in cooperation with the Council's Committee of Correspondence, of which Professor C. J. Friedrich of Harvard is chairman.

A NEW DEAL "HEADACHE"

Under the caption of "Pvt. James Crow," the Chicago Tribune of Saturday, June 14, carried the following editorial:

JUN 20 1941

"Toward the close of his interesting stories from the southern camps, John Thompson, a Tribune reporter, called attention to the fact that a considerable number of Negroes from the 6th (Chicago) corps area had been sent for training to Camp Davis, near Wilmington, N. C. Most of these young men were born and brought up in the north and are therefore having their first experience of Jim Crow laws. Needless to say, it is a distressing experience which the communities in the vicinity of Camp Davis, despite their enthusiasm for war, are doing little or nothing to relieve.

"Too many of the camps have been located in the South in response to the political desires of southern congressmen, but there are still many posts in the north to which the northern colored boys could have been sent. The New Dealers talk a lot but their sympathy for Negroes, but they seldom give any evidence of it."

We can assure the Tribune that their Mr. Thompson has written accurately about the bigotry prevalent in the vicinities where army camps have been located. That it has served to sap the morale of colored soldiers, getting prepared for their baptism of fire in defense of "democracy", is another thing that can be frankly stated.

It is time that the Federal Government quit coddling congressmen or local authorities or the people in any community where army camps are located and assert the power of this nation to protect the men it is preparing to defend this country.

When the decision was made to send thousands of colored soldiers to Southern camps for training the expectation of every decent American was that these boys would be treated with the same consideration that the soldiers of any other race were treated. And they would have been so treated had the Federal authorities made it plain that Uncle Sam would exert the might of his office to see to it that all soldiers were treated civilly. The failure of government officials to do this is one of the outstanding blunders of the present "defense effort."

Soldiers Say Southern Replacement Center At Rustin Once Scene Of Lynching And Discrimination

RUSTIN, La., Sept. 25—(ANP) — Southern army replacement centers are as much hell as Southern M.P.'s, according to Pvts. Harold Markhume and John Ford, and Corp. David Laughlin, of the 94th Engineer battalion.

It is reported that the new brick school building here being used by the second army as a replacement center during the maneuvers is used exclusively by white troops. Negro soldiers are examined and processed in a tent some 200 yards from the building. Too, colored soldiers are not allowed to come near the school.

Sleep on Floor

Sleeping and eating quarters for Negro troops are about three miles from the replacement center. There, they are forced to sleep on the floor with only two blankets White soldiers, however, are issued a cot and two blankets. Meals are leftovers from what the white troops have eaten, according to colored soldiers stationed here. In some instances, they must prepare their own meals or have them prepared by young women of the USO. The USO branch here is reputed to be the only such station for colored troops in the south.

One soldier, Pvt. Markhume of Detroit, protested the discriminatory treatment being accorded him, and alleges that the commanding officer of the replacement center told him the school building had been donated for the use of the army, only on condition that no Negro troops be permitted to receive service there. This town was the scene of a sensational lynching a few years ago.

USO Services Inadequate

However, the USO for colored troops, housed in Rustin's Negro high school, is doing a good job of administering to soldiers' need for recreation. Employing 30 attractive young women as hostesses, the branch furnishes refreshments and dancing for the soldiers. This is, however, far inadequate for the number of soldiers in the vicinity. On the other hand, white soldiers in the same area have dozens of USO units, in addition to parishes of Sabine, Winn, Natchitoches, and DeSoto, access to the facilities of WPA state library, and numerous other forms of entertainment.

No discrimination in the Camp Robinson hospital has been reported.

Negro Doctor Is Barred By Navy Officials

SEP 30 1941

Had Passed All Examinations; Is Turned Down

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The United States Navy does not want Dr Harold J. Franklin of Jersey City N. J., as assistant surgeon with the rank of junior lieutenant even though he passed all examinations —written, oral and physical—necessary for that post.

Dr. Franklin, who is now an interne at Medical Center in Jersey City, brought all the documents in his case to the office of the NAACP here including the final word from the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy Department: "You did not meet physical qualifications for appointment."

WROTE THE NAVY

Dr. Franklin wrote to the Navy May 25, 1941, and on May 27, he received a letter containing a circular, instructions for filing his application, and information that the next examination for appointment in the medical corps of the Navy would be held August 11 to 15, inclusive.

Proof that the Navy is anxious to secure surgeons may be seen in the cordial tone of the letter, whose salutation was "Dear Dr. Franklin", and whose ending contained the phrase "With kind regards."

Under date of July 21, Dr. Franklin was notified to report to the Naval Hospital at Brooklyn, N. Y., at 9 a. m. August 11 for the examination.

GIVEN ENDORSEMENT

On the back of that letter is an official endorsement from the U. S. Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., signed by P. P. Maher, which states "examined and found physically qualified for appointment as Assistant Surgeon in the U. S. Navy with the rank of Lieutenant (junior grade)."

Later in August, Dr. Franklin, found that he had passed both the written and oral examinations, and, since he had been certified as physically fit, he awaited notice of his appointment. When no notice was received, he finally wired the Navy department in Washington, and on September 11 received a telegram stating "You did not meet physical qualifications for appointment."

Puzzled by this apparent contradiction, Dr. Franklin wrote the Bureau a letter immediately, and on September 15 received a letter which added no information to that contained in the telegram. The letter merely states "A review of the report of physical examination conducted on August 11, 1941, shows that you do not meet the physical requirements for appointment as Assistant Surgeon."

GETS BRUSQUE LETTER

In contrast to the cordial tone of the first letter received by Dr Franklin on May 25, the letter of September 15 is strictly business-like, beginning "Dear Sir".

Dr. Franklin, who is light in complexion, told the NAACP that the only possible reason he could imagine for the reversal of opinion by the Navy department on his fitness was that somewhere in going over his record the Navy found out that he was actually a Negro.

NAVY DOORS MUST OPEN

After passing all examinations, written, oral and physical, for assistant surgeon in the Navy Dr. Harold J. Franklin of Jersey City says the Navy withheld his appointment because of his color. The subterfuge employed by the naval officials is not anything new: rejection ecause of trumped-up failure to pass the required physical examination is part of the stock echnique for barring colored ppointees from Annapolis. To preserve the naval caste system the heartless dodge apparently has been passed along.

The Navy's action in the case of Dr. Franklin makes it clear that the Navy is still determined to limit colored enlistments to the mess department, despite President Roosevelt's expressed disapproval of discrimination and despite the widespread public demand for more democracy in the nation's armed forces. Navy reactionaries can not forever beat back the united purpose of 15 million aroused Americans to pry open the Navy, so that all citizens may have a free opportunity to serve in any part of the service for which they are qualified. Naval doors must be opened, unless we are to count democratic government a farce or an impossible dream. The pride of the brass hats may have to be hurt. Let them ponder that colored citizens—full fledged Americans all — have always won what they determinedly went after; that the real democrats of the nation always rally to support every legitimate struggle for full American rights. Whose Navy is it, anyway?

REGISTRATION and VOTING

Tuesday, November 4, the citizens of Boston will elect a Mayor, members of the School Committee and members of the City Council. These high positions of public trust should be filled by persons who in the judgment of the electorate are best able to carry out the responsibilities of the offices. That judgment can only be effectively expressed when the great majority of voters go to the polls on election day and vote their choice of candidates.

Voting is evidence that democracy still functions. The right to vote is a valuable right which people living in the North and West too often minimize because it is so easily exercised. But in many sections in the South—a total of eight sovereign States—poll tax requirements disfranchise millions of voters and permit incompetent and reactionary politicians to perpetuate themselves in office to the injury and humiliation of free born American citizens, who are constantly reminded that they are too poor to vote. Where men and women can freely use the franchise, if incompetents get into public office it is simply because of aparty and neglect on the part of the voters—the real rulers of the country, so recognized and appealed to by every candidate who seeks office.

The first step for every voter, of course, is to make sure that his or her name is on the voting list. Names of voters are sometimes omitted through oversight even in the case of persons formerly listed for several years. All eligible persons should first register. This should be attended to at once and not be put off until near election day when as a rule late registrants crowd the registration booths and cause long waiting

The real task confronting Voters is to decide upon the fitness of the candidates on the basis of their records or per-civilization and democracy. In those communities, where intelligent people are free to use the ballot, the responsibilities upon all citizens to exercise sonsonal qualifications. Acer of the registration status of the community is prosmoted. There is no magic or mysterry about the progress of without fear or favor.

These high positions of public trust should be filled by persons who in the judgment of the electorate are best able to carry out the responsibilities of the offices. That judgment can only be effectively expressed when the great majority of voters go to the polls on election day and vote their choice of candidates.

Voting is evidence that democracy still functions. The right to vote is a valuable right which people living in the North and West too often minimize because it is so easily exercised. But in many sections in the South—a total of eight sovereign States—poll tax requirements disfranchise millions of voters and permit incompetent and reactionary politicians to perpetuate themselves in office to the injury and humiliation of free born American citizens, who are constantly reminded that they are too poor to vote. Where men and women can freely use the franchise, if incompetents get into public office it is simply because of aparty and neglect on the part of the voters—the real rulers of the country, so recognized and appealed to by every candidate who seeks office.

The first step for every voter, of course, is to make sure that his or her name is on the voting list. Names of voters are sometimes omitted through oversight even in the case of persons formerly listed for several years. All eligible persons should first register. This should be attended to at once and not be put off until near election day when as a rule late registrants crowd the registration booths and cause long waiting

NATIONAL MORALE VERY LOW ON EVE OF GOING TO WAR

Negroes In Army And Out Complain Of Race Discrimination, Says Capital Observer

By Emmett J. Scott

Washington, D. C.—Unhappily, the American Press, black and white, at this time of all times, is filled with the most acrid, irritating, stinging comments and arguments with respect to national affairs, particularly national defense and national morale.

All of this is definitely calculated to arouse violent animosities and repercussions calculated to upset and destroy national civilian morale.

There is general recognition of the fact we are in the war. As far back as last February, Henry R. Luce, Editor and Publisher of Time, Life, and Fortune Magazines wrote:

WE ARE IN THE WAR

"___We are IN the war. All of this talk about whether this or that might or might not get us into the war is wasted effort. We are, for a fact, IN the war____

"We start into this war with huge Government debt, a vast bureaucracy and a whole generation of young people trained to look to the Government as the source of all life____The Party in power is the one which for long years has been most sympathetic to all manner of socialist doctrines and collectivist trends____The President of the United States has continually reached for more and more power, and he owes his continuation in office today largely to the coming of of the war. "____Thus, the fear that the United States will be driven to a national socialism, as a result of catalysmic circumstances and contrary to the free will of the American people, is an entirely justifiable fear____"

Columnists of the national reputation of Mark Sullivan, Ernest Lindley, Frank Kent, Stanley High, Walter Lippman, Erwin Canham have all sought the reasons for the present confusion and bewilderment. Even William S. Knudsen, Co-Director of the Office of Production Management, has been compelled to admit—"I don't think we've got the spirit yet to do this job upon which we have embarked.

A State of Apathy

Closer and closer we are to "a shooting war," but American morale is in a state of apathy.

In seeking the reasons for the depressed condition of civilian morale, the writers above referred to, undoubtedly are keeping in mind the ancient tradition of free speech and are expressing themselves with candor and the utmost frankness. Some of them have gone so far as to refer to the conditions responsible for present-day lags in preparedness as having been brought about by a series of "follies, blunders, futilities, absurdities and impracticalities" which have contributed to the woeful inadequacies in defense efforts.

Why Negroes Are Depressed

In-so-far as the Negro group in America is concerned, the reasons for inadequate civilian morale among them are not far to seek. On the very day that the National Defense Program became a vital necessity, and for months after, every technique of obstruction was empolyed, not only to relegate it to minor participation in the defense effort, but, in many instances, to deny Negro men and women any part whatsoever—in Industry, in Labor Organization recognition, and in Federal Government employment.

Every step-by-step recognition so far grudgingly given has been at the cost of much superheated effort on the part of the Negro Press, a powerful element of the White Press, Negro Organizations, and the individual and combined efforts of influential White and Colored men and women in almost every part of the country.

This writer has only recently called attention to the War Department program as it relates to Negores. Its denial of our percentage representation in the Army set-up, including denial of officer and selectee personnel proportioned to the Negro population of the United States, and other inequities not at all defensible.

The Battle Continues

The battle still continues for larger inclusion in the industrial effort despite rosy promises and glowing anticipatory reports.

But, worse than all, the civilian morale of the Negro group has been seriously impaired by the continuous reports from Army Camps, reported week by week in the Negro Press, of humiliating experiences outside of and inside of Army service—segregations, mistreatment in Southern towns and cities, killing beatings, hangings—every effort to kill the manly spirit of men being trained supposedly, as they are informed, to defend democracy in the United States, to preserve it in Great Britain, and to extend Mr. Roosevelt's Four Freedoms to the uttermost parts of the World.

In the very nature of things, unified national morale is not to be secured until a better spirit prevails; until a deepening sense of justice and fair-play becomes evident; and until those highly placed officials whose duty it is to change these conditions manifest some decisive sense of intention to cure the evils which now vex and discourage and dishearten the Negro public generally.

REVEALS NEW ARMY POLICY

Judge William H. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, revealed in a speech Saturday at the dedication of the Anacostia Recreation camp for colored troops near Washington, that the War Department had completely revamped the military police personnel at Fort Bragg and made provisions for colored soldiers to be attached to this branch of the service with full authority. The action followed the Courier expose and recommendations. Judge Hastie is shown with Major Alston W. Burleigh, commandant of the camp.—Big Four News Photo.

Hastie Speaks

IN his address at the dedication ceremonies of the Anacostia Leave Camp Saturday, William H. Hastie, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, told his listeners that "the problem of the Negro soldier in the southern community has been made more difficult by prevailing racial attitudes. There can be," he said, "no excuse for conduct by any American which subjects any member of his army to humiliation, abuse, or treatment as a despised inferior." It is interesting to know that the War department is aware of the fact that all is not well with the Negro soldiers below the Mason-and-Dixon line.

From what has been done by the War department every one would have been justified in believing that it had taken no cognizance of the despicable conditions facing colored troops in the South.

Hastie assures us in his speech that his department not only knows something about it but is actually investigating conditions. He says, regarding the action of the government that, "It has been said that the military investigation is merely a means of whitewashing the mistreatment of Negro soldiers. For example, the investigation of a recent affray between Negro soldiers and military policemen near Fort Bragg has been viewed with skepticism by some civilians. I am in position to say that all aspects of the Fort Bragg controversy have been subjected to most detailed inquiry. Hundreds of pages of testimony," he boasts, "have been taken, so that even the reading and analysis is still in process, the facts already established have led to certain important corrective measures . ."

Mr. Hastie no doubt feels that something could and should have been done to discourage the brutal treatment of Negro soldiers. He says the complaints have been investigated. That is not enough. He said a veteran officer "experienced in Military Police work is being detailed to Fort Bragg as Provost Marshal to command the Military Police force." We say this is not enough. He said selected personnel of colored and white will be placed at some of the camps. This is not enough.

The 80,000 colored soldiers want to feel that the Arkansas incidents and the Fort Bragg incidents will never occur again. They do not want to feel that a state police force will insult them.

The Federal government, and only it, can give them such assurance. But it won't do so by investigation. The soldiers want action. They know if the government is serious about protecting them it would have had action and somebody would have been in jail for interfering with the United States Army. They know that the government is interested in applying the South. We venture to guess that action of the War is powerless to do anything about it and the Civilian Aide to the Secretary of for the Arkansas abuses going any further. the investigative stage

Report Pressure Growing In All Sections Of U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C.!—(SNS)—Now that the Lend-Lease bill has been passed action is being sought looking to the passage of Senate Resolution 75, which provides for an investigation of discrimination against Negroes in the whole national defense program.

MAR 22 1941

The first step is to have the resolution approved by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, before which it not rests. The chairman of this committee is Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah. SAVANNAH JOURNAL SAVANNAH, GA.

If the resolution is approved by the committee, it must then be approved by the Senate, and the investigation can proceed. One important detail is approval by the Audit and Control committee so that the necessary funds can be provided.

Pressure for passage of the resolution is going in all sections of the country as the shameful picture of the discrimination against the Negro is beng revealed.

New factories are springing up with lily-white employment policies; billions of dollars in additional contracts have been awarded to firms which refuse to employ Negroes.

MAR 22 1941

It has been revealed recently that the following New York firms have placed requests for "white, Christian help only": Metal Manufacturing Division, Mack Trucking International, Brewster Aeronautical, Sperry Gyroscope, Ford Instrument. This situation obtains throughout the entire country with only enough exceptions to prove the rule. SAVANNAH JOURNAL SAVANNAH, GA.

The discriminations sought to be officially exposed by S. R. 75, and remedied, are brought sharply to focus by the nationwide broadcast of the Navy, calling for 25,000 pilots. No Negroes are permitted to enlist in any branch of the Navy except as mess attendants.

No Jim Crow Theatre Says War Office

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The War Department denied last Friday that Jim Crow theatres are being built in Army camps.

Theatres built at Fort Custer, Michigan, have not been arected with a view towards racial discrimination, Truman K. Gibson, Jr., assistant to the civilian aide to the Secretary of War, said.

He explained that "There are several theatres for the more than 7,000 men stationed at Fort Custer which takes up a physical area of more than seven miles. The 184th Field Artillery (formerly the Eighth Regiment, Illinois National Guard) is more than four miles from the Post Headquarters and is separated from the nearest regiment by a firebreak area."

Mr. Gibson added that the theatre built in the 184th Field Artillery area "is designed to serve the physical area in which that regimental unit is located."

"There are other Negro troops located at Fort Custer who go to the theatres in the areas in which they are located," he said. "One quartermaster unit, for example, which is located more than four miles from the 184th Field Artillery, was encamped before the 184th Field Artillery arrived and continues to frequent the theatre in the immediate vicinity."

Racial Discrimination Is Banned By Defense Housing Coordinator In Memorandum To Official Staff

In response to urging of the National Urban League, C. F. Palmer Federal Housing Defense Coordinator, this week made public a memorandum addressed to the Defense Housing staff and consultants on the question of equitable housing facilities for Negro industrial defense workers. This action followed a conference which an Urban League committee held with Mr. Palmer last October and a letter addressed to him by Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the League under date of March 3rd.

In each instance the National Urban League called Mr. Palmer's attention to the fact that "if Negro workers are barred from living in defense housing projects, in many cases they will find themselves barred from working in the plants and on the jobs near which these housing projects have been located". Mr. Palmer's memorandum gave assurance that the influence of the Division of Defense Housing Coordination will be used to protect the right of Negroes to residence in defense housing projects directed under the authority of the Division. The memorandum stated: MAR 22 1941

"The racial policy adopted in the Defense Housing Program will have an important effect upon the Nation's total defense productivity. World War records reveal the great military and industrial contribution made by the Negro. World War experiences and the affirmed intentions of the Office of Production Management indicate that Negro workers will constitute an ever increasing factor in defense Production. To assure equitable and adequate facilities to eligible Negro personnel and industrial defense workers, the following policies are hearby adopted by the Division of Defense Housing Coordination:

"1. To include the housing needs of the Negro in the Defense Housing Program by making equitable provisions for his housing requirements in accordance with the purposes scope, and objectives of this agency.

2. It shall be the responsibility of Regional Coordinators to ascertain from labor surveys and other sources, the racial composition of workers now engaged, or to be employed in defense industries.

"3. In making analyses of the housing needs of a community or locality. full consideration shall be given to the adequacy of housing facilities available to Negro defense workers.

"4. Subject to the determination of the needs, housing will be provided for the families of Negro industrial workers, families of eligible military personnel, and those of civilian workers in military establishments. MAR 22 1941

"5. Locality Program Reports shall specify the housing required for Negro occupancy, if in the locality under consideration there is evidence of need.

MAR 17 1941

Report on Segregation by Government Hits White House

WASHINGTON, March 16. — In what is probably the most comprehensive summary of its kind on the subject, the National Lawyers Guild today made public here a report on Jim Crow practices in the Army and Navy, flatly scoring them as "a denial of the very essence of democracy."

White House endorsement of discrimination and segregation policies in the military is irreconcilable with the slogan of the preservation of democracy, adds the report, submitted by the Guild's civil rights committee, headed by the noted constitutional lawyer Osmond K. Fraenkel. MAR 17 1941

The report calls the use of Negro quotas in the armed forces a precedent "dangerous to everyone who can be identified as a member of a racial or religious minority and to every American who prizes his heritage of freedom and equality."

LINKS WITH ANTI - SEMITISM

While the report does not mention the Nazi practice of the "numerus clausus" it declares that the anti-democratic character of the quota system for racial or national minorities is "shown by the fact that every anti-Semitic government has made use of it."

Segreation and discrimination are not forbidden by the Selective Service Act, according to the report, and the law must therefore be amended. The committee proposes to change the Act specifically barring Jim Crow practices.

Particular criticism is leveled by the report at President Roosevelt's statement of Oct. 9 last in which Jim Crow practices were backed.

"Thus sanctioned by White House endorsement," the report declares, "Jim Crowism in the Army and Navy bring with it the most flagrant discrimination—an inherent product of Negro segregation. The Army has already announced that it does not intend to use Negro officers except in three regiments of the National Guard; the old 8th Illinois, the old 369th, New York and the 372nd, New Jersey."

TRACES HISTORY

Tracing the recent history of Jim Crowism in the Army, the report points out that in the first World War "Negroes were kept out of all services but the infantry, and only one of the four Negro regiments was maintained as a combat unit. Of the 300,000 Negro soldiers, 200,000 were sent abroad, but were used mainly in labor battalions or as stevedores or for other menial jobs."

Discrimination is especially severe in the Navy, the report goes on. "In the last war the highest rank attained by Negroes in the Navy was officers' cook or steward," it says. "The same condition prevails today." MAR 17 1941

Futrher, the report adds:

"The Negro cannot be a seaman, a gunner, a technician. He is barred entirely from both the Navy Air Corps and the Marine Corps."

Even civilian branches of the government follow the same policy, says the report, declaring:

"The United States Maritime Service has gone a step further than the Navy Department, quietly adopting a policy of gradually excluding Negro seamen from jobs as firemen and coal passers on government transport ships."

Promise of formation of Negro aviation units is characterized by the report as a "delusion." "Not a single Negro has been in the Army Air Corps and sent to Glenview (a special Jim Crow center set up for Negro pilots) for this training," it says. MAR 17 1941

New York's Selective Service Headquarters, under directorship of Col. Arthur V. McDermott, the city's first deputy comptroller, was also branded as Jim Crow by the report, which quotes an order to local boards from that office last Dec. 23 asking specifically for "a total of 3,663 white men" for the January, 1941, call. Negroes are to be inducted only after special Jim Crow facilities are built for them, according to the quoted order.

The report also quotes at considerable length a study of Jim Crowism in the military by Professor Milton R. Konvitz entitled "The Legal Status of the Negro in the Army," published in The Guild Lawyer, December, 1940. One section of the Konvitz survey quoted follows: MAR 17 1941

ENDANGERS ALL

"It is amazing that these announcements aroused scarcely any protest.

"Here is an importation of the numerus clausus practice of Europe a practice made notorious toward the end of the Nineteenth Century when the Czarist Government fixed a quota to govern the admision of Jews to the Russian Universities and schools of higher learning. That this practice is a denial of the very essence of democracy is in part shown by the fact that every anti-Semitic government has made use of it. MAR 17 1941

"Very quietly this obnoxious practice has been introduced in the United States, in the very institution created to defend our democracy. It is wrong in itself and as a precedent, dangerous to everyone wo can be identified as a member of a racial or religious minority and to every American who prizes his heritage of freedom and equality. The practice is as indefensible as it is unprecedented."

The report also quotes the letter of a Negro soldier in The Crisis November, 1940. Writes the Negro:

"How can we be trained to protect America, which is called a free nation, when all around us rears the ugly head of segregation?"

LAWSUIT AGAINST GOVERNMENT GETS ORDER FOR FLYERS

MAR 28 1941

Yancey Williams Is Told To Report For Training, Others To Be Called At Once

WASHINGTON, Mar. 20—(ANP)—A suit recently filed against the war department and Secretary Stimson by Yancey Williams, student at Howard University, charging discrimination and asking that he be allowed to enlist in the air corps is considered to be responsible for the new official order sent to each corps area permitting the acceptance of Negro applications for enlistment as flying cadets.

Williams has already been ordered to report for examination and possible acceptance in the army air corps. A preliminary physical examination has already been given him by private physicians to insure his supporters that he is physically fit.

Because of these developments the department of justice which is handling the case for the war department has asked that the suit be dismissed. No action has yet been taken on this plea, however.

The order which went from the war department headquarters to commanders of the nine corps areas stated that "applications from Negro applicants for appointments as flying cadets will be accepted and handled in the same way as prescribed for white applicants."

The requirements for appointment of Negro applicants will be identical with those for white applicants, also, the order stated.

Applications should be made to the commanding generals of the corps areas throughout the country according to the geographical location of the applicant's home.

Opening up a new avenue of training for Negroes, this final capitulation of the war department follows instructions laid down in previous legislation by congress which demanded that Negroes should be admitted to the air corps.

COMMITTEE NAMED TO STUDY DEFENSE JOB JIM CROW BAR

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the senate committee on education and labor announced the membership of the sub-committee to hold preliminary hearings on S.R. 75, which provides for an exhaustive investigation of discrimination against the Negro in the national defense program.

Chairman of the sub-committee is Senator H. H. Schwartz of Wyoming. The other members of the sub-committee of five are Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, James M. Mead of New York, Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and Robert M. LeFollette of Wisconsin. It will be remembered that Senator Schwartz introduced the amendment to the national defense act to prohibit discrimination on account of race, creed or color.

According to present plans, the sub-committee will hold its first hearing on April 1 when Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will testify.

The senate sponsors of the resolution—Senators Robert F. Wagner of New York, W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, Arthur Capper of Kansas, and Prentiss Brown of Michigan—will urge speedy adoption of the resolution and will emphasize the nature and extent of the discrimination the Negro is encountering which makes such senate action necessary.

It is hoped that the sub-committee will make a speedy report, after the factual material has established the need of an exhaustive senate probe of discrimination. Senator Thomas has pledged speedy action by the full senate committee on education and labor as soon as the sub-committee has acted. This will bring S. R. 75 to the floor of the senate very shortly for a vote, provided it is not held up by the senate audit and control committee of which Senator James F. Bryenes of South Carolina is chairman. Under the senate rules, all measures which provide for expenditure from the senate contingent fund must be passed on by the audit control committee.

Walter White, NAACP secretary, who has been here most of the week working on the above steps, again urged that authentic information regarding discrimination, particularly in industrial plants filling contracts from the federal government for the defense program, be sent to the national office of the NAACP., 69 Fifth Avenue, New York.

People Unaware of Developments

"We are convinced that if the American people only knew what is going on in the national defense program and fully understand how vicious is the discrimination the Negro is encountering, there would be country- wide indignation against those who are holding up defense because of their anti-Negro prejudices. The arrogance of such persons as J. H. Kindelberger, president and general manager of North American Aviation, Inc., in stating 'that under no circumstance will Negroes be employed as aircraft workers or mechanics' in the North American Aviation Company's plant is insufferable. When Negroes pay income, defense, or other taxes they are paying Mr. Kindelberger's salary and building up profits for North American Aviation Company's stockholders. Negro Americans and decent white Americans have got to let Mr. Kindelberger and his kind know that they cannot get away with such brazen tactics.

Negroes To Be Used Only As Janitors

NEW YORK CITY — A statement by J. H. Kindelberger, president and general manager of North American Aviation, Inc., that his company employed no Negro skilled workers, and definitely would not employ them under any circumstances, brought a storm of protest this week from officials of the National Urban League.

Mr. Kindelberger's statement was published in the Kansas City Star on Monday, March 17. He had been interviewed by telephone from Inglewood, California, where his company has its principal office.

BAR SKILLED NEGROES

Mr. Kindelberger said that North American would send about 1,000 men to Kansas City early in May to open up the company's new ten-million-dollar plant there. "Applications for jobs in the plant, where we will employ upward of 10,000 persons, will be received at the temporary Kansas City offices in the near future," Mr. Kindelberger said. "We will receive applications from both white and Negro workers. However, the Negroes will be considered only as janitors and in other similar capacities."

"It was the first statement made by the North American president concerning the employment of Negroes in the plant to be operated by his company at Fairfax. He emphasized that under no circumstances would Negroes be employed as aircraft workers or mechanics in the plant.

USE NEGRO JANITORS

"While we are in complete sympathy with the Negro, it is against the company's policy to employ them as mechanics or aircraft workers," Mr. Kindelberger said. "We use none except white workers in the plant here in Inglewood and the plant in Dallas and we intend to maintain the same policy in Kansas City.

"There will be some jobs as janitors for Negroes. Regardless of their training as aircraft workers, we will not employ them in the North American plant." . . .

In a letter addressed to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman of the Office of Production Management, Eugene Kinckle Jones, executive secretary of the League, branded the aircraft industry's discrimination policy "the principal disgrace which we are facing internally today." The interview with Mr. Kindelberger, he went on, "lays bare the fact that the aircraft industry does not intend to use Negroes, even if trained, in skilled and semi-skilled positions.

USE NEGRO SCHOOLS FOR WHITES

"But the article does not state a further fact. Not only will Negroes not be given the chance to become trained, but the Negro vocational school in Kansas City, Missouri—in a segregated system though it is—is to be utilized for classes of white trainees, from which Negroes are to be barred.

MAR

"Isn't there something you can do about this?" Mr. Jones asked the O.P.M. executives. "God forbid that this travesty on justice should spread and give our nation's enemies weapons more effective than bullets."

Copies of the letter were sent to Dr. John W. Studebaker, Commissioner in the Office of Education; John Carmody, Director of the Bureau of Employment Security; and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

OPM Head's Anti-Negro Policy Is Being Cited By Industrial Leaders

APR 10 1941

Washington, (By A. E. White for ANP)—The A-1 stumbling block between the employment of Negroes in defense industries is the head of the Office of the Production Management—William Knudsen.

Recent developments have indicated that the policy of the huge industrial plants is being patterned after the policy of the General Motors company, of which Mr. Knudsen is president, and which is desultory in the matter of employing Negroes.

Other developments as brought to light in the case of the North American Aviation, Inc., case, show that the president of that company who brought down the wrath of the entire Negro population of the country on his head by his statement that he was not going to hire any Negroes in the Kansas plant of this cofpany, except as janitors, is merely following the dictated policy of the controlling organization of North American Aviation, which happens to be General Motors.

That the North American Aviation is a subsdiary of the General Motors group was brought out in contracts awarded this company to the extent of over $133,000,000 in the initial contracts. General Motors tiself has been awarded over $600,000,000 in defense contracts.

Evasive

Mr. Knudsen has been approached time after time, it is alleged, by persons interested, suggesting that he could solve the situation once and for all by issuing a statement to the effect that Negroes should be employed in these industries, but his replies have been very evasive and detrimental to t heinclusion of Negroes.

KNUDSEN ACCUSED IN BRINGING GENERAL MOTORS JIM CROW POLICY INTO OPM AFFAIRS BY NAACP HEAD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(By A. E. White for ANP)—The A-1 stumbling block between the employment of Negroes in defense industries is the head of the office of production management—William Knudsen.

Recent developments have indicated that the policy of the huge industrial plants is being patterned after the policy of the General Motors Company, of which Knudsen is president, and which is desultory in the matter of employing Negroes.

Other developments as brought to light in the case of the North American Aviation, Inc., case, show that the president of the company, who brought down the wrath of the entire Negro population of the country on his head by his statement that he was not going to hire any Negroes in the Kansas plant of this company, except as janitors, is merely following the dictated policy of the controlling organization of North American Aviation, which happens to be General Motors.

Subsidiiry of General Motors

That the North American Aviation is a subsidiary of the General Motors group was brought out in contracts awarded this company to the extent of over $133,000,000 in the initial contracts. General Motors itself has been awarded over $600,000,000 in defense contracts.

Mr. Kindleberger, president of the Kansas company, holds his position by virtue of the actions of the parent company, therefore, his actions are guided and determined largely by the policy established.

Mr. Knudsen has been approached time after time, it is alleged, by persons interested, suggesting that he could solve the situation once and for all by issuing a statement to the effect that Negroes should be employed in these industries, but his replies have been very evasive and detrimental to the inclusion of Negroes.

Pressure each week is growing stronger to relieve this "bottleneck" but the "Great Dane" remains adamant and for some reason or other refuses to concede to the wishes of his assistants, all of whom realize the neccessity of bringing Negroes definitely into the program.

Is Accepted Industrial Policy

Mr. Knudsen's policy of barring Negroes from his own establishment is being cited by industrial leaders and inasmuch as Knudsen was appointed by the president to his powerful post as head of the office of production management, these industrialists feel safe in feeling that they are following an accepted practice.

In the Kansas subsidiary of General Motors, Kindleberger will train and employ some 10,000 persons, none of whom will be Negroes.

Should Mr. Knudsen be prevailed to crack down on employers by issuing a statement to the effect that Negroes are to be employed on the contracts, there would be a definite change of policy.

But until Mr. Knudsen himself experiences a change of attitude the Negro will be barred from the fields of endeavor which nowadays offer the only solution to the employment problem of the minority group in the United States.

Leaders throughout the country are anxious to stay in the good grace of the government and feel that by following the accepted pattern of the head of General Motors, they will achieve the desired results.

Mrs. Roosevelt Deplores Private Industrial Bias

AUG 21 1941

NEW YORK—(A.N.P.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt denounced racial discrimination in private industry when she spoke before a group of fifty representatives of business and industry in the Astoria Work shop of the NYA last Wednesday afternoon.

Acknowledging the difficulty encountered by local boys and girls in finding employment, she saw a redoubling of this handicap in the case of Negroes, whom she said have a "desperately harder" time.

"It's not the color of your skin that makes you hirable", she said. "You've got to take a person as a person, regardless of his race, creed or color, when it comes to filling a job".

First lady had previously toured the work shop inspecting the additional equipment and the facilities of the plant. She had not visited the shop since June a year ago.

AUG 31 1941

On Thursday Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess to the youth members of the National Advisory committee NYA, at her Hyde Park estate. Numbered among the group making the trip were Carroll Moton Leevy, 19-year-old June graduate Fisk university. Mr. Leevy traveled this summer through the state of South Carolina gathering attitudes of youth on NYA programs in that region.

Meaningless, Says Negro Congress of FDR Letter

JUN 17 1941

Exposes 'Polite Phrases' To Cover Up Gov't Jim Crow Policy

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16.—The National Negro Congress today described President Roosevelt's memorandum to Sidney Hillman and William S. Knudsen of the OPM in regard to Negro discrimination in arms plants as a "meaningless gesture."

The Negro Congress declared that this gesture "will not result in getting a single Negro skilled worker a job in the Glenn L. Martin (aircraft) plant or hundreds of other jim-crow defense industries where Negroes are openly barred."

If the President really wanted to put an end to Negro discrimination in arms plants, the Negro Congress said, he could issue an immediate executive order to this effect.

Forty Congressmen and six Senators have already endorsed the demand for such an executive order by the President as well as Federal anti-discrimination legislation the Negro Congress declared.

In a statement reviewing its nation-wide efforts to break down the color bar against Negroes the Congress said:

"The President knows that hundreds of industrial establishments with billions in government contracts have flatly refused to employ Negroes. By a mere strike of his pen he could have abolished not only this discrimination as well but the even more flagrant Jim Crowism in the government service, the Navy and the Army. Instead he resorts to the use of polite phrases which fool nobody.

"He is driven to make some gesture because of the mounting protest of scores of Negro organizations and hundreds of thousands of Negro people. He made his statement at a time when we had just completed the distribution of a quarter of a million leaflets on Jim Crow practices to the Negro people all over America. He made it—certainly to cover up the vicious blow against Negro rights made in the appointment of the Negro hating Senator Byrnes of South Carolina to the United States Supreme Court.

EVADES GOV'T BANS

"Ironically, he passes over completely the source of this industrial Jim Crow program within the government itself. Without mentioning this, he proceeds to tell the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower.

"These are weasel words. When labor sought a slight increase in wages to meet the rising cost of living the President replied with bayonets in the name of democracy. To profit-made industrialists who refused to "cooperate" until they had got their demands, the President was all ears, and gave them all they asked.

"But only after a nationwide protest from the Negro people in the form of thousands of leaflets, thousands of letters, thousands of telegrams, hundreds of delegations to plants like the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company all over the country, and the prospect of a job march on Washington does the President reluctantly throw out a sop in the form of a promise of action."

URGES EXECUTIVE ORDER

"It is significant," said the Congress statement, "that the Roosevelt gesture comes after strong rumors that Mayor LaGuardia of New York and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt had failed last week in their efforts to head off a job march to Washington by thousands of Negro people scheduled for July 1. There is now more than ever the need for tens of thousands of Negro people to bestir themselves with every kind of activity."

If the President is serious in this attempt to make the Negro people believe that democracy can be reviewed in America by giving jobs to Negroes in defense industry, let him also add his voice to our demands to pass the anti-poll tax and anti-lynching bill to our demands that thousand Negro families be restored to economic security be ending discrimination against them in NYA and WPA.

Negro Troops Show Unusal Skill In U. S. War Games

WITH THE SIXTH ARMY CORPS SOMEWHERE IN MASSACHUSETTS—Concentration of 60,000 Sixth Army Corps troops, of which 6,000 are Negroes from the 366th and 372d Infantries for the largest maneuvers ever held in New England are still underway in this sector, and according to Col. Watkins, one of the umpires in the "war games," "The Negro forces showed skill and proper tactics against the tank attack, which was a good example of the confusion which tanks can create in battle."

The maneuver area presented many varied terrain features during eight two-day problems ending this week. The troops moved over mountainous terrain around the New Hampshire line, comprised of hilly and rugged territory in the vicinity of Fitchburg. The chief body of water crossed during the games was the Nashua River which runs through most of the area.

White Post Captured

Major General Karl Truesdell, white, Sixth Army Corps Commander, held a critique on the exercises in which the 26th Infantry Division Command Post, white, was captured by armored forces of the 366th and 372d Infantries fighting side by side, after these two Negro infantries successfully harassed their enemies while advancing.

When the battle began at 5:30 A. M., the whites held a line one mile east of Townsend to West Hollis, N. H., east of the Nashua River. The Negro forces faced the whites with a provisional brigade holding the south sector from Townsend Harbor to West Hollis.

Tanks Started Attack

Small trucks designated as tanks started the early morning attack for the whites at Hollis. Supported by airplanes, artillery and anti-aircraft fire, they smashed their way to Pepperel and Hollis Depot according to schedule.

Directly behind the swift-moving "tanks" followed the infantry units. Upon reaching the Hollis Depot bridge, the "tanks" and infantry units successfully drove through the Negro lines.

The right column of the whites, however, met disaster when the infantry moved too slow to keep pace with the "tanks." Failure to keep directly behind the tanks caused a large gap between the armored forces and infantry.

Taking advantage of this situation, the Negroes waited until the armored forces drove through and then sprang into action. Attacking swiftly, they cut off the slowly-advancing infantry and staged a successful counterattack.

While the whites' right column was meeting stiff opposition, the left column, with the tanks plowing through, and the infantry units directly behind, advanced steadily and reached their objective when the battle ended. The Negro forces were able to split the infantry from the tanks as they did in the right column. This particular "tank" problem lasted nearly three days.

Weather Extremely Cold

The weather continued icy cold. The men at times were so numb that they were unable to move the weapons to which they were assigned, into position, without the help of motor trucks.

For five days and nights they kept their clothing on without a change, some were just able to wipe their faces with their handkerchiefs not having the chance to catch a clean-up, and many others were seen with nappy beards and ruffled hair as they happened to have been in the first line of attack during the entire battle and were barely able to eat a whole sandwich before a new order was forthcoming.

During a break in the battle, this Star-News correspondent, wearing regular Army uniform provided by the staff headquarters with a press badge on the left arm, visited many of the men in various sections of the front, and innumerable soldiers from the New York area were almost weeping, so frigid was the cold and mountainous the country in which they were maneuvering.

The temperature one night was down to almost twenty degrees. One or two snakes were said to have disrupted the cat-naps of the men back of the lines who stood ready to be called up at any moment, and one soldier who was visited by a skunk had to evacuate his tent for the rest of the night.

Meals Figured to Last Man

Every meal eaten during the seventeen days the soldiers were together was figured to the last man. The herculean task of providing food to feed the troops at distant points in the field and at the base encampment was at Fort Devens and was handled by the Fort Devens Post Commissary.

Daily food shipments were made by rail to the city or town nearest the troops concentrations. The supplies were picked up by the various units at a designated freight siding and hauled to the troops in the field.

Each day's shipment included food for three meals and reached the troops in time for preparation for evening mess. The supper-breakfast-lunch cycle of distribution enabled the food for the heaviest meal including the meat and vegetables to be consumed shortly after arrival.

WHY ONE CLASS OF NEGRO LEADERS ARE PROUD OF THE ROOSEVELT POLICY OF RACE DISCRIMINATION

Because the President's official policy of discrimination; based upon race and color, has convinced this class of Negroes, to a mathematical certainty, that the race was created fundamentally inferior to the white man, and is inherently incapable of measuring up to the standard of efficiency; required by the defense program. And in consequence of this fiat of fate, the Negro must stand aside, until all work essential to National Defense, is assigned to white superiors; and if anything is left the poor white unskilled laborer does not want, it may be distributed among the Negro laborers. It seems to be written in the official policy of the administration policy at Washington, that there are no jobs for Negroes as long as one white man is out of work.

Secondly; this class of Negroes believe in the Roosevelt policy because it has displaced every Negro janitor; floor walker; truck driver; elevator and other menial jobs, held by Negroes under every Republican administration, with poor white laborers.

Third; because his administration has shut tight the door of military training in the face of the Negro youth, denied him aviation training and reduced him to the level of waiters for white soldiers in the regular Army and Navy. The Roosevelt policy has practically excluded the Negro from vocational employment service because of color and now at a time when our defense production must be stepped up 60 per cent, or lose the war; and man power fifty per cent short of efficiency, and growing less every day; the administration agents are working on a scheme to induct white women into the defense service to increase our manpower, to keep from employing Negroes to work for their country, they are eminently qualified and willing to do.

Fourth; the Social Security Board showing the total number of applicants, white and colored, accepted for vocational training by the Government Employment Service, and placed on jobs from August, 1940, to January, 1941, to be 89,529, of which 2,434 were Colored. The total number placed were 15,-455, of which fifty were Colored. These figures expose to what extent Negroes are being excluded from defense jobs, under the policy of keeping all Negroes on the relief rolls on half rations and half pay; and taking all the white folks off the relief rolls, and placing them on defense jobs at big wages. These are some of the reasons why some Negro leaders on the New Deal payroll, are travelling over the country at the taxpayers' expense; apologizing for the Administration's discriminating policy, in an effort to suppress the rising tide of Negro demands for a square deal at Washington which threatens national unity more than the labor troubles, which are blocking defense production. The Negro is beginning to think why he should fight to be reduced to pauperism while the Government permits special interests to become millionaires from Government contracts.

Where are Weaver, Brown, Hastie, Oxley and Madame Bethune, whose names appear on the Government's payrolls while their race is being reduced to pauperism? Are these race leaders apologists for race discrimination, under promises to keep the Negroes quiet, or are they trying to represent a race they misrepresent? Leland Stowe writing on the subject of unjust discrimination against the Negro, in the Chicago Daily News, says, and we quote:

"The case of the American Negro is particularly important, and is likely to provoke a great deal of trouble if it is neglected too long. For Negroes have been discriminated against in the wholesale re-employment which has been going on for the past year, and they are perfectly aware of that fact.

Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago. In each of these centers testimony is identical. Negroes say that their people overwhelmingly are indifferent to the present war crisis. "Why should we go and fight when American whites never take any interest in us until a war comes along?" they ask. "Our boys don't want to go into the Army. Even the Army has a color line. There are plenty of defense jobs. Yes—for everybody, but Negroes."

"When you consider that America's Negro citizens amount to nearly one-tenth of the total population, it is clear that the Negroes' attitude toward the present national crisis can become an exceedingly grave problem unless Government leaders swiftly gain some comprehension of the situation.

"In our national defense program, last place has thus far been relegated to the Negro, but to the peril of the nation.

BARRED FROM JOBS

The truth of this fact can be ascertained by any newspaper which undertakes to report on the American Negroes' frame of mind today. It is also demonstrated when you look for Negro labor in our defense industries. With very rare exceptions, the Negro has been barred from employment or training for employment on machines. The excuse is offered that plenty of white labor is available (that won't be true much longer), or that Negroes are not qualified to handle machines or that white and Negro labor should not be mixed. In any case and in general, Negroes are being kept on relief while white workers are rapidly being absorbed—and this threatens to create a war-time social problem of unpredictable possibilities.

In the Curtiss Wright plant in Buffalo, I saw a Negro working on a machine for the first time in any defense factory we have visited. It was his third day at work there and he was one of five young colored men who had just completed a short course of training, although several others were also undergoing instruction. The Negro worker greeted me with a big smile. "I like it here," he said. "The fellows all treat you fine."

"There must be several hundreds of thousands of Negroes in the United States who are perfectly capable of training for this kind of labor with machines. If they were given this opportunity, they would immediately have a personal interest and personal stake in America's huge defense program.

They would also have an answer for the Communist propagandists who today are working among Negroes with such energy and with very considerable results.

After a close look at our defense industries, I am convinced that war conditions and the national welfare, as well as simple justice, make it imperative that American Negroes be given an opportunity to work in our defense plants. They will be badly needed in another year or two. A far-sighted and intelligent policy would launch their training now and would let them in by the same door that other defense workers enter."

NO TIME FOR PREJUDICE

This discrimination, as President Roosevelt pointed out in his memorandum to the OPM, is "entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity." It is the result of unreasoning prejudice on the part of other workmen or employers. It is not confined to any region, and is perhaps more systematic and universal in the West Coast aircraft industry than in any other place.

Fundamentally, the Negro has about as great a stake in the fight between the New Deal and the New Order as any other group. The spectre of a Hitler-dominated world, with repression and cruelty aimed at every racial minority, falls heavily upon him.

The American Negro has demonstrated a loyalty and a willingness to bear his share in the responsibilities ahead. This time, as 23 years ago, selective service calls upon him to serve in direct proportion to his numbers.

There is small wonder that Negro leadership has been concerned, and at times angered, by systematic exclusion of members of this race. This is an exclusion entirely unrelated to questions of social relationships. It is either economic, or based on the whimsies of color prejudice.

To turn away skilled workman simply because he is a Negro is a blow against the cause for which all of us are fighting. In the first place, our nation needs every ounce of its productive energy; to sacrifice to any degree the contribution that this one-tenth of our population can make is foolish. We need to maintain a healthy economic system during this emergency, and this cannot be done if the ravages of unemployment fall disproportinately on a single population group. Finally, and of importance to all of us, the issue at stake and the issue which all of us are being called upon to sacrifice for, is the survival of democracy. Now, more than ever before, we need to strive to be unlike, rather than like, the sowers of hatred and prejudice.

If some Negroes are called upon to risk their life for $21 a month, simple justice requires that other Negroes be given an opportunity to fill jobs building ships, guns and planes. Ability, not color, must be determine fitness to serve.

Say Negroes Not Given Jobs In the Entertainment Field Even Though Talent Available

NEW YORK, N. Y.—(ANP).—Protesting the fact that Negroes had not been given jobs in the entertainment of United States army camps, the Negro Actors' Guild of America sent the following letter to Frederick Osborne, under whose direction the committee has been set up, and copies were sent to all pertinent people in any way connected with the setup:

"The executive board of the Negro Actors' Guild of America, Inc., has instructed me to address to you an inquiry, as to what extent you contemplate the participation of Negroes in entertaining the soldiers of the United States army, a project organized under your direction and apparently already in operation. The inquiry concerns itself with the reason why the Negro performer has been so studiously ignored and this body is compelled to register a vigorous protest against, what appears to be a policy of gross racial discrimination.

"The fact is incontestible that for 75 years, the Negro has been one of the most popular groups in the entertainment field, giving enjoyment not only to colored audiences, but winning the acclaim of theatre-goers, both in this country and abroad. Negro performers are willing to go as far as any others, in the interest service to our government, but they are emphatically unwilling to make a contribution of their own, while the services of others are being compensated for.

"It may be that you are unaware of the talent, with which the Negro race abounds. In such an event, the Negro Actors' Guild will assume the responsibility to furnish you with a comprehensive list of qualified performers, with their background and accomplishments.

"So great is our concern and so deep our indignation, at this appearance of unwarranted and inexcusable neglect, that we deem it as important, as it is necessary, to solicit an interview with you at the earliest possible date, convenient to yourself, for the purpose of discussing the matter.

"With an earnest hope that you will give this your immediate attention, I am,

"Respectfully yours,
"(Signed) EDNA THOMAS,
"Executive Secretary."

Noble Sissle, president of the guild, and Bill Robinson, honorary president, serve on the national committee for the above entertainment, having been named by Mr. Osborne for this committee. They are both anxious to start integration of Negroes into the entertainment going out among the soldiers in the different camps.

Equal Treatment

Washington does not need to be told that any cause with which Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes' name is identified is worthy of support. During his long years of residence here as canon of the Washington Cathedral, Dr. Stokes was an active participant in most of the movements to improve civic and social conditions in this community. Accordingly when he, as chairman of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries, appeals to the Nation at large to work for removal of discriminations against competent Negro workers, he will be listened to with respect. But the name is subsidiary to the appeal, and the plain commonsense of this particular appeal will spring to the eyes, as the French say. The fact that skilled Negro craftsmen are being denied employment in industries handicapped by labor shortages has been frequently mentioned in official reports of the United States Employment Service. From the standpoint of those concerned only with speeding up the defense program, such exclusion must seem indefensible.

However, the committee rightly bases its plea for fair play upon other considerations. "Justice for Negro Americans in the program for national defense," it declares, "is a searching test of American democracy. Our concern for democracy in Europe or elsewhere lacks reality and sincerity if our plans and policies disregard the rights of minorities in our own country." "It seems especially important to observe these in letter and spirit in our national industrial defense program in a year when we have voted with overwhelming public support to make our country a great "arsenal for the democracies." This statement, carrying the signatures of a distinguished group of publicists, and leaders of business, labor and the churches, is unanswerable. No sincere believer in the democratic principles of equality of treatment, without regard to race, color or creed (which the Supreme Court, incidentally, recently reaffirmed in respect of the Negro on our railroads) can fail to be moved by such

What Negroes Are Doing

The Alabama Convention of the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks was held last Sunday and Monday at Decatur with Tennessee Valley Lodge No. 808, headed by J. H. Merriweather, as host.

Sunday afternoon, a program was given at the First Baptist Church, preceded by a parade more than a mile long and headed by the Alabama State Teachers College Band and the Carver High School Band of Gadsden.

The Elks were welcomed to the city by Mayor T. R. Harrison, and Bill Ernest Wright, of Tuscaloosa, responded.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. J. Gates.

Featuring Sunday night's session at King Memorial M. E. Church was the state oratorical contest, directed by T. A. Love, commissioner of education for Alabama. The winner was the Alabama State Teachers College entrant.

Monday's sessions were presided over by the president, Dr. A. W. West, of Montgomery. Daughter Laura Chambers, of Bessemer, and Daughter Willis Winters, of Montgomery, presided at the Daughter Elk's session.

Among the outstanding Elks in attendance were National Grand Secretary J. E. Kelley, of Birmingham; Dr. J. F. Drake, of Alabama A. and M. Colege; President H. Councill Trenholm, of State Teachers College, Montgomery; Ernest G. Wright, Tuscaloosa; L. J. Lewis, Birmingham; Oscar Saffold, Montgomery; Prof. W. B. Johnson, Birmingham; Daughter Eula Dobbins, George H. Reynolds, Decatur.

Dean B. R. Brazeal and his committee at Morehouse College, Atlanta, were hosts last week to the meeting of personnel deans and advisers of men from 42 Negro colleges throughout the United States, who gathered to discuss the preparation of young college men for jobs in national defense.

"Selection and Orientation of College Freshmen" was read by Dean G. W. Reeevs, of Prairie View State College and the discussion led by Prof. D. K. Cherry, of Knoxville College.

Lieut. Lawrence Oxley, of the Federal Security Administration, spoke on "Labor Registration and Placement of Negroes with Reference to Defense Industries."

W. Y. Bell, Jr., secretary of the Atlanta Urban League, discussed "What the Urban League has Done in the Field of Opportunities."

Principal speaker at the opening meeting Friday evening was Dr. J. Max Bond, director of education at Tuskegee Institute, who outlined "The Future Education of the Negro College Student in a Democracy."

At the closing session Saturday morning Dr. Chauncey I. Cooper, acting dean of the college of pharmacy at Howard University, spoke on "Pharmacy" and Dr. William J. Nicholson, of Talladega College, discussed "The Ministry."

The Birmingham Branch Y. W. C. A., 700 Eighth Avenue, North, is in the midst of a membership campaign in an effort to add more dormitory space. The drive is aimed at filling the need of an increasing number of young colored women of the city for protected living conditions and to serve a larger number of transients passing through the city.

Fourteen hundred Negro girls of Jefferson County are reached each month through the younger girls' program of the Y. W. C. A.

The State A. and M. College, Normal, Ala., Sunday will entertain hundreds of students, alumni and friends at the annual Founders Day program on the college campus.

The program is held each year on the first Sunday in May in honor of Dr. William Hooper Councill, founder and first president of the institution.

The Normal Club of Birmingham and many friends of the school will be present.

In recent years, A. and M. Institute has had a rapid growth under the presidency of Dr. Joseph Fanning Drake.

Negro Graduates Face 'No' in Hunt For 'Defense' Jobs

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, May 29.—On Chicago's South Side hundreds of Negro boys will graduate from technical schools within the next few weeks as trained mechanics and engineers.

MAY 30 1941

But will they find jobs at these trades? Will they be taken in by the firms which are crying about a "shortage" of skilled help?

Results of a survey conducted here by the Chicago Council of the National Negro Congress indicated that the answer is "No."

DOORS CLOSED

"Our files are packed with case histories of highly trained Negro workers for whom the doors of industry, and particularly so-called 'defense' industry, are closed," declared Ishmael P. Florey, chairman of the council.

Thousands of Negro boys are attending trade classes at Tilden, Du Sable and Phillips High Schools on the South Side. Also there are several hundred attending industrial and shop classes at Crane Tech on the West Side and Lane Tech on the North Side. Many of these youths will graduate next month with training in architectural and mechanical drafting, auto mechanics, pattern-making, forge and foundry work, machine shop, printing, woodworking and electrical work.

According to signed statements from the personnel offices of thousands of aircraft, armament and "defense" factories received by the Negro Congress in reply to a questionnaire, a small percentage will hire Negroes for menial and unskilled jobs only. The bulk of them bar Negroes altogether.

20,000 DENIED JOBS

On the rolls of the Illinois State Employment Service are some 20,000 skilled and semi-skilled Negro workers who cannot be placed on jobs in spite of the need for them because of racial barriers.

Florey cited one example of the National Defense Training School at Tilden High School, where a special 8-week training course is given.

MAY 30 1941

CROWD OUT NEGROES

"Recently a representative of the Howard Aircraft Co. came to one class to hire help. In this class there are 15 Negro and 6 white students. The teacher of the class recommended five white students.

"When one white student said he couldn't accept because he intends to go to college, the teacher gave the application to the sixth white student, even though this is a boy who is known to be incompetent. He doesn't attend classes regularly and when he does he smells of liquor."

Florey further pointed out that one of the best draftsmen in the school was not placed because he is colored.

"Is there any wonder that Washington finds the Negro people 'suspicious' of the war drive?" said Florey.

Call to Negro America!

To March on Washington For Jobs and Equal Share In National Defense Work

MAY 9 - 1941

We call upon you to fight for jobs in National Defense.

We call upon you to struggle for the integration of Negroes in the armed forces, such as the Air Corps, Navy, Army, and Marine of the nation.

We call upon you to demonstrate for the abolition of Jim-Crowism in all government departments and defense employment.

This is an hour of crisis. It is a crisis of democracy. It is a crisis of minority groups. It is a crisis of Negro Americans.

What is this crisis?

To American Negroes, it is the denial of jobs in government defense projects. It is racial discrimination in government departments. It is widespread Jim-Crowism in the armed forces of the nation.

While billions of the taxpayers' money are being spent for war weapons, Negro workers are being turned away from the gates of factories, mines and mills—being flatly told, "NOTHING DOING." Some employers refuse to give Negroes jobs when they are without "union cards," and some unions refuse Negro workers union cards when they are "without jobs."

MAY 9 - 1941

What shall we do?
What a dilemma!
What a runaround!
What a disgrace!
What a blow below the belt!

Though dark, doubtful and discouraging, all is not lost, all is not hopeless. Though battered and bruised, we are not beaten, broken or bewildered.

Verily, the Negroes' deepest disappointment and direct defeats, their tragic trials and outrageous oppressions in these dreadful days of destruction and disaster to democracy and freedom, and the rights of minority peoples, and the dignity and independence of the human spirit, is the Negroes' greatest opportunity to rise to the highest heights of struggle for freedom and justice in government, in industry, in labor unions, education, social service, religion and culture.

With faith and confidence of the Negro people in their own power for self-liberation, Negroes can break down the barriers of discrimination against employment in National Defense. Negroes can kill the deadly serpent of race hatred in the Army, Navy, Air and Marine Corps, and smash through and blast the government, business and labor union red tape to win the right to equal opportunity in vocational training and re-training in defense employment.

Most important and vital of all, Negroes, by the mobilization and coordination of their mass power, can cause PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO ISSUE AN EXECUTIVE ORDER ABOLISHING DISCRIMINATIONS IN ALL GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, ARMY, NAVY, AIR CORPS AND NATIONAL DEFENSE JOBS.

Of course, the task is not easy. In very truth, it is big, tremendous and difficult.

MAY 9 - 1941

It will cost money.
It will require sacrifice.
It will tax the Negroes' courage, determination, and will to struggle. But we can, must and will triumph.

The Negroes' stake in national defense is big. It consists of jobs, thousands of jobs. It may represent millions, yes, hundreds of millions of dollars in wages. It consists of new industrial opportunities and hope. This is worth fighting for.

But to win our stakes, it will require an "all-out," bold and total effort and demonstration of colossal proportions.

Negroes can build a mammoth machine of mass action with a terrific and tremendous driving and striking power that can shatter and crush this evil fortress of race prejudice and hate, if they will only resolve to do so and never stop until victory comes.

Dear Fellow Negro Americans, be not dismayed in these terrible times. You possess power, great power. Our problem is to harness and hitch it up for action on the broadest, daring and most gigantic scale.

In this period of power politics, nothing counts but pressure, more pressure, and still more pressure, through the tactic and strategy of broad, organized, aggressive mass action behind the vital and important issues of the Negro. To this end, we propose that ten thousand Negroes MARCH ON WASHINGTON FOR JOBS IN NATIONAL DEFENSE AND EQUAL INTEGRATION IN THE FIGHTING FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES.

It will shake up official Washington.

It will give encouragement to our white friends to fight all the harder by our side, with us, for our righteous cause.

It will gain respect for the Negro people.

'Justice for the Negro'

From The New York Times.

Comments made on the statement issued this week by the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries bring out some disturbing facts. Discrimination against opportunities for the Negro to learn and practice skilled trades is not confined to the South, nor is it practiced only by employers. Dr. Robert C. Weaver, assistant to Sidney Hillman in planning for Negro employment under the auspices of the Office of Production Management, finds some craft unions discriminating, either by refusing to admit Negroes or by admitting them only as "helpers in auxiliary unions." Assistant Director M. J. Tierney of the New York State Employment Service believes the responsibility to be about evenly divided between the employers and the unions. In either case the Negro is not getting his fair chance.

Obviously this is a situation in which men and women are being held back not by lack of ability and trustworthiness but because of race. It will be argued that racial or other groups which do not get on well together should not be compelled to work together. Yet so far as industry is concerned the Negro, or any other recognizable minority, is more likely to be a cause of friction when denied equal opportunity than when granted it. Labor unions themselves have had bitter experience when Negro workers, otherwise unable to get jobs, have been used to break strikes. But the issue is more than factional. It involves simple justice and loyalty to the democratic ideal.

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

The Murfreesboro, Tenn., incident should be a warning and a challenge to colored soldiers and civilians, and to white people generally, to meet more intelligently the social problems created by national defense training in the South.

One out of ten U. S. soldiers in the new Army are colored and most of them will be trained in Dixie.

Despite provocation, colored soldiers must make a special effort to conduct themselves with intelligence and restraint.

Otherwise we shall have all over again the restrictions and humiliations that followed in the wake of Brownsville and Houston riots.

Rowdyism and rioting will make more difficult our fight against discrimination and segregation in the armed forces and defense industry.

Colored soldiers must not attempt to solve the social problems of the South.

There are agencies better fitted for that job, and a telephone call or a two or three-cent stamp can easily reach them.

Where colored soldiers are imposed upon, they should report the facts to their organizations and newspapers.

* * *

Colored soldiers are being trained to fight the Axis and not their neighbors.

They must respect the uniform they wear by deporting themselves as gentlemen and not as hooligans.

It is a tribute to their good sense that so very few unpleasant incidents have taken place. No more should take place.

* * *

Colored civilians near training centers also have a great responsibility they must not shirk.

They must do much more than they have done so far to provide clean, orderly and low-priced recreational facilities for colored service men.

Colored civilians should sincerely strive to make the colored soldiers a part of their community life, in churches, clubs and homes.

Local N.A.A.C.P. branches and Ministerial Alliances must meet with local white authorities regularly to iron out differences and head off possible explosions.

* * *

White civilians and authorities in the South have the greatest responsibility of all.

Indulgence, flexibility and understanding are imperative rather than a dumb insistence on "keeping the Negro in his place."

Soldiers are trained to be men and they expect to be treated as such, whether they are white or colored.

* * *

Colored trainees are often from the North and East, and unused to the rigidity of the Southern caste system.

It is the duty of leading white people to see that the whites generally practice that tolerance and true patriotism essential to national unity and total defense.

* * *

National unity depends on equal rights, duties, privileges and opportunities, or it means nothing at all, and is a fraud and a fake.

War sentiment is greater in the South than elsewhere.

The white South must realize that war without victory means national suicide, and victory without national unity is impossible.

NEGROES AND OUR DEFENSES

(Richmond Times-Dispatch)

In Virginia, and in other States, unfair discrimination against skilled Negro workers is hampering the arming of America, are contributing to the lag in the defense program. "All-out" defense cannot be achieved, so long as a large body of skilled men is prevented by arbitrary rulings and subtle prejudice from putting its capabilities to maximum use.

This is wholly aside from the injustice involved. In a Commonwealth with some 700,000 Negro citizens out of a total population of 2,677,000, it is only right and proper that such a large element be given an adequate share in the benefits of the defense program. Moreover, if 700,000 Virginia citizns are discriminated against in the program, and something like 15,000,000 Negroes in the country as a whole, the effect on national morale and on the prospects for national unity, are apt to be serious.

Camp Lee affords a well-nigh perfcet example of the sort of exclusion of skilled Negro workers which is going forward in this State. Hundreds of carpenters, bricklayers, roofers and other skilled members of the building trades are at work on the construction of that great cantonment, but there is understood to be only one Negro among them. It is understood, furthermore, that white men are being brought in from other States and given these jobs, although there are skilled Negro workmen in Virginia thoroughly capable of taking them.

In the Newport News area, the story apparently is the same, although there is conflicting evidence on the point. The Norfolk Journal and Guide quotes George L. Zuidema, contractor's executive officer at Fort Eustis, as saying that while he had "seriously considered hiring colored carpenters," he had not done so, "due to the fact that we have sufficient white carpenters to meet our requirements." The Journal and Guide points out, however, that the State Employment Office "in near-by Newport News is still calling for white carpenters, and a large sign on its door reads plainly 'Carpenters Wanted.'" Mr. Zuidema is said to have made the above quoted declaration, in response to an inquiry from Representative S. Otis Bland, who had received a petition from 25 Negro carpenters desirous of working on defense construction in the area. It was stated that over 1,100 Negroes are employed in this particular contractor's organization, but that they are all performing tasks requiring no skills.

It is in the skilled trades that shortages are being experienced in the defense program througout America, whereas there is ample common labor to take care of all requirements, certainly for the present. But if skilled men are to be left idle, simply because they are colored, the shortages in this field may grow worse, instead of better, and the defense program, so vital to America's survival, may fail.

The skills, actual and potential, of the Negro ought to be utilized to the fullest. In so far as it lies in their power, any contractors who are not giving Negroes their rightful share of the skilled work for which they are fitted, should endeavor to rectify this injustice. And agencies for the training of Negro workers in skilled trades should everywhere be developed and encouraged.

It is only by some such steps as these that America's skilled workers can be fully mobilized for the gigantic task of making this country ready for any emergency.

No Race Discrimination On Defense Contracts

By RALPH SMITH

The Atlanta Journal Bureau,
Mayflower Hotel,
Washington, March 25.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION in the employment and compensation of skilled and unskilled labor on defense housing projects is definitely "out the window," and no matter the locality or community of the development.

Employment and compensation as between the races shall be distributed on the basis of white and Negro skilled and unskilled labor available in the communities in which the projects are being erected. The racial quotas shall be determined by the reports of the Federal Census Bureau and other relevant data.

The determination of the government in this respect finds emphasis in the latest official regulations issued by John M. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Administration. His outgiving lends color and emphasis to the policy of nondiscrimination heretofore laid down.

Contractors Must Make Reports

By way of making the regulation effective and as a means of ascertaining whether regulations are being complied with, Carmody's latest order, which applies alike to contractors and sub-contractors, requires that persons engaged in defense housing shall—

(1) Submit to each contractor engaged in constructing any such defense housing, the percentages of Negro skilled and unskilled labor in the locality of the project, as reflected by the federal census and other relevant data.

(2) Require each contractor engaged in constructing any such defense housing to indicate by notation (W for non-Negro, N for Negro) on pay roll forms required to be submitted to the government, the race of each laborer, skilled or unskilled, listed on such pay roll forms; and

Otherwise, the regulation declared, the contracting officer shall investigate and report the reasons for the discrimination to the federal works administrator. And in case any contractor refuses or fails to take the pay roll notation required he, too, shall be deemed as discriminating and must be reported.

Brunswick Wants Shipyards

Speaking of discriminations, what about the Government's shipbuilding program—naval vessels and merchantmen? Georgia is the only state on the Eastern seaboard of the United States in which neither the Navy nor the Maritime Board is building any ships, and yet Georgia has two excellent harbors—in Savannah and Brunswick.

Savannah has been playing hide and seek with the Maritime Board for weeks, trying definitely to anchor a shipyard, and the city of Brunswick has been equally active. On several occasions it has looked as if success would reward the efforts of these communities, but always something has obstructed the signing of the contract.

A delegation of Brunwickians is now in Washington, urging the Maritime Board to recognize their fair city in the mammoth shipbuilding program in which the Government is engaged. They are hopeful and heartened —heartened, in the main, by the aid and cooperation they are receiving from their senators and congressman.

The group of Brunswickians includes: Dick Gould, county board chairman; I. M. Aiken, president board of trade; City Manager Fernando J. Torras, Mayor J. Hunter Hopkins, Alton Perry, educator; for Senator J. Hadley Brown, former Representative B. F. Mann, County Commissioner J. B. D. Paulk, County Engineer Hal Friedman, County Commissioner Joe Owens, County Commissioner C. V. Abbott, Dr. J. B. Avera, Frank Scarlett, Phil Ringel, Frank Crandall, M. A. Copeland, A. J. Gordon, James D. Gould.

"O'Keefean" Boys and Girls

'Fessor S. M. Hastings, principal, and Miss Mary Richard Colvin, faculty member, of O'Keefe Junior High School, are personally conducting a flock of boys and girls on a sight-seeing tour of the National Capital and environs. They arrived yesterday morning, and before the week is over they'll have seen practically everything hereabout that's worth seeing.

The "O'Keefean" excursion is an annual event at the school. Every year Mr. Hastings brings a group of seniors to Washington, and always they return in the consciousness that a good time was had by all, including those upon whom they call.

A Spending Spree for Fair

The thousand—and thousand is a liberal figure—who jammed the Senate galleries yesterday had the privilege, and probably the satisfaction, of witnessing the biggest spending spree in the annals of time. They saw and heard the Senate appropriate seven billion dollars in less than two hours, or about sixty million dollars a minute. The debate preceding the vote wasn't particularly impressive, and the vote itself was simpler than you'd think.

Un-American Labor Practices Flayed In Sunday Broadcast

SAVANNAH JOURNAL
SAVANNAH, GA.

APR 5 1941

NEW YORK CITY—(S N S)—Nationwide attention was focussed on the un-American way Negro workers are being excluded from the naticnal defense program Sunday when, through the facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System, a "big broadcast" of the world's leading Negro artists was staged.

The broadcast was arranged and staged by the National Urban League as the concluding feature of its ninth annual Vocational Opportunity Campaign.

Given the next to c'osing spot, Marian Anderson, recent winner of the coveted $10,000 Bok award, was heard to good advantage in two spirituals, broadcast from Ontario, Canada, where she is now appearing on concert tour.

The Negro and Defense

A sub-committee of the Senate committee on education and labor has begun an inquiry into discrimination against Negroes in defense industries. Certainly this problem merits the attention of the Congress. Further, it merits immediate and direct action of the Congress. This problem strikes at the root of the entire ghetto-like existence of thirteen million Negroes in this country. Precisely because of this fact we are led to make certain observations.

First: We know that the executive department of the United States already has the power to end this discrimination.

Second: We know that the executive department has failed to use that power.

Third: There is a clause in the National Defense Act which forbids discrimination on account of race, creed or color.

Fourth: There has been no attempt to enforce this clause. There seemingly has been no inclination to do so.

This administration has always found the power to do the things it wanted done. Questions of constitutionality or precedent have never prevented it from accomplishing its aims and purposes. Many times it has asked for more power and has secured it. It now has more power than any previous administration either in time of peace or in time of war. Mr. Roosevelt has more power than Mr. Churchill and Mr. Churchill's country is at war.

The administration has refused to use its enormous power to secure the equal right for Negroes to work in the defense industries. As a matter of fact, the administration has been totally unconcerned about the right to work where Negroes are concerned. When has Mr. Roosevelt in his pleas for "National Unity," referred to the necessity of removing the inequalities that confront the Negro citizen. Any attempt to promote "National Unity" and exclude America's largest minority—the Negro, can result in nothing save a sham, and a delusion. If the Roosevelt Administration has failed in this regard, the conclusion is fair—it does not wish to secure equal treatment of Negroes.

Mr. Sidney Hillman, the renegade from labor's ranks summed up the administration's attitude when he said: "National Defense cannot be expected to solve all the minority problems of the Nation." We think it is pertinent to ask, If not this "urgent emergency," this "crisis of democracy" then what can be expected to produce a solution?

Let us be clear about this. Mr. Roosevelt has made common cause with the most reactionary, chauvinist elements in our population. He has done this because he needs their support in pushing his "guns—not butter" program. He obviously could not continue to base himself on the nameless Negro and White John Does of this land. They are against the war. They are against our involvement in the war. These reactionary, chauvinist elements are for the war. They are for our involvement in the war. These are they who have erected and perpetuate our ghetto-like status. Common cause with them demands that all that is progressive, all that is liberal be scuttled by Mr. Roosevelt. This he has done and that Negro is misled indeed who looks toward the "Great White Father" of New Deal days for relief from the burden of the American brand of racism.

It will be interesting to watch this Senate investigation. It will be interesting to watch the action or lack of it when the measure reaches the Senate audit and control committee. Senator James F. Byrnes is the chairman of that committee. He is the leading spokesman of the reactionary, chauvinist cabal in the 77th Congress. Frankly we are puzzled by an investigation into an open and admitted fact. None the less we support this investigation. We think its publicity value is a good factor.

WE SHALL NOT REST THE MATTER THERE. WE FAVOR THE DENIAL OF GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS TO FIRMS WHICH DISCRIMINATE AGAINST NEGROES IN THEIR HIRING POLICY. For government funds are funds raised from all the people, Negro and White. No man has the right to take such funds and say as did Mr. Gott, general manager of Consolidated Aircraft, "I will employ no Negroes and the United States Government has no power to make me do so."

This is the measure of their arrogance, against which the government has not moved. This fact calls for action of Negroes and all progressive people. Such action can compel and will compel an end to the separate existence of the Negro in industry, the armed forces and every phase of American life.

New York Senate Passes Anti-Discrimination Bill

SAVANNAH JOURNAL
SAVANNAH, GA.

ALBANY, N. Y.—(ANP)—The senate has passed without debate and sent to the Assembly the Mahoney bill designed to end employment discrimination on the basis of race, color or creed by firms holding defense contracts. The bill carries with it a fine not less than $50 nor more than $500.

APR 5 - 1941

This measure is one of three anti-discrimination bills that are expected to be voted upon by the legislature before adjourning on April 4. The others are the Burrows and Andrews bills both of which outlaw racial bias in various forms.

Letters Pour in Asking Champion Not to Betray His People in Benefit

"Our Backs Are to the Wall," Writes Chicagoan, "You Have Scored;" Reader Says We Practice Segregation Ourselves; Petition to Joe Urged

NOV 29 1941

By DAN BURLEY
Star-News Sports Editor

The article we carried last week pointing out that Joe Louis is "Dead Wrong Fighting for the Jim Crow Navy," has stirred a national controversy. Letters are coming into the office from all sides and expressing every shade of opinion on whether the heavyweight champion of the world is doing the right thing in placing his hard won world championship on the block against the dangerous Buddy Baer on Jan. 9 in an all-out charity effort to aid the Navy Relief Society. Louis gets only his training expenses from the contest, but Baer, whom he knocked out in their first meeting in Washington last summer, gets 20%, the usual challenger's take.

We do not have the space to include all the letters that have come in on the subject, nor to write about the phone calls and statements of the average individual on the street who stopped us to discuss the matter. However, the following are representative of those letters we have received and we solicit comment from all interested in the vital question before the public:

ONE OF THE FEW "SENSIBLE" ARTICLES

Dear Dan: One of the few "sensible" articles you have ever written is the Joe Louis article. You have scored! Your boss has let you handle "dynamite" as it should be handled. Your paper will no doubt gain in respect, if not in circulation. Our backs are to the wall, what can we lose by such articles? When the black press blasts out—and refrains from accepting dollar bills for suppressed articles—we will no doubt be respected and not before.—H. GEORGE DAVENPORT, commercial signs, Chicago.

NOV 29 1941

"IN COMPLETE DISAGREEMENT" WITH ARTICLE

Dear Dan: I am in complete disagreement with your article relative to Joe Louis and the U. S. Navy. The whole is equal to the sum of all its part and is greater than any of its parts. The U. S. Navy is only a part of the nation, and if the nation condones, encourages and maintains segregation in its many departments and very much so in its Capital, what can one expect from the Navy?

We ourselves practice segregation among ourselves. Is it not known to you of our many organizations and churches where a black face is not welcome? I think we must clean up our own house, then unitedly go out and endeavor to remove from our midst the unpleasant trio-segregation, discrimination and Jim Crowism. I wholeheartedly approve the gallant contribution Joe Louis makes when he risks his heavyweight title and gives all his purse to the U. S. Navy.

We have been recipients all our lives of charities in many forms: We are shouting from one end of the globe to the other about our citizenship being abused, we want full participation but somehow we fail to stand up under the responsibilities that go with full participation as citizens. I do not condone for one minute any of the injustices that befall us every minute of the day, but I lay the blame to a great extent to our indifference toward matters pertaining to our welfare and lack of leadership.

Our environment, true enough, is antagonistic for the full accomplishments of our desires, but since we are not prepared to take up arms and fight, for what is duly ours, then the next best method would be to employ diplomatic measures. When I speak of diplomatic measures, I do not mean playing "Uncle Tom." You praise Henry Armstrong for his stand out in California; perhaps Hank was right, but I do not think the two affairs are commensurable. I think further that Joe Louis is morally bigger than the U. S. Navy when, in the face of all sorts of abuse, he stands true, ready to contribute all in behalf of humanity. Let Joe go through with the fight and after he would have made such a contribution, let all true Americans see to it that the U. S. Navy rescinds from its former un-American policy.—WILLIAM ROACH, New York City.

WANTS TO PETITION JOE NOT TO FIGHT

Dear Dan Burley: May I voice my deep appreciation and gratitude for your splendid article in the current issue of the Star-News in regard to the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight for the benefit of the U. S. Navy. Rather than a carrier of dynamite, I prefer to consider you a torchbearer, holding aloft a blazing flame of race pride lighting the way for all who grope in darkness.

I am a colored American mother who, like countless others, fervently prayed for Joe's victory each time he went into the ring. Perhaps it was our mingled prayers and hopes which helped him to emerge the winner. Surely he wouldn't sell us short by gratituously entertaining those who have no use for him, even while he is still in possession of his full young strength.

While their hands are greedily outstretched to receive his bounty, their feet are ready to give him a kick. I hope, unlike Samson, he will not forget his God and his people. Perhaps a petition could be sent him bearing hundreds of names, even though he may have signed a contract. Perhaps he would reconsider and decide it best not to cast his pearls before swine.—MRS. G. T. COLON, New York City.

HOLLER LOUD ENOUGH TO OFFSET FIGHT, HE SAYS

Dear Dan: Your article against Joe Louis fighting for the Jim Crow Navy is a masterpiece and I hope other newspapers and the people in general will join in the chorus and holler loud enough to offset the fight. The Jim Crow Navy does not deserve that much consideration from the Negro and I hope Joe and his managers will do a Henry Armstrong. Thanks again for that article.—EDWARD JOSEPH WALKER, New York City.

Don't Disappoint Our Friends

DEC 5 1941

The ease with which white defense workers by the thousands are led into protesting the employment of Negroes tells how far short we are of democracy here in America today. There is a shortage of labor. Every energy of business and of the government is being exerted to train workers. Yet when a Negro is hired, presumably as qualified as whites similarly selected, a dog-in-the manger protest is made, though he in no way curtails the opportunity of the whites.

It is beyond comprehension how men at work on war material which is to defend democracy and freedom can be blind to the implications of their jobs. One protest, that at Columbus, Ohio, promoted by a CIO local labor leader, was rebuked by the CIO chiefs. But there remains the bitter memory that not one of the thousands who followed this local Hitler spoke for democracy, though in its name they find work and enjoy freedom.

The stars in their courses fight for the right. There are friends to offset the foes, friends among the very group from which comes our oppression.

When Gov. Talmadge of Georgia made a typical Tillman and Vardaman anti-Negro appeal to the voters of his state in order to further his political fortunes, it was white youth that burned him in effigy and white colleges who made known their denunciation of politics in schools. Whether this help for us came in our interest or solely for justice's sake, it came!

This aid must not lull Negroes into such a feeling of security that they relax efforts in their own behalf. Instead, they should do more, because it is that much to their gain and because by doing it, they provide these friends with added arguments in their behalf. We will do more if instead of looking back at the depths from which we have come, we look forward at the possibilities resolution, diligence, intelligence and patience can win for us.

Will F. D. R. Act Again?

The Negro's fight to become integrated into the nation's economic life has been long, arduous, and in many instances, discouraging. During the past few years, however, some noticeable progress has been made as certain unions, particularly those affiliated with the C. I. O., have accepted Negroes as members. The conservative craft organizations of the A. F. of L. have been less concerned with the Negro workers, and their traditional bars against non-white members has generally remained intact.

Our attention has again been called to a part of the ritual of the International Association of Machinists, influential affiliate of the A. F. of L., which reads as follows:

"I further promise that I will never propose for membership in, this association any other than a competent white person."

NOV 1 1941

This section has been used by certain plants engaged in defense production to escape the edict of President Roosevelt banning discrimination in employment on account of color.

OPM officials, who were given a memorandum from the President urging that they take steps to stop defense job discrimination even before his executive order was issued June 25, have asked the machinists to revise their ritual and eliminate the jim crow provision. No action has yet been taken.

On the heels of all this discussion of Negroes in defense jobs and union discrimination comes the American Economic Foundation with the question: "Should Labor Unions Be Regulated by the Federal Government?" We shall not attempt here to answer that question. It is not our purpose now, even to comment on it, at least at length. We cannot, however, refrain from mentioning it.

OPM's request that the IAM drop the objectionable section in its ritual may or may not have as yet come under the watchful eye of the President. On the other hand, it just may be that it was inspired by the White House. Labor's leaders ought to see to it that all working people are given a fair and equal chance as is promulgated in the pronouncements of Mr. Roosevelt in his battle for a true Democracy here, and for the establishment of the Four Freedoms everywhere.

By his action in issuing an executive order prohibiting discrimination on jobs, and of the appointment of a committee to see that the order is carried out, Mr. Roosevelt has shown that he wants the practice stopped. If unions like the International Association of Machinists don't change their policy to conform with the new principle, the President may have to act again!

The Negro Worker

The Committee on Fair Employment Practice which is headed by Mark Ethridge and Dr. W. W. Alexander has been investigating employment opportunities for Negroes in Atlantic and Gulf Coast shipyards.

In most shipyards, this committee found fair practices the rule. But, according to a dispatch from Carroll Kilpatrick, Age-Herald-News Washington correspondent, some Alabama labor unions and vocational leaders have been registering complaints about the proposed creation of vocational training schools for Negroes in the Mobile area. These schools would train Negroes for shipyard work of both skilled and unskilled nature.

One Mobile shipyard at present, it is reported, bars Negro workers because of a contract between the company and an AFL Metal Trades Council which, apparently, forbids employment of Negroes. Another shipyard employs some Negroes, but they comprise only 20 per cent of the total number of workers, both skilled and unskilled.

It is reported that advertisements have been placed in out-of-town newspapers seeking workers for Mobile shipyards. There is, too, it is said, a shortage of housing for the incoming white workers. The situation is affecting sanitation and educational facilities.

There are many native Negroes in the Mobile area. They are equipped now to do many unskilled types of jobs. With a short period of training they could do other jobs. But there is opposition to the creation of vocational schools which will take care of such training.

It should not be necessary to remind all persons that equality of opportunity is one of the principles for which this nation is preparing to fight if necessary.

There is no conflict with white workers over jobs in this case. There are not enough white workers to supply the shipyards' demands.

Some officials in Mobile, according to the report from Washington, have stated that they do not believe Negroes should be trained for skills that they are not accustomed to practice. The weakness of such reasoning is evident. Adherence to it would mean that the Negro never would be able to lift himself from a kind of economic bondage.

This situation, it seems, presents two questions. Are we going to utilize all needed and available manpower for the defense effort to which we are pledged? Are we going to afford Negroes a fair opportunity to equip themselves for service as democratic citizens?

Negro Carpenters Wait

From Richmond Times-Dispatch

ALTHOUGH an average of around 300 white carpenters are employed continuously on the construction of the Army supply depot on the Bellwood tract below Richmond, not one Negro carpenter has been employed there. Work has been in progress since the middle of September, and there still seems to be no immediate prospect that colored carpenters will get any consideration on this important job.

DEC 6

There are 41 Negro carpenters in the recently organized Negro carpenters' union here who are available at any time for work on the Bellwood project. Yet they are not given jobs there, and as months go by, prospects of their getting work seem to be fading. Since this is an Army contract, it is not under the control of OPM, which has special machinery for seeing that Negro labor gets its due share of work on defense projects. Why aren't there similar regulations sovering Army contracts?

FORMER BOSS AT FT. BRAGG RETIRES

NOV 8 1941

Resentful of Transfer to Small Mississippi School, Officer Who Ruled Fort Bragg on "Night of Terror," Leaves His Country's Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6—Col. Charles B. Elliott, erstwhile commander of the nation's largest army camp at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, is on his way to retirement. He is the officer who told a newspaper reporter that "it's gotten so the n--s walk all over you up in Washington."

TRANSFER WAS RESULT OF OUTBREAK

Colonel Elliott was transferred out of his key job, running an Army camp of 46,000 white and 6,500 colored soldiers, as a direct result of investigation of the fatal shooting of a colored soldier and a white military policeman in Fayetteville, North Carolina, on August 6th.

He was assigned to duty as instructor of the unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Mississippi State College at Starkville, Mississippi. Mississippi State College has an enrolment of 2,327 students and its ROTC unit an enrollment of 976. Colonel E. P. Parker replaced Colonel Elliott as post commander at Fort Bragg.

Orders were issued at the War Department last Thursday placing Colonel Elliott on the retired list at his own request. His retirement will become effective on February 28. Previous orders assigning him to duty at Mississippi State College were revoked. Orders issued Friday granted him a leave of absence of three months and 27 days from November 1.

Colonel Elliott has served 40 years in the Army. He enlisted as a private on November 11, 1901. He was commissioned a second lieutenant on October 5, 1904. He is 59 years of age.

He was the first to go in the effort of the War Department to alleviate conditions at Fort Bragg. An investigation was begun by the War Department when newspaper reports revealed that the double killing last August was directly caused by the brutal treatment of colored troops by white military policemen.

Colonel Elliott remarked at that time that "anything can happen up in Washington. It's gotten so the n---s walk all over you up there."

BLAMED DISEASE RATE FOR SEPARATE FOUNTAIN

Insisting that there was no discrimination against colored troops at Fort Bragg, Colonel Elliott said "the higher venereal rate among the colored" accounted for the fact that in the foyer of post headquarters there was a shiny brass and porcelain water cooler labeled "white" and a battered iron fountain labeled "colored".

The "colored" and "white" signs on the water cooler at post headquarters at Fort Bragg have disappeared. The battered iron fountain was removed. Now everybody drinks from the same cooler—in paper cups.

A permanent MP force of trained personnel, colored as well as white, is being established.

SEPARATE DEFENSE UNIT REJECTED BY COLORED CITIZENS

DEC 13 1941

ST. PAUL, Dec. 11—(ANP)—Minnesota Negroes took a definite stand this week against the plan offered by Gov. Stassen and his state officials to jim crow the Negro citizens of Minnesota by organizing a separate Negro defense force unit.

As a result of a suit, recently instituted in the federal court in St. Paul, state officials plan to organize a separate Negro unit as part of the Minnesota Defense force.

REFUSES TO JOIN UNIT

Notice to this effect was received by Jonas G. Schwartz and Charles H. Halpern, both white, Minneapolis attorneys who recently instituted an action in the federal court against Gov. Stassen, Adj. Gen. E. A. Walsh, Acting Adj. Gen. C. E. Green and Col. F. G. Stuz of the adjutant general's office to force the acceptance of Negro enlistment in the Minnesota Defense force. The action was brought in on behalf of Lee Kenneth Turpin, a St. Paul Negro who was otherwise qualified but whose enlistment in the defence force was rejected because of his color the attorneys charged.

When informed of the state officials' plan, Mr. Turpin said that he would not under any circumstances enlist in a separate and distinct Negro unit. He said this would create a jim crow outfit and was "unlawful, discriminatory and un-American and was an attempt to bring to Minnesota the antiquated practices and prejudices of the deep south."

WILL NOT DROP COURT SUIT

Turpin's lawsuit against the State officials culminated from months of effort by Turpin and other Minnesota Negro citizens to join the Minnesota Defense force. They were denied admission solely on the ground of their African descent and notwithstanding state and federal laws prohibiting racial discrimination.

DEC 13 1941

In view of Mr. Turpin's refusal to join the proposed Negro outfit, and the opposition already expressed to this plan by the Minnesota Negro Defense Committee, Attys. Schwartz and Halpern said that they will not drop the action started in the federal court, and are prepared to prosecute it to the United States Supreme court if necessary.

HAMPTON GRAD 'USHERED OUT' OF SHIP-YARDS

Interviewer Advises Him He Hasn't Got A Chance Of Being Hired

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—"Take him to the gate!"

This was the only comment of the personnel officer at the naval aircraft factory in the Philadelphia Navy Yard after looking over the application of James S. Mosley, seeking employment as engineering draftsman.

Mosley is a former student of Hampton Institute, Va., with specialties in drafting and machine shop practice. He is on the civil service list as apprentice engineering draftsman with a grade of 91.6. He told his story last week to the Philadelphia National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mosley went to the navy yard December 2, after having received a card from the chief clerk requesting him to report for an interview in connection with a job.

He was interview "by a man who appeared to be the chief clerk," and was told by this man: "From the appearance of this, your qualifications are more than necessary for the job."

The clerk then without speaking to Mosley, handed his application to an attendant with the remark, "Take him to the gate."

Mosley has made formal complaint in affidavit form, to the Committee on Fair Employment Practice. Mosley's complaint states that he questioned the personnel man and was told that he had "almost no chance at all" of appointment because "some applicants with higher grades were to be interviewed and they could undoubtedly do better work." Mosley wanted to know if he would be notified by mail if he got the appointment.

The officer said Mosley was "almost certain not to get it" and volunteered to state that it was not because of his color and that "you people seem to have a chip on your shoulders."

Negroes Protest Navy Policy

DEC 12 1941

Ever since war has been declared, the navy is only enlisting Negroes as messmen, the lowest division of the service, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People charged today.

In a telegram to Secretary of the Navy Knox the association said this policy "dampens the enthusiasm of Negroes for all-out aid to their country" and declared: "Thirteen million American Negroes want to know if only white Americans are to be permitted to fight and perhaps die for their government in the navy."

REPLY DEMANDED TO CHARGE ARMY BARS NEGROES

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—The war department has been formally asked to reply to charges of alleged discrimination against Negroes desiring to enlist in the armed forces, it was learned today. Rep. Hamilton Fish [R., N. Y.] said he has been informed that colored volunteers are being summarily rejected in Philadelphia, Detroit, and other places.

In a letter to Emory S. Adams, adjutant general of the war department, asking for information with respect to these charges, Fish said:

"It seems to me that inasmuch as we are fighting this war for freedom and democracy there should be no distinction whatever between our white and colored citizens in our armed forces, and that Negroes should not only be permitted but encouraged to volunteer."

DEC 19 1941

Suggests 10 Per Cent Colored Soldiers.

If the nation is to have an armed force of 7 million men there should be at least 700,000 colored soldiers, Fish's letter reasoned, and there should be approximately half a dozen divisions of colored troops provided for in the present army of nearly 2 million and the 2 million more to be trained during the year.

"I will appreciate it if you will send me the information relative to the volunteering of our colored people immediately," the letter concluded.

The war department refused to comment on the matter today but spokesmen indicated that a reply to the New York representative will be made before the end of the week.

Fish recalled before the house that he led the fight during consideration of the draft bill for the amendment providing that there should be no discrimination against colored conscripts. Under the amendment as finally adopted by congress, Negroes are permitted to enter all branches of the army service, including air and tank corps, field artillery, and infantry.

Praises Colored Troops.

"I served with colored troops in the last war," said Fish, who holds a reserve commission as a colonel, "and if I get another opportunity with a combat outfit I want to serve with them again. I served last July with a number of colored regiments on maneuvers, headed by southern white officers, some of the best officers in the United States army, and they are all in one accord, that these colored troops are doing a fine job.

"They are in the anti-aircraft, artillery, infantry, and engineer regiments. Of course they are entitled to enlist and I propose to find out what is preventing them from being accepted. In a war for freedom and democracy who has a better right to serve than Negroes? Who has a better right to volunteer in such a fight than the colored men of America?"

SECRETARY KNOX ON RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

REPLYING to a charge by Dr. Harold J. Franklin, interne of Jersey City, N. J., that he had been prevented from enlisting in the Naval Medical Corp after he had passed the physical and mental examinations because it was discovered that he was of the Negro race, Secretary of the Navy Knox write Dr. Franklin in part as follows:

DEC 13 1941

"A review in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of your examination conducted at the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, on August 11, 1941, discloses that on the left side of your dental arch you lack a minimum of two directly opposed molars. The Manual of the Medical Department of the Navy has the approval of the President and has the force of law, requires the rejection of any candidate who fails to meet the minimum requirement in this repsect. . .

"The Department desires to dispel any feeling of discrimination you may entertain. To this end, your attention is drawn to the fact that frequently candidates for appointment may be certified as physically qualified by local boards but that review in the Department indicates a failure to meet the specified minimum requirements in some particular."

We imagine that the Secretary of the Navy wrote that letter with his tongue in his cheek, for he knows that were Dr. Franklin's physical condition 100 percent perfect, he would not be admitted to the Navy Medical Corp simply because of his color. Not even Joe Louis could get in the Navy under its present policy, except as a steward.

For Secretary Knox to pretend that there is no discrimination in his department is dishonest, for this situation has been called to his attention repeatedly since he has been in office.

War Dept. Washes Hands Of Soldier-Beating Case

DEC 6 - 1941

NEW YORK—The War Department has washed its hands of the Gurdon (Camp Robinson) Ark., incident involving a clash between Negro soldiers on maneuvers and Arkansas State troopers, the NAACP learned this week.

In a letter to the NAACP, Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, said: "The Judge Advocate General, after an examination of the record of the Gurdon investigation, is of the opinion that the state troopers and civilians involved in the Gurdon incident are not within the classes of persons amenable to trial by court-martial for violation of the Articles of War."

No details of the report were given.

The NAACP had written to President Roosevelt asking that he charge either the War Department or the Department of Justice with the responsibility for prosecuting the persons guilty of interfering with troops and their officers in pursuit of their duty.

ARMY AND NAVY VIOLATE 150-YEAR-OLD BILL OF RIGHTS

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

There is, for example, the question we posed last week:

DEC 20 1941

By what authority does the Navy Department ban colored enlistments, or the War Department put us into jim crow regiments?

The War and Navy Departments are branches of the Federal Government. The Government derives all its authority from the United States Constitution.

This week we celebrate the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights—that is amendments one to ten of the Federal Constitution. These amendments were designed to prevent the Government from imposing on the rights of individual citizens.

Amendment X. says that the government may have only such authority as is specifically given it in the Constitution itself.

True, the Constitution gives the Congress the power to "provide and maintain a navy" and to "raise and support armies."

But nothing in the Constitution gives Congress or the War Department authority to segregate citizens in, or eliminate them from, the armed forces on account of color.

DEC 20 1941

We have seen jim crow so long that we have come to embrace it as a necessary evil.

But all the time, under the Bill of Rights, we could have yanked the War Department into court and compelled it to act in accordance with the Federal Constitution.

Negroes and Our Defenses---IV

THE role of the skilled Negro in defense is becoming much more important, as a result of the hammering which discriminations against him have been getting in various quarters during the past several months, and there is every indication that colored carpenters, mechanics and other skilled craftsmen will get a far better break in Virginia and the rest of the country henceforth than they got on defense work last fall and winter.

It is perhaps not generally known that the Office of Production Management in Washington issued a ruling recently, under which contractors on defense construction are required to give skilled Negro workers a percentage of both the jobs and the pay roll commensurate with the number of available skilled craftsmen in the area affected. Even before this important ruling was made, there were evidences of a much more co-operative spirit in Virginia on the part of some of the white building trade unions.

For example, the Negro carpenters in the Hampton Roads area, and also in Richmond, not only were permitted to organize Negro locals in the spring, but Negro leaders in both regions report that they are getting "100 per cent co-operation" from the white carpenters' union. In lower Tidewater, the color bar has been largely dropped in the building trades, since the first Negro carpenters' local was organized, and Negroes are being admitted to the white bricklayers' and electricians' unions. The Negroes have a hodcarriers' union of their own there.

Here in Richmond, the first member of the Negro carpenters' union to go to work under union conditions, has just received employment, and all the others have jobs. The lower Tidewater Negro local has 128 members, all of whom have work on defense contracts, under union conditions. The white bricklayers in Richmond are less co-operative than the carpenters, however, and whereas the bricklayers in the Norfolk-Newport News area have admitted Negroes to their unions, there has been great reluctance here to follow suit. This is not an issue of immediate importance in Richmond, since there is no great volume of construction here at the moment requiring bricklayers, but when the Negro housing project gets under way, the Negro bricklayers of the city naturally wish to be in a position to secure jobs there.

Large defense projects, each of which runs into the millions, are either under way, or about to start, on the Petersburg Pike just south of Richmond, in Blackstone and in Fredericksburg. In view of the recent OPM ruling as to Negroes, it seems certain that skilled Negro workmen will obtain a reasonable share of the jobs on these projects.

America cannot claim to be using its manpower and skills to the utmost in this crisis, if 10 per cent of its population, which includes many of its most efficient skilled artisans are denied all but a small trickle of defense work. This is particularly true at a time when the country is clamoring for skilled labor, and there is a shortage in some lines.

The excellent pamphlet just published by the Council for Democracy, entitled Negroes in Defense, points out that about 20 per cent of the Negroes in America "are qualified for skilled or white collar jobs," and that the latest census shows 33,000 Negro carpenters, 25,000 iron and steel workers, 27,000 mechanics, and numerous brickmasons, machinists and electricians, as well as some architects and engineers. Further light is shed on the discriminations against skilled colored workers in defense by BEULAH AMIDON in the June Survey Graphic.

Fortunately barriers which seemed to be well nigh insuperable to the Negro a few months ago, now appear to be crumbling rapidly, with the result that his talent and his training are going to be far more available to the defense of America in the future than in the past. Moreover, that seems to be especially true in Virginia, a fact in which the State can take pride.

This discrimination, as President Roosevelt pointed out in his memorandum to the OPM, is "entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity." It is the result of unreasoning prejudice on the part of either workmen or employers. It is not confined to any one region, and is perhaps more systematic and universal in the West Coast aircraft industry than in any other place.

Fundamentally the Negro has about as great a stake in the fight between the New Deal and the New Order as any other group. The spectre of a Hitler-dominated world, with repression and cruelty aimed at every racial minority, falls heavily upon him.

The American Negro has demonstrated a loyalty and a willingness to bear his share in the responsibilities ahead. This time, as 23 years ago, selective service calls upon him to serve in direct proportion to his numbers.

There is small wonder that Negro leadership has been concerned, and at times angered, by systematic exclusion of members of this race. This is an exclusion entirely unrelated to questions of social relationships. It is either economic, or is based on the whimsies of color prejudice.

To turn away a skilled workman simply because he is a Negro is a blow against the cause for which all of us are fighting. In the first place, our nation needs every ounce of its productive energy; to sacrifice to any degree the contribution that this one-tenth of our population can make is foolish. We need to maintain a healthy economic system during this emergency, and this cannot be done if the ravages of unemployment fall disproportionately on a single population group. Finally, and of importance to all of us, the issue at stake and the issue which all of us are being called upon to sacrifice for, is the survival of democracy. Now, more than ever before, we need to strive to be unlike, rather than like, the sowers of hatred and prejudice.

If some Negroes are to be called upon to risk their life for $21 a month, simple justice requires that other Negroes be given an opportunity to fill jobs building ships, guns and planes. Ability, not color, must determine fitness to serve.

Shall the Negro Be Given Work?

Reprinted from the Raleigh News and Observer

THERE are a fifth fewer Negro farmers in North Carolina today than there were in 1930. This situation is not restricted to North Carolina. In the University of North Carolina News Letter, S. H. Hobbs Jr., rural sociologist at the university, recently wrote:

"What has happened in North Carolina during the last decade has occurred throughout the entire South. . . . Perhaps the most significant thing in Southern agriculture since the War Between the States has been the decline of Negro farm operators and especially Negro cropper tenants during the last decade.

"It is a patent fact that the decline of Negro tenants, renters and croppers is not offset by any increase in ownership. In other words, the decline means that these people either have left agriculture or a hired labor system has supplemented renter and cropper tenancy. A tremendous readjustment is going on in Southern agriculture."

Beside this movement of the Negro from the land, not so much in migration as in ejection, and apart from it, the President recently felt it necessary to protest against a Jim Crow line in employment in defense jobs in towns and cities. The Negro, for all the apparent progress of his race, seems now caught in a more desperate position than even he knew in the past between a land where there are fewer places for him and the towns where there are not jobs for him.

This is an American problem of special significance to the South. In recent years huge numbers of Southern Negroes have moved to the cities of the North. Indeed, today the largest communities of Negroes in the world are north of the Mason and Dixon Line. But millions of Negroes remain in the South and always will remain. That means that when, on the land and in the town, he is progressively shut off from a chance to work, the burden of his dependency on the region will increase. That is tragedy for the Negro but it is a tragedy from which his white neighbors do not escape.

Indeed, this increasing economic plight of the Negro is one which puts a growing load on the South's advance. No region can afford the luxury of carrying a race which in large degree is not allowed to work for itself. But the process, shown in census figures, moves in that direction. Discrimination against the employment of Negroes in the end comes to a white insistence that white men be allowed to support Negroes in ...eness. If that makes sense this is a silly world. Yet that seems to be the direction in which discrimination against the Negro in town and country employment is leading.

AMERICA'S TENTH MAN AND DEFENSE

An editorial on this page a week ago called attention to the fact that Negroes were being discriminated against in defense industries. Statements issued by both President Roosevelt and the Office of Production Management have cited evidences of discrimination which were not based upon inferior ability of lack of training, but upon color alone.

There was not a single objection raised to these statements; there were a number of commendations from both white people and Negroes.

The Advertiser knows that among its readers there are men and women who would not subscribe to the principal that defense jobs should be assigned on the basis of productive ability alone. Nevertheless the absence of any spoken or written objection to this principal indicates a heartening awareness that the production of ships, planes and guns cannot be hampered by racial prejudice.

The N. A. A. C. P., the most vocal organization representing Negroes, plans a "March of Jobs" in Washington to dramatize the problem of the Negro jobless. "Nothing we can think of would do the colored man in America so much harm as participation in a gesture like this at a time whent he country is in a supreme crisis," John Temple Graves, II, comments on this plan. The Advertiser agrees.

The President and the Office of Production Management, the supreme authorities on labor policy in defense, have stated in clear terms that discrimination in defense jobs is contrary to national policy. Companies with defense contracts have been urged not to follow such discriminations. It is true that in such industries as airplane manufacturing, these pleas have been disregarded.

But a "March of Jobs" in Washington will not solve the problem. An act of Congress would not help the situation. The desired policy has already been accepted as a national policy.

If America's "tenth man" is to be allowed to share his maximum responsibility in defense—and so contribute to his utmost in defense—the policy already announced must be adopted by factories with the support of public opinion in local communities. It is a great deal easier to conduct a demonstration in Washington than to arrange for surveys and conferences in a thousand local communities. But the latter will do a great deal more good.

The theme will have to be that in every instance where a Negro is denied a defense job because of his race, somebody is refusing to make use of a potential asset. There are no defense plants in Washington. Potential employers are not going to rush to a parade wtih offers of jobs.

Negro leadership should be active in a thousand communities making surveys of the workers available, their skills, their experience, and the type of jobs they can fill. Every earnest white leader who is conscious of what this country is up against should be cooperating to see that Negroes are permitted to fill jobs for which they are equipped.

Editorial Comment

An Opportunity Denied

(New York Times)

It is a serious situation when a loyal American citizen is barred from the defense industries because of his race, his national origin or his religion. Yet, as the President stated in his memorandum to the Office of Production Management, this situation exists. The OPM protested against it in a letter sent to holders of defense contracts on April 11. On May 7 the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries added its voice in a communication signed by sixty eminent educators, clergymen, journalists, business men and labor leaders. Seemingly it has not been correcetd.

The Negro happens to be the chief sufferer, but he is not the only one, and this is a national not a Southern problem. Southern spokesmen are among those who have protested, and Northern employers are among those who have refused to hire colored citizens or who have discriminated against them. Nor is the employer always entirely to blame. In some instances he undoubtedly bows to the prejudices of employes who for some reason believe that their status would be impaired if they were required to work side by side with men or women of darker skin.

But the question involved is not that of whether groups which for religious or other reasons do not get along well together shall be compelled to mingle. What is properly asked for the Negro—or for any minority which is or can be picked out—is equal opportunity. As the President says, it is important "for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

The Negro and Defense

Unity Demands That He Be Given Place in Industry

To the Editor of The Chattanooga Times:

Recently President Roosevelt asked the OPM to utilize colored skilled workers and on the heels of that Leland Stowe points out the potential shortage of skilled workers unless steps are taken at once to train and place colored workers in the defense plants, we are likely to face untold difficulty trying to keep up with the schedule of production. Mr. Stowe also points out the dissatisfaction among these workers, because of the neglect of private industry to give them employment, and the Army and Navy refusing to allow them to participate in the many branches of the armed forces.

This might be news to some people, but it is common gossip on the streets of Chattanooga, and something should be done to dispel this feeling if we are to survive the present crisis. I understand that the Nazis are now planning a motion picture to bring a wider gap among the thirteen million colored people throughout the United States. The Communistic forces have been trying for years to win Negroes over to their side. I for one do not think their success will be overwhelming but neither did the Republican party think the Democrats North, South, East and West had a chance to win them, and now the votes are about equal, and what is true in that case might become true in the efforts of foreign agents, fifth columnists and other forces.

The present situation has been traced in many cases to union activities, especially where they bar my people, but in that case, there is no justification for same, because the Negro has proved to be first a patriot, a citizen, and from the History of the Revolutionary war to the last World war, one of the best soldiers to ever shoulder a gun. He has distinguished himself in every worth while movement of the foundation to the American republic. He was with Peary at the North Pole, Crispus Attuck fell during the Boston Massacre, they stood fast with Teddy Roosevelt during the battle of San Juan hill, they shed their blood with Pershing in Mexico and further still they held their own against the crack Hindenburg line in France.

They have rendered invaluable service in the industrial pursuits of the country, serving loyally and faithfully to the end. They have made a history of three hundred years and not one instance of treachery or treason to their country. Now that our life, liberty and property are being threatened we should achieve a united front at all cost, preserve the country and the principle for which our forefathers fought, open the doors of industry to our loyal colored citizens and make the country what it was intended to be, the land of the free and the home of the brave.

WASHINGTON DENIES NEGRO DRAFT CHARGE

Draft Officials Explain Lag in Induction Into Army

JAN 4 - 1941

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—Selective service officials expressed concern today over charges that Negroes were being discriminated against in the matter of induction into the Army and denied the implication.

Negroes have not been inducted as rapidly as white men, it was said, because the Negro units of the Army are less depleted than the white units. For this reason, white selectees are being taken in at a greater rate and barracks for them are being expedited ahead of those for Negroes.

By February, it was said, the white deficiency largely will have been met, and in that month the "discrimination" will be in favor of the Negroes.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 3—Orders from Second Corps Area Headquarters at Governors Island, it was announced here today, set forth that no Negroes would be included among men to be chosen this month for selective service.

This order seemed to puzzle members of local draft boards in the area, but it was explained that the Second Corps Area supplied nearly half the entire first call for selectees and that an adjustment was being made on the basis of population figures.

C. A. Dykstra, Director of Selective Service in Washington, forecast about a month ago that this situation would develop.

"The January call for selectees," he said, "will show a smaller proportion of Negroes, but in February the percentage will substantially increase, as additional facilities and training cadres of noncommissioned personnel become available. Negro selectees will be inducted from January to June at a rate which will guarantee the correct ratio."

Mr. Dykstra estimated that of the first 800,000 men to go to camp in the next five months 75,000 to 80,000 would be Negro selectees, or about 9.7 per cent, or the ratio of Negro to white folk as counted in the 1930 census.

Letters to Roosevelt Seek to Learn Why Negroes Can't Get Jobs—Twenty-five Ministers Sign Letter to Congressman—Mrs. Lampkin Says "Negroes are Tired of Being Passed Up."

FEB 1 1941

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 30.—Scores of telegrams and letters, representing the united expression of Negro citizens in every walk of life here, were sent this week to Prsident Roosevelt and Congressional representatives from Tennessee, protesting the discrimination against Negroes who have been denied jobs in defense industry.

According to Mrs. Daisy E. Lampkin, field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who is here conducting a membership drive, Negro citizens here are tired of being turned away from factory gates in defense industries located in and near Chattanooga, and want the President to take action in the matter.

The telegrams have come from organized church groups, ministers, union workers, women and young people. One letter sent to Representative Estes Kefauver, whose home is located here was signed by 204 Negro citizens including 25 ministers. The letter said in part:

'We are protesting against the discrimination being shown Negro workers in this area, in the national defense program. As our representative, we are insisting that you use your office to bring pressure on the industries which have been awarded contracts in the national defense program. We have the list of these industries and we are sure that you have the same. If you want more information along this line, we shall be glad to send it. As a citizen of Chattanooga we are sure that you are well aware of the conditions confronting the Negro here. W. shall be pleased to hear from you as to what steps you will take."

The letter was signed by Dr. F. A. Stephens, president of the local NAACP branch and 203 other citizens, including 25 ministers.

A letter setting forth the facts were also sent to Robert Weaver, administrative assistant to the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense.

CATHOLIC GROUP FLAYS POLICY OF DISCRIMINATION

JAN 31 1941

NEW YORK. — (IRNS) — The prevailing American policy of discrimination against Negroes in the field of employment is considered a grave national problem that now demands an adequate solution, was the verdict handed down by members of a panel discussion sponsored by the Catholic Interracial Council at St. Peter's church Sunday afternoon.

Participating in the conference on "Employment Opportunities for the Negro," were the Rev. John P. Boland, chairman of the New York State Labor Relations board; Abram L. Harris of the department of economics, Howard university; the Rev. Lembert Dunne, O.S.B., of the New Jersey Labor S. Jackson, of the Children's court Advisory Bureau; Judge Stephen New York; George Streator, writer and lecturer; the Rev. John P Delaney, S. J., of the Institute of Social Order, and Godfrey P Schmidt of the New York State Department of Labor.

The occasion was the observance of the sixth anniversary of the organization whose purpose is to promote in every practicable way relations between the races based on the Christian principles of interracial justice and charity which uphold the God-given dignity and destiny of every person.

Adopted Resolution

Before more than 500 white and Negro citizens, the members of the panel board presented a six-point resolution which was readily adopted by the audience.

They agreed that it is a flagrant violation of the Negro's fundamental rights as a man and a citizen for him to be discriminated against; that no other group in America has ever endured such discrimination; that there will never be an era of social justice in America and harmony in the western hemisphere unless interracial justice can be established.

That today whhen democracy is openly challenged, America can no longer tolerate the continuance of racial discrimination in employment; that national unity will depend upon the existence of liberty and justice for all Americans;

That race, religious, class prejudice-racism belongs to the totalitarians and the dictators and can have no place in American democracy.

Solution Offered

The Rev. John P. Boland offered as a solution to the employment problem, the church, as a unifying force, and that the matter be not left entirely up to labor unions.

Mr. Schmidt suggested that placement offices be placed in the position where they must serve with leadership. To eliminate race prejudice by having interviewers educate employers who call for workers in the idealogy that what they need is not a white man or Negro, but a person who is qualified and merits the position.

He also stated that legislation cannot eradicate prejudice but it can help to do so.

Educate Negro Leaders

Mr. Streator's solution was along the line that in order to open more avenues of employment for the Negro it is necessary for Negro colleges to educate their students in industry and explore avenues of employment on a scope never before attempted. He stated that Negro schools are too far removed from the labor problems.

If Negroes would interest themselves in more jobs at $100 each than one job for one man at $10,000 and prepare themselves politically for social action and think more in terms of cooperation than individuality, some good would come out of it that would benefit the whole," Mr. Streator asserted.

Harris Pessimistic

Professor Harris admitted that he was very pesimistic about what could be done at the present time and suggested industrial expansion for the benefit of white and colored alike.

He agreed with Mr. Streator that Negro colleges should explore industrial and technical opportunities. However, he said that if colleges should train technicians without devising ways for securing employment we would simply increase the number of unemployed technicians.

The Rev. John P. Delaney, S. J., advanced the theory that a greater respect for the dignity of the human being from the standpoint of Christianity as the only solution to the problem.

Read Letter

Judge Jackson read a letter to the conference in which Senator Robert Wagner had requested William S. Knudesen, director general of the Office of Production Management to investigate fully the question of discrimination against Negroes in factories with defense contracts.

The Senator asked for its discontinuance declaring that it was undemocratic.

Defense Group Pushes Plans As Vital To All

JAN 24 1941

Obstacles St. Louis's Revealed Args To Body

St. Louis, Mo.

Close to 100 Groups Are In Program

JAN 24 1941

A mass meeting will be sponsored by the Jefferson City Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in collaboration with a country-wide drive of the national organization to obtain better treatment of Negroes in the National Defense Program.

The meeting will be held Sunday, Jan. 26, at Second Baptist Church, Jefferson City, at 8 p. m. Prominent speakers will be present.

The Negro committee on National Defense embarked on an effort to muster all of its strength of close to one hundred organizations in its fight to obtain equal opportunity in participation in the National Defense program.

Face Obstacles

At its weekly meeting last Monday night at the Tom Powell American Legion Post, 3907 W. Belle place, the body was spurred in its effort by reports of various obstacles faced by the Negro citizens in obtaining employment in huge defense industries in this section and of the meagre participation of the Negro youth in National Defense training within the greater St. Louis area. A report brought back by a committee sent to investigate the huge TNT plant project at Welden Springs (St. Charles), Missouri, was anything but encouraging. It was revealed that some 500 workers were employed on the project, among whom no Negroes were discernable.

Questioning Mr. Englander concerning employment of Negroes the investigator reported that he was told that all employes were hired through the A. F. of L., which union has a contract on the project. Another representative told of fights faced by Negroes to obtain a small percentage of jobs at the huge Aluminum Ore plant, at the Monsanto Chemical Plant, both in East St. Louis, Illinois.

Pass Blanks

Concerning the defense training, the committee brought in a report stating that it found little use being made of the opportunity to obtain official vocational training under the provisions of the National defense program.

Blanks were distributed, to be passed around, in an effort to obtain applications for training in the various trades such as brickmasons, carpenters, plumbers, blacksmiths, welders, printers, plasterers, etc.

Taking cognizance of the drastic situation, members of the contact committee made plans to arouse the interest of every Negro organization in the city to the vital problems concerning the race. Owing to the fact that the time limit is short for the program, the group planned to push its contacts through the community and through speakers from the organization. It was also announced that the educational committee had made an appointment to meet Educational Supervisor King this week end with the thought of a program for the training of Negro youth of the city.

Push Big Meet

The program committee announced that, after definitely closing the date of Feb. 23 for the gigantic defense meeting at the Auditorium, it is rushing invitations to various speakers of national and international importance to appear on the program. Several appointments were made including that of a regular secretary to fly away important matter presented before the body for future reference and as a record of his history-making body.

The next meeting of the organization will be Monday night, January 27. at 8:00 p. m., at the Tom Powell Post Hall. Representatives of all organizations interested are invited to attend

The President Has Spoken..... But Battle Is Only Half Won

President Roosevelt put his finger on the real danger to democratic government when he stated: "Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad."

That is the very heart of the matter. It is greater than giving employment to colored Americans in defense industries. It is unfortunate that the President restricted his comment to defense industries. There can be no unity in America so long as we practice what we denounce Hitler for doing.

The widespread discrimination enforced upon American colored citizens is unfair and at the same time stupid. It is unfair to those who must endure the discrimination; and it is stupid because it creates disunity which is dangerous to any program of the government.

The President's memorandum to his defense production chiefs follows a similar letter written by them on April 11th, 1941, to business executives requesting them to let down the bars.

President Roosevelt touched lightly upon one of the greatest threats to the employment of colored workers when he stated: "American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries."

It is an undisputed fact that organized labor creates barriers which keep out colored workmen. Again the President restricts his language to defense industries. Again we point out that this is unfortunate, because the problem of unity and morale transcends these industries. As happy as we are to have the President join hands with those of us who have been fighting for the inclusion of colored workers in defense industries we had hoped that he would tackle the whole problem of racial discrimination in the United States.

This newspaper does not believe that a mere statement, even from the President of the United States, will cure the evils concerning which colored Americans have a just complaint. It is imperative that those organizations which have set themselves as flint for the inclusion of colored workers keep up the fight until the whole wicked situation is cracked wide open.

And no one should discount the work being done. Mr. Hillman and Mr. Knudsen spoke because the matter of discrimination was called vigorously to their attention. And the President began his memorandum to his production chiefs with these words: "Complaints have REPEATEDLY been brought to my attention that available and much needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion or national origin."

The word we wish our readers to observe in the President's message is "repeatedly." Not once but hundreds of times has this matter been called to the President's attention.

Now that he has spoken, the "follow through" is important. Those who are directing the drive for jobs for colored workers can not stop now. Their job is only half done.

The march on Washington scheduled for July first must go on. In fact, it should be increased. All hands working for the common objective will break down the bars, and when we fight for democracy we will be fighting for the real thing, not for an empty shell.

South's Army Camps Irk Draftees of Both Races

WILMINGTON, N.C.—(ANP)—Colored and white draftees from Northern areas, despite the distances that separate them in the segregated army camps of the South, have a mutual dislike for the camps and the vicinities in which they are serving their year's military training.

Here at Camp Davis, thirty miles from Wilmington, there are a number of draftees from the Northern States in the Sixth Corps Area. The present attitude of the native whites, a writer for a large midwestern daily has pointed out.

They are self-respecting and inclined to mind their own business, but they can't understand the relationship between the colored and white southerners. The feeling of dislike is shared by the whites of the South and the Northern whites vehemently resent the exploitation they suffer at the hands of civilians.

The Negroes In National Defense

The editorial appearing in the June 12 issue of The Post, captioned "Negroes and Defense," is a credit to any American newspaper. It imparts to some readers the hope that democracy, such as it is, will yet survive the totalitarian attack and continue on toward perfection.

The Council for Democracy has undertaken an admirable task and all truly democratic newspapers or institutions that profess a sincere interest in the perpetuation of democracy should vigorously support this program. Influence of the press is still an invaluable instrument in creating and maintaining social standards. It seems grossly inconsistent that with all of the intelligence and genius this country is credited with having, it should remain content to dissipate its resources, both physical and mental, on such devitalizing issues as group hatred and racial intolerance.

It is my hope that the Council for Democracy will continue its efforts to establish an economic, social and moral balance in the present American scheme of living, and that all other rational and progressive organizations will contribute to the actual enforcement of this program. Also it is necessary to have individual support so that all American citizens may eventually realize the intrinsic value of the virtues upon which his sovereign government was originally predicated, and so that we, as a nation, may prove to the rest of the strife-torn world that democracy can work here, if not elsewhere, and that it is the most enduring, the most logical, the most productive form of social order.

THOMAS E. KIRTON
Washington, June 14.

Permit me to commend you on your editorial of June 12 entitled "Negroes And Defense," and for the courage which its publication evinces. Protests and denunciations against practices of totalitarian governments must necessarily fall upon deaf ears so long as our own practices are so pronouncedly undemocratic.

As you have said in your editorial, it is a stupid policy that would prevent the full and effective utilization of all our much-needed man power in a national emergency. It is to be hoped that firm steps will be taken to the end that our much-needed man power may be utilized. The dangers of friction to which you refer in your editorial many of us believe are in most cases more imaginary than real.

I am convinced that the first great need on the issue of race discrimination is firmness in the Government itself, beginning at the White House and filtering down to the remotest section in any Government agency. Such a course would give backbone to the timid industrialist and facilitate the integration of Negroes into shops and factories. This would be a great step forward toward a real democracy. It would greatly lessen our vulnerability as a target for totalitarian attack.

May I express the hope that other great dailies will join you in this advanced step. A. S. PINKETT.
Washington, June 14.

The Post's June 12 editorial "Negroes and Defense" was pertinent and seasonable. For example, its printing was timely respecting opening for service of the Federal Government Airport terminal at Gravelly Point. There is neither reason, occasion nor places for separate waiting rooms, cafeterias, and other terminal facilities upon these government premises.

Discrimination In Defense Jobs Scored By White Press

WASHINGHTON, D. C.—Daily newspapers in all sections of the country have given unanimous editorial support to the drive for the integration of Negro workers into the national defense program, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch, has reported.

Dr. Weaver's report was based on a survey of newspaper comment on the subject within recent weeks. Many of the editorials listed follow Mr. Hillman's action on April 11 in urging defense contract holders to utilize available Negro skilled and unskilled labor.

"Since an enlightened public opinion is of great aid in attacking a problem of this nature," the report said, "this widespread support of the daily press should be of much assistance in expediting the integration of qualified Negro workers into defense production."

VERMONT FREE PRESS—"While we in America stoutly declare the equality of all races under this government of ours and teach our children the principle of Christian brotherhood, yet there persists a strong current of race prejudice which is a very tender subject in many areas of the United States. . .Negroes have a real contribution to make to national defense and they should be given every encouragement along that line."

MASSACHUSETTS STANDARD TIMES—"Certainly a nation that is arming to defend its democracy against forces that assert the superiority of one particular race above all others, should not display a similar attitude by denying any group of its citizens the privilege of contributing to that defense. If the OPM can impress that view on employers and white workers, and overcome the prejudice that now exists, it will have accomplished a just and a worthwhile thing."

INDIANA COURIER—"Our Negroes are hundred-per-cent Americans. But also their efficiency is probably much higher, when they are given opportunity to develop it, than has been realized. As these facts are accepted, there may be many more Negroes taken off the charity rolls and the WPA and given useful jobs helping industry and Uncle Sam."

NEW YORK POST—"It is up to America to end discrimination against Negro participation in our national effort. We can prove to the Negro that his faith in the United States is well placed."

KANSAS CITY KANSAN—"No controversial 'social' issue is involved here. tI is strictly the economic issue of giving all of equal skill equal chance at employment opportunities, regardless of any other consideration."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR—"A clear test of the quality of democracy in the United States will be its ability to use more fully the resource which exists in the services of an important minority."

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER—"It is particularly necessary that Negro youths be afforded equal opportunities for training in defense work. There are employers and labor leaders who should take a more enlightened view of this question, both for their country's sake and that of common justice."

WASHINGTON (D. C.) POST—"The fact that skilled Negro craftsmen are being denied employment in industries handicapped by labor shortages has been frequently mentioned in official reports of the United States Employment Service. From the standpoint of those concerned only with speeding up the defense program, such exclusion must seem indefensible."

GREAT FALLS (MONT.) TRIBUNE—"Our leaders are telling us that the need is at hand to mobilize all our manpower, not only for military defense, but also for industrial production so essential to defense. The leaders of the Negro Americans are asking what their place is in that effort."

MINNEAPOLIS (MINN.) TRIBUNE—"If we are going to bring the blessings of democracy, in our time and generation, to all the people of the globe, we might as well begin to do a little homework, if only to get our hand in."

OREGON JOURNAL—"The United States, which fought a bloody civil war in order that the Negro might be free, and which is now engaged upon its greatest of all rearmament drives, in order that racial discrimination and oppression of minorities shall be ended forever, should be the last country on earth to draw the line against its own Negro citizens. They are ready and willing and able to serve. They have every right to serve. They should be be permitted to serve."

VOTE FOR SQUARE DEAL IN DEFENSE

MADISON, Wisc., June 19—The Wisconsin legislature unanimously memorialized the President, Congress and the Office of Production Management last week to use the skills of the Negroes in this country in the all-out defense program now in progress and to remove all restrictions of industry against the employment of the race. The resolution, sponsored by Representative Rubin and Biemiller, states that billions of dollars of government defense contracts have gone to companies that consistently refuse to hire Negroes. By approving this resolution, No. 58 A., the Wisconsin legislature joins the ranks of hundreds of other public agencies in the national campaign to make the contribution of the Negro to the national defense program more acceptable by whites.

The resolution, as approved, states "It is manifestly unfair to a group of hard working citizens whose loyalty has never been questioned that they should be forced to beg for the right to participate in the defense program and the privilege to serve their country. If America is to be saved from Hitlerism it must be willing to give up racial prejudice in order to enlist the full support of all of our peoples to give without stint their productive labor in the battle for democracy."

President Roosevelt Condemns Labor Ban

PRESIDENT Roosevelt has moved to mitigate by moral suasion existing discrimination against colored Americans in defense industries. His strong letter to Messrs. Knudsen and Hillman of the Office of Production Management is printed on the front page of this issue of the Journal and Guide.

The President has undoubtedly moved before this to exert the pressure of his office upon this un-American practice. Letters that have gone out to defense construction contractors from Mr. Hillman and others high up in the councils of government have undoubtedly had the sanction of President Roosevelt. This strong statement directly from the President however, will have more persuasive effect on this situation than any similar action from those supervising defense preparations.

The President speaks a profoundly earnest conviction when he says:

> Our government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color.

He strengthens this serious admonition by saying:

> In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man-power."

It is certainly to be expected that this important pronouncement from the President of the United States will have immediate mitigating effect upon the present debarment of qualified colored Americans from certain phases of employment in defense preparations, and eventually wipe it out. It is reasonably certain that if this solemn admonition and warning is not heeded the President will take more specific and effective action.

The President's timely pronouncement is a victory for Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training branch of the Labor Division under the Office of Production Management, whose tireless efforts to end discrimination have been implemented by the press and by numerous influential groups and organizations, white and colored.

'WHITE ONLY'

By JAMES MORISON

FEB 2 1941

Are you native, white, reliable, and intelligent?

If you are, there may be a job for you in the war industries. If you are native, BLACK, reliable, and intelligent, there is none. National policy has been established: the great corporations which are receiving billions of dollars in orders for war in "defense of democracy" have adopted Jim Crow as their own.

Proof? Millions of Negro workers are unemployed. Millions are trying to find work in plants now producing aircraft, machine tools, motors, steel, ships—building cantonments, roads, making uniforms.

In Henry R. Luce's weekly magazine Time, issue of November 25, a full page advertisement of the United Gas Pipe Line Co., invited industrialists to build new plants in the gulf states of Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Alabama, and Florida. Labor, said the ad, was available . . . "native, white, reliable, intelligent." The inference is plain that Negro labor in unreliable and unintelligent. The National Urban League, which acts as an agency for obtaining jobs for Negroes, protested to Time, to United Gas Pipe, to the National Association of Manufacturers, and to the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Only the Chamber of Commerce replied. It evasively declared that it could not discuss the policy of member organization.

In 1930, 5,503,535 Negroes above the age of ten were rated as employable by the federal census. Of these, 2,369,430 lived in the five gulf states. No detailed figures are available in the 1940 census, but is likely that now more than 2,500,000 Negroes live in the area in which United Gas Pipe monopolizes the sale of natural gas.

National Jim Crow

Jim Crow policy is not sectional in scope. Giant industries of the North which are receiving war order largesse from the administration deny jobs to Negroes in East, North, and West as well as South. No war industry jobs are open to Negroes in New York City, according to organiztions which are seeking to defend the Negroes' right to work. In New York City the case load of Negroes on relief has risen from 21 per cent in 1937 to 25 per cent in 1940—despite a drop in the number of white workers on relief. No Negro works in the aircraft, aircraft equipment, ship-building, chemical, munitions, machine tool, motor, steel and iron, and other war industries of the East unless he accepts heavy unskilled, stevedore jobs. There has been no decrease in Negro unemployment in the Pittsburgh area, although the steel mills are working at 98 per cent of capacity. Except where AO contracts provide against discrimination in motors and aircraft—as at Vultee—very few jobs are open to Negroes in Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle.

In the South, this policy is considered one of segregation for political purposes. Poll tax politicians occupy important posts in Washington. Many are committee chairmen in Congress or close advisors to the President. Their power rests upon the white upper and middle class of the South who can pay the poll tax. There is no essential difference between Hitlerism and Jim Crow, in this respect. To give jobs to Southern Negroes would be to give them money for all their poll tax. And the mood of the Negro today is not one of friendliness toward his political and economic white oppressors. He would vote the poll tax boys out—if he could.

Practices of Discrimination

But in the North this is not the case. The Negro votes in the North. Why, then, the national opposition to employing Negroes? Why are vocational courses operated by industries closed to Negroes? Why does the New York State Employment Service advertise for 300 carpenters to work on army cantonments — "white only"? Why does the same bureau ask for army cooks—"white only"? Why are Negro students who pay for their own technical education in private schools left standing on street corners, jobless? Why are appeals of the National Urban League to the Sperry Gyroscope Co. left unanswered?

The Negro today is a powerful force for democracy in America. To educate him, to give him job security, to place him on a plane of equality in skilled jobs would be to liberate in part his pent-up desires for equal treatment. Therefore, as a considered, planned program for reaction, the industrial over ords of the administration's war program have rejected Negro participation. Negroes cannot fly in the army or navy. They can do only menial work. They cannot be dentists, doctors, nurses. They cannot advance toward an officer's commission, unless they belong to the chosen few who are given promotion in order to obscure the vicious discrimination practiced against the many.

This policy of military Jim Crow is official, maintained by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Stimson. Now the line is being re-drawn between black and white in civilian labor. All the progress made by Negroes in the last quarter of a century is thus to be wiped out by the war economy and under the pressure of war hysteria.

The role played by Sidney Hillman in this situation is a sorry one. In the office of the Labor Division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, is Robert C. Weaver, in charge of Negro labor. Mr. Weaver has succeeded in obtaining certain minute concessions. In Maryland, Arkansas, and Virginia, where by means of state control of jobs Negro construction workers were barred from work on army cantonments, Mr. Weaver has been able to induce AFL building trades unions to permit the use of Negro carpenters. For the record, this looks like a victory against Jim Crow. But Mr. Hillman has been as silent as death about the almost universal discrimination against Negroes.

Organizations such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Urban League, and the National Negro Congress have been taking the lead in fighting this essential battle for democracy.

War is a signal for the oppression of all minorities, the splitting of the American people into antagonistic groups, over which the fascist sympathizers hope to ride to power. The only antitoxin for this poison in the American body politic is a fearless fight for jobs. In a true democracy every man must have an equal right to work.

Senator Unaware Jim Crow in Defense

MAR 29 1941

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor announced Friday the membership of the Sub-committee to hold preliminary hearings on S. R. 75, which provides for an exhaustive investigation of discrimination against the Negro in the National Defense Program.

Chairman of the Sub-committee is Senator H. H. Schwartz of Wyoming. The other members are Senators Claude Pepper, Floriad; James M. Mead, New York; Robert A. Taft, Ohio and Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin. According to present plans, the Sub-committee will hold its first hearing on April 1, when Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will testify.

The Senate sponsors of the resolution are Senators Robert F. Wagner, New York; W. Warren Barbour, New Jersey; Arthur Capper, Kansas and Prentiss Brown, Michigan. Information relative to the resolution was published in the Star News and other newspapers about four weeks ago.

By ROBERT SMITH

Despite the fact that discrimination against Negroes in National Defense industries has been the cause not only of Senate investigation, but also of nation-wide protest from white and Negro civic and religious groups, Senator Gerald P. Nye, Independent Republican of North Dakota, told the Amsterdam Star News, Friday night, that he did not know Negroes were being discriminated against in national defense industries.

John T. Flynn, chairman of "Keep America out of War Committee," also expressed the same ignorance. They were both guest speakers at a mass meeting held at the Golden Gate Ballroom, under the auspices of "Negroes Against War Committee," with George S. Schuyler, newspaperman as chairman.

Case Is Hopeless

Told by the Star News representative that such is the existing condition, and asked just what he would suggest to solve the situation. Senator Nye said that it was hopeless, nothing could be done about it.

"You see in an emergency like this, I do not know how he can hope to overcome it. It is most regrettable that such matters have to be shunted aside. I am afraid that nothing can be done about it," he said.

MAR 29 1941

Should Not Fight

Asked whether he thought the Negro should play an active part in the military life of the United States when denied employment in defense industries, Senator Nye said, "By all means no. He should not be expected to take up arms and defend the country when he is discriminated against."

"There is equality in dying, but not in living," he cited when he recalled the valorous part played by Negro soldiers in France during the last World War.

Mr. Flynn also shared the Senator's views, declaring that the Negro if discriminated against in defense industries has no right to take an active part in warfare.

Keep Out of War

Both speakers told their audience of about 200 people that with the determination of the American people, the United States can be kept out of war.

"Our involvement in Europe's war is only as inevitable as we, the people, permit it to be inevitable," Senator Nye said. J. A. Rogers, historian, also spoke. Miss Anne Wiggins Brown sang, "America."

May Not Have Separate Camps for Racial Groups of Conscientious Objectors

MAR 14 1941

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — Unless something untoward turns up, there will be no separate Negro camps for conscientious objectors, according to Major Campbell Johnson of the selective service board, who said on Monday, that the camps being formed would serve all conscientious objectors Negro as well as white.

When asked about the camps, Major Johnson explained at length that several proposals were under consideration and that the question of color had not as yet arisen in the matter.

Camps are being utilized, he said, for religious groups the two largest being the Quaker and the Menonites. In the former, there is a possibility of having Negro members of the sect, but there are none in the latter group, which adheres to customs peculiar to their forebears in the 18th century.

Both are peace-loving folk and have no wish to carry arms or to be identified with any military matters. Therefore, they will be utilized in other capacities. At present several plans are under way for caring for them—one by which the government will take charge of their activities, the other, a joint control by the government and religious group with both sides furnishing the necessary money and the third for the religious groups to finance the entire cost of the camps, which, however, would be under government supervision.

The largest number of Negro conscientious objectors will come from the Seventh-Day Adventist group which has made a large number of conversions among Negroes.

They are being trained by their own teachers in the finer points of first aid and will be attached to the medical corps as stretcher-bearers and similar needful work, thereby eliminating the members of this sect as fighters.

The law of 1917 differed from the present law The earlier law stated that a person had to be a member of one of the two religious groups mentioned above, but under the present set-up any person may claim exemption on conscientious objector scruples, but he must prove to the satisfaction of his draft board that he really is a conscientious objector.

To date, no problem of race has arisen, but Major Johnson says that the selective service board will attempt to meet all situations as they arise.

NO EQUALITY IN TRAINING FOR DEFENSE

Machinery Still 'On Order;' School Boards Violate U. S. Policy

MAR 14 1941

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The National Defense program has been underway in Kansas City and vicinity for months. Yet up to now, the Negro youth is denied an equal opportunity to prepare for jobs in defense industry.

Soon two giant defense plants will be erected in Greater Kansas City—a bomber plant in the Fairfax district and an ammunition factory at Lake City.

Where will the workers for these two plants be obtained? The plant workers will be men trained for the specific industries in classes set up by the boards of education of Kansas City, Mo., and Kanas City, Kas.

So far, Negroes have not received the same or equitable training received by whites. There are now TWO defense training classes for Negroes in Kansas City, Mo.—woodworking and auto mechanics, both located at the R. T. Coles vocational and junior high school. Equipment for two other shops, radio and electrical work and gas welding are "on order" and have been for several weeks. No definite information can be obtained as to when the equipment will be here and the classes opened.

In the meantime, white youths are being trained in these and numerous other trades for national defense. Classes which whites now have at the Manual Training high school and which Negroes do not have include sheet metal, machine shop, aircraft riveting and forming, arc welding, aircraft mechanics and others.

This not only is unfair by all the laws of justice and democracy, but it is against the expressed policy of the United States government.

When the school boards of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kas., fail to provide equal training for Negroes they are violating the terms or defense training policy as set forth by Studebaker of the U. S. Office of Education last November. In a letter to state education agents in states which have separate school systems, Mr. Studebaker said:

"No trainee under the defense training act shall be discriminated against because of sex, race or color; and where separate schools are required by law for separate population groups, to the extent needed for trainees of each such group, equitable provision shall be made for facilities and training of like quality."

Amplifying this statement, Mr. Studebaker said,

"I fully realize that in providing training for Negroes on this basis, it will appear that more Negroes are being trained than can immediately be employed. Some delay in employment is also occurring among white people who have been trained. I have the assurance of representatives of the Defense Commission that in view of the large percentage of Negroes who have not had opportunity for training in the past and the probable need for the employment of these Negroes in industries essential to national defense, it will not be expected that they will all be readily or immediately employed, but it is certainly clear that if they are given essential training they will possess valuable assets which will facilitate their employment. The Employment Services can be depended upon to cooperate in every way possible if the schools request the assignment of Negroes."

This is the answer to those school officials who say that they cannot train Negroes unless they have some definite assurance that the trainees will be employed. This is the answer to the argument "Why train them if they can't get jobs"—a part of the vicious circle which leaves Negroes out in the cold.

The U. S. Office of Education says there shall be no discrimination. When will Kansas City follow the policy of the national government?

The Vicious Circle of Job Discrimination

MAR 10 1941

• President R. E. Gilmore of the Sperry Gyroscope Company in Brooklyn has earned a place on the "State Defense Council," the body to which Gov. Lehman seems to "elevate" all big manufacturers who openly confess to job-discrimination against the Negro people.

Although Negro workers are good enough to be drafted (to die for Wall Street profits), President Gilmore told a representative delegation of Negro and white citizens last week that they were not "good" enough to be given employment in his plant. He tried to hide behind the statement that Negroes are not trained for the special type of work, while the jim-crow "defense" training apparatus says it can train Negroes only for the jobs they can get. This is the vicious circle of job discrimination under capitalism, which the employers are intensifying through the "defense" machinery.

Just like fascist anti-Semites try to cover up with the "some-of-my-best-friends-are-Jews" argument, Pres. Gilmore told the delegation, in effect, that some of my best personal servants are Negroes. Thus does the stench of the slave market become stronger —in New York.

In view of the fact that Gov. Lehman has placed six such people as Pres. Gilmore on the "State Defense Council," his legislative message, citing racial discrimination, has, apparently, nothing to do with his deeds. A "defense" program supposedly to advance democracy, obviously spreads Hitlerism. Never was the need more apparent and urgent for the passage of the anti-discrimination bills in Albany.

The National Negro Congress, the American Peace Mobilization, Youth organizations and other groups which finally, got through the red tape to see Pres. Gilmore, were representing the democratic sentiments of labor and New Yorkers in general. Their actions focused attention on this shameful evil, and with broader public support and campaigns, can strike it a powerful blow through passage of anti-discrimination measures in the state legislature.

FEP COMMITTEE TO PROBE FEDERAL USE OF ANTI-BIAS LAW

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 31—An immediate investigation of what steps the War Department, the Navy and the Maritime Commision have taken to comply with President Roosevelt's Executive Order No. 8802, issued June 25, was agreed upon Monday afternoon by members of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, meeting in executive session.

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organization, was not present, due to illness.

TO EMPLOY SECRETARY

At an earlier organization meeting held last Wednesday, the Committee had agreed to accept no proxies for absent members.

The same five members also attended the organization meeting, held in the office of Sidney Hillman, associated director of the Office of Production Management. This meeting, closed to reporters, was also attended by William S. Knudson, co-director with Mr. Hillman of OPM.

The Committee took the position that it would operate independent of OPM, although it would use the investigatory bodies already set up by the OPM to carry on its operations.

It was agreed that an Executive Secretary should be employed by the Committee, with offices in Washington, to receive complaints and to devise administrative machinery for the Committee.

RACE MEN ARE BEING CONSIDERED

At Monday's meeting, the names of some 30 men were submitted to the Committee. Agreement is said to have been reached on a few choices. Some of the names submitted were those of colored men.

The pay of the executive secretary has not been determined. The limit for such Government employees is $9,000.

Mr. Dickerson urged at the first meeting that the work of the Committee be divided on a regional basis and that offices be set up in these regions through which complaints might be cleared. The suggestion was received favorably.

At a press conference following the organization meeting, the Committee was belabored with questions as to what action might be taken against Government departments which discriminated in employment. The Committee was also quizzed about the disposition of contracts since the President's Executive order was issued.

So far, it is believed that the Committee will be limited in its action ot defense contracts unless the public demands enlargement of its powers.

The investigation of the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission, agreed upon Monday, will concern itself with the disposition of contracts since June 25 when the President's order was issued. The Order stipulated that each contract must contain a non-discrimination clause.

There have been reports that the agencies concerned hustled through some contracts without the clause on the grounds that they had been 'discussed" before June 25th.

CHAIRMAN ISSUES STATEMENT

Mark Etheridge, chairman of the Committee, issued a forthright statement of the Committee's policy after the organization meeting. He stated:

"To defense for America means total ion of all our resources, al and human. To finish tremendous production task ave set ourselves, we must all qualified labor, regardless f race, creed, color or national igin.

"Othe e, we can never turn out speed enough and in quantity enough the tanks, planes, guns and ships which will make our nation the effective arsenal of democracy.

"From a practical standpoint—that of getting the job done—discrimination against loyal and qualified workers for any reason is stupid.

"From the standpoint of democratic aims, it is unforgiveable.

"Guns, planes, tanks and ships alone will not make us strong. If we are to keep men free, we must take positive steps to widen the base of democracy at home while we help to defend it abroad.

"So long as various groups in our population are arbitrarily denied opportunity to take part in the defense program, we cannot expect them to share that feeling of national unity which is crucial to national morale.

"As the President stated in his Executive Order 8802, establishing the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, 'The nation can be successfully defended only with the help and support of all groups within its borders.'"

It Is Up to Us

Several weeks ago, President Roosevelt issued an executive order prohibiting discrimination on defense jobs in a dramatic move to force manufacturers to provide employment for Negroes. At the time, Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would name a commission to see to it that the terms of the order are carried out. That commission has been named.

The Amsterdam Star-News urged the President to put at least two Negroes on the commission, after it was freely discussed that only one Negro was to be appointed. There are two Negroes on the commission.

We don't have any quarrel with Mr. Roosevelt over his selection. In fact we believe the men chosen are amply fitted for the work, and that if White House cooperation is what the President has led us to believe it will be, the next few weeks ought to witness a steady dwindling of names from the list of the unemployed Negroes.

In appointing Philip Murray and William Green, President of the C. I. O. and American Federation of Labor, respectively, President Roosevelt, we think, made a strategic move. Labor unions play an extremely important part in determining the personnel of industrial plants and they can accept or reject Negroes as they see fit. The history of their programs and policies undeniably substantiate this fact. Messers Green and Murray can bring pressure to bear on the various locals to force down the barriers.

David Sarnoff, President of powerful R. C. A. is in a key position as head of the vast Rockefeller interests to secure the cooperation of big business, while Mark Ethridge, Vice President and General Manager of the usually liberal Louisville-Courier Journal, ought to be able to garner support from the press especially in the South.

Much of the success of the commission is going to rest on the shoulders of Milton P. Webster, International Vice President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Earl B. Dickerson, Alderman of the City of Chicago, the two Negro members. It will be largely up to them to see that information and incidents regarding discrimination that reach the commission are thoroughly investigated and that plants violating the letter and spirit of the order are exposed and punished.

But behind the entire six men on the commission stands an alert citizenry, backed by an aggressive press. Now that the President has set up the machinery and outlined the course of action, it is up to us . . . both public and press who are interested in seeing justice done. This newspaper, which has supported the 'March to Washington" movement since its inception, will give the new commission all the support it possibly can, and at the same time, we intend to take a definite and vigorous stand against the commission if it attempts to soft-soap the issue and fails to translate the President's executive order into practical operation. We don't expect to be fooled this time. If Democracy is what they say it is, we intend to see it really at work.

Executive Order Of Government Jobs Is Asked

Discrimination In Bureau Is Pointed Out

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Demanding an executive order covering the employment of Negroes in government jobs as well as in defense industries the United Federal Workers of America adopted a resolution to this effect as part of their program in the recently held two day convention, which met in Weshington.

Decrying the discriminatory practices against Negroes, the committee assigned to look into the governmental program reported in favor of such an order and further recommended the support of an anti-discrimination bill. Each of the locals of the order was called upon for full cooperation in putting over the program to end discrimination against Negroes in the Government agencies.

It was further recommended that a federal unit be set up to implement the executive order requested and to see that its provisions were carried out.

A crack was also taken at the vicious civil service system which permits appointment officers to pass over Negroes. The group recommended that in such cases when an appointment officer passes over the persons at the top of the list submitted to him and gives a position to one lower, he must submit in writing to the civil service commission his reason for so doing.

The group went on record as recommending a very strict policy of promotion, with the establishing of promotions on strictly seniority basis.

One of the most important recommendations, however, was the one dealing with segregated units. "We are opposed to segregated units," the resolution said, "because of two factors: first, it tends to promote racial animosities, and second it severely limits promotional opportunities for Negroes."

This latter has been one of the drawbacks of the segregated units and has been one of the main reasons for the retention of these units. By limiting Negroes to certain phases of work and staffing certain projects with all Negro workers, there is little chance for promotion excepting a limited few who do not gain much headway after they reach the peak in that particular section.

Shall The Negro Be Given Work?

The President recently felt it necessary to protest against a Jim Crow line in employment in defense jobs in towns and cities. The Negro, for all the apparent progress of his race, seems now caught in a more desperate position than even he knew in the past between a land where there are fewer places for him and the towns where there are not jobs for him.

This is an American problem of special significance to the South. In recent years huge numbers of Southern Negroes have moved to the cities of the North. Indeed today the largest communities of Negroes in the world are north of the Mason and Dixon Line. But millions of Negroes remain in the South and always will remain. That means that when, on the land and in the town, he is progressively shut off from a chance to work, the burden of his dependency on the region will increase. This is tragedy for the Negro but it is a tragedy from which his white neighbors do not escape.

Indeed, this increasing economic plight of the Negro is one which puts a growing load on the South's advance. No region can afford the luxury of carrying a race which in large degree is not allowed to work for itself. But the process, shown in census figures, moves in that direction. Discrimination against the employment of Negroes in the end comes to a white insistence that white men be allowed to support Negroes in idleness. If that makes sense this is a silly world. Yet that seems to be the direction in which discrimination against the Negro in town and country employment is leading.—The Raleigh News and Observer

ETHERIDGE'S JOB

Mark Etheridge has been appointed by President Roosevelt as chairman of a committee to investigate discriminations against Negroes in defense industries.

The appointment of Mr. Etheridge, a former Georgian who is now general manager of The Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, is assurance that there will be a thorough and impartial study of the problem. Etheridge is a Southerner of national stature, being recognized as a spokesman for both newspapers and radio.

Obviously, as President Roosevelt has pointed out, the Negro should be given the opportunity to make his maximum contribution to national defense — both for the good of the Negro and for the good of the nation.

Recent accounts of Army tests which indicate that Negroes can see much better under certain light conditions than whites are an example of how unwise it would be not to ultilize their particular abilities. If this particular faculty of the Negro makes him more valuable for special types of military service, it would be folly not to use him.

As for employment in defense industries, debating the subject will not accomplish anything. An emotional approach to the problem will not solve it; if anything such an approach would make the problem worse.

The committee of which Mr. Etheridge is head, and which includes representatives of both labor and industry, should be able to make specific recommendations for dealing with specific situations. To date the public has not been informed either of the extent of the problem, or what might be done about it.

Discrimination By Employers, Army Charged

Racial Issue Placed Before Congressional Committees.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP)—Charges of racial discrimination by private employers and by the nation's armed services were put before congressional committees today by separate sources.

John T. Jones, legislative representative of the CIO and director of labor's Nonpartisan League, filed with a House Judiciary Subcommittee a statement urging enactment of specific legislation to forbid racial discrimination in employment.

He contended that a "handful of rich and powerful corporations" were discriminating against Negro workers and added:

"The use of one racial group against another, one national group against another, in order to beat down the economic standards of all, is an old story to the labor movement. It is the ancient maxim of divide and rule—divide and exploit."

Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers, testifying before a house committee studying migration of defense workers, discussed the charges of discrimination and said that "the government has sought to concentrate the heat engineered in this issue on industry."

"The fact is," he told the committee, "that both the government as well as organized labor might well put their own houses in order."

DEFENSE FIRMS STILL PRACTICE DISCRIMINATION

Skilled Workers Rejected By Airplane Plants In New York, New Jersey

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Contrary to optimistic stories sent out from the Office of Production Management by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief, of Negro employment and training branch, labor division, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People learned last week that Brewster Aeronautical corporation with plants on Long Island City, N. Y., and at Newark airport, N. J., has made no steps to drop its color bars.

Brewster was among the plants named in the recent OPM release as having hired a crew of sheet-metal workers.

The aircraft company which is making planes for the Navy has employed five Negro workers but as sheet-metal assistants it is reported. It is also rumored that one of these assistants was recently fired.

The N.A.A.C.P. is in possession of three affidavits attesting to the company's refusal to hire Negro workers.

Most flagrant refusal is in the case of Edmond Van Osten, 31, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has nine years of experience as a sheet-metal worker with the William P. Gaynor company.

Van Osten was sent by the New York State Employment Service to the Brewster plant in Long Island City the week of July 23 where he applied for sheet-metal work.

According to Van Osten's affidavit, he was interviewed at the plant by Mr. Framepton who told him there were no openings for sheet-metal workers. Van Osten said he saw Framepton hire about 15 or 40 white men for the job.

Van Osten then asked for a job as sheet-metal helper, but was told by Framepton that white workers did not like to work with colored. He offered the experienced craftsman a job as porter.

Van Osten returned to the plant last week on advice from the employment service and was told by Framepton that he would not hire any colored workers.

Van Osten also said that while refusing his work, Brewster hired a south European who had only his second citizenship papers and had difficulty in reading the blueprint.

The second case brought to the N.A.A.C.P. last week is that of John J. Woods, 22, of Yonkers, N. Y., with 400 hours of special training in aircraft riveting. Woods completed his course two months ago at Saunders Training school, Yonkers, where the instructors were all Brewster employees.

In spite of this, Woods' application was turned down last month by Brewster on the ground that there was no need for riveters. Woods learned later from his school principal that several riveters had been hired from the school after his application was refused. Woods' second attempt to get work last week also failed.

Oliver Ming, 21, of New York City, has both training and experience. He has a certificate from Manhattan high school where he specialized in airplane and engine mechanics and a certificate from the same school for a course in emergency training which he took last summer. In addition he worked for a year at La Guardia field as junior aircraft assistant.

Twice Ming has applied at Brewster's Long Island plant for employment, once a year and a half ago, once Thursday, July 30. Both times he was told there were no openings, in spite of the fact that there are a number of graduates from Manhattan high school whom he knows personally are working now at the plant.

The N.A.A.C.P. declared that if all the reports sent out by Dr. Weaver on behalf of the OPM are like the Brewster case, the OPM is attempting to paint a rosy picture of a dark situation.

NEGRO SOLDIERS ARE SEGREGATED

Army Acts To Prevent Race Riots Following Fatal Row At Fort Bragg

By United Press.

FORT BRAGG, N. C., Aug. 8.—Approximately 4000 Negro soldiers were segregated today and their leaves canceled to prevent race riots resulting from the slaying Wednesday of a military policeman and a Negro private.

The shootings occurred on a bus containing 30 Negro soldiers when Sergt. Elwyn L. Hargraves, of Corsicana, Tex., attempted to arrest Neal Turman, 22 Negro [illegible] from [illegible].

Army officials said Turman seized Hargraves' gun and shot him. When other military police attempted to subdue Turman he fired at them, and Technical Sergt. Russell Owens of Hartley, Ky., killed him. Prvt. Allen Katzaman of Sheridan, Ark., shot in the [illegible] is in critical condition, and six other soldiers suffered minor wounds.

All Negro soldiers at the fort were taken to another camp, about nine miles away. At Camp Davis, the military police force was doubled and all Negroes were confined to quarters. There had been "racial disturbances," it was said.

Prvt. J. C. Monts of the military police was stabbed at a Wilmington bus depot by a Negro private identified as J. Davenport, while an unidentified person pinned Monts' arms.

Tuesday, military police used clubs and a water hose on Negro soldiers who refused to comply with "Jim Crow" laws and move to the rear of a bus.

THE ARMY'S RADIO "FLOP"

AUG 23 1941

The U.S. Army's 45-minute broadcast over the NBC network featuring the Negro soldier was, in the parlance of the amusement world, a "flop."

The broadcast was a "flop" despite its brilliant galaxy of stars, including Dean Dixon, Ann Brown, Edna Thomas, Eddie Green, Bill Robinson, other experienced Negro actors and the NBC Orchestra.

It was a "flop" because it was unconvincing to the Americans toward whom it was primarily directed.

The fact of color discrimination, racial segregation, neglect, insult and brutality rang so loudly in Negroes' ears that they could not hear the singing, the music, the dialogues and the speeches.

AUG 23 1941

They already knew too well that their young colored men were being accorded the same old pariah treatment that disgraced the U.S.A. over twenty years ago; that there were all sorts of jim crow units; that they were being compelled to defend a democracy almost non-existent for them, and they did not need Under Secretary of War Patterson to tell them so.

What colored Americans WANTED to hear was not how racial separatism was being perpetuated in the U.S. Army but what the War Department was DOING to practice the democracy the Administration is preaching, and what it PLANS to do in the future.

Instead they heard the old familiar platitudes, an eulogy of black soldiers who had won honors for fighting for democracy, a little tap dancing, a bit of comedy, fine music, and what amounted to praise of a jim crow system that mocks the word democracy.

We hope the Army's next program will tell us something about what progress has been achieved toward making the Army a truly democratic institution.

Southerners' Abuse Of Troops Condemned At Mass Meeting

OCT 25 1941

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Oct. 23—(ANP)—Sponsored by Negro citizens of Bloomington and Normal, a mass meeting held Thursday drew up a resolution condemning the mistreatment of Negro soldiers in southern camps, and also discriminatory practices of the government and industries in the national defense program.

The resolution, signed by 50 persons, said the War department should protect soldiers from "local lawbreakers whom the same soldiers are called upon to defend with their lives." Disapproval of all discriminatory practices in any department of the government and all phases of the defense program, especially as pertaining to the Negro's integration, without restriction, was registered.

Copies of the resolution were sent to President Roosevelt, secretaries of war and navy and to Illinois senators and representatives.

THE World TODAY

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

AUG 23 1941

Congress, Administration officialdom and the Army officer caste must bear the heaviest responsibility for the Fayetteville horror. Their rarial hatred, cowardice and hypocrisy in handling Negroes in the new so-called people's army led directly and inevitably to the tragic happenings which enraged every American whose soul is not corroded by Negrophobia. But unrepentant and vengeful they prepare to pillory and punish the young Negro soldiers involved while whitewashing in traditional manner the brutal military police whose holiday of sadism led to the catastrophe.

* * *

CONGRESS voted to establish a democratic army but failed to outlaw color discrimination and segregation so that the army could be democratic. The Administration blithely yielded to the vicious racist doctrine and the bi-racial policies for which the Nazi-Facists are bitterly and rightly condemned. The Army officer caste, having learned nothing and forgotten nothing from the past, expanded the military jim crow system which mocks the Constitution, sullies Christian ethics and outrages common justice.

AUG 23 1941

Military jim crowism was expanded and glorified everywhere. Negro soldiers were segregated like pariahs in separate units. Negro selectees were even inducted separately. Wherever colored and white youth served a common flag, they served it in separate barracks, separate areas, separate recreational facilities and separate buses. Army posts, supposedly extensions of federal jurisdiction, were run like Southern towns. Negroes were barred from many services except as laborers. This was an invitation and provocation to tragic incidents. Could anyone have honestly expected anything else?

* * *

NEGRO SOLDIERS under these circumstances should never have been stationed in the South to be humiliated, insulted, demoralized, rebuffed and beaten by civil and military police. The sad experience of Brownsville, Houston, France and our pre-Hitler lynching orgies cried out against it. There were and are numerous army posts outside the South where Negro soldiers might have been sent and where white soldiers by the tens of thousands are now stationed. But stiff-necked officialdom insisted on sowing the wind and is now reaping the whirlwind.

* * *

Administration officials who pretended to be helpless to do otherwise than expand and perpetuate the vicious domestic color caste system, went around meddling in foreign brawls (against the desires and interests of the overwhelming majority of the American people) in order to save Negro-exploiting British plutocracy. They could challenge Hitler in Europe but not Hitlerism at home. While worrying about the oppression of Belgians, Dutch, Norwegians, Greeks and Chinese, they closed their eyes to as great evils in the very army organized to establish democracy. Meanwhile, aided by Negro stooges, they soft-soaped colored people with insincere ballyhoo and pointless gestures calculated to lull them to sleep.

* * *

NEGROES have a right to demand and MUST demand that this negligent Administration institute a fair and speedy investigation, not only of the Fayetteville-Ft. Bragg shame, but of the entire military color caste system. This investigating committee should not consist of army officialdom which is demonstrably Negrophobic, but should consist of tolerant, intelligent and far-sighted Negro and white citizens not on the federal payroll.

Negroes must demand that the entire jim crow system be abolished, that jim crow units be broken up, that Negro soldiers and white soldiers be assigned to the same organizations, and that everybody under Army jurisdiction be compelled to obey or go to jail. Anything less would be farcial.

* * *

Our youth is being compelled to serve eighteen months more than originally promised. We Negro taxpayers are being compelled to pay for this huge military machine evidently intended for bloody foreign adventures to impose the Four Freedoms on distant and reluctant peoples who, like American Negroes, have in most instances never enjoyed them. We are being forced to give up "luxuries" and work longer hours. Is it too much to ask that at home an end be put to jim crowism, color discrimination and racial reactionism in the army and navy, at least until these evils are destroyed abroad?

Protests Jim Crow in the Armed Forces --- Bigger Bulb Needed in Lamp of Democracy

New York, N. Y.
AUG 16 1941

Dear Sir:

I heard a broadcast recently sponsored by the War Department. I should like you to print the enclosed letter as the expression of the feelings of one Negro towards the program:

On Tuesday, Aug. 12, at 10 P.M., the War Department had a broadcast on one of the networks which was scheduled as a "tribute" to Negro Americans. Undoubtedly this broadcast grew out of the recent trouble at Fort Bragg which was the result of discrimination against Negro troops and was intended as an appeaser to the public on that score.

I, as one Negro, feel that it not only failed but was insulting as well. It described the valor and bravery of Negro soldiers in World War I, and used a skit to do so, but said nothing of the discrimination and segregation of these troops dying on the battlefields in France. It was couched in the jargon of dialect as is the usual case in portraying Negroes on the radio or in the movies.

The War Department carried out this vicious tradition last night, while Negro Americans hoped for a change at least by the War Department. But to "top it off" they "outdid themselves" in the skit in which Eddie Green and Miss Thomas enacted a purported scene of the Negro draftee in one of the "jim-crow" service clubs of the army. The soldier in question was portrayed as never having worked in his life, never read a book, or in fact, been interested in anything.

This slimy slander fitted right in with the type of characterization that Governor Talmadge of Georgia makes of Negro people. It was supposed to be funny, but instead it was insulting. The Negro who wears the khaki uniform is no lazy "stumblebum" nor imaginary "Step-in-Fetchit." Many Negroes will wonder, as well as many fair-minded white, how Noble Sissle, Eddie Green, Mr. Walter White, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People could condone that script.

The honorable history of America's Negro, from the day Crispus Attucks fell in Boston, as well as those Negroes who fought with George Washington in the final struggles for independence, up to the present time, makes it unnecessary for the War Department to use a hypodermic patriotic needle at this late date. Whenever freedom or democracy has been threatened, Negro Americans have been the first to champion its defense. But down through the years the South, and the North as well, has denied him the rights and privileges of his heritage of American citizenship. In the South he is not allowed to vote at all in the primaries. The poll tax laws, grandfather clauses, nightriders and lynchers' rope are used against him to suppress his every desire and inclination for freedom and equality.

Mr. Patterson of the War Department must know, if he knows anything at all of the missing pages of American history, that Negro Americans hate Hitlerism and oppression wherever it may be found, for he has suffered under the yoke for more than three hundred years. Mr. Patterson also spoke of our "Negro units" and these units in themselves exemplify a part of this oppression.

There is no people in the world who stand more fully behind the President's program of all-out-aid to the people of Britain and the Soviet Union, than the Negro people. He does, however, firmly believe that they should use a bigger bulb in the lamp of democracy right here in America.

It is a vicious situation that while we are girding for the defense of democracy everywhere in the world, it is conspicuous by its absence in every branch of American military service.

In the capital of our nation, the "citadel of world democracy," a Negro citizen or soldier cannot get a glass of water, go to a movie or theatre outside of the "jim-crow" ghetto which can be seen from the White House. The War Department's answer on the radio last night was a dishrag wet with soppy appeasement. A tribute to the Negro American must carry a constructive plan of eliminating the dark abysses of our democracy. A tribute to Negro America must include the passage of the Marcantonio Anti-Discrimination Bill, the Geyer Anti-Poll Tax Bill and the Anti-Lynch Bill, now growing dusty in the archives of our Congress. We suggest the elimination of gag-scripts, such as was aired on Tuesday evening, the elimination of segregation in all armed forces of the United States and a stern policy of the President for the effective and immediate execution of our Declaration of Independence. Mr. Patterson said the aerial bomb is no respecter of color line. We ask, is this destructive missile more democratic than the U.S. Army and Navy?

We agree with the Administration that national unity is of the utmost necessity if we are to stop Hitler now. We agree with the Administration in total defense of our country which we love so dearly. But our love for democracy and its perpetuation does not blind us to the ever-present brand of oppression.

We cannot and must not gloss over Fort Bragg with a broadcast from Chanute Field, Illinois. I sincerely hope that in the near future another broadcast can be arranged and that its theme will be Freedom and Equality. That is the kind of morale that will stop Hitler, Governor Talmadge and the forces of oppression now.

No Lawyer Needed To Help Draw Up Complaint

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A letter from any job-seeker who has been denied a job in a defense industry because of his race, creed, color or national origin, is enough to initiate an investigation by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, it was explained this week by Lawrence W. Cramer, executive secretary, in answer to numerous inquiries which have come to the committee.

Any person who has reason to believe that his race, creed, color or national origin has prevented his obtaining a position or promotion in the Federal Civil Service may also submit his complaint in the same way.

It is not necessary for an aggrieved worker to have a lawyer draw up any formal papers, it is explained.

The fact-giving letter, according to Cramer, should tell the following:

1. The name of the firm, agency, school or union against which the complaint is made, and its location (street, city, and State);
2. Whether the discrimination alleged is because of (a) race, (b) creed, (c) color, or (d) national origin;
3. The race, religion, or national origin of the person making the complaint;
4. The type of job, position or classification for which application is made;
5. The qualification of the complainant for the job he seeks (including his education and work history, and his Civil Service status, if he has passed a Civil Service examination);
6. Date when complainant applied for the job which he was denied;
7. Date when he was refused employment or admittance to a training course;
8. Name of person refusing position (if available);
9. Reason given for refusal;
10. Statement of additional facts and circumstances indicating discrimination was on account of race, religion or national origin;
11. Names and addresses of any witnesses to facts and circumstances indicating discrimination;
12. Name and address of person alleging discrimination.

THE PRESIDENT DISAPPROVES OF RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

ALL citizens of America who in their hearts cherish the true meaning of the democratic ideal should read with relief and pleasure the President's message of official disapproval of the policy barring, solely on racial grounds otherwise well qualified Negro Americans from work in the nation's war industry.

JUN 26 1941

Open recognition and open condemnation are useful weapons against these destructive discriminations. America should use the ideal of democracy as the mainstay to perpetuate her national faith. Too long has human weakness faltered from time to time in the practical applications of the ideal of democracy in the United States. There have been those (in power and authority) in this nation of ours who have recognized cloudily, or who have never grasped at all the true meaning of democracy in action.

With those of the above mentioned it is to be hoped that the President's message will carry weight. Again we feel that it should hearten the firm faith among our race. Such an affirmation should strengthen the determination of all good men to make democracy work wherever they may happen to be.

It cannot be doubted that a conference called by Mr. Sidney Tillman with the presence of Dr. Channing Tobias, Mr. Walter White, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Mr. Lester Granger and Mr. Marshall Shepherd to discuss the possibility of having the President issue an executive order concerning the unemployment of Negroes in National defense played an important part in causing the issuance of the President's statement. Dr. Tobias and Mr. White were authorized to draft the communication to the President.

Reaffirming policy of full participation in the Defense Program by all persons, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin, and directing certain action in furtherance of said policy.

WHEREAS it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders; and

WHEREAS there is evidence that available and needed workers have been barred from employment in industries engaged in defense production solely because of considerations of race, creed, color or national origin, to the detriment of workers' morale and of national unity:

NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, and as a prerequisite to the successful conduct of our national defense productions effort, I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or government because of race, creed, color, or national origin, and I do hereby declare that it is the duty of employers and of labor organizations, in furtherance of said policy and of this order, to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

And it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. All departments and agencies of the Government of the United States concerned with vocational and training programs for defense production shall take special measures appropriate to assure that such programs are administered without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

2. All contracting agencies of the Government of the United States shall include in all defense contracts hereafter negotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

3. There is established in the Office of Production Management a Committee on Fair Employment Practice, which shall consist of a chairman and four other members to be appointed by the President.

The chairman and members of the committee shall serve as such without compensation but shall be entitled to actual and necessary transportation, subsistence and other expenses incidental to performance of their duties.

The committee shall receive and investigate complaints of discrimination in violation of the provisions of this order and shall take appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid.

The committee shall also recommend to the several departments and agencies of the Government of the United States and to the President all measures which may be deemed by it necessary or proper to effectuate the provisions of this order.

Strength in Unity

The recent executive order of President Roosevelt, relative to discrimination in national defense industries is welcomed. This paper together with the Negro people and their organization had called for such action.

The Negro people have won this important concession from the government, because of their unity and steadfastness. Regardless of politics and factions, the demand of the Negro people for an end to discriminatory practices in employment was a unified one.

This has a simple and clear lesson. We can secure our demand through unity and organization. This we have only ourselves to thank for the issuance of the executive order of June 25.

It is not however, truly "a second Emancipation Proclamation," as A. Philip Randolph so eloquently labeled it.

The order has three main deficiencies. They are:

1. It does not specify what treatment discriminatory employers shall receive, when they violate the letter and the spirit of the executive order.

2. It provides no machinery whereby the Negro worker discriminated against can complain and see redress.

3. The huge sums, totaling billions of dollars, already allotted are being used by employers discriminating against Negro workers and there is no provision in the executive order for remedying this situation.

These three deficiencies can and must be eliminated. They will be so eliminated by the same concerted pressure that secured the executive order.

Further, our fight does not stop here. Victory should only serve to increase our efforts to eliminate last vestige of discrimination and Jim Crowism. We must press more than ever for passage of the Anti-Lynch Bill; the Anti-Poll Tax Bill and for the Marcantonio Anti-Discrimination Bill.

Now, when America so sorely needs the Negro is the strategic time to press forward for the elimination of the many ills which beset the Negro people. We will do this as a mass. We will do this through unity and concerted action.

ATTACKS WHITE FOR DELAY IN DEFENSE PROBE

Rayford Logan Blames NAACP Executive for Senate Postponement

Assailing the indefinite postponement here Monday of a hearing before the Truman committee, relative to discrimination against Negroes in defense, Dr. Rayford Logan bitterly attacked Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, as the one responsible for the delay.

"I think it is most unfortunate that the hearings have been postponed. In the first place, Mr. White has no important facts that are not in the possession of others," he cited. "In the second place, there are at least a half dozen persons who can make as effective a presentation as can Mr. White.

"In the third place, the NAACP has been busy gathering facts for several months, and should have its material ready. Fourth, since Mr. White could be in Washington to address the 'Jubilation Meeting' on Tuesday night, he could certainly have testified the following day.

"Finally, 30 days will not be a sufficient length of time to determine how the President's order will operate. In brief, 30 days of valuable time are being lost."

The committee hearing, scheduled to have statred Monday, and which would have lasted at least three days, had followed a well-laid plan. A preliminary hearing had been held in Room 318, Senate Office Building, on June 25, before Hugh Fulton, Chief Counsel and Charles P. Clark, Associate Chief Counsel of the Truman Committee.

Present at that meeting were: Ted Poston, Major Campbell Johnson, Robert Taylor of the Defense Housing Authority, Dr. Rayford Logan, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, L. C. Burr, U.S.C.S.; Major Smith, connected with the Labor Relations Branch of the War Department; Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Ralph Hetzel, CIO; John P. Davis and Stephen Spingarn. Others who observed proceedings included Dutton Ferguson, George Murphy, Jeannette Welsh and Ann Sawyer.

Ask Scope Of Truman Hearing

N.A.A.C.P. Wants Information on Extent of Probe

NEW YORK. — In a wire to Hugh A. Fulton, chief counsel for the special committee investigating the national defense program, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peoplee asked his advice on the scope of the Truman committee hearings which are scheduled for July.

The wire requested that Mr. Fulton state the number of witnesses the Truman committee can hear on the issue of racial discrimination, number of days it proposes to devote to the hearings, if committee plans to invite or subpoena policy-making government hears, such Secretaries of War and Navy, directors of OPM; employers holding defense contracts, labor union heads and qualified persons who have been discriminated against.

The counsel was also requested to state if the Truman committee can include in its scope discrimination in armed forces, and whether or not he or any investigators have made investigations of discriminations against Negroes and others in the defense program.

Good Start, Mr. Hillman

Legislation without an enabling act is useless, which explains why there are so many loopholes through which officials may slip to avoid granting Negroes certain rights to which they are entitled under the law. For example, it took the Volstead Act to make the 18th Amendment effective, and violations of the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments are successfully achieved because of a lack of adequate enabling legislation.

Now comes Mr. Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management with a strong and significant statement on the question of fairness to Negro workers in the National Defense program. He said: APR 19 1941

"In many localities, qualified and available Negro workers are either being restricted to unskilled jobs, or barred from defense programs entirely. Because of this situation, Negro workers of skill and aptitudes are not being included in many of the training program for defense. Such practices are extremely wasteful of our human resources and prevent total effort for National Defense. The result unnecessary migration of labor, in high rates of labor turnover, and they increase our present and future housing needs and social problems for defense workers.

'All holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency." APR 19 1941

Mr. Hillman has spoken boldly, but unless he follows through with something more punitive than a mere plea, his words are going to fall on deaf ears. The policy toward Negro workers in American industry is well grounded. Nothing short of a major catastrophe will shake it, unless the word to do so comes straight from the top with White House influence behind it. Mr. Roosevelt must be prevailed upon to speak out.

White Writer Wants To Serve With Race Men

JUL 16 1941

NEW YORK—(S N S)—Because he sincerely believes in true democracy, Roger Starr, young New York writer, filed with his local draft board Wednesday, July 9, a vigorously worded protest against the denial of democratic rights to Negro Americans. The protest accompained Mr. Starr's questionnaire in which he placed himself in class I.

Mr. Starr sent to the NAACP a copy of his protest which reads in part:

"You will note that I have appropriately filled out the part of my questionnaire dealing with my racial ancestry. As a white, the Army wants to place me in a unit with white troops. I should prefer being placed with Negro troops, for then they would become mixed troops: American troops.

Certainly there are others beside myself who went to school with Negro boys, who learned beside them the history of our country and the theory of its government and who want to be allowed to contribute their services to their country under conditions that do not hold that theory to ridicule."

JUL 16 1941

Specifically named by Mr. Starr as weaknesses in the demochatic system were discrimination against Negroes in the administration of the Selective Service Act, segregation of Negro troops from white, denial of equal opportunity to Negroes in the air corps, their total exclusion from the marine corps and relegation in the navy to mess attendant, and anti-Negro training and employment policies by large corporations.

"Reds" And Nazis Get First Call Over Our Workers

Republican Leaders Of Both Races Join In Pointing Out Partisan Way Defense Jobs Are Being Handed Out

MAY 9 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(Special)—Emmett J. Scott, who served as assistant to Secretary of War Newton D. Baker in the World War, a former secretary to Booker T. Washington and also of Howard University, takes the Roosevelt administration to task in a revealing article sent to the Negro press for publication this week. Mr. Scott, who is now connected with the publicity department of the Republican National Committee, lays bare facts to show that the Roosevelt administration in this period of national peril is not only permitting big industrialists to keep Negroes from working in so-called "defense" industries but, according to Mr. Scott "Nazis and Communists have first call over Negroes on army troop-ships."

The revelations of discriminations now going on with the permission of New Dealers, aided and abetted by the Republican renegades who now have soft berths in the New Deal, are set forth in Mr. Scott's article as follows:

MAY 9 1941

A few weeks ago, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Repubican Leader in the U. S. House of Representatives, and Chairman of the Republican National Committee, called upon Republicans in Industry and in Politics to help widen opportunities for the employment of Colored citizens without discrimination and, also, to see that greater opportunities and recognition are provided for them in public service.

Last week, in a discussion of the utterly mad carnival of ghastly mass murder and destruction now going on between nations, he realistically pointed out the menacing dangers and potentialities that may affect this country, especially the youth of the land.

These young people, he said, are entitled to a chance to be educated, to get positions in which there is an opportunity to advance, a chance not only to live but also to be happy while living, to enjoy the advantages an dcomforts of life, and to contribute their share toward making this a better land to live in.

In calling for complete unity for strong national defense so as to strengthen the security of the American people, he emphasized the fact that this could only come through honest cooperation and fair-dealing on the part of the Roosevelt Administration. Particularly, he spoke out against "giving any one group in our country special consideraiton over any other group."

THE NEGRO'S COMPLAINT

Right here is where the complaint of the Negro people becomes pertinent. The catalogue of injustices to which they have been subjected is a continuing and lengthening one. No one in the Roosevelt Administration, it seems, gives a hoot, or seriously cosiders their claims to equal justice and fair-play.

During these trying days, when thoughtful men and women of the country are deeply concerned with respect to a sustained, inspired and stirred morale, and full support of all Government efforts in defense preperation by all elements of our country's population, it is discouraging, day by day, to note that practically nothing of a definitely affirmative character is being done by the Roosevelt Administration to cure theevils of which Negro newspapers, Negro leaders and Negro organizations, and many whites as well, have complained, and are continuing to complain.

As Chairman Martin declared:

"All groups are expected to pay the taxes for defense; all groups are required to send men into the draft; all groups are expected to fight and, if necessary, to die for the country. All groups should have an equal chance for work."

THE ARMY, NAZIS AND COMMUNISTS

Let's take the United States Army. It is reported that, in taking over ships as troop transports, it is now engaged in weeding out men in civilian crews suspected of being Nazis and Communists. Already, it has been learned, there has been a "purge" on one large troop-ship, the S. S. Washington, recently taken over by the Army from the U. S. Lines. After an investigation of the sailing crew, 70 men were discharged. No one knows how many remain.

In one case, it was found, a Communist employee sent a telegram to Earl Browder, after the latter's conviction, praising him as a great leader of American working classes. The message was sent to Browder, it is stated, "from a Government-owned and operated ship whose crew is being paid with Federal-Government funds."

And, during all this period, Secretary of the Navy Knox is still declaring: "No Negroes will be employed except as mess-men"—as scullions, and waiters, and personal servants for officers. And the Army is following suit on these troop-ships.

No traitorous group of black men has ever disgraced the Army uniform, and the same holds for the Navy during the period, years before the Roosevelt Administration, when they could aspire to and efficiently serve with distinction and with high and deserved praise.

Is it too much to ask a country, periled and striving to preserve the principles of Americanism, to have more consideration for loyal, efficient black men than for tainted, alien, transmission belts of Nazism, Fascism and Communism now incorporated in Army and Navy personnel?

GLARING INSTANCES OF DISCRIMINATION

With such glaring instances of discrimination, as here described, what incentive is there for wholehearted and enthusiastic support of a program shot through with prejudices, suspicions, hatreds—based on color distinction, without regard to character, efficiency, or loyalty?

These prejudices are not in industry and the Army and Navy only. Colored stenographers and others who have successfully passed Civil Service examinations for technical and higher positions are constantly being turned down and shuttled around and denied positions to which they are certified by Federal bureaucrats practically each week of the year.

Sydney Hillman is issuing weasel-word manifestos, with no teeth in them, while the merry-go-round of doging and evasion continues to deny opportunities to Colored applicants for employment in defense programs for which the Federal Government is putting up its Billions of Dollars.

Washington, the Capital of the Nation, the Citadel of Power, reeks with this sort of thing. How are we to preserve and perpetuate our form of Government, while denying and defying the precepts and principles of the Federal Constitution, the Bill of Rights, and all that Freedom and Democracy mean and stand for?

Martin Plant Adamant on J. C. Policy

MAY 10 1941

BALTIMORE.

"I can only tell you what we have said before, that the company (Glenn Martin Aircraft) will not employ colored. Our policy has not changed in that regard."

The company's adamant determination to continue its jim crow employment policy was expressed by C. E. Crowley, assistant personnel manager at the plant, at a conference, Thursday, with members of the job delegation led by the National Negro Congress.

The delegation included eight students from Howard University, one a woman, four of them ready to graduate from the engineering school, who were applying for jobs at the plant, which admits it is "badly in need of skilled workers including engineers."

MAY 10 1941

In reference to a letter sent out recently to all defense contractors by Sidney Hillman, OPM official in charge of labor, urging them to hire colored workers, Crowley said: "If the letter was sent out, we probably have it, but our company's policy remains the same."

Appearance of the delegates marked the third time that the NNC has led groups out to the plant since last December. The last delegation went to the plant on March 4. At that time, D. W. Siemon, personnel director, also told congress leaders that the ban was still in effect.

Heading the delegation in addition to John P. Davis, national secretary, were:

The Rev. C. Y. Trigg, pastor of Metropolitan Methodist Church; Mrs. Mary Lewis, representing the Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, of the AKA sorority; Mrs. Elmira Coleman and Dr. Lucy Mason, of the Baltimore Council of the National Negro Congress; and George B. Murphy, Jr., administrative secretary of the congress.

The nine job applicants, who accompanied the deelgation and received application blanks were:

IS AMERICA CHANGING ITS VIEWS CONCERNING NEGROES AND DEFENSE?

By LEON HARDWICK

"In the gain or loss of one race, all the rest have equal share!" It was James Russell Lowell who, in "The Crisis," penned those forcefully true words. America today is being forced, much against the obvious will of its "racist" leadership, to give credence to the wisdom of those words.

We have the disconcerting picture of a country, divided against itself, trying to gain one definite goal by way of diametrically opposed pathways. The Negro's fight to get his share of national defense jobs, his struggle to get recognition and be allowed to enter the armed forces of this nation on equal footing with other citizens are slowly but surely penetrating the consciousness of his fellow citizens.

White America is finding it increasingly difficult, not to mention impractical, to adhere to racism policies regarding the Negro here in this country while screaming to the outside world that it is a fighting advocate of racial tolerance and freedom and brotherhood. The fact that this country rapidly is succeeding in gaining for itself the label of hypocrite of the first magnitude is causing thoughtful persons to ponder and to act.

Recently there has been decided significance in editorial comment in our biggest daily newspapers and prominent display has been given to stories about discrimination against Negroes in the country's defense program.

ONLY JANITORS

Coming close on the heels of the statement made by J. H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation company, who said he would hire Negroes "only as janitors" no matter how well trained, this new near-Nazi action is being vigorously apposed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP warned in a strong statement that continued denial of democracy to the Negro people will not work to the best interests of national unity.

"In spite of the Kindlebergers and companies like Sparrow, Negroes remain firm in their determination to help this country through its great crisis," said the N. A. A. C. P. "But more than in any previous emergency, this segment of the population is alert to denials of its democratic rights and is becoming more and more impatient with discriminatory practices."

G. O. P. SENATORS PROMISE TO SUPPORT RESOLUTION 75

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A pledge of the support of the Republican minority in the senate for Senate Resolution 75 was given May 2, by Senator Charles L. McNary, minority leader.

S. R. 75 provides for complete investigation of discrimination against Negroes in all phases of the National Defense program.

Senator McNary told Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary, that the utmost effort will be given by the Republican members to get S. R. 75 out of committee.

"The proposal to put off consideration of this resolution," said Senator McNary, "until late summer or early fall is ridiculous. We must strive for full democracy here if we are to carry on an effort to preserve democracy in the world."

Mr. White urged all interested persons to send friendly but firm telegrams to Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, urging the committee to report the resolution favorably, and not to combine it with any other investigation.

All organized groups, such as clubs, churches, labor unions, lodges and others, are urged by the N. A.A.C.P. to pass resolutions endorsing S. R. 75 and send them to the sentors from their states asking that they be inserted in the Congressional Record.

CALIFORNIA MEASURE HITS JIM CROWISM

Would Remove Race Issue In Civil Service Examinations

SACRAMENTO, Cal. (ANP).—The fight against racial discrimination in national defense, in the armed forces and in civil service forged ahead last week under the guidance of Assemblyman Augustus Hawkins, Los Angeles.

On the governor's desk with almost unanimous assembly and senate approval was a measure generally forbidding the question of race in civil service examinations. It extends to the records and to the questions asked upon application. Under it, Hawkins said, all races will have equal opportunity when they first file their papers and continuous protection thereafter. There was little doubt that the governor would sign the measure and make it the first racial non-discrimination law on this year's books. Hawkins also had on the assembly floor, with a favorable recommendation by committee, a measure assuring equality in the armed defense forces.

In effect it prohibits any person acting in a military capacity for the state to deny the right to enlist except under requirements that shall apply to all citizens. Violations of the measure would be a misdemeanor. Hawkins said it had an excellent chance of passage.

Negroes' Problem In U. S. Defense Told Church Club

Presbyterian Men Hear Three Speakers Tuesday Evening

The Men's club of the Presbyterian church at their monthly meeting last night heard a discussion of the negro's problem in national defense.

Sam Mills, colored civic and religious leader, spoke first outlining the negro's part in national defense in the past and what they hope to do in the future. "Lethargy is the real enemy of defense," Mills said, "and in all our tasks the Christian spirit is needed. We are trying to do our part as a race, and we will assume gladly any tasks put before us."

The Rev. McCall, pastor of the colored Methodist church, spoke briefly, thanking the people of Hendersonville for their cooperation with the negroes in their efforts for advancement.

The Rev. Broadus E. Wall, pastor of the First Baptist church, closed the program with a short address. "The citadel of democracy," he said, "is not in armament of the army or navy, although both of these are highly important, but in the spirit of the people."

"A man who allows a murderer to come into his home and kill his wife and child without opposing him is no part of a man or a Christian," Mr. Wall said. "And the same is true of a nation."

He pointed out that, in spite of the confusion of the present time, there are three things we can believe: First, that God is alive and He hasn't abdicated; second, truth is eternal; and third, right will triumph, though we may have to suffer, and it may require a long time.

Discrimination Accusations to Be Investigated

(The Associated Press)

Washington, July 20.—Mark F. Ethridge, vice-president and general manager of the Louisville Courier Journal, was appointed by President Roosevelt Saturday as chairman of a committee to investigate complaints of discrimination against Negroes seeking work in defense industries and the government.

Other members are:

The committee was created under an executive order of June 25 which reaffirmed the policy of the government against discrimination in the hiring of defense and government workers because of race, creed, color or national origin.

Serving without pay, the committee will investigate complaints and take steps to redress grievances.

The Negro Appeals To America's Sense Of Fair-Play In Crisis

With America At the Crossroads, the Negro Remains Loyal But He Fights for a Square Deal in Order to Contribute to the Defense of His Country.

NOV 29 1941

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

NOV 29 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 26.—General readers are fully advised of the contentious situations existing in our country at this time. Particularly are they advised of the frightfully serious threats to the well-being of the country occasioned by the hundreds of strikes which are delaying progress in arming the nation for the war which, while undeclared, is just as real as though Congress had declared it.

NOV 29 1941

The major conflict, most portentious of all, is the struggle between the United Mine Workers' Union and the Big Three, Mine Owners, organizations.

Emmett Scott

The U.S. Congress, the Nation's Press, and our citizens generally, recognize the fact that a titanic, domestic war is on, and that disunity at home is being promoted by controversial factors of tremendous importance and significance.

In the midst of this confusion and belligerence, the Negro element remains loyal and patriotic, eager and willing to do its part in upholding the democratic institutions and ideals of the world.

THE VICTIM OF UNFAIR PRACTICES

Ironically, while declaring its patriotism and willingness to defend the institutions of America, the Negro group is still the victim of the grossest, the most unfair, and the most barbarous treatment at the hands of those, who, most loudly, have been crying for war, and promoting the war hysteria which now envelopes us.

Liberal journals of public opinion are calling attention to the fact that the Labor and Agricultural groups which furnished basic support for Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal policies are now likewise antagonistic.

NOV 29 1941

THE NEGRO FIGHTS FOR EQUALITY

And there be those who are censorious of the Negro group because it fights for the right to fight upon terms of equal treatment and recognition in the Army and Navy of the country of their allegiance, and because it is contending for the right to have a fair and decent place in defense employment.

This Negro group has suffered unbearably from dicriminations no other elements of the country have been called upon to accept. The Negro Press, week by week, continues to call attention to injustices and brutalities against drafted Negro soldiers training in Southern camps, and of the grudging adjustments made when protests are filed in Washington with the War Department, which appears to be impotent, or unwilling, adequately to protect its own soldiers.

So flagrant has this situation grown that group-bodies of Negroes have been led to say that Colored soldiers "would rather face firing lines in Europe than sections of the South where they must face hostile public sentiment with little opportunity for self-protection."

The Negro group, in all fairness, should not be allowed to harbor the thought that the country and the system it is being called to fight for have a callous attitude and little regard for the dignity of its Negro citizens and soldiers. Tyranny is tyranny whether practiced in Europe, or in the United States.

The Negro has been patient. He loves his country. He hopes the future is to hold something better for him and for his country than conflict, war, disruption, and appalling dislocations of normal American life.

He believes that democracy must be just and flexible enough to include him in its folds. He is willing to fight for it, but he will not be content with another raw deal such as has been his portion during all of the 23 years that have followed the first World War.

AN APPEAL TO FAIR-PLAY

NOV 29 1941

He is not asking for a New Deal. He wants a Square Deal. He has never employed tactics of intimidation. He has been content to rest his cause upon appeals to the American sense of fair-play.

For this Square Deal, he is willing to suffer and die. At the same time, the Negro wishes his Government to be brave enough and courageous enough to join hands with liberals of all colors and creeds of our common citizenship in blotting out the outrageous causes which conspire to dampen his ardor, and which work toward causing him to lose faith and trust in the Government of which he is part and parcel.

Unity is not to be achieved by practices which discourage and dishearten. A continuation of the practices of the past and of the present lead to disunity. They are a menace to the national defense program of the Nation, as we stand on the brink of a paralyzing national crisis.

Army, Navy Agreed on Blood Ban

NOV 29 1941

Here's Uncle Sam's New Segregation

Added to the segregation of colored patriots in army, navy and other defense forces, an official statement that blood from Red Cross donors will be carefully jim crowed so that no colored blood will get into white patients has been made, and appears here in the AFRO.

Officials admitted that if the labels should get mixed, no human could distinguish the blood of colored persons from that of white persons.

WASHINGTON

Two high defense officials, Admiral T. Ross McIntyre and Surgeon General James C. Magee, of the navy and army, respectively, were both extremely wary of an AFRO reporter here, Friday, when pressed for verification of an army-navy edict which directs Red Cross officials to refuse to accept colored donors at the Volunteer Blood Bank in Baltimore.

Through his secretary, Admiral McIntyre begged that the reporter allow him time in which to contact the Washington Red Cross. He claimed no knowledge of the situation at Baltimore, and added that it might take a day or more for him to clear the facts up. Surgeon General Magee put the burden entirely on the Red Cross and, through an attache, said, "The matter of a blood bank for our armed forces is wholly managed by the American Red Cross. This office has no decision in the matter."

What's Touchy About It?

Dr. G. Canby Robinson, designated by Norman Davis, Washington Red Cross chairman, as head of the blood donor service, was willing to be interviewed. "This," said he, "is one of those touchy thing that we stumble upon from time to time." By "touchy," Dr. Robinson probably meant the fact that the AFRO was showing up the democracy of the army, navy and Red Cross as color hypocrisy.

Informed of the fact that high army and navy officials had been vague, even evasive in answer to direct queries on the matter Dr. Robinson said: "Yes, I understand. We have not engaged in a conference to determine how we would meet this problem. The men were wary because they did not want to speak out of turn, or say anything which might have been contradicted by another. Frankly, they did not know what to do."

You can't (nobody can) distinguish the blood of a colored person from that of a white person any more than you can distinguish the milk of a white cow from the milk of a black cow.

Nevertheless, the Red Cross will continue to advertise for blood donors and tell colored people it doesn't want their blood.

Question of Race

Dr. Robinson, lecturer in medicine at Johns Hopkins Hospital and a member of the Board of Managers of the Cheltenham School for Boys, admitted deep concern over the race question in this country, and cited instances of service and several boards having to do with better racial and interracial understanding. "We have thousands of Southern whites in our forces," he continued, "and they are absolutely against having the blood of colored donors let into their system." Dr. Robinson didn't say how a dying man in need of blood could know what kind of blood transfusion he was getting or whether he would object to whatever blood was proposed.

It was an army-navy decision, Dr. Robinson said, "and they had no other course, because colored soldiers constitute less than a tenth of the armed forces. This fact alone would make the need for colored donors negligible, but when most of the white subjects are against it—well, there is less and less a need for them."

Red Cross Statement

To show that the American Red Cross, backed by the army and navy, would continue express discrimination in every phase of the service where possible, the following statement was released for the benefit of colored donors:

"In some chapters colored persons have generously offered to act as donors in supplying blood for plasma for the army and navy. The Red Cross deeply appreciates their desire to participate in this project.

It's Official

"However, in obtaining blood plasma for use in the armed forces the American Red Cross is acting pursuant to the requests and instruction of the army and the navy and up to this time the Red Cross has been asked to supply only plasma from white donors.

"Where transfusions are required for colored service men, they will be given normal transfusions from colored donors if they do not desire to use the plasma from white donors. In this way a person would have the right to receive blood transfusions of the proper type, or plasma, as he himself might choose."

Another Red Cross official voiced the opinion that a very complex blood donor system would result if the thousands of colored service men, taking the same attitude as the whites, would decide against having blood from white donors used for transfusions in favor of that from colored donors.

This expose was occasioned by an AFRO inquiry into the Baltimore situation where, although Red Cross chapter there is seeking 15,000 blood donors, no colored applicants are accepted at its center, 8 S. Calvert Street. In addition, plans for establishment of a separate blood bank at the Provident Hospital have been abandoned. The army, navy and the Red Cross admit that this irregularity will obtain in every chapter in every State of the union.

Strong Laws Are Needed To Back FEPC, Says Writer

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The forthright method of tackling the problem of discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups in defense industry, shown by the Fair Employment Practices Committee, says Bert Talcott, magazine writer, offer ample proof of the necssity for "broadening the scope of its work and implementing its program by strong legisilative measures."

Talcott gives an excellent bird's eye view of the FEPC in action at the public hearings held in California last month in the November 18 issue of the New Masses Magazine.

NOV 29 1941

"The great interest in the hearings," he said, "was apparent from the large number of witnesses representing interested organizations. They included representatives of the AME Church, National Urban League, National Negro Congress, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Employment Office for American Indians, Japanese-American Citizens' League, and spokesmen for Latin American groups."

Defense employers, Talcott said, can well afford to heed Committee Chairman Mark Etheridge who declared at the opening of the hearings that "We cannot afford to play Hitler's game of indulging in racism and prejudices while we are attempting to destroy him."

Would End Dual U.S. Pay System In Caribbeans

DEC 29 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(ANP)— In a letter to Secretary of war Henry L. Stimson, Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York has written to ask that action be taken to end discrimination now being practiced in the construction of U. S. Caribbean defense bases.

In the letter, Mr. Marcantonio called attention particularly to the work at Borinquen Field, Puerto Rico, where two wage scales are in effect, one for the "American" workers and one for "native" workers.

The committee on Fair Employment Practices was also addressed by the representative who said that "discrimination is a serious obstacle to the necessary, full prosecution of our war against the Axis. The Puerto Rican people, American citizens, must receive equal wages for equal work. There is no basis for discriminatory, double-standard wage scales, either in Puerto Rico or any other place."

In his letter the secretary of war, Marcantonio presented the following double standard wage scale which has been in effect at Borinquen field:

DEC 29 1941

American Workers, Native Workers Foreman $100 per week, 50 cents to 75 cents per hour. Skilled Workers, $1.50 per hour, 40 cents per hour... Helpers, 75 cents per hour, 25 cents per hour

No More Strikes

Well, you won't be bothered with strikes, called, nine times out of ten by labor racketeers with axes to grind, for the next few years or for whatever time this newest world conflict lasts.

DEC 17 1941

That's good. Most of the labor hoodlums weren't any good for labor and the men they claimed to represent, from the beginning. You have seen men with dependents to support called out on strike for weeks on end; those men still must pay their dues in order that the higher-ups might live on the fat of the land and have the best of everything.

You read the new law passed by a patriotic congress, dealing with strikes in the future; John L. Lewis caused that law to be enacted. You won't hear very much of Mr. Lewis and a former idol of this country for some time. America is at war, a war that must be won and will be won. This paper has hoped that labor unions would play square with all workers or disband. Your labor set-up in Galveston turns thumbs down on Negroes just as labor organizations in ALL sections of the U. S. A. does. You have seen quite a bit of construction work paid for by Uncle Sam, going on in your fair city recently. Not one single Negro carpenter, and you have several as well qualified as carpenters of ANY racial group among us, was given work on any of the projects. Not one Negro bricklayer, painter, paperhanger was used.

The Negro worker has little to choose between the AFL and the CIO, both are jim-crow affairs. After the war is won, the Negro worker will be better treated because the Old Order will have passed away. You wonder how some of your labor leaders who have hampered defense projects, feel today. Strikes threw this country back almost a year in the work of National Defense. Because of our unlimited resources of material and men, we will overcome. Henceforth, no over-paid labor-lord can sit in a sumptuous suite of offices and stop the factory wheels from turning out war materials to be used against the Axis vultures.

DEFENSE TRAINING

Birmingham, Ala. News
November 29, 1941

This Evening

THIS WILL NOT DO

Carroll Kilpatrick, Washington correspondent for The News, reports "strong resistance by Alabama labor unions and state vocational leaders to development of vocational training schools for Negroes in the vicinity of shipbuilding yards along the Atlantic and Gulf seaboard." Apparently, such training is being provided at Wilmington, N. C., and Charleston, S. C., but is being opposed and obstructed at Mobile.

A federal committee on fair employment practices is said to be disturbed by the existence of union contracts at Mobile which bar, or reduce to a small fraction, the number of Negro workmen at Mobile. In view of the good showing made by Negroes in shipbuilding during the last war, and in view of the urgent need for trained labor in this field, there appears to be no ground for discrimination save that of arrant racism.

We may be sure that this flagrant injustice will be corrected soon. The national government simply cannot permit racial antipathy to interfere with the defense program. One would have imagined that those who wish to shut Negro workmen out of jobs in defense industries would have avoided the issue. It is so obviously a disclosure of narrow, naked prejudice. Yet here we have it, amounting to a declaration that the Negro is not to be given a fair chance to participate in defense activities.

Our only comfort is that such discrimination is not confined to the South. But it is cold comfort, because this sorry business has had the doubly bad effect of accentuating discontent among 12,000,000 Negroes and so of increasing disunity at a time when the nation must be, above all else, one and indivisible.

One may deplore the efforts of certain Negro leaders to deal militantly with the problem of work discrimination without losing sight of the fact that they have a case when they cry out against the unfair restrictions erected against their people. Writing recently about the Harlem crime wave, Pearl Buck pointed out that this is but a local expression of a nationwide ferment among Negroes, who, at a time when democracy is at stake and racism is being condemned, are in so many instances being dealt with in a thoroughly undemocratic and discriminatory fashion. "To the colored American, this is final proof of the hopelessness of his plight, that even in the defense of his country he is not allowed his share of work," Mrs. Buck declares.

It is not hard to understand why Washington authorities are so deeply concerned about the Mobile situation. Enlightened Alabamians will support all efforts to rectify this wrong. They will not think better of organized labor for being party to it, and they cannot approve of a state agency which apparently declines to give Negro workers the training to make them useful in the shipyards. Mr. Kilpatrick writes that the fair employment practices committee looks to the Alabama Board for Vocational Education to shape a satisfactory solution for the problem. That goes for most Alabamians.

Birmingham Ala Age-Herald
December 1, 1941

The Negro Worker

The Committee on Fair Employment Practice which is headed by Mark Ethridge and Dr. W. W. Alexander has been investigating employment opportunities for Negroes in Atlantic and Gulf Coast shipyards.

In most shipyards, this committee found fair practices the rule. But, according to a dispatch from Carroll Kilpatrick, Age-Herald-News Washington correspondent, some Alabama labor unions and vocational leaders have been registering complaints about the proposed creation of vocational training schools for Negroes in the Mobile area. These schools would train Negroes for shipyard work of both skilled and unskilled nature.

One Mobile shipyard at present, it is reported, bars Negro workers because of a contract between the company and an AFL Metal Trades Council which, apparently, forbids employment of Negroes. Another shipyard employs some Negroes, but they comprise only 20 per cent of the total number of workers, both skilled and unskilled.

It is reported that advertisements have been placed in out-of-town newspapers seeking workers for Mobile shipyards. There is, too, it is said, a shortage of housing for the incoming white workers. The situation is affecting sanitation and educational facilities.

There are many native Negroes in the Mobile area. They are equipped now to do many unskilled types of jobs. With a short period of training they could do other jobs. But there is opposition to the creation of vocational schools which will take care of such training.

It should not be necessary to remind all persons that equality of opportunity is one of the principles for which this nation is preparing to fight if necessary.

There is no conflict with white workers ove[illegible]case. There are not enough [illegible]e workers to supply the shipyards' demands.

Some officials in Mobile, according to the report from Washington, have stated that they do not believe Negroes should be trained for skills that they are not accustomed to practice. The weakness of such reasoning is evident. Adherence to it would mean that the Negro never would be able to lift himself from a kind of economic bondage.

This situation, it seems, presents two questions. Are we going to utilize all needed and available manpower for the defense effort to which we are pledged? Are we going to afford Negroes a fair opportunity to equip themselves for service as democratic citizens?

NEGRO TRAINING PLANS OPPOSED

Alabama Labor Leaders Reported Against Vocational Idea

Strong resistance by Alabama labor unions and state vocational leaders to development of vocational training schools for Negroes in the vicinity of shipbuilding yards along the Atlantic and Gulf seaboard was reported from Washington Thursday by Carroll Kilpatrick special Washington correspondent of The Birmingham Age-Herald and News.

Kilpatrick said the project is receiving the attention of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, and that in some of the shipyard areas, particularly in the Carolinas, progress is being made.

The training proposal is based on the record made by Negro workmen employed in great numbers at Hog Island shipbuilding yards during the First World War, Kilpatrick reported. The past record is being upheld at yards where Negro workmen are now being utilized, such as Pascagoula, Miss., and Charleston, S. C., he added.

Negroes Are Barred

In one Mobile shipyard Negro workmen are barred under an AFL Metal Trades Council contract, and at another the number of Negroes employed is only about 20 per cent of the total skilled and unskilled laborers required, Kilpatrick said.

In both yards, Kilpatrick said the committee reported, there is a dearth of workmen and advertisements have been inserted in out-of-town newspapers seeking additional white employes. Meanwhile a white housing shortage was reported being aggravated by the new influx of workmen, and the city is asking for funds to build between 4,000 and 5,000 defense houses at a cost of approximately $3,200 each.

Spread of existing jobs among Negro workmen capable of holding them, already residing in Mobile, would ease this situation, the committee believes. A few weeks of training would be given to prepare them for the specialized work.

Discrimination Law Cited

Members of the Washington committee, named by the president, last week called to the attention of Alabama officials provisions of defense contracts which specify there shall be no discrimination against any workman because of "race, creed, color or national origin," and asked for cooperation in the Negro training program.

Officials in Mobile argued, Kilpatrick said, that Negro workmen should not be trained for skills they are not accustomed to practice.

Committee members said no progress was made in the Alabama discussions, but let it be known that they expect the Alabama State Board for Vocational Education to work out a satisfactory solution to the problem.

Money for the training schools, first of which are expected to be organized in Wilmington, N. C., and Charleston, is furnished by the federal government but administered by the state.

Gives Sweeping Order To Defense Chiefs to Stop Discrimination

Present Practices Called Threat To American Security By Nation's Chief Executive

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt, in a sweeping order issued to the Office of Production Management, has directed that "immediate steps" be taken "to facilitate the full utilization of our productive manpower," and called for the elimination of discrimination in defense work "against Negro workers . . . and other minority racial, national, and religious groups."

"This situation," the Chief Executive observed in his order to his two defense chiefs, William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, "is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively."

TEXT OF RESIDENT'S ORDER

"Complaints have repeatedly been brought to my attention that available and much-needed workers are being barred from defense production solely because of race, religion, or national origin. It is said that at a time when labor stringencies are appearing in many areas, fully qualified workers are being turned from the gates of industry on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity.

"Also that discrimination against Negro workers has been nation-wide, and other minority racial, national and religious groups have felt its effects in many localities. This situation is a matter of grave national importance, and immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively.

RECALLS EARLIER ACTION

"I note with satisfaction that the Office of Production Management has recognized the seriousness of this situation, and that on April 11, 1941, it addressed a letter on the subject to all holders of defense contracts. As Chief Executive of the Nation I place the full support of my office behind your statement to the effect that,

" 'All holders of defense contracts are urged to examine their employment and training policies at once to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available and competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency.'

THREAT TO OUR SECURITY

"No nation combatting the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to strengthen our unity and morale by refuting at home the very theories which we are fighting abroad.

"Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening the doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color.

SPEEDY REMEDY CALLED FOR

"American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much-needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationality origins in defense industries.

"In the present emergency, it is imperative that we deal effectively and speedily with this problem. I shall expect the Office of Production Management to take immediate steps to facilitate the full utilization of our productive man-power.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Knowledge that some order of this nature was to be issued by the President leaked out several weeks ago when a representative of one of the federal bure[illegible] called at the Black Dispatch. Immediately following the information given this writer on May 8 of this ye[illegible] sent a letter out to the old advisory board NYA, named several years ago by Houston Wright. Those members of the board receiving letters were: Prof. E. W. Woods, Tulsa; Dr. G. L. Harrison, Langston; William Phillips, Duncan, and Prof. Sam Sadler, Muskogee. The letter follows:

"I had a conversation yesterday with a confidential representative of the President of the United States, who is seeking information for the President regarding national defense and the degree to which minority groups have been integrated.

"I was surprised to find how much information had been assembled by this man, and I was shocked to know how with mere figures we were being shunted off to one side and not given the break we should have. I am enclosing herewith an editorial I ran this week which carries the figures on the same subject, which I secured from another source.

"The immediate reason for writing you this letter develops out of the fact that you and I are members of an NYA advisory committee. We have not functioned much in the past year, or I might say, since Houston Wright was removed as director. It appears to me that now is the time when we should act and endeavor to get worth while defense training for Negro youth.

"Oklahoma has been favored with collosal airplane depots and training grounds by the federal government. In Tulsa and Oklahoma City great assembly plants are going to be permanently established. NYA is offering training in defense industries and I think our responsible task now is to see to it that an 'automobile mechanics' motherhubbard is not thrown over NYA Negro work-shops, as is true in most of our high schools.

"Take, for instance, in Oklahoma City, a new NYA work-shop is about to be opened for Negroes. The same is true in Muskogee and Tulsa. Will Negro boys be taught in the skills that have to do with the airplane industry in these schools? I think that question can be answered quite largely out of our committee activity just at this time.

"There is no need for us to wait until these big airplane factories open in Oklahoma and then send our boys to the factory gate for employment. If our boys are discriminated against in airplane training in the NYA work-shops, they wlli be disqualified at the gates of the airplane factories in Tulsa and Oklahoma City.

"Right at the present time courses which would qualify Negroes to teach this type of course are being given at Stillwater. The only Negro taking this course is an incorrigible youth, enrolled at Taft. We ought to see to it that a full class of twenty Negro mechanics, residents of this state, take this course. Only in this way will we be able to have qualified Negroes teach our boys in these NYA training centers.

"At Douglass school, Oklahoma City, NYA has a big airplane engine, but don't let that fool you. There is no one at Douglass who knows any more about that airplane engine than I do. It might just as well be in the Smithsonian institute.

"Take the situation at Langston university: (and I am giving you the information secured from the confidential adviser of the president) national defense training covers only a course in auto mechanics, and the only instructional equipment is a Model T Ford tnd a Willys-Knight engine (both obsolete). My informant further stated that at the Oklahoma State Employment Service today there are listed 500 unemployed white auto mecha[illegible]ll of whom would have precedence over Negro auto mechanics. T[illegible]ooks like a blind alley.

"I am writing you to request that I be authorized to seek a conference with Bruce Carter for our advisory committee. I think our committee should propose two things:

"First: That NYA work-shops for Negroes in Oklahoma be equipped with machines to teach metal welding, sheet metal processes and only such wood work as has to do with aircraft. These shops should be so equipped as to give Negroes intensive training in the assembly of aircraft engines.

"Second: That immedi[illegible]orts be made to have a full class of skilled Negro mechanics take the defense training courses at Stillwater so as to be able to become instructors in these work-shops.

"If we can have this conference I believe we can do a good job for the Negroes not alone of Oklahoma but of the United States.

"My experience with Mr. Carter is that he is an extreme liberal. I actually believe he wants to do the right thing by Negroes, but we as an advisory committee should be the o[illegible]s who tell him in no uncertain terms what we consider is THE RIG[illegible] THING. I am confident if we act now before machinery has been p[illegible]aced in these centers, we can do the finest job that has been done in many days for the Negroes of this state."

The conference suggested in the above letter was held by members of the old advisory board in Mr. Carter's office. As a basis for discussion the above letter was read to the state NYA director. During the discussion Mr. Carter stated that under the present NYA rules it would be impossible to give ariplane instruction to students, because NYA rules provided that something must be produced. The rules, he said, did not provide for mere training.

If in NYA or WPA the federal government is not giving opportunity to secure this vital defense training, it is important that Negro leaders get busy at once endeavoring to have such absurd rules immediately corrected. Only in this way can the President's order be effectively carried out.

In Oklahoma City a new airplane school is offering a 12-week course for $60, and so long as Negroes cannot get this vital instruction in NYA classes we recommend such schools, although it is unthinkable that the government would force Negroes to pay $60 for a smattering of information in privately owned machine shops when at the same time maintaining the tax-supported NYA work-shops all over America. Such action on the part of government does not make sense.

To date no Negroes in Oklahoma are receiving training in airplane wood work and airplane motor assembly. It is reported, however, that at Weatherford 104 white youths have already received training in airplane wood-wing construction, sheet metal work and welding. This project, participated in by NYA, is also [illegible]ed by the Southwestern School of Technology and the state vocational department.

As we pointed out in the letter to the former members of the old NYA advisory board, airplane assembly plants located in Oklahoma City and Tulsa are going to offer permanent employment to thousands of laborers in the years to come. It is unthinkable that Kansas Negroes, who attend mixed schools, will receive this type of training and later on secure jobs in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, rightfully belonging to Oklahoma Negroes.

On the other hand, the poor, impoverished black youth of this state should not have to pay twice to defend the nation. He should not be taxed to maintain NYA and then later be taxed to enter privately owned schools. It will be costly for destitute, jobless Negroes to raise $60, but in another sense it will be the best investment possible, so long as some "hocus pocus" prevents NYA, CCC or WPA from giving Negro youth this type of semi-skilled training.

My informant further stated that at the Oklahoma State Employment Service today there are listed 500 unemployed white auto mechanics all of whom would have precedence over Negro auto mechanics. This looks like a blind alley.

"I am writing you to request that I be authorized to seek a conference with Bruce Carter for our advisory committee. I think our committee should propose two things:

"First: That NYA work-shops for Negroes in Oklahoma be equipped with machines to teach metal welding, sheet metal processes and only such wood work as has to do with aircraft. These shops should be so equipped as to give Negroes intensive training in the assembly of aircraft engines.

"Second: That immediate efforts be made to have a full class of skilled Negro mechanics take the defense training courses at Stillwater so as to be able to become instructors in these work-shops.

"If we can have this conference I believe we can do a good job for the Negroes not alone of Oklahoma but of the United States.

"My experience with Mr. Carter is that he is an extreme liberal. I actually believe he wants to do the right thing by Negroes, but we as an advisory committee should be the ones who tell him in no uncertain terms what we consider is THE RIGHT THING. I am confident if we act now before machinery has been placed in these centers, we can do the finest job that has been done in many days for the Negroes of this state."

The conference suggested in the above letter was held by members of the old advisory board in Mr. Carter's office. As a basis for discussion the above letter was read to the state NYA director. During the discussion Mr. Carter stated that under the present NYA rules it would be impossible to give ariplane instruction to students, because NYA rules provided that something must be produced. The rules, he said, did not provide for mere training.

If in NYA or WPA the federal government is not giving opportunity to secure this vital defense training, it is important that Negro leaders get busy at once endeavoring to have such absurd rules immediately corrected. Only in this way can the President's order be effectively carried out.

In Oklahoma City a new airplane school is offering a 12-week course for $60, and so long as Negroes cannot get this vital instruction in NYA classes we recommend such schools, although it is unthinkable that the government would force Negroes to pay $60 for a smattering of information in privately owned machine shops when at the same time maintaining the tax-supported NYA work-shops all over America. Such action on the part of government does not make sense.

To date no Negroes in Oklahoma are receiving training in airplane wood work and airplane motor assembly. It is reported, however, that at Weatherford 104 white youths have already received training in airplane wood-wing construction, sheet metal work and welding. This project, participated in by NYA, is also sponsored by the Southwestern School of Technology and the state vocational department.

As we pointed out in the letter to the former members of the old NYA advisory board, airplane assembly plants located in Oklahoma City and Tulsa are going to offer permanent employment to thousands of laborers in the years to come. It is unthinkable that Kansas Negroes, who attend mixed schools, will receive this type of training and later on secure jobs in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, rightfully belonging to Oklahoma Negroes.

On the other hand, the poor, impoverished black youth of this state should not have to pay twice to defend the nation. He should not be taxed to maintain NYA and then later be destitute, jobless Negroes to raise $60, but in another sense it will be the best investment possible, so long as some "hocus pocus" prevents NYA, CCC or WPA from giving Negro youth this type of semi-skilled training.

'Conspiracy' Is Charged

Negroes Hold Discrimination on Projects

HAMPTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Charges that in certain sections there is a conspiracy between government employment agencies, contractors' hiring agents and certain labor unions, aiming to restrict skilled employment to white workers," were contained in a resolution adopted at the Builders' Conference now in bi-annual session at Hampton Institute.

The resolution was approved yesterday on the second day of the three-day meeting of 200 delegates representing Negro builders, contractors, architects and artisans, and their organizations in twenty States. Copies were telegraphed to President Roosevelt and top-ranking Federal officials.

The conference put itself on record as "denouncing the action of numerous firms holding government contracts and certain organized labor groups in their subtle and illegal collusion for the purpose of evading government "racial discriminatory" clauses in order to exclude skilled Negro workers from a full participation in national defense construction work.

"Evidence has been presented to this body," the resolution declared, "proving without question that skilled Negro workers are barred from skilled labor in the construction of barracks that the same workers may be called upon to occupy in the service of their country.

The conference admitted that 2,300 of 5,800 workmen at the Fort Eustis construction job on the Virginia Peninsula were Negroes, but said there was "not a single Negro" among the 2,000 carpenters employed there.

"It is clearly evident on this project, as on others," asserted the resolution, "that skilled Negro workmen are shunted into unskilled occupations while skilled labor, by collusion of contractors and labor unions, is restricted to white workers."

The conference said "the Democratic participation of the Negro in the defense program can be insured only if the government implements the existing racial discrimination clause with specific percentage and enforcement provisions that contractors cannot evade."

Negroes Claim Discrimination

Hampton, Va. (UP).—The Hampton Builders' Conference and National Builders' Association has telegraphed a 580-word resolution to President Roosevelt denouncing discriminatory practices against Negroes on national defense projects, it was announced today.

The resolution also was sent to 19 other key government officials.

It denounced the action of numerous firms holding government contracts and certain labor groups, and charged subtle and illegal collusion for the purpose of evading government racial discriminatory clauses in order to exclude skilled Negro workers from full participation in national defense construction work.

The Fort Eustis, Va., project was mentioned specifically as an example of the alleged discriminatory attitude against skilled Negro workers. The resolution said 2,000 white carpenters were employed there but not a single Negro was allowed to work on the project.

Hampton Institute Discusses Defense

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 12.—(AP) The national defense program of vocational education training for negroes was praised in a resolution passed at the closing of the 15th biennial Hampton Institute builders conference today.

The three-day meeting keyed on the theme of "Defense Construction and the Negro," closed with a panel discussion led by representatives of Virginia State College, Tuskegee Institute, South Carolina State College, Arkansas A. M. & N. College and Hampton Institute, on the subject of "Trade and Industrial Training and the National Defense."

"Did you see much poverty in Europe?"

"Yes, indeed. A good deal. In fact, I brought some back with me."

Negroes Ask for Work in Defense

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 11.—(U.P.). Representatives of organized Negro building trades, independent Negro builders and state and national Government officials Tuesday sought to find a solution to alleged discrimination against Negroes in national defense housing.

The fifteenth Hampton Builders' Conference and the National Builders' Association were urged to notify formally Government agencies that there are Negro contractors available for urgent defense projects from "the man who does the small repair work to Negroes who have contracts that run into more than millions of dollars."

Dean L. K. Downing of the Howard University School of Engineering said that "information should be compiled and put on the desks of representatives in Washington and in north areas showing that we have men capable of participating in all fields—men who have shown by the type of service they can render that there is no such thing as color when it comes to a building."

Builders Represent 20 States at Session

HAMPTON, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Some 200 Negro leaders in the construction field gathered here this morning for a discussion of the participation of the Negro builder in national defense.

Included in the group were contractors, architects, engineers and carpenters, spokesmen for thousands of Negro builders throughout the United States, who met for the fifteenth annual Hampton Institute Builders' Conference.

William H. Moses, Jr., director of the Building Construction Department of the Hampton Institute Trade School, said that he has been advised by the office of production management of the National Defense Commission, the Department of Commerce and the Federal Works Agency that they were interested in receiving the reactions of the builders here to the present situation in defense housing.

Discussion leaders will include W. J. Trent, of the Federal Works Agency; Dr. Ambrose Caliver, of the office of education, and Archibald A. Alexander, Negro engineering contractor, of Des Moines, Ia.

The delegates from twenty States will hear Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of the institute, in an address at a banquet tonight.

A highlight of the program will be the presentation of the government's building case on Wednesday by Carl H. Monsees, assistant co-ordinator of defense housing projects.

Negro Labor Status Probe Is Promised

FWA Chief Carmody Assures Builders Conference at Hampton

One Survey Made

Newport News Daily Press Finds 'No Discrimination on Peninsula

Hampton, Feb. 10.—(AP)—John M. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, advised the Hampton Institute Builders' Conference today that an immediate investigation would be made of reports of discrimination against Negroes on national defense housing projects in Tidewater Virginia.

The announcement was made in a letter to the 200 delegates from 20 States attending the conference here. The group, holding its fifteenth annual meeting, represents thousands of Negro contractors, carpenters, architects, engineers and other workers in the construction field.

Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League, told the conference that Carmody's pronouncement against discrimination was nothing more than a "pious wish" unless some enforcement clause was added to put teeth into the law.

"Specious Pleas"

Answering what he termed "specious pleas that the cause of efficiency in defense projects made it impossible to hire Negroes at this time," Granger declared that "efficiency isn't half so important as democracy."

George Zuidima, hiring agent for contractors engaged in construction at Fort Eustis, appeared to discuss employment practices on that project and stated that 2,300 of the 5,800 workers at Fort Eustis were skilled or unskilled Negroes. He added, however, that "you can't change a custom overnight."

L. Carleton Crump, of the Virginia Department of Labor, told the conference that he was sent as a representative of Labor Commissioner Thomas Morton, who, he explained, was "vitally interested in this problem."

Relationship Study Urged

The delegates were welcomed by R. O'Hara Lanier, Hampton Institute dean, who stressed the importance of Negro builders studying at this time their relationship with the Federal Government, with union labor organizations, with big contractors and with schools as their source of supply for skilled labor.

Other speakers today included W. E. Lee, director of the Mechanic Arts Department of the A. M. and N. College, Pine Bluff, Ark.; L. K. Downing, dean of the School of Engineering of Howard University, Washington, D. C., and W. J. Trent, racial relations officer of the Federal Works Agency.

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, addressed a banquet session tonight. The discussions of "The Negro Builder and National Defense" will continue here through Wednesday.

Negroes Wire Race Charges To Roosevelt

HAMPTON—A resolution charging discrimination in the employment of Negro workmen on national defense housing projects was telegraphed to President Roosevelt and 19 other key Government officials last night by the Hampton Builders' Conference and National Builders' Association meeting at Hampton Institute.

The 580-word resolution charged "numerous firms holding Government contracts and certain organized labor groups" with "subtle and illegal collusion for the purpose of evading Government 'racial discriminatory' clauses in order to exclude skilled Negro workers from a full participation in national defense construction work."

It cited specifically the Fort Eustis construction project near here, where it was said that not a single Negro carpenter had been employed, although "approximately 2,000 white ones" have jobs there.

Conspiracy Charged

The 200 delegates from 20 States, convened at the fifteenth biannual Hampton Builders' Conference, emphatically denied that any sacrifice of Democratic principles was necessary in the interest of efficiency. They charged that in certain sections of the country there is conspiracy between Government employment agencies, contractors' hiring agents and certain labor unions aiming to restrict skilled employment to white workers—a vicious circle to exclude the skilled Negro worker from defense work.

Asking for immediate action, William H. Moese Jr., chairman of the conference and William E. Lee, president of the National Builders' Association, signers of the resolution, stated that "defense of democracy in this troubled world becomes an empty phrase unless all of the defenders can live and work according to Democratic principles.

The resolution was adopted on the second day of the three-day conference devoted to defense construction and the Negro.

Text of Resolution

The resolution's text follows:

"We, the membership of the National Builders' Association and other delegates to the fifteenth biannual builders' conference, a conference of 200 builders, contractors, architects, engineers and artisans, representing organizations, contractors' associations, companies and unions in 20 different States, meeting at Hampton Institute on February 10, 11 and 12, 1941, pledge our united and emphatic support of the findings of the conference on the participation of the Negro in national defense, as adopted by the conference in its meeting at Hampton Institute on November 25-26, 1940.

"We wish to go on record as denouncing the action of numerous firms holding Government contracts and certain organized labor groups in their subtle and illegal collusion for the purpose of evading Government 'racial discriminatory' clauses in order to exclude skilled Negro workers from a full participation in national defense construction work. Evidence has been presented to this body, proving without question that skilled Negro workers are barred from skilled labor in the construction of barracks that the same workers may be called upon to occupy in the service of their country.

"We point out specifically the Fort Eustis project, with 2,300 Negroes out of 5,800 workmen, yet with not a single Negro carpenter employed—though approximately 2,000 white ones have been given employment.

Put in Unskilled Work

"It is clearly evident on this project, as on others, that skilled Negro workmen are shunted into unskilled occupations while skilled labor, by collusion of contractors and labor unions, is restricted to white workers. We state as our conviction that, in these crucial days, Negroes must be allowed to work on a democratic basis if they are to be expected to fight for democracy.

"We deny that a sacrifice of democratic principles in defense construction must be made in the interest of efficiency. We consider that the exclusion of Negro workmen from certain skilled defense occupations for which they possess full qualifications constitutes a flagrant violation of the spirit of democracy. We point out that the employment of skilled Negroes as helpers to skilled white mechanics, but with wages approximating those of laborers, amounts to racial discrimination—in direct violation of Government ruling.

"We state that in certain sections there is a conspiracy between Government employment agencies, contractors' hiring agents and certain labor unions, aiming to restrict skilled employment to white workers.

Government on Record

"We wish to point out that in this defense emergency the Federal Government has gone on record against racial discrimination, yet racial discrimination continues. Since various Government agencies are the first party to contracts between and with dedefense contractors, since the taxpayers' money is paying for national defense—we insist that the democratic participation of the Negro in the defense program can be insured only if the Government implements the existing racial discrimination clause with specific percentage and enforcement provisions that contractors cannot evade.

"It is our sober conviction that the violation of the spirit of democracy during a period when we are told that democracy must be preserved is undermining the morale of a large segment of the American population, some of whom have been called for military training, and others of whom expect to be called shortly.

"Evidence has been presented at this conference that a vicious circle exists to exclude the skilled Negro workers from defense work. Government employment agents say that if contractors 'ask for potatoes they can't give them onions.' Contractors tell skilled Negro workers that they must have union cards. Union officials triple their membership fee and then refuse cards to skilled Negro workers when they produce the money.

"Finally, we call to your attention the fact that defense of democracy in this troubled world becomes an empty phrase unless all of the defenders can live and work according to democratic principles."

Bar President Raps Army Brutality: Asks F.D.R. To Probe Acts

AUG 30 1941

HONORABLE FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT,
PRESIDENT, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
THE WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

Disaffection among draftees and the clash of group against group is the most serious problem confronting National Defense today. A nation is no stronger than its army. An army is no stronger than its morale. I, therefore, as President of the National Bar Association, call upon the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, to exercise his plenary powers to suppress the violence and brutality of the Military Police against defenseless draftees and to set up at once a Civilian Commission to investigate, keep vigil, and to make recommendations to the military authorities in all matters affecting the general welfare and morale of our boys in camp. All vicious and unlawful practices of certain State Highway Police must be suppressed.

World changes today are cataclysmic. The island of Java and far-off Thailand are now the center of world interest. In 1917 we had the simple problem of trying to make the world safe for democracy. Now we are faced with the grave and perilous problem of trying to make the world unsafe for tyranny. If we are to defeat tyranny abroad we must defeat it at home. If we hope to make the world safe for democracy we have got to create democracy right where we are.

Jews, Gentiles, Negroes, Catholics and Protestants all make up this man's army. They are entitled to equal treatment under the laws and they must get it as a matter of right. Military Police who abuse their authority should be court-martialed. State Highway Police who defy the law they are sworn to uphold must be dismissed. Clubbing, head-whipping, abuse and insults have no place in a democratic army sworn with its life to defend democracy. We call upon all citizens to sustain freedom, liberty and equality for all men regardless of racial or religious identity.

President, National Bar Association

Gen. Davis Probes Fort Bragg Double Killing

AUG 23 1941

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. — Detailed to special inspection duties by the War Department, Brigadier Gen. B. O. Davis arrived at Fort Bragg on Saturday of last week.

Accompanied by Col. Hansford, General Davis, who is attached to the Inspector General's' Office in Washington, made an investigation of recent killing of a colored soldier and a white military policeman on a bus here. The officers returned to Washington on Monday by plane. The result of the investigation was not announced.

AUG 25 1941

Through the courtesy of Major Hinkson of Fort Bragg, General Davis was interviewed by B. F. Ferguson, commender, and Nathaniel Royal, adjutant, of Melvin-Elliott Post, American Legion. Others present at the interview were, E. A. Armstrong and J. Hollingsworth.

White Soldiers Back Need To End Jim-Crow in Army

By Bart Logan and Rob F. Hall

FORT BRAGG, N. C., Aug. 17.—It looks like a rough pine box and an inconspicuous burial for the body of Private Ned Turman now lying in the little morgue behind Station Hospital No. 1. Private Turman is the young Negro boy from Lorida, Fla., who was shot and killed by Sergeant Russel Owens of the Military Police Force on a Fayetteville bus on Aug. 6.

Sergeant Elwynn Hargreaves, white member of the Military Police, who was also killed in the much-discussed Fort Bragg shooting, was buried more than a week ago with all the pomp, ceremony, music and salutes of a military funeral.

Negro officers and soldiers who tactfully suggested that Private Turman, who was also serving his country and his people, should have a similar funeral were turned away with the assurance that a regular army investigation was under way. The results would determine whether or not Private Turman "deserved" a military funeral, they were told.

NO MILITARY FUNERAL

On Friday morning Col. Charles B. Elliott, post commander, announced that the military General Court had vindicated Sergeant Owens. And in the absence of any definite interpretation to the contrary, this undoubtedly means, in the logic of high military men, that Private Turman does not "deserve" a military funeral.

This is the sort of biased, prejudiced, chauvinist policy prevailing at least in Southern posts which not only creates fertile soil for the development of such incidents as the Fort Bragg riot, but which is having a damaging effect on soldier morale and accounts for scores of men going "over the hill."

Officially, the investigation is not over, according to Col. Elliott. The record of the General Court will be reviewed by Major S. E. Murrell, judge advocate general. Meanwhile, a representative of the War Department, Lieut. Col. Rosser L. Hunter from the Inspector General's office in Washington, is making his own investigation. Capt. Charles M. Rogers, inspector general on the local post, is continuing his investigations. Whether the findings will throw light on the true facts of the incident or simply add another coat of whitewash to the vicious Jim Crow system of the army, it is impossible to say. But it is significant that the Negro soldiers and officers are not optimistic.

GESTAPOISM IN ARMY

They rushed into Fayetteville, the little city of 17,000 population six miles from the post, and began rounding up Negro soldiers and officers in true Gestapo fashion. Military police stopped a bus marked "Colored Troops" en route to the post from the city, and at the point of guns, forced the Negro troops to dismount and get aboard military police trucks. They were forced to hold their hands up and to stand up, still with hands up, all the way

Everybody agrees, including many white soldiers and citizens with whom we have talked, that it will back to the post. Negro corporals and sergeants who protested were thrown into the guard house. A Negro chaplain, with the rank of lieutenant, was prodded with a night stick and shoved around with the enlisted man. All Negro troops and officers who had been in Fayetteville, about 300, were then held in the stockade for several hours.

In announcing the verdict exonerating Sergeant Owens, Col. Elliot intimated that the subsequent events required much fuller investigation.

Conjectures as to what is wrong are almost as numerous as the people you talk to, except that all agree on the general arrogance and brutality of the military police. White soldiers are as vehement as Negroes on this subject. The military police have made themselves the most hated and despised persons in military life.

"A lot of the MP's are drawn from Southern enlisted men, wether deliberately, I don't know," a Southern civilian told us. "But you can hear them talking about town about the 'G—— D—— sunuva b—— niggers.' The Fort Bragg riot might have happened a hundred times. With the MP's what they are, we ought to consider ourselves lucky that it hasn't."

A white soldier from Texas called our attention to the large proportion of officers who were educated in Southern military "prep schools." "Contempt for Negroes is a tradition in those schools," he added. "I know because I went to one of them. They are snobbish as hell and make a point of making every student feel that he is a Southern gentleman and better than the common herd."

WHITE SOLDIERS' SUPPORT

A few white soldiers are outspoken in their indignaton about the shooting incident. A great many more, and this includes the younger white officers, are withholding judgment, we were told. They refused to accept the orthodox newspaper version of the account which was circulated here, saying, "There's more to this thing than meets the eye."

On the treatment of the Negro soldiers by the military police following the shooting, the facts were so clear and well known that indignation is widespread.

A Negro soldier told us that as he stood in a shoe repair shop a few days after the incident, he was approached by a white soldier. "I just wanted to tell you that there's a lot of us white boys who don't like the terrible way the colored soldiers are treated," he said. "We think it's shameful."

We showed a young Southen woman in Fayetteville the clipping from PM in which Tom O'Connor interviews a local taxi driver. O'Connor's taxi driver is presented as a vicious anti-Negro.

"The interview may be true," she said, "but it isn't typical. There are a great many Southerners here who were appalled at the incident and who are disturbed at the treatment given Negroes."

The Plaindealer

WE SHOULD HAVE NEGRO M.P.'s IN DIXIE

AUG 1 5 1941

Recent outbreaks of trouble between Negro soldiers and white M. P.'s means only one thing, and that is the War Department will have to have Negro Miltary Police in the South. Numerous reports have come from the South that the white M. P.'s are brutal in administering police duty where Negro soldiers are concerned. The report is that they are mean, ignorant and prejudiced. Just last week the shooting and killing which occurred at Fort Bragg came about because of the hostile relationship between white Military Police and Negro soldiers. There is no reason why we cannot have Negroes serving as Military Police in territories and around camps where Negro soldiers are in the service. We see no reason why the War Department would have to arm white men with clubs and guns over Negroes when they all are serving the same Government. It would be well for the War Department to give some serious consideration to this matter because Negro soldiers are going to continue to resent being clubbed and policed by white M. P.'s in a brutal manner, so much so until some real trouble will break out which, no doubt, will result in numerous deaths as well as the enmity which will be created in our selective training service.

AUG 1 5 1941

The Negro is segregated in the War Department and, since he is segregated, why not have Negro M. P.'s to police Negro training camps? One of the worse things the War Department can do is to arm a Georgia "Hill-Billy" or a Mississippi "Cracker" with a gun and a club and send him out to discipline Negroes, especially when he is a young punk. The War Department can refresh its memory on what happened during the last World War at Houston, Texas, when a great race riot broke out in which death was the toll.

AUG 1 5 1941

The Negroes in the training camps have the ability and intelligence to administer discipline just as well as white boys. When a Negro boy goes to a training camp, puts on a suit and takes the oath of allegiance to die and give his blood to keep the Stars and Stripes from ever touching the ground, he feels free just as white boys, and he is ready to die at any moment whether it be in Mississippi or Georgia or on the battle fields of Europe. He is willing to die at any time and any place when that freedom is threatened, when he has been mistreated and shoved aside by a fellow-American who feels that he is superior because of Nordic blood. The War Department cannot let this grave problem go untouched.

Southern Negro Youth Demand Fort Bragg Probe

Congress Says Jim-Crow Hostility Blow to Defense Unity

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 14.—In a letter to President Roosevelt the Southern Negro Youth Congress demanded an immediate investigation at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, where a Negro soldier was killed and several others were injured by military police on Aug. 7.

AUG 25 1941

Miss Esther V. Cooper, Administrative Secretary of the Youth Congress is urging individuals and organizations to send letters of protest to President Roosevelt; to Colonel B. Elliot, Commanding Officer, Fort Bragg; General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, and the Attorney General of the U. S. The letter to the President says:

"We demand an immediate investigation of this crime at Fort Bragg and a vigorous and radical transformation of army policy in reference to the elimination of the cause of these incidents. We have contended that jim-crowism gives birth to hostility between Negro and white soldiers and creates an atmosphere for such incidents to happen. The reluctance to advance Negro soldiers to leadership in the army of the United States has a profound effect upon both Negro and white in the armed forces. Negro men resent serving under petty officers who are incompetent while they are prevented because of racial discrimination to advance."

The letter continues, "These Hitler-like acts such as the Fort Bragg incident puts a strain upon the loyalties of patriotic Negro citizens. Those who are responsible for creating an atmosphere in the camps which lead to antagonisms between Negro and white soldiers are guilty of a real crime: aiding Hitlerism by dividing our forces."

NAACP PROTESTS

Reflecting the indignation of the entire Negro and a large section of the white public over the shooting of a Negro private and a white military policeman near Fort Bragg, North Carolina, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today sent a telegram to Secretary of War Stimson, urging that all responsible officers at Fort Bragg, from the camp commandant down to all military police involved in the affair and events following it, be called up for trial.

The telegram also urged that the board of inquiry include at least one Negro AUG 2 5 1941 and that publicity be given to the proceedings and results of the inquiry.

The telegram concluded by stating "Negro citizens have a right to demand that if the Army will not protect the rights and lives of Negro soldiers in uniform in the South, then the Army should remove these troops to other areas where their rights can be protected."

NAACP Investigator Finds White MP's Use '45' Authority at Drop of Hat

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.—Completing his investigation of the shooting of Private Allen Turman and the white military policeman near Fort Bragg, Curtiss Todd, of the NAACP legal staff, reported that it is not definitely established who fired the first shot, "but the fact remains that the white military police had the guns."

Reports of the fighting and subsequent shooting vary in detail, but most are agreed that the trouble started among the soldiers on the segregated bus. White military police were called to quell the disorder. The white MP's proceeded to beat the Negroes with clubs. Turman grabbed a gun, and fired, killing Sergeant Elwyn L. Hargrave and wounding several others and was in turn shot and killed by Sergeant Russell Owen.

Mr. Todd reported that Major DeHaven Hinkson of the medical corps of the 76th (Negro) regiment was of the opinion that the MP entered the bus shooting and that Turman was shot while he was on the floor by someone on the outside of the bus, or by someone above him.

AUG 22 1941

Commenting on his findings, Mr. Todd said. "The young, inexperienced white mitlitary police are bubbling over with '45' authority, just waiting for an opportunity to use it. Every Negro, it appears is subject for abuse on the slightest provocation."

He also said the he learned from one of the interviewees for a hostess job at Fort Bragg that the women were "without exception called by their first names by Captain Dennis H. Holliday, morale officer,

SEP 13 1941

Race Troops Blamed For Arkansas Trouble; Army Morale Generally Low; Southerners Hostile To Soldiers

Important to any long range view of national defense is the morale of the soldiers who must be always prepared to defend us and who must keep a constant vigil over our institutions of democracy for the next few years.

By now, interested organizations have adequately documented files which prove conclusively that all is not well with soldiers from the point of view of morale. Colored soldiers, particularly, face repressions, degrading inhibitions, discriminations, beatings, and racial disturbances which are not calculated to mold military or civilian unity. An obvious result will be a weakened Army organization in a world where armies are notably strong. It is in the interest of national defense that solutions to these problems be speedily found.

Following are a few of the "incidents" that filled the news of the past week:

From MacDill Field, Tampa, Fla., comes a story of unparalleled brutality. A Negro soldier was beaten nearly to death on the streets of Tampa, by white military policemen while civilian police cooperated with other white M.P.'s in holding a crowd of civilians at bay. Other reports of M.P. brutality, with civilian police cooperation, originate in Tampa.

General Ben "Yoo Hoo" Lear, commanding the Second Army, now on maneuvers in Arkansas, blamed colored soldiers of the 94th Engineer Battalion for the recent near-riot in Prescott and Durmott and told the members of the 94th that they were a discredit to their race.

Letters from white soldiers, reprinted last week in the Chicago Times, indicated that the marked antipathies shown by Southern civilians is damaging to all Army morale. Colored soldiers, writing letters to parents and friends, indicate that the attitude of southern civilians is definitely hostile.

At Fort Bragg, elaborate propaganda machinery has been set up to convince those on the outside that Negro soldiers are all happy at the fort and that the finest relations exist between the races.

Contrary to most reports, one writer discovered splendid interracial relations in some parts of Arkansas. In these sectors, white soldiers from the North and Northeast are stationed and they have shown friendliness in relations with colored civilians.

Soldiers Flogged By Military Police

TAMPA, Fla., (ANP) — While seven white military policemen stood guard with pistols drawn and deputy sheriffs forced the gathering crowd to move on, an unidentifed soldier was severely beaten on the street, Sunday by white M.P.'s from MacDill field.

The trouble began when a soldier walked out of a local hot spot, following several drinks, with his shirt collar open and the lapel of his shirt pocket not in its proper place. An M.P. approached and told him to arrange his clothing properly. When the soldier did not respond with what the M.P. though was the proper speed, the M.P. struck him across the head.

BLOCK OFF AREA

The soldier ran but was chased by the M.P. as seven others rushed up. They drew their guns as a crowd, including other colored soldiers, gathered. The unarmed soldier meanwhile was being beaten unmercifully, and finally was placed in a car and carried away. The sheriff's force had been called to the scene and blocked off the area, driving spectators on.

Colored soldier say conditions are generally bad at MacDill field, with M.P.'s assaulting troops with little or no provocation. A group of colored soldiers was shot at one night last week while returning to their quarters through the white area of the encampment. There is no other way to reach the Negro section.

TROUBLE BEFORE

A few weeks ago, two were shot on a Tampa Street by M.P.'s and local police. One of them, Sgt. Gilbert D. Wagner, Jr., was taken to the country hospital and then to jail where he is awaiting trial on charges of assault with intent to kill the city policeman, although witnesses and Wagoner say he was unarmed and never approached within 10 feet of the officer who joined the fray and shot Wagoner in the hip as he sought to protect himself from the M.P.

War Department Aide Promises Speedy Investigation Of Sensational Disclosures

B-u-l-l-e-t-i-n

An army radiogram signed by Lt. Col. F. V. Fitzgerald, GSC, chief of publication and special assignments branch, bureau of public relations, containing a preliminary report on the Bastrop, La., incident was received by the Chicago Defender late Monday night.

"Pvts. Williams and Goodman," it said, "are on active duty with their troop. Other soldiers," it continued, "received minor lacerations and bruises in pay day disturbance involving colored civilians and colored troops, in which police intervened. Incident being investigated within division concerned."

An investigation of sadistic brutality practiced against members of the Fourth Cavalry Brigade weapons troop, now somewhere in the South, by white army and civilian officers has been launched the Chicago Defender was told Saturday by Judge William H. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War in Washington.

Details of the inhuman treatment of the soldiers, most of whom are from Illinois and Michigan, were disclosed by three young volunteers who arrived in Chicago Wednesday AWOL in exclusive affidavits now in the possession of the Chicago Defender and the War Department.

HASTIE ASSURES AID TO PROTECT FUGITIVES

Moving immediately to protect the youths, the Defender contacted Judge Hastie by long-distance phone in Washington.

The boys are Pvts. 1st Class William T. Moore, 21, 4758 Champlain avenue; William R. Head, 19, 5810 Prairie avenue, and Roland Woodfork, 22, 5702 South Parkway.

The boys returned to their homes in Chicago after they became lost from their troop following a savage pogrom by civilian police in Bastrop, La., in which two soldiers were reportedly clubbed to death. to death.

Those believed to have been killed were James Williams of Flint, Mich., and Robert C. Goodman of Chicago.

Chief of Police L. W. Cox of Bastrop denied Monday that any "Negro soldiers were killed in Bastrop last week or any other time during army maneuvers or in Morehouse parish."

The inspector general's office however, is conducting an independent investigation of the reported killings.

The three youths told the Defender they believed that a score of other members of the troop had fled AWOL following the police-conducted reign of terror in Bastrop Tuesday.

Cause of the incident leading to the reported killings was not known by any of the three soldiers interviewed at the Defender. Two of them said they were in the colored section of the city Tuesday afternoon when they heard screams.

Running to the scene, they said they saw six white civilian officers clubbing Williams and Goodman about the head and body. The boys, outnumbered and unarmed, had long since stopped fighting back and were attempting to shield themselves against the continuous rain of blows.

OFFICER URGES ATTACK ON PROSTRATE YOUTH

As Williams sank to the ground, blood flowing from numerous wounds, the boys quoted one of the officers as saying, "Keep beating that Nigger." As other soldiers were attracted to the scene by the boys' cries, police squad cars arrived.

Officers appeared from everywhere, the statement continues, and indiscriminate beating of the soldiers began. Though many of the officers flourished revolvers, the boys said they saw no shooting. Many of the boys, the statement said, were chased by squad cars which attempted to run them down.

Williams, Woodfork and Head found refuge in the cellar of a woman's home where they remained until long after dark when a man drove them in an automobile 18 miles outside of town where the troop was quartered.

When they arrived, the boys said the troops hod moved on. Afraid to remain in town, the boys asked the man to drive them to Collinston, about 7½ miles, to catch a train for Chicago.

While waiting for the train the boys said they were approached by a white policeman who asked them if they were from Bastrop. All denied that they were.

FUGITIVES HAVE NARROW ESCAPE AT COLLINSTON

"It's a damn good thing you're not," the boys reported the officer as saying "They just killed two of you Niggers there this afternoon and we're looking for a Nigger with a scar over his right eye." Whether the officer was referring to Williams and Goodman the boys ewere unable to say.

Moore, who bears a scar over his right eye, was examined by the officer but released because, as he quoted the officer: "Your scar's too old. I'm looking for a fresh one."

The boys arrived in Chicago Wednesday at 6 p.m.

The military experience of the three began in April when they voluntarily joined the army and were sent to the reception center at Fort Custer in Michigan where they were outfitted and sent to the Cavalry Replacement center at Fort Riley in Kansas.

Here they underwent an eight-week course of training after which they were sent to Camp Funston in Kansas and attached to the Fourth Cavalry Brigade, formerly commanded by Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis. The present commander is Colonel Richart, white.

The weapons troop of which the boys are members consists of 181 men, all Negroes from Michigan and Illinois under the command of Capt. David V. Adamson, white.

From the latter part of May until August 21 the troop remained in Kansas.

ARRESTED FOR NOT SAYING "SIR" TO WHITE PRIVATE

On August 21 the troop left Kansas to participate in army maneuvers in the South. Traveling by scout cars and motorcycles the troop set out and camped the first night in Oklahoma, then proceeded next day to Greenville, Texas.

By August 24, they were in Shreveport, La., where they camped in the fair grounds and where the first incident of importance occurred.

Monday, Aug. 25, five of the boys went into town to do some shopping and encountered a white officer and a white private who stopped and questioned them about their presence in town.

According to reports made by the boys on their return to camp, bolo knives which they had been issued and unloaded .45 calibre service revolvers were taken from them and they were jailed because they refused to use word 'sir' in addressing the white officer and soldier.

After Captain Adamson had secured release of the boys, several white soldiers who said they were from Brooklyn, N. Y., visited the camp and reported that southern white soldiers, indignant over the attitude of the Negro troopers, were planning to raid the troop that night and shoot them up.

"We don't like those southerners," the white soldiers are reported as having said, "so we thought we'd tell you so you'd be set to shoot the hell out of them if they come."

None of the boys retired that night and the officers, the boys reported, were uneasy until orders came to break camp early Tuesday morning.

Nothing of importance occurred, the boys reported, until they were camped outside of Hamburg, Ark., Monday, Sept. 1.

Soldiers Quarrel

Lester Harris and Louis Benton, both privates, became engaged in an argument while drinking beer at the canteen, the boys declared in their affidavit, and continued their quarrel until it was brought to the attention of First Sergeant Lang who took them to Captain Adamson.

Adamson, the affidavit states, asked Harris if he could beat Benton with gloves. Harris answered in the negative, explaining that Benton outweighed and was older than he.

Adamson then turned to Benton and ordered him to dig a hole for the disposal of refuse. Benton, when he learned he was to dig the hole alone, told the officer he felt it unfair that only he should be punished.

Adamson, according to the sworn report, told Benton he was not supposed to think, but was to do as commanded. Without more ado, Benton began digging the hole, but stopped after a while and when Adamson ordered him to continue digging Bention protested, the affidavit says.

Col. Richards Acts

Continuing, the statement declares that Adamson was about to turn Benton over to white military police to be placed in the guard house when Colonel Richards, successor to Brig. Gen. Davis, arrived.

After learning the cause of the trouble, the boys under oath quoted him as follows: "Dont take him no place. Just beat his g—— d—— brains out with a pickhandle."

Richards then turned to Sergeant Lang, the statement continues, and told him to carry out the order. Lang straightforwardly refused. Richards then ripped his sergeant's stripes off his uniform and made Gaylord Thomas, who happened to be near, a sergeant in his place.

Adamson was then commanded by Richards to carry out the order. Sensing the temper of the rest of the troop, Colonel Richards, the boys declared, ordered the troop to attention and told them not to interfere.

"We stood it as long as we could," Moore said, "but you just can't stand around and see a helpless man beaten like that."

Without a signal, the boys broke ranks, and without injuring him, took the pickhandle from Adamson and rescued Benton.

Head told the Defender that he noted a distinct change in the attitude of the white officers toward the men after the troop reached the South. "We had all thought Colonel Richards and Captain Adamson swell fellows. They had always treated us O.K."

Moore and Woodfork also seemed puzzled by the changed attitude of the officers.

Cops Hold Crowd at Bay as M.P.'s Beat Soldier

TAMPA, Fla.— (ANP) —While seven white military policemen stood guard with pistols drawn and deputy sheriffs forced the gathering crowd to move on, an unidentified soldier was severely beaten on the street here Sunday, by white M. P.'s from MacDill Field.

The trouble began when a soldier walked out of a local tavern with his shirt collar open and the lapel of his shirt pocket out of place. An M. P. approached and told him to arrange his clothing properly. When the soldier did not respond immediately the M. P. struck him across the head.

The soldier ran but was chased and caught by the M. P., as seven others rushed up. They drew their guns as a crowd, including other colored soldiers, gathered. BEGIN 3 SEPARATE INVESTIGATIONS INTO KILLING OF TWO SOLDIERS ON ARMY BUS

Member Of NAACP Legal Staff Sent To Scene Of Military Fraeas

Three separate investigations into the double shooting of a Negro soldier and a white military policeman on a bus carrying soldiers to Fort Bragg, N. C., last Wednesday morning, were in progress as The New York Age went to press.

In addition to the military investigations, a special investigation is being made for he N. A. A. C. P., by Curtis Todd member of the N AACP legal staff of Raleigh, N. C., who was sent to Fort Bragg by the national office. At press time, Walter White, executive secretary of the organization, said no report had as yet been received on the shooting.

According to reports from Fayetteville, N. C., the two soldiers were killed and four others wounded in a private bus carrying twenty-five to thirty Negro soldiers from Fayetteville to nearby Fort Bragg, early Wednesday.

Those who died were Sergeant Edwin L. Hargraves, 20, white, of Corsicana Texas, a military policeman and Private Ned Turman, 27, of Ashton S. C., Negro engineer of the 76th Coast Artillery.

Seriously injured were Private Allen E. Katzman, 22, white, of Sheridan, Pa. also a military policeman; Sergeant Welton W. Smith, 32, of the military police; and Privates Seton Kennebrew and Virgil Brown.

The shooting took place when the three white military policemen boarded the bus and are said to have used their clubs in an attempt to quiet one of the Negro soldiers who was acting unruly. When companions intervened and tried to stop the M. P.s from beating the youth, Turman grabbed Hargraves gun, several shots were fired, one of them killing Hargraves and the others wounding Smith and Katzman, Sergeant Russell Owens, of Hartley, Ky.. another white military policeman, who remained outside the bus, shot Turman to death. The others were injured in the general melee which followed.

An immediate protest against the shooting was lodged with Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson by the N. A. A. C. P. executive secretary who wrote that:

"White military policemen constitute the greatest source of friction and trouble between the races in uniform, and that sooner or later the Negro soldiers. becoming tired of the arrogance and brutality of the white military police. would be certain to take matters in their own hands. .... This Association submits that when the treatment of Negro troops in southern communities by arrogant, ill-trained and prejudiced white military police reaches the point where Negro soldiers are willing to fight and die on the spot instead of training themselves to fight the declared enemy of the United States, then the situation is one which requires the most careful attention of the War Department, and prompt, remedial action."

Intervention of city police in the Fort Bragg and similar incidents was also cited as a source of friction, and the brutal treatment of during the last World War recalled in the protest.

MAKES REPORT ON PROBE AT FORT BRAGG

NAACP Atty. Says There Is Racial Element In Killings

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.—completing his investigation of the shooting of Private Allen Turman and a white military policeman near Fort Bragg, Curtiss Todd, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People legal staff, reported that it is not definitely established who fired the first shot, "but the fact remains that the white military police had the guns."

Reports of the fighting and subsequent shooting vary in detail, but most are agreed that the trouble started among the soldiers on the segregated bus. White military police were called to quell the disorder. The white MP's proceeded to beat the Negroes with clubs. Turman grabbed a gun, fired, killing Sergeant Elwyn L. Hargrave and wounding several others and was in turn shot and killed by Sergeant Russell Owen.

Atty. Todd reported that Major DeHaven Hinkson of the medical corps of the 76th (Negro) regiment was of the opinion that the MP entered the bus shooting and that Turman was shot while he was on the floor by someone on the outside of the bus, or by someone above him.

Commenting on his findings, Atty. Todd said, "The young,' inexperienced white military police are bubbling over with '45' authority, just waiting for an opportunity to use it. Every Negro, it appears, is subject for abuse on the slightest provocation."

"There are no provisions at the post for recreation for Negroes in which women may participate."

He also said that he learned from one of the interviewees for a hostess job at Fort Bragg that the women were without exception called by their first names by Captain Dennis H. Holliday, morale officer, and that this information shows the attitude of some of the officers toward Negroes.

Acquitted By General Army Court

But This Action Does Not Halt Investigation

GENERAL DAVIS TO BRAGG

WASHINGTON, D. C.—General Benjamin O. Davis of the Inspector General's office left Washington Saturday for Fort Bragg, North Carolina, to conduct an investigation of the slaying of Private Ned Turman by military policemen there.

FORT BRAGG, N. C. — (ANP) — Col. Charles B. Elliott, post commander, revealed here Thursday that Sgt. Russel Owens, white, of the military police force, had been acquitted by the general court in the fatal shooting of Pvt. Ned Turman on a bus in Fayetteville Aug. 6. Owen's acquittal, however, does not halt the investigation of the tragedy.

50 Witnesses Heard

While more than 50 witnesses were being heard in court, Lt. Col. Rosser L. Hunter from the inspector general's office of the war department, acting under authority of the secretary of war, arrived with his aides and began a separate investigation, going over the same ground that was covered by Capt. Clarence M. Rogers, the post inspector general.

The inquiry may take weeks, because everyone who had any part, either as a participant or observer, must be questioned and statements taken in writing.

Sgt. Owens was prosecuted by Capt. Aubrey E. Strode and defended by Capt. George V. Nunn. Transcripts of the court record will be passed to Maj. S. E. Murrell, judge advocate general and Col. Elliott for review, a procedure which is unusual, since generally proceedings in the case of an acquittal are not reviewed by higher authority than the post commander.

'Will Get To Bottom'

The shooting has been attributed to race prejudice, since subsequent treatment of over 700 Negro troops by the entire military police force of 300, came following Maj. James W. McNeer, provost marshal, had the police to round up the troops, mostly Negro, and detain them in the stockade of the post's military prison for several hours.

Saying that the investigators will get to the bottom of the killing and prejudiced treatment of Negro members, Col. Elliott says that basis for official action against any officer or soldier will be determined fairly.

FT. BRAGG INVESTIGATORS BLAME M.P.'S FOR LOW MORALE

SEP 14 1941

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Curtiss Todd, NAACP attorney and special investigator for the association at Fort Bragg, reported on a visit to the national office last week, that the main sources of the difficulty at the camp are the military police who are overbearing and too anxious to show their authority, plus the fact that Negro soldiers have not been provided with recreational facilities.

No Recreation

Describing the restricted area in Fayetteville, the nearest town, Mr. Todd stated that there are only a few "juke joints, dives and the like," where colored soldiers can seek diversion. They can go into none of the theaters or better eating places. The Negro district is very small, and there is even less freedom of movement than is usual in southern towns.

Recreational halls and facilities for the entertainment of colored soldiers are being provided by camp authorities now, but, Mr. Todd stated, only because of the recent incident.

Morale Low

He also reported that the morale of the soldiers was low. "Most of them," he said, "take a fatalistic attitude. They know they have their backs to the wall, but they also know there is nothing they can do about it."

Mr. Todd talked with men from Oklahoma, Mississippi and Michigan, and observed that all of them want desperately to be moved.

SEP 14 1941

Mr. Todd declared he'd reached the conclusion that there will be no racial peace until the attitude of the military police is changed or until colored soldiers are taken out of southern camps.

Civilian, Two Military Police Must Face Trial

Resented Fact He Was From Northern State

RUSTON, La. — (By Jimmy Sanders for ANP)—Pvt Dennis Hill, Detroit selectee, member of the 94th engineer battalion, is in an army base hospital near here, and two military police, one city policeman and one civilian, all white, are awaiting trial for wantonly and brutally attacking and beating Hill a mile south of this town.

Private Hill in an affidavit to investigating military authorites affirms that he, Robert Jones and Willie Nunley came to Ruston from the camp to take a shower at the USO and use a telephone. Hill declares that as he and Jones were walking along the street a white civilian in a large truck passed and ordered them off the street. Hill told the white man to drive on the right side of the street. Hill declares that the white man then called them a vile name. He and Jones laughed and walked on. This evidently angered the white man who stopped the truck and started to get out with a crank in his hand but was held back by a colored man who was riding with him. The car drove away, and Hill

DRIVEN FROM CITY

The soldiers then met and engaged in conversation a young woman about a block from the colored USO. In a short while the white man returned in a car with a city policeman and two MP's. According to Hill the four men came over to where he and Jones were talking to the girl and ordered them to put up their hands. The MP's searched them as the civilian struck them several times with a blackjack. They were then forced into a police car and driven out of town.

During the trip the civilian is alleged to have said, "I am going to show your northern 'n....rs' how to act in the south." He told the MP's that Hill had called him a vile name. "But when I finish with him he won't do it anymore." Hill denied the accusation, and one of the MP's told him to shut up. Hill and Jones were then told by the MP that they were from the 94th engineers, and that they were the men that the MP's wanted.

BEATEN BY CIVILIAN

The car was stopped and Hill ordered out; Jones was told to remain in the car. Hill than asked policeman what it was all about. The officer said, "I don't know; I'm not with you. Get out." He was forced out of the car and the civilian began beating him with a blackjacks as the policeman held a pistol on him. When he tried to escape he was told that he would be shot if he ran.

The MP then took the officer's gun and held it on him while the civilian continued to beat him. Finally he was turned over to the MP's and the six men started back to town. Within a few blocks of USO, he and Jones were put out of the car and told to let that be a lesson to them. The car, a Louisiana car, bore the license number 7278.

Before this disturbance had time to cool, what might have been just as serious an incident threatened at the evacuation hospital. According to Pvt. C. N. Mitchell of Saginaw, Mich., who was at the replacement center awaiting transfer to his outfit, the day following the beating of Hill a city policeman entered the hospital ward where were confined several soldiers of the 94th and the 48th Q.M.C. Mitchell avers that the and asked the men where they policeman walked between the cots were from. One soldier replied that they were from Ft. Custer. The officer said, "Well you northern niggers want to understand that we got laws here, and ya' gotta' abide by them." He proceeded to curse the men. One of the men cursed back.

MP INTERVENES

Mitchell declares that the policeman then drew his gun and threatened to arrest the bed ridden soldier. Any arm captain is alleged to have stood by and said nothing. A little farther away stood an MP, evidently a northern soldier. When the captain still hesitated to intervene, the MP saluted his superior officer and came up with his .45 automatic.

"Forget it," the MP snapped. He pointed the gun at the policeman. "I'm here to take care of these men, and if any arresting is done I'll do it." The MP told the civilian officer to "get the hell out fast." The policeman left.

Gen. Davis Files Report On Ft. Bragg

SEP 27 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—General Davis' report on the situation at Fort Bragg, N. C., in its preliminary form, covers 600 pages and is in the hands of officials of the War department, it was reported last week.

Associated with the general in his investigation of conditions at the camp were Lt. Col. R. L. Hunter of the investigation division and Col. Edward Hanford of the chief inspectors division.

The three made a thorough investigation of the conditions bringing about the recent disturbances in the camp and among the recommendations are the following:

The dispatching of an experienced officer, trained in police work, to be provost marshal at the camp and to train and organize fense areas.

In a recent report on the operation of this non-discrimination regulation in the defense housing program it was disclosed that Negro skiled and unskilled workers employed on these projects had earned nearly a million and a half dollars.

A. J. Sarre', director of personnel of the Federal Works Agency and W. J. Trent Jr., racial relations officer in the personnel division. will give special attention to the enforcement of the regulation

Former Bragg Head Gets Miss. ROTC Job

OCT 18 1941

NEW YORK. — Col. Charles B. Elliott, who was commander in charge at Fort Bragg at the time of the double killing there, has been given the post of head of the ROTC at the University of Mississippi, a virtual demotion, the NAACP learned this week.

The Mississippi school, located at Starvkille, has an enrollment of 2,103 students. At Fort Bragg, Col. Elliott commanded 6,500 colored and 46,000 white troops.

"N--- Walk All over You"

OCT 18 1941

At the time of the double killing at Fort Bragg in August, Col. Elliott is reported to have stated: "Anything can happen up in Washington. It's gotten so the n--- walk all over you up there."

In answer to reporters' queries regarding discrimination at Fort Bragg under his command, Col. Elliott allegedly explained that the shiny brass-and-porcelain water cooler labelled "white" and the battered iron fountain labelled "colored" in the foyer of post headquarters was due to the high venereal rate among colored.

Signs Have Disappeared

The signs of segregation on the cooler at post headquarters have now been removed. The iron fountain is gone and everybody drinks from the same cooler in paper cups, latest reports state.

COURIER REPORTS TO WAR DEP'T ON BRAGG

AUG 30 1941

'Trouble Due To South's Jim-Crow Pattern'

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 28—Detailed report on discriminations practiced against Negro soldiers, covering the outbreaks at Fort Bragg and Gurdon and Prescott, Ark., was made last Friday afternoon by representatives of The Courier in a conference with War Department officials.

AUG 30 1941

Participating in the conference on behalf of the War Department were Lieut. Col. Ernest Dupuy and Major David P. Page, of the Public Relations Bureau; Lieut. Col. Quincey Scott, of the Morale Branch; Major Karl R. Bendetson, of the Judge Advocate General's Office, and Lieut. Col. Rosser L. Hunter, of the Inspector General's Office. Representing The Courier were: P. L. Prattis, executive editor, and William G. Nunn, managing editor.

Colonel Hunter had just returned from Fort Bragg, where, with Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, he had been sent by the Secretary of War to conduct an independent investigation into the fatal shootnig there two weeks ago.

The Courier representatives charged that recent outbreaks at army camps, involving colored soldiers, were traceable to a discriminatory jim-crow pattern in Southern Army camps.

This jim-crow pattern, they charged, sprung from an adoption by the War Department of the South's attitude toward Negroes. They specifically attacked the present "military police" system, and urged immediate action.

AUG 30 1941

Secretary of War Stimson is in possession of the facts as presented by Colonel Hunter, and statement is shortly expected from his office.

Soldiers, MP's Clash at Fla. Army Station

AUG 30 1941

McDILL FIELD, Fla.—Colored soldiers and white military policemen clashed here at a bus stop on last Monday night during which several soldiers were severely beaten by the military policemen and all later abused by one of the commanding officers.

According to the report of a member of the 810th Engineer Battalion, a group of soldiers had sought to board a bus to go into Tampa when they were told that the bus for colored soldiers would follow. After waiting more than half an hour, the men sought to board another bus, but were again refused and told to walk into town.

A heated argument ensued during which several of the soldiers were struck with night sticks by white military police. A tense situation existed when a truck load of military policemen arrived but further disturbance was averted by the arrival of a bus which the colored soldiers boarded.

Ordered to Guard House

The bus had traveled no more than a block when it was halted by a commanding officer and directed to the guard house. Upon arrival at the guard house, the soldiers were ordered out, lined up and searched.

A colored soldier proceeded to explain to the officer what had happened, pointing out that the military policemen had been grossly discourteous and repeatedly called the men "n-----."

The officer allegedly stated that he had not given the military policemen orders to call the colored soldiers "n----," but that that is all they are and as long as they stay in the army the difference between colored and white soldiers will be made known to them.

AUG 30 1941

Men Ask Investigation

No further prosecution of the men who engaged in the clash was reported. In the meantime, members of the battalion are asking the NAACP and other organizations to push an investigation of the incident and other discriminatory practices at the army station.

NAACP Repeats Requests For Civilian-Military Board To Investigate "M. P." Situation

NEW YORK—(SNS)—Assurances from the War Department and Gen. Edwin W. Watson, on behalf of Pres. Roosevelt, that the killings at Fort Bragg, N. C., involving military police and Negro soldiers would be fully investigated are not sufficient, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People stated this week.

General Watson, who is secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, wrote the NAACP that General B. O. Davis, as Assistant Inspector General of the Army, is in charge of the Fort Bragg investigation, and that General Gullion, Judge Advocate General of the Army, recently appointed Provost Marshal General, has been charged with the direction and coordination of all military police activities.

"Supervision of this experienced senior officer should be sufficient to remove any ground for charges of racial discrimination on the part of military police personnel," Watson wrote.

The NAACP replied that, with all respect to General Gullion, his supervision may not be sufficient for this issue goes beyond one of racial discrimination, though that is the most acute aspect.

The Association pointed out that it believes a civilian or civilian-military board appointed by the President to make a thorough investigation of the entire military police situation is "imperative, if further difficulties are to be avoided." It stated that the appointment of such a board would serve to guarantee that no whitewashing of the faces would occur and it "could and should complement and greatly enhance the value of General Gullion's action."

The request that the President appoint such a board was renewed.

In answer to the NAACP's telegram, the War Department simply replied that it is conducting an investigation at Fort Bragg and that "when conclusions have been reached, the public will be fully informed."

On last Friday, Senator Alben Barkley was informed in a letter from the NAACP that the Senate must bear part of the responsibility for the outbreaks in military camps, of which Fort Bragg, and the Prescott, Arkansas, incicent where Negro soldiers were insulted and bullied by white patrolmen, are dramatic examples. "Had the Senate last February acted with the same promptness on Senate Resolution 75 as it has on other national defense matters, it is entirely likely that these grave outbreaks could have been avoided," the NAACP said.

It was emphasized that it is still not to late for the Senate to act on this matter, and that the whole national defense program is being jeopardized by the destruction of morale not only of Negroes but also of other elements of the population.

HITLERISM AT HOME

AUG 23 1941

It is difficult to comment with calmness and restraint on the Nazi-like persecution of colored American soldiers in Fayetteville and Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Here were men serving their country in time of stress and in their country's uniform being baited, bullied, humiliated, beaten and, in one instance killed, with cruel, cold and sadistic calculation, by white men in that same uniform detailed to maintain law and order.

Here were soldiers who had committed no crime whatever (except the American "crime" of being colored), menaced with revolvers, clubbed, cursed and punched to bloodines; insulted, robbed and compelled to sit on the ground for hours with folded arms for no reason except that they were hated because of their so-called race.

Here were Negro military police stripped of their weapons, Negro noncommissioned officers bullied and insulted by inferiors who happened to be white, a Negro commissioned officer subjected to unparalleled indignities—all because, and only because, they were colored and therefore considered helpless prey for sadistic Negrophobes.

And now that this horror has happened amid hypocritical calls to defend democracy, it is time to fix the blame where it belongs; on the War Department.

With craven spirit the War Department has bowed from the beginning of the national emergency to the doctrine of white supremacy and racial separatism with a zeal that Dr. Joseph Goebbels would regard as commendable.

Far from insisting that Negro soldiers must be treated as other soldiers, it has cooperated with the traditional Ku Klux spirit of the unreconstructed South until discrimination and segregation have become military law.

This is Hitlerism and nothing but Hitlerism, and the War Department cannot avoid responsibility.

We Negroes demand, as we have every right to demand, that disgraced the U.S. Army over 20 years ago; that there those guilty of this crime against humanity and national unity be quickly and severely punished.

Nothing short of the most drastic punishment of officers and enlisted men among the white military police will satisfy a justifiably aroused Negro people.

AUG 23 1941

American Negroes simply will not stand such intolerable terrorism directed against their sons, brothers and husbands conscripted against their will to fight for a democracy so flagrantly denied them.

THE MYTH OF RACE EQUALITY IN THE ARMY

AUG 23 1941

was effectively exploded by the recent shooting at Fort Bragg, involving the death of one Negro and one white soldier. Eyewitnesses declare that the affair started when a Southern white M. P. boarded a bus and began to beat up a Negro private who was objectionably drunk. Another Negro intervened to ask that the first, who had been seriously hurt, be taken to a hospital or a doctor. When the M. P. began to beat the second Negro for interfering, the latter seized the M. P.'s gun and shot him, only to be shot dead by another M. P. Following this affair white M. P.'s seized another bus load of Negro soldiers and forced them to go to the M. P. headquarters, where they were kept all night. White M. P.'s walked up and down among them, preventing them from sleeping. A Negro sergeant who protested was ordered to stand against the wall with his hands above his head and kept in that position for half an hour. Many other Negroes who happened to be in town that night, but were in no way involved in the shooting, were beaten and prevented from making any protest. We have no doubt that the Administration sincerely desires to accord equal rights to our Negro soldiers. A few days after the Fort Bragg incident Under Secretary of War Patterson, appearing on a nation-wide radio program, praised the heroism and devotion of our Negro servicemen. But fine words in Washington do not make up for discrimination, and worse, in the army camps. The army must be made to realize that race equality is one of the basic rights it was created to defend.

NAACP Protests Evident Lack Of Interest In Probing Shooting

NEW YORK — Leveling criticism at Fort Bragg authorities, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People drew a parallel between the case of a northern white draftee who was sentenced to 10 years and nine months at hard labor for refusing to clean his quarters, and the case of the military police there who bullied and insulted Negro soldiers and officers after the shooting of a Negro private and a white sergeant August 6.

Sergeant Russell Owens was acquitted last week for the shooting of Private Ned Turman in the fracas on a bus bound for the camp. Acquittal came from General court from which there is no appeal. Other military policemen and white soldiers at the camp who had a hand in the round-up, disarming and insulting of Negroes on the night of August 6, have not been punished.

The N.A.A.C.P. stated that if such drastic punishment can be meted out to a soldier for not cleaning his quarters and for "spitting on the floor," Fort Bragg authorities should be made to explain their failure to prosecute the soldiers who swore at, bullied, and inflicted unnecessary indignities on fellow soldiers and superior officers.

This is further evidence, said the association, that routine army procedure is not satisfactory or sufficient to deal with the conditions arising from the conflict between colored soldiers and prejudiced military and civil authorities in the South.

Hitler Tactics Rapped By Judge

CAMP ROBINSON, La.—(SNS)—Charged with helping a civilian police officer to beat up a Negro soldier with one of their own blackjacks, two white military policemen attaches to Camp Robinson in Louisiana, were recently sentenced to a month's hard labor, reduction in rank, and fined two thirds of their salaries by Major Lester Davidson, of Camp Robinson, court martial trial judge in the case.

Major Davidson, in summing up the case against the men, was scathing in his denunciation of any indulgence of Hitlerism in the United States Army. In a direct appeal to the Negro people of the South, he gave assurance that the bill of rights would be upheld in and around his camp, which is located near Ruston, Louisiana.

NOV 13 1941

FAILED TO COMMENT

Although War Department officials said they could not comment on the case until a report had been filed here, Col. I. A. Lovett, assistant public relations chief indicated that the War Department had now come to regard severe punishment in such cases as routine.

"Certainly the War Department is interested in doing everything possible to maintain the highest morale among all sections of the armed forces," he said, "and we want to keep the efficiency of our men up to a high level. We know that men will make mistakes, that is only human, but whenever these mistakes are made it is the policy of the War Department to correct them and punish those responsible."

The story of the case of Major Davidson's statement as it appeared in the Souix City Journal, follows:

NOV 13 1941

STORY IS TOLD

Maj. Lester Davidson, Souix City, of Camp Robinson, La., recently officiated as trial judge advocate (prosecutor) at a military trial which attracted considerable attention, the trial having taken place at Shreveport, La.

"The defendants were two white members of the military police who had been court-martialed on charges that they had aided and abetted in the beating of a Negro soldier by a white civilian near Ruston during army maneuvers.

"By ruling of the special court, the accused men were reduced from rank of privates first class to privates, sentenced to serve one month at hard labor and fined two-thirds of a month's salary.

"The Shreveport Times gave the trial a writeup in considerable detail, indicating the significance apparently attached to the court's ruling.

"According to that newspaper, testimony was that the civilian, while driving a truck, got into a 'cursing altercation' with two Negro soldiers on the sidewalk; that, when the civilian started to get out of his truck, one of the Negro soldiers drew a knife and two Negro civilians in the truck held the white civilian in the truck; that the civilian reported the matter to a civilian policeman, and that the civilian policeman picked up two M. P.'s (military policemen) and took the offending Negro soldiers into custody.

"It is alleged at the trial that the military policemen ordered the two Negro soldiers to get into the civil policeman's car; that the Negro soldiers were driven into the woods, that there one of the Negro soldiers was ordered to get out of the car, and that the civilian truck driver then was allowed to beat the Negro soldier with a blackjack taken from one of the military policemen; that the military policemen did not report the matter to any senior officer.

"In his closing speech Maj. Davidson declared that the case involved a highly important principle of American citizenship. He said colored folks in the south had learned not to expect justice from white neighbors, and that the verdict in this case would apprise them whether or not there was any more justice in the army and any more respect for the constitution and especially the bill of rights. He said persecution, intolerance and bullying were glorified in Germany, and it was just such things the new United States army was being organized to fight. If the Negro was to be treated unjustly not only in civil life, but in the army as well, why, asked Maj. Davidson, should he want to go to war to help prevent another country from treating white people the same way?"

Same Gun Used, War Dept. Says

White and Negro Soldiers Shot With Same Gun

NOV 22 1941

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The killer of a Negro private and a white sergeant of military police in a row on a bus at Fort Bragg, N. C., on the night of August 6, is still unknown, it was asserted by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, in a letter to the NAACP this week.

NOV 28 1941

All reports at the time of the shooting agreed that Sergeant E. L. Hargrave, white military policeman, had been killed by Private Ned Turman, colored, who, in turn, was killed by Sergeant Russell Owens, another white military policeman.

These accounts were given by the daily papers, the Associated Press, Negro weekly papers, a personal investigator for the N. A. A. C. P., a reporter for the New York newspaper, P. M., and eye-witnesses.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

Despite all this, Secretary Stimson stated in his letter to the N. A. A. C. P. that an an examination of the bullets showed that both Hargrave and Turman were killed by bullets from Hargrave's gun.

Secretary Stimson asserts that Sergeant Russell Owens was using a different type of ammunition from that used by Hargrave, and none of his bullets were found in the bodies of the dead or wounded men.

The official account of the incident, as related by Secretary Stimson, declared:

FBI EXAMINES BULLETS

"The bullets taken from the bodies of Sergeant Hargrave and Private Turman were identified by Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratory examination to be of exactly similar manufacture and type (Remington .45 caliber, with nickel-plated bullets) and to correspond as to the extent of thier surface wear caused by age and handling. No other person, armed with a service revolver and known to be present at the scene, carried that particular ammunition.

"Upon this state of related facts, the investigating officers report that it is most probable that Private Turman was killed by the sixth bullet fired by the soldier who killed Sergeant Hargrave and that the score against the murderer has added to it the life of this soldier.

DENIES RACIAL ANGLE

The cursing and beating up of Negro soldiers following the incident is not mentioned by Secretary Stimson in his letter to the NAACP, although the excuse is given that the rounding up of all persons for the purpose of locating and listing "all important witnesses" was a "logical necessity," which was "not realized by the soldiers at the time, and unfortunately, has been largely misrepresented as a measure involving racial considerations."

In this connection, the NAACP, in reply to Secretary Stimson, stated that every account of the treatment of the soldiers after the incident on the bus agreed upon the cursing, beating, humiliation, intimidation, and terror imposed upon the men indiscriminately at gun point.

It was reported at the time, and not denied, that white military policemen "ran wild" in their intimidation of all Negro soldiers, including a Negro chaplain with the rank of lieutenant. All accounts pointed to a sharp racial conflict.

"NO RACIAL CONFLICT"

In spite of this testimony, the Stimson letter asserts, "a noteworthy feature of the investigating officer's report is the finding that, in no respect did the incident itself, or its after effects, acquire any semblance of a conflict of racial sentiments; and that the occurrence did not arise from, or cause any, tendency toward racial discrimination."

Secretary Stimson's letter also points out that the officers who investigated this affair and arrived at the above conclusion included Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, attached to the Inspector General's office.

The Stimson letter asserts that investigation is being carried on "an an effort to determine with certainty the identity of the soldier who did the shooting."

The N. A. A. C. P. letter of reply expresses surprise that the War Department after three months has been unable to discover the identity of the killer. In response to Secretary Stimson's warning that colored people ought not to accept newspaper reports of occurrences, the NAACP pointed out that the War Department "has no impressive record of unbiased treatment of Negro soldiers to which the Negro public can refer and thus discount newspaper accounts."

In response to Secretary Stimson's hope that the N. A. A. C. P. was observing the progress of the War Department in the adjustment of Negro soldiers to the requirements of a high state of discipline, the NAACP pointed out that it was just as necessary for the War Department to impress upon white soldiers "the rights, privileges, and dignity of Negroes as soldiers," and expressed the conviction "that the War Department ought not accept lock, stock, and barrel the philosophies and procedures (of the South) which have created such universal resentment."

OWENS' AMMUNITION DIFFERENT

"Regarding your concern because of the reported shooting of Private Turman by Sergeant Owens, the report shows that Sergeant Owens used government-issue ammunition fitted into a metal clip that would not take the commercial type bullet that killed Private Turman.

"The investigating officers report it to be their inescapable conclusion that Sergeant Owens did not kill Private Turman and that, although he fired twice, he shot nobody. One of his shots went through the roof of the bus. The other left no trace."

HOLD FOUR FOR ARMY FLOGGING AT RUSTON, LA.

Two White M.P.'s Among Suspects Nabbed For Attack On Soldier

OCT 4 1941

RUSTON, La. — (ANP) — Pvt. Dennis Hill, Detroit selectee, member of the Ninety-fourth Engineer Battalion, is in an army base hospital near here, and two military police, one city policeman and one civilian, all white, are awaiting trial for brutally beating Hill a mile south of this town one day last week.

Private Hill in an affidavit to investigating military authorities affirms that he, Robert Jones and Willie Nunley came to Ruston from the camp to take a shower at the U.S.O. and use a telephone. Hill declares that as he and Jones were walking along the street a white civilian in a large truck passed and ordered the men off the street. Hill told the white man to drive on the right side of the street. Hill declares that the white man then called them a vile name. He and Jones laughed and walked on. This evidently angered the white man who stopped the truck and started to get out with a crank in his hand but was held back by a colored man who was riding with him. The car drove away.

The soldiers then met and engaged in conversation a young woman about a block from the colored USO. In a short while the white man returned in a car with a city policeman and two MP's. According to Hill, the four men came over to where he and Jones were talking to the girl and ordered them to put up their hands. The MP's searched them as the civilian struck them several times with a blackjack. They were then forced into a police car and driven out of town.

During the trip the civilian is alleged to have said, "I am going to show you northern niggers how to act in the south." He told the MP's that Hill had called him a vile name, "But when I finish with him he won't do it anymore." Hill denied the accusation, and one of the MP's told him to shut up. Hill and Jones were then told by the MP that they were from the 94th engineers, and that they were the men that the MP's wanted.

The car was stopped and Hill ordered out. Jones was told to remain in the car. Hill then asked the policeman what it was all about. The officer said, "I don't know; I'm not with you. Get out." He was forced out of the car and the civilian began beating him with a blackjack as the policeman held a pistol on him. When he tried to escape he was told he would be shot if he ran. The MP then took the policeman's gun and held it on him while the civilian continued to beat him. Finally he was turned over to the MP's and the six men started back to town. Within a few blocks of the U.S.O., he and Jones were put out of the car and told to let that be a lesson to them. The car, a Louisiana police car, bore the license number 7278.

Before this disturbance had time to cool, what might have been just as serious an incident threatened at the evacuation hospital. According to Pvt. C. N. Mitchell of Saginaw, Mich., who was at the replacement center awaiting transfer to his outfit, the day following the beating of Hill a city policeman entered the hospital ward where were confined several soldiers of the 94th and the 48th Q.M.C.

Mitchell avers that the policemen walked between the cots and asked the men where they were from. One soldier replied that they were from Fort Custer. The officer said, "Well you northern niggers want to understand that we got laws here, and ya' gotta abide by them." He proceeded to curse the men. One of the men cursed back.

Mitchell declares that the policeman then drew his gun and threatened to arrest the bedridden soldier. An army captain is alleged to have stood by and said nothing. A littler farther away stood an MP, evidently a northern soldier. When the captain still hesitated to intervene, the MP saluted his superior officer, and came up with his .45 automatic.

"Forget it," the MP snapped. He pointed the gun at the policeman. "I'm here to take care of these men, and if any arresting is done I'll do it." The MP told the civilian officer to "get the hell out fast." The policeman left.

Four Whites Beat Army Man in La.

OCT 4 19

By JIMMIE SANDERS

RUSTON, La. (ANP) — Pvt. Dennie Hill of Detroit, attached to the 94th Engineer Battalion, is in an army hospital base near here and two MP's, a city policeman and a civilian, all white, are awaiting trial for attacking and beating the soldier in a wooded section, a mile south of here last week.

Private Hill, in an affidavit to investigating military authorities, has related events that led up to the attack upon him by the civilian armed with a blackjack while the officer and one of the MP's held a gun on him.

En Route to USO Center

Hill stated that he and Robert Jones and Willie Nunley had come to Ruston from the camp to take a shower and use a telephone at the USO center. As they were walking down the street a white civilian in a truck passed and ordered them off the street, he avers.

He told the man to drive on the right side of the street and the man called both of them a vile name, but they laughed and walked on. The man stopped the truck and was about to get out with a car tool in his hand, but was stopped by a colored man who was riding with him, the affidavit states.

Taken for "Ride"

A few minutes later, Hill continues, he and Jones were accosted by a city policeman, two MP's and the civilian who drove up in a police car, bearing License No. 7278, as they were talking to a young woman on the street near the USO center. They were searched and ordered into the car and driven out of town.

During the ride to the outskirts of the city, the civilian is reputed to have stated: "I am going to teach you northern 'n——s' how to act in the South."

Hill states that he was held at bay first by the policeman and then by one of the MP's while the civilian beat him with a blackjack. He avers he was told he would be shot if he attempted to run. He and Jones, who had remained in the car during the attack, were later returned to the vicinity of the USO center and told to let that be a lesson to them.

Cop Enters Hospital

Another incident that might have had serious consequences occurred in the evacuation hospital on the following day when a city officer entered the hospital and admonished patients: "You northern 'n——s' want to understand that we got laws here and ya' gotta abide by them."

Heated words between the officer and a soldier that arose when the officer began cursing the men, and whatever might have followed were halted when an MP (evidently a northern soldier) stepped in and assumed authority while a captain stood silently by and ordered the policeman out of the hospital.

Military Police Asked Cops To Act Against Negro Soliders

NEW YORK—Military police of the 94th Engineers division asked state police to intercede in moving the troops stationed at Camp Robinson, Ark., it is claimed by Assistant U. S. Attorney General Wendell Berge, in a statement released this week by the NAACP.

Berge wrote the Association: "For this reason there does not appear to be suitable basis for federal jurisdiction under the Civil Rights Statute."

The statement came in answer to an NAACP request made September 10 and accompanied by affidavits from members of the 94th Engineers division, that the Department of Justice take action against state patrolmen and civilians who forced Negro soldiers off a highway near the camp, slapped Lieutenant Donald Curry, white, made an armed invasion of army territory and insulted officers and men of the division.

STILL OUT OF ORDER

Berge's assertion has been referred by the NAACP to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson with the comment that even if militay police had requested the aid of state troopers for any purpose, it is clear that these troopers had no right to commit unprovoked assaults upon United States soldiers.

OCT 1 1 1941

"The charge that the state police interceded at the request of military police is a serious one," the NAACP said. "If this charge is true, then it is additional evidence in support of the request that the whole question of the military police and Negro soldiers be reconsidered by the War Department."

The NAACP answered Berge Wednesday, pointing out that there is basis for prosecution under Title 18, Section 52 of the U. S. Code which provides a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than six years, or both, for any two or more persons who prevent an officer of the United States from discharging any of the duties ow his office or do injury to his person or property in account of his discharge of his duties, or interrupt, hinder or impede him in his official business. Enclosed in the letter to Berge was a copy of an affidavit made by William Curry of the 94th Engineers which mentions several incidents of racial friction.

A Victory for Negro Rights— And National Defense

• Col. Charles B. Elliot, commander of the nation's largest army camp at Fort Bragg, N. C., has been removed after his flagrant anti-Negro policies led to the needless death of a Negro and white soldier.

OCT 1 1 1941

This is an important victory of far-reaching consequences for the Negro people and thus for national defense. Col. Elliot functioned with an attitude of Bourbon contempt for the citizenship rights of Negro Americans. The raw segregation and jim-crowism which he enforced produced strife among the soldiers instead of unity and the lives of two were sacrificed in an outbreak which shamed the nation and gratified Hitler.

The fact that Negro military police at Fort Bragg are to have equal authority with the white, and that some other discriminatory policies are to be eliminated is in keeping with the temper of progressive developments in the South in recent years. It was the interests of the Southern Bourbons that Col. Elliot represented, not those of the Southern workers and liberals who are increasingly making common cause with the Negro people.

Discrimination in any form against the Negro or any other minority in the armed forces breeds disunity and antagonism where unity is the most decisive need. It plays into the hands of the appeasers, weakens morale and serves as an impediment to full solidarity between the people and the armed forces.

Following the struggles of the Negro people jointly with the labor movement, the President has issued two orders against discrimination. In the effort to break down the jim-crow fetters upon their contributions to the country's security, the Negro people have re-emphasized their dignity and strength as a nation. Meanwhile, the people as a whole, in their desire to crush Hitler, have created the spirit for Negro and white working shoulder to shoulder in a spirit of equality and harmony. The removal of Col. Elliot is a beginning along the proper lines. More is needed in other camps and in other fields of defense. The safety of America requires clearing the armed forces of all such practice as that of Col. Elliot in order that the nation can mobilize full unity to destroy Hitler.

WAS IN COMMAND AT FORT BRAGG ON 'NIGHT OF TERROR'

Dismissal Follows Investigation by War Department and Report by Courier — Sent to Mississippi State As ROTC Instructor.

OCT 1 8 1941

Washington Bureau, Pittsburgh Courier

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—Col. Charles B. Elliott, Southern-born post commandant at Fort Bragg when that military reservation had its "Night of Terror" last August 6, was on his way back to military oblivion today as a result of an investigation of the fatal shooting of a Negro soldier by a white military policeman.

"Fired" by the War Department transfer orders, issued several days ago, sends him from the big job of bossing Fort Bragg, with its 46,000 white and 6,500 colored soldiers to the little job of an instructor in the ROTC at Mississippi State college, (enrollment 2,103).

OCT 1 8 1941

Colonel E. P. Parker, Jr., has been named to replace Colonel Elliott at the nation's largest army camp.

Colonel Elliott is the first casualty to result from investigations initiated into conditions at Fort Bragg by The Pittsburgh Courier and other newspapers.

BLAME LAID AT DOOR OF ELLIOTT

Although the deposed commanding officer was not personally involved in what transpired on Fort Bragg's "Night of Terror," when hundreds of Negro soldiers and civilians were rounded up by white military policemen armed with revolvers and sawed-off shotguns, blame was laid at his door because of conditions at the Fort prior to the outbreak which were thought to have led to the clash between whites and blacks.

The inferior status of Negro military policemen was one of these conditions. The construction of a Jim Crow drinking fountain in post headquarters was another.

DISMISSAL FOLLOWS ARMY INVESTIGATION

The drastic dismissal of Colonel Elliott is believed to be unprecedented in a case of this kind, and indicates that the War Department will not tolerate further brutal illtreatment of either colored or white in the army.

It is the direct result of an investigation by Lieutenant Colonel Rosser L. Hunter of the Inspector General's Office and Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro officer in U. S. Army history.

Readers will recall that William G. Nunn, Managing Editor and P. L. Prattis, Executive Editor of The Pittsburgh Courier, made a detailed report to the War Department shortly after, concerning discrimination and brutality against Negroes, not only at Fort Bragg, but also at Gourdon and Prescott, Ark., where other Negro troops were forced to flee for their lives when attacked and threatened by civilians.

NUNN-PRATTIS REPORT PRESENTED AT CONFAB

The Nunn-Prattis report was presented at a conference at the War Department attended by Lieutenant Colonel Ernest Dupuy, and Major David P. Page of the Public Relations Bureau; Lieutenant Quincey Scott of the Morale Branch; Major Karl B. Bendetson of the Judge Advocate General's Office and Lieutenant Colonel Rooser L. Hunter of the Inspector General's Office.

The report was based on a personal investigation conducted by Mr. Prattis, who was accompanied by James M. Reid of the Courier staff.

After the colored soldier was shot while defending himself in the Fort Bragg tragedy, Major James W. McNeer ordered all Negro MP's to be disarmed. This action was immediately followed by a series of beatings and insults which were visited on innocent colored soldiers returning peacefully from nearby Fayetteville.

War Officials 'Through With' Gurdon Incident

'Without Jurisdiction to Proceed' Under-Secretary Patterson Says

DEC 5 1941

NEW YORK. — The War department has washed its hands of the Gurdon (Camp Robinson) Ark., incident. involving a clash between Negro soldiers on maneuvers and Arkansas state troopers, the N. A. A. C. P. learned this week.

In a letter to the N. A. A. C. P., Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, said: "The Judge Advocate General. after an examination of the record of the Gurdon investigation, is of the opinion that the state troopers and civilians involved in the Gurdon incident are not within the classes of persons amenable to trial by court-martial for violation of the Articles of War"

No details of the report were given.

DEC 5 1941

The N. A. A. C. P. had written to President Roosevelt asking that he charge either the War Department or the Department of Justice with the responsibility for prosecuting persons guilty of interfering with troops and their officers in pursuit of their duty.

"The War Department is without any jurisdiction to proceed against these persons," Patterson wrote.

DEC 5 1941

The department of justice claims that the state troopers were deputized by an officer in command of the Negro soldiers to stop them on the highway, and that for this reason, responsibility is with the War Department.

Civil War Vet's 100 Years Old

FEB 15 1941

HARRIMAN, Tennessee—(ANP)—Residents of Brabelton, colored community near here, at the foot of Walden's Ridge, recently joined in honoring Steve Johnson, Civil War veteran and former slave, on the occasion of his 100th birthday.

Mr. Johnson and his wife, Mary, aged 87, still live in their modest tree-shaded log cabin. Although the years have dimmed the centenarian's eyesight and hearing, he can still hobble about without aid of a cane. He survived three bullet wounds in the Civil War and nine rattlesnake bites in the woods about his home, about 15 years ago.

Black Soldiers Took Richmond

Just seventy-six years ago, April 3, 1865, the hearts of loyal Americans were thrilled by the news, "Richmond Has Fallen."

Four years of efforts, the loss of thousands of lives, the expenditure of millions of dollars, had been crowned by success. The slave-holders' Confederacy had been conquered by the armies of Grant and Sherman.

By divine Providence, Abraham Lincoln was now in position to make effective his Emancipation Proclamation, issued on January 1, 1863, as a war measure necessary to preserve the Union.

APR 12 1941

The Confederate historian, Pollard, gives the following account of the evacuation of Richmond. It may be found on page 735, Vol. 2, "The American Conflict" by Horace Greeley.

Davis Warned in Church

About 11 a.m., on Sunday, April 2, 1865, Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, was handed a note, while attending church service. This message from General Lee, contained very nearly these words:

"My lines are broken in three places, Richmond must be evacuated this evening."

After stating how, upon Mr. Davis's withdrawal from church "the rumor was caught up in the streets that Richmond was to be evacuated, and was soon carried to the ends of the city," Pollard states:

APR 12 1941

"Men, women, and children, rushed from the churches, passing from lip to lip news of the impending fall of Richmond. And yet, it was difficult to believe it.—

"To look up to the calm beautiful sky of that spring day, unassailed by one single noise of battle, to watch the streets, unvexed by artillery or troops, stretching away into the quiet, hazy atmosphere, and believe that the capital of the Confederacy, so peaceful, so apparently secure, was in a few hours to be the prey of the enemy, and to be wrapped in the infernal horrors of a conflagration!

Money Destroyed

"The banks were all open, and depositors were as busy as bees removing their specie deposits; and the directors were equally active in getting off their bullion.

"Hundreds of thousands of dollars of paper money were destroyed, both State and Confederate. Night came; and with it came confusion worse confounded. There was no sleep for human eyes in Richmond that night.

"Hundreds of barrels of liquor were rolled into the streets, and the heads knocked in. The gutters ran with a liquor freshet, and the fumes filled and impregnated the air.

APR 12 1941

"Fine cases of bottled goods were tossed into the street from third story windows. As the work progressed, some straggling soldiers, retreating through the city, managed to get hold of a quantity of the liquor. From that moment law and order ceased to exist.

Warehouses Burned

"But a more terrible element was to appear upon the scene. An order had been issued from General Ewell's headquarters to fire the four principal tobacco warehouses of the city.

"Late in the night, Mayor Mayo had dispatched, by a committee of citizens, a remonstrance against this reckless military order, which plainly put in jeopardy the whole business portion of Richmond. Is was not heeded. The warehouses were fired.

"The scene at the commissary depot, at the head of the dock, beggared description. Hundreds of government wagons were loaded with bacon, flour and whiskey, and driven off in hot haste to join the retreating army.

APR 12 1941

"Thronging about the depot were hundreds of men, women, and children, black and white, provided with capacious bags, baskets, tubs, buckets, tin pans, and aprons; cursing, pushing, and crowding; awaiting the throwing open of the doors, and the order for each to help himself.

City Evacuated

"About sunrise, the doors were opened to the populace; and a rush that almost seemed to carry the building off its foundation was made, and hundreds of pounds of bacon, flour, etc., were soon swept away by a clamorous crowd.

"The Union lines opposite Richmond—that is, north of the James—were held by General Godfrey Weitzel, with Kautz's Division of the 24th and Ashbourne's and Thomas's Divisions of the 25th Corps.

"About 2 a.m., on Monday, April 3, Weitzel was startled by the sound of explosions. They were fewer, nearer, and heavier, than the dull, continuous booming of cannon in the south, which had been audible throughout the previous morning.

"Lieut. J. L. DePeyster, of his staff, having ascended the signal tower, 70 feet high, at headquarters, reported on his return that he had seen a great light in the direction of Richmond, but could not determine whether that the city was on fire or not.

"Efforts were now made to capture a rebel picket; and about 3 a.m., one was clutched; who, in response to inquiries, said he belonged to the 37th Virginia artillery, but could tell neither where his regiment nor its commander then was.

Guess Confirmed

"Gen. G. F. Shepley, Weitzel's chief-of-staff, at once inferred that the rebels were evacuating Richmond—a conjecture which was verified at 3:30, by the report of a deserter; and at 4.00, a colored man drove into our lines in a buggy, who confirmed the statement.

APR 12 1941

"Yet, the rebel works in front were so intricate, and the ground was known to be so studded with torpedoes, that it was not till after broad daylight that our soldiers went forward—Draper's black brigade in advance—over a road strewn with all manner of abandoned munitions and amid a perpetual roar of bursting shells.

"But the position of each of the abundant torpedoes planted by the rebels was indicated, for their own safety, by a little red flag, which, in the hurry of their departure, they had failed to remove; so there were few, if any, casualties.

Blacks Greet Lincoln

"The day after the fall of Richmond— April 4 — President Lincoln accompanied Admiral Porter in a gunboat up to Rockett's a mile below the city, and thence was rowed to the wharf, and walked thence, accompanied by Admiral Porter and a few sailors armed with carbines, to General Weitzel's headquarters, in the house so recently and suddenly abandoned by Jefferson Davis.

APR 12 1941

"Recognized and stared at by all, his hearty greetings, aside from those of our soldiers, were all but confined to the blacks, who crowded in thousands to welcome and bless their emancipator."

THE NEGRO AND THE NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM

By Joseph H. Slade

JAN 23 1941

The facing of a National Crisis such as America faces today, goes without saying that nothing should be rejected that would add to its defense and secure this nation from the onslaughts of ruthless nations whose wild ambitions are being motivated only by a crave for dominion and popularity. The ability of Nero to fiddle while the gutting flames of fire laid waste the architecture and beauty of Rome does not represent the spirit of the Negro. He cannot content himself to sit supinely by in an attitude of complicency while the atmosphere of national security becomes pregnated with the penetrating fumes of uncertainty. The Negro does not have the spirit to follow the path of least resistance while his defence becomes the responsibility of someone else. Never in its history has this nation faced a greater crisis than it does to-day.

History does not record the time when this country was held in the grips of greater apprehension than today. The time has not been when more millions of dollars have been unhesitatingly poured into the channels of a National Defense Program to hurriedly supply the needs of its defense. Dangers have become so imminent that the voice asking the prophetic watchman "what of the night," brings no reply. And not-with-standing this, I am unable to fathom the reason for the effort to bar the Negro from a definite place in the defense program. The Negro has always advanced in the front ranks with those who are first to offer their service and even to sacrifice life to defend the citadel of the world's greatest Democracy. As to how nobly and fearlessly he deported himself, consult the records of his heroic contributions made in the defense of his country. It is said that the martial spirit was born in the Negro.

Is His Bravery Doubted?

As run-away slaves, they fought in Trinidad, British Guiana, and Santo Domingo. The un-mixed Negro in Haiti rose to the full dignity of a modern soldier. History does not deny that the first blood to be spilt for American liberty was the blood of Crispus Attucks upon Boston Commons. There were 36,847 Negro soldiers to sacrifice their lives in the wars of the sixties. The Negro soldier has a history for which he is justly proud.

If his bravery is doubted, trace him at Bunker Hill, Ft. Wagner, Ft. Pillow and the battle of New Orleans. When this country was called to defend its rights and protect its citizenry in the past Great War, the Negro volunteered his services, and when drafted, none went more willingly and more readily on the battle field than the Negro. Is not America the only nation that bars any of its citizens from equal opportunity in its defense program? Others came to these shores, but the Negro was born here; and Blackstone says, "The strongest claim to citizenship is birthplace." In every part of the nation the Negro has the intelligence, the bravery, and the will to join in the defense of his country.

Whether he is given equal opportunity or not, the rising dark cloud of world conflict indicates a time when color bars will be cast to the winds, when color lines will automatically be obliterated, when race hatred will no longer hang as a stone about the neck of a Great Nation, when this Nation will no longer endanger its future by allowing the mist of race discrimination to obscure its way to a day of "National Defense."

Rogers Says:-

BLACK SOLDIERS FOUGHT IN ALL WARS BUT AMERICA FORGETS THEIR VALOR

BY J. A. ROGERS

SEP 13 1941

LAST week I wrote about the Negro in the Navy; a word this week about the Negro soldier. Whenever I think of the latter, I am always reminded of Joseph of the Bible. Joseph was a great benefactor of Egypt. Everyone sang his praises, but along came a new generation that quit forgot about him and ill-treated his people. Multiply what happened to Joseph by about ten successive generations and you'll begin to get some idea of what has happened to the Negro soldier.

Mr. Rogers

The Negro pioneer and fighter was in what is now the United States more than a century before the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. He came with the Spaniards. At least one Negro, an officer, was with Ponce de Leon when he landed in Florida in 1513. With the Spaniards, Negroes traveled as far North as Virginia; as far northwest as Wichita, Kas., and as far West as California. One Negro, Estevanico, led a band of Negroes and Indians and discovered Arizona and New Mexico in 1537, and lost his life in a fight with the Indians, all of this more than eighty years before the coming of the Pilgrim Fathers.

NEGROES AIDED DUTCH

Negroes also came with the French and the Dutch. They were probably in New York before the arrival of the Pilgrims; they certainly were there soon after 1620, helping the Dutch to build what is now the largest and most important city in the world.

LATER the Negro soldier helped the English against the Indians; the Spaniards against the French; the French against the English; the Spaniards against the English; and so on, but always contributing to the opening-up and deevlopment of this nation. In a great battle fought by the English against the French at Lake George, N.Y., Sept. 10, 1755, we read in the colonial documents of New York, "Our Blacks behaved better than the Whites."

REVOLUTIONARY HEROES

Came the Revolution, and we find a Negro, Crispus Attucks, the first to lay down his life in the cause of American independence. A monument with his name on Boston Common bears this quotation from Daniel Webster, "From that moment we may date the severance of the British Empire." When the first blow was struck in battle the Negro was there also. Peter Salem, a Negro, saved the day at Bunker Hill June 17, 1775, when he killed the British commander, Major Pitcairn, at the exact moment when Pitcairn felt sure of victory.

THEN came a most amazing turn. George Washington, to please the slaveholders, issued an order Nov. 12, 1775, that "Neither Negroes nor boys unable to bear arms, nor old men . . are to be enlisted." But they simply couldn't get along without the blacks. A year or so later we find General Schuyler of New York, complaining that the whites wouldn't enlist. Schuyler, whose army was composed of one-third Negro slaves, wrote: "Is it consistent with the sons of freedom to trust their all to be defended by slaves?" Certain white men, afraid to risk their lives, would send Negroes to take their place.

Oct. 3, 1777, said of the American army: "No regiment is to be seen in which there are not Negroes in abundance, and amongst them are able-bodied, strong and brave fellows."

It was a regiment of ex-slaves, freed at $120 each, that won the Battle of Rhode Island Aug. 29, 1778, which Lafayette called "the best fought action of the whole war." Without the Negro soldier America might not have won her independence when she did.

PRAISED BY JACKSON

Come now to 1814. I can touch only on the barest details as the whole story would fill a big book. General Jackson said to the Negro soldiers who saved the day at New Orleans (Sept. 21, 1814): "The President of the United States shall be informed of your conduct on the present occasion; and the voice of the Representatives of America shall applaud your valor as your general now praises your ardor."

And so on to the Civil War. Abraham Lincoln, like George Washington, also announced that Negroes would not be used as soldiers. But again the Negroes were indispensable and we find Lincoln, himself, saying emphatically four times that without the Negro soldier, the war could not be won. "Without the Negro soldier," he says, "it will be impossible to save the Union. Throw away the aid of the Negro," he said, "and the Union goes with it." That is, if we are to accept Lincoln's words there would be no United States now but for the Negro soldier.

DEEDS FORGOTTEN

But soon after the Civil War another generation arose that knew not Joseph. Came the Spanish-American War and the Negro distinguished himself again, only to be forgotten once more. Then came the clash on the Mexican border in June, 1916, and again the nation resounded with praise for the Negro soldier. The Negro dead of Carrizal were buried with great ceremony at Arlington July 15, 1916. But a little over a year later, during the World War, we find an order being issued from AEF headquarters in France, stabbing the Negroes in the back. This order advised the French not to fraternize with Negroes, nor the French officers to praise the Negro troops too highly lest they offend the white Americans.

Incredible but true.

IN 1918 when the Negroes came home, they were again lauded to the skies but a few months later some of the Negro veterans had to defend themselves from white mobs, even in the capital of the nation.

As for decorations, the Negroes have won them galore. Forty-one have received the Congressional Medal of Honor, which means that because of their color they had to "super-distinguish" themselves. Now comes the disgraceful treatment of the Negro soldiers in the Southern army camps. Search the pages of history as you will, you'll find no example of baser ingratitude than America's treatment of her black defenders and benefactors.

NEGROES AND DEFENSE

By Metz T. P. Lochard

The attitude of the Negro toward national defense and the European war must be examined in the light of a growing, subtle nationalism that conditions the thought-process of the leadership of America's thirteen million blacks. Unable to integrate himself fully into the social and economic pattern of American culture, the Negro has attempted to formulate a doctrine of separatism as a rational escape from the rigors of race prejudice and discrimination. The very nature of the social situation has forced him into acceptance of the fallacy that his people are a "nation within a nation." This may explain why the strident cry for national preparedness leaves him unresponsive; he fears that he may be unable to exact appreciable guaranties from the national government as a condition for his support. His habitual emotionalism is conspicuously restrained in the midst of a contagious war hysteria.

The Negro is nevertheless fully aware of the dangers that threaten democracy, and he is not disposed to minimize the gravity of the circumstances that call for defense and unity as measures of national security. Isolationist propaganda has had no effect on him. He believes in some form of intervention in the European war as an inescapable alternative to actual engagement. Aid to Britian is conceived to be a necessary expedient in the present emergency, though the Negro nurses no inborn love for England. The unmitigated exploitation of black labor in the Crown-colonies in Africa, the suppression of fundamental political rights in the West Indies, the refusal of the Secretary for the Colonies to place before the British Parliament the aspirations of the natives of West Africa with respect to universal education, political suffrage, and abolition of child labor—these and many other instances of rapacity and imperialism have not endeared Britain to the hearts of black men. Realizing, however, that the fall of England, in this crisis, cannot but foreshadow a total eclipse of democracy and of representative government, the Negro is willing to cast aside his traditional Anglophobia.

More than any other racial minority, Negroes have a stake in democracy. Under a system in which they could not [illegible] the power of the ballot they would lose every vestige of human rights. Certainly they could cherish no hope in a fascist society that relegated them to the status of "auxiliary" or "subhuman" race, as Hitler puts it in "Mein Kampf." The Italian invasion of peaceful Ethiopia and the ruthless dismemberment of that last independent African kingdom in 1935, the recent expulsion of all people of African descent from German-occupied France, the Nazis' destruction of all French monuments to black soldiers as "insults to the dignity of the white race" have thoroughly awakened the Negro masses to the dangers of fascism. While the absorption of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, and Belgium excited little emotional feeling among American Negroes, the invasion of France brought quite a different reaction. For France, with its historic declaration of the Rights of Men, with its traditional liberalism and racial tolerance was, in the sight of all black men, the living symbol of democracy.

The Negro sees in the conflict between fascism and democracy a serious challenge to those political principles through which he has been hoisted out of chattel slavery and through which true social justice may eventually be attained in America. He recognizes, therefore, that the present emergency imposes upon his race the necessity of retreating from the untenable position of a "nation within a nation." But if he is willing to forgo the defensive attitude into which he has been forced, he does so in order to secure a more equitable participation in the affairs of this republic. The determination not to surrender his democratic rights even under the stress of a national emergency is based upon past experience.

In October, 1918, a month before the signing of the Armistice, the War Department sent Dr. Robert R. Moton—the late principal of Tuskegee Institute—to France to advise Negro soldiers who had had a glimpse of real democracy not to press the government upon their return for extension of hard-earned democratic rights. In fact, Secretary Baker informed Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, then editor of the Crisis, "We are not trying by this war to settle the Negro problem."

The Negro problem is a major problem of American democracy. If the black man is called upon to defend this democracy, he has a legitimate claim to those rights which are guaranteed by the fundamental laws of the form of political government which he is urged to protect. If this be an incorrect view, the Negro has no reason, except human compassion, to be exercised about a war fought by white folk, for the exclusive benefit and glorification of white folk. He should be given the unconditional choice between fighting as a slave for the perpetuity of a nefarious system and fighting as a free man for free institutions.

In 1917 the War Department, after tenaciously refusing to train Negro officers in established military centers, finally provided, upon the plea of Joel Spingarn, chairman of the board of directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a Jim Crow officers' training camp at Des Moines, Iowa. The man eminently qualified to head this camp was Charles Young, a black man, then lieutenant colonel in the regular United States army. He had a splendid army record. He had accompanied General Pershing in the Mexican foray and received high commendation from the man who later became commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary Force. He was in good health, and only forty-nine years of age. In the accelerated [illegible] of wartime promotion he would have attained the rank of a general in the army by 1918. But a black general in the United States army was too much of a nightmare for the brass hats in Washington.

The Des Moines camp was established in May. When Young came up in June for examination for promotion to a colonelcy, the medical board retired him for "high blood pressure." An entire corps of white officers was appointed to train the colored cadets.

Fear of a repetition of a chain of ugly incidents led recently to a White House conference at which Walter White, secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and T. Arnold Hill of the National Youth Administration submitted a seven-point memorandum to President Roosevelt. The memorandum urged that Negroes be used as reserve officers and that the same training opportunities be given to Negroes as to others. It requested that existing units of the army be required to accept officers and enlisted personnel on the basis of ability instead of race or color. It asked for the abolition of racial discrimination in the navy and recommended the appointment of competent Negro civilians as assistants to the Secretaries of War and the Navy. Some of these requests have been granted, but in the main the War and Navy departments are still clinging to their policy of discrimination—a policy based on traditions of caste and social life in a professional army and navy.

In the hope of lifting his status beyond the limitations of a theoretical citizenship, the Negro has made sacrificial offerings in every major struggle in which this nation has been engaged. Four thousand Negro soldiers served with the Continental army during the American Revolution. Andrew Jackson had no compunction about mobilizing black men in the War of 1812. He said in his proclamation to them, "Through a mistaken policy you have heretofore been deprived of participation in the glorious struggle for national rights in which your country is engaged. This no longer shall exist. As sons of freedom you are now called upon to defend your most inestimable blessing." Some 178,000 Negroes served in the Civil War. Black troops acquitted themselves creditably at Las Sussinas, El Caney, and San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War. Of the 400,000 Negro soldiers mobilized for action during the first World War, 40,000 were on the firing line.

Despite this impressive record black men are still discriminated against in the caste-ridden United States army. Not a single Negro officer is on duty with regular-army troops. Not a single Negro reserve officer is serving in the regular army. Under the Thomason Act Congress this year made provision in its regular appropriation for training 650 reserve officers, drawn from schools and colleges, with units of the regular army. Howard University in Washington, D. C., and Wilberforce University in Ohio are two Negro institutions with senior ROTC units. The War Department has completely ignored them.

The only Negro troops in the United States army with full combat status are in the Twenty-fifth Infantry. The Twenty-fourth Infantry and the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry, which have distinguished themselves in many engagements, are serving in training schools as laborers and personal servants. At present, of the total strength of 229,636 officers and enlisted men only 4,451 are Negroes. There are fewer Negro troops in the National Guard today than there were on the eve of the first World War. The first separate Negro battalion of the 372d Infantry, assigned to the District of Columbia, is kept on a skeleton basis with only Company A mustered in and that company denied the facilities of training and housing. Companies in Tennessee and Connecticut have been dissolved. The Negro citizens of West Virginia have been attempting to form a National Guard regiment in their state but have had so far, no success. In the case of an established battalion in New Jersey, the War Department has flatly refused to grant it federal status.

According to General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, the National Guard has a shortage of men. Yet the army refused to take additional Negro units, which could have been inducted into the service in the new categories required in the program of expansion. All these facts and figures were presented recently to the House Subcommittee on Military Affairs by two eminent Negro scholars—Dr. Rayford Logan, of the Department of History of Howard University, and Dr. Charles Houston, former dean of the Howard Law School.

On June 5, 1939, the Secretary of War, testifying before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations, stated that the War Department was studying ways to provide training for Negro pilots. As yet no Negro is being trained for service in the army air corps as either a flying cadet or an enlisted mechanic. The Secretary of War designated a school at Glenfield, Ill., but the War Department has refused to accept Negroes in that corps. On October 11, Garland F. Pinkston, a Negro, received the following letter signed by Herbert M. West, Jr., First Lieutenant, United States Air Corps, Recorder:

Dear Sir: Through the most unfortunate circumstances, your application was allowed to be completed because of our ignorance of your race. At the present time the United States army is not training any except members of the white race for duty as pilots of military aircraft.

Thirteen million Negroes, representing a vast reservoir of possible war material, are being ignored and in some instances openly humiliated. It is therefore not surprising that Negro citizens are without enthusiasm for national defense. They can have no faith in the leadership of an army or a navy that denies them the right to serve their country on an equal footing with other citizens.

WPA To Feature Role Of Negro In National Defense Since 1619

The role of the American Negro in the building of American democracy will be featured in a series of activities that will be conducted by leaders of the WPA Education-Recreation Program beginning February 9, as Philadelphia's contribution to national Negro History Week."

Dr. Lewis Rohrbaugh, supervisor of the WPA Education-Recreation Program, announced today the programs will include the artistic, literary and militaristic contributions of the Negro race from 1619 to the present day.

Sunday evening, February 9, "The Spirit of Crispus Attucks," a one-act play featuring the sacrifices made by Attucks, the martyr, for more than three million fellow-Americans during the Revolution, will be dramatized by a white and colored cast at the St. Ignatius Recreation Center, 640 N. 43rd street, at 8.30 P. M.

TO SPEAK ON WOMEN

Included on the evening's program will be remarks by Mrs. Celestine Fulchon, a member of the Martha Washington School faculty. Mrs. Fulchone has chosen for her topic, "The Negro Woman's Contribution to Society." Martin Fields and Hazel Curry will render two musical selections.

FEB 6 1941

Dr. W. Franklin Hoxter, director of the National Youth Administration choral ensemble, will participate on the program. Charles Shorter, a representative from the Armstrong Association, and Henry Ferris, Jr., an official from the WPA Education-Recreation Program will speak of Negro life, contribution and activities.

On February 11, a program that includes the combined efforts of three schools and two recreation centers, will be conducted on the stage of the Barratt Jr. High School, 16th and Wharton streets, at 8 P. M.

TO SING BALLADS

The Amalgamated Chorus, consisting of one hundred voices, will sing "Ballads for America,' a stirring song of American life that includes all of her people from its birth to the present day as a feature on the Barratt School Negro History Week Program.

Carl F. Wise, chairman of the advisory council of the WPA Education-Recreation Program, will preside. Wise will also present James Lewis, principal of the night school at Barratt, who will in turn welcome the group attending the observance.

Additional speakers and renditions on the "Negro History Week" program will include Dr. Lewis Rohrbaugh, supervisor of the WPA Education-Recreation Program, Miss Ruth Wanger, principal of the South Philadelphia High School for Girls, the combined choral group of 25 voices under the directorship of Norman Lee, and a pageant by pupils from the Smith School, supervised by N. Johnson.

THE NEGRO AS A SOLDIER

It is impossible to take note of all the great parts the Negro has played in wars of the United States; only the most important ones will be mentioned.

When American and British soldiers were fighting in Boston in the Revolutionary War there were three Americans shot, the first to die was a Negro named Crispus Attucks. In the battle of Bunker Hill the British were fighting a great battle when a Negro Peter Salem rushed foward and shot the British General in the breast. When America was trying to capture General Prescott, a Negro captured him in bed while the troops were at rest. This Negro was named Prince.

In the war of 1812, Andrew Jackson was in command of an army in Mobile. The British soldiers were charged with retreating when a Negro named Jeffe himself as head of the army and rallied them to charge. This gave Jackson a steadfast affection toward the Negroes, and when he was about to begin the battle of New Orleans, Jackson called on the Negroes for assistance. He addressed them in words to express his feelings toward their courage. "Soldiers I collect you to arms, I expect much of you, I know you can endure thee hardships of war and Ibelieve you love this land and like ourselves, you are willing to help protect that which is most dear to man", the part the Negroe played in the battle of New Orleans was distinguished.

The Negroes were distinguished for their fine heroism in the civil war by their courage at Port Hudson, Fort Wagner, Fort Pillow and around Petersburg. At Port Hudson, a Negro was placed in head of a small army. They could not be too successful because they had to cross a large body of water that was impssible without a boat However they made several attemps that marked their courage.

General Dwight spoke of Negro troops not as men but as something more than men. When the Navy flag was shot to pieces and splattered with blood, as a Negro soldier said. "Captain, I'll go and bring our flag or report to God the reason why". When the Confederate were found conspicious in an attempt to attack Fort Waynes American troops, mostly of Negroes traveled through hunger, thirst, storms and agony for two days and nights to be on time when the battle began the next day. The man that was carrying the flag was shot; a Negro quickly seized the flag from the fallen Captains hand and borne it off the field saying, "The old flag never touch the ground".

At Fort Pillow the two armies were weak when the northern army dug a trench one hundred and fifty yards long, and filled it with explosives and set fire to it. The courage of the Negroes had much to do with Capt. Burnside wanting to place the Negro troop at the head of the force.

Later, Gen. Grant made remarks of the Negroes courage in the Civil War.

APR 12 1941

No word can better sum up the position of the Negro than those of Dr. B. T. Washington, "When the long memorial struggle came between the North and the South, the Negro knew that victory on one side meant freedom and liberty while to lose meant a continuation of slavery with a full knowledge of this problem. The Negroes were faithful until the Civil War ended We alwavs find the Negroes choosing the better part.

Negro and National Defense

(Editor's Note: The following is the radio address of the Hon. Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, delivered last Tuesday on the "Negro and the Army" program over NBC, and emanating from New York.)

AUG 24 1941

This is every American's emergency. It is no more particular than a hurricane or a blizzard. There is nothing exclusive about it. There is nothing exclusive about the war that is flaming in three continents. Let me remind you that an aerial bomb draws no color line.

On June 25th President Roosevelt issued an executive order declaring (and I quote) "it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin."

Let us look for a moment at the Negro's contribution to the defense effort. There are 70,000 Negroes in the Army, including more than 400 commissioned officers. Fifty-six nurses are now being selected for the Army Nurse Corps. The Army's Chief of Staff, General Marshal ,enjoys the confidence of these soldiers as he does all our soldiers, and I can assure you that he reciprocates that confidence. For the first time in American history there is a Negro brigadier general, General Benjamin O. Davis. Negro officers are being assigne dto the 9th Pursuit Squadron of the Air Corps. That squadron, comprising 45 officers and 390 enlisted men, now in training at Chanute Field, Illinois, will have an air base near Tuskegee, Ala., which has been designed by a Negro architect and is being constructed by a Negro contractor. The Tuskegee base, 1,700 acres in extent, will be the rome field of the only tactical Air Corps unit stationed in Alabama. We also have a Negro unit with tanks. And we have Negro units in every branch of the service, units which are making a fine record and of which every American, white or colored, may well be proud.

This is a national crisis. America needs every element of her population, and every element of her population needs America. This is a moment when our common danger is of so much more importance than any differences among us that all of our thoughts and all of our actions must be concentrated on the national necessity.

I wat to emphasize the great opportunity—yes, the duty, which the emergency affords the average citizen, white or colored, of getting acquainted with our new Army. The army itself is made up largely of average citizens. Everyone can help to make life more pleasant for the men who constitute it, particularly when they are on leave in or passing through the larger cities. The civilian population of the South and Southwest can be especially helpful in such a collaboration, since the preponderance of our military population is in that area.

No one dare question the Negro citizen's loyalty, and none dare question his courage—such courage as in 1918 too Private John Baker, with two fingers of his right hand shot off, through three hundred yards of heavy machine-gun fire to deliver an urgent message to his commanding officer; such courage as impelled Private Arthur Johnson, struck by a shell fragment, to carry a more grievously wounded comrade a mile on his back to a first-aid station; such courage as led Private Bruce Stoney two-hundred yards out into No Man's Land under heavy fire to rescue a wounded officer lying there; such courage as drew Corporal Sandy Jones, company clerk, up to the front line when he learned that all his officers had become casualties, where he took command of the scattered elements of his unit and reorganized them. Each of these is an authentic instance of officially recorded valor by a Negro soldier. They have been chosen at random from the list of awards of the Distinguished Service Cross during the World War and there are many more.

There are less spectacular, but just as genuine, examples of courage today. Sergeant Samuel F. Baker, stationed at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, kept a fire hose playing on drums bulging with hot oil and ready to explode, during a recent fire at that post. He approached within fifteen feet of the death-laden containers and stood his ground despite the danger and the raging heat until he brought the fire under control. For this gallant exploit he received the Soldier's Medal. Private Robert Mobely, stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., swam out into the deep water of Big Piney river to rescue a comrade drowning, and for this feat his commanding officer has recommended him for the Sodier's Medal. Negro soldiers are making a fine record in efficiency and safety in the handling of live shells in our ordnance depots.

It is my privilege this evening to bring to you a message from General Pershing, who will celebrate his eighty-first birthday next month, but who still puts the safety and security of his country before everything else and who may well be called the father of national defense.

General Pershing writes:

"I am pleased to state that my own experience with Negro troops has left with me a favorable impression of their soldierly qualities and efficiency. The old 10th Cavalry, a colored regiment with which I served in Cuba, acquitted itself with distinction, and our colored troops in France during the World War gave a good account of themselves and contributed to the success of the A. E. F. The following extract from a telegram I sent the War Department in June, 1918, testifies to the splendid spirit found prevalent among them:

"'Exploit of two colored infantrymen some weeks ago in repelling much larger German patrol, killing and wounding several Germans and winning Croix de Guerre by their gallantry, has aroused fine spirit of emulation among the colored troops, all of whom are looking forward to more active service. Only regret expressed by colored troops is that they are not given more dangerous work to do'."

There speaks an American soldier who knows American soldiers. And tonight all America salutes the colored American, and the part which he is so effectively and so loyally playing to protect our common country.

Plans For Negro Division At Fort Huachuca Revealed

DEC 10 1941

War Department To Increase Senior ROTC Camps; Says Opportunities Plentiful For Negro Officers.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—An entire Negro division will be formed in the spring at Fort Huachuca, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army, Monday told a group of Negro editors as the nation began on all-out effort to defeat the Japanese empire.

DEC 10 1941

A conference of Negro editors had been called by the War Department for Monday to bring into the open any question of differences in policy between army officials and leaders of the colored press. Ironically enough it was held the day after the nation had been shocked into unity through the sudden attack on American possessions in the Pacific.

GREAT EMERGENCY

His appearance and words gravely solemn, Gen. Marshall told the conference that the country was in a serious state as a result of the Japanese declaration of war and attack, saying "This is a great emergency".

The general blasted attacks on democracy and said the suddeness of the Japanese attack was as predicted by army officers. The problem of the war department is to organize an efficient and effective body of troops in the shortest possible time, he declared, adding that many complicating factors arise in this program.

In addition to the contemplated Negro division, the chief of staff said the number of senior ROTC training camps will be increased with three more schools to be used. Both Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis and Judge William Hastie, civilian aide to the secretary of war, were praised by Gen. Marshall for their helpful attitude and work in solving the problems which have arisen.

EDITORS PRESENT

Judge Hastie opened the conference attended by Dr. Emmett J. Scott, P. D. Prattis of the Pittsburgh Courier; William Walker of the Cleveland Call Post, Eugene Rhodes and Eustace Gay of the Philadelphia Tribune, Chester Franklin of the Kansas City Call, C. C. DeJoie and J. M. Ellison of the Louisiana Weekly, Ralph Matthews and Ollie Stewart of the Afro-American, Harry Webber of the Newark Herald, P. B. Young of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, Roy Wilkins of the Crisis, A. C. McNeal of the Chicago Defender, Carter Wesley of the Houston Informer, Louis Lautier, and Alvin White and Claude Barnett of the Associated Negro Press.

Col. Householder of the Adjutant General's office spoke on the problems of that office which acts as general manager for the army. This division handles all problems, compliants and such. He declared opportunities plentiful for Negro officers the same as for white officers. The war department did not make the policies which obtain in the operation of the army, he pointed out. Therefore it is not supposed to change these policies which affect racial divisions and such. "The army is not a sociological laboratory. It operates on the board principles evolved through years relating to all persons in the service. Negro papers are alert to the events which affect Negro life and are not to be blamed for their interest in the welfare of the Negro soldiers", Col. Householder said.

GEN. DAVIS HEARD

Others told of the morale division of the army. Gen. Davis spoke on the Inspector General's office to which he is attached. Inspections were made at Ft. Dustis, Camp Lee, Savannah Ordnance field, Fort Sheridan, Fort Dix, Camp Davis, Fort Bragg and at Tuskegee, in all of which he participated. His office has to do with inspection of organization and personnel, to ascertain the numerical strength of men and officers, buildings and grounds, actual housing of men, comfort of accommodations, food and preparation, emphasis on quality and quantity; property, appraisal of suitability and fitness of officers and men and morale. Every camp showed a proper place for complaints and are carefully heard.

"The first colored selectees inducted into service were subjected to propaganda to make them dissatisfied under any circumstance", Gen. Davis asserted. Officers new to the service did not know their full responsibilities. As they learn conditions grow better. The army in the field today is better housed, better fed than in any time in my 43 years of service. Much unrest and dissatisfaction seems to have disappeared. The morale of the army is relatively high and constantly improving as officers learn their duties. There has never been any question as to the morale and conduct of the old soldiers, it is the selectees who have been persuaded otherwise. It is the purpose of the inspector general to obtain all facts in investigations and to present them fairly after carefully analyzing them and administer justice to all concerned.

Most of the debate occurred at the afternoon session having to do with the policies practiced through the office of the adjutant general, since that office is charged with the administration of all affairs with which the Negro is concerned. Dinner closed the first day's session. A field demonstration was held at Fort Belvoir Tuesday. Colored non commissioned officers on duty in war department directed groups. Solemnity marked entire proceedings.

Salute to Negro Troops Will Honor Heroic Traditions Beginning in '76

DEC 7 - 1941

By Eugene Gordon

There were something like 35 Negro soldiers in Revolutionary War regiments. George Washington's immediate command, on Aug. 24, 1778, had 775 Negroes. In all, there were about 3,000 Negroes fighting for the right of America to be a free and independent nation.

Nor should we forget that a Negro had already died—Crispus Attucks, on March 5th, eight years earlier, in a hail of bullets from invading Red Coats' guns. He was indeed, the first American to die for his country's freedom.

Thus the beginning of the Negro American's part in the armed forces of this country. From that time right up to the present, Negro soldiers and sailors have served America with distinction. In the War of 1812, "They seemed to be absolutely insensible to danger," Commodore Perry said of Negro sailors in the Battle of Lake Erie. The Negro people have that same deep patriotism in their desire to defeat Hitler.

ACKNOWLEDGED HEROES

It is well to keep in mind the fact that Negro sailors were acknowledged heroes in the Battle of Lake Erie and in other early battles. Since that time, however, some progress has been made with reference to the inclusion of Negroes in the Armed forces of the nation. Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, Sr., appointed by President Roosevelt is the first Negro General in the history of the United States.

In view of the heroic abilities of the Negro in previous battles to save the nation, the discrimination which still exists against them in the army and navy stands out today as hampering the contributions of the Negro Americans to the common task of defeating Hitler.

The point of mentioning all these things now is that a deserved salute to Negro troops is in preparation. It is, specifically, a program arranged by the State, Screen, Radio and Arts Division of Fight for Freedom, Inc., and the Council on Negro Culture, aimed at honoring those Negroes who have defended American democracy from the beginning of our country. This program, called Salute to Negro Troops, has the full support of the United Service Organizations.

The Council on Negro Culture is doing most of the hard preliminary work. Fight For Freedom, Inc. through the prestige of its membership and connections, has already sold blocks of high - priced tickets and has helped to line up one of the most dazzling arrays of stage, screen and radio stars ever seen in New York.

The tentative date for the Salute to Negro Troops is Saturday evening, January 3rd. The place is, tentatively the Golden Gate Ballroom, 140th St. and Lenox Ave.

NEGRO CULTURE

The Council on Negro Culture was formed, according to John Velasco in a press interview last week, "to forster and promote the best of Negro culture in art, music, literature and theatre, and to present it to the broadest possible audiences." Mr. Velasco is a member of the arrangements committee of the Salute to Negro Troops program. He has staged numerous pageants based on Negro achievements.

Mr. Velasco went on:

"There has always been a need for an organization like the Council on Negro Culture, because, in the first place, the cultural traditions and contributions of the Negro to American democracy have long been portrayed by writers, scenarists, producers, composers and artists, through both ignorance and prejudice. There has been, in the second place, too little recognition of the increasing contributions of the Negro to the larger flow of American culture."

This lack of correct interpretation, said Mr. Velasco, "has resulted not only in serious intellectual misconceptions on the part of the American public, but has also worked severe economic hardships and creative frustrations on some of our most talented artists."

A third reason why a Council on Negro Culture is needed is that the press, the radio, the screen and the stage, Velasco declared, "can play a major part in the effort to help the Negro achieve his full emancipation as guaranteed within the framework of American democracy and the Constitution."

AMERICAN DEFENSE

In the fourth place, he asserted Negro culture has always reflected "the most democratic thought in America" and is thereby "one of our greatest strongholds in the defense of America."

In addition to preparing the pageant, Salute to Negro Troops, the Council is establishing the James Reece Europe Fund for cultural activities involving Negro service men. Proceeds of that program will go to the Europe fund and to Fight for Freedom, Inc. After the Golden Gate Ballroom presentation the pageant will be taken by the Council on a tour of other centers of Negro population. The Council's future program includes art exhibits, theatrical and radio presentations, lectures and forums and a bulletin of cultural activities.

"This pageant will show what the Negro people's contributions have been in the building of democracy in this country," Mr. Velasco said, "with especial emphasis on the role of the Negro in this nation's wars. To the Negro people themselves," he added, Salute to Negro Troops "will re-evaluate their achievements and point out the necessity of fighting to keep what we already have while improving present conditions."

IMPOSING LIST

Carlton Moss, noted for past performances in this field, and David Wolff, radio writer, created the script for the pageant. Robert Gordon, who staged Pins and Needles, will stage Salute to Negro Troops. Velasco is in charge of production. It will have 20 speaking parts.

Players include Maurice Ellis, a radio actor whose fine reputation began with his performance in the WPA Macbeth and was enhanced by what he did in the Hot Mikado and Cabin in the Sky; Charles Perry, of the Almanac Players; Earl Sydnor, formerly in Two on an Island and Cabin in the Sky; Eric Burroughs, of the WPA Macbeth. Leonard DuPaur's noted choir will sing, and, following the pageant, stars of Broadway shows will come in and do parts written especially for them in a revue. There will be general dancing and a cabaret.

Two prominent speakers will appear on that program.

There has never been a more imposing list of sponsors. We'll begin with the arrangements committee, of which Mrs. Reginia R. Andrews, wife of Assemblyman Andrews, is chairman. Members include Burgess Meredith, movie star, Hazel Scott, star pianist at Cafe Society and John Hammond, critic of swing music.

Supporters of Salute to Negro Troops from Fight for Freedom Inc., include Helen Hayes, actress, a chairman; and Maxwell Anderson playwright; Tallulah Bankhead Ethel Barrymore, Lynn Fontanne Ethel Merman, Merle Oberon, actresses; Jack Benny, radio comedian; Melvyn Douglas, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Humphrey Bogart, Franchot Tone, movie actors; John Mason Brown, play critic; Major George Fielding Eliot, military writer. There are perhaps a hundred or more others from Fight for Freedom, Inc., just as famous.

HONORARY CHAIRMEN

Some of those from the other side of the sponsorship—from the Council on Negro Culture—include Stella Garvin, chairman of the Council; Romare Beardon, painter; Waring Cuney, poet; Canada Lee, star of Native Son; Hazel Scott; Bill Chase, drama critic; Duke Ellington, composer and orchestra leader; Dr. Lawrence Reddick, director of the Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature and Art, New York Public Library; Paul Robeson, world-famous singer and actor; Bill Robinson, dancer; Walter White and Roy Wilkins, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Orson Welles, noted director and actor; Richard Wright, author.

And Honorary Chairmen of Salute to Negro Troops:

BEN SOUTHERN CASE 'BOBS UP' ONCE MORE

JAN 18 1941

Soldier Who Was Given "Dishonorable Discharge" For Killing In France Has a Persistent Senator Aiding.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16—Persisting in her effort, Senator Hattie W. Caraway, Democrat of Arkansas, re-introduced in the Seventy-seventh Congress, a bill she has been seeking to have enacted by every Congress from the Seventy-fourth.

The measure provides that Benjamin H. Southern, white, shall be considered to have been honorably discharged from the United States Army on March 31, 1919, when he was dishonorably discharged and placed in confinement at the prison camp at Gievres, France.

SHOT AND KILLED RACE SOLDIERS IN FRANCE

Southern shot and killed a colored soldier at Montmoir, France, Jan. 8, 1919, as result of an altercation between a group of white and a group of colored soldiers. In the altercation, he drew his automatic pistol and fired into the group of colored soldiers.

Ill feeling is said to have been engendered between white and colored soldiers in the vicinity of St. Nazaire, near which Montmoir is located, because of an influx of French white women, who paid considerable attention to colored American soldiers.

Southern was found guilty of violation of the ninety-third article of war by a general court martial for killing the colored soldier. He was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged, to forfeit all pay and allowances, and to be confined at hard labor for seven years.

He arrived in the United States from France on June 26, 1919, as a general prisoner and was sent to Fort Jay, New York, and from there to the Federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., where he was received on July 2, 1919.

So much of his sentence as exceeded five years was remitted by direction of President Wilson on November 17, 1919. He was released on home parole on December 16, 1920, and on November 15, 1922, was released from the parole and relieved from further amenability to the prison authorities.

Negro Armistice Rally to Feature Gold Star Mothers

Negro veterans of the World war of Spatarnburg and surrounding counties are planning to celebrate Armistice Day, Nov. 11, with a rally in this city, to be marked by a gathering of Gold Star mothers of this section, it was announced today by M. J. Foster, chairman of the committee in charge of the program.

Among those to attend the meeting will be a widely known Gold Star mother, Matilda Griffin of Columbia, who lost two sons in the war, and who has long been a leader in negro Gold Star mother affairs of the state.

She has asked all other mothers whose sons fell in the war to plan to attend and participate in the program. In order that plans for the function can be completed promptly, she has requested that these mothers write her at 1319 Heidt street in Columbia or that they notify M. J. Porter at 325 Dean street, Spartanburg, of their intention to take part in the rally.

Rogers Says:-

NAZIS ARE RACE HATERS BUT KAISER HAD COLORED ARMY OFFICERS

BY J. A. ROGERS

J. H. JENKINS of Washington, D. C., writes me as follows: "I was interested in reading your article in which you stated that now and then you chance upon a Negro who wishes a German victory. I feel, however, that if you analyze his psychological process you'll find that his is not really a desire for a German victory but rather a desire to see England suffer. Your description of English discriminatory tactics in Egypt together with various reports of English discrimination against darker peoples, prompts this trend of thought, I feel.

Mr. Rogers

"In the eyes of many they are happy to see an enemy suffer who has beaten them for years and take a chance on a possible greater enemy, who, as you state, may rob them 'wholesale.' This trend to me at least appears understandable.

SEEK HITLER'S ATTIUDE

"WHAT IN reality is Hitler's attitude towards darker peoples When as he does in Mein Kampf describes them as half-apes does he refer to cultured American Negroes whom he has never known or to African savages in the raw? Why could photographs of black athletes talking to German girls openly on a beach in Germany appear in Flash Magazine (colored). This and other one of the athletes (black) walking along a road in Hitler's town with a German girl also appeared about a year ago.

"Why does Hitler line up with dark Japanese? And remembeer the Japs are no fools in lining up with anyone with ulterior motives. Is he willing to see Asia for Asiatics as opposed to England who has reportedly in the past established parks in Shanghai with signs excluding Chinese? Isn't Hitler's racial theory really directed against the Jews whom he hates? Please answer these questions in your column. I am not pro-anything. I wish to know the truth."

THIS LETTER, in my opinion, depicts the state of mind of many Negroes. They are watching the spectacle of two of their enemies destroying each other and wonders which side they must back.

GERMAN SUPERIORITY

The German, as I knew him in his own country, was free from color prejudice. The English were in the Royal Air Force, who train side by side with the white men. The Crisis and The Courier recently had pictures of the same.

However, the creed of the Nazi party, and that does not always reflect the German mind, is distinctly anti-Negro. Indeed, the Nazi creed is that Germans are not only superior to Negroes and Jews but to all other whites.

Sometime ago I said in this column that a friend of mine told me that he saw mulattoes in the German army. It now turns out that they must have been white Negroid looking Germans, who had tanned themselves in the sun. I have seen these Germans in their native land, themselves in the sun, they were indistinguishable in color from Negroes.

IN ANY CASE George S. Schuyler wrote, at the time, to the German Bureau of Information, New York City, and the reply was "The German Draft Law makes it impossible that mulatto soldiers are enrolled in the German army."

NEGROES IN ARMY

However, that does not mean that German mulattoes of military age, and there must be a few hundred of them, would be exempt from military service. No, they would ratther be used in the labor battalions, or in dirty work around the camps.

In the war of 1914, however, it was different. There were some Negroes in the Germany army, and a Negro officer or two. The Kaiser, who was an angel of mercy compared to Hitler, and who was very kind to Negroes, had two Cameroon Negroes in his bodyguard, one of whom, Hari Mambo, I knew personally. The bandmaster of his favorite regiment, Sabac-el-Cher, was a Negro, born in the Royal Palace; while, as I have shown in my "100 Amazing Facts About The Negro," another Negro, Henri Noel, born in Africa and adopted as a son by the Kaiser's grandfather, William I, was an officer in the German army. He was wounded in battle, became an invalid and the present ex-Kaiser cared for him tenderly until his death in 1931.

AS FOR THE British Army, Negroes are enrolled, not only in the labor battalion but as fighting men. And there are now Negro flyers

Soldiers Court-Martialled In 1918 Are Still Being Kept In Federal Prisons; War Department Won't Even Tell How Many Negroes Are Still Languishing In Jail

A large group of Negro and white citizens will meet at the New York Urban League, 202 W. 136th street, on Wednesday evening, September 17, to form a national committee to work for the freedom of all soldiers who were court-martialed during the World War and are still in prison. A score or more of these soldiers are Negroes.

According to Nat J. Humphries, executive secretary of the Welfare Equity Association, a Negro organization devoted to prison welfare, his association has been trying for almost a year to obtain from the Department of Justice and the War Department information about those soldiers still serving court-martial sentences from the last war.

When no reply was received from any of its letters, the association secured the aid of Congressman Vito Marcantino who received a reply from Secretary of War Stimson stating:

"The data requested is not available in assembled form. To gather it would require extensive research in the Office of the Judge Advocate General, the Office of the Adjutant General, and the Department of Justice. Under existing conditions it is regarded as unwise to add so considerable a task to the already heavy demands upon the War Department staff without some showing that it is necessary to do so in the public interest."

A case, which has been under a two-year investigation by the Association's officers is that of a Negro soldier who has already spent 23 years of a life sentence on an alleged framed-up charge of rape because a French woman had had voluntary relations with him.

According to Mr. Humphries," this soldier was court-martialed by Southern officers in France in 1918. He was first given a death sentence, which was later commuted to life imprisonment.

Framed In Fake Raid

"One of the Southern white officers, who had been spurned by the French woman whom the Negro soldier is alleged to have raped, led the group of officers to the French woman's house and staged a raid. The woman offered to testify in the Negro soldier's behalf, but the court-martial refused to permit her to testify.

"Many of the long prison terms meted out by these 'kangaroo courts-martial were received by Negroes from Southern regiments, who were usually charged with murder or rape when French women had any sort of voluntary relations with them."

The Welfare Equity Association has been seeking information about these court-martialed prisoners in order to introduce a bill into Congress to set all those still in prison free.

The association reported that the total number of American soldiers tried by general courts-martial in France in 1918 alone was 16,347. Seven out of eight tried were convicted, the report continues.

"Death sentences," said Humphries," were handed down in 145 known cases, between April 6, 1917, and June 1919. Four were doomed for disobeying orders, one for espionage, five for assault with intent to rape, 23 for desertion, three for rape and murder, and 20 for rape.

"Only 35 of these death sentences were carried out. That most of the original convictions represented gross miscarriages of justice and sheer official savagery is shown by the fact that 19 sentences were later remitted or disapproved. 59 were mitigated to simple dishonorable discharges or limited prison terms, and no further action was taken in 32 instances.

In 1919, according to the Association, "Senator Chamberlain introduced a bill to democratize the Miliatry Code. The grim story that comes out of this hearing in the committee room on this bill can be found in a volume which bears the inscription, 'U.S. Military Affairs Committee, Hearings On The Chamberlain Bill.'

"The following are some of the facts that came out of that hearing:

General Reverses Unfair Trial

"General Ansell told of a court-martial in a training camp in Southern Texas while he was acting Judge Advocate General. Eleven Negroes were accused of rape and sentenced to death. Ansell heard of the case and determined to read the trial minutes thoroughly when they reached him for review. When he received the transcript, he found, as he had expected, that the trial had been of the most summary character and that simple justice demanded an entirely new trial. Upon ordering this he discovered that the men had been executed before the case had been submitted to the Judge Advocate General's office.

"During this same period twenty Negroes were accused of rape in a New Jersey training camp. They received the barest semblance of a trial and were sentenced to death. This time Ansell received the case before the executions and ordered a new trial. Ansell later testified before the Senate Committee, 'I was subjected to great pressure from the General Staff.'

"Many members of the Staff admitted that the cases were not too good against the defendants, but they insisted that an example had to be made whether the boys were guilty or not. They pleaded with me to hang five of the twenty and let the rest go'."

Mr. Humphries declared that while every European country long ago amnestied all such prisoners, nothing is known of the fate of the 380 American soldiers serving long prison terms here. Let these men be freed before others are sent to war, perhaps to meet the same fate."

Negro Skilled Workers Placed On Ark. Defense Project By Nat'l Urban League

JAN 11 1941

Negro skilled workers, at first passed over when they applied for national defense jobs at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, outside of Little Rock, Arkansas, are now being employed in a variety of jobs, according to the Little Rock Urban League. The League has been active in securing consideration for local Negro workers on national defense contracts.

Last Fall when construction work on Camp Joseph T. Robinson first began, the Little Rock Urban Leaegue discovered that, although white carpenters were being referred to the employing contractors in large numbers, no Negroes had been so referred. Clifford E. Minton, executive secretary, immediately got in touch with the National Urban League and the local organization in St. Louis, since the main headquarters of the construction company was located in that city.

As a result of prompt cooperative action by the three offices, the St. Louis company agreed to employ Negroes and the Arkansas State Employment officials agreed to refer qualified Negro carpenters to the Camp Robinson job.

The latest report of Mr. Minton gives the following information: At least 50 Negro carpenters are now on the job at Camp Robinson, together with about 15 Negro concrete finishers, who earn $1.25 per hour, several Negro bricklayers and at least one Negro plumber. The latter worker was originally referred to the Camp as a laborer, but through League intervention was re-classified and made foreman of a crew of 40 men on gas line construction.

Urban League Gets Men Positions At Camp Robinson

NEW YORK CITY—(SNS)— Negro skilled workers, at first passed over when they applied for national defense jobs at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, outside of Little Rock Arkansas, are now being employed in a variety of jobs, according to Urban League. The League has been active in securing consideration for local Negro workers on national defense contracts.

Last fall when construction wor on Camp Joseph T. Robinson first began, the Little Rock Urban League discovered that, though white carpenters were being referred to the employing contractors in large numbers, no Negroes had been so referred. Clifford E. Minton, executive secretary, immediately got in touch with the National Urban League and the local organization in St. Louis, since the main headquarters of the construction company was located in that city.

EMPLOY NEGROES

As a result of prompt cooperative action by the three officers, the St. Louis company agreed to employ Negroes and the Arkansas State Employment officials agreed to refer qualified Negro carpenters to the Camp Robinson job.

The latest report of Mr. Minton gives the following information: At least 50 Negro carpenters are now on the job at Camp Robinson, together with about fifteen Negro concrete finishers, who earn $1.25 per hour, several Negro bricklayers and at least one Negro plumber. The latter worker was originally referred to the Camp as a laborer, but through League intervention was re-classified and made foreman of a crew of forty men on gas line construction.

Especially pleasing to the Urban League executive is the report of the white supervisor over the carpenters, who states that the work of the Negro carpenters was very satisfactory; that the group as a whole is doing efficient work with some of them doing excellent work. The men themselves report fair treatment and pleasant working conditions.

Training Is Urgent Need, Says Weaver

Workers' Parley Sponsored By Richmond "Y"

(Photos, Another Story, P. 11)

RICHMOND—"The first need of the Negro in the current National Defense program is training," Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant of the National Defense Commission told the Institute of Workers' Education here last week.

"As we look at the current program of national defense, we find it is different from anything we have seen before. Seventy-five percent of the labor in defense industries will be either skilled or semi-skilled, and only about 25 per cent of the jobs will be available for the unskilled, untrained labor."

TRAINING NEEDED

"As never before," Mr. Weaver emphasized, "it is imperative that we get training today. Somehow, in the next 6 or 8 months, we have got to develop mechanical aptitudes and expression."

The speaker listed three ways of doing this: first, through instrumentalization of the highly-popularized vocational guidance; second, industry will continue its present policy of training vast numbers of workers; and third, formal apprenticeship, or the taking of young men and women and giving them a long-run detailed training to develop them into trained defense workers.

MINORITIES EXPAND

There is an enormous demand for labor in many categories, Mr. Weaver pointed out, and it will be doubtful whether the demand will be fully met, even with training. At such times as these, he stated, minority groups get an opportunity to expand themselves and their opportunities.

The next few years of industrial expansion will be a period for minority groups to become more integrated into American life and into the labor organizations.

INTELLIGENT VIEW

"The intelligent point of view, towards labor organizations," Dr Weaver said, "will be to realize that in an age of organization it behooves minority groups to become affliated with that organization. Unless we do, I do not feel that the future it at all bright for the Negro."

"We are going to make the most progress when we are organized into groups, and when we know where to put pressure so that we can make our democracy work.

NEGROES DEMAND EQUALITY IN U. S. DEFENSE LABORS

Chicago Group Calls National Parley.

The Chicago Council of Negro Organizations called Sunday night for equality in the national defense program. Action was taken at a meeting in the Progressive Baptist church at 3700 La Salle street.

The council adopted this statement: "We, as Negroes, feel it would be better not to participate at all in national defense than to participate under a policy of segregation."

The delegates asked the government to give Negroes freedom to enlist in any branch of the armed forces.

Plan Washington Conference.

The council voted to sponsor a national colored conference on national defense, to be held in Washington, D. C., not later than Feb. 28. The council also voted to participate in the Fight for Democracy program, which contemplates special services in colored churches thruout the country on Feb. 16.

The council went on record as opposed to American participation in the war to aid England.

"Until America has adjusted her internal affairs," the council said, "so that she renders more than lip service to democracy, she would be of little assistance to England and would greatly endanger her own future prosperity. Uniformity of ideals, spirit, purpose and action are necessary to be achieved at home before we can venture into foreign warfare."

The delegates called upon labor unions to accord equality to Negroes, and asked that adult Negroes be given vocational training in industries essential to national defense. They also asked that Chicago high schools attended by Negroes be provided with vocational training facilities for the youths.

Men from All Walks of Life Crowd Fort Seeking $90-Week Pay; Bias Seen in Job Problem

By Staff Correspondent

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE—Visualize—if you can—a cross section of men from all walks of life, some dressed in dirty or makeshift working clothes, some seeking employment and others working, groups of civilian selectees awkwardly receiving their first taste of army life and you have a composite picture of Fort Meade—one of the nation's largest army camps.

The men who have been lucky enough to secure jobs as laborers are being paid 62½ cents an hour, while the others who cling tightly to their places in line before the employment office, are seeking a similar bounty from the hands of Lady Luck. The selectees are receiving their initial training before being sent to other camps. Afro

Million-Dollar Payroll

For almost four months, an army of laborers, which at one time numbered more than 20,000 men who drew during one week an aggregate payroll of more than a million dollars, have been working in day and night shifts in an effort to construct accommodations for 25,000 troops of regular army soldiers, national guard units, and draftees.

Plans call for the construction of 1150 buildings, including two-story frame barracks, warehouses, messhalls, office structures; 50 miles of sewerage, 20 miles of roads, and a radio receiving and sending station, all on the 2500 acres of land covered by the fort.

$90 Pay Attracts Lawyer

During the past Christmas holidays, numbers of Baltimore's industrial public school teachers joined the ranks of carpenters earning $1.25 an hour for forty hours and double time for Saturday and Sunday, thereby drawing weekly checks totaling $90. One of Baltimore's lawyers has practically closed his office to earn $90 a week out here.

High school graduates, college students, musicians, and persons who ordinarily would not do such hard work, were seen wielding a pick or a shovel or carrying lumber. Many of Pennsylvania Avenue's racetrack touts and numbers writers have joined the throngs.

Cars of all descriptions and makes, bearing license plates from States as far North as New York and as far South as Mississippi, are crowded into every available bit of parking space.

On the roads leading to the site are parked taxis from Baltimore and Washington, whose drivers turned their backs on regular service in favor of a more lucrative income. They are carrying loads of workers to and from the camp. Afro

Cites Jim Crow Invasion

Colored laborers were abundant in the early stages of the construction, but in recent days have been slightly pushed to the ends of the employment lines in favor of white labor.

One man from Washington told the writer he had been in a line from before dawn to late in the afternoon, and had been shunted to the end of the line on four different occasions.

Colored carpenters were at first refused employment, but after a fight led by Baltimore's Urban League, the bars were lifted. A visit to the camp, this week, revealed that 126 were employed.

In a six-day period, 116 of these carpenters had completed their work on ten buildings.

3 Barracks for Colored

Three of the recently-completed barracks have been designated to house the colored draftees while they are being classified and given the rudiments of army training. These draftees are to be officered by Captain Harold Hamilton, white, veteran army officer from Fort Myer, and eight veteran army men from Fort Myer.

Also aiding in this training will be seven men who volunteered prior to the national lottery drawing in October and eighteen men received since that time under the Selective Service Act. Baltimore, Md.

These last two groups of soldiers have been attached to Company G, at the camp, as classifiers, drill corporals, cooks, truck drivers, acting supply sergeant, and one, David C. Tyree, Jr., of Baltimore, as a bugler. The veteran army men serve as non-commissioned officers.

Pay Boosts in Offing

The entire group of soldiers forming the official nucleus of the company stand in line for promotions scheduled for early in February. This will be accompanied by pay increases.

The personnel includes:

Acting first sergeant, William W. King; sergeants, Thomas T. Johnson, William H. Saunders (mess), and Corporal Odell Warren (acting sergeant).

Corporals (acting) Privates First Class Albert Raskins, Scott Goforth, and Arthur L. Thompson.

Privates: Floyd N. Alexander (acting supply sergeant); Leroy N. Bradley, Joseph L. Bailey, Andrew Dennis, Earl W. English, James Derry (post exchange steward), Robert A. Griffin, Harvey C. Kelly (acting corporal); J. H. Kirby, Jake Livingston (acting corporal); Cornelius Mason (acting corporal); Allen Meyers, Archie Moore (acting corporal);

Charles B. Nicholson, Linwood N. Nelson, Darnell B. Pemberton, Charles E. Porter, first class private; Harold H. Putman, Louis J. Siceluff, William C. Hayworth, Walter J. Stewart, Joseph H. Simms, Carl E. Washington, Thomas Young (acting corporal); Alphonso Bishop, Jesse Purvis, David C. Tyree, Jr., and J. A. Johnson.

Has Enviable Record

From numerous persons questioned at the camp, it was learned that Company G has established an enviable record for cleanliness, personal appearance, and for the aptitude to army life. The company shares a messhall seating 1500 persons with white soldiers devoid of discrimination, it was said.

Each of the barracks has beds for sixty-seven men, hot air heat, large shower rooms, lavatories, recreation rooms, a post exchange and a barber shop.

All of the draftees to be inducted into the army from the third corps, embracing Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and Pennsylvania will be sent here from their respective stations of assembly. After a five-day examination period, they will be transferred to the camp in which they will receive their year's military training.

Washington Navy Yard Employs Score of Negroes After Preliminary Training

FEB 15 1941

Dr. Robert C. Weaver Gets Feather In Cap For Effectively Lodging Protest

New Employees Get $8.44 Per Day

FEB 15 1941

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Progress in the fight against discrimination against Negro skilled workers in the U. S. Navy yards was noted this week in the employment of more than a score of Negro machinists at the Washington Navy yard followiing their graduation from the apprentice school here.

At the same time, it was learned that between 15 and 20 more Negro workers have been accepted as trainees in the apprentice school. Following graduation, they are expected to receive immediate employment in the Washington Navy yard as machinists third grade.

The banning of Negro trainees from both private and goverment owned ship and navy yard apprentice schools has been protested by Negro organizations in various parts of the country. These protests have been made to the National Defense Advisory Commission, and the problem has been turned over to Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant in the division of labor supply.

"Once the bans were broken down and we were permitted to enter," one of them explained, "the director protected us from any unfair charges of incompetency which were made by prejudiced supervisors."

The success in the Washington Navy yard is expected to inspire other local groups to continue to fight against bans in other private and government owned ship and navy yards. The pay scale of the machinist is from $7.48 to $8.44 per day in the Washington navy yard.

Negro Employment At Camp Lee Is Meeting Topic

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will hold a mass meeting at Leigh Street Methodist Church tomorrow at 4 P. M. to discuss the Negro employment situation at Camp Lee and other defense construction projects in Virginia.

Projected drive here will be part of a nation-wide effort to assure equitable employment arrangements for Negro carpenters and other craftsmen in the national defense program.

Dr. J. M. Tinsley, president of the Richmond N. A. A. C. P., said unions supplying the skilled labor at Camp Lee have ruled against accepting Negro members, thus barring the way to possible employment.

"If we are to demonstrate national unity in the face of emergency, then we must find some means of offering all citizens equal opportunity to serve, and must not stoop to practices more suitable for dictatorships," he said.

Council to Study Negro Defense Jobs

The Richmond-Petersburg-Hopewell Regional Defense Council, is scheduled to hold its initial meeting at the Capitol this morning at 11 A. M.

The group, which is headed by Colonel Robert T. Barton, is expected to consider reports of discrimination against Negro workmen at Camp Lee and other problems to the reconstruction of the big cantonment in this area.

Governor Price, who attended the peanut festival in Suffolk yesterday, has received a request for an investigation of alleged discrimination against Negroes on all Government projects in the State and he probably will refer the problem to regional councils, particularly those in the Petersburg and Hampton Roads areas.

The request for an investigation was in the form of a resolution adopted by board of trustees of the St. Paul Industrial and Normal School at Lawrenceville. The board is headed by Bishop William A. Brown of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Southern Virginia.

Want 450 More Negro Carpenters

Jobs for at least 450 Negro carpenters are available now at Fort Leonard Wood near Rolla, Mo. Men who are interested in this defense work at $62 a week or more should report to one of the following for instructions and information:

MAR 7 - 1941

1. Carpenters Union Local No. 797, through Wendell Robbins, 349 Greeley avenue, Kansas City, Kas. (Drexel 2709).

2. L. W. Tennyson, president of the Colored Builders Association of Kansas, 1927 North Third street, Kansas City, Kas. (Fairfax 3676).

3. The Call or the Urban League, 1805 Vine street.

If carpenters living outside of the Kansas City area want jobs and go directly to Rolla, they should contact Lewis Boone at the Baptist church in Lebanon, Mo.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

By C. A. FRANKLIN

MAR 7 - 1941

(Editor of The Call)

I contributed 24 hours of my time Sunday and Monday to the question of Negro employment in national defense. So did three other men—two of them employes of the Office of Production Management. With this writer at the wheel, we criss-crossed Missouri for more than 600 strenuous miles. We put up with a few minor hardships. But the net result was worth it. For out of this group effort of a handful of men grew:

MAR 7 - 1941

(1) The immediate employment Monday of 48 Negro carpenters at Fort Leonard Wood, near Rolla, Mo., at an estimated weekly wage of more than $3,500.

(2) The promise of employment to approximately 450 more Negro carpenters and other mechanics on the Fort Wood construction job, if that many are available for work in the near future.

MAR 7 - 1941

(3) The addition of more than $50,000 to the income of Negro skilled workers in this area, with the possibility that this sum might exceed $100,000 on this one defense job alone.

MAR 7 - 1941

I shall tell this story in detail so that others may profit from this one incident and seek to emulate it in the fight for Negro participation in the National Defense Program. And the heroes of this incident are not the writer and the three men who accompanied him. The real heroes are:

(1) The 48 Negro carpenters who defied real and fancied threats from prejudiced whites and remained in the vicinity of Camp Wood for almost a week demanding their rights as loyal Americans.

(2) The Rev. S. D. Warden, an elderly and impecunious Baptist preacher, who turned his church over to the Negro mechanics as a temporary place of shelter, obviously believing that one best serves God by serv-

(3) The 6,000 Negroes who crowded Municipal auditorium here on December 8 and launched the crusade for equitable employment of Negroes in the national defense effort. MAR 7 - 1941

This story really began with that meeting, but we will open it on George Washington's birthday. On February 22, the daily papers revealed that 150 carpenters were to be sent next day to the Fort Wood project near Rolla. Within 24 hours, members of the newly-organized Carpenter's Local No. 797 were on their way to Rolla to make arrangements for the employment of Negro carpenters on the job.

Larry S. Braten, white international organizer for the Carpenters' Union, had already instructed Tom McFarland, white business agent of the Springfield and Jefferson City locals controlling the job for the A. F. of L., to put Negro carpenters to work.

McFarland completed his arrangements for their employment and the first Negro carpenters, led by Lewis Boone, interviewed P. A. McDonald, one of the four contractors, who told them that he was willing to hire up to 500 Negro carpenters.

Mr. McDonald had worked Negro carpenters in the construction of Fort Joseph T. Robinson near Little Rock, Ark., and knew the quality of their work. In fact, he had already sent back to Arkansas for two score of the men who had worked for him there.

The five Kansas City carpenters then reported for work to the Waynesville office of the Carpenters' Union—and there the familiar American scheme of things became evident. Although 25,000 white men, including 6,500 carpenters, had been given employment on the Fort Wood construction, the prejudiced whites of the vicinity banded together to bar Negroes from any consideration on the job whatsoever! MAR 7 - 1941

The owners of the Odd Fellow's hall, in which the union had rented quarters, told the white union officials that they would force them out of the building immediately if they allowed a single Negro union man to enter their quarters!

Other prejudiced whites went even further. They threatened to burn down any cantonments on the project site which was offered to Negro workmen or any house in Waynesville given them for quarters.

The 40 Negro carpenters from Fort Joseph T. Robinson in Arkansas arrived Thursday and were faced with the same situation The Negro union carpenters returned to Kansas City and reported the situation to The Call, and this newspaper located Larry Braten, the union's international representative, in the Paddock hotel in Beatrice, Neb. Braten advised the union men to remain in Kansas City until he could "straighten out the matter."

A few hours later, though, the Negro carpenters received word from J. O. Mack, business agent of the Kansas City District council, to report to work at noon on February 28, and to carry as many Negro carpenters with them as possible. He asked them to report at the First Baptist church in Lebanon—32 miles from the camp—rather than at Waynesville The men left for Lebanon Thursday night, but Boone wired The Call on Friday that they were still denied employment because of the prejudiced whites.

This deadlock still existed Saturday morning when The Call sent an airmail special delivery letter to Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant in the Division of Labor Supply, National Defense Advisory Commission, appealing for action on the case.

Less than 24 hours after the letter was dispatched, two field representatives of Dr. Weaver's office (who were already in St. Louis on a similar mission) arrived in Kansas City and contacted Thomas A. Webster, executive secretary of the Kansas City Urban League. Mr. Webster immediately contacted L. W. Tennyson, president of the Kansas City Builders association, the writer, and several other Negro labor leaders.

Plans were made to rush the two Washington representatives — Ted Poston and Clarence Johnson—to the Fort Wood site Sunday afternoon. At the last minute, difficulties developed for the local men, and Mr. Webster, informed the writer that a car was needed I volunteered my car and services, and a few minutes later, the four of us—Poston, Johnson, Tennyson and myself were enroute to Rolla, Mo. MAR 7 - 1941

Because of the lateness of the hour, we could not reach Rolla Sunday afternoon, but after President Sherman Scruggs of Lincoln university had accommodated our party in Jefferson City for the night, we were on the road at 6 a. m. Monday en route to the camp.

Fifteen minutes after our arrival there, we were in conference with Major Frank Reed Jr., construction quartermaster; L. H. Huntley, project manager, and Denton Smith, labor relations officer. Courteously, the two government representatives asked the writer and Mr. Tennyson to explain the local situation; then politely but firmly, they outlined the Defense Commission's policy of non-discrimination.

To a man, the construction officials pointed out that they had been anxious to employ Negro skilled workers; that plans had been made to set aside Area 19, a whole section, for these artisans; and that an outside local situation had prevented these men from securing employment. They promised immediate employment for the Negro carpenters, who had remained in the church in Lebanon, as soon as the situation was straightened out. Major Reed promised that no violence would be allowed on the project site, and complimented the work of Negro artisans on the Arkansas job which he directed. Mr. Huntley revealed that Governor F. C. Donnell had wired him asking fairness for Negro workers.

An hour MAR 7 1941 we went to the union headquarters of the Carpenters' locals in Waynesville. Mr. McFarland explained the union's position and the outside pressure, and agreed to clear the 11 Kansas City union members through that office immediately and to issue temporary working permits to the non-union Arkansas men, subject to the approval of Mr. Braten.

Forty-five minutes later we were addressing the courageous group of 48 carpenters who had stuck it out in the little Baptist church in Lebanon and loading them in cars for a quick return trip to Waynesville where they would be cleared through the union office. With the men at the church was the aging but active little pastor, Rev. Warden who had sustained their faith during the three days of threats and waiting.

Back at the union headquarters in Waynesville, we conferred with Mr. McFarland and Mr Braten (who had arrived during our absence) and working permits were issued to the 48 Negro mechanics.

Less than an hour later the men were lined up outside the employment office on the project on the project site, and Mr. Paul White, the employment manager, had completed arrangements to sign them up and sent them to work immediately on Area 16. Mr McDonald had already put in writing his promise to hire at least 500 Negro artisans as they were made available.

We looked at our watches. It was exactly 24 hours to the minute from the time that we had climbed into my car in Kansas City. A dangerous situation had been straightened out; 48 courageous men had been put to work; more than $50,000 had been guaranteed to the annual income of Negro skilled workers, an opening had been made for more than $100,000 more—if qualified Negro artisans will only seek the jobs.

A good day's work had been done, but it was only an indication of what might be done in defense, if Negroes themselves will continue the fight for integration into the defense program.

Group Loyalty Required

Now that Negroes are breaking into industry, they must learn group loyalty. Except they are all for one and one for all, they will not survive in modern industrialism. MAR 14 1941

Group loyalty is the general practice. Profession and craft, nationality and religion, even birthplace cause men to rally to each other. There is precedent a-plenty for us standing by each other.

Because slavery was shrewd enough to realize that its survival depended on keeping the slaves disorganized, we had years of opposing each other. But we are freemen now and should act the part.

All Negro workers will not be of equal dexterity. Difference must not be the occasion of a better-than-thou attitude. Other groups vary too. Only if one is a sluggard or nincompoop, should he be dropped, and then because it is better that one perish than all. MAR 14 1941

We realize that group loyalty reverses Negroes' habit. Having been given a minimum of consideration they developed the feeling that there are not places enough for all. That idea, bad enough all the time, is a ghastly mistake now when opportunity is opening up. We must not lend ourselves to each other's downfall.

An extra nail driven by a Negro carpenter to bring up the work of a weaker brother is far better than refusing that help so that all are condemned because some do not make good. Solidarity as practiced by the unions is overdone at times. But like the village preacher, it is a trait so commendable that even when wrong, it leans to virtue's side.

WORKERS SAY THEY ARE FORCED TO PAY FEES TO GET WORK ON DEFENSE PROJECTS AT HITCHCOCK; LABOR DEPT. PROBES CASE

JAN 11 1941

The complaints made this week that the International Union of Hod carrieds and Common Laborers, affiliate of AF of L., is forcing workers to pay or promise to pay "starter fees" on the government project at Camp Hitchcock near Galveston, brought vigorous protests from other labor unions and leaders as well as a thorough investigation by the State Department of Labor under the direction of R. L. Morey, state deputy commissioner for this section. Some members of the union charge they were replaced by non-union members who could pay the fee.

One of the workers told the Galveston sheriff he had paid $8.00 on a $16.00 joining fee and had worked only five hours earning a total of $2.50. He said only men having receipts from the union showing they had paid money for the jobs were admitted through the gates and they remained in the correl from 11 a. m. until 7 p. m. and were finally put to work. Regular members of the union were left on the outside. A stranded worker tried to borrow money from the sheriff so he could join the union.

The men further charged they did not get union salaries and the wage and hour laws were grossly violated. One man said he worked 64 hours and only got straight time. When he complained of his hours he was told, "You can work our hours or quit."

The scene around the project resembles that of an oil boom town. Thousands of workers over the state crowd the gates daily to apply for work—stand in line all day, sleep in cars and tents.

Labor Department Probes Charges

R. J. Morey, state deputy commisioner of labor at Houston, told The Labor News he was conducting a thorough investigation of the matter but the investigations had not been completed at press time.

Mr. Morey, in discussing the matter with The Labor News said, "I am in favor of labor unions and if it were not for unions, working conditions would be far worse than they are and salaries would be much lower. I am opposed to a few individuals, whether in the name of unions or any other organiation, extorting workers out of their monies on promises of jobs. I have recieved many calls from honest union labor leaders protesting the situation at Hitchcock. The situation there does not represent the spirit of honest union leadership.

Mr. Morey, who was recently transferred to South Texas, has been instrumental in cleaning Houston of labor "racketeering" in employment agencies. He has compelled every agency operating in the city to comply with the state laws in taking out employment license.

Negroes Victims

It is reported hundreds of Negro workers have paid money to labor unions at Galveston and Houston with the promise of getting work on defense projects. The "racketeers," in appealing to Negro workers for memberships in unions, tell the workers that unless they join the unions they will not get any of the defense work. It is evident now as defense projects increase, the field will become more fertile for labor racketeering especially among hard pressed race workers who have been on WPA and relief.

Negro workers as well as leaders are particularly interested in the outcome of the Hitchcock situation because many of the WPA and PWA projects, where they are employed now, will soon close and these workers will have to look to defense projects for employment. Since many of them do not have the union dues or are barred from membership in many of the white unions, it will certainly create a very serious labor situation among the Negro people if such practice as reported at Hitchcock becomes general.

RACE BARRED FROM FEDERAL PROJECT JOBS

FEB 15 1941

Tidewater Towns Refuse To Hire Any But Whites For U. S. Production

By LEE F. RODGERS

PORTSMOUTH, Va.—Tidewater towns here are beehives of defense activities, for in this strategically important area are located great army and navy reservations. The cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Hampton, and adjacent towns, form a vital network of defense projects upon which the federal government is spending many millions of dollars.

Unprecedented construction on and off government reservations is going forward, and many thousands of skilled and unskilled workers are on the defense projects' payrolls. Patriotism, national solidarity, democracy are held up as inspiring ideals in the face of the threats of dictators on the loose across the seas.

But despite the call for national unity, and America's avowed opposition to tyranny and dictatorship, Negro Americans are having to fight, and fight hard for what should be theirs as a matter of course in this great democracy.

Old Prejudices Linger

Race leaders, Race groups, and fair-minded white citizens, are being called upon now as never before to take up the cause of colored workers and to combat race prejudice on every hand.

Newspapers are exposing the "crime of prejudice" on national defense jobs. The white papers are joining in attacking the injustices. Pitiless publicity is playing upon the whole scheme to ban colored workers, especially colored skilled workers, and in many instances the protestations and publicity are having telling effect in righting, in some measure, ugly situations.

The federal government said last October in its instructions to contractors: "There shall be no discrimination by reason of race, creed color or political affiliation, in the employment of persons qualified by training and experience for work in the development of defense housing at the sites thereof."

This instruction, while relating more directly to defense housing projects, nevertheless is the ideal of all defense employment whether on or off military reservations, but many instances of discrimination on account of color have been cited.

The Fort Eustis situation on the Virginia Peninsula is a case in hand, in which 1,200 carpenters were called at the Newport News employment office in December, 1940, and 2,000 more carpenters called recently.

Race Carpenters Banned

In each instance of the Newport News call for carpenters, colored carpenters were reported turned away when they applied for jobs. The Peninsula Trade and Labor union, composed of colored skilled mechanics, placed the whole matter of discrimination before President Roosevelt.

The petition stated that, "We urgently request an immediate investigation of the situation at Fort Eustis and other defense projects in this area. As loyal American citizens we demand the right to contribute our skills in the cause of national defense, as well as our lives if necessary."

The contractor's executive officer at Newport News, in reply to the charges of prejudice, stated last week that he had "considered hiring colored carpenters," but had "sufficient white carpenters to meet our requirements." He also stated that there are some 2,000 colored laborers and mechanics already at work on the Fort Eustis project.

Carpenters are being paid $1 per hour, electricians $1.25 per hour, and electricians' helpers paid 65 to 85 cents per hour.

On Hampton Conference Agenda

Race employment on national defense projects was scheduled to get an airing before the fifteenth Hampton Institute Builders' conference early this week. Claude Munsey, administrative assistant to the housing co-ordinator was to address the conference on the vital subject on Wednesday.

A report shows that about 500 colored carpenters and piledrivers have been listed for employment in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area in the last three months. The Navy Yard in Portsmouth has taken on 197 Race carpenters and 51 Race piledrivers, it was stated, while others have been employed at the Naval Operating Base and in other sections here.

On one defense housing project in Portsmouth, known as Swanson Homes project, more than 300 colored workers, both skilled and unskilled, are at work. Most of the skilled workers are cement finishers, and the majority of the colored employes are laborers. There are no colored carpenters to be found here, because "colored carpenters have not applied," an official stated.

Cries of prejudice and racial discrimination are heard over Tidewater, Va., however, and colored men find themselves up against a tough proposition when they meet with rebuffs on the part of white labor unions, coupled with the skullduggeries of racial animus.

The government will certainly have to crack down and do so without much delay, in the opinion of many. Skilled Race workers who can qualify should be given the same chance as all others, fair-minded and forward-looking citizens contend.

Defense Opportunities To Be Explored By Nation's Builders

Contractors To Meet At Hampton

JAN 3 1 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—(SNS)—Negro builders throughout the United States are looking toward the Hampton Bui'ders' Conference on February 10, 11, and 12 to hear from key government and union officials what their part will be in America's plans for total defense.

William H. Moss, Jr., director of the building construction department of the Hampton Institute Trade School and outstanding young Negro architect, is in charge of this conference, which will bring some 200 Negro mechanics, carpenters, builders, contractors, architects and engineers to Hampton for a three-day study. The Negro Builders' Association will also meet at this conference, according to W. H. Aiken, building contractor of Atlanta and president of the organization.

PLAN DEFENSE TOUR

Present plans of the conference itself include an organized tour of defense housing projects in the Hampton Roads area. This tour, in charge of Edgar H. Bentzel, superintendent of buildings and grounds at Hampton will show Negro contractors some of the latest phases in the construction industry. The Navy housing project near the James River Bridge in Newport News, which is experimenting with prefabricated steel framing; "Harbor Homes," a Negro housing program in Newport News; 'Sherwood Park' a housing development in the vicinity of Langley Field and others will be visited by the participants at the conference.

Such outstanding firms as the Armstrong Company, Crane Company, DuPont, and Johns-Manville are cooperating with Hampton in an exhibition of the newer types of building material and their fabrications. These exhibits show the latest advances in painting, electricity, and other phases of the building industry.

The conference will open late Sunday evening, February 9, with an informal smoker. The former program begins Monday morning, when the delegates will hear outstanding speakers discuss "Defense Housing and the Negro" in Ogden Hall. Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean new president of Hampton Institute will address the group at a banquet in the Phenix School on Monday evening.

The Negro's Salary Versus His Worth

Editor, Journal and Guide: According to some white people's thinking the Negro's worth to industry and the salary paid him are two separate and distinct things. I listened recently to an address by the eminent Chester B. Emerson of Cleveland, O., delivered at Hampton Institute in connection with the inauguration of President MacLean and Conference on the Participation of the Negro in National Defense, in which he said: "The worth of a man is far more important than his rights for when we discover his worth we will give him his rights."

I think no fair-minded individual would dare question such a clearly stated truth. But on the other hand we see persons who admit (maybe unawares) that they themselves pay Negroes salaries which are not commensurate with their worth to industry. I can only account for this discrepancy by saying that it appears that the white man bases rights on the color of the skin, rather than on intrinsic values.

A recent telephone conversation with a white employer gave rise to these thoughts. The party in question was seeking my aid in securing a delivery boy of the teen ages (the ages specified ranged from fifteen to seventeen years.) The boy was wanted to work from 9 a.m. until 3:30 to 4 p.m. for the small allowance of $3.00 per week. The employer sought to convince me of the great need he had for a boy by telling me he had lost about $10 in trade that day.

In order to be accurate in determining the worth of the boy to this industry, I pulled out my watch to ascertain the time of day. It was then 2:20 p.m. My mathematics revealed that he brought into the industry $1.88 per hour. This represents his worth. But over against his worth his salary was less than eight cents per hour (assuming that he worked only six days out of the week.)

In my opinion this, as the teachers' salary case, is a concrete example of the fact that the Negro is paid on the basis of his color, rather than on the basis of his actual worth. With the help of God and the Race these discrepancies must be eliminated forever from the earth. The Negro who is able to work, and who has a job, does not ask for sympathy but for a salary commensurate with his worth measured by the same standard of his white brother.

DEFENSE INDUSTRY: WHERE THE GRAVY GOES

Defense contracts are a mighty profitable source of income to a handful of U. S. businesses, according to figures released by Chester C. Davis, National Defense Advisory Commission official.

Of the $11,500,000,000 of prime contracts awarded between June 13, 1940, and February 15, 1941, between one-fifth and one-quarter went to two groups of companies of closely inter-connected ownership. Between 40 and 45 per cent went to six closely inter-connected groups, and a total of 80 per cent went to 62 companies or inter-related groups of companies.

Who are these interests that are getting the bulk of the money American taxpayers are shelling out in startlingly increasing volume?

Well, defense officials in Washington say that one of the two groups consists of the du Pont interests and General Motors, while Bethlehem Steel is the big mogul in the other.

The six groups of companies include the du Ponts and General Motors, and Curtis-Wright, U. S. Steel, Aviation and Transportation Corporation and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, and they got 44 per cent of the contracts.

Ten per cent of the taxes siphoned into the defense set-up comes from Negroes, but it goes without saying that Sherlock Holmes would have a difficult time finding Negro workers in any of these concerns doing much, if any, of the highly-paid skilled work.

At the same time the Bureau of Labor Statsitics in Washington asserts that within two years 550,000 men (undoubtedly white) would be needed in the airplane-manufacturing industry and shipbuilding employment "on government vessels alone" would require 388,000 workers by November, 1942.

If Negroes expect to get back in wages even a fraction of what they are paying out in taxes, they will have to do harder work toward that end than they have been doing.

As it is a few big corporations and a relatively small group of skilled white workers are getting all the defense gravy.

Campaign to Stress Effect Of Defense on Negro Labor

JAN 18 1941

NEW YORK. — Effects of the national defense program on the employment future of Negro citizens will furnish the main theme of the ninth annual Vocational Opportunity Campaign which will be carried on by the National Urban League this year from March 16 to March 23.

Announcements were sent out this week from the league office at 1133 Broadway, New York City, to college and school principals, vocational guidance counsellors, heads of social agencies and of civic organizations.

The announcements point out that although the national defense program as such is an emergency expansion of industrial production and although Negroes are finding jobs therein with great difficulty, the results of this program will deeply affect the job chances of young Negroes in the next decade.

The new industries, new job methods and job opportunities resulting from present preparedness efforts will have their effect upon the economic future of Negroes as upon all American labor.

Have Four Avenues

To emphasize these points, and to show how labor unions, vocational schools and colleges, and civic organizations may take best advantage of today's opportunities, the National Urban League is addressing the Vocational Opportunity Campaign to four major groups of the American public.

Schools and colleges will be reached through student assemblies, parent organizations, guidance counsellors and teachers. The general public will be reached through mass meetings, radio, bulletin, and conferences for other school youth and adults. Employers will be approached through letters, personal interviews and employers organizations.

Public employment services will be encouraged to use their efforts through conferences with State officials and with members of interviewing staffs.

The cooperation of the United States Bureau of Employment Security has been assured by Ewen D. Clague, director.

Last year a total of 71,417 young people in schools alone were served in the Vocational Opportunity Campaign. Because of the increased interest of the American public in employment and the vital issues facing Negro workers, at this time, it is expected that in 1941 this number will be more than doubled.

Little Rock Urban League Gets Jobs for Skilled Negro Workers

NEW YORK—Negro skilled workers, at first passed over when they applied for national defense jobs at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, outside Little Rock, Ark., are now being employed in a variety of jobs, according to the Little Rock Urban League.

The League has been active in securing consideration for local Negro workers on national defense contracts. JAN 11 1941

Last fall when construction work on Camp Joseph T. Robinson first began, the Little Rock Urban League discovered that, though white carpenters were being referred to the employing contractors in large numbers, no Negroes had been so referred.

Clifford E. Minton, executive secretary, immediately got in touch with the National Urban League and the local organization in St. Louis, since the main headquarters of the construction company was located in that city.

As a result of prompt cooperative action by the three officers, the St. Louis company agreed to employ Negroes and the Arkansas State Employment officials agreed to refer qualified Negro carpenters to the Camp Robinson job.

The latest report of Mr. Minton gives the following information: At least 50 Negro carpenters are now on the job at Camp Robinson, together with about 15 Negro concrete finishers, who earn $1.25 per hour, several Negro bricklayers and at least one Negro plumber. JAN 11 1941

The latter worker was originally referred to the camp as a laborer, but through League intervention was re-classified and made foreman of a crew 40 men on gas line construction.

START MAPPING PLAN TO 'PROBE ALL PROBLEMS'

Will Connect Study With Problems Of National Defense Activities

JAN 18 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va., — Representative Negro builders from the entire eastern seaboard section of the United States have been invited to attend the fifteenth Hampton Builders' conference at Hampton institute, on February 10, 11 and 12.

The conference will revolve primarily around the problems of the Negro mechanic, journeyman, carpenter, builder, contractor, engineer, and architect as they affect the construction industry in the National Defense Program.

The first Hampton Builders' conference was held in January 1923. A direct outcome of this meeting was the organization of the National Builders' association, which still holds its meetings in conjunction with the Hampton Builders' conference.

Prominent national leaders will serve as speakers on such topics as "The Employment of Negro Building Trades Craftsmen on National Defense Projects," "Defense Housing and the Negro," "Trade and Industrial Traing of the Negro in National Defense,' 'and other topics of vital interest to the Negro in the construction industry.

The first Hampton Builders' conference brought together 40 colored contractors, who, during the year 1922, had completed work amounting to $1,280,000. The achievements made possible by these conferences during the past 19 years have enabled Negro contractors to climb to new heights in the construction field. This year, over 200 delegates are expected to attend the conference.

William H. Moses, Jr., head of the building construction department of the Hampton Trade school, is in charge of the planning committee for the conference.

Technicians Are Alert

Dear Sir:—I have read with some interest, the editorial appearing in the December 14 issue of the Amsterdam News, entitled "Must Better Themselves," which admonishes Negro technicians for their failure to become identified with the National Defense Program.

At the national convention of the National Technical Association, a committee was formed to cooperate with the Advisory Committee to the Council for National Defense. This committee has been in close touch with the office of Dr. Robert Weaver, administrative assistant, and is making every effort to gain whatever recognition is possible at this time for the organization and its members.

Most of the members of this organization are gainfully employed and until we are approached by technicians in need of employment, or the government is in need of our services by offering employment there is little we can do for the moment. JAN 11 1941

We are vigilant in this matter of employment on the defense work, and look to the future for wider employment for the colored technician.

Negroes Wanted In Defense Work

St Louis Argus
JAN 24 1941

As a result of a conference with Defense authorities there is a possibility that Negroes may receive the benefits of 9 million dollar appropriation for training technicians in the high explosive fields. St. Louis Mo.

The Urban League would like to have all Negro male students with at least a sophomore training in a school of engineering to register with Mr. Walker of the Industrial Department at once. If 10 such persons are available Negroes have a chance to crash the high salaried field. Persons interested must contact this office at once.

Colored Women Will Mobilize for Defense

Pursuant to the program of the American Legion auxiliary the Geo. M. Simmons, Jr., Unit No. 3 will register the colored women of our community next week, Thursday, April 24, for national defense. Realizing the fact that the colored citizens here as throughout the state and nation are willing to do their part in the great program will register the women.

The auxiliary has established and will soon open to the public a center operated entirely by progressive colored women of the community. They will sew for the underprivileged children, as anticipated that their services be offered to the national defense program in the interest of British Relief and similar activities sponsored by the Red Cross in their varied program.

The center, in the rear of 618 Lee street has been made attractive by a group of young women, and through the cooperation of the city the private alley-approach and adjoining back yard have been cleaned and leveled for the use of the workers. Those active in charge of this program are Lorania Eckley, Ruth Orange, Asilee Maillain.

$90 a Week Jobs Provided by Uncle Sam

JAN 18 1941

Carpenters at U.S. army camps are getting $90 a week. Here's how it is figured. Men draw $1.25 an hour for a 40-hour week. That's $50.

The construction of barracks for drafted men is three months behind, so those who care to, work 8 hours Saturday at double time ($2.50 an hour). Eight times $2.50 is $20 for Saturday's pay.

They can work Sunday, too, and earn $20 more. The result is $50 for five days plus $40 for Saturday and Sunday, so the total is $90.

Down at Fort Meade, where hundreds of men are employed, carpenters are needed so badly that many a man who can merely hammer and saw is getting work as a skilled carpenter.

Pool room owners, teachers and even lawyers are down at Fort Meade, glad to be known as carpenters to earn the very excellent wages.

Not only carpenters, but plumbers, electricians, cementers and many other craftsmen are earning money faster than ever before in their lives.

The AFRO found 110 colored carpenters at Fort Meade and there is room for many hundred more in various other army camps all over the country.

After the camps are finished, Uncle Sam has need for workers in defense industries—airplane, powder and steel factories, shipyards, copper and zinc mills, tank, clothing and gun plants.

* * * *

This brings us to the so-called defense courses now provided by the Federal government in public schools all over the North and West in the big cities.

Philadelphia got an appropriation last week from Uncle Sam for machinery to use in teaching adults in these schools.

If there is demand for it, courses will also be opened in blue print reading.

In Washington, vocational classes are running from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m.

To beat Germany, says Commissioner of Education Studebaker, this country must train and put to work every employable man.

This is good news to those of us who have been shut out of work for so long.

From now on, there is defense work for everybody who wants to work. If he is already skilled, he can get into industry.

If he doesn't know how, he can go to the public school and learn a trade.

If he's working as porter or messenger or laborer, these schools are held evenings and nights so he can attend after working hours and qualify for a better job.

Of course, these defense jobs are not going to last forever, but they are available now. So if you want the experience of earning $90 a week, this is your chance.

OPINION

Carpenters Needed

Word from Camp Lee, near Petersburg, Va., that colored carpenters are getting the run around when they apply for work should not be taken as typical of the country at large.

JAN 4 1941

At Fort Meade in Maryland, 300 colored carpenters are at work and there are openings for as many more skilled men. Those who have a union card are put to work at once. Non-union men must have $25 with which to join before they can qualify.

Newspapers are advertising for 200 carpenters to work at army camps in Pennsylvania.

Aberdeen, Md., camp, suitable for housing 12,000 men, must be ready by March. Work has just been started and carpenters will be needed.

JAN 4 - 1941

Carpenters, bricklayers, machinists, plumbers, and electricians who stay in the South these days have only themselves to blame if they are out of work.

Washington has 300 colored bricklayers at work—union and non-union. It could use more.

What with defense construction in the camps, U.S. housing and war industries, trained men from the South have their first chance since 1917 to get located in Northern jobs paying good wages.

If they can do the work, they can get the work to do.

The Negro And The National Defense

Jan 13, 1941

JAN 13 19

NOTE: This is the second of a series of articles, originating from the Urban League of Greater Little Rock, on the various aspects of the National Defense program as they affect the American Negro....condensed from the bulletin "The Negro and National Defense," issued by the National Urban League. By John Bryant.

One of the cardinal points of the National Defense program is the education and training of defense workers. Of the $60,500,000 set aside for defense training courses, congress has decreed that $26,000,000 is to be used for education and training, $8,000,000 for the purchase and rental of equipment, $9,000,000 for short engineering courses of college grade, $10,000,000 for the training of out-of-school youths and $7,500,000 for vocational and related instruction under the National Youth Administration.

Keeping the above apportionment in mind, it is obvious that if Negroes are to share fully in the program, every colored community must assume a two-fold responsibility. First, it is imperative that each organizes to see to it that defense training programs are set up for their young people, putting forth special efforts to place colored boys in the short engineering courses that will be given; second, Negro community leaders must endeavor systematically to have out-of-school youths included in the work experience program to be provided through the National Youth Administration.

It is not, by any means, to be assumed that all of these benefits will accrue to our group without concerted action on our part. To get them, Negroes must think and act immediately and intelligently. And even though the value of strenuous individual efforts cannot be denied, it is clearly a task which must be taken up by social and civic workers and organizations, religious groups, and even social clubs.

Because the NYA is charged with the tremendous duty of administering this program, NYA officials in every city where there are large Negro populations should be contacted, and a plan worked out whereby colored boys and girls may receive the full benefits of the program. Any difficulty that arises in this connection should be taken up at once with Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of the Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration, Washington, D. C.

(The third article of this series will relate to the Army and the Negro, and will outline the War Department's recently announced policy in regard to Negroes.)

Despite Hillman Letter Aircraft Company Won't Hire Any Skilled Negroes

MAY 3 - 1941

MAY 3 - 1941

BALTIMORE, Md.—In open disregard of a letter sent out recently to all defense conractors by Sidney Hillman, OPM official in charge of labor, urging them to employ Negroes, the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company will continue its job-discrimination policy refusing to hire a single skilled Negro, despite the fact that the company is badly in need of skill workers including electrical engineers.

The company's determination to continue its jim crow employment policy was expressed by C. E. Crowley, assistant personnel manager at the plant, Thursday, April 23, at a conference with members of a job delegation led by the National Negro Congress, which included eight students from Howard University, one a woman, four of them ready to graduate from the Engineering School, who were applying for jobs at the plant.

Said Crowley: "I can only tell you what we have said before, that the company will not employ Negroes. Our policy has not changed in that regard."

MAY 3 - 1941

Appearance of the delegation marked the third time that the National Negro Congress has led groups out to the plant since last December. The last delegation went to the plant last March 4. At that time, D. W. Siemon, personnel director also told Congress leaders that the plant would not hire Negroes.

Makes One Concession

However, one consession was made by the company at Thursday's meeting. Asked whether the nine applicants for jobs could have application forms, Crowley said: "We will be glad to let you have them, though, you will understand that our policy is the same." He then distributed forms to the nine applicants.

Asked by John P. Davis ,national secretary of the National Negro Congress, who led the delegation, whether the company insisted on its policy in view of a letter recently sent out by Sidney Hillman urging all defense contractors to employ Negroes, Crowley said:

"If the letter was sent out, we probably have it, but our company's policy remains the same. We will not employ Negroes, although at the present time we are badly in need of skilled workers including engineers."

MAY 3 - 1941

Crowley made the latter statement after listening to Elmer D. Jones, Jr., 23, Howard Engineering student, to tell him of his accomplishment, which would fit him for a job at the Glenn Martin plant. Jones, who has stayed in school on scholarships during his four years, has held a license for amateur radio operator for several years. He has also completed CAA flight courses at Howard and Tuskegee, and has a private pilot's license.

Jones also has a ground instructor's rating in meterology, which he received after passing an examination at the College Park, Md Airport. He has also completed courses in machine shop work.

Pointing out that he has not even replied to two letters written him during the past six weeks, despite the grave situation facing Negro job applicants, John P. Davis in a telegram sent to Sidney Hillman, shortly after the delegation returned to Baltimore, urged the OMP labor director to see a Congress delegation Monday morning, April 28.

Referring to the Glenn Martin Company's continued refusal to hire Negroes, Davis said in his telegram: "That is but one more confirmation of the futility of your efforts to the present time to break down the vicious un-American jim crow practices against Negroes in defense industries.

The Delegation

Heading the delegation in addition to Mr. Davis, were: The Rev. C. Y. Trigg, pastor of Metropolitan Methodist Church; Mrs. Mary Lewis, representing the Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, of the AKA Sorority; Mrs. Elmira Coleman and Dr. Lucy Mason, of the Baltimore Council of the National Negro Congress; and George B. Murphy, Jr., administrative secretary of the Congress.

The nine job applicants, who accompanied the delegation and received application blanks were Beatrice M. Reed, Richard Bancroft, Eugene Butler, Floyd Reed, Liberal Arts students at Howard; Francisco Bello, mechanical plumber; and the following four engineering students at Howard: Jesse Duke, Elmer Jones, Philip J. Valantine and John B. Powell.

MAY 3 - 1941

The delegation was the preliminary step in a long-range action program projected by the National Negro Congress at the Maryland-D.C. jobs conference held in Baltimore, Sunday, April 27, with a view to winning 7,000 jobs for Negroes at Glenn Martin.

Hillman Addresses Leaders

APR 24 1941

Tells of Efforts To Integrate All Into Defense Jobs

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Sidney Hillman pulled no punches when he addressed the mass meeting of the first annual conference on Negro business sponsored by the department of commerce, at the Mount Carmel Baptist church, Friday night. His topic was "The Negro and National Defense."

APR 24 1941

Mr. Hillman said, "As business men, as leaders in your communities, as members of one of the nation's largest and most loyal minority groups, your interest in this vital subject is obvious. America is arming to defend democracy. And we cannot defend democracy abroad unless we extend and preserve democracy at home. We can do this only if we practice democracy daily—by creating a truly democratic way of life in our schools, in our industrial plants, in the communities in which we live.

CONSCIOUS OF PROBLEM

"From the start of the present emergency, the directors of our great defense effort have been deeply conscious of the problem presented. We have realized from the beginning that total defense would be impossible without the full

START TRAINING PROGRAM

"But realizing that the skills and aptitudes of Negro workers were as vital as those of all other workers for the swift and uninterrupted rearming of this nation, the National Defense Advisory commission immediately tackled this problem.

"First we profited by the lessons of the last World war. And the outstanding lesson of that conflict is the fact that when industry faces a labor shortage, it will employ all racial groups, qualified to meet its needs. The employment of Negro skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers during that emergency proved that point.

"Therefore, our first step in this direction was an attempt to see that Negro workers should be qualified for defense employment when the expanding industries made their demands for labor. So when the U. S. office of Education initiated a program of defense training, the commissioner of education announced, at the behest of the National Defense commission, that 'in the expenditure of federal funds for vocational training for defense, there should be no discrimination on account of color, race or creed.'

SEEK MORE JOBS

"Coincident with this drive for equitable defense training for Negro workers, the commission tackled the problem of equitable employment opportunities. The first step in this direction was the announcement of a statement of labor policy which stipulated that workers should not be discriminated against because of age, sex, race or color."

Followed a description of the work done then by Dr. Robert C. Weaver to enforce the policies adopted, for as Mr. Hillman pointout, "We knew that no policy is automatic in its operation. We realized that we could not abolish overnight practices which had existed for years in the industrial and economic life of this nation."

A resume of the number of Negroes given employment on defense contracts showing that more than 2,500 skilled Negro carpenters were employed in building camps and other workers, thousands of brick masons, plasterers, cement finishers, plumbers, roofers, power saw-operators and other skilled and semi-skilled Negro workers were used.

IN STEEL PLANTS

"The recent developments in the building construction field have been duplicated," Mr. Hillman said, "to a lesser degree, in other fields in which Negro workers were readily trained. In the iron and steel industry for instance, there are today indications of a larger absorption of Negro skilled and semi-skilled workers. Plants in several northern areas have recently been seeking to import Negro foundry workers from southern areas and employment opportunities are expanding in the latter sections.

"The problem of equitable employment of Negroes has already been raised in the aviation industry as in all others and we intend to continue the drive there. Three important developments indicate that progress may be expected in that field. Out in California, one aircraft factory, faced with a shortage of workers, is already experimenting with a Negro unit in its plant. In Ohio, an aircraft manufacturer has indicated that he will employ at least 300 Negroes. And in Missouri, another employer has promised to use a sizeable number of Negro workers in his aircraft plant."

READS RECENT LETTER

Mr. Hillman then read to the eagerly listening audience the recent letter sent to all defense contract holders, urging them to use the available Negro labor in their communities.

The meeting was the highlight of the entire sessions, which were devoted particularly to the problems of the businessman and how the government could help him. Only once at Friday afternoon's session was there any flare-up and this was when Abner H. Ferguson, the administrator of the Federal Housing Administration was speaking and the question period waxed hot and heavy as irate listeners in the audience cited case after case where the FHA refused loans to Negroes to build or refinance their home. A later development caused a flurry of commotion when, on being questioned as to the personnel in his department, Mr. Ferguson said:

"I was expressly told, when I came down here to speak, the personnel problem would not be discussed." The group wanted to know how many Negroes were employed in his department and in what capacities.

HOWARD OPENING SPEAKER

Mr. Lancaster, sponsor of the meeting as advisor to the secretary of commerce, disclaimed any responsibility for this utterance and said he had nothing to do with the expression made by Mr Ferguson.

On behalf of the Washington Negro Chamber of Commerce Perry W. Howard made the opening address. He was followed by L. C. Blunt, secretary, general manager of the Great Lakes Mutual Insurance company; and there was also a brief address by Wayne Chatfield Taylor, under secretary of the department of commerce.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune then introduced members of the Federal Council of Negro Advisers and Albon L. Holsey introduced the delegates and visitors.

"The question of equitable employment of all groups in our defense industries was one of the first problems considered by the advisory Council of National Defense."

Then Mr. Hillman told of the labor policy adopted, which stipulated that workers should not be discriminated against because of age, sex, race, or color.

"How did this effect the Negro worker?" he asked. I don't think it is necessary for me to quote statistics to prove to a gathering of this sort that unemployment has fallen with disproportionate intensity upon Negro workers. No statistics are needed either to prove that the Negro worker has never been fully integrated into the industrial life of this country. And this wasteful practice began long before the inception of our defense ef-

WHAT DOES HILLMAN'S LETTER MEAN?

We have read with due care the letter which Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General of the Office of Production Management, sent to holders of defense contracts. We have tried to arrive at some conclusion which would make us believe that discrimination in industries holding defense contracts will end, but we have not been able to reach any conclusion from the context of his letter. We know that the office of Production Management has the power to force industries holding defense contracts to stop their discrimination against Negroes. The National Defense Act specifically states in a clause that there shall be no discrimination on account of color, race or creed, and the Office of Production Management can enforce this clause.

We fail to find anything relative to this clause in Mr. Hillman's letter to industries. So therefore we are not willing to believe nor accept his letter as a means to an end where Negroes are concerned in industries holding defense contracts. However we do believe that Mr. Hillman's letter was written in good faith, and that he is sincere. Our past experience has taught us that mere pleading in the defense of Negroes will not remove the evil of discrimination. The records of American history will show that discrimination against the Negro has decreased in proportion to the amount of pressure operating against the forces of discrimination. So we doubt whether Mr. Hillman's letter will do any good at all. MAY 2 1941

Mr. Hillman stated this in his letter, "The Office of Production Management expects defense contractors to utilize all available local labor resources before resorting to the recruiting of additional labor from outside their local areas. Our program of training and labor clearance will be established in accordance with such a policy. In many sections of the nation there are today available labor reserves of Negro workers. Plans for their training and employment in capacities commensurate with their individual skills and aptitudes should be undertaken at once." This, in part, represents the text of his letter and does not have the proper force which we think will do much toward ending discrimination. As we see it, we believe some drastic action must be taken in order to end discrimination and make it possible for the American Negro to share in the defense labor.

Mr. Hillman and his associates are well versed in what is going on in the defense industries, just as much as they are well versed in how discrimination can be technically applied against the Negroes and at the same time not violate the spirit of his letter and the spirit of the clause in the National Defense Act.

Mr. Hillman needs to write another letter if he really means business.

MAY 1—1941

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.—John P. Davis, secretary of the National Negro Congress, declared today that Associate OPM Director Sidney Hillman was not making good his recent promise to take steps to provide jobs for Congress in defense industries.

Davis made this charge after a delegation of prominent Negro leaders conferred with Hillman yesterday concerning the persistent refusal of the giant Glenn L. Martin airplane plant in Baltimore to hire Negroes.

The delegation spoke on behalf of a recent Maryland and District of Columbia jobs conference attended by 616 delegates representing 250,000 people.

The group asked Hillman to initiate a conference with officials of the Glenn L. Martin plant to negotiate a contract similar to the one which has been reached in New York with the Fifth Avenue Coach Company providing jobs for Negro bus drivers. Parties to the contract were to be the OPM, the United Automobile Workers, the Glenn L. Martin Company and Negro groups.

Hillman flatly refused to call a conference of this sort or to take any steps to make effect the recent letter he sent to arms plants "urging" them to give jobs to Negroes.

At first Hillman declined to receive the delegation of Negro groups. But after the group had been in conference for some time with several of his subordinates, he finally decided to devote ten minutes of his time to a discussion of this question. MAY 1 1941

HILLMAN ALIBIS

Most of the ten minutes was taken up with an alibi by Hillman for his refusal to act in the Glenn L. Martin situation.

Despite the fact that the delegation spoke for 250,000 Negroes in the area around Washington and Maryland, Hillman challenged its right to speak for the Negroe people.

After the Associated OPM Director delivered a brief talk on his stand, he refused to permit Negro Congress Secretary Davis to make a reply and walked out of the conference. MAY 1 1941

The delegation then continued to confer with several of Hillman's subordinates including Robert Weaver, Theodore Poston, Eric Nicholl, Clarence Johnson, Eli Oliver and Dr. Will Alexander.

In protest against the refusal of Hillman to take any definite steps in the Glenn L. Martin situation, the delegation conducted a picket line around the OPM building. Another picket line is scheduled for next Wednesday. 1941

In addition, the President was reminded, there are comparatively few industries in the South where the largest number of people on WPA are Negroes, and even now hundreds are awaiting assignments to the lists, but lack of funds keeps them off.

If WPA is drastically reduced, it was pointed out, Negro and white workers who are denied opportunities in private employment will be thrown on local charity which, because of increased taxes, may not be able to support them. MAY 1 1941

"We contend that it is not unreasonable to ask," the letter concludes, "that until such time as the barriers to employment in private industry which face Negroes are broken down that they should not be deprived of WPA employment Negroes don't want to stay on WPA, but conditions beyond their control cause most of them to face the choice of either remaining on WPA or starving."

NAACP Chief Contends Discrimination Bars Negro In Industry

NEW YORK. — President Roosevelt was notified Thursday, May [illegible], that the Negro people of the country will suffer seriously if impending slashes in WPA funds became a reality.

Those who argue for the cut state that because of the defense program there is less need for the WPA since workers will be going into private employment.

In a letter to the President, Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, made it clear that there is notorious discrimination on the part of employers, some labor unions and some officials in national defense work. This fact alone means that Negroes will constitute, through no fault of their own an increasingly large proportion of the WPA rolls.

More Negro Carpenters Into Nat'l Defense Work

CALL ISSUED FOR AT LEAST 20 NEGRO MEN

Carpenters Union to Organize Negro Local; Apply For Charter

JAN 3 - 1941

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Twenty or more Negro carpenters went to work on the cantonment at Fort Riley Kas., Monday morning, December 30, as the result of weeks of effort on the part of the Negro organizations working for the participation of Negro skilled workers in the defense program.

The men were issued work permits by the Greater Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. A. F. of L. J. O. Mack, business agent for the union, yesterday requested F. L. Whittaker of the Colored Builders of Kansas to get at least 20 carpenters to begin work Monday.

Mr. Mack said that a larger number of carpenters probably will be used but that 20 is the minimum.

All carpenters interested in work are asked to go to the Carpenter hall, 3114 the Paseo, at 1 o'clock this afternoon, Friday, to obtain their work permits.

TWELVE APPLY FOR CHAPTER

A group of 12 Negro carpenters has applied for a charter to organize a local union of the Carpenters' union, Mr. Whitaker is the temporary chairman of the local.

The first step toward the organization of a local union of carpenters was taken Tuesday night at a meeting held at the home of Mr. Whitaker, 925 Washington boulevard, Kansas City, Kas.

The meeting was attended by Mr. Mack and Larry S. Braton, international representative of the Carpenters union and by members of the Negro National Defense committee.

Mr. Braten said that there was no constitutional bar against Negro members of the Carpenters union and urged the formation of a local union by Negro carpenters.

The application for a charter was signed that night by 12 carpenters. Since that time, nine others have applied for membership.

The 12 charter members who signed the application were F. L. Whitaker, Harold Robbins, Wendell Robbins, Leon Hall, Charlie McLemore, J. B. Harrel, D. T. Sexton, B. Barnes, John Mason, Mr. Flagg, Oscar Hall and Ed Thomas.

These men and others who join before the charter is closed, will be admitted to full membership in the union by payment of a $10 fee.

After the charter is closed (within 30 days) the membership fee will be $80. A special fee of $40 has been made for the work at Fort Riley. The fee is paid on a daily basis.

WILL BE ONE OF SEVEN LOCALS

The Negro local will be one of seven local carpenter unions in the Kansas City metropolitan area. Each local has representatives in the carpenters' district council. The Negro local. Mr. Braten said, will have the same rights, obligations and opportunities as have the other locals. The Negro members will be entitled to the same advantages of wages, hours, fraternal death benefits, etc., as other members.

The application for a local union will be acted upon within 10 days, Mr. Braton said. In the meantime, the carpenters who have signed to join will be issued work permits so that they can begin work at once.

The formation of a Negro carpenters' union and the employment of Negro men at Fort Riley is the result of the effort which has followed the mass meeting held in the Municipal Auditorium December 8 protesting against the failure of Negroes to get jobs and training in the defense program.

The national defense follow-up committee held an interview with Owen T. Mullinax, acting area director of the National Youth Administration, and with William T. Kirby, manager of the Kansas City office of the State Employment office, on Friday, December 20.

Must Register

Mr. Kirby promised that his office would make no discrimination in the placement of men on jobs, when orders came to his office. He emphasized the importance of the registration of all skilled men at the employment office, 1218 East Twelfth street.

Mr. Mullinax, who is serving as director of the NYA during the illness of George Sykes, said that as yet funds appropriated by the U. S. office of education to secure equipment and to set up defense training courses for Negroes has not been allocated to the various state educational divisions. He

Negroes and Our Defenses--III

ANNOUNCEMENT from Hampton Institute that the American Federation of Labor has agreed to grant a charter to the first Negro local in Virginia of the Carpenters and Joiners' Union, is excellent news, and points the way toward a solution of the problem of discriminations against skilled Negro workers on defense projects. The organized Negroes of the Peninsula who have brought about this result will seek to form similar unions of plasterers, painters and other building trades groups.

THE TIMES-DISPATCH had been delaying further comment on the discriminations practiced on defense projects in Virginia against skilled Negroes, until the completion of the State Defense Council's survey of the situation. It happens that CHAIRMAN DOUGLAS S. FREEMAN'S statement on the subject, published elsewhere in today's paper, coincides with the announcement that a Negro carpenters' union is soon to be formed in Virginia.

DR. FREEMAN states that the council's survey indicates an unsatisfactory situation, and that whereas "work seems to have been given skilled and qualified Negro mechanics" at Radford, the Negroes have had to be satisfied with common labor or semiskilled work on most other defense projects in the State. He adds, of course, that this is not a fair or equitable arrangement.

Now that the American Federation of Labor has agreed to the formation of a carpenters' union by the Negroes, with a nucleus of 45 members from the lower Peninsula, the problem seems to be well on the way toward a proper solution. The A. F. of L. is to be congratulated on reaching this decision, for while it may not be possible to demonstrate at this stage that the defense program has been seriously handicapped by the refusal of the unions to let Negro carpenters and other skilled tradesmen work on some defense jobs, when the defense program swings into high gear, the country will require the services of every available skilled man, whether white or black. That is not only in the best interests of America, but the only fair and decent solution of the problem, for, in the words of JUDGE EDMUND A. PARRY, "the test of a civilization is the degree to which it protects those who are unable to protect themselves."

Employers Accused Of Holding Negroes Off Defense Jobs

Employers on defense projects in Virginia have been charged by the State Defense Council with attempting to "dodge" the issue of providing work for skilled Negro mechanics after a study made of the situation.

"Instances have come to light," the statement said, "where the disposition to 'defer action,' to 'await developments' or to 'make investigation' has left the impression that the issue of providing work for skilled Negro mechanics was being dodged.

"If Negroes are fit to fight for America, they are fit to have such jobs in defense industries as they are qualified to fill. The executive committee of the State Defense Council is on record as disapproving any discrimination in defense activities. We wish most earnestly to appeal to contractors, to trade unions and to employers generally to make democracy a reality in the war effort and not to make it a mockery by racial discrimination."

The investigation was made after complaints from numerous Negro organizations that their skilled workers were not being hired for defense work when there was need for mechanics, and Negro mechanics were available.

Ruling Bans Discrimination Against Negroes In National Defense Building Program

Copies of New Regulation Are Sent To All Contractors

To Build 68 Projects

JAN 18 1941

Discrimination against Negro skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers on the extensive $281,000,000 defense housing program was banned this week through an executive order issued by John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator.

Seeking to assure full participation of Negro workers in the employment phases of the huge construction program, Mr. Carmody, acting under the authority vested in the FWA Administrator by Section II of the Act of October 1, 1940, issued the following regulation under which all contracts must be prosecuted:

"There shall be no discrimination by reason of race, creed, color or political affiliations in the employment of persons qualified by training and experience, for work in the development of defense housing at the sites thereof."

At the same time, the FWA Administrator established machinery to implement the Agency's non-discrimination policy and to handle specific complaints growing out of possible violations. Copies of the regulation were sent to all contractors working on defense housing and the executive order was published in the Federal Register on Thursday, January 9.

Mr. A. J. Sarre, the director of personnel of the Federal Works Agency, and Mr. W. J. Trent jr., who is the racial relations officer in that office, will give special attention to the enforcement of the regulation against discrimination in work on the defense housing program.

The vast defense housing program will be carried out under the direction of several agencies in the FWA. This program includes the construction of an undetermined number of dwelling units to be erected with the $150,000,000 appropriation authorized in the Lanham Act. A number of these projects are now under construction.

Thirty-two defense housing projects, containing 13,035 dwelling units, will be constructed by the United States Housing Authority at an estimated cost of more than $5,000,000 in contracts.

Other phases of the total defense housing program are being carried out by the Federal Works Agency. One is the construction of the bulk of the housing provided for in the War Department's share of the $100,000,000 housing allocation in the Second Supplemental Defense Appropriation Act. The Secretary of War recently allocated $45,700,000 of this sum to the FWA for housing projects for families of enlisted Army men and for married civilian Army personnel. Administrator Carmody designated the Public Buildings Administration as the agency to carry out this program. Under this designation the PBA will construct a minimum of sixty-eight projects.

Negro Carpenter Not Wanted On Army Unit

CHARLESTON, S. C.—(SNS) Despite the fact that his application for employment at the Charleston Navy Yard had been approved and his name, along with scores of others, turned over to the Construction Quartermaster at Fort Moultrie on Sullivan's Island where new barracks are being constructed for soldiers under the national defense program, Mr. Joseph Smith, 170-A Jackson Street, and one of the city's best carpenters was turned down flat by the Construction Quartermaster at Fort Moultrie and told abruptly, "They didn't tell me from the navy yard that you were colored. And I can't use colored men on my job." Such was the account given the Lighthouse and Informer this week his application reinstated at the navy yard without going through by Mr. Smith as he sought to have the lengthy details of applying all over again.

According to Mr. Smith he received a letter from the Construction Quartermaster asking if he would be available for duty anytime he was needed. He replied that he would be and received a second letter immediately instructing him to report to duty at once. He then hired a man to transport his tools to Fort Moultrie and applied at the office of the Sargeant. He was sent two miles down the road to the foreman who, told him that he had hired all the carpenters he needed the day before.

Not satisfied with the disposal of his case he appealed to the Construction Quartermaster, Captain F. C. Hayden, who told him abruptly "I can't use colored men on my job." Mr. Smith has letters of proof that he was told to report to duty under the signature of the Quartermaster. His account of what is happening to skilled Negroes who are seeking employment by their government in the vast national defense effort is but another in a vast resource of other similar stories of discrimination.

DEFENSE INDUSTRIES

All efforts toward elimination of racial bias in the industries that are receiving defense contracts have so far met with a stone wall. Various and curious excuses are offered by the management of industrial plants. In many instances the officials concerned make no pretense at concealing their hatred. They give any excuse whether reasonable, logical or not. The stock answer is that Negroes do not apply for those jobs or that there is no black labor available in the vicinity. Yet America needs men in abundance to hasten its national defense program. It needs skilled and unskilled labor. It is clear even to white America that white men alone cannot fill all the jobs required under our present emergency.

The mobilization of man power should afford a timely occasion for the exercise of the democratic theory of opportunity for all. As Frank Hayes observed in a recent article in the Chicago Daily News, discrimination between races is an avowed and basic part of the Nazi theory. But what does Germany do when it wants action?

1937—Nazi Germany temporarily imported non-Germanic Magyars from Hungary to work in the harvest fields at better wages than they could get at home.

JAN 25 1941

1938 to 1940—Nazi Germany utilized in heavy industry nationals of occupied countries, including members of the so-called "inferior" Slavic race, besides shipping some of them to Germany as laborers. A number of Jews were employed not only as laborers but in some highly technical capacities essential to war preparation.

If Germany which preaches and practices racial hatred as one of its basic postulates, can forego its racial bigotry for the sake of national security in time of stress, what excuse can democratic America have for a deliberate ignoring of Negro labor? The Negro, representing as he does a very substantial minority, finds himself segregated in the armed forces of the nation and discriminated against in those industrial plants that are trying to speed up our national defense program. Is not the time at hand for us to inquire before the enemy guns begin to thunder over our heads, what sort of democracy is America preparing to defend?

Jobs Are Open In Navy Yards

Negroes are being accepted for employment and training in the 10 United States navy yards. Apprentices are paid 32 cents an hour. Skilled and semi-skilled workers are paid from 69 to $1.14 an hour.

In some navy yards, notably Charleston, S. C., pipe fitters are being sought for jobs paying $7.84 to $8.80 a day. Iron workers, boiler makers and sheet metal workers are needed at the Norfolk, Va., navy yard at $7.52 to $8.48 a day.

Other U. S. Navy yards are located at Boston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Portsmouth, N. H., Puget Sound, Wash., Washington, D. C., and Mare Island, Cal.

Applications for examinations for any of these jobs may be obtained at any post office or from the U. S. Civil Service Commisison.

Straws In The Wind

From the Washington Bureau of THE PITTSBURGH COURIER

John M. Carmody, Administrator of the Federal Work Agency, has done it again! As you've probably read in thi week's headlines, Mr. Carmody has just extended the prov sions of his non-discrimination defense housing clause (

March 19, 1941) to cover all defense public works. In dollars and cents, this means that from now on Negro skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers will receive a specified percentage of all monies expended on defense construction of USO recreation centers, hospitals, venereal disease clinics, public schools, expansions, etc. Prior to this, the percentage clause only covered defense housing construction. This extension merely means a possible few million dollars more in wages for Negro building construction workers.

There is more involved here than dollars and cents however. In extending his order, Mr. Carmody has trampled on the South's most sacred cow—States Rights. And in doing so he has forced the various communities to accept the policy of the Federal Government in safeguarding the rights of its Negro citizens. This is what has happened:

The Federal Government contributes 100 percent of the monies expended for defense housing. So when Mr. Carmody ruled that Negroes must receive a certain percent of the payroll of each defense housing contractor, the localities involved had no voice in the matter. This is not the case in other defense public works jobs. In these constructions, the local community pays a proportion of the total cost. Nevertheless, Mr. Carmody's new order says, in effect: "The Federal Government will not contribute its share of the money you need for these improvements unless you see that Negro workers receive their share of the wages."

The anti-Negro boys may not like it, but they'll take it. He who pays the piper calls the tune.

John Carmody did not originate the percentage procedure in public works construction. This little acorn was planted back in 1934 by Dr. Robert C. Weaver in the PWA Housing Division. It was nourished by the same Dr. Weaver in the United States Housing Authority to the tune of more than $7,000,000 in actual wages (excluding the $3,000,000 received by Negro wage earners under PWA housing). But it has taken John Carmody to bring it to the stature of a full-grown oak. If the public works program extends through the war and post-war period—and it must, if we are to prevent a revolution in this country—the above sums will be dwarfed within the next few years.

* * *

John Carmody is probably the least known, yet one of the most effective, friends of the Negro in the whole New Deal set-up. While many other white New Dealers have made their reputations too often through a mere pro-Negro speech or some equally meaningless gesture, Carmody has actually practiced what they preached. Few Racial Relations Officers in the whole Federal Government have had such full support on questions affecting their race as has FWA's William J. Trent, Jr.

* * *

Although the FWA Administrator is practically unknown to the Negro public at large, he has been the object of wide speculation among Negro insiders in Washington. As yet, however, no one has been able to figure out any angle. Unlike other New Dealers who look forward to greener pastures Carmody has never made any attempt to build himself up with Negro voters. Neither has he ever been known to pull the "One of my best friends is a Negro—" line. Grudgingly, capitol skeptics have been forced to admit that probably the man is just a liberal—a practicing one.

* * *

A few scanty facts on Carmody's background may throw some light on his actions—although generalizations are usually dangerous. The FWA Administrator is of Pennsylvania Irish stock. He enjoyed early contact with Negroes in the [illegible] of that State. In fact, a Negro athlete shared honors with him on his college football team.

* * *

Intimates of Carmody insist however that one Negro made such an impression on him once that it may have played some part in his subsequent development. This one Negro was A. Philip Randolph, then the much maligned president of a struggling young union called the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Randolph and Carmody met when the latter was a member of the Railroad Mediation Board and the official was so impressed by Randolph's courage and resourcefulness that he went down the line in obtaining recognition for the Brotherhood as a bargaining agency before the Mediation Board. This recognithion had been opposed by other board members and by the big railroad unions themselves.

Generalizations are dangerous, we repeat, but both Randolph and Carmody have gone places since then.

* * *

The first site chosen for the Negro defense housing project was abandoned when the Polish residents of that area objected to the possibility of Negro neighbors. (Negro neighbors, it should be noted, who would be making America an arsenal for democracy so that the Poles could be freed from the ghettoes to which Hitler has recently assigned them in Warsaw and other Polsih cities.)

The second site was abandoned when the Irish-Catholic residents of that area made the same objection. The Catholics of Germany have found out that you can't do business with Hitler. The Irish of Erie will find it out when the same Mr. Hitler gets around to tackling the invasion of the British Isles. But not the Irish-Catholics of Buffale. They live in a Democracy!

* * *

ADD: DEFENSE NOTES — Franklin O. Nichols, who was recently loaned by the Phelps-Stokes Fund to the National Urban League for investigation of discrimination against Negroes in defense, now has a new post. He has just been appointed by the Federal Security Agency as an investigator of social conditions around Negro Army posts. Too bad somebody can't investigate the USO to find out why few centers have been built for the recreation of Negro enrollees. More centers, less prostitution—perhaps.

* * *

Dr. Ira DeA. Reid left his important post with the Bureau of Employment Security Friday to return to his post as Professor of Sociology at Atlanta University. He will still return to Washington at regular intervals however, to keep his eye on the development of policies enunciated for Negro placements by U. S. Employment Service Offices . . . Roberta McLemore, assistant librarian at Howard university, left Monday for Fort Devens in Mass., where she is expected to improve the comparatively good recreational facilities for the Negro enrollees there (she will be camp librarian) . . . Herman A. Washington, new regional man for USHA, apparently has decided to stick with the Federal Government. He has brought the wife and two kiddies from Denver, Colo. and will take up residence at the new Suburban Garden Apartments now under construction in Northeast . . . Truman Gibson (War Dept. now—FEP later) will also move his family there on October 1st.

DISDAIN PETTY DEFENSE JOBS NEGROES TOLD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (ANP)—Insisting that more than 10,000,000 Negroes in America are without actual representation in the executive branch of the government in the most perilous time in our history, James M. Nabrit, Jr., secretary of Howard university, presented a 10-point demand program in an interview this week which he believes will help bring about a solution to many of the most critical of the Negro's present day problems.

The able administrative official urges Negro leaders to stop vieing for self glory and to unite and fight for nine actually constructive posts in our government during the present national crisis.

The 10-point program includes a demand for nine government positions, which, if held by Negroes, will insure better representation for colored Americans in the executive branch of the government. Such representation, Mr. Nabrit believes, will eliminate numerous decisions and policies of governmental officials which have not been to the Negro's best interests.

The university secretary maintains that every individual, group and newspaper among Negroes should forego quarrels over petty differences of opinion and join in a collective effort to obtain the following positions and representation for Negroes:

(1) An administrative assistant to the President of the United States, (2) an assistant secretary of the navy, (3) an assistant secretary of war, (4) a membership on the Council for National Defense, (5) a membership on the National Mediation board, (6) a membership on the civil service commission, (7) a United States District judgeship, (8) an assistant U. S. Morale officer, (9) a definite percentage of Negroes in each officers' training school, and (10) a membership on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Dr. Ira DeA. Reid left his important post with the Bureau of Employment Security Friday to return to his post as Professor of Sociology at Atlanta University. He will still return to Washington at regular intervals however, to keep his eye on the development of policies enunciated for Negro placements by U. S. Employment Service Offices . . . Roberta McLemore, assistant librarian at Howard university left Monday for Fort Devens in Mass., where she is expected to improve the comparatively good recreational facilities for the Negro enrollees there (she will be camp librarian) . . . Herman A. Washington, new regional man for USHA, apparently has decided to stick with the Federal Government. He has brought the wife and two kiddies from Denver, Colo. and will take up residence at the new Suburban Garden Apartments now under construction in Northeast . . . Truman Gibson (War Dept. now—FEP later) will also move his family there on October 1st.

DISDAIN PETTY DEFENSE JOBS NEGROES TOLD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (ANP)—Insisting that more than 10,000,000 Negroes in America are without actual representation in the executive branch of the government in the most perilous time in our history, James M. Nabrit, Jr., secretary of Howard university, presented a 10-point demand program in an interview this week which he believes will help bring about a solution to many of the most critical of the Negro's present day problems.

The able administrative official urges Negro leaders to stop vieing for self glory and to unite and fight for nine actually constructive posts in our government during the present national crisis.

The 10-point program includes a demand for nine government positions, which, if held by Negroes, will insure better representation for colored Americans in the executive branch of the government. Such representation, Mr. Nabrit believes, will eliminate numerous decisions and policies of governmental officials which have not been to the Negro's best interests.

The university secretary maintains that every individual, group and newspaper among Negroes should forego quarrels over petty differences of opinion and join in a collective effort to obtain the following positions and representation for Negroes:

(1) An administrative assistant to the President of the United States, (2) an assistant secretary of the navy, (3) an assistant secretary of war, (4) a membership on the Council for National Defense, (5) a membership on the National Mediation board, (6) a membership on the civil service commission, (7) a United States District judgeship, (8) an assistant U. S. Morale officer, (9) a definite percentage of Negroes in each officers' training school, and (10) a membership on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

WASHINGTON, Oct .16 (ANP) —Defending its action in blocking a contract award to a CIO union and awarding it to an AF of L union, OPM finds itself on a hot spot with Rep. Smith of Virginia declaring the award delay. "The most brazen, bold and courageous effort to defraud the United States government of which I ever heard."

He called for indictments against the AF of L and an unnamed OPM official and said that the agreement which had given AF of L the rights to all construction work in the defense program had the effect of giving that body a monopoly on all federal construction.

This is the same agreement which the ANP pointed out last week prevented Negro building trades workers from participating in the vast work on account of this agreement. come. Chicago Makes Tanks, But Unions Urge Bigger Output

By Carl Harris
(Special to the Sunday Worker)

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Chicago is rapidly emerging as one of the greatest tank-producing centers in the nation.

Rolling from its assembly lines daily are the giant armored fortresses which are to be decisive in what Stalin called "a war of motors."

Credit for the foresight, cooperation and hard work which it took to fashion great tank manufacturing units out of what were mainly railroad car and locomotive shops must be equally divided among the army, the managers and the trade unions which promoted the mammoth conversion.

NOV 23 1941

In the words of one shop worker at Pullman - Standard, Chicago's new slogan is "Tanks a Million." And these steel Susies are being pushed in record time. Minutes count in the fight against Hitler."

They are mobile fortresses, capable of 25 to 50 miles an hour, with tremendous firing power.

The city has hit a seven-league stride in tank production with the issuance by the War Department last week of $80,000,000 tank orders to two Chicago firms.

Pullman-Standard Manufacturing Co. received a $32,000,000 contract and a $48,000,000 order went to the Pressed Steel Car Co.

PROVED IN BATTLE

According to the heads of the Chicago Ordnance District, these orders are for the M-3, 28-ton "medium" tanks. Actually "medium" is a misnomer for this military powerhouse. The "medium" tank has accounted for herself honorably on the battlefields of Europe. Enough of these tanks have already seen service to draw conclusions that they are one of the most adroit and capable weapons that have been developed in this war.

Built on the experience of the 26-ton tank which the British call "Matilda," the M-3 is powered by a 400-horsepower motor, has a cruising radius of 350 miles and sports the following hardware: one 77 mm. cannon, one 37 mm. gun, two 30-calibre and two 50-calibre machine guns, plus several light hand machine guns. It carries a seven-man crew.

A comparison of the new U. S. mechanized might represented by the M-3 may be gauged from the following fact. A tank moves more than seven times as far per dollar as a cavalry unit and can hurl from five to seven times as many pounds of bullets at the enemy per man employed.

In conversations with the Chicago Ordnance District, it was learned that because of the enormous size of the new tanks it is far easier to manufacture them in locomotive and railroad shops than in auto shops. Because this is true Chicago has a tremendous potential in tank production.

Lieut. B. L. Gordon, Chief of the Planning Section of the Chicago Ordnance District, pointed out that "we could handle 80 per cent of the whole tank program in our area."

He cites the following facts. Out of seven companies prepared to turn out the master tank clutch, only two are now working on defense orders.

Out of eight firms able to make the tank propeller shaft, only two are at work on this unit.

Out of six companies ready to make the traverse rack, only two are in active production on it.

URGE MORE PLANTS

One of the plants frequently mentioned for conversion to tank production is the Electromotive Diesel Plant, General Motors subsidiary, which is now making mainly Diesel locomotives and naval motors.

According to Terry Kandell, president of the United Auto Workers Local at Electromotive, the union has repeatedly urged the management to go into the tank field and has pledged its full cooperation in making the switch-over.

The failure of the International Harvester Corp. to change over to tank manufacture has long been under fire by the workers in the Chicago plants. The CIO Farm Equipment Workers Union recently made the estimate on the basis of a survey of IHC's tractor-producing equipment that 500 tanks a month could be rolling out of the firm's shops.

Fowler McCormick, president of IHC, recently announced that the company has 20 per cent of its production engaged in direct defense work.

In contrast is the Caterpillar plant in Peoria which switched from tractor production to go to work on a $21,000,000 tank order.

According to Col. Donald Armstrong, head of the Chicago Ordnance District, Chicago is only one-fourth of the way to saturation point on defense work on the basis of the present plant capacity. He declared that "for "strategic reasons," it is doubly important to center defense production in such inland cities as Chicago.

From the present output of 250 of the "medium" M-3 tanks a month, the plan is to step up production to 1,000 a month by Spring.

NOV 23 1941

On the tank workers of Chicago rests a major part of the task of outstripping Hitler's ta production and providing a st periority of these mechanized monsters for the armies of Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States.

CIO STEEL WORKERS RAP SEGREGATION IN UNITED STATES ARMY

Ask Roosevelt to Stop Crimes Against Negro Soldiers in Camp Communities

GARY, Ind., Oct. 16(ANP) —The regional conference of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing committee, meeting at Knights of Columbus hall here Sunday, condemned in a sharply worded resolution, segregation and maltreatment of Negro soldiers in the U. S. army, and called upon President Roosevelt and all CIO unions to take effective action to remedy the situation.

Particular attention was attracted to a section of the resolution which called upon President Roosevelt to communicate with governors and local officials of all states, urging them to use their influence and authority to obtain the proper

After recounting the various forms of discrimination which Negro troops are subjected in the army in various local communities, the resolution warned that:

FAIR EMPLOYMENT COMMISSION FERRETS OUT THE FACTS

The President's Fair Employment Practices Commission is putting West Coast aircraft companies on the spot in public hearings. The New Masses reports this gem:

"Does your company discriminate against colored people?"
"No, sir."
"How many men do you employ?"
"Two thousand eight hundred and eighty."
"How many of them are colored?"
"Two."
"When were they hired?"
"Today."

That's very nearly the situation in many an aircraft company with millions of dollars in government contracts.

The FEPC can't come East too soon for us. When it does, its findings will shock the public into demanding a new deal in defense.

Not only private industry but the government's own arsenals and navy yards will come under the microscope.

For example: One of the U.S. navy yards gave figures to the FEPC recently showing that a fifth of its employees are colored. That is apparently an excellent showing, but examining it closer, here is what can be seen:

NOV 18 1941

TOTAL EMPLOYEES	COLORED
24,219	5,426
APPRENTICES
1,302	37
SKILLED
11,393	665
UNSKILLED
9,318	4,700

So, while the total ratio in this U.S. navy yard is one colored for every four white, the apprentice ratio is one colored to thirty-five whites, and among the skilled workers there is one colored for every seventeen whites.

Eighty-six per cent of all colored workers are in the laboring or unskilled class, and the reason for it is discrimination on account of race, the very thing the FEPC sets out to remedy and is attacking.

The above Federal plant is one of the "best" in the country in its employment of colored workers. In the best, as in the worst mentioned at the beginning of this editorial, there is room for tremendous improvement.

Negro WPA Workers Share In Huge Airport Program

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25—The part which Negro workers are taking in the $130,000,000 defense airport program of the Work Projects Administration is reflected in employment figures issued this week by Alfred Edgar Smith, staff adviser of the Federal WPA.

In every State except Delaware, an army of 71,000 men was employed at the beginning of the current fiscal year on 27 sites certified by the Secretary of War or the Secretary of Navy as having military importance. In 11 Southern States, where 97 of the sites are located, there were 11,000 WPA Negro workers on airport projects. The estimated completed cost of these airport construction and improvement projects in the South is $38,366,566 in WPA funds and contributions of the sponsor.

FLORIDA LEADS

For the southern region, Negro workers in the defense airport program were about 49 per cent of the total. They ranged from 80 per cent in Louisiana, where a $2,644,941 program was under way, to 14 per cent in Texas, where funds for 15 airport sites reach the $5,000,000 mark.

Figures cited by Mr. Smith also reveal that Florida's 31 airprt project sites lead all other States in this type of WPA defense construction. The 2,750 Negro workers in Florida were approximately 38 per cent of the total number of workers employed at these sites on work to cost $15,000,000. Another large WPA airport construction program is in Alabama, where 57 per cent of the workers on 12 sites, valued at $5,743,167, were Negroes.

Other employment percentages reported by Mr. Smith for airport construction workers of the race and estimated completed cost of active projects in the Southern States were:

Arkansas, 55 per cent, $887,046; Georgia, 70.0, $2,641,729; Mississippi, 62.0 $2,520,251; North Carolina, 52.0, $1,979,999; South Carolina, 46.0, $530,492; Tennessee, 27.0, $149,486 and Virginia, 49.2 per cent and $1,257,223 the estimated completed cost.

"The WPA workers of both races who have ben employed on airport construction have won the admiration of officials high in civilian and military aviation circles," Mr Smith said, "Despite the drastic cut in appropriations which will reduce WPA employment during this fiscal year, the number and percentage of WPA workers on airport construction jobs will remain high because of the importance o this work to our air defenses."

Shipyard Has No Discrimination, But Negroes Fail To Seek Jobs

LORAIN, Oct. 23—(By Johnny Willis for ANP)—American Shipyard officials here, holders of huge government contracts for defense battleships, lake freighters, and boats for steel trade, declared in a surprising announcement made here this week through a union official that "There is absolutely no discrimination against colored in our yards, and never has been."

The announcement came after company officials were approached by one of Lorain's militant councilmen, Alex Munro, who is also head of the local AFL grievance committee. The fact that no Negroes are now working in the Lorain plant has not only caused the company to be generally thought of as absolutely prejudiced, but has recently caused considerable speculation among local Negroes who have been contemplating seeking an organized method to have the company open its doors to colored because of its immense share of defense funds.

Councilman Munro, when questioned earlier this week as to the attitude of the AFL and as to what plans had the union under way toward obtaining Negro representations at the local shipyards, stated that he was never conscious of any particular discriminatory attitude of the company toward colored and that he would take it up immediately with shipyard officials.

Munro first approached the head of the employment agency asking that Negroes be given equal consideration for hiring in the yards of the American Shipbuilding company. Munro was informed that colored had been at one time employed at the plant and that it was not a policy of the company to discriminate for reasons of color, race or creed. The local committee chairman was further told by company officials that colored seemed not to apply at the time when men were being hired.

Munro continued his query to the head superintendent, Joseph Conley, complaining that Negroes were not being given jobs and full benefits out of their taxes at the Lorain shipbuilding subsidiary.

Mr. Conley stated, according to Munro, that it was not a company policy to discriminate, and that he was certain that any Negro applicants would be given just consideration for jobs when hiring was underway at the plant. The superintendent further intimated, that the company was expecting more rush orders from the government and that the shipping season was fast drawing to a close (meaning that boats will be coming in for lay-up and repair). He said that a hiring rush was being greatly anticipated and the Negroes, if they applied, would be included in the employment.

The President Should Put First Things First

When this paper said some time ago that it was supporting the President's foreign policy, be it for peace or war, we felt in this crisis only united action could get the best results for our country. By supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt, we do not mean that we think him infallible. He makes mistakes, and when he does, it is our duty to speak out. That is what we do now.

The gravity of the situation abroad is borne upon us by every fresh advance of Hitler's legions. The possibility that Japan may play his game as Italy did adds to the danger our country faces. Here are we, a newspaper speaking for an element of the American people that neither in industry or government shares equally the opportunities and advantages that are freely given our white compatriots. We support the President. But many of them do not, and he does little or nothing about it!

Roosevelt by the New Deal which he championed, has or ought to have the ear and the confidence of workers. Yet with him saying we need all-out aid to Hitler's enemies, there are strikes going on all over the country which halt essential defense production. That does not make sense! Even that does not describe the situation at its worst. These strikers number many who by blood are tied to the conquered peoples whom Germany now forces to supply its war machine.

The laborer is worthy of his hire. But strikes born of jurisdictional disputes and similar causes have not that excuse. The idea of a Pole, at work on plane, tank, ship or ammunition putting anything ahead of defense is an indictment of his head and heart. Suppose he gets a few dollars more! If Hitler wins, he joins the conquered who drag the Nazi Juggernaut over a prostrate world! Negroes see that, and because we see it we support Roosevelt!

The whites who block the President's defense efforts do not see that they sit on a lighted bomb! Somebody should tell them. We think the one to tell them is Franklin D. Roosevelt. We do not see why he does not. Surely they who have had so much service at his hands will hear him and heed! Even if they will not, he should tell them. America will be another France unless he acts, a victim of individual greed, of class strife, of national indifference.

We can bear with the politics in the administration of our nation's business—provided the New Dealer chosen for office is a performer. But blocking defense is far outside politics—it is treas-

It should be rebuked! We do not agree that President Franklin D. to let strikes ravage American industry! Roosevelt, whether for fear or favor, is

Two Labor Stories

OCT 26 1941

TWO LABOR STORIES dealing with Negroes appeared in the news last week. One concerned the attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward black workers, the second came in the form of a resolution passed by one of the largest units in the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The wide divergence of opinion expressed in these stories is typical of the seemingly insurmountable gap between the philosophy and ideologies of these two branches of organized labor.

Irritating to say the least was the statement of one Harry O'Reilly, regional director of the AFL in Chicago. Mr. O'Reilly is quoted as telling a committee from the Chicago NAACP branch: "I consider the Negro an evil rather than an asset to organized labor. I don't believe all of this discrimination exists against the Negro; if it does, it is the Negro's fault and also his fight."

KNOWS IT EXISTS

Mr. O'Reilly being affiliated with the American Federation of Labor knows that discrimination does exist against Negro workers, no matter how much he chooses to play the ostrich and hide his head against the facts that are all around him. He could not be affiliated with the AFL, the greatest supporters of this economic warfare against black folk and not know it.

No single organization has contributed so much to the "freezing out" of black workers as the American Federation of Labor. And that this organization even at this late day stubbornly refuses to see the "light" was shown during the recent Seattle national convention when the convention refused to even consider lowering the "white only" barriers to membership in the face of increasing public opinion against this anti-democratic stand.

OCT 2 - 1941

Mr. O'Reilly no doubt was in the convention hall when A. Philip Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the only all-Negro AFL affiliate, made his brave, but entirely futile fight to break down these barriers, through which the AFL machinists, shipyard workers, painters, metal trades unions and more than 118 other affiliated brotherhoods put the "squeeze play" on Negro workers.

AGAINST DEMOCRACY

From the tone of his Chicago statement, he no doubt helped to vote down Mr. Randolph's plea that democracy be reinstated in this wing of the American labor movement.

In direct contrast to the anti-Negro position the AFL has plainly shown it is so determined to maintain was the action of the International Executive Board of the United Automobile Workers one of the strongest affiliates of the Congress of Industrial Organization.

For years Negroes had pleaded in vain for membership in the craft unions the AFL started in the auto industry, then the United Automobile Workers came along and accepted all who were workers, no matter what color their skins chanced to be.

Though this union would take in black members, some of the automobile manufacturers were not quite so democratic. So last week the union went on record as censuring these industrialists, now loaded down with government contracts to build weapons to insure the perpetuation of "democracy" in the world.

RAP DISCRIMINATION

The resolution, written in unmistakable language demanded an end to discrimination against Negroes in plants holding contracts with the union.

It was pointed out that curtailment of automobile production would "seriously aggravate the problem of the Negro worker, and that it would be hard, because of his race, for this class of worker to get transferred from non-defense to defense work."

The resolution passed without a dissenting vote by the executive board resolved that all plant managements "covered by UAW-CIO contracts be immediately notified that any further racial discrimination will not be tolerated; that the international president appoint a committee to make available reports on the problems of Negro workers; that when dissension occurs among Negro and white workers, we recommend that the local union involved establish a joint committee to make a summary and investigation and report to the regional director and national committee."

BACK PRESIDENTIAL ORDER

The United Automobile Workers, it can plainly be seen, are anxious and willing to comply with the President's Executive Order that there be no discrimination in national defense work.

Most of the American Federation of Labor Unions and several of the CIO unions along with a rapidly diminishing number of industrialists still choose to defy the president.

It is this small group, who by their actions say they do not believe in the democratic principles for the preservation of which America is now arming, that must be brought into line, even if it calls for legislation to do so.

The United Automobile Workers have shown that it can be done without this legislation. Other unions, if their members would but practice the same democracy they talk, could do the same.

Munitions Plant Head Names Negro Service Supervisor

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (ANP) — Appointment of J. W. Pate, well-known Twin City man, as supervisor of service at the $36,000,000 government munitions plant was announced this week by Federal Cartridge company, prime contractors for Twin City Ordnance plant at New Brighton.

Pate has previously been one of the five Negroes employed as plant guards. His new position is one of great responsibility as he has charge of a force of about 200 white and Negro workers. Promotion to the new job was made by Charles L. Horn, white, president of the company. It is believed that the position is the highest ever given Negro at any defense plant to date.

NEGRO YOUTH ADVISED TO SEEK ARMS WORK

Significant Strides Reported in Ending Discrimination

NOV 16 1941

Significant strides have been made toward eliminating discrimination from defense industries, Edward H. Lawson of the labor division of the Office of Production Management declared yesterday at a conference on vocational education in Public School 194 in 144th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues.

The conference, sponsored by the New York Teachers Guild, the Negro Labor Committee, the United Parents Associations and the Metropolitan Federation of Negro Student Youth, dealt primarily with the question of jobs for Negro youth today.

The speakers reported that discrimination still was strong in many concerns in this city and that Negro youth had little opportunity to get positions. Stressing the economic conditions of Harlem, Mrs. Ada Whitney, vice president of the United Parents Associations, urged that the city provide "more jobs, higher pay, lower rent, slum clearance, more schools and recreation centers."

Predicting that many factories not working on defense orders would have to close soon, Mr. Lawson urged young men and women, especially Negroes, to turn their attention to work relating to defense. Otherwise, he said, they might be employed temporarily and examples of large concerns forced then find their jobs gone because to employ Negroes after investiof priorities. gation disclosed that they had been

Miami Union Asks Repeal of Neutrality; AFL Unions Join Fight

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 21.—The Negro Ship Scalers Union, unaffiliated, in a meeting here this week, called for the opening of a Western front "as against Italy" when the fascist government attacked Ethiopia. The United States itself will stand in immediate and terrible danger if the Nazi armies and their satellites were allowed to defeat the Soviet Union, the resolution declared, and said that the opening of a Western front now would make it possible to crush Hitler between two fronts while the full strength of the Red Army is still intact.

quickly as possible, in addition to all other aid to the Soviet Union and other countries fighting Hitler aggression. The call was embodied in a resolution addressed to "responsible leaders of the United States and Great Britain."

The Negro Scalers Union recalled in its resolution that the Soviet Union "was the only country to demand economic penalties

ANTI-HITLER ACTIVITIES

This action of the Negro Scalers Union followed a week of anti-Hitler activity on the part of organized workers throughout Miami, thus definitely placing this city in the nationwide Smash-Hitler Front. The Miami General Labor Union last week went on record for repeal of the Neutrality Act and extention of all-out aid to the Soviet Union, Great Britain, China and all other anti-Hitler peoples. The Postal Telegraph Workers CIO did likewise.

OCT 22 1941

The Laborers, Hod Carriers and Carpenters Union, AFL, which has already sent out resolutions calling for all aid to the Soviet Union, Great Britain and China and demanded repeal of the Neutrality Act, is drawing a number of civic organizations, including the Parents-Teachers Association, into an Armistice Day Defend America-Smash Hitler Rally. Other local trade union groups will take part.

Negroes and Defense Jobs

"This employment will not be a mere gesture of calling these people production employes and actually using them as laborers. We plan to see Negroes on production jobs working under white supervision and giving them the same opportunity for training and induction in our services as our white employes."

The foregoing forthright statement was made last week by the director of personnel of Glenn Martin Aircraft Production Company of Baltimore on the occasion of the firm's hiring 100 Negro workers for skilled and semi-skilled jobs.

OCT 18 1941

Action on the part of the Martin company is significant in view of the fact it was one of the big American firms that had maintained a rigid policy against hiring Negroes. With such an important institution setting the pattern, it is fairly reasonable to presume others will find it easy to follow suit.

OCT 18 1941

Another point that must not be overlooked is the fact that in changing its policy to hire Negroes, Glenn Martin is cooperating with President Roosevelt in his efforts to break down discrimination in defense plants as enunciated in his executive order last June. The company is to be congratulated for the step it has taken—a complete reversal of its previous policy.

The OPM and the Fair Employment Practice Committee may well take a bow for the share of the work they did in accomplishing the victory at Martin's. When the President sent his memorandum to OPM and later created the FEPC, we said the Negro would be helped immeasurably if they functioned earnestly and sincerely and the White House "stood up." So far, both seem to be doing all right.

7 Defense Projects For Negroes Receive Presidential Okay

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Presidential approval of seven additional Defense Public Works projects to provide community facilities and services for Negro civilian defense workers and military personnel was announced last week by Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody. These seven new projects with a total estimated cost of $350,000, are distributed over five states.

Included among the latest projects announced are recreation centers at the following places: Portsmouth, Va., $50,000; Newport News, Va., $200,000; Richmond, Va. $25,000. Tampa, Fla., $9,200; Hinesville, Ga., $12,000; Denver, Colo. $3800 and Tucson, Ariz., $50,000.

In addition, hospital facilities for Negroes are provided in a new hospital at Montgomery, Ala., and in addition to existing hospitals at Mineral Wells, Tex., Weatherford, Tex., Hampton, Va., and Anniston, Ala. The local authorities sponsoring these hospitals will bear part of the total cost. The amount of the sponsor's fund will be fixed by agreement between the local authority and representatives of the Federal Works Administrator.

The other projects will either receive 100 per cent Defense Public Works grants, be Federally constructed or built under a combination of the two.

Martin Aircraft Plant Removes Ban; Hires 100

OCT 11 1941

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 9—Victory in the organization's campaign begun in December, 1940, to open up skilled and semi-skilled jobs for Negroes in the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft factory, largest plane company in the East, has been won, said officials of the National Negro Congress on Saturday.

The announcement was made following an official statement of the company's program for integrating Negroes into airplane production read to Congress officials over the telephone by W. D. Siemon, personnel director.

IN ACTUAL PRODUCTION

Mr. Siemon revealed that the company is now employing "the first group of Negroes for work in actual aircraft production at the plant." Saul M. Purdue, who formerly taught in the Baltimore (Md.) Colored Vocational school, is now employed by the company for supervision and personnel contact work, the statement said.

OCT 18 1941

Although he said he did not know the number, the personnel director indicated that more than 100 Negroes are now employed at the plant in the production department, that another group will shortly finish their training, and that more than 300 are being interviewed by the Baltimore branch of the U. S. Employment Service, in preparation for training.

Seeks Training For Negro Boys

Wants Colored Youth Admitted to Classes In Asbury Park

NOV 1 1941

FREEHOLD, N. J.—The Monmouth County Urban League, meeting here Thursday, passed a resolution directed to the Board of Freeholders and the New Jersey Reemployment Service, asking that colored youths be admitted for training in the defense training school now being conducted in Asbury Park.

NOV 1 1941

Members of the league, in passing the resolution, said they felt that because of the policy of Federal and State agencies in placing properly trained colored persons in defense industries, there would be no difficulty putting colored graduates of the school in responsible position.

The Asbury Park training shop was established last Spring, with the Board of Freeholders serving as one of the sponsoring agencies.

Attending the meeting was Lester B. Granger, of New York, a national officer of the league, who recommended the employment of a full-time secretary, Walter J. Upperman, Asbury Park attorney, has held the position as secretary on a parti-time basis, but recently tendered his resignation so that the league could determine what it wishes to do. Upperman's resignation was not accepted and the league postponed action until its November meeting.

Labor's Opportunity

The recent statement of the President of the United States, in which he said that labor must now forego strikes in the interest of national defense, should be the opinion of the overwhelming majority of Americans.

OCT 24 1941

A man who strikes today, strikes against his country's safety. A man who uses the threat of the strike unless government and industry capitulate meekly to his demands, is helping his country's enemies. The dictators must be gratified indeed when they read of recurring defense strikes in the nation which is working to become the arsenal of democracy.

This government has established elaborate arbitration machinery to protect labor against any conceivable injustice. The employers of this nation accept without question the decisions made. It is a segment of labor leadership which keeps industrial unrest going, and which holds to the "rule or ruin" principle.

Labor has its chance now to work at record-breaking wages. If it persists in striking, the American people will know what to do.

Serious Situation Confronts Detroit Negro Auto Workers

OCT 18 1941

Curtailed Automobile Production and Contemplated Layoffs Threatens to Wipe Out All Labor Gains—Alert Leadership Carefully Watches Situation.

By HORACE R. CAYTON
Labor Editor

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 16.—Negroes are facing an extremely dangerous situation in the automobile industry in Detroit. The difficulty arose primarily out of the change from civilian production of automobiles to production of tanks and airplanes for national defense. This involves the laying off of 45,000 workers on civilian production within the next ninety days and there are only 7,500 new jobs open in defense production. Of course, you can imagine that there is going to be some scramble to see who gets them.

FORD DISCRIMINATES IN AIRCRAFT PLANT

Ford, up until now, has been pretty friendly toward Negroes and although he had most of them concentrated in the foundry, he, nevertheless, had a few scattered throughout the plant. He has started practicing discrimination, especially in the production of aircraft. With civilian production taking a tremendous drop (it was announced Monday that 20,000 would be laid off) and with Ford along with the other plants refusing to hire Negroes in aircraft, it looks as though the Negro faces the possibility of taking an awful beating.

HOPE LIES WITH UNION

The only hope for seeing that Negroes are given a break is through the Union itself. If the Union would adopt a policy of insisting that men be transferred on the basis of senority, it would keep Negroes from being squeezed entirely out of the industry. Ford is no longer anxious to keep them in here and OPM can't, or won't, help them. Realizing this, a Negro committee of Ford workers which was later broadened to included all Negro automobile workers in Detroit formed a committee on September 5. After meeting with no success from local union officials, they then proceded to Chicago where the International Executive Board of the United Automobile Workers was meeting. They had a three-hour conference and made two demands: A—That a system of transfering eligible Negroes, based on seniority, be immediately inaugurated and B—That a well planned educational program to bring about unity of all groups in the Union be established to meet the repercussion which might follow within the Union when Negroes were transfered to airplane production machine shops where they had not previously been employed.

UAW PRESIDENT MAY EVADE ISSUE

After three hours of more or less "buck passing" and evasion of the issue, the International officers did come out with a rather strong resolution condemning discrimination and establishing an International Committee within the Union composed of six Negro workers: Walter Hardin, John Conyers, Al Johnson, William Bowman, Oscar Noble, and Leon Bates and the four Detroit members of the International Board. This Board was to make a report of any acts of discrimination against Negro workers to the president. This is just the first step, however, for the president, himself, is not one-hundred per cent on the issue. Recently, when "big wigs" of the OPM asked him how far he wanted to go on the issue of Negro transferrals to defense production, he answered that he did not know.

The seriousness of the situation can be seen from what happened in the Kelsey-Hayes plant where an attempt was made to transfer Negroes from the foundry to the machine shop which was located just across the street. Some of the reactionary white workers resented this and blacked their faces and had other white boys wheel them out of the plant saying that that was how they were going to treat the "n——s." However, since the International took their stand on September 22, Negroes were transferred over and Walter Reuther, Regional Director of the Detroit Area, informed the men that they could strike and close the plant if they wanted but that when they came back the Negro workers would come right back with them.

OTHER DANGERS MUST BE FACED

Even though Negro workers are successful in insisting on being transferred from civilian to defense production in accordance with seniority, there are still great dangers. In the larger plants, unless an educational program is coupled with these transfers, there will be serious repercussions when Negroes move into what has been thought of as "lily white" occupations. If they are successful in obtaining transfers and allaying the antagonisms of the white workers through the unions, it will represent a total gain and a moving up in the occupational hierarchy which neither the government nor any other outside force could have obtained for them.

The situation is tense and anything can happen, but the Negro leadership in the Union is alert and progressive. I talked at length to such men as Horace L. Sheffield, Educational Director of Local 600; Shelton Tapes, Chairman of Local 1, which is one of the largest locals in the Ford set-up and has a mixed membership of over 2,000 men; Oscar Noble, in charge of investigations of all General Motars Plants, and Walter Harding, Assistant Organizer for Aeronautics under Frankensteen. These men are capable, conscientious, and fearless leaders and represent just one small section of the Negro trade unionists in Detroit who as a whole are as advanced as any in the entire country. They understand the problem and will fight for an equitable solution.

The "honeymoon" between the CIO and Negro laborers is over and there is going to be terrific competition for the few jobs which are opening in defense production by the many thousands who will be thrown out of work by the curtailment of civilian production. Upon the shoulders of these workers falls the responsibility, to a large measure, of determining the attitude Negroes will take toward the entire CIO movement.

Roosevelt Plans Legal Curbs On Defense Strikes

Bailey Seeks Law To Try Strikers As Saboteurs

OCT 29 1941

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, whose thrice-voiced plea to John L. Lewis has failed to end a strike of 53,000 C. I. O. coal miners, said today he was considering new legislation to cope with defense strikes in general.

The President made this disclosure at a press conference while on Capitol Hill a wave of angry feeling produced suggestions that troops be called out and that persons conducting strikes with "intent" to retard defense production be punished as saboteurs.

A reporter asked Mr. Roosevelt whether he was considering a law calling for compulsory arbitration and suspension of the right to strike on defense work.

If the query were confined to general terms, and omitted specific methods, the answer would be in the affirmative, the Chief Executive replied. Then specific methods might have to enter into the study instead of just two, he said.

OCT 2

Asked what existing powers he had, he referred to the fact that two struck plants already had been taken over by the Government but he hastily continued that this did not mean the Government was going to seize all the coal mines.

Lewis Silent On Third Appeal

The President said he had not received any reply from Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, with reference to his third appeal that the strike for a union shop in the so-called "captive" coal mines be called off pending negotiation on the issue of a union shop.

The third appeal was sent yesterday after Lewis had turned down two previous pleas. A conference has been scheduled for tomorrow between Lewis and Myron C. Tavlor, retired chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. Steel companies own most of the "captive mines" and use the coal for producing steel.

(The captive mines are so-called because their product goes to the parent concerns and does not get into the general commercial market. The union shop means that all miners would have to become members of the union.)

OCT 2

At New York, Irving S. Olds, chairman of the big steel corporation, announced a telegram had been sent to the National Mediation Board accepting the services of the board "for final decision" for settlement of the strike in the company's coal mines and expressing the hope that there would be an immediate resumption of production.

The United States Steel Corporation approved acceptance of a Mediation Board proposal that the full board membership of 11 should make a decision in the dispute, to be binding upon both parties.

Two other steel companies notified the board, however, that they preferred another alternative which the board had proposed—that the dispute be decided by a joint board composed of members of the miners and the industry. These firms were the Weirton Steel Company, of Pittsburgh, and the Wheeling (W. Va.) Steel Corporation.

Lewis declined to comment on the action of U. S. Steel. It was understood, however, that the plan to which U. S. Steel agreed would be unacceptable to the union on the ground that the position of William H. Davis, board chairman, and other board members was already known.

Negro WPA Workers Share In $130,000,000 Airport Defenses

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The part which Negro workers are taking in the $130,000,000 defense airport program of the Work Projects Administration is reflected in employment figures issued this week by Alfred Edgar Smith, Staff Adviser of the Federal WPA.

In every State except Delaware, an army of 71,000 men was employed at the beginning of the current fiscal year on 278 sites certified by the Secretary of War or the Secretary of Navy as having military importance. In 11 Southern States, where 97 of the sites are located, there were 11,000 WPA Negro workers on airport projects. The estimated completed cost of these airport construction and improvement projects in the South is $38,366,566 in WPA funds and contributions of the sponsor.

For the southern region, Negro workers in the defense airport program were about 49 percent of the total. They ranged from 80 percent in Louisiana, where a $2,644,941 program was under way, to 14 percent in Texas, where funds for 15 airport sites reach the $5,000,000 mark.

Figures cited by Mr. Smith also reveal that Florida's 31 airport project sites lead all other States in this type of WPA defense construction. The 2,750 Negro workers in Florida were approximately 38 percent of the total number of workers employed at these sites on work to cost $15,000,000. Another large WPA airport construction program is in Alabama, where 57 percent of the workers on 12 sites, valued at $5,743,167, were Negroes.

Other employment percentages reported by Mr. Smith for airport construction workers of the race and estimated completed cost of active projects in the Southern States were:

Arkansas, 55 percent, $887,046; Georgia, 70, $2,641,729; Mississippi, 62, $2,520,251; North Carolina, 52, $1,979,999; South Carolina, 46, $530,492; Tennessee, 27, $149,486, and Virginia, 49.2 percent and $1,257,223 the estimated completed cost.

Heavy Pressure Makes Companies Employ Negroes

AUG 23 1941

NEW YORK CITY—Heavy pressure from sources outside the Office of Production Management, notably criticism by the NAACP and other New York City groups, is having an effect on the employment policy of the Brewster Airplane Company, it was announced here this week by the NAACP.

On August 13, for the first time in its history, Brewster took on a Negro employe in the regular course of hiring, without any special request.

However, contrary to reports from the office of Dr. Robert C. Weaver of OPM, the NAACP asserts that Edmond Van Osten, 31, a Negro with nine years of experience as a tinsmith, not only was turned down the first time by Brewster, but was called back and told bluntly that they "never" would give him a job.

At the same time Van Osten was being refused, white men with two years of experience as tinsmith, were being employed. The company excuse that tinsmithing "is an allied occupation and not the most desirable type of experience for aluminum sheet metal work in aircraft manufacture" falls flat because employment records show that aircraft companies are begging for men with tinsmith experience. Brewster is gobbling up all it can get with two years of tinsmithing experience.

Not Sufficient Aluminum Workers

"It stands to ordinary reason," said an NAACP statement, "that with aircraft companies doubling and tripling their employes in the tremendous expansion of the national defense program, there would not be enough purely aluminum sheet metal workers. Every company has had to take on men in what Dr. Weaver's office calls 'allied occupations' and train them to handle alumnum. Our point is the Brewster company turned down a Negro with nine years of experience and hired whites with two."

A responsible official of the New York State Employment Service in answer to a question from he NAACP on Van Osten's qualifications stated: "There will always be room for some differences of opinion as to just when a man is qualified or not, but in the Van Osten case there can be no room for doubt."

AUG 23 1941

Dr. Weaver's Release Denied

In the exchange of charges and counter-charges between the NAACP and Dr. Weaver's office, the NAACP this week stated that four of the eleven Negroes mentioned in Dr. Weaver's release were employed by Brewster after the NAACP charges were made in the press.

John J. Woods, a Negro riveter who was refused employment by Brewster, was called back to the plant after the NAACP charges were made and employed, not as a riveter, but as a sheet metal helper.

The NAACP believes the Brewster company furnishes an example of the necessity of constant vigilance by organizations outside of OPM and the need for close examination of all the "smooth excuses" of companies seeking to dodge the employment of Negroes by one pretense or another.

The NAACP declared it felt that OPM representatives shot into a local situation for a day or two of interviews might easily be misled by employers and personnel representatives.

AUG 25 1941

Weaver Finds Facts Contrary To Reports

WASHINGTON. — Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM. made public this week the findings of an investigation by his office into the employment practices of the Brewster Aeronautical corporation in Long Island City, N. Y.

The investigation resulted from published charges by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that, contrary to announcements by Dr. Weaver's office, the New York aircraft firm had "made no steps to drop its color bars," and that the Office of Production Management" is attempting to paint a rosy picture of a dark situation."

The N.A.A.C.P. charged:

(1) That Brewster Aircraft corporation hired five Negro workers as sheet-metal assistants and that "it is also rumored that one of these assistants was recently fired."

Investigation by Dr. Weaver's office revealed:

(1) That, following a visit to the plant by representatives of the Negro-employment and training branch of OPM on June 25, the Brewster corporation hired seven Negro defense trainees as sheet-metal workers. These seven youths were eight of a total of 25 Negro trainees offered employment by the OPM representatives through telegram and mail. The other 17 Negro graduates did not respond to the offer.

AUG 25 1941

None of the seven youths, who, like all trainees, are classified as sheet metal helpers, has been fired. They are paid the same wages and have been assured the same promotions as all other persons accepted from defense training courses.

At present, even Negro trainee-graduates are employed as sheet-metal production workers in the Brewster plant. Seven of these were working on August 1 when the N.A.A.C.P. issued its release.

The N.A.A.C.P. charged:

(2) That during the week of July 23, Edmond Van Osten, 31, of Brooklyn, N. Y., "who has nine years of experience as a sheetmetal worker," was denied employment as a sheet-metal worker because of his racial identity.

Investigation by Dr. Weaver's office revealed:

(2) That, on his application blank at the Brewster plant, Mr. Van Osten listed his experience as that of a tinsmith's helper and declared that he had been employed in that capacity from 1931 to 1939. He has been working on odd jobs since 1939. Tinsmithing is an allied occupation and not the most desirable type of experience for aluminum sheetmetal work in aircraft manufacture. Mr. Van Osten claimed no experience in the latter field.

A review of the application blanks of 50 white men rejected on the day of Mr. Van Osten's visit revealed that the majority of this group possessed more suitable experience for aircraft metal work. None of these men was hired, however.

The N.A.A.C.P. charged:

(3) That John J. Woods, 22, of Yonkers, N. Y., "with 400 hours of special training in aircraft riveting," was denied employment at Brewster because of his racial identity.

Investigation by Dr. Weaver's office revealed:

(3) That John J. Woods was one of the eight Negro youths originally taken to the plant by OPM representatives. While the seven others were hired as sheetmetal workers, Woods was told that there were no openings at that time for riveter-trainees.

Woods, however, has since been given employment by the company and is now one of the eleven Negro sheet-metal production workers there.

The N.A.A.C.P. charged:

(4) That Oliver Ming, 21, of New York City, who "has both training and experience," and who "worked for a year at LaGuardia field as junior aircraft assistant," was denied employment as a sheet-metal worker because of his racial identity.

Investigation by Dr. Weaver's office revealed:

(4) That Mr. Ming's training in aircraft manufacture had been limited and was not comparable to that of youths hired on the date of his visit, and that his experience was in the operating rather than the manufacturing field of aviation.

Mr. Ming is now employed in an operating capacity at Wright Field in Ohio.

Defense Effort Spells Jobs For Many Negroes

Tuskegee Air Training School Employing Hundreds

Negroes are being called in large numbers to take a definite place in the national defense program in Alabama.

The Alabama State Employment Service has opened a temporary local office at Tuskegee to supply hundreds of workers for the army air training station which has been located near Tuskegee.

Already severel hundred negroes have been recruited through the Tuskegee office and are now engaged in grading and other operations on the site of the training school.

Reports received from local offices of the Alabama State Employment Service indicate that negroes are being recruited for national defense jobs in many sections of Alabama. Between Jan. 1 and May 31 the Alabama State Employment Service found jobs for 11,850 negroes. This is 48.9 per cent of all placements made by the service in Alabama during the first five months of 1941. In the nation during the same period 20.4 per cent of the placements were negro workers.

President Roosevelt recently issued an executive order which prohibits discrimination against any segment of American citizens. However, investigations indicate that negroes, even before the order was issued, were given the opportunity to obtain defense jobs on the projects in Alabama.

Negro Contractors

Tuskegee is being watched by citizens of all sections of the United States. This is the first project in the national defense program that has been put into the hands of negro contractors. McKissick and McKissick of Nashville, negro building contractors, were awarded the contract to build the structures at the Tuskegee training base. They are using the Tuskegee office of the Alabama State Employment Service in recruiting the labor needed on the project. At the end of this week more than 550 persons had been referred to the job by the Tuskegee office. A large majority of the referrals were negro workers who live in Macon and adjoining counties. This is in line with the policy of the Employment Service and a large majority of the national defense contractors in Alabama. First consideration is given to local workers who are qualified for the particular jobs before any effort is made to obtain workers from other sections of the United States.

Although work on the Tuskegee project was started only about a month ago, temporary structures have been built for administrative and supply staffs and more than 500 workers are now engaged in grading, draining and preparing the grounds for the buildings.

Labor Needs Not Met

Even the calling in of all classes of workers who are available for national defense jobs will not meet the labor needs of the country. Paul V. McNutt, Federal security administrator, advised Judge John D. Petree, director of Industrial Relations, today that a survey of labor requirements of 9,305 employers in industries vital to national defense revealed that a minimum of 487,000 additional workers would be needed by Oct. 1.

Representatives of State Employment Service throughout the country visit selected defense employers regularly to obtain estimates of labor requirements. It is on the basis of their estimates that the Bureau of Employment Security of the Social Security Board is able to make advance plans for recruiting and, where necessary, training the number and kinds of workers required. The information is also made available to defense training and housing officials, as well as a number of other defense agencies.

The greatest relative increase in employment, Mr. McNutt reported, was expected in the ship and boatbuilding and repairing industry. Employment in this industry is expected to increase 64 per cent over employment in May. The aircraft industry reported the next largest relative increase, which will be 34 per cent.

BY HORACE R. CAYTON FEB 15 1941

THE Negro's most serious problem is that of finding employment. There is little wonder, then, no issue has stirred the group to such an extent as has the exclusion of Negroes from employment in the National Defense Program. In recent months, the entire Negro population has become articulate on this subject and has begun to examine, in a much more critical fashion, its position in the entire economic system of this country.

Recent studies have shown that in Chicago, for example, though Negroes constitute but 7% of the population, they were 40% of the relief load. This column has predicted that as white workers were reabsorbed into private industry the percentage (though not necessarily the number) of Negroes on the relief rolls would increase. Indeed, one could well predict that unless there is some improvement, Negros will constittue the majority of the chronically unemployed of the country.

Mr. Cayton

HAVE LOST GROUND

IT is evident that in many industries Negroes have not only made few advances, as far as employment is concerned, but have definitely lost ground. One method of measuring this is to note what is happening to Negro youths. FEB 15 1941

In this connection, we have found very interesting a small study prepared by Miss Mary Herrick, a teacher at DuSable high school in Chicago. Miss Herrick has traced 362 DuSable alumni (which figure represents approximately 15 per cent of all graduates of that school.

The returns which she got through a questionnaire are startling, for they represent the adjustments which Negro youths (who have acquired high school educations) are making in the economic world.

For example, 43 per cent of the girls and 23 per cent of the boys stated that they had had no employment at all since leaving high school. About one-half of the boys and two-fifths of the girls stated that they were continuing their training, but the overwhelming proportion of them were in the free city colleges. Only 2 per cent of the boys were in any sort of trade school.

The Department of Labor made a study of the income level of families in Chicago a few years ago and found that 25 per cent of the Negro families had an annual income of $750, or less and that 90 per cent of the Negro families earned $2,000 or less, annually, White families earned $2,000 annually, or less and constituted (in comparison to the 90 per cent of the Negro families) only 11 per cent of their total number.

LOW WAGES

ONE can understand these extraordinarily low wages when the incomes of Miss Herrick's Negro high school alumni group are examined. Of those gainfully employed, 11 per cent of both the boys and girls earned $5 a week or less and 25 per cent between $5 and $10. Eleven per cent of the girls and 24 per cent of the boys ea. between $10 and $15 a week. Tho. employed on the Works Projects Administration constituted 16 per cent of the girls and 20 per cent of the boys.

The most startling fact to us was that only 7 per cent of the total number of male graduates had jobs which were better, in terms of income, than WPA positions. A comparable group of white graduates would be employed in offices as clerks with an opportunity to advance; in the public utilities; in the various trades and crafts; as skilled workmen and supervisors.

One cannot put too much emphasis upon the small sample which was selected for study in one northern city. However, if we are to interpret these figures in terms of our own experience, these figures indicate what we already know . . . that the Negro is losing ground in the competitive struggle for jobs and that high school training does not insure Nergo youths of the opportunity of securing white collar job and positions of skill and responsibility. FEB 15 1941

Our youths are not being absorbed into private employment at the same rate and to the same exten that they are being given high school training. Finally, it is evident that, with work in white collar positions denied them, Negro youths must get more training in trade schools in order that they will be in a position to force their acceptance in these fields first.

Machinists Get Jobs In Capital

Given Employment In Washington Navy Yard

FEB 9 - 1941.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(A N P) —Progress in the fight against discrimination against Negro skilled workers in the U. S. Navy yards was noted this week in the employment of more than a score of Negro machinists at the Washington Navy yard following their school here.

At the same time, it was learned that between 15 and 20 more Negro workers have been accepted as trainees in the apprentice school. Following graduation, they are expected to receive immediate employment in the Washington Navy yard as machinists third grade.

The banning of Negro trainees from both private and government-owned ship and navy yard apprentice schools has been protested by Negro organizations in various parts of the country. These protests have been made to the National Defense Advisory commission, and the problem has been turned over to Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant in the division of labor supply.

"Once the bans were broken down and we were permitted to enter," one of them explained, "the director protected us from any unfair charges of incompetency which were made by prejudiced supervisors."

The success in the Washington Navy yard is expected to inspire other local groups to continue to fight against bans in other private and government owned ship and navy yards. The pay scale of the machinist is from $7.48 to 8.44 per day in the Washington Navy yard.

Let Negroes Work

From Staunton News-Leader

AT Fort Meade this week, thousands of carpenters, plumbers and other mechanics were seen at work and as they passed out of the reservation in their cars. Scarcely 10 Negroes were among them. No charge of discrimination has been made at Fort Meade, where most of the Virginia troops go next month, but the Times-Dispatch charges discrimination at Camp Lee, near Richmond, and on construction projects in and around Newport News.

If Negro mechanics are not being used on defense jobs, it is safe to assume that it is not due to governmental policy or to the contractors. Employment of labor and nearly all questions involving the workers are dictated by the unions, which are charging a fee of from $50 to $70 for the right to get a job on a camp construction project. This fee can easily be made a bar to most Negro workers by the simple expedient of requiring "cash on the line" instead of collecting it in installments out of the pay roll. There is an impossible hurdle for the Negro in some camps because certain unions refuse to admit him to membership. Builders having contracts with such unions would be confronted with strike threats when they to employ Negroes. FEB 8 1941

Discrimination in defense work should not be tolerated because it is unjust and un-American, and because it retards the defense program. There are thousands of skilled Negro mechanics who should be on jobs that have been seriously retarded by the employment at high wages, of unskilled white labor.

The nation makes a grave mistake in permitting discrimination against Negro workers at any time. It is an even more serious error to permit any group to block the use of them on defense projects. Negro manpower must be used to the full in both the industrial and military phases of defense, and it can be used without harmful friction if intelligence is applied to working arrangements, housing, and the military service. The Negro race is loyal, patriotic, and ready to do its full part in the present emergency. It should not be embittered by discrimination on the part of a few individuals or groups who attitude in no way reflects the majority sentiment of the American people.

AIRPLANE FACTORIES WANT SKILLED HELP; WON'T HIRE NEGROES

FEB 15 1941

Urban League Exposes Three Cases of Defense Discrimination In Long Island Plants.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—Any doubt that airplane factories holding large defense orders are discriminating against Negroes in the employment of new workers was dispelled here this week as the result of a comprehensive survey of factories in the New York area made by the Industrial Relations Department of the New York Urban League.

In a memorandum to the National Urban League, Charles A. Collier, industrial secretary of the New York branch, graphically related his many discouraging experiences over a period of six months in attempting to convince airplane manufacturers that the use of available skilled Negro labor is not only possible but imperative if the defense program is to proceed on schedule.

Mr. Collier's interest in the discouraging, but far from hopeless situation was first aroused in July of last year, when the following item appeared in the New York Daily News:

"Factories Hunting Skilled Workers"

"A severe lack of skilled factory workers, so acute that scouts are being sent to look for suitable applicants, was reported yesterday by Frank S. Hubbard, vice president of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., yesterday. Speaking at a luncheon of Queens manufacturers in Long Island City, Hubbard declared, 'We don't know what we are going to do for more manpower. The problem becomes more acute all the time.'"

Upon reading this statement, Mr Collier promptly wrote to Mr. Hubbard, asking him to confer on the question of the company's attitude and policy on employing trained Negro workers.

NO COMPANY POLICY; WE JUST WEREN'T HIRED!

He also called Mr. J. R. Hunt, Jr., of the Brewster Company's Personnel Department, and acquainted him with the fact that there are a number of trained Negro aviation mechanics available in New York City, including a dozen or more who had graduated from the Manhattan High School of Aviation Trades. Since the company had given employment to white graduates of this high school, Mr. Collier argued, certainly colored boys who had had similar training should be given consideration.

Mr. Hunt admitted that no Negroes were employed by his company. However, he insisted, at the same time, that there was no company policy against the employment of Negroes.

He said that objections to working with Negroes undoubtedly would come from the men already in the plant, and that the company did not wish to experiment at the present time because of the possibility of labor difficulties or the impairment of the morale of its workers.

MANY GERMANS EMPLOYED; THEY RESENT NEGROES

Mr. Hunt admitted that about three-fourths of the workers in the plant were of German extraction and intimated that they might be particularly averse to the introduction of skilled Negro mechanics.

Because Mr. Hunt seemed to be personally very sympathetic, he was asked to interview and receive applications from two Negro aviation mechanics, and agreed to do this. A few days later, the New York Urban League sent to his office Walter L. Smith, of Jamaica, N. Y., and Arthur Ming, of New York City, both of whom possessed the necessary qualifications for employment. They were interviewed by Mr. Hunt and their applications for jobs were accepted and placed on file.

A month went by with no results, and about the middle of September Mr. Collier went back to the Brewster plant to interview Mr. Hunt again. He found that Mr. Hunt had been transferred to another department, and was referred to a Mr. J. T. Brennan. Mr. Brennan told him that the matter was under consideration, that it had been discused by the various executives of the Brewster Corporation, but that no definite action had been decided upon.

He agreed to take the matter up with Mr. Hubbard and to let the Urban League know of any action that resulted. A letter was written to Mr. Hubbard, but no reply has ever been received.

INTERRACIAL COMMITTEE FORMED; STILL NO ACTION

Shortly after this second interview, an Interracial Committee was formed, composed of representatives of the Catholic Interracial Council, The Committee for Employment Opportunities for Negroes, The National Conference of Christians and Jews, and the New York Urban League. The purpose of this committee was to secure employment for Negroes in the aviation industry.

On November 4, the secretary of this committee sent a letter to Mr. James Work, president of the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, asking that he confer with a delegation.

No reply to, or acknowledgement of, this letter was received and when a follow-up telephone call was made, Mr. Work's secretary said that he could not be interviewed on the matter.

KNUDSEN PROMISES "INVESTIGATION"

Having exhausted every means at its disposal of succesfully negotiating with the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation for the employment of Negroes, the committee brought this instance of discrimination to the attention of Senator Robert F. Wagner, who has since taken it up directly with Mr. William S. Knudsen, Director General of the Office of Production Management.

Mr. Knudsen's reply, written on January 17, was sympathetic but non-committal. It said in part:

"The problem in connection with discrimination against Negroes is, of course, a very serious one and one with which we must all concern ourselves. You are undoubtedly aware that there is no legal means by which we can require private concerns to employ any particular type of help. However, I am having the matter investigated to determine any recommendations I should make to the aircraft manufacturers."

To date, however the employment situation is still unchanged; not a single Negro mechanic is employed in the vast Brewster plant.

CLEAR-CUT CASE OF RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

According to Mr. Collier, the situation represents a clear-cut case of racial discrimination. The Brewster Corporation admits its need for skilled aviation mechanics. Trained Negro aviation mechanics are available and their applications have been accepted by the plant. White persons with the same background of education and training have been employed to work at the plant and the only excuse implied by officials of the Brewster Corporation for denying employment to Negro mechanics is that they are Negroes.

ONE NEGRO AMONG 2400!—HE'S A CHAUFFEUR

A second company holding one of the government's large defense program orders for aircraft, and similarly discriminating openly against trained Negro applicants, is the Republic Aviation Corporation of Farmingdale, L. I. Mr. Collier, in his report, stated that of 2400 persons employed at this plant only one—a chauffeur—is a Negro.

The New York Urban League's Industrial secretary became interested in the situation at the Republic Corporation when on September 9, officials of this firm anounced that they would expand their plant approximately five times for the production of U. S. Army

Mr. Collier visited the plant and immediately conferred there with Mr. William L. Wilson, Republic's director of public relations. He told Mr. Wilson that trained Negro aviation mechanics, recent graduates of the Manhattan High School of Aviation trades, were available for employment and urged that he use them in the expanded plant wherever possible.

Mr. Wilson imediately expressed doubt that such a step could be taken, saying that he feared white workers in the plant would object if Negroes were employed. The company, he stated, did not want any friction or dissatisfaction among its workers which would interfere with efficient production on defense orders.

However, he agreed to discuss the matter with his associates and promised to inform the Urban League of whatever decision was made.

NEGROES BARRED FROM TRAINING

About amonth later, while still no word had been received from him on this subject, press announcements stated that the Republic Corporation was beginning a program to train 8,000 new aircraft workers who would be employed immediately upon successful completion of their training courses.

Mr. Collier went to see Mr. Wilson again, and at this time Mr. Wilson told him that at a meeting of department heads the question of Negro employment had been discussed, but that the officials involved had felt that Negro and white workers would not get along together in the plant. Some of the department heads, Mr. Wilson stated, had even refused to consider having Negroes working under them.

With reference to the suggestion that Negroes be admitted to the new training program, Mr. Wilson said that since the persons to be trained were to receive jobs in the plant, Negro applicants for training would not be employed in view of the attitude of the department heads.

He added frankly that the company's chief immediate concern was with the problem of plant expansion and increase in production. After these difficulties were removed, he indicated, it might be possible for something to be done about the employment of Negroes

KELLETT DODGES ISSUE FOR REPUBLIC CORP.

On November 4, a letter was sent to Mr. W. Wallace Kellett president of the Republic Aviation Corporation, by George K. Hunton, executive secretary of the Catholic Interracial Council. Mr. Hunton asked Mr. Kellett to confer on the matter with a committee composed of Judge Stephen Jackson of the New York City Children's Court, Elmer A. Carter of the New York State Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board, and Harold P. Herman of the Board of Supervisors of Nassau County The letter was referred to Mr. Wilson. Mr. Wilson replied, stating that the company's position was unchanged, but agreed to see the committee.

On December 6, he conferred with the committee at the Republic plant, but no solution was arrived at and Mr. Wilson would agree to no plan of action looking toward the gradual integration of Negro mechanics into the Republic plant.

Mr. Wilson's attitude, as expressed in the following statement, represents in general the attitude of the aviation industry at the present time toward the use of Negro workers:

"We feel that the Republic Aviation Corporation cannot do any more in this regard right now than is being done; and the pressure of urgent national defense business over the period of the next two or three months upon our chief executives will not permit me to re-open a question which I have just completed discussing with them and upon which they have made a decision. This present situation is of an emergency nature and is not one that will be long continued, I trust; but the policy-making responsibility of such a question must necessarily rest with our chief management personnel and it is impossible to ask them to devote any more of their time, at this particular moment, to a question which they have just explored."

OTHER INVESTIGATIONS IN PROGRESS IN DISTRICT

The New York Urban League is now engaged in a similar investigation of the Grumman Aircraf

Engineering Corporation at Bethpage, L. I. This corporation which supplies airships for the Navy and Marines, is in complete accord with other aviation plants on Long Island, in excluding Negro workers.

All letters and telephone calls to officials of the Grumman Company have as yet gone unanswered, however, and it has not even been possible to secure an interview on the matter with a responsible official.

No Negroes Among 1,500 Workers in Marshall Plant

SEP 12 1941

MARSHALL, Mo.—With national defense contracts and aobut 1,500 workers, all white, the International Shoe company with headquarters in St. Louis, and a factory here, has a policy of not employing colored workers, according to the Saline county branch of the N.A.A.C.P. Frank Brown of the branch, reported that he talked personally with the empoyment manager of the company and was told that no colored would be hired.

The branch will send affidavits containing the facts of discrimination to the Committee on Fair Employment Practices.

Arbitration the Better Way

It was inevitable that the new political power given workers would be followed by excesses, such as the strike by hundreds of men to rebuke management for discharging two incompetent water boys. No one of the strikers would claim that was an adequate reason for stopping production. They struck because the union has the say over personnel under the new order, and the union's control was being flouted by the management. Wounded dignity makes men do unreasonable things.

The fact that there must be competence or the work suffers, the union cast aside as inconsequential. Unions forget about production also when a jurisdictional wrangle occurs. In short, along with the much needed reforms in favor of the worker have come some new evils. The unthinking say in answer that employers having enjoyed too much of the profits of industry, are due to give the employes an inning.

Two wrongs do not make a right. Maybe over-emphasis of labor's rights was necessary in order to do away with man-killing hours and inadequate wages. If so, events of the day prove that it is time that we begin to temper zeal with sense. It ought not be necessary in a crisis like this for men by the thousands to go out on strike because of a handful. An adjustment of wage is finally worked out in conference. Then why the strike, with many millions of man-hours lost which are needed if we are going to whip Hitler?

We can see the reasonableness of sailors demanding a raise in pay for the extra risk they run in transporting goods into the war zones. But those goods must go, and there is nobody but them to make the delivery. Obviously the corrective lies with neither the employers or the employes, but with the public for which the government speaks.

The President has mapped his course. He has shown courage and initiative by taking a hand in correcting some labor abuses, the refusal to share work with Negroes being a shining example. Let him ask legislation patterned after that already in force in England by which aggrieved workers make their complaints and keep on working during the adjustment. The American people will support him.

The nation's need comes first. It must be possible for complaints to be talked over without workers or employers going to extremes. The government should see to it that appropriate legislation is passed to bring this about.

NEGROES MORE ACTIVE IN DEFENSE EFFORT

Large Number Placed In State's Defense Plants

MONTGOMERY — Negroes are being called in large numbers to take a definite place in the national defense program in Alabama.

The Alabama State Employment Service has opened a temporary local office at Tuskegee to supply hundreds of workers for the army air training station which has been located near Tuskegee.

Already several hundred Negroes have been recruited through the Tuskegee office and are now engaged in grading and other operations on the site of the training school.

Reports received from local offices of the Alabama State Employment Service indicate that Negroes are being recruited for national defense jobs in many sections of Alabama. Between Jan. 1 and May 31, the Alabama State Employment Service found jobs for 11,850 Negroes. This is 48.9 per cent of all placements made by the Service in Alabama during the first five months of 1941. In the nation during the same period 20.4 per cent of the placements were Negro workers.

President Roosevelt recently issued an executive order which prohibits discrimination against any segment of American citizens. However, investigations indicate that Negroes, even before the order was issued, were given the opportunity to obtain defense jobs on the projects in Alabama.

Tuskegee is being watched by citizens of all sections of the United States. This is the first project in the national defense program that has been put into the hands of Negro conractors. McKissick and McKissick of Nashville, Negro building contractors, were awarded the contract to build the structures at the Tuskegee training base. They are using the Tuskegee office of the Alabama State Employment Service in recruiting the labor needed on the project. At the end of this week more than 550 persons had been referred to the job by the Tuskegee office. A large majority of the referrals were Negro workers who live in Macon and adjoining counties. This is in line with the policy of the Employment Service and a large majority of the national defense contractors in Alabama. First consideration is given to local workers who are qualified for the particular jobs before any effort is made to obtain workers from other sections of the United States.

CAMP LEE TO GET 20 NEGRO CARPENTERS

SEP 20 1941

PETERSBURG, Va., Sept. 18—(ANP)—According to the constructing quartermaster's office at Camp Lee, 20 Negro carpenters are expected to begin work the latter part of this week on the construction of two regimental chaplains' headquarters buildings. This new development came as a result of OPM's request that a group of Negro carpenters be hired to work on this project.

Although Negroes had been employed for construction work at the camp, this marks the first time they have been hired by Doyle & Russell-Wise Construction company.

It was learned that an OPM representative telephoned H. W. Roberts, project manager for the contractors, asking him if the company discriminated between white and Negro skilled labor. Averring that the contractors had no such policy, since the company employs Negro carpenters in the Portsmouth Navy yard, Roberts was requested to employ Negro skilled workers.

Capt. Armstrong, the constructing quartermaster, said, "We cannot dictate to the contractor in any way the type of labor he may use."

Some 1,800 white carpenters are reported by an official of the Petersburg-Hopewell white "local" to be working at this moment on construction at Camp Lee, but not one Negro carpenter. This despite the fact that the Hopewell-Petersburg "local" has been giving the Negro carpenters on the Camp Lee job what the Negroes describe as "100 per cent co-operation." So the layoff of the 32 Negro carpenters cannot be attributed to hostility of the white local which has jurisdiction in the Camp Lee area. The Negro carpenters are members of a Negro local formed in Richmond, with the co-operation of the white union, and the organization is able to supply as many as 100 qualified Negro carpenters for the Camp Lee job, according to WILEY A. HALL, its business agent.

If white carpenters object to working on the same buildings with Negro carpenters, as some are reported to do, the Negroes can be placed on separate buildings. With 1,800 white carpenters now said to be on the job at Camp Lee, it will be nothing short of outrageous if any obstacles arise in the way of employing at least 20 Negro carpenters there—the number referred to in yesterday's announcement. As a matter of fact, two or three times that number would not be too many, and they ought to be put to work at once, instead of "the latter part of next week."

Three young Negro trainees in aircraft sheet metal were called to the North American Aviation bomber plant in Kansas City, Kas., this week for a week's trial. If they make good, it is reasonable to expect that they will be given permanent employment.

The three of Kansas City, Mo., who reported for work Monday night, October 6, are James Robinson, 1506 Brooklyn avenue; John McThomas and William Riley, 1516 the Paseo. All three were graduated several weeks ago from the national defense aircraft sheet metal class at the Manual Training high school. All three completed the 12-week course with high marks.

Robinson, McThomas and Riley are the first Negro skilled workers to be called to the bomber plant. Two Negroes previously have been employed as janitors. All skilled workers must go through a week's try-out before getting permanent employment.

The North American Aviation company is headed by J. H. Kindelberger who made the startling statement last March that Negroes would not be employed as aircraft workers no matter how skilled they might be. A nation-wide protest followed that statement. The move to employ skilled Negro labor is taken by Kansas Citians to be a mute retraction of that un-American statement.

AIRCRAFT AND SHIPBUILDING JOBS TO OPEN

McNutt Tells Of Greatest Demands In Trades And Professions

WASHINGTON, D. C. — More than 250,000 more workers, over half of them in aircraft and shipbuilding, will be needed in the next four-month period ending December 31, to meet the requirements of a selected group of 9,900 plants manufacturing vital defense materials, it was announced last week by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

Mr. McNutt said that these figures represent employers' estimates as reported to the bureau of employment security, Social Security Board. Other industries in which a substantial number of hirings are anticipated in the next four months include iron and steel, 31,930; non-electrical machinery, 26,000; automobile and automobile equipment, 22,760; electrical machinery, 16,285.

The types of workers most in demand in the professional and managerial class are tool designers and aeronautical engineers. In the skilled trades the greatest need is for machinists, welders, sheet metal workers, engine-lathe operators, tool makers, milling machine operators, turret-lathe operators, ship fitters, marine machinists, machine shop inspectors, and ship carpenters.

In the semi-skilled trades there is need for detail assemblers in aircraft manufacturing, floor assemblers, aircraft riveters, single-spindle drill-press operators, final assemblers in aircraft manufacturing, and bunch-press operators.

Negroes and Defense—V

NEGRO carpenters have been getting the run-around again at Camp Lee despite the attention focused in the past upon this type of discrimination, and despite the efforts of the defense authorities in Washington to see that such practices are discontinued.

It was announced from Petersburg in yesterday's TIMES-DISPATCH that 20 Negro carpenters "are expected to begin work at Camp Lee the latter part of next week . . . as a result of a request made by the Office of Production Management in Washington." The dispatch did not say that the request was an outgrowth of discrimination shown in August against 32 Negro carpenters who went to work at Camp Lee the middle of the month, and then were laid off, for reasons not made plain.

Free Defense Courses To Be Offered At Howard U.

573 Colored and White Students Register for Defense Courses

SEP 29 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Because of the growing demand by defense industries for technically trained men, 573 colored and white students have registered for training in defense courses at Howard University since the school was authorized to offer the courses by the United States Office of Education.

L. K. Downing, dean of the School of Architecture and Engineering, who is director of all defense courses at the university, announced this week that all of the courses are of college grade and have been designed primarily for pre-employment persons.

Registration for the first series of intensive courses in Engineering, Science and Management Defense Training will begin on October 10. The courses to be given include Architectual Drafting, Basic Principles of Organic Chemistry, Chemistry of Powder and Explosives, Part, B; Elementary Electrical Circuits and Machinery, Elementary Machine Design, Engineering Drawing, Geodetic Computer, Surveying and Mapping, and Tool Engineering.

High school graduates who have had a minimum of two years of mathematics are eligible for the majority of the courses. Students who have completed a course in trigonometry may qualify for the course in Surveying, while students who have had the equivalent of two years of college work in engineering or mathematics may qualify for Geodetic Computer, and those who have had a minimum of three years of college chemistry may be eligible for the course in Chemistry of Powder and Explosives.

16 Carpenters Hired On Camp Construction

OCT 11 1941

CAMP LEE, Va., Oct. 9—Sixteen carpenters, members of newly organized A. L. of L. Negro local, started work at Camp Lee, Virginia Tuesday for the first time in that area. White unions had previously barred Negroes and refused permits for Negroes to work on huge construction jobs there. As 16 went to work, estimated 200 white carpenters being released daily in section.

Glenn Martin Case May Go to Mediation Board

BALTIMORE

A demand that the question of employment of colored workers at the Glenn L. Martin Aviation Plant in Baltimore be submitted to the Defense Mediation Board, with National Negro Congress officials representing colored workers, was presented to the Office of Production Management on Monday.

The demand was presented to Sidney R. Hillman, assocociate OPM director, during a conference between officials of that agency and NNC representatives.

Davis Protests Contracts

John P. Davis, executive secretary of the NNC and spokesman for his group, urged issuance of an order denying defense contracts to firms refusing to hire colored workers, either by Hillman or President Roosevelt.

Both Hillman and Dr. Robert C. Weaver, director of the Negro training and employment section of OPM, protested that such an order should represent the last possible recourse.

OPM Expresses Hope

The OPM officials then stated their firm belief that they would be able to obtain co-operation from defense employers in the utilization of all available colored labor.

MAY 10 1941

In support of this position they cited assurance from such employers, sent in response to a letter recently written by Hillman urging the integration of colored workers, which are being received at the rate of dozens daily.

Cites Manufacturer's Plan

One employer, a mid-western aircraft manufacturer, has already informed the OPM of his plans for training and employment of 1200 colored workers, the delegation was informed by Dr. Weaver.

"We have received definite commitments from this manufacturer," Dr. Weaver told the group, "and defense housing units are already under construction for more than 300 colored families at the site."

Hits Aircraft Plant

The NNC spokeman then returned to the specific question of employment at the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant now under construction near Baltimore in which he declared that at least 7,000 colored workers should be employed.

As a solution to this problem he demanded that the question be submitted to the Defense Mediation Board for a hearing at which would be present representatives of the labor unions, company officials, and officials of the National Negro Congress as representatives of colored workers.

Questions NNC

Hillman then questioned the right of the National Negro Congress to represent all of the workers at such a hearing and stated that other organizations, such as the NAACP and the Urban League, would be as much within their rights in claiming such representation as would the NNC.

MAY 10 1941

Dr. Weaver announced that field representatives of his staff and of other labor division agencies of OPM are making personal contacts with the defense employers to see that concrete steps are taken to facilitate the employment of colored workers.

Representatives Present

Representatives of the congress at Monday's conference included: John P. Davis, executive secretary; George B. Murphy, Jr., assistant secretary; Doxey A. Wilkerson, the Rev. W. H. Jernigan, U. S. Ttate, Miss Naomi Hamburger, International Workers' Order; and Mrs. Gertrude Stone, Washington Branch, NAACP.

Several hours after conclusion of the conference, about twenty-five members of the NNC formed a picket line in front of the building which houses the Office of Production Management, bearing placards stating their opposition to the policies of Hillman, defense contractors, and the OPM.

Justice Is Demanded For Negro Workers In Defense Program

MAY 10 1941

Increasing Evidence Of Discrimination Is Charged In Statement

BY CARROLL KILPATRICK
Special Washington Correspondent For The Birmingham News

WASHINGTON — Charging that "evidences are increasing" that skilled Negro workers are being excluded from certain defense industries and from training and apprenticeship programs, a group of prominent Americans, including more than a dozen Southerners, this week demanded "justice for Negro Americans in the program for national defense."

The statement was made public when Representative Thomas H. Eliot (D., Mass.) inserted in Thursday's Congressional Record the statement of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries.

MAY 10 1941

Experience has shown, Eliot said, that Negroes "can do skilled jobs just as well as white men, but despite the fact there are today many companies which refuse to hire Negro workers for skilled jobs."

"The country," he added, "needs the work that they can do."

Among the signers of the statement were Algernon Blair, contractor, Montgomery; Donald Comer, president of Avondale Mills, Birmingham; F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute; Mr. Ashby Jones, honorary chairman of the Interracial Commission, Atlanta; C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, Durham, N. C., and John Stewart Bryan, publisher of The Richmond News-Leader and president of William and Mary College.

"This is no time for Americans to compromise with race prejudice and its attendant discriminations in industrial defense programs, whether public or private," the statement said.

"It is destructive of those basic essentials of civilization — political, economic, cultural, educational, religious—which the ages have built upon the concept of the dignity and destiny of the human race.

"We maintain, therefore, that the time has come for the lasting repudiation of race prejudice as an influence in determining the policies of the nation.

"We commend this statement to the thoughtful consideration of the American people, and more particularly of leaders in government, industry, labor and the organs of public opinion."

HARLEMITES PLAN 'NEGRO DAY' TO FIGHT FOR JOBS

All Leaders Unite to Point Out Injustice of Ignoring Colored Workers

MAY 30 1941

NEW YORK, May 21.—(By Nell Dodson for ANP)—Aroused by continued discrimination against Negroes in defense industries, and the Army and Navy, outstanding Harlem citizens were completing plans this week for National Negro day to be celebrated June 27.

Headed by the Citizens' Coo dinating committee, the movement had already gained the support of leading civic groups. Thursday, PM, New York daily paper, sounded the keynote behind initial plans last week by giving a nine-page spread to an expose of discrimination against both trained and untrained Negro workers in defense set-ups.

Herbert Cook, chairman of the Negro Grocers' association of Harlem, who is heading the executive committee for Negro day, is working along with an advisory committee that includes G. Dallis Steele, Grand Deputy of IBPOEW, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Henry K. Kraft, executive secretary of the Harlem branch YMCA, Dr. S. H. Sweeney of St. Mark's M. E. church, and over a dozen other leading civic and social figures.

"I'm sure that every intelligent Negro in America today is getting disgusted with all of this talk of democracy and the light for preservation of equal rights when they won't even let us aid in the preparation of this country's defense. At a time when every American, black and white, shoul dbe standing shoulder to shoulder against the threat of war, 15 million citizens of this nation are being brazenly ignored when they demand to know why they haven't the right to work and live as other Americans have!" Cook stated. "It's about time we're showing we ca nstand up and light as a unified people. Negro day should be a national proclamation that Negroes have contributed to the cultural, social, and civic backgrounds of this country, are an integral part of this nation, and intend to be respeted as such."

The celebration in Harlem will include an hour long parade of floats contributed by businesses, clubs, and fraternal organizations. There will be a special party for the children of the community, and the day will wind up with a dance at the Golden Gate ballroom.

Plans were under way for a radio broadcast over one of the national hook-ups, at a date to be announced later. Band leaders, cabaret entertainers and theatrical luminaries are to figure largely in the set-up of celebration preparations.

Aiding Cook on the executive committee are Homer Smith, Richard Thomas, Mrs. Iolanthe E. Sidney, Iona R. Morris, Sally Gatling, Charles L. Clare, M. T. Magill, and Vernon F. Riddick.

AGITATION AND DEFENSE

Constant agitation of a minority of militant Negroes for equality of opportunity in national defense work is beginning to bear fruit.

Buffalo's Bell Aircraft Company has hired 30 Negro workers and the Curtis-Wright Company in the same city has hired two colored engineers and is training seven Negroes in special courses.

The Cheyney Silk Company in Hartford, Conn., has employed a number of Negro girls.

The Lake City Ammunition Company in Kansas City, Mo., has Negro bricklayers helping to build its plant.

From other parts of the country come reports of a slight liberalization of employment policies in defense plants.

What we have got so far is only a drop in the bucket, but it is much more than we would have received had we kept our mouths shut.

We shall get more opportunities in national defense work in proportion to the skill and persistence of our agitation.

The most important organization is that in each community, and the effectiveness of local organizations depends upon the intelligence and militancy of its leadership.

Streams of letters converging on Washington from all sections of the country will continue to have good effect on the President and the members of Congress.

Mass meetings are valuable to hammer home to the people the necessity of carrying on this fight.

National defense is costing a tremendous sum and Negroes are helping to pay for it every time they buy anything.

It is grossly unfair to tax an underpaid and largely jobless people for the defense of democracy and then deny them democracy in employment in the businesses made possible by their tax money.

On the military and naval front we are making little or no headway.

This is largely due to the fact that we have been fooled by the extension of the barriers of segregation in the Army into believing that some big gains have been made.

While it is true that Negroes are now serving in many branches of the military service from which they were previously barred, they are serving in segregated units, and this is undemocratic although, unfortunately, not un-American.

Suppose you want to know where I met all these folk . . . and hundreds more? Well . . .

Thursday evening Eve Lynn took us by the fashionabl and exclusive Pyramid Club (something like our Loendi) There we munched on baked squab and all the trimmin's . . Protest Against Job Discrimination Succeeding, But Full Victory Not Won

It is heartening to observe that there has been unity of effort on the part of most colored Americans in this fight for job opportunities. All across this broad land of ours, organizations of all kinds and types have given of their strength to the common objective — opportunity to work for as well as die for democracy.

It is pleasant to see the manner in which enlightened white Americans have joined in the attack against industries and labor organizations which placed right of race before right of country.

It is a joyous feeling to find that colored Americans refused to remain quiet on a vital issue, or adopt a policy of appeasement simply because war clouds threatened. They spoke right out in church and called a spade a spade, although there were certain voices, weak and trembling, who thought it was improper to work for democracy in America while fighting for it in Europe.

But here is a warning: DON'T STOP HERE. Many battles have been won on hundreds of war-torn fields, but the war was lost. Despite the fact that the bars against employment of colored Americans are falling down, victory will not be won until the last bar is smashed.

It is the "follow through" which means the difference between defeat and victory. While there is much talk about democracy is the opportune time to hit hard for democratic practices. Every time a person speaks about the fight to protect European democracies, listen carefully and then challenge him to practice what he preaches right here in America.

Yes, there is a semblance, a small tremor amid the walls which keep out colored workers, but what we want is an earthquake so that the whole dastardly empire will crumble and fall and permit men and women of all races, creeds and colors to work anywhere according to their individual fitness. That is the principle for which all free men are willing to work, fight and die.

Work for Us, If We Try

Negroes will not share defense work until they do what other workers do to get employment. Employers are told by the government to recruit their labor needs from the "local" supply. In this area, an ideal one for defense plants, the need is about 20,000 new hands. That means 2,000 jobs for Negroes, if they get their proportion. Since every one who applies will not be qualified, their applications must number fully 4,000 to get 2,000 jobs. Nowhere near that number have applied though our unemployed on the rolls of the state employment bureaus of the two Kansas Cities exceed that number.

Young people are letting their opportunity for work slip through their fingers not for lack of education, or anything beyond them. They sit and wait for that which is theirs when they should get up and go after it.

It is time for plain speech. We do too much complaining and not enough trying. There is work for us if we go after it resolutely. We know that our chances for being employed are greater when we can offer a "full crew." The practical thing to do is to apply in such numbers that any way an employer prefers, he can use us.

Defense meetings of unprecedented size, conference after conference to secure equal training, even a delegation to Washington. Yet with all this done, Negroes will not get work unless they apply. Employers do not go out into the streets and beg for help.

Kindelberger and his kind do not need to make any effort to keep work from Negroes, so long as they voluntarily leave undone the things which other workers do to get employed. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad" runs the saying. It is madness for us to keep looking back at the difficulties we have had in getting work in the past, when right before us lies opportunity.

Play the game according to the rules laid down, one of which is that applicants in defense industries shall furnish birth certificates. That is perfectly reasonable requirement. Negroes for the most part come from states where the birth of a Negro child was not recorded. But still a birth certificate can be gotten even in those states or a substitute for it. Negro applicants should hasten to comply, instead of treating the demand for it as another bit of prejudice.

In Plain Words, He Lies!

For pure mendacity to say nothing of calculated cruelty, we nominate the man who said the other day that the reason Negroes would not be employed in the airplane factory was that they would steal parts. It is not true that Negroes generally are thieves and he knew it. There are 18,000,000 of us in this country. The whole prison population, of which the majority are whites, is less than 200,000, and they are under sentence for a variety of crimes, not all for stealing. He is proven false by the figures. APR 25 1941

This statement is typical of the hard straits those are in who try to justify the refusal to employ black workers. With their loyalty established by the record, and their efficiency proven by similar employment in a small way, no ground exists for denying them work in aircraft. However prejudice makes this charge in the hope that it will exasperate us to the point that we will not be able to make coherent answer. He knows he lies, and all America knows it too! APR 25 1941

One thing is true about Negroes beyond question. Before freedom and after it we have been a people who made friends. We have never had money or power with which to command respect. Only lately have we gotten schooling and experience in community life. Yet we carry the keys to many a business and alone of many employes have the fullest confidence of the owners. In days before the gangster—always a white man—the Negro bank messenger with a sack full of money in his hand, was a familiar sight in American cities. Negro domestics are the choice of many a best family, and when their work days are over are buried from the family home and in the family lot. Here in Kansas City Negroes by the thousands work in the packing industry, a line of endeavor so keen in management that it is said to make money out of eve v part of the hog except his squeal. It goes without saying that these black workers could not stay on the job if they were guilty of pilfering as charged. (427)

The more than 10,000 Negroes employed in Henry Ford's motor car factory, a business making parts far more saleable than airplane parts can be, gives the final lies to this mendacious Munchausen who attempts to justifying refusing Negroes work on aircraft by saying they are thieves. APR 25 1941

It is comforting to know that at the very moment when he threw this stench bomb into the situation, the OPM, speaking from the nation's capitol, was calling on manufacturers to employ Negroes. In substance the officials are giving business the same good advice which made Booker T. Wahington famous: "Put down your bucket where you are." There is need for more labor. Negroes are here in this section. They should be employed, this liar to the contrary notwithstanding.

Regardless of Race

ABOUT one American in every 10 belongs to the Negro race. A statement issued today by the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries makes the point that so far our colored fellow citizens are being denied full participation as skilled workers in the aircraft, automobile and shipbuilding industries, and that they have restricted opportunities to acquire skills. The existence of "a few creditable exceptions," the committee believes, does little to relieve the general situation.

The results, it contends, are harmful to morale, encourage "subversive agitators opposed to the American way of life," and impair the effort to create national unity. The force of these arguments must be admitted.

The signers include Governor Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia, William Allen White and many others whose names stand for constructive thinking and action. Among them are Southerners thoroughly familiar with conditions and problems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The plea deserves instant attention. A nation making an all-out effort cannot neglect any element in its population. If it is engaged on the side of democracy it must leave the doors of opportunity open to all, regardless of race.

Congressional Record Carries Statement Against Jim-Crowism

WASHINGTON.— (ANP) — One of the finest statements yet entered in the Congressional Record was that sponsored by Congressman Thomas H. Eliot of Massachusetts, which set forth in no uncertain terms the difficulties facing the Negro in the United States today and the unfairness of the entire set-up as far as the Negro is concerned.

Congressman Eliot, who was a classmate of Dr. Robert Weaver at Harvard, is a former member of the board of directors and of the Urban League of Buffalo, N. Y. and also a member of the N.A.A.C.P. and is extremely interested in anything which has to do with the progress of Negroes.

"I believe this is one of the finest statements ever made," said the Congressman and I believe we are on the right track. While I don't know what specific measures can be taken to rectify this situation, I feel that the educational campaign being carried on is moving in the right direction.

Signatories of the statement, included some of the best known personages in the United States, both white and colored and numbered some 50 persons recruited from educational, religious, manufacturing, civic, social and business fields white and colored alike.

Prominent Negroes signing the statement included Elmer A. Carter of the New York State Department of Labor; Bishop John A. Gregg, department of race relations, Federal Council of Churches, Kansas City, Kas.; Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard university; Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, Tuskegee institute; A. Philip Randolph, international president, International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; C. C. Spaulding, president, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company, as well as outstanding whites who feel the need for some change in the condition confronting the American Negro.

In his presentation before the house, Mr. Eliot said:

"Mr. Speaker, a very fine committee of outstanding citizens has come forward with a demand that in our defense program, there shall be no discrimination against members of the colored race.

"There has been experience in industry in the past and right now showing that colored men can do skilled jobs just as well as white men, but despite that fact, there are today many companies which refuse to hire Negro workers for skilled jobs.

"There are millions of Negro Americans. They are good citizens. As a nation, we must see to it that they are not oppressed and suppressed. The country needs the work that they can do."

The statement of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries and the members of the committee was then given.

White Leaders Wire Knudsen

NEW YORK.—(ANP)— Supporting the stand taken Tuesday by a group of 60 prominent Americans, including Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Mayor Forello H. LaGuardia, in their demand through an issued statement that Negroes be given a larger share of employment in defense industries, the Fight for Freedom committee took action of its own Wednesday.

This new organization sent a telegram directly to William S. Knudsen, administrator of the Office of Production Management in Washington, expressing the same feeling.

"As a committee of American citizens devoted to the cause insuring an Axis defeat and believing that to do so the American effort must be on the broadest and most democratic lines, we heartily endorse the statement published yesterday signed by Gov. Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia and others protesting discrimination against Negroes in defense industries."

The message was signed for the Fight for Freedom Committee by its chairman, the Right Rev. Henry W. Hobson, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Southern Ohio, and it also carried the personal expression of such national figures as Col. William J. Donovan, Maxwell Anderson, the playwright, Wallace Morgan, former president of the Society of Illustrators, and Freda Kirchwey, editor of The Nation.

Other prominent members of the committee who had already signed the original statement were Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of the College of William and Mary and publisher of the Richmond News-Leader; Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Barry Bingham, Louisville publisher and Herbert Agar, editor Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cleveland Daily Advocates Use of Skilled Negroes

CLEVELAND.— (ANP) — A recent editorial appearing in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, leading white daily, points to the rebuilding of St. James A.M.E. church by artisans and uses this fact as an argument for their capability and a plea that they should be employed in industrial trades. The editorial read in part:

"At a time when the leaders of this race (Negro) have been trying, with the active cooperation of many others in all walks of life, to break down the notion that the Negro lacks ability in the more skilled crafts, this church has been built entirely by Negro artisans. That fact should help a great deal in eliminating opposition to the employment of Negroes in the more skilled and more lucrative industrial trades.

"Nor will the removal of that prejudice benefit the colored race alone. Even in normal times, the whole community would gain by raising the living standard and increasing the self-respect of the Negro workman. In this time of national emergency it is especially important that this great reserve of man power be used.

"Even if it were not necessary to our physical safety, it would be essential to our spiritual defense; for so long as we have not given all the benefits of democracy to some of our own citizens we shall not be completely unassailable in our effort to restore democracy to the citizens of other nations."

The occasion which inspired the editorial was the dedication on May 4 of a new $100,000 auditorium of the St. James church built to replace the structure destroyed by fire three years ago.

Hampton's Defense Program Lauded

HAMPTON, Va.—(ANP)— Hampton institute was singled out for special praise when the American College Publicity association's research report on the participation of colleges and universities in the national defense program was made public last week.

E. D. Whittlesey, author of the report said in a communication to Malcolmn S. MasLean, president of Hampton, "This seems to be most fortunate in view of the interest of the Negro in having an effective part in national defense and in view of gossips who line them up with other interests."

Agencies with which Hampton is cooperating in the line of national defense including Virginia State Vocational Education board, the NYA, WPA, CCCC, CAA and the army. One of the features of the program is the national defense evening refresher course in 13 skilled trades for men presently employed in shipyards, factories and construction camps. Some 300 men take these courses in every 12-week period.

Defense Classes For Alabamans

MOBILE, Ala.—(ANP)—Two defense training classes for Negro men are scheduled to open Monday at the Mobile County Training school at Plateau.

The classes offered are in electricity and woodwork, and are open to Negroes between the ages of 18 and 25. The electrical class will be conducted by Esau Smith, while Andrew Houze will conduct the woodwork class. Both are graduates of Tuskegee institute.

Prof. Benjamin F. Baker, principal of the training school, said the classes will be conducted under the supervision of the state department of vocational education of which H. B. Hobdy is director. There will be no fees required for either, and free transportation from Mobile to Plateau will be offered 10 of the registrants.

San Diego Opens Defense Training

SAN DIEGO, Cal. — (ANP) — "The defense industrial training schools of San Diego are open for the training of Negroes as they are for representatives of all other racial groups." This was the announcement made last Sunday by Dr. Will C. Crawford, superintendent of San Diego's public schools.

Crawford, the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the San Diego Race Relations society, stated, "I want all interested to know that Negroes will be accepted at both local training schools and the industrial training school. Training includes aircraft and other divisions."

The San Diego Race Relations society is headed by Dennis V. Allen, prominent civic worker, who has taken tremendous interest in placing Negroes in San Diego's national defense employment and training.

Vacancies for Negroes Open in Army Trades

More than 800 vacancies in specialist trades such as stenographers, clerks, typists, mechanics, carpenters, electricians, pipe fitters, printers and numerous other trades in regular Army units are open for Negro applicants, Col. F. A. Prince, Field Artilltry, Recruiting Officer for Tennessee and Alabama, announced today.

He said Negro men with high school and college educations should investigate, since the positions offer real security and life employment at good pay on retirement if one completes thirty years' service. He pointed out that the assignments offer opportunities for additional training and schooling with immediate advancement in pay to men who can meet the requirements. Applicants may investigate further at the recruiting office in the United States Courthouse here.

Machinists' Color Bar at Navy Yard Broken

WASHINGTON (ANP)

Progress in the fight against discrimination against colored skilled workers in the U.S. Navy yards was noted this week in the employment of more than a score of colored machinists at the Washington Navy Yard, following their graduation from the apprentice school here.

At the same time, it was learned that between 15 and 20 more colored workers have been accepted as trainees in the apprentice school.

Pay Begins at $7.48 a Day

Following graduation, they, too, are expected to receive immediate employment as machinists, third grade. The pay scale is from $7.48 to $8.44 per day.

The banning of colored trainees from both private and government-owned ship and navy yard apprentice schools has been protested by organizations in various parts of the country.

Dr. Weaver Handles Protests

These protests have been made to the National Defense Advisory Commission, and the problem has been turned over to Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant in the division of labor supply.

The enrollees at the Washington Navy Yard credited part of their success in finishing the apprentice course and receiving Civil Service appointments to the director of the apprentice school.

Florida Skilled Workers Hired On Airport Project

MAR 1 1941

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27—Local citizens, working through a combined civic organization, scored a signal victory here last week when they were successful in obtaining the employment of 30 carpenters on the local airport construction project.

The group obtained immediate results when a delegation, headed by Bishop Robert A. Jackson, called on the construction management and asked for the employment of colored workers on the defense project.

The delegation not only obtained the 30 jobs, but a promise that the number of Negroes employed would be increased to 125. Carpenters on the project are paid $9 per day.

Bishop Jackson is a nationally-known militant churchman and has endeared himself to local citizens since making his home here. He is formerly of Baltimore and was exalted ruler of Paramount Lodge No. 526 of the Elks.

N. Y. TO GIVE NEGROES JOBS IN DEFENSE

ALBANY, N. Y., April 3—Employment of Negroes in New York state industries engaged in defense contracts was guaranteed this week in legislation passed by both houses of the Republican controlled legislature. The measure now goes to Governor Lehman for his signature or veto.

The measure, introduced by Republican Senator Walter J. Mahoney of Buffalo, amends the civil rights law and penal law to make it unlawful for any person, firm or corporation engaged to any extent whatsoever in the production, manufacture or distribution of military or naval material, equipment or supplies for the state of New York or for the Federal government, to refuse to employ any person in any capacity on account of race, color or creed of such person.

APR 6 - 1941

Legislative leaders explained that this was another step toward the integration of Negroes into industry, a move long advocated by Republicans. These same leaders pointed out that the Mahoney measure encountered no opposition whatsoever in either the Senate or the Assembly.

Earlier this week the Assembly passed without opposition of any kind a bill to prevent labor organizations from discriminating against Negroes.

Over The First Hurdle

MAR 22 1941

NEGRO carpenters in the Newport News-Hampton area, who have not been able to obtain employment on government defense construction jobs, especially at Fort Eustis, have removed what is believed to be the chief obstacle to their employment. They have organized and have succeeded in obtaining a union charter under the American Federation of Labor. It can no longer be held that they are not union men. Thus they have made the first, and perhaps the most difficult hurdle.

MAR 22 1941

They have also received assurances, from AFL officials that immediate steps will be taken to place them on the job. For the present at least these assurances must be taken as being bonifide.

The carpenters on the Peninsula who have complied with the rigid requirements of organized labor have acted wisely. They have shown their determination to meet any necessary requirements by paying the fee of $675.00, which it cost the 45 men to form a local and gain admittance to the Carpenters and Joiners Union in Virginia. They have set an example which should be followed in every urban center in the state.

For the gain that has been made toward employment, Mr. Isaac Johnson, of Hampton, and his associates who formed the Peninsula Trades and Labor Union, are to be congratulated. They were energetically assisted by members of Hampton Institute faculty and Mr. Samuel A. Haynes, of the Journal and Guide, who put in many days and nights on this job, and whose alert reporting and investigations and at times amazing disclosures awakened and quickened public sentiment, not only on the Peninsula, but throughout the state.

They are over the first hurdle, but victory will not have been won until the men are at work.

Negroes Barred From 38,000 Jobs At Plant Of Maryland Aircrafts Near Baltimore

National Negro Congress Demands 7,000 Negroes Be Placed at Glenn L. Martin Factory

MAR 22 1941

Says Government Discriminates, Too

BALTIMORE, Md.—With more than 221 millions in air defense contracts, representing nearly one and one-half per cent of the entire 17 billion being spent by the Government for defense industry, tucked under their belt, officials of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company, located near here, told the National Negro Congress Wednesday, March 4, that the firm had no intention of "pioneering" in the field of defense jobs for Negroes, as long as the Government itself continues to bar them from defense projects.

The attitude shown by Martin aircraft, the biggest plant of its kind in the East, parallels the position taken by Vultee aircraft in California, Congress officials said. W. Gerard Tuttle, industrial relations manager of Vultee, told the organizations Los Angeles Council flatly in a letter that "I regret to say that it is not the policy of this company to employ people other than of the Caucasian race."

Charging the aircraft corporations, aided and abetted by Sidney Hillman, co-chairman of the Office of Production Management, which clears defense contracts, with being guilty of conducting a "sit-down strike" against the Negro people, the National Negro Congress demanded 7,000 jobs for Negroes at the Glenn Martin factory. Congress officials backed up their charges with the following facts at the Martin Company: The company has 18,000 workers employed at the plant, but not a single Negro; the firm expects 20,000 new jobs to be opened up when construction work on new factory units is completed. Workers are applying for work every day at the plant, filling out applications for every category of job, from typist to highly skilled tool work, but no Negroes are accepted. The company is receiving a quarter of a billion dollars from the Government in contracts approved by the Office of Production Management. Negro citizens, through direct or indirect taxes, are paying their share for the cost of this program. OPM officials have made no move to stop the job discrimination against Negroes.

The policy of the company's board of directors was outlined at a conference held Wednesday afternoon in the office of Personnel Manager, D. W. Siomon, on the grounds of the huge plant located at Middle River, Md., twelve miles outside Baltimore. Present at the conference were John P. Davis, national secretary of the National Negro Congress; George B. Murphy jr., administrative secretary of the organization; Mr. Siomon, and C. R. Cowley, his assistant.

"I understand what you are fighting for," Mr. Siemon said, "and I would not think that you were doing your job if your organization did not fight for jobs for Negro people, but the problem is one that we cannot answer. We certainly are not going to pioneer in the field, when no other industries in Maryland except steel and shipping are employing Negroes in skilled capacities, and the Government itself is not employing them at Edgewood Arsenal, Abereend, Proving Ground and other places like the Washington Navy Yard." "We have a job to do," he declared, "and we can't afford to take chances on being held up when we know that hite workers may not work well with Negroes. Why single us out? Perhaps if the Government could take the lead in solving this problem by employing Negroes, industry could feel free to follow this example."

The Negro Congress representatives denied emphatically that the Martin codpany would be setting a precedent by employing Negroes, or that the employment of Negroes would hold up defense contracts. They pointed to the fact that labor leaders in Maryland and expressed themselves as being squarely behind the fight of Negroes for jobs in defense industry. Out in California, they indicated, the CIO worked closely with the Negro Congress in the fight which secured jobs for Negroes in the Douglass aircraft company. Management and management alone, aided by the Government through Sidnep Hillman, was responsible for blocking the fight to obtain jobs for Negroes, they charged.

The Martin officials admitted that there is a real scarcity of skilled workers in the aircraft industry, and that Negroes were helping to bear the cost, but nevertheless they refused to give any assurance that jobs would be open to Negro workers, even to those who are now being trained in defense courses under the Government. The representatives of the Congress pointed out that Negroes were being trained in advanced courses for tool making and mechanical engineering at Howard university and in trade schools in Washington. They also stated that a large reservoir of Negro skilled and semi-skilled labor is available in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Siemon's statements represented a reiteration of the company's policy which he made to a delegation led by the Baltimore Council of the Congress last December 18. Briefly, they were: fear of establishing a precedent in the employment of Negroes, holding up defense production because the employment of Negroes would be an groes, failure of the Federal Government to set an example by opening the doors to the employment of Negroes in skilled capacities on Government-sponsored projects.

Backing up the charge against Sidney Hillman, the Congress cited a letter written to the office of Production Management officials last September in which they pointed out that none of the contracts for airplanes and defense materials contained effective protection for the employment rights of Negro workers, the net result being that "with the reduction of opportunity for work under the defense program, the employment status of Negroes has been worsened."

MAR 22 1941

In a letter, which gave no assurance of correcting the situation, Hillman let the cat out of the bag, they said, when he stated that, "It is, of course, necessary in a training program of this type to relate training with employment." This statement, Congress officials said showed clearly that the Government had no intention of forcing employers to abide by the Office of Production Management's declared policy of integrating Negroes into defense industry without discrimination.

Conferring with leaders of Congress councils in this area, officials of the organization announced that plans have been laid for holding a conference in Baltimore, with a view to launching an intensive campaign to open up 7,000 jobs for Negroes at the Glenn Martin plant.

According to the Office of Production Management, the agency set up by President Roosevelt to clear all defense contracts, the Glenn L. Martin aircraft company received the following contracts between last September and the end of December: $118,911,527 for airplane bombers and spare parts between September 16-30, $106,863,951 for airplanes and armament equipment between October 16-31 and $892,013 for maintenance parts for airplanes between December 16-31.

GOVERNMENT CAN NOT COERCE UNION LEADERS ARE TOLD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—A proposal for a conference on means of lessening discrimination against colored workmen on army and navy construction and in national defense industries is being considered by the labor division of the office of production management.

APR 1 2 1941

The personnel of such a conference would include representatives of government, industry, organized labor and colored people.

The proposal was made at a conference last week between representatives of the Committee on Participation of Negroes in the National Defense Program and of labor division of OPM.

Howard H Long assistant superintendent of schools, and Rayford W. Logan, professor of history at Howard University, represented the committee. The office of Sidney Hillman, coadministrator of OPM, was represented by Eric Nicol, J. W. Dietz, Floyd Reeves, Robert C. Weaver and Eli Oliver.

Dr. Logan explained the evasion by government, industry and organized labor of the question of integrating colored workmen into the national defense program.

Spokesman for Mr. Hillman assured Dr. Long and Dr. Logan of their goodwill but freely admitted their lack of power to coerce industry. They said they realize there is room for improvement, that there is some evidence of improvement, and that the time is coming when colored workmen will have to be hired whether they are wanted or not. In the meanwhile, they said they would seek the means by which improvement can be hastened.

Powerless to Coerce Industry

Dr. Long suggested that something should be done in the meanwhile to allay the widespread fear among colored workmen that the present national emergency may not last long enough for them to get jobs. He emphasized the fact that labor unions have become a quasi-governmental agency and suggested that the government should control its activities.

APR 1 2 1941

Dr. Logan suggested another conference that would include representatives also of the office of education, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Committee on Industrial Organization, and the American Federation of Labor.

The proposal met with some favor. Mr. Nicol was not sure that OPM could call such a conference but asked that a memorandum be submitted on the question.

SIX GET JOBS AT BREWSTER PLANE PLANT

Seen To Indicate First Sign Of Breakdown In Defense Bias

WASHINGTON — (ANP) —OPM, through Dr. Robert Weaver, announces the employment of six young Negro sheet metal workers, the first colored aircraft production workers to be hired in Long Island city, at the Brewster Aeronautical corporation as the result of close cooperation between the OPM, the CIO union and the New York Urban league.

The six youths, graduates of defense training courses in Manhattan and Yonkers, went to work Tuesday morning after arrangements for their employment had been completed by Local 368 of the United Automobile Workers of America and by representatives of the Negro employment and training section of OPM.

The young sheet metal workers, Charles Hunt, Burrell Sampson, Joseph Whitfield, Herman Campbell, James Pennington and Jules Heywood were six of eight defense trainees assembled by Charles A. Collier, industrial secretary of the New York Urban league.

Charles Wood, a young riveter-graduate, was summoned to the plant Monday and promised employment as soon as the riveting section expands. James Cumberbatch, the eighth trainee, was wired an offer of employment, but he did not report for duty

E. J. Walsh, personnel director of Brewster, made arrangement with Mr. Collier and with Thomas DeLorenzo, president of Local 365, to absorb all other Negro aircraft trainees who had finished defense courses in the metropolitan area. Others will be referred for jobs this week.

The hiring of Negro production workers at the Long Island plant of Brewster resulted from a recent field trip to that area by J. Lawrence Duncan and Theodore Poston, members of Dr. Weaver's OPM field staff.

After conferences with Mr. Walsh, the OPM representatives visited local union president who promised to refer immediately and guarantee employment for all qaulified Negro defense training graduates in the area. Mr. Collier then assembled the eight youths from a list of 25 in the Urban league's office. The other 17 did not answer mailed communications offering the memployment.

When the eight youths were taken to union headquarters in Long Island City, Mr. DeLorenzo contacted James Work, chairman of the board of directors of Brewster, and applications were issued immediately. All eight were subsequently wired to report for work on July 7 and Mr. Collie was present when six of the seven who reported were fingerprinted and assigned to day and night shifts.

Local 365 holds a closed shop contract with Brewster and has promised to aid Dr. Weaver's office in placing Negro aircraft production workers in other plants operated by the company.

Five Hundred Production Jobs For Negroes In Aluminum Industry Seen

NEW YORK —(SNS)— The National Urban League, in a communication addressed to Sidney Hillman this week, placed its support behind the request of the National Bronze and Aluminum Foundry Company of Cleveland for a special allotment of scrap aluminum with which the Company intends to train 500 Negro workers for skilled production work in the aluminum industry. National Bronze has employed a large number of Negro workers for the past twenty years, but in conference with officials of the Urban League of Cleveland, the Company has worked out plans for training this large additional number, provided 700,000 pounds of scrap aluminum can be obtained for training purposes. It is estimated that the Company must wait from four to six months before equipment will be delivered for use in the production of castings for tanks, gun turrets, airplanes, etc. National Bronze plans to use the waiting period for training Negroes for the kind of precision type castings required in the defense orders held by the Company.

In a letter addressed to the Co-Director of OPM, Lester B. Granger, Assistant Executive Secretary of the National Urban League, stated: "The National Urban League feels that the Company's request merits your full attention, not only to increase the supply aluminum for defense purposes, but also to develop further progress toward national unity." A similar position is taken by the Urban League of Cleveland. Sidney R. Williams Secretary of the Cleveland affiliate, reported to the National Office: "The President's Executive Orders has failed thus far to produce much change in employers' attitudes toward Negro workers. In the light of this condition you can see what the hiring and training of 400 or 500 Negro workers by National Bronze would mean to the Negro citizens of this area."

In reporting its stand, the National Urban League pointed out that the Training-Within-Industry Program still remains an important block in the way of the integration of Negroes into industry defense. "The great talk of quick defense work," stated Mr. Granger, "is being carried on by industrial concerns within their own plant gates under the Training-Within-Industry Program of OPM. As long as Negroes are barred from this kind of training they are shut out of the opportunities for skilled employment and promotion that are developing every day in defense industries. The plans of National Bronze constitute an important departure from the usual policy followed by big industrial concerns. Not only is this Company already employing large numbers of Negroes, but it is prepared to lift their occupational status within the plant. No doubt this is a selfish step on the part of the Company which seeks to qualify for a large share of defense contracts in the aluminum castings field. However, this fact does affect its importance to Negroes. We have a special racial interest in placing 500 Negroes workers in Cleveland, and where our best interests coincide with those of industry, we should be prompt to recognize the coincidence and support our interests effectively."

Four Defense Industries Employ Skilled Negro Labor

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Four large manufacturers of military aircraft and equipment have increased the number of skilled and semi-skilled Negro workers in their plants, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of the Office of Production Management, announced this week Dr. Weaver reported the following developments to Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General of OPM:

1. Following an announcement that Negro workers would be used in all capacities, the Philadelphia branch of the Bendix Aviation Corporation hired six colored workers for machine repair and reclamation work and began interviewing Negro trainees in machine tool operation in the Philadelphia schools.

2. The Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, which hired a crew of Negro sheetmetal workers in its Long Island City plant several weeks ago, announced that Negro trainees would be recruited from three Philadelphia defense schools for employment in the new Brewster plant at Hatboro, Pa. Local 365, United Automobile Workers, CIO, cooperated with management and OPM on the employment of Negroes in both plants. The CIO union holds a closed shop contract with Brewster.

3. The Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc , of California, one of the first West Coast manufacturers to employ skilled Negro production workers, added three more Negro skilled employees to its staff.

4. The Allison Motors Division of General Motors Corporation in Indianapolis, Ind , announced that 134 semi-skilled and unskilled Negro workers had been added to its staff in the last six weeks, bringing its total staff of Negro workers to more than 230. These new employees, who receive a minimum of 70 cents an hour, are used in washing and cleaning aircraft motor parts and machines.

In making public these developments, Dr. Weaver reiterated his previous admonition that Negro youths register in defense training courses in those communities in whch classes are open to all persons regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin

"Negoes are now being employed or trained by some of the largest air craft firms in the country," he said. "These opportunities will mean nothing, however, unless Negroes avail themselves of the traininfg facilities now open to them. This is true not only in the field of aviation, but also in other fields which are opening daily. Since 75 per cent of all new defense employees will be trained, it behooves Negroes to prepare themselves for this work.

GOV'T BUILDS 200 HOMES IN BUFFALO FOR NEGRO WORKERS

Big Firms of City Employing Colored Men on War Contracts

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Construction of 200 homes for families of Negro workers in defense industries in Buafflo, New York, has been approved by President Roosevelt, upon the recommendation of C. E. Palmer, Coordinator of Defense Housing.

A report submitted to the Coordinator by Robert R. Taylor, Racial Relations Consultant to the Division of Defense Housing Coordination, described in detail the housing situation in Buffalo as it relates to the Negro population of the city and the facts concerning extensive hiring of Negro workers in defense plants. Information contained in this report plus data secured from other federal and local sources formed the basis for the Coordinator's recommendation of the housing.

Although the population of the city of Buffalo decreased slightly during the decade between 1930 and 1940, the Negro population, on the contrary, increased approximately 5,000, or about 40 per cent. Negroes have been moving into Buffalo to work in the steel mills, foundries, and other industrial plants in the vicinity. During the last 12 months especially, expansion of defense industry in the area has caused increased in-migration from other communities.

According to a report from Dr. Robert C. Weaver, of the Office of Production Management, direct recruiting for Buffalo of several hundred Negro molders has been carried on in Chattanooga and Nashville, Tennessee.

The chief defense demand for labor in the Buffalo area is expected to come from the Curtiss-Wright Company, which will add about 12,000 workers to its plant at Cheektowaga. Estimates made in January and February indicate a need for about 25,000 to 30,000 workers for Buffalo during 1941. This is thought to be a conservative estimate.

The Curtiss-Wright Corporation and the Bell Aircraft Corporation have recently revised their employment policies to include Negro workers in their plants and training courses. Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, the American Brass Company, American Radiator Corporation, Buffalo Foundry and Machine Company, Chevrolet Motor and Axle Plant, Ford Motor ompany, Socony Vacuum Company, and others are important employers of Negro defense workers in Buffalo.

According to Mr. Howard A. Kelly, director of the Buffalo Housing Authority, a housing survey recently completed shows that there are no vacant dwellings available for Negro occupancy in the Buffalo area. Private real estate dealers, civic leaders, and representatives of corporation carrying on defense work in the area confirm this statement. Expansion of the Semet Solvay Company because of defense business has displaced a considerable number of Negro families who have been unable to find other accommodations. A demolition program for removing substandard homes has further intensified the shortage of housing facilities for Negroes.

NEGROES WANT MORE U. S. DEFENSE WORK

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 11. (AP)—John M. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, advised the Hampton Institute Builders' Conference today that an immediate investigation would be made of reports of discrimination against negroes on national defense housing projects in Tidewater Virginia.

The announcement was made in a letter to the 200 delegates from 20 states attending the conference here. The group, holding its 15th annual meeting, represents thousands of negro contractors, carpenters, architects, engineers and other workers in the construction field.

Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League, told the conference that Carmody's pronouncement against discrimination was nothing more than a "pious wish" unless some enforcement clause was added to put teeth into the law.

Answering what he termed "specious pleas that the cause of efficiency in defense projects made it impossible to hire negroes at this time," Granger declared that "efficiency isn't half so important as democracy."

George Zuidima, hiring agent for contractors engaged in construction at Fort Eustis, appeared to discuss employment practices on that project and stated that 2,300 of the 5,800 workers at Fort Eustis were skilled or unskilled negroes. He added, however, that "you can't change a custom overnight."

L. Carleton Crump of the Virginia Department of Labor told the conference that he was sent as a representative of Labor Commissioner Thomas Morton who, he explained, was "vitally interested in this problem."

Army Again Calls For Skilled Negro Men to Volunteer

Another call for Negro volunteers, among them twenty-six skilled workers, was received today at the Richmond Army Recruiting Station from Third Corps Area Headquarters at Baltimore.

Lieutenant Colonel Leland W. Skaggs, recruiting chief here, said the army needs Negroes for work as automotive electricians, battery electricians, welders, tire repairers, carburetor mechanics, automotive mechanics, chauffeurs and dispatchers. Enlistments will be accepted at the recruiting station on the fifth floor of the Richmond Parcel Post Building, or at any other recruiting station, Colonel Skaggs said.

Army enlistments for January today were reported at the 100-mark. Previously unreported enlistments were these men: Raymond Askins Baine, Blackstone; Lester Otis Campbell, Danville; Earl Oscar Clark, Boston, Mass.; Daniel Eugene Brookman, New Castle, Pa.; Joseph Curtis Smithson, Jr., Norfolk; William Baulch, Norfolk; George Whitfield, Palmyra, N. C.; Johnnie Oliver Bland, Hobgood, N. C.; Louis Marshall Thacker, and five Negroes, including Raymond Matthews Neal, 1500 West Moore Street; James Hutcherson Smith, 932 Leigh Street; and Leroy Lewis, 1105 Grayland Avenue.

Colored Workers Get Defense Jobs

JAN 11 1941

Negro skilled workers, at first passed over when they applied for national defense jobs at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, outside of Little Rock, are now being employed in a variety of jobs, according the Urban League.

The latest report states that at least 50 Negro carpenters are now on the job at Camp Robinson, together with about 15 Negro concrete finishers, who earn $1.25 per hour, several bricklayers and at least one plumber.

Patience Worn Thin

ONE OF THE most interesting parts of the President's speech of December 29 was that in which he dealt with the role of labor in national defense. These sentences were especially significant: "If our capacity to produce is limited by machines, it must ever be remembered that these machines are operated by the skill and the stamina of the workers. As the government is determined to protect the rights of workers, so the nation has a right to expect that the men who man the machines will discharge their full responsibilities to the urgent needs of defense.....

"The nation expects our defense industries to continue operation without interruption by strikes or lock-outs. It expects and insists that management and workers will reconcile their differences by voluntary or legal means, to continue to produce the supplies that are so sorely needed."

The American people are patient. But patience has worn thin when it comes to the labor racketeer or the profiteering industrialist. There is no just difference of opinion between management and labor which cannot be settled by arbitration. There is absolutely no excuse for a strike in a defense industry today—and no excuse for that insidious form of sabotage which is called the "slow-down."—Industrial News Review.

DEFENSE JOBS

NOV 30 1940

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Negroes want, should have, but are not getting defense jobs.

It is the duty of Negroes in every community to find out what factories, mills and shipyards have defense contracts, and to then ascertain the number of Negroes, if any, that are employed.

The quicker this is done, the better.

This information should be immediately sent to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth avuene, New York, N.Y. Or to this newspaper. FACTS, not surmises, are wanted.

Refusal to hire Negroes on work that is made possible by their taxes is the rankest of discrimination, and must be vigorously fought.

But effective fighting cannot be done unless we know the facts.

Every Negro church, club, society and labor union should consider this task its duty.

Hartford Conn., Is Typical Of Shocking Rise Of Jim Crow In Industrial Areas, Writer Shows

Hartford, typical city of Americas new war boom is also typical of the shocking rise of the new jim-crow, according to a survey by James Morison, reported in the current NEW MASSES. The war hysteria with its program of vast expenditures for armaments, its conscript armies, and its philosophy of "strength and discipline" has accentuated the terrible conditions of economic and social discrimination under which the New England Negro lives.

In the Colt and the Pratt and Whitney plants which are humming twenty-four hours a day turning out munitions under government contracts and employing tens of thousands of workers, only three Negroes are employed. In the vast corporation-owned farms around Hartford, Negro laborers toil from sun to sun under conditions of semi-peonage for a daily wage of $1.50. Skilled Negro technicians, engineers, college graduates are given employment at only the most menial jobs, all work commensurage with their training and ability being flatly denied to them.

Morison reports the interviews he held with various Negro leaders in Hartford. They all expressed resentment at the official sanctioning of jim-crowism by the Roosevelt administration.

In estimating the results of his survey, Morison writes that the key to fighting the rising tide of jim-crow lies in democracy. He says, "People are thinking that you cannot defend democracy unless you have a democracy to defend. And a government which condones the oppression of millions of its citizens, which permits them to be submitted to countless small indignities, and finally to cruel physical suffering—that is not democracy. That is what people are thinking. That is what I learned in the Connecticut Valley."

This article is the first of a series on the Negro in national defense, which will appear in forthcoming issues of NEW MASSES Throughout the series, Hartford will be used as a typical example of the "defense" boom town with its growing jim-crowism.

Still Missing The Fundamental Point

FEB 22 1941

AN interesting development in the discussion and protests filed concerning discrimination against certain Negro skilled craftsmen in defense construction work on the Peninsula, as well as in other parts of the State, including Norfolk, is an editorial in last Saturday's Newport News Daily Press which asserts that, "Investigation into the employment situation in Newport News bears out fully the previous statement of the Daily Press that there is very little discrimination against the Negro in the matter of employment." The Daily Press goes on to say that, "Nearly half of the workers at Fort Eustis, a government defense project, are Negroes, a third of the men employed at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, where highly skilled workers are required are Negroes. The Virginia Engineering Company engaged in a defense project north of the city has 55 per cent of the workers Negroes. Other contractors made similar reports as to employment ratios."

FEB 22 1941

But the inquiry made by the Daily Press and the answers thereto do not touch the main question involved, which is open and admitted discrimination against Negroes in certain skilled trades, principally carpentry and bricklaying. The Daily Press has discovered that many Negroes are employed, which has been acknowledged all along, but the Daily Press continues to miss the principal question: whether Negroes shall be confined to certain brackets of labor or employed according to their various skills. Certainly there is no evidence that such a rule applies to white workers on defense jobs.

* * * *

The Daily Press reveals that it is conscious of the vital question involved, for it says:

> That state of utopia has never been attained in this country when an individual or a group of citizens can demand and obtain exactly the type of work they believe they are fitted for. Thousands of youths are turned out every year from institutions of learning supposedly skilled in certain directions. They are both white and colored. Some times these youths are fortunate enough to obtain just the work they desire. More often they must take what is offered. That is the way of life here and everywhere. The man must fit into the job and prove his worth. If he expects the job to be fitted to him, he seldom succeeds at anything.

That is true in a general sense, but white youths do not find themselves turned away from any employment ON ACCOUNT OF RACE AND COLOR. Some may be denied certain employment because they are not fitted for it, but there is something to which they may turn IF THEY ARE FITTED FOR IT.

* * *

The situation confronting certain skilled Negro craftsmen on the Peninsula and elsewhere is that certain labor unions refuse to admit them to membership, and they cannot work unless they are members of the particular union which monopolizes the labor of their craft. This carried to its logical conclusion erects a barrier between Negroes and certain gainful employment, a barrier based solely upon race and color. It goes so far as to exclude Negroes from skilled occupations as carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, electricians, painters, sheet metal workers and other trades. Eliminate these trades and Negroes are limited to very few socalled gainful occupations in the building business. With one or two exceptions, such as cement finishers, they are confined to common labor, which works an economic hardship upon the Negro race as a whole, and establishes discrimination, based not upon lack of skill, but upon race and color. Upon that ground the astonishing thesis of the Daily Press falls flat.

The Daily Press is in error in the unqualified statement that there was never a time "when an individual or a group of citizens can demand and obtain exactly the type of work they believe they are fitted for." To the contrary, there never was a time, until recently, when an individual or group, qualified by certain skills and techniques, could not obtain work in their particular craft or trade if there was work to be done and men were needed to do the work. There never was a time, until now, when certain organized forces preempted all of the work requiring certain skills and excluded from participation therein craftsmen whom they wished to exclude on account of race and color.

The whole thing is untenable because the very powers these organized forces are now exercising to the economic disadvantage of our group are derived in part from legislation enacted by the Federal government, which now calls upon Negro men, as it does upon men of all other races, to give their labor and their lives in their country's defense.

JOB EQUALITY IS DEMANDED AS RACE GETS "RUN-AROUND"

MAR 15 1941

Emmett Scott Pulls Aside the Curtain of Partisan Politics to Give Readers a "Peek" at Seriousness of Present Situation.

MAR 15 1941

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—A few months ago, the American people were in the midst of a bitter Presidential campaign. Both candidates were exhorting the people to trust their pledges, their promises, their assurances

It was a period of tumult, of shouting, of great emotionalism.

Nerves were taut. Much bitterness abounded. Tempers flared. The short and ugly word found use nearly every day. Excitement was running high.

In the midst of all this turmoil, with both parties bidding for its support, the Negro group found itself overwhelmed by a great uncertainty as to what the future held in store for it, and as to the course it should follow.

With relief—continued relief—offered by one candidate, and jobs, jobs, by the other, this Negro group oscillated between the two great parties, trying to reach a wise decision.

Undoubtedly, it was a period in which a well-considered, long-range decision could not be reached. The agitations of the hour prevented that relaxed study and contemplation the subject deserved.

VOTED FOR NEW DEAL IN HOPE OF BETTER DAYS

In the great industrial cities where so many thousands of the colored people have been condemned to sub-marginal existence on relief rolls, and denied employment in industry, they embraced the pittances of relief, apparently because of the fear, after eight years of unemployment, that the miracle of a job was just too much to expect. Again, the group, in large part, voted with and for the New Deal.

MAR 15 1941

And then came the National Defense program with its great preparations, the hiring of thousands and millions of men—surely, it was thought, the day of industrial- employment-redemption had come.

But, no. The same old prejudices and discriminations were trotted out, or rather continued.

And that is why Negro America is so bestirred at this time. That is why our representative men and women are speaking out, and refusing to be "hushed up" by hesitant, pussy-footed appeasers of the gods of prejudice and racial discrimination.

NO COMPROMISE ON THIS ISSUE

They are refusing to compromise this issue. They are daring to insist in this hour of national peril that these rank prejudices be subordinated to national security, and that their cause be considered along with the propitiations being made to organized and unorganized labor and other class groups.

They know that access to employment in industry, financed by government, for national preservation should be made as sure for them as for these other groups.

They know that Negro manpower is being conscripted by government, and that, if the worst comes, the blood of their youth and young manhood will be as freely spilled as by others called to army service.

They know it is rank insult to be telling them to be "good," and all of their troubles will be ended, their problems solved after the emergency passes.

They know that this same "apple sauce" was offered them 23 years ago, and that only disillusion and terror and all the humiliations of spirit and of citizenship have been their portion since.

And that is why, in this righteous hour, they are determined to contest every present and added oppression forced upon them.

JOB EQUALITY DEMANDED BY US

Everywhere able-bodied men are being called to army camps—why not in industry also? they are asking.

MAR 15 1941

The self-respect, the individual liberty of this group rejects the notion that, as usual, they are still to be the last hired, as they are always the first fired.

One of the candidates for the Presidency last September stated that "the Negro has little hope under this present un-American practice if he must wait until the whites have all been employed," before he can expect any consideration.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in speaking at Petersburg, Va., two weeks ago, offered the poor hope that, "now that increased jobs are being created," opportunities MAY soon be offered the Negro group.

Must we forever wait, wait? Must we forever be on the scaffold while others ornament the throne?

We are not willing that this shall be so. Every instinct of self-preservation urges us to a course of action that claims the right to a fair consideration of our just claims and desserts NOW in connection with every long-range program for national defense—the privilege and right of every individual in this nation of ours.

Protest is in Order

Some weeks ago in Kansas City, 5,000 colored citizens assembled in the muncipal auditorium to protest discirimination in the employment policy of industries and factories in which the billions of dollars are to be spent for national defense.

Surveys reveal that both skilled and unskilled Negro workers are being denied employment in various industries. It seems almost as if the industrialists or those who determine their policies have united to bar the colored worker from sharing with white Americans the benefit of employment under the defense program. In the airplane industry, the Negro is conspicuous by his absence and some officials have gone so far as to declare that they will not hire colored workers and, to add with a tone of defiance, that not even good old Uncle Sam can make them do so.

That venerable relative of ours, it will be recalled, has authority to take over plants when conditions within tend to delay the national production program. He is about to pour more money into industrial coffers than trickled into them in many years. It isn't to be expected that any drastic action will be taken against companies which refuse to employ Negroes. Uncle Sam has pursued the same policy himself. Today in Washington certain bureaus created by the New Deal have steadfastly denied employment to colored applicants. Their employment officers have simply said: "We don't hire colored." Industrialists follow their lead.

But there is today a civil service rule which provides against racial discrimination in both the examination of applicants and the employment of those who qualify. The presence of that rule on the statute books is justification for the demands being made upon private industry by Negro organizations.

Congress has given Uncle Sam authority to keep a close eye on factories, their methods, and their output. Referring to the recent civil service ban on discrimination, the government could with all propriety issue a statement which might discourage the present lily-white employment policy of the industrialists. In the meantime Negroes, by the thousands, should voice mass protests throughout the nation.

Airplane Co. Head Defies Congress

MAR 2 9 1941

NEW YORK — Flat refusal to employ colored skilled or semi-skilled workers, in open defiance of a Congressional ban on racial discrimination in defense production, has been declared by the North American Aviation Company of Inglewood, Cal.

In a statement regarding the employment policy to be followed in the company's proposed new $10,000,000 plant at Kansas City, J. H. Kindelberger, president, is quoted as saying:

Training Disregarded

"Colored men will be considered only as janitors and in other similar capacities, but under no circumstances will they be employed as aircraft workers or mechanics, regardless of their training."

This, he said, is the policy at the company's plants in Inglewood and in Dallas, Tex., and it will be maintained in Kansas City.

MAR 2 9 1941

The announcement came on the eve of hearings on discrimination in the national defense program, scheduled to begin before a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor on April 1.

MAR 2 9 1941

Probe Group Named

The membership of this subcommittee was announced last week by the committee chairman Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, as follows:

Senator H. H. Schwartz of Wyoming, chairman; Senators Claude Pepper of Florida, James M. Mead of New York, Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin.

It was Senator Schwartz who introduced the anti-discrimination amendment to the National Defense Act. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is expected to be one of the early witnesses at the hearings.

MAR 2 9 1941

Protests Heard

Meanwhile, Kindelberger's announcement has drawn a storm of protest from the National Urban League and headquarters of the NAACP.

In a letter to William S. Knudson and Sidney Hillman of the Office of Production Management, Eugene Kinckle Jones, executive secretary of the Urban League, branded the general policy of the aircraft industry "the principal disgrace which we are facing internally today."

Training Also Denied

He cited Kindelberger's declaration as an example of this policy and again called attention to the attendant denial of training under the vocational defense training program which such refusals tend to support.

"God forbid," he continued, "that this travesty on justice should spread and give our nation's enemies weapons more effective than bullets."

Copies of the letter were sent to Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of the Office of Education; John Carmody, director of the Bureau of Employment Security, and Mrs. Roosevelt.

NAACP Seeks Data

Submission to his office of authentic information regarding discrimination in defense industries was urged in a statement issued by Walter White, NAACP executive secretary.

"We are convinced," he said, "that if the American people only knew what is going on in the national defense program and fully understood how vicious is the discrimination, there would be country-wide indignation against those who are holding up defense because of their racial prejudices.

MAR 2 9 1941

Arrogance Insufferable

"The arrogance of such persons as J. H. Kindelberger. . .is insufferable. When colored Americans pay income, defense or other taxes, they are paying Mr. Kindelberger's salary and building up profits for North American Aviation Company's stockholders.

"Colored Americans and decent white Americans have got to let him and his kind know that they cannot get away with such brazen tactics."

MAR 2 9 1941

"Aping" Hitler

In addition to gathering all available data on instances of such discrimination to be presented at the forthcoming hearings, the NAACP has suggested that Kindelberger be invited—subpoenaed if necessary—to appear before the sub-committee to "explain his apeing of Hitler in telling tax-payers that they cannot be employed because of race."

Baltimore Youth Parley Launches Drive For Jobs for Negroes in Glenn Martin Aircraft

FEB 26 1941

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 25.—A mass campaign for jobs for Negroes will be launched at the Town Meeting of Baltimore Youth here tomorrow night at the Metropolitan M. E. Church, 1121 W. Lanvale St.

The fight against discrimination will begin specifically with a drive to force the Glenn L. Martin Airplane factory here, operating on huge government contracts, to hire Negro workers. This company, which employs 18,000 workers, has brazenly refused to employ Negroes.

The drive to break down discrimination against Negroes in industry here will feature a mass petition campaign to President Roosevelt and Sidney Hillman demanding the cancellation of government contracts to the Glenn Martin Co. unless Negroes are hired.

The Baltimore Town Meeting will also organize for a representative dleegation to the American Peoples Meeting for Peace to be held in New York April 5 and 6.

Sixty Colored Families Now Earning Total Of $480 A Day For Carpentry Work At Army Camp

MAR 7 1941

ATLANTA, March 6 (ANP)—Sixty Negro families in Atlanta are receiving $480 a day as the result of a recent investigation of employment conditions at Camp Gordon located at Chamblee, Ga., by representatives of the Atlanta Urban league and the division of labor supply, National Defense Advisory committee.

The investigation was started after numerous complaints were received by the league stating that Negro skilled workers were not being employed on a fair basis at the camp. While more than 1,400 white carpenters were working, not a single Negro carpenter had been hired. This was due in part to the unwillingness of white union carpenters to allow Negro union men to work on the job. Similarly, Negro painters and brick layers were unable to secure work in spite of all of their attempts. MAR 7 19

A meeting was called by the Urban league on Feb. 10, to air these grievances and a visit was made to the camp the following day by Clarence R. Johnson, consultant to the division of labor supply; W. Y. Bell, executive secretary, and Miss Almita Robinson, assistant to the executive.

The conference with camp officials was arranged during which the contractor stated that he had no desire to discriminate but had not hired Negro workers because they were not referred by the white unions He agreed to hire 40 Negro carpenters immediately and said that he could take on between 10 and 15 painters. MAR 7 1941

The following Monday, Feb. 17, 40 carpenters appeared at the camp and were employed. Another call was made for 10 additional carpenters Nine Negro painters were hired during the same week. The rate of pay is $1 per hour, with time and a half for over time.

One difficulty met in attempting to meet the number of skilled workers which the camp requires is the fact that so few skilled Negro workers are in the union movement and thus are not employed. Since most of the work at the camp requires carpenters, it was estimated that a larger number of Negro skilled workers could be placed if they were available. MAR 7 1941

An interesting sidelight is the fact that as a result of the work of the Atlanta Urban league the Negro community will receive in three weeks more than $7,000 in the form of wages, an amount larger than the league's total budget for the entire year. On a strictly financial basis, therefore, it is estimated that the league will more than have justified its yearly budget within this three week's space and it is estimated that the work at the camp will continue for several months, returning many thousands of dollars to the Negroes of Atlanta.

Army Medical Posts Are Open To Negroes

Negro medical officers, dentists and nurses will be given the opportunity to apply, as they qualify, for the appointments with the Regular Army of the United States at Ft. Bragg. FEB 19 1941

It has been disclosed that the present policy calls for Negro medical officers, dentists, and nurses, to be placed with all authorized regiments of Negro soldiers.

Appointments will be made as officers qualify for reserve commissions.

The following Negro officers personnel will be assigned to Ft. Bragg, N. C., within 60 days:

Negro medical officers, 17; Negro dentists (officers), 2; medical officers (Negroes) with sanitary companies, 3; Negro trained nurses, 28; total 50.

It was also stated that other centers where Negro soldiers will be located will have medical officers, dentists, and nurses in similar ratio if sufficient numbers are available.

EXPECTED TO BENEFIT UNDER AID PROGRAM

MAR 8 1941

PETERSBURG, Va., Mar. 6.—Greater opportunities for Negroes in the civil service and in industry as a result of the ever expanding defense program was predicted by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt here, Sunday afternoon.

The First Lady, speaking before an audience which packed to capacity the college auditorium at Virginia State College, said that it was obvious that the colored group had not been given equal opportunity in the country's military, industrial or educational program, and added:

"It is my opinion, however, that there is going to be increased opportunity because of the increased number of jobs that are being created and not enough people to fill them. You will find that you are going to have to be twice as good to get the job."

She compared the Negro's fight for recognition with the fight made by women, saying: "Women have to be better than men to get industrial opportunity and we seemingly find the same pattern operating in the fight being made by the colored people."

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived here shortly after noon attended only by her chauffeur. She spoke informally to members of the college faculty and selected senior students on the probable effects of the present world crisis on American education, and then had luncheon at the Home Management House with President and Mrs. Gandy; Mrs. M. E. V. Hunter, Director of the Division of Home Economics; Mrs. Dorothy Miller, dean of women; Miss J. Louise Barrett, registrar, and Dr. Edna M. Colson, head of the Unit of Education.

Some 2000 persons packed the college auditorium to hear Mrs. Roosevelt speak while several hundred others waited outside to catch a glimpse of the famous First Lady. But for the Governor's party and representatives of the press, few white people were numbered in the audience. Invitations had been extended to principals of Negro high schools in the State, Jeannes Supervisors, together with members of college. MAR 8 1941

Speaking on the place of youth in the defense program, she urged youth to be prepared to accept responsibility in the present as well as in the future democracy, as she stressed the importance of educational training.

Race Carpenters Are Certified On Defense Project

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(ANP)—Hailed as "an important step in breaking down barriers against Negroes seeking work in the national defense program," 150 colored carpenters have been given jobs at Fort Leonard Wood army training camp now under construction near Newburg, Mo.

MAR 30 1941

The announcement was made by Arnold Walker, field secretary of the industrial department, St. Louis Urban League, through whose efforts the men were placed. Walker said the agreement was reached after a three-day conference with the following officials: L. H. Huntley project manager; Maj. Frank Reed, Jr., construction quarter-master and Tom McFarland, carpenters' union agent.

Housing for the carpenters was solved by leasing a summer resort near the Lake of the Ozarks, 40 miles from the construction site. Board will cost men about $8 a week, it was said.

The carpenters will be enrolled in the AFL Carpenters' Union, on payment of a $25 initiation fee, Walker said. They will receive the same wage rate paid to white carpenters, $1 an hour and time and one-half for overtime, and earn a total of about $62 a week each, he said.

Fifty-five of the carpenters will be sent from St. Louis and the rest from out-state urban and rural areas. About 60 Negro laborers and 48 carpenters, regular employes of the construction companies, are employed at the camp now, Walker related, adding that they, too, would be enrolled in their respective unions.

The Report on Negro Defense Labor

Charges, last winter that defense job contractors in this area were discriminating against Negro skilled workers, moved the Hampton Roads Regional Defense Council to institute a survey of employment conditions with the view of throwing light on the controversy. A few days ago it reported its findings. The findings throw little or no light on the controversy that prompted the survey.

The Council reports that Negroes are not being discriminated against in the hiring of defense workers in the Hampton Roads area. Of the 28,713 persons employed in 20 defense projects, it notes, 10,127 are Negroes. While Negroes constitute 32 per cent of the population of this section, Negro workers on the 20 defense projects reviewed constitute nearly 40 per cent of the total number of workers. This is the basis of the Regional Defense Council's finding that there is no discrimination against Negro workers in this area's defense projects.

If this is all that is pertinent to the question which the Council undertook to explore, it has uncovered a truly astounding fact. It has uncovered the fact that defense contractors instead of discriminating against Negro workers, are discriminating against white workers! On a proportional population basis, white workers should be getting 68 per cent of the defense jobs, but are getting only 60 per cent.

Obviously, the Council has proved too much and therefore proved too little. That the defense contractors practice no discrimination against unskilled Negro workers, needed no proving. What needed proof was that they practice no discrimination against skilled Negro workers. That is the heart of the controversy. The Defense Council skips lightly over the main point with the observation that Negro employment on defense projects in this area is not confined to unskilled labor but takes in both the skilled and semi-skilled groups. This is the point on which the Council should have cited facts and figures. If it did they have not been published.

National Protest Forces Hillman to Ask Hiring of Negroes in 'Defense' Plants

APR 12 1941

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11.—Nationwide protests have succeeded in making at least a limited breach in the hitherto virtually solid wall of discrimination against Negroes in "defense" industries.

As a result of a campaign by Negro, labor and progressive groups against the administration's policy of discrimination, Associate OPM Director Sidney Hillman announced this afternoon that he has written to all firms with government contracts "urging" them to employ Negroes.

Hillman revealed in his press conference that in the last week alone he had received 3,000 letters and telegrams from Negro organizations demanding that Negroes be given jobs in companies with arms contracts.

Just how much meaning Hillman's letters will actually have in breaking down discrimination remains to be seen.

APR 12 1941

"STATEMENT OF POLICY"

The Associate OPM Director admitted that it is simply a "statement of policy." A similar statement of policy advising firms with government contracts that they should obey all labor laws was ignored by Bethlehem Steel and other corporations with large contracts and was winked at by the administration when it came to awarding contracts.

Hillman said in his letter that the OPM "expects defense contractors to utilize all available local labor resources before resorting to the recruiting of additional labor from outside their local areas."

"In many sections of the nation," he said, "there are today available labor reserves of Negro workers. Plans for their training and employment capacities commensurate with their individual skills and aptitudes should be undertaken at once."

APR 12 1941

A significant omission is the absence of any statement in the letter to the effect that employers should not impose discriminatory wages and working conditions on Negro workers.

APR 12 1941

Determination of "individual skills and aptitudes" of Negro workers is apparently left entirely to the employer.

While there is to be no enforcement machinery attached to the new statement of policy, Hillman told his press conference that he had transferred Robert C. Weaver from the staff of the OPM's labor supply and training section to direct a new section "dealing with the development of programs for the integration of Negroes into the defense effort."

Hillman also announced that he had named Will W. Alexander, former Farm Security Administrator, as a special consultant "concerned with the problems of employment of all minority groups in defense industries through the coordination of field contacts with employers."

In discussing his statement, Hillman said:

"We're leaving out right or wrong. We're interested in this simply as a production problem."

Asked to give specific cases of discrimination against Negroes in "defense" industries, Hillman refused to name any companies.

"We are not holding out any charges," he said. "We're just making a statement of policy to all people."

APR 12 1941

NO-STRIKE AGREEMENT

Hillman also announced at his press conference an ominous 2-year no-strike and wage-freezing agreement which had been reached for West Coast shipyards which now have $667,000,000 in government contracts.

This agreement was reached by representatives of the Navy Department, the Maritime Commission, shipbuiling companies and CIO and AFL union officials as a series of conferences in San Francisco. Labor groups and corporations have until a further meeting on April 21 before giving final approval.

The agreement freezes "basic wage rates for standard skilled mechanics for the period of the defense emergency proclaimed by the President of the United States." There is also a 2-year no-strike clause.

APR 12 1941

Unions are permitted to ask for revision of the wage scale on "a cost-of-living basis" at the end of one year. But in the meantime they are stuck with the wage schedule regardless of price rises.

FREY PRESENT

Chief AFL representative at the West Coast conference was John P. Frey, reactionary head of the AFL Metal Trades Federation.

One of the important factors which permitted this wage-freezing agreement is the Hillman-controlled leadership of the CIO-International Union of Shipbuilding and Marine Workers of America.

Hillman is sponsoring a series of conferences to reach similar no-strike, wage freezing agreements for East Coast, Great Lakes and Gulf Coast shipyards.

The Associate OPM Director also made it plain that he is in favor of the same kind of wage-fixing, no-strike agreements in other industries.

APR 12 1941

He declared that the West Coast agreement "should serve as an inspiring stimulus for the formulation of similar agreements, not only in the other shipbuilding zones where stabilization conferences are at present scheduled, but in industries other than shipbuilding where maximum production is essential."

Knudson Told Janitor Jobs Will Not Hold Loyalty Of Negroes

APR 4 1941

New York, N. Y.—The employment policies in national defense industries which bar Negro workers, or limit them to janitor jobs, "cannot command their full loyalty and unstinted support" of the national defense program, it was declared in a letter today from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to William S. Knudsen, OPM director.

APR 4 1941

The N. A. A. C. P. cited for Mr. Knudsen an interview given to The Kansas City Star on March 17 by J. H. Kindelberger, president and general manager of North American Aviation, Inc., of Inglewood, Cal., in which iKndelberger is quoted as saying, "under no circumstances" will Negroes be employed by his company except as janitors, "regardles of their training as aircraft workers."

The N. A. A. C. P. letter declared the Kindelberger pronouncement was the "most brazen" that had been made, and continued:

"We recall your statement that as director of OPM, you have no authority to force plants to employ Negro workers.

"But we believe that such policies as those announced publicly by Mr. Kindelberger and practiced throughout the aviation industry, and in scores of other plants, constitute a menace to the united effort demanded by President Roosevelt and yourself, and as such deserve the serious consideration of OPM.

APR 4 1941

"In his radio address to the world on March 15, Mr. Roosevelt stated: 'There is not one among us who does not have a stake in the outcome of the effort in which we are now engaged.'

"We respectfully submit that if the stake of Negro Americans is the maintenance of a system in which they are to be denied employment and restricted in opportunity, then the effort is not one which can command their full loyalty and unstinted support."

That Question of Jobs

If we assume that the war emergency will last at least two and maybe three years more, the shortage in labor will continue and grow acute.

For example, hospitals for the insane which pay employees $40-$50 a month, board and lodging, are losing workers to the army and higher-paying defense jobs.

Department store clerks are going the same way, and replacements are being made from school children.

Street cleaners, taxi and bus drivers, auto and garage mechanics are becoming harder to find. The new shipbuilding program will take in thousands of skilled and semi-skilled laborers in every city and draw in others from rural areas.

Industry will exhaust its supply of white men, will use white women on many jobs and still have room for colored workers.

* * *

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, estimates that 1,500,000 new workers will be needed in industry by next January.

He called upon industry to abolish labor policies that bar colored people from defense work and appointed Dr. Robert C. Weaver to head a new section designed to put the pressure on those industries with government contracts.

APR 19 1941

Dr. Weaver has had some success doing the same thing with the federal housing program. He will get some help from the Senate committee investigating discrimination in defense industries.

* * * *

What this all adds up to, we think, is that during the next two years large numbers of colored workers are going to have opportunities which they have not had before, to work both in private employment and in defense plants.

The wise men are those who use their spare time today preparing for radio and electrical work, electric and gas welding, pattern making and power machine operation.

The man who can handle a tool skillfully will be king for the next two years, and those best qualified will get ahead faster.

Defense Jobs Give Negroes Equal Chance

No Discrimination Shown in Employment, Council's Survey Reveals

Negroes are not being discriminated against in employment on defense projects in the Hampton Roads area, Maj. Raymond B. Bottom, chairman of the Hampton Roads Regional Defense Council said yesterday.

Findings of a survey made by the council following a complaint of racial discrimination emanating from Fort Eustis show that 39.3 per cent of all persons employed on 20 defense projects in the Hampton Roads area are Negroes, as compared with a 32 per cent population of Negroes in this section, he pointed out.

Results of the survey were given to the council at its meeting in the Association of Commerce board room here yesterday afternoon. In 20 defense projects on both side of Hampton Roads there are in all 28,713 persons employed, of whom 10,127 are Negroes, according to the figures.

The percentage of Negro employes on any one project ran as high as 72.8 on the Fort Monroe defense housing job, and is nowhere lower than 30 per cent, the survey discloses.

At the Naval Air Station, where 2,800 persons are employed, 900, or 32.1 per cent are Negroes; on the Benmoreell Park Naval defense housing project the percentage is 48.7 Negroes, or 400 of 820 employes; general defense projects at Fort Monroe employ 850 persons, of whom 425, or 50 per cent, are Negroes.

The percentage of Negro employment is not confined to unskilled labor but also takes in both the skilled and semiskilled groups. During the making of the survey, Major Bottom said, Negroes were found to be working side by side with white men at bricklaying, plastering, lathing and in similar trades. Construction superintendents were unanimous in stating that there had been no discrimination, he added, asserting that all laborers were employed with regard to their ability and their capacities. In many projects, however, it was pointed out that there had been no applications for work from skilled Negro laborers.

At Fort Eustis, where the only complaint of discrimination originated, the survey found 5,800 men at work, 2,300 of whom were Negroes, or 39.6 per cent of the total.

In addition to the projects already mentioned others covered in the survey, with the respective percentage of Negroes employed at the time of the canvass, included:

Dale Homes, 60.9 per cent; Swanson Homes, 64.7; Fort Story barracks and hospital, 37.5; Newport News naval housing, 33.3; Yorktown Mine Depot, 50; Yorktown fuel oil station, 50; Marshall Courts, 33.2; Orcutt Homes, 39.6; Harbor Homes, 31.8; Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company 30; Langley Field defense housing 50, Langley Field wind tunnel, run ways, etc., 50.7; Simonsdale, 35 Navy housing facilities (near Gosport), 44.8; Merrimack Park, 30.

DR. MAX YERGAN SEES DANGER IN FIGHT FOR JOBS

Says Negroes Must Avoid Being Made Happy For War With Work In Industries

NEW YORK, May 21—Pointing out the real danger that faces the Negro people today from those who would have us barter the right of employment in exchange for supporting a war that is "the instrument of oppression of the people the world over," Dr. Max Yergan, president of the National Negro Congress called upon the 60 prominent Americans who signed a statement urging an investigation of discrimination against Negroes in defense industry to demonstrate their good faith "in the employment of Negroes in jobs these men control."

The statement to which Dr. Yergan referred, was released for publication May 7, and widely publicized in the nation's press. The New York newspaper, PM, devoted nine pages to an illustrated discussion of the statement. The statement was signed by such prominent men as Marshall Field, millionaire owner of PM and the Marshall Field department store in Chicago which refuses to employ Negroes.

Others who signed the statement which declared that discrimination against Negroes in defense industry should receive "thorough and impartial investigation," were Mayor La Guardia, Governor Herbert Lehman, Lessing Rosenwald, Harper Sibley, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; and many others prominent in the civic, religious and industrial life of the country.

"It is significant that the statement of those 60 prominent Americans places all emphasis on taking the Negro into the so-called defense industries. We do not say that it is an incorrect emphasis, because the Negro people have a right to participate in the full job-life of the country. However, I should like to point out that the pattern, the basis, for excluding Negroes from jobs was laid long before the present so-called crisis; consequently, emphasis should be on that form of economic security which comes from regular, normal participation in the job-life of the country.

"We should like to have evidence of the good faith of these 60 persons in the form of immediate employment of Negroes in the jobs—or in some of the jobs—these men control.

"It would be a mistake, and it would do serious harm to the Negro people, if they demanded jobs in exchange for support of war-making plans and of war itself, since this war holds no good for the Negro but will usher in destruction of his democratic rights and further denial of the meager civil liberties he enjoys already.

"The Negro people must insist on jobs while at the same time opposing this imperialist war and our intervention in it. It is a war which cannot possibly serve to strengthen democracy or to liberate the people, for it is an instrument of oppression of the people the world over."

Many Defense Contractors Will Sub-Contract To Negroes

Survey Reveals That Some Contractors Over Nation Will Not Discriminate Against Negroes

APR 4 - 1941

WASHINGTON, April 4 (ANP)—Making a survey of some of the larger construction companies handling huge contracts under the defense program of building and construction, Emmer Martin Lancaster, advisor on Negro affairs in the department of commerce, has just received a number of flattering replies to hs queries as to the use of Negro workers and the letting of sub-contracts to Negroes.

Selected from the large list of contractors in various parts of the country, the replies are both interesting and illuminating. Some 21 contractors out of 30 contacted sent in replies to Mr. Lancaster.

In his letter, the advisor on Negro affairs asked would the contractors be aggreeable to letting Negro sub-contractors have work in electrical, glazing, painting, cementing and carpenters' fields. The replies varied but were to the point.

From Alabama one contractor wrote that they used all Negro plasterers and cement finishers and hire qualified Negroes in general.

Chicago said; "Any responsible sub-contractor operating on a union basis is acceptable." Kansas said, "We would be glad to favor Negro sub-contractors with such work."

Over in Baltimore, it was said that the company will accept qualified Negroes on their defense projects. Boston reported, no hesitancy from the past experience with Negroes; Detroit says, qualified Negroes and union members are always considered; New York says all types are taken regardless of race, creed or color, depending upon qualifications. Another one in the same city said, "yet, provided they are qualified and stand right with the union."

Another company operating in Baltimore and New York and Newport News, Va., said they are using a large percentage of Negroes on a project they are constructing in Newport News, Va., but they have not come in contact with any Negro sub-contractors

Down in North Carolina, two firms say they find the Negro very efficient and use any number of skilled Negro mechanics. "We do and will continue to accept qualified Negro sub-contractors and skilled mechanics."

In Philadelphia, it was reported that "we have and do hire qualified Negroes in all trades whenever they are available."

But in Norfolk, Va., the one sour not rises;

"If I were doing work in southern California; no objections to their use provided they were qualified. Another from the same section; "see no reason why they would be discriminated against, provided employees of respective unions our firm has agreement with. At present, we employ many Negroes."

Another from the same section, "We have no objections to the acceptance of qualified Negroes on defense projects."

APR 4 - 1941

Washington, D. C. wrote, "willing to accept qualified Negroes suitable on defense projects." Another Washington contractor said; "As long as they carry cards we have not and do not intend to refuse hiring Negro laborers or mechanics on our projects."

From Jacksonville, Fla., it was stated that Negroes had been used very successfully in all of the crafts. They were highly satisfactory on the small contracts, but could not be used on large contracts as the company "did not feel it the best policy to have mixed white and colored workers."

Down in Georgia, a firm replied states where it is customary to use Negro sub-contractors, I would not hesitate to employ them. However, in Virginia, in which these trades are controlled by labor unions not affiliated with Negro unions, I do not employ them except as laborers, cement finishers, mortar mixers and hod carriers."

APR 4 - 1941

Mr. Lancaster was highly pleased with the results of his survey and intends to follow through on it with others of a similar nature to present to the country, if possible, a picture of the attitudes of the bigger firms getting the bulk of the defense program contracts.

Ministers Back Negro Job Fight In Aircraft Plant

APR 1 1941

Washington Religious Leaders Flay Giant Plant for Bias to Negroes; Cite Federal Negligence; Job Drive Rally to Be Held in Baltimore April 27

APR 1 1941 (Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 31. — Expressing "grave concern" over the mounting toll which job insecurity is taking among the Negro people, the District of Columbia Interdenominational Ministers Alliance, representing 100 ministers of all denominations, issued a statement here today giving full support to the National Negro Congress drive to open up 7,000 jobs for Negroes at the Glenn L. Martin aircraft factory outside Baltimore, Md.

APR 1 1941

Sponsored by the Baltimore and Washington Councils of the Congress, the job drive will be given active impetus at a conference to be held in Baltimore April 27th, at the Elks Auditorium, Madison Ave. and McMechen St.

PLEDGE SUPPORT

Characterizing the giant aircraft company as a "symbol of the action of the Federal government and private industry to bar Negroes from the right to earn a living," the ministers declared, "that is why we support the job campaign now being conducted by the Baltimore and Washington Councils of the National Negro Congress to obtain 7,000 jobs in this airplane factory."

The statement was signed by the following officials of the Alliance: F. W. Alstork, pastor of Union Wesley A.M.E. Zion Church, president; Julius S. Carroll, Jones Memorial Methodist; J. E. Elliott, St. Luke Protestant Episcopal; Robert R. Brooks, Lincoln Temple Congregational; and William H. Jernagin, Mt. Carmel Baptist. The Rev. Mr. Jernagin is also president of the National Baptist Sunday School Congress and B.Y.P.U.

Portions of the statement follows:

"As ministers of Washington, who, by virtue of our work in the religious life of the community, have an opportunity to observe at first hand the everyday life of our people, we are deeply concerned over the grave economic situation facing Negro citizens of the capital.

"In the midst of a rising cost of living that finds expression in high rents, poor housing conditions, high food prices, and insufficient health protection, our people suffer because thousands of them are without work. This job insecurity has reached alarming proportions.

"The Glenn L. Martin Company, at Middle River, Maryland, one of the largest aircraft plants in the country, employs 18,000 workers, but refuses to hire a single Negro. The company, which has $322,000,000 in government contracts, is engaged in an expansion program which will enable it to employ 40,000 workers during the coming months. And yet the Federal government has done nothing to force the officials of this company to hire Negroes."

Vote to Send Delegate To Washington, Raise $359 To Bear Expenses

Dr. A. Porter Davis and C. A. Franklin, Speak, Condemn Policy of North American Aviation Company

APR 4 - 1941

Vigorously stirred to action as a result of a statement that the North American Aviation bomber plant would hire no Negroes except as janitors, approximately 5,000 Negroes of the two Kansas Cities crowded the Memorial hall Sunday afternoon in the biggest protest defense meeting of its kind to be held in Kansas City, Kas.

The meeting, sponsored by the Kansas City, Kansas branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, resulted in the collection of $359.16 to be used to send a delegate or delegation to Washington, D. C., to put the problem of the proposed discrimination in national defense employment before federal authorities.

The manifest unfairness and un-Americanism of the proposed discrimination as voiced by J. H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation corporation in a telephone conversation with a local daily was the keynote of addresses of all the speakers.

Principal speaker was Dr. A. Porter Davis, whose axiomatic and fire-branded statements were frequently applauded. Enthusiasm for the crusading physician's address ran so high that at the end he received a rousing ovation that lasted fully five minutes. At the end of that time, an enthusiastic young woman in the audience, Miss Cora Graves, led a yell, in which the crowd supported her: "What's the matter with Dr. Davis? He's all right! Who's all right? Dr. Davis!"

"They say Negroes can't think," he asserted in discussing some of the excuses offered by white employers who refuse to hire Negroes for technical work, "but what about Dr. George Washington Carver, who has done more with a peanut than Kindelberger could do with a bomb?"

APR 4 - 1941

History-Making Premise

Kindelberger's statement which drew such a sharp protest from Kansas City Negroes "has been heard around the world," the principal speaker said, adding acrimoniously that "even Hitler rejoices." Fortunately for Kansas City Negroes, Dr. Davis pointed out that Kindelberger made his history-making premise before it was too late: "The devil urged him," stated the doctor, "but God timed him!"

Bringing the matter of discrimination in defense employment nearer home to his listeners, the speaker pointed out that a local manufacturing concern in the Argentine district which has a government contract to make gun stocks refuses to hire Negroes because the employer "could not afford to install new toilets and lockers."

Discrimination is practiced right here in Kansas City, Kas., the doctor declared, as he proceeded to point out wherein the alleged discriminatory practices existed—in the Kansas City, Kansas Power and Light company, where only 17 Negroes are employed out of an approximate 1,000 and the Kansas City, Kansas board of education which refuses Negro tradesmen the right to do repair and seasonal maintenance work on school buildings.

APR 4 - 1941

Having urged the audience to boycott General Motors products, because North American Aviation Inc., is one of its subsidiaries, the bristling doctor turned his wrath on the local situation: "Let's make our dissatisfaction with the board of public utilities be felt," he urged, "let's burn some candles and some oil lamps. Let's have a few 'blackout' nights!"

Following Dr. Davis' address, a resolution was read by Myles Clay Stevens. The resolution, which was unanimously adopted, recommended:

1) "That one or more delegates be sent to Washington, D. C., to attend the discrimination hearing by the senate committee, and represent us to the end that unless North American Aviation Inc., gives employment to Negroes in all departments of the Fairfax bomber plant, that our government cancel all contracts with that company for the purchase of planes and equipment;

2) "That Negro boys be given the same type of training in the public school system here as the white boys, in order that they will be prepared to work in all departments of the bomber plant;

3) "That upon the opening of the bomber plant, Negroes be given employment commensurate with their qualifications."

Afterward the collection to send a delegate or delegates was taken.

APR 4 - 1941

Mayor Conrtibutes

Mayor Don C. McCombs who sent a $1 contribution to the collection table, was asked to come to the stage. As he walked to the front of the auditorium, the city government head was strenuously booed.

C. A. Franklin, editor of The Call prefaced his short talk with a reprimand to those who booed the mayor. "The mayor is here as our guest," the newspaperman stated "and to boo him is not good manners. Besides, you all know me well enough to know that if the mayor ever needs a cussin', I'll give it to him."

"Kindelberger must be made to change his policy," Franklin maintained, throwing away pages of his prepared speech as he warmed to his subject, "although, it is not Kindelberger, not one man, but that man as the text on which we are preaching this democracy sermon."

"Any objection that Kindelberger has to Negro workers on planes is only a claim," the newspaperman told his listeners. "Until we are given employment in numbers, such as we had a right to here in Kansas City, Kansas, where we have taxed ourselves in order that Kindelberger's company can make planes—and profits—there is no knowing what we can do, and neither he nor his engineers have the slightest ground for saying we cannot do precision or any other kind of work. When we came out of slavery they said of us that we would strave and die out. Our five million has become 13 million. We answer talk with deeds!"

"The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strongest," Franklin asserted in advocating a follow-through policy of action, "but to him who endureth to the end."

In conclusion he admonished the audience not to feel that "you have done everything because you are here, there is plenty yet to b done."

Others who spoke on the program included Bishop J. A. Gregg, presiding bishop of the fourth episcopal district of the A.M.E. church, who gave announcements; Carl R. Johnson, Kansas City, Mo. attorney and president of the Kansas City, Mo., branch of the N.A.A.C.P.; R. B. Brown, president of the Kansas City, Kas., branch N.A.A.C.P., who made remarks; James A. Hamlett, editor of the Plaindealer newspaper ,who outlined the purpose of the meeting; of God in Christ

Bishop Charles Pleas state overseer of the Church of God in Christ, who gave invocation and the Rev. D. W. Bass, pastor of St. Peter's C.M.E. church, invocation.

Dr. W. M. Blount, former representative of the eighth legislative district, presided as master of ceremonies. The audience was led in singing "Lift Every Voive and Sing," by T. H. Reynolds, music instructor at Sumner high school. Band numbers played by the Sumner high band before the meeting began were directed by P. H. McDavid, Sumner high school instructor of band and orchestra. Members of Argonne post No. 2217, of the American Legion participated in the color bearing ceremony, advancing and retiring the American flag and the Legion flag to and from the speakers platform.

Seated on the speaker's platform were members of the local ministry and a number of prominent persons in civic and social circles.

OPM Chief Accused Of Stalling On Jobs Issue

MAY 17 1941

WASHINGTON.—Charges that Sidney Hillman's job-survey tour is simply another stall to keep from facing the fact that thousands of colored skilled workers, denied jobs in defense industry, are standing at his official doorstep demanding action, were made by John P. Davis, national secretary of the National Negro Congress, in a letter to Dr. Robert Weaver urging that Office of Production Management officials follow Booker T. Washington's advice and "let down your buckets where you are."

Davis said in part:

"The press informs us that Mr. Hillman, associate OPM director, is now on tour seeking to unearth all possible sources of skilled labor to meet the grave shortage of skilled men in defense industry.

"Will you please inform him that Elmer Jones, Jr., seeking electrical engineering student at Howard university, is ready to go to work and is thoroughly trained for the job. Please advise us to whom Jones is to report for a job.

"We have hundreds of other qualified colored men and women thoroughly trained and qualified whom we will be glad to send to those industries having a shortage of skilled men. Indeed, we recommend to you and Mr. Hillman the sane advice of a great Negro leader, Booker T. Washington, who said, 'Let down your buckets where you are.' Please pass this word on to Mr. Hillman."

Following the picketing of Hillman's office here for the fourth time on Thursday, Congress officials announced that there will be no let-up in the campaign to win 7,000 jobs for colored persons at the Glenn Martin Aircraft company in Baltimore.

Delegations of skilled workers appeared at the plant on Friday and Saturday seeking jobs. These delegations will continue, Congress officials said, until jobs are obtained.

HISTORY BEING MADE AS RACE WINS, LOSES ON ECONOMIC FRONT

MISS McKENZIE last week defined and described the perplexity of the race when confronted by the normal facts of living in a land dominated, but not completely swayed, by racial prejudice. Picking the good from the bad is like searching for mushrooms where toadstools grow. Negroes never know where prejudice will rear its ugly head. They don't know which restaurants to enter, which theaters which hotels. They need a sixth sense to guard them against insult and humiliation.

Mr. Prattis

It is equally difficult in these times to determine with any degree of satisfaction whether the race, as a whole, is moving forward or backward. One certainly could not dismiss with a gesture the adversary who would contend that the race is further behind today than it was 20 years ago. There is evidence to support such a contention. Twenty-five years ago, Northern industrialists were offering so much a head for Negro workers; today we are waging a bitter fight to get into industry. In fact, we are tragically come to grips with the problem of charting and securing our economic future. Economists met at Atlanta last week to try to think into shape a program that would guarantee the Negro's economic survival.

PAYING ATTENTION

ON some fronts we have lost ground; on others, we have gained. In each instance, history is being made. One of the signs of progress is the increased interest which official Washington is being forced to take in Negro affairs. Although the Federal departments in Washington still retain the original patents on inventive methods of excluding Negro citizens from work opportunities, it is doubtless safe to say that there has been no time in our history when so many able young colored men and women have been employed in these departments as there are now. It is also true that the total of those employed is also vastly greater. But the percentage and the quality is in the Negro's favor.

Many of us recall the old Black Cabinets not too pleasantly. They are gone. They had no power and, without special training, were of little service.

NEW ERA ARRIVES

The future historian will doubtless date the new era with the employment of famed J. A. "Billboard" Jackson in the Department of Commerce. He was succeeded by Eugene Kinckle Jones as an adviser on Negro affairs. Into the picture also came Robert Weaver, in association with Clark Foreman, as an adviser on Negro affairs in the Department of the Interior. From that time on, during the last ten years, we have been placing trained men and women in various government departments. We surely haven't placed enough. Those in positions have suffered from restrictions. But we have been digging in more deeply and more broadly. Almost every day, a colored man or woman arrives in Washington to work in some department. They are coming in, not only as stenographers and secretaries, but as specialists in many fields and as minor executives.

THEY are not political stopgaps. They are educated men and women who know how to do something. After trying to unload all the problems of the race on the shoulders of Bob Weaver and the frail (physical) support of Ted Poston, the Office of Production Management has awakened and has created a bureau for Weaver. He is to have a staff. That means more jobs for Negroes, trained Negroes. Reginald Johnson of Pittsburgh, formerly of the Urban League, went into NYA last week as a personnel specialist, not as a Negro worker for Negroes, but as a specialist in dealing with problems of personnel, regardless of color. The Consumers Division of the National Defense Advisory Commission employed its first colored stenographer only two weeks ago. Colored stenographers, after a fight lasting months, have finally won positions in the War Depart-

All this is progress. Not enough, to be sure. Such progress is simply a sign that we are getting somewhere and that if we continue to fight for what is our right, we'll get more of it. It does good to take stock now and then to see where we can move ahead.

CREATES NEW JOB BUREAU FOR RACE

Section To Integrate Negroes Into Defense Training and Employment Program — Names Weaver and Dr. Alexander To New Posts.

WASHINGTON, April 24—Creation of a new section in the Office of Production Management, devoted entirely to the integration of Negroes into the national defense program, was announced last Friday evening by Sidney Hillman, Associate Director of OPM, in a speech to the First Annual Conference on the Negro in Business.

Addressing a mass meeting at the Mt. Carmel Baptist church here, Mr. Hillman revealed that the newly created Negro Training and Employment section will be headed by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, former administrative assistant in the Labor Supply and Training section of OPM. In his new capacity, Dr. Weaver will be directly responsible to Mr. Hillman.

NAMES COORDINATOR

At the same time, the Associate Director announced the appointment of Will W. Alexander, former Executive Director of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, as Special Consultant on employment and training problems relating to all minority groups. Dr. Alexander, vice-president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, will coordinate the work of all OPM agencies which now have field contacts with employers.

The expanded machinery for the integration of Negroes into defense training and employment was revealed by Mr. Hillman during the course of a report to the conference on the progress of similar work already instituted by the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense and more recently by the Office of Production Management.

Through the efforts of national defense agencies, Mr. Hillman declared, thousands of skilled Negro building trades workers have been given employment in the construction of army cantonments and powder plants.

"More than 2,500 Negro carpenters alone were employed on these various sites at wages ranging from $8 to $12 a day," he said, "and thousands of brickmasons, plasterers, cement finishers, plumbers, roofers, power-saw operators, and other skilled and semi-skilled Negro workers were and are being given employment."

STATES EMPLOYMENT POLICY

Increased employment opportunities for Negroes were seen in iron and steel works, shipyards, and in other industries in which Negro workers already enjoyed employment status, Mr. Hillman said, and defense training programs are being pushed to prepare colored artisans for all other branches of defense production.

Both training and employment opportunities for Negroes had been expedited by the National Defense Advisory Commission's labor policy stipulation that workers should not be discriminated against because of age, sex, race or color, the Associate Director of OPM declared, and by an agreement with the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations that Negroes should not be discriminated against in defense employment.

These measures were implemented later, Mr. Hillman said, by a letter to all defense contract holders asking them to remove training and employment bans against Negroes.

The First Annual Conference on Negro Business was sponsored by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

RETURN TO WORK AT MILAN PLANT

Dyersburg Negroes Find Employment On Wolf Creek Defense Project

Dyersburg negroes who were prevented temporarily from accepting employment at the Wolf Creek defense project, near Milan, Friday night when they were harassed by a group outside the plant grounds, have gone to work there, it was understood today.

The men responded to a call issued here Friday by the Dyersburg office of the Tennessee Employment Service and were sent there to be employed in the laying of railroad tracks.

Approximately forty-seven left here in the initial group Friday afternoon and the majority of them are said to have returned that night after being harassed by a group of loiterers near the plant. They returned Saturady and went to work.

The slight temporary trouble was caused by disgruntled persons on the outside of the project grounds, it was said here Monday although some were inclined to charge the trouble to the fact that the negroes were sent from Dyersburg to Milan on a truck which had Missouri license plates.

Negro Congress Opens Campaign Against Firm's Jim-Crow Policy—Delegates from Many Groups, CIO, AFL Attend Parley

BALTIMORE, April 29.—A drive was opened here this week to compel the giant "liy-white" Glenn Martin Aircraft Co. to hire 7,000 Negro workers, with the backing of Elks lodges, the National Negro Congress and other groups, totaling a membership of a quarter million people.

The Glenn Martin company is is one of the largest in the country, employing at present 17,000 workers, not one of whom is a Negro. In addition, new plant expansion will employ another 20,000 workers. The additional construction funds are being supplied by the government.

The National Negro Congress instituted the campaign against the jim crow policies of the big plane company after a group of skilled Negro workers were refused employment after applying for jobs.

John P. Davis, executive secretary of the Negro Congress, addressing the 616 delegates who attended a conference here to fight the job ban, stressed the fact that Congress and its supporters in the campaign, is seeking to displace no white workers, but that we want our just share of these jobs which are being created by the millions in this country which nobody has yet."

APR 30 1941

UNION DELEGATES

Attending the conference were, in addition to 79 delegates from Negro Elks lodges, about 200 delegates from CIO and AFL unions.

Davis reported that a delegation, which had earlier called upon the plane company to cease discriminating against Negro job seekers, had been told by the company that it would continue barring Negroes "until the government does something about it first."

Meanwhile, the delegates were told, another delegation which called upon Sidney Hillman, Associate Director of the Office of Production Management, was told by Hillman that his office "would not tolerate discrimination." Hillman told the delegation that he preferred to take up such matters of discrimination "individually." Meanwhile, Hillman sent a gentle letter to the Glenn Martin Company, requesting it to cease its Jim Crow policy.

Frank Bender, director of the aircraft division of the CIO United Automobile Workers of America, declared that the CIO would back the Negro Congress fight for jobs.

Getting 'Em Back

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

APR 26 1941

NEW DEFENSE WORK FOR WHITES GIVES US BACK OLD JOBS

QUITE a flurry is going on among the colored people in America for as the white workers are getting the good-paying jobs on Defense contracts, the colored workers by force of necessity are being given the old jobs that the white workers are discarding. Employment Agencies throughout the nation are placing all the "colored help" that they can get and almost anybody of color who wants a job can get one now, that is if he is not particular about the "Wages and Hours and Conditions of Employment."

Mr. Bibb

Hard times in the past compelled white people to take away from the lowly and unfortunate Senegambian almost all of the menial, grovelling, repulsive, reprehensible jobs that he held. They even took away from him in parts of the South the jobs of driving the "sanitary wagons" and cleaning the "out houses." They say that "hard times will make a monkey eat red pepper," and the depression forced the white man to gett off his lofty and supercilious perch and claim the colored man's job. It became the custom all over the country to hire whites in all jobs wherever and whenever possible. They are now returning to these dusky Caesars the things that belong to Caesar.

WE ARE GETTING JOBS

Oh no, the scale of pay is not the same and hours are longer but that is to be expected for it has always been the rule and the custom for white employers, and colored too, if we care to go into that subject, to purchase man power the same as if it were "mule power." But the point of this discussion is that we are getting the jobs. Even though we are being ignored and discriminated against in the boom of war work still we are reeciving incidental benefits. Which clearly discloses the fact that it is impossible to figure us out of the American equation. That is the inevitable result in all of the ramifications of this "way of life." The Negro is in it somewhere and somehow. It is the thing that confounds and confuses the white man. He looks for us by water and we come by land.

THOUSANDS upon thousands of us are getting jobs as laborers, porters, dishwashers, garage workers, field and section hands. There is dignity in almost any kind of work and even though, there, perhaps will not be anymore money on hand at the end of the week still it is infinitely better than being on relief. This work comes as a blessing to us because it will restore to some extent our racial morale and will remove us from the state of being wards of the government. Then too, if we are smart and alert, we will, ere long, receive more money. Remember the Wages and Hour Law. Behold the Supreme Court and the Law of the Land.

PROFITS BY WAGE LAW

The Wages and Hour Law has created a minimum weekly wage that must be paid and also established a maximum of hours of work. This law includes all business engaged in "Interstate Commerce" and the Supreme Court has liberally construed almost everything under the sun to be Interstate Commerce. This writer has not the slighest doubt that in the light of recent decisions that garrage workers, porters and dishwashers are engaged in Interstate Commerce. Therefore, the Law of the Land steps in and regulates our scale of pay and hours. It is indeed a "strange wind that blows nobody any good." Thus the colored people of America will profit by the New Deal Legislation and the new defense contracts, in spite of the fact that such was never intended.

IT is well that we continue our contest to break down discrimination on Government Projects and Defense contracts. It is well that we contend to get into the unions and break down the diabolical barriers. It is still better to know that we are fortified, as we fight, by the old jobs that we once held coming back to us and back to us under the protection of the new laws enacted by Congress and upheld by the highest court of the land. Let us profit by our past experiences and hold fast to every gain that we make, for as sure as day follows night the present boom will end. Let us conserve our gains to the end that the "eight ball" will not again cast its ominous shadows upon us.

JUSTICE FOR THE NEGRO

MAY 9 1941

Comments made on the statement issued this week by the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries bring out some disturbing facts. Discrimination against opportunities for the Negro to learn and practice skilled trades is not confined to the South, nor is it practiced only by employers. Dr. Robert C. Weaver, assistant to Sidney Hillman in planning for Negro employment under the auspices of the Office of Production Management, finds some craft unions discriminating, either by refusing to admit Negroes or by admitting them only as "helpers in auxiliary unions." Assistant Director E. J. Hurley of the New York State Employment Service believes the responsibility to be about evenly divided between the employers and the unions. In either case the Negro is not getting his fair chance.

Obviously this is a situation in which men and women are being held back not by lack of ability and trustworthiness but because of race. It will be argued that racial or other groups which do not get on well together should not be compelled to work together. Yet so far as industry is concerned the Negro, or any other recognizable minority, is more likely to be a cause of friction when denied equal opportunity than when granted it. Labor unions themselves have had bitter experience when Negro workers, otherwise unable to get jobs, have been used to break strikes. But the issue is more than factional. It involves simple justice and loyalty to the democratic ideal.

Negroes Integrated Into National Defense Program By Office of Production

2,500 Carpenters Now Employed and Other Opportunities Loom For Skilled Artisans

St. Louis Women Break Through Barriers

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Reports made by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, assistant in the Office of Production Management, reveal that his department has been instrumental in procuring openings for Negro workers in jobs formerly denied them. The report says:

"Since camp construction was the first big defense activity (and since the majority of Negro skilled workers are in the building trades filed the best work of this office, so far, has been in the construction field.

"More than 2,500 Negro carpenters alone have received employment in this field, and employment opportunities were opened for the majority of them through the intervention of OPM. The same applies in the case of thousands of bracklayers, cement finishers, plumbers, roofers, power-saw operators, gip-lap operators and other skilled and semi-skilled workers.

"Representatives of Dr. Weaver's office opened up jobs for Negroes with personal visits to at least a dozen of the camp construction jobs. More than 150 Negro carpenters were given employment at Fort Leonard Wood in Rolla, Mo., for instance, following a visit there in March. Similarly more than 100 carpenters were given employment on one trip through Georgia and neighboring camp sites. In Indiana Ordnance works at Charlestown, Inc., approximately 285 Negro bricklayers were given employment as well as a larger number of semi-skilled Negro workers.

"An even larger number of cases were handled through the labor office of Joseph Keenan, an A. F. of L. assistant to Mr. Hillman. Union bans against Negro building trades workers in Kansas City, Chattanooga, Newport News and in other southern cities were lifted so that Negroes could be employed on closed shop jobs. Employment bans were tackled similarly in a number of cases.

"While it is too soon to assemble figures on Negro employment in defense at this stage, the office has been able to render steady assistance to Negro workers in industrial employment.

"In Birmingham, for instance, representatives of Dr. Weaver's office assisted in opening the apprentice school, in obtaining a reclassification of workers and in obtaining a 12½ per cent wage increase for several hundred Negro employes of the Ingalls Iron Works there. These advances had been sought by an AFY union, which appealed to the office of OPM for aid.

"In St. Louis, representatives of Dr. Weaver's office helped facilitate establishment of an upgrading class for Negro workers in four of the largest iron and steel plants there, and secured a promise from one of the firms that it would accept the first several hundred graduates from this department defense training course. This manufacturer employs 200 Negro workers in skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled capacities.

"In the same city, with the cooperation of the St. Louis Urban League, a rigid ban against Negrom women power machine operators was broken down. Thirty-seven women were put to work immediately and the total is scheduled to be increased to 45 this month. Similar openings in the same field have been made in the Chicago area.

"In the shipbuilding field, contacts have already been made to secure further integration of Negro workers, and specific shipyards are being contacted now to increase job and promotional opportunities.

"Since most of the increase in defense employment will come in skilled and semi-skilled categories, through the activities of this office, Negroes have been admitted to all defense training courses in Philadelphia, New York City, Detroit and in other northern areas. In St. Louis, through assistance given local groups, Negroes are now receiving similar training in all of the fields now open to whites. In addition Negro steel workers are being given the training already mentioned in arc and acetylene welding and in air-hammer chipping.

"In Kansas City, Kan., and Mo., Memphis and Chattanooga and in other southern cities visited by representatives of Dr. Weaver's office, defense training courses have been expanded for Negro enrollees and equipment secured for this expansion of work.

"The real effects of the activitie of the olice are just being felt in various fields of defense activity. This and other improvements will result from the policies established through this office during the past six months.

ALFRED E. SMITH, WPA ADVISER, SAYS WAR INDUSTRIES WILL USE FEMALE EMPLOYES EXTENSIVELY

WPA Projects Give Women Training and Experience Needed for Defense Jobs; Have Placed Some Already

WASHINGTON. — The wide range of training and experience gained by a yearly average of 90,000 Negro women who have been benefitted by WPA projects argues well for their effective use in the National Defense Perogram, Alfrd Edgar Smith, staff adviser, Federal Work Projects Administration, said after checking on the immediate labor supply of competent women workers whose skills are in demand during the present emergency.

"It must be remembered that during the First World War the opportunity came for Negro women to join the growing and effective army of American women engaged in defense pursuits of all kinds," the Staff Adviser commented.

"In what is known as the war industries, Negro women were recruited in the making of shells, gas masks and airplane parts. The employment of these women in the manufacturing of mechanical industries alone increased by over fifty percent."

"While it is true that most war industries have undergone many technological changes since the First World War, it is also true that women as a whole have become more mechanical-minded. Many of them have studiously kept up with the many technological changes in most productive industries.

"In one instance, a young Negro woma holdng a commercial pilot s license won the confidence and admiration of a board of education and the U. S. Civil Aeronautics Authority sponsoring ground and flight instruction classes for out-of-school students as part of a WPA Adult Education Program. Thirty-one women have been enrolled at one time in vocational education classes under the WPA Emergency Education Program. Other women have become skilled operators of smaller types of power machines used principally on W. sewing projects.

"The results of this kind of training and experience show up in the recent jobs secured by ten Negro women in the manufacturing of electrical goods." Mr. Smith emphasized. "Current employment records also show that four Negro women have jobs in metal foundries, others are optical goods workers, sheet metal workers, and press and punch-press operators. In terms of the huge defense work ahead of us, these are but small beginnings in today's all-inclusive defense effort.

"They indicate, however, a virtually untouched labor supply that proved its worth during the world conflict of 25 years ago. It is a singular case, indeed, when one finds that the work training and work experience of the WPA has not directly or indirectly prepared Negro women to find an effective place in the civilian or industrial phases of the National Defense Program."

STATES WARNED TO LIST NEGROES FOR WORK IN DEFENSE

Paul V. McNutt, FSA Head, Shows How One "Bottleneck" Has Been Made

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a letter to State employment agencies made public by Federal Security Administrator McNutt, the Social Security Board's Bureau of Employment Security stated that "availability of Negroes, both for employment and training, must be made known to vocational education authorities and to employers."

"A number of defense industries," Mr. McNutt stated, "are threatened with labor shortage which might be prevented if Negro skills were more widely used. National defense must not be permitted to lag for want of workers."

Emphasizing the need for using all America's resources as effectively as possible, the Bureau's communication is to affiliated State Employment Services called attention to a recent letter sent by Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General of the office of Production Management, to holders of defense contracts. Mr. Hillman said that a serious shortage of skilled labor threatens within the next three months, and that this is aggravated by the fact tha tmany good workers who are available "are not being hired solely because of their racial identity."

"The Office of Production Management," according to Mr. Hillman's letter, "expects defense contractors to utilize ALL available local labor resources before resorting to the recruiting of additional labor from outside their local areas."

To implement this policy of the Office of Production Management, the Bureau of Employment Security has asked the State employment offices not to recruit workers outside their localities so long as "a supply of qualified workers, locally resident, is available; and this is interpreted to include qualified Negro workers."

The policy of the Office of Production Management as stated by Mr. Hillman also recognized the need of providing training for Negro workers and recommended "that plans for the training and employment in capacities commensurate with their individual skills and aptitudes should be undertaken at once."

Mr. Hill mancaducmfwypvbmgfk

Mr. Hillman called the attention of defense contract holders to the waste of human resources, the unnecessary migration of labor and the high rates of labor turn-over which result when workers are recruited from other areas while qualified Negro workers in the locality are "restricted to unskilled jobs or barred from defense employment entirely." In line with this policy the State employment offices, making up the Nation-wide States Employment Service system, have been requested to call the attention of employers to the availability of qualified Negro workers.

White Leaders Wire Knudsen On Defense Jobs

NEW YORK, May 15—(ANP)—Supporting the stand taken Tuesday by a group of 60 prominent Americans, including Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia, in their demand through an issued statement that Negroes be given a larger share of employment in defense industries, the Fight for Freedom committee took action of its own Wednesday. This new organization sent a telegram directly to William S. Knudsen, administrator of the Office of Production Management in Washington, expressing the same feeling.

Uphold Democracy

"As a committee of American citizens devoted to the cause of insuring an Axis defeat and believing that to do so the American effort must be on the broadest and most democratic lines, we heartily endorse the statement published yesterday signed by Gov. Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia and others protesting discrimination against Negroes in defense industries."

The message was signed for the Fight for Freedom Committee by its chairman, the Right Rev. Henry W. Hobson, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Southern Ohio, and it also carried the personal expression of such national figures as Col. William J. Donovan, Maxwell Anderson, the playwright; Wallace Morgan, former president of the Society of Illustrators, and Freda Kirchwey, editor of the Nation. Other prominent members of the committee who had already signed the original statement were Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of the College of William and Mary and publisher of the Richmond News-Leader; Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Barry Bingham, Louisville publisher, and Herbert Agar, editor Louisville Courier-Journal.

Unshackle the Negro Skilled Worker

There is an old adage, "Figures can't lie, but liars can figure." This is what is happening in national defense work projects. Figures have been compiled by the hypocrites desirous of preventing Negroes from being integrated into defense work, showing three per cent of the Negroes are skilled as against sixteen per cent of the whites. Whenever the case of the Negro comes up these false figures are presented. The liars are figuring.

These figures used to deny the skilled Negro opportunity to work on defense projects were compiled by WPA. Thousands of Negroes over the nation when first certified, classified themselves as skilled workers. If he was a carpenter, brick mason, plumber or whatnot, the Negro worker said so. But as time rolled on these skilled workers saw Negroes employed by the thousands as common laborers while they were refused employment, and so to squelch his hunger and barely feed his family he submitted to reclassification as a common laborer at his first opportunity.

Thus one finds all over the country thousands of skilled Negro workers classified on WPA records as common laborers. Hunger forced them to accept this sort of classification. In their destitution they were told that white skilled workers would not work with them. We do not charge that this advice originated among the higher-ups, but it certainly was an admonition that flourished down in the lower brackets of administration.

Just at this time when there is a great flurry and disturbance regarding Negro skilled labor, the Black Dispatch suggests that a new certification test be instituted by WPA. It is unfair to skilled Negroes to force them into common labor brackets during the worst of the depression and hold them there during this period when opportunity to work at inspiring wage scales are present on government projects.

If the Black Cabinet in Washington wants to do an honest-to-God day's work, demand recertification and reclassification of Negro workers; get the news around. Let the Negro newspapers in on what the plans are and Negro newspapers will get the information to the Negro worker that a great wrong is going to be righted. There's no way to do a good job by scattering a few government bulletins. In many sections of America, recertification would not mean anything to the Negro worker unless Negro workers were notified through Negro newspapers and other Negro controlled instrumentalities. Government bulletins would be purposely kept away from the Negro worker and the Negro skilled worker should be advised by those he trusts that recertification has been secured so that he can liberate himself from common labor classification.

Comment Supports Democratic Move

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Daily newspapers in all sections of the country have given unanimous editorial support to the drive for the integration of Negro workers into the national defense program, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch, reported this week.

JUN 4 1941

Dr. Weaver's report was based on a survey of newspaper comment on the subject within recent weeks. Many of the editorials listed followed Mr. Hillman's action on April 11 in urging defense contract holders to utilize available Negro skilled and unskilled labor.

"Since an enlightened public opinion is of great aid in attacking a problem of this nature," the report said, "this widespread support of the daily press should be of much assistance in expediting the integration of qualified Negro workers into defense production."

VERMONT FREE PRESS—"While we in America stoutly declare the equality of all races under this government of ours and teach our children the principle of Christian brotherhood, yet there persists a strong current of race prejudice which is a very tender subject in many areas of the United States. Negroes have a real contribution to make to national defense and they should be given every encouragement along this line."

MASSACHUSETTS STANDARD TIMES—"Certainly a nation that is arming to defend its democracy against forces that assert the superiority of one particular race above all others, should not display a similar attitude by denying any group of its citizens the privilege of contributing to that defense. If the OPM can impress that view on employers and white workers, and overcome the prejudice that now exists, it will have accomplished a just and a worthwhile thing."

INDIANA COURIER—"Our Negroes are hundred-percent Americans. But also their efficiency is probably much higher, when they are given opportunity to develop it, than has been realized . . . As these facts are accepted, there may be many more Negroes taken off the charity rolls and the WPA and given useful jobs helping industry and Uncle Sam."

JUN 14 1941

NEW YORK POST—"It is up to America to end discrimination against Negro participation in our national effort. We can prove to the Negro that his faith in the United States is well placed."

KANSAS CITY KANSAN — "No controversial 'social' issue is involved here. It is strictly the economic issue of giving all of equal skill equal chance at employment opportunities, regardless of any other consideration."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR—"A clear test of the quality of democracy in the United States will be its ability to use more fully the resource which exists in the services of an important minority."

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER—"It is particularly necessary that Negro youths be afforded equal opportunities for training in defense work. There are employers and labor leaders who should take a more enlightened view of this question, both for their country's sake and that of common justice."

WASHINGTON (D.C.) POST—"The fact that skilled Negro craftsmen are being denied employment in industries handicapped by labor shortages has been frequently mentioned in official reports in the United States Employment Service. From the standpoint of those concerned only with speeding up the defense program, such exclusion must seem indefensible."

GREAT FALLS (MONT.) TRIBUNE—"Our leaders are telling us that the need is at hand to mobolize all our manpower, not only for military defense, but also for industrial production so essential to defense. The leaders of the Negro Americans are asking what their place is in that effort."

MINNEAPOLIS (MINN.) TRIBUNE—"If we are going to bring the blessings of democracy, in our time and generation, to all the people of the globe, we might as well begin to do a little homework, if only to get our hand in."

OREGON JOURNAL — "The United States, which fought a bloody civil war in order that the Negro might be free, and which is now engaged upon its greatest of all rearmament drives, in order that racial discrimination and oppression of minorities shall be ended forever, should be the last country on earth to draw the line against its own Negro citizens . . . OXLEY GETS RESULTS AT JOB CONFERENCE

HARTFORD, Conn., May 29.—Upon receipt of a telegram from the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, Martin F. Carpenter, chief, the United States Employment Service Division, Social Security Board, Washington, dispatched Lieutenant Lawrence A. Oxley, chief, Racial Relations Unit, to attend what was probably the most important conference on the Negro worker ever held in New England.

JUN 3 1941

Over two thousand Connecticut manufacturers were represented at this meeting where the agenda provided for a frank and open discussion of the use of available skilled Negro workers in national defense industries.

TALKS GET RESULTS

As an initial result of the skillful presentation by Lieutenant Oxley in behalf of the Negro worker the Pratt and Whitney Corporation, a subsidiary of the United Aircraft Corporation, requested the referral by the Connecticut State Employment Service of twenty Negro semi-skilled workers for employment in their Hartford plant.

Another immediate outcome of the Hartford conference was the change announced in the employment policy of Cheney Brothers, silk manufacturers of Manchester, Connecticut in the matter of employing Negro workers. The Cheney Company has been in existence for one hundred and two years and prior to the conference had never employed a Negro in any capacity. This concern has a defense contract amounting to three million dollars for the production of parachute silk.

THREE SILK INSPECTORS

Announcement was made at the Hartford meeting by J. W. Nickerson, General Superintendent, that the first Negro workers were being employed this week in the silk inspection and chemical processing departments, and that this group of Negro workers was chosen on the basis of physical fitness, intelligence and aptitude.

These new openings of job opportunities to Negro workers in essential national defense industries, following closely upon the decision of the Curtis-Wright and Bell Aircraft Corporation of Buffalo, to open the doors to skilled Negro workers, is positive evidence that industrial leaders in the nation are alive to the present emergency and are aware of the contributions which qualified Negroes throughout the country stand ready to contribute through their skills to the successful culmination of one hundred percent all-out defense.

PLANS OTHER CONFERENCE

Other employment managers and personnel officers present at the Hartford conference, expressed an active interest in the possibilities of using qualified Negroes in their plants and gave assurance that increasingly, opportunities will be afforded for the full integration of skilled Negro workers in all phases of defense production.

MAY 31 1941

During the coming week, Lieutenant Oxley is to have further conferences with representatives of the Curtis-Wright Aircraft Corporation with reference to opening skilled and semi-skiled opportunities in their Columbus, Ohio, and St. Louis, Missouri, plants.

Negroes in Defence Work

Mr. ROOSEVELT has made the right, and not merely the politically wise move in directing that OPM stop the discrimination in some defence industries against "much-needed workers . . . because of race" or religion. The President is not on ground equally safe when he puts "national origin" in the same category with race and religion. Industry should not discriminate against a man who has a Russian, a German or an Italian name, but where sabotage is possible, industry acts wisely in taking no chances. America wants no "witch-hunting." She must avoid "spy-mania." At the same time, she cannot overlook the presence of the "enemy within the gates." Any labor policy that opens the factories to spies and wreckers would be recklessly and stupidly dangerous.

Discrimination against Negro workers exists chiefly through tacit understanding between some of the unions and some of the contractors. Many professions are made of willingness to hire Negroes, but usually, when the show-down comes in a skilled trade, there is evasion. If pressed, contractors of this stamp will say that the white men will not work on the same job with Negroes, but that if a complete Negro crew is provided and is competent, it will be employed. The imposed conditions often are impossible of fulfillment.

In the actual outworking, few competent Negro mechanics have lost anything. If they have not found jobs in constructing camps and factories, they have taken the place of white men who have gone to the big jobs. Pay has been equalized, in the main, by differences in the cost of living. This fact does not remove the basic issue of discrimination. Even if no Negro wanted a defence job as carpenter or plasterer or any other capacity, the nation should veto any industrial policy that would deny him the right to work on even terms with other men whose ability and skill he equalled. In the words of the old American saw, "It's the principle of the thing." The principle must be set right and kept right.

JUN 24 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANS)—Negro workers, several thousand of whom will receive employment shortly in ordnance and powder plants throughout the country, are scheduled to play an important role in making America an arsenal for the democracies."

This fact became evident this week as operators of newly-erected munition plants revealed their plans for the employment of Negroes in arsenals in Alabama, Colorado, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa Missouri, Tennessee, Ohio, West Virginia, and Virginia.

This development was made public by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of the Labor Division. OPM, following the completion of a preliminary survey of the proposed policies of the plant.

According to the findings of the survey, at least 1,000 Negroes will be employed by the Altas Powder Company at a plant now being erected near Ravenna, Ohio. These employees, to be recruited from the Akron, Canton, and Youngstown areas, will be employed in various capacities in the plant.

Another 1,000 Negro workers will be hired for the operations staff of the Radford Ordnance Plant, which will be managed at Radford, Virginia, by the Hercules Powder Company. These Negro workers will average approximately $25 a week in their various tasks at the plant.

E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and Company informed OPM representatives that at least 670 Negroes would be employed in the Indiana Ordnance Works at Charlestown, Ind. J. F. Daley, Manager of the plant, stated that these workers are to average $28.43 a week. Further employment for Negro workers is expected in the same area at a similar plant which will be operated by the Good Year Corporation.

JUN 24 1941

At least 400 Negroes are scheduled to get jobs at the Iowa Ordnance Plant at Burlington, Iowa, at wages ranging from $25 to $30 a week, according to information furnished OPM by George B. Yard, Personnel Director for Day and Zimmermann, Inc.

Approximately 200 Negro workers will receive from 50 cents to 60 cents an hour at the Ohio River Ordnance Works which is being constructed at Henderson, Kentucky, information furnished by the War Department indicated.

Although the operation plans of other plants have not progressed to the point where accurate estimates can be made of the number of Negroes to be employed, Dr. Weaver declared, personnel directors of these plants are preparing to integrate colored workers into their operating staffs.

The Remington Arms Co., for instance, will draw Negro workers from neighboring communities for employment in the Lake City Ordnance Plant in Missouri. Estimates of Negro workers to be employed are now being made at the St. Louis Ordnance Plant in the same State. Most of these workers will be drawn from St. Louis, Mo.

St. Louis and outlying districts will be recruiting centers for Negro workers to be employed in the Weldon Springs Ordnance Works near that city also.

The Proctor and Gamble Defense Corporation has announced that it will hire Negro workers from surrounding areas for operation of the Wolf Creek Ordnance Plant which is being constructed in Tennessee, between Nashville and Memphis.

Mr. Joseph O. Brown, President of Todd and Brown, Inc., has informed OPM that Negroes will be included among the 8,000 employees in the Kingsbury Ordnance Plant at LaPorte, Indiana. "In the general vicinity of the Kingsbury Ordnance Plant," he wrote, "there now exists a number of Negro communities and we believe that the large number of workers required by the Kingsbury Ordnance Plant would justify the construction at this time of housing for Negro families in such sections."

Firms Complying Asserts Hillman

JUN 24 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—At Sidney Hillman's press conference Friday afternoon, the associate director of the OPM outlined for the 60 or more white newsmen attending. the purpose and conditions of the President's recent executive order, affecting the working conditions of Negroes in defense industries.

After Mr. Hillman had outlined the progress of the OPM in this direction, calling attention to the fact that the OPM had been successful in securing employment for Negroes in camp construction in some 30 camps; airplane plants; iron and steel industries; and ordnance plants he then went into a discussion of the executive order, which got very little space in the white papers when it was released here.

Mr. Hillman was asked regarding the punitive measures of the order and he replied that thus far, there had been no occasion to use such measures.

Again he was asked if any of the plants had refused to heed the first order of the President and Mr. Hillman stated that no plant the had been to in the past had been guilty of refusing the presidential order and had been highly cooperative in carrying out the principles of work involved.

Asked about the number of trade unions which discriminated against Negroes, Mr. Hillman declared he had no idea as to the number, although he was cognizant of the fact that many of them carried such clauses in their constitutions.

When informed that recent surveys show that industries are not living up to the policies as outlined in a previous order from OPM the associate director stated that no such instances had been reported to him and that the OPM had in its possession, commitments signed by the firms approached declaring that former conditions would be changed and many had already changed them in compliance with the request.

To Use 1,000 Race Workers at Radford

JUL 5 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Aides of Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of Negro employment and training in the Office of Production Manabement, said Saturday that the War Department's quartermaster division had advised that about 1,000 colored workers would be employed in the powder plant at Radford, Va. Details of the plan had not been worked out, however, a spokesman said.

The War Department advised the OPM group, this official said, that the colored workers would be chosen as nearly as possible from the plant locality and that the average wage probably would be around $25 a week.

WORK PICKS UP

Following a conference of the President of the United States with a committee of Negro leaders, which laid before the chief executive some of the obstacles in the way of Negroes in obtaining employment, work among our group has taken a sharp upward turn according to latest reports.

Industries whose management heretofore had declared that there was no place in their business for Negroes except that of janitors, have changed their way of thinking to the extent that they now are giving the Negroes a chance to show what they can do and in many instances have opened their training departments in order that they may qualify for further integration into the defense program.

Happily, evidence of the force of the United States government is felt by the opening of these doors of work opportunity for Negroes.

Then, too, it must be remembered, and full credit given to the fact that the President of the United States promised the committee above referred to that this thing would be done, suggesting however, that it would take a little time.

Another interesting feature in connection with the discrimination against Negroes in defense jobs and in the army and navy is the fact that it has been brought out that these things could not be done overnight, but that because of long standing traditions it was necessary to study the proper course to pursue in order to get the thing done at all. Fortunately for the committee representing the Negroes, it was able to see the wisdom of giving serious study to the best course for him to pursue.

We understand that Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York City is to head a committee to make a study of the ills from which Negroes suffer and that he is to be assisted by able and thinking men and women of our group. This all reminds us of the fact that a few years ago Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell introduced a bill in the Congress of the United States calling for the President to appoint a commission on Negro affairs to study our problems and present the same to the President of the United States. The duties of the commission as proposed by the Congressman at the time were similar to the duties of the committee recently appointed by the President. Therefore, some of us are thinking that it may be that had time been taken by the forelock, as the Congressman saw conditions then, we would not find ourselves in the position we are in today. However, while it is true that the editor of this paper takes no particular credit for having contributed to the plan which resulted in the calling off of the March on Washington, yet we might mention a paragraph here which was a part of a letter we wrote to A. Philip Randolph, director of the Negro March on Washington Committee, June 18th, which was one week before the President issued his executive order:

"Then, too, as you know, it is still problematical as to whether the march will get what we want. Such a dramatic move looks like our 'trump' card. If it fails to win a signal victory our cause will be hurt and our efforts will suffer a great setback. Just as the situation now stands a nice victory has already been won. Surely wisdom would suggest that we hold this and take a little time to build up our forces for the next big step. This can be done by postponing the march until a future date pending negotiations for the word from the President which we all want to hear".

The thing for us to do now is to hold what we have but keep on fighting. Since the President has issued one executive order the way may be opened for him to issue another. So again, we congratulate the committee, headed by A. Philip Randolph, for its wisdom in postponing the March on Washington.

Shipyard Boosts Total Of Negro Employees 100%

Another Yard On West Coast To Employ Building Workers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—The Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Chester, Pa., Wednesday told the OPM that it was going to increase by 100 percent Negro employment in its yards, where 750 colored skilled and unskilled workers are already employed.

Other developments in this field, revealed by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM, in a report to Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General, included:

1. The admittance of Negro trainees in pipefitting, welding, sheet metal and electrical defense courses at Philadelphia for anticipated employment at the Cramp Shipbuilding Company yards.

2. The conclusion of an agreement with West Coast unions and shipbuilders for the transfer of Negro building trades workers to the shipbuilding yards for immediate construction employment.

Plans for the doubling of the Negro personnel at the Sun Shipbuilding Company were outlined to a field representative of Dr. Weaver's office by C. R. Burke, Vice President of the shipbuilding firm.

Earlier, John G. [illegible], President, had informed OPM that Negroes already constituted 10 percent of Sun's employees, and that they were integrated into the forge and blacksmith shops, foundry, pipefitting department, bolting and reaming, riveting, storeroom, yard maintenance, bending shop, garage and janitor service.

Mr. Burke revealed that an additional 750 Negro workers would be hired in these departments when the employment peak is reached, and that many of the present workers would be promoted to foreman and supervisory positions.

At the Cramp Shipbuilding Company, Dr. C. R. Pendleton, Director of Training, accepted a suggestion of the OPM representative that 100 Negroes be referred immediately from the Pennsylvania State Employment Service for examination and defense training in shipbuilding operations at the Mastbaum Vocational School Annex.

Dr. Pendleton has already referred four Negro trainees to Mastbaum for training in pipefitting, welding, sheet metal and electrical work. Since peak employment is not expected at Cramp's before 1942, a sizeable number of Negro workers will have an opportunity to secure the necessary training.

The West Coast agreement for the transfer of Negro building construction workers to shipbuilding construction work in Pacific Coast yards was instituted by Dr. Weaver on a recent field trip to that area. The agreement resulted from conferences between union and shipbuilding officials and Dr. Weaver, Dr. Will Alexander, and Leonard Outhwaite of OPM.

DEFENSE JOBS AGAIN

Jobs are daily being multiplied in many defense industries, and the next problem is to find workers to fill them. Dr. Robert C. Weaver of the OPM who is in a position to know the shortage of workers says that 75 per cent of the new jobs call for skilled and semi-skilled workers and that the developing employment opportunities may be lost to colored workers through their failure to take advantage of defense training courses established in their own communities.

"All departments and agencies of the Government of the United States concerned with vocational and training programs for defense production shall take special measures appropriate to assure that such programs are administered without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin" reads the President's recent executive order. It thus revealed an understanding of the training difficulties which face certain groups. "The opportunities are opening up daily," Dr. Weaver asserts, "but the President's order may prove ineffective in many areas unless workers prepare themselves for the new opportunities by completing defense training courses."

Dr. Weaver's statement but reiterates a warning that is passed along frequently as defense projects expand. In anticipation of industry's rapidly growing demand for labor the big item is "preparedness."

2 More Airplane Plants Open Shops To Negroes

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Following so closely upon the heels of the executive order issued by President Roosevelt Wednesday, that local observers were inclined to relate the two, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, adviser of the Negro employment and training branch of the Office of Production Management Thursday listed several more aviation concerns which are now offering employment to Negroes.

The developments in the employment situation as reported by Dr. Weaver follows:

1. The Grumman Aeronautical Engineering corporation of Bethpage, L. I., and the Republic Aviation company of Farmingdale, L. I., have joined the list of aircraft manufacturers now training and hiring Negro workers.

2. The Curtiss-Wright company continued its leadership in this field by expanding job and training opportunities in its Buffalo, N. Y., plant, and by formulating plans for similar work in its new plant in St. Louis, Mo.

3. Negro enrollees are now receiving training in defense classes operated in Detroit for the aircraft division of the Briggs Manufacturing company.

After representatives of Dr. Weaver's staff had conferred with Grumman and Republic officials at the Long Island plants, the chief of the Negro employment and training branch revealed that all aviation defense training courses in Suffolk and Nassau counties have been opened to Negroes.

Paul S. Gilbert, personnel director at Grumman, informed the OPM representatives that Leroy Grumman, president of the firm, had given instructions that every qualified Negro resident of the two counties be given an opportunity for training and employment in the company's two Long Island plants.

Two Negro production workers are now completing their training for employment at Grumman, and on last Monday, Gilbert hired William (Dolly) King, former basketball star of Long Island university, in a clerical capacity at the new plant. King, who became the ninth Negro employee at Grumman, will also play on the company's basketball team.

S. E. McMurtie, employment manager at Republic, revealed that his firm has paid the tuition and training expenses of two Negro youths now enrolled in the Faust Aviation school at Jericho, L. I. Two others are expected to be referred there soon.

A Negro riveter who recently finished a defense course at one of the 11 local high schools is scheduled to be hired soon at Republic and other Negroes have been urged to register for defense classes.

At Buffalo, N. Y., officials of the Curtiss-Wright company informed the New York State Employment Service that it had decided to exhaust completely all available and competent Negro workers in the Buffalo area by offering them employment in the Buffalo Curtiss-Wright plant before importing a single white worker from any other area.

Putting the decision into practice, Curtiss-Wright representatives gave preliminary tests last week to 100 Negro workers. Thirty of these workers passed the physical test and are now being tested for aptitude prior to enrollment in the defense classes.

The corporation, which has already instituted Negro training and employment at branches in Columbus and Cincinnati, Ohio, extended its policies this week when employment officials at a new plant in St. Louis, Mo., announced that Negroes would be trained and employed in that branch also.

AVIATION PLANTS SET PACE HIRING COLORED WORKERS

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3—Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of the Office of Production Management, reported the following developments this week in the training and employment of Negro production workers for the aviation industry:

Defense Chiefs Discuss More Jobs for Negro

Meet at White House; LaGuardia Predicts Solution of Problem

A committee of top defense officials drafted a program yesterday to put into force President Roosevelt's recent edict that discrimination against Negroes in defense industries must be stopped.

Meeting with the President at the White House, the group of top defense directors heard the Negro case presented by two spokesmen for their race—Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

LaGuardia Predicts Solution

Attending the seminar on the problem with President Roosevelt were, in addition to Randolph and White, Secretary of War Stimson, Navy Secretary Knox, Production Directors Knudsen and Hillman and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, director of civilian defense.

LaGuardia, spokesman for the Government chiefs, said there "has been some discrimination in the employment of Negroes" on defense jobs and he said that the official group that discussed the situation yesterday would be able to find a solution.

Civil Defense Aides Named

He did not indicate what steps would be taken to instrument the President's order of last Sunday that more defense jobs be opened to members of the colored race.

A fine example of the kind of democracy the President is trying to achieve, said La Guardia, was the fact that the representatives of large groups of Negroes sat down to discuss their problems in the White House yesterday around a table with the Chief Executive. and received what LaGuardia termed a "patient, careful hearing."

Impetus of yesterday's action was Mr. Roosevelt's memorandum June 12 to Knudsen and Hillman saying that "our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production."

He ordered the OPM to take "immediate" steps to remedy the situation, citing the fact that he had 'repeatedly" received complaints of discrimination.

LaGuardia also announced yesterday the appointment of three divisional heads of the civilian defense program

Dean James M. Landis, of Harvard Law School, was named director for the First Corps Area, with headquarters at Boston. Frank D'Olier, president of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., was named director for the Second Corps Area, comprising New York, New Jersey and Delaware. Raymond J. Kelly, of Detroit, past national commander of the American Legion, was selected as directed for the Sixth Corps Area, with headquarters at Chicago.

Six other regional directors, including the director for the Washington area, remain to be named.

Representative Southern and Northern Figures Call for End to Racial Policies

MAY 10 1941

MAY 10 1941

That the time has come for the lasting repudiation of race prejudice as an influence in determining the policies of the United States was the significant theme of a statement signed by more than 60 representatives of citizens of North and South released this week.

The statement, urging more employment of competent Negro Americans in defense industries and the opening to them more generally of opportunities for special industrial training, was released by Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, president of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation and chairman of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries.

"This is no time for Americans to compromise with race prejudice and its attendant discriminations in industrial defense programs, whether public or private," the statement emphasized. "It is destructive of those basic essentials of civilization—political, economic, culutral, educational, religious—which the ages have built upon the concept of the dignity and destiny of the human person."

The signers, in addition to Governor Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia and former Governor Cross of Connecticut, include university presidents, heads of great industrial companies, leaders in labor and public relations, educators, recognized spokesmen of the three faiths and others.

The complete text follows:

Justice for Negro Americans in the program for National Defense is a searching test of American democracy. Our concern for democracy in Europe or elsewhere lacks reality and sincerity if our plans and policies disregard the rights of minorities in our own country. The guarantee of such rights is established by our historic national charters of freedom and constitutional government as applicable to all our people without regard to race, color or creed.

Must Observe

It seems especially important to observe these in letter and spirit in our national industrial defense program in a year when we have voted with overwhelming public support to make our country a great "arsenal" for the democracies and when we celebrate the Sesquicentennial of the ratification of the Bill of Rights. We can urge this with the more assurance because there are notable cases, both North and South, where Negro mechanics and artisans have been long employed in certain industries and projects with satisfaction to all concerned.

Negro Americans favor all suitable tests of fitness for any given job, but naturally and rightly oppose those based merely on race. Evidences are increasing of the exclusion of their skilled workers from certain defense industries and of the frequent refusal to admit qualified Negro students into training and apprenticeship programs. Among the many illustrations of such discrimination are the following:

That some corporations of national importance receiving large government contracts have shown themselves unwilling to employ skilled Negro workers or have taken on so few as scarcely to affect the general situation.

That in spite of a few creditable exceptions, companies manufacturing aircraft, automobiles, and gasoline motors are among those where such conditions prevail.

That, despite the excellent record of colored men in shipbuilding during the last World War and the encouraging experience in some Navy Yards and private shipbuilding plants today, there are companies with defense shipping contracts which either restrict Negro workers, other than common laborers, to semi-skilled jobs or refuse their employment altogether.

That some of the leading industrial plants in different parts of the country do not approve the training of Negroes in defense classes even when these are financed by the Federal Government.

The "Vicious Circle"

That there are cities in widely separated states where Negroes are scarcely receiving any opportunities to obtain the special training needed to supplement the existing group of skilled mechanics. The fact that they are not being employed in certain industries except as common laborers is used as a basis for restriction in training opportunities for them, while lack of such training will probably be used to justify failure to employ more Negroes.

No thinking person can fail to realize the loss to the cause of national defense through such conditions involving the Negro tenth of our population, and their harmful effect upon the character and attitude of Negro Americans who are eager to give concrete expression to their patriotism. Frustration destruction of morale and the opening of the doors for subversive agitators opposed to the American way of life, will be almost inevitable consequences.

The extent of these discriminations; their basic causes; the relative degree of responsibility for them of management, labor and the public; and the best way of meeting them deserve prompt, thorough and impartial investigation.

Cites Dangers

In so far as ignorance and race prejudice are responsible for determining our attitude toward any American citizen in the present emergency, that degree do we uproot the moral bases of our American civilization and make way for the totalitarian scheme of life. Dictatorship aims to dominate the world by force, and to condemn certain racial groups permanently to subvervient and inferior status. If we oppose Axis doctrines we must, to be consistent, oppose all race prejudice at home.

Nor is it a question of the injury to the Negro alone; it is also a question of the harm done to the nation's unity and morale and its reputation abroad by an unjust attitude toward any group in our population. There has been some progress in recent years but if race prejudice is given a new foothold under existing world conditions it is bound to spread and poison the entire body politic.

The country's immediate needs demand the cooperation of all willing, loyal and competent workers. Similar cooperation will be needed in the work of reconstruction. Those, therefore, who raise unjust barriers at this critical period are responsible for obstructing the national defense and welfare.

No Compromise

This is no time for Americans to compromise with race prejudice and its attendant discriminations in industrial defense programs, whether public or private. It is destructive of those basic essentials of civilization—political, economic, cultural, educational, religious—which the ages have built upon the concept of the dignity and destiny of the human person. We maintain, therefore, that the time has come for the lasting repudiation of race prejudice as an influence in determining the policies of the nation. The Brotherhood of Man—based on the Fatherhood of God—is no mere adornment of a democratic society. It is accepted by religious and patriotic groups as fundamental. It should involve an impartial and inflexible justice practiced and experienced by all.

We command this statement to the thoughtful consideration of the American people, and more particularly of leaders in government, industry, labor and the organs of public opinion.

Illinois Plants Agree To Use 15 Per Cent Negro Labor

JOLIET, Ill.—As the result of a labor conference held Monday morning in Joliet, an agreement has been reached whereby 15 per cent of all the men to be hired by the Kankakee Power Works and the Elwood Ordnance Works near Joliet are to be Negroes.

They must be union men. Personnel managers of the above companies, representatives of the Joliet Building Trades Union, Ted Poston of Dr. Robert C. Weaver's office, Washington, D. C., Joseph Keenan, white Labor Relations Assistant to Sidney Hillman and Mark Hurley, newly appointed OPM official in the Chicago area made up the conference. According to an announcement coming from Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of Negro Training and Employment Section of the Office of Production Management.

Every Negro carpenter, bricklayer, plasterer, cement finisher, building tradesman in Chicagoland is urged to report to his own Union Hall and from there he will be sent immediately to the Joliet Building Trades Council. This Building Trades Union in Joliet will clear any Negro worker referred to it by the Chicago Union.

T. W. Piper, Personnel Manager of the Kankakee Plant said his company will hire any qualified Negro with a union card.

It was pointed out that Hurley will handle any and all labor complaints 130 N. Wells Street, Suite 1214, phone number Franklin 2050 which is the office of Paddy Sullivan, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

American Public Sentiment Opposed Employment Of Negro Skilled Workers

Defense Work To Be Permanent

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—The distrust which Negroes are manifesting in the programs of the defense projects in the United States is not without foundation, if an objective view of the situation is taken without regard to personalities involved.

While the national defense is created for an "emergency" there is every indication that there will be some degree of permanency in some of the positions now being created.

The erection of the huge factories and the long range planning for their continued use when the "emergency" no longer exists, is one of the questions which have occupied not only Negroes' attention but that of whites as well.

And in all of the training programs, refresher courses and preparations for the emergency hundreds of papers have been written and hundreds of resolutions adopted seeking to create, through legislation, some consideration for the Negro population.

To many this is a joke, for no legislation in the world can change the attitudes which exist, they claim, and these proponents are partially right in their beliefs.

But when they point out the defects of the system which has created this situation, they take their spite on those who are trying to adjust or make adjustments which will do a little to better the entire thing.

Contending that the work of many of the government workers is superficial and nothing has been accomplished, they declare, many discouraging factors have arisen.

Twenty-five per cent of Negro trainees on WPA vocational training projects found it necessary to return to their former employment on WPA, it is said. Industrial plants with defense contracts continue for the most part to maintain their bans against the employment of skilled Negro workers. The greatest number of workers securing defense employment are in unskilled categories.

Further, they point out that the United States Employment service records indicate Negro workers are being placed in jobs recently vacated by white workers who have been called to defense industries, where the latter are the best paid and the former the least desirable jobs.

It is also said that the bureau of labor statistics frankly admits that employers generally continue to show reluctance in hiring Negroes in skilled and semi-skilled capacities. Records indicate industrial plants employing Negro workers in any occupations other than those of laborers or janitors are exceptions.

Employment records indicate that in the face of a shortage of skilled workers in all sections, local industrialists, import white skilled workers rather than employ available Negro skilled workers.

Memo on Negro Defense Labor

The President's memorandum to Messrs Knudsen and Hillman on the turning away of workers from the gates of defense industries "on specifications entirely unrelated to efficiency and productivity," touches a form of discrimination that has received a full airing in connection with our own Eastern Virginia defense projects, and in connection with defense projects in many other sections of the country. Tidewater Virginia's ventilation of the discrimination practiced against skilled Negro workmen seems to have resulted in a measure of improvement. But equality of opportunity in defense projects for Negro and white workers of the same skills, remains still an unachieved goal.

"Immediate steps must be taken to deal with it effectively," says the President. He expects the OPM to take these steps. Well, the OPM did take steps on April 11 in a letter addressed to all holders of defense contracts urging them to examine their employment and training policies at once "to determine whether or not these policies make ample provision for the full utilization of available competent Negro workers. Every available source of labor capable of producing defense materials must be tapped in the present emergency." Other orders of the OPM were even more explicit and mandatory.

The value of the President's present memorandum lies not in its matter but in its timing and in the moral force that it draws from the hardening national emergency. Neither the holders of defense contracts nor the unions through which workers are filtered into their defense plants, paid more than lip service to the non-discrimination orders issued by OPM agencies early this year. If better compliance follows the President's present backing of these orders, it will be because an increasing scarcity of skilled labor is developing and along with it a much greater national impatience with employment and union practices directed to carrying over into defense production the labor caste system that served the beneficiaries of this system so well in the piping times of peace.

OXLEY GETS RESULTS AT JOB CONFERENCE

HARTFORD, Conn., May 29.—Upon receipt of a telegram from the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, Martin F. Carpenter, chief, the United States Employment Service Division, Social Security Board, Washington, dispatched Lieutenant Lawrence A Oxley, chief, Racial Relations Unit, to attend what was probably the most important conference on the Negro worker ever held in New England.

MAY 31 1941

Over two thousand Connecticut manufacturers were represented at this meeting where the agenda provided for a frank and open discussion of the use of available skilled Negro workers in national defense industries.

TALKS GET RESULTS

As an initial result of the skillful presentation by Lieutenant Oxley in behalf of the Negro worker the Pratt and Whitney Corporation, a subsidiary of the United Aircraft Corporation, requested the referral by the Connecticut State Employment Service of twenty Negro semi-skilled workers for employment in their Hartford plant.

Another immediate outcome of the Hartford conference was the change announced in the employment policy of Cheney Brothers, silk manufacturers of Manchester, Connecticut in the matter of employing Negro workers. The Cheney Company has been in existence for one hundred and two years and prior to the conference had never employed a Negro in any capacity. This concern has a defense contract amounting to three million dollars for the production of parachute silk.

THREE SILK INSPECTORS

Announcement was made at the Hartford meeting by J. W. Nickerson, General Superintendent, that the first Negro workers were being employed this week in the silk inspection and chemical processing departments, and that this group of Negro workers was chosen on the basis of physical fitness, intelligence and aptitude.

These new openings of job opportunities to Negro workers in essential national defense industries, following closely upon the decision of the Curtis-Wright and Bell Aircraft Corporation of Buffalo, to open the doors to skilled Negro workers, is positive evidence that industrial leaders in the nation are alive to the present emergency and are aware of the contributions which qualified Negroes throughout the country stand ready to contribute through their skills to the successful culmination of one hundred percent all-out defense.

PLANS OTHER CONFERENCE

Other employment managers and personnel officers present at the Hartford conference, expressed an active interest in the possibilities of using qualified Negroes in their plants and gave assurance that increasingly, opportunities will be afforded for the full integration of skilled Negro workers in all phases of defense production.

During the coming week, Lieutenant Oxley is to have further conferences with representatives of the Curtis-Wright Aircraft Corporation with reference to opening skilled and semi-skiled opportunities in their Columbus, Ohio, and St. Louis, Missouri, plants.

O.P.M. Official Says Gain Is Being Made In Fight

St Louis, Mo

MAY 30 1941

Washington, May 10 (Special)—Sidney Hilman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, reported progress Saturday in his drive to persuade defense contractors to employ Negroes to relieve skilled labor shortages.

The Curtis-Wright Corporation, which makes military aircraft, notified Mr. Hillman that it would employ Negro skilled workers and that "several Negro trainees have been enrolled in the Curtiss-Wright training school and are now receiving instructions which will lead to employment in skilled positions in the Buffalo plant."

The notification was in response to a general letter sent by Mr. Hillman to defense contractors asking them to train and employ Negroes.

Reports Ratio of 10 Per Cent

"At the present time, 10 per cent of our employes are colored men," Mr. Pew wrote. "They are employed in the following departments: Forge and blacksmith shops, foundry, pipe fitting department, bolting and reaming, riveting, store room, yard maintenance, bending shop, garage and janitor service."

G. K. Throckmorton, president of the RCA Manufacturing Co., Camden, N. J., wrote:

MAY 30 1941

"We were mindful of the matter (Negro employment) before the receipt of your letter and under our policy we had already engaged a substantial number of Negro workers in various lines of endeavor from factory workers to salesmen."

From Montgomery, Ala., A. C. Greeson, president of the Greeson Mfg. Corp., wrote:

"At the present time we are used local labor entirely and our crew is about equally divided between white and Negroes. We have several positions held by skilled Negro workers and they are given every opportunity to occupy any job they are capable of handling."

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM, cited a recent report from the Michigan State Employment Service to show that expanded activity on the part of the Bureau of Employment Security Agencies was facilitating the integration of Negroes into defense production.

Michigan Placements

The report declared that "2360 Negro placements were made during the first quarter of this year as compared with 940 for the corresponding period last year."

"Placements of Negroes during this first quarter constitute 7.5 per cent of total placements while during that period last year they constituted only 4 per cent of all placements," it added.

"Every week placements are being made of Negroes in occupations in which we have never before been able to place them. Screw-machine operators, lathe operators, electricians, gear hobbers (machine shop), welders and skilled foundry workers, such as bench, floor and hand molders as well as coremakers of all kinds.

Over two thousand Connecticut manufacturers were represented at this meeting where the agenda provided for a frank and open discussion of the use of available skilled Negro workers in national defense industries. PLANTS IN ILLINOIS AGREE TO USE 15% NEGRO LABOR

Labor Conference At Joliet Assures Plenty of Skilled Jobs for Colored Workmen — Ted Poston Present As Agreement Is Reached.

JOLIET, Ill., May 8—As the result of a labor conference held Monday morning in Joliet, an agreement has been reached whereby 15 per cent of all the men to be hired by the Kankakee Power Works and the Elwood Ordnance Works near Joliet are to be Negroes.

MAY 10 1941

They must be union men. Personnel managers of the above companies, representatives of the Joliet Building Trades Union, Ted Poston of Dr. Robert C. Weaver's office, Washington, D. C., Joseph Keenan, white Labor Relations Assistant to Sidney Hillman and Mark Hurley newly appointed OPM official in the Chicago area made up the conference. According to an announcement coming from Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Chief of Negro Training and Employment Section of the Office of Production Management.

Every Negro carpenter, bricklayer, plasterer, cement finisher, building tradesman in Chicagoland is urged to report to his own Union Hall and from there he will be sent immediately to the Joliet Building Trades Council. This Building Trades Union in Joliet will clear any Negro worker referred to it by the Chicago Union.

T. W. Piper, Personnel Manager of the Kankakee Plant said his company will hire any qualified Negro with a union card.

Putting Youn;

Young men and women on the National Youth Administration resident project at Jacksonville are setting an employment pace that's hard to beat. And, incidentally, they're aiding the army.

In the past three months a total of 48 youth who received work experince on the project found jobs for themselves—at considerably increased salaries.

Twenty-four of them are now working at nearby Ft. McClellan as clerks, hospital aids, librarians switchboard operators, landscape laborers and one is an army hostess.

Some of them are earning salaries of $120 or more, putting them on a secure footing of economic independence. As NYA workers they made $30 a month from which $18 was deducted for their subsistence.

A great many of these now working at Fort McClellan received their work experience at the army camp, and were then accepted for regular employment. Girls from the project do a variety of clerical, lunchroom and hospital work at Fort MClellan in order that they may gain the necessary experience.

Boys on the project get experience in the machine shop, at woodworking, as assistant bakers, laborers, drivers, painters and clerks—also predominately at Fort McClellan.

National Youth Administration officials have given approval for construction of three projects at Camden ,Elba and Gilbertown.

They are a community building for Negroes at Camden, $3,500; a workshop addition to the Elba High School, $500, and a standard workshop at Gilbertown, $5,000 for construction and $5,000 for equipment.

* * *

NYA canning projects will be operated in Fayette, Lamar, Cherokee and Talladega Counties this Summer, final approval having been given by National Youth Administration officials.

White girls employed as NYA youth workers will can fruits, meats and vegetables on equipment set up by the NYA in Fayette, Lincoln, Winterboro, Vernon and Centre.

Foods they can will be turned over to the boards of education in the various counties to be used in feeding indigent children during the next school year.

NYA youth at the Deatesville High School near Holtville, have been hard at work these sunny Spring days beautifying the school grounds and the building itself.

They've completed a tennis court, have filled in several washes in the grounds, and have planted grass behind the building. They have also cleaned and painted all school woodwork.

SUGGEST PARLEY TO IRON OUT DIFFICULTIES IN SECURING EMPLOYMENT FOR NEGRO MEN

APR 1 1 1941

Office of Production Management Considers Proposal; Does Not Say That Conference Will Be Called

APR 1 1 1941

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—A proposal for a conference on means of lessening discrimination against colored workmen on army and navy construction and in national defense industries is being considered by the labor division of the Office of Production Management.

The personnel of such a conference would include representatives of government, industry, organized labor and colored people.

The proposal was made at a conference last Tuesday between representatives of the Committee on Participation of Negroes in the National Defense Program and of the labor division of OPM.

Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent of schools, and Dr. Rayford W. Logan, professor of history at Howard university, represented the committee. The office of Sidney Hillman, co-administrator of OPM, was represented by Eric Nicol, J. W. Dietz, Floyd Reeves, Robert C. Weaver and Eli Oliver.

Explains Evasion

Dr. Logan explained the evasion by government, industry and organized labor of the question of integrating colored workmen into the national defense program.

Spokesman for Mr. Hillman assured Dr. Long and Dr. Logan of their goodwill but freely admitted their lack of power to coerce industry. They said they realize there is room for improvement, that there is some evidence of improvement, and that the time is coming when colored workmen will have to be hired whether they are wanted or not. In the meanwhile, they said they would seek the means by which improvement can be hastened. APR 1 1 1941

Dr. Long suggested that something should be done in the meanwhile to allay the wide-spread fear among colored workmen that the present national emergency may not last long enough for them to get jobs. He emphasized the fact that labor unions have become a quasi-governmental agency and suggested that the government should control its activities.

Wants Another Conference

Dr. Logan suggested another conference that would include representatives also of the office of education, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Committee on Industrial Organization, and the American Federation of Labor.

APR 1 1 1941

The proposal met with some favor. Mr. Nicol was not sure that OPM could call such a conference but asked that a memorandum be submitted on the question.

OPM Given Six Point Negro Work Program

Savannah Journal
APR 1 2 1941 Savannah, Ga.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(A N P)—A six point program for giving Negroes a larger part in the industrial phases of the national defense program has been proposed to the office of Production Management by the Committee on Participation of Negroes in the National Defense Program.

The plan, submitted by Dr. Rayford Logan, professor at Howard university, and Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent of schools in the District of Columbia, as representatives of the committee urges:

Assignment of more colored persons from the WPA rolls for national defense vocational training; offering of the same vocational training courses (to prepare workers for defense jobs) in states having separate schools for white and colored, regardless of the opportunities for jobs that might be open on completion of the course, appointment of a colored adviser to assist in the training-within-industry program; proper classification and registration of colored persons in the United States Employment service; provision in cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts to assure against race discrimination in employment and witholding of certificates of necessity for plant expansion from those industries which refuse employ colored persons.

Labor Shortage May Be Benefit To Negro

The NAACP emphasized the importance of the group's being prepared to take advantage of work opportunities should the predicted labor shortage become acute. It states that the reluctance of many men to spend time training for jobs in defense industries where flagrant discrimination is practiced, is understandable.

Even though there seems scant hope at present that color bars will be let down, NAACP said, Negroes in this country must be ready to make good use of any change in the courseo of events.

The Employment of Negroes In National Defense Industries

Complementing his memorandum of a few days earlier, President Roosevelt, early last week, issued an executive order banning discrimination in defense industries, the order calling upon all labor unions having in their constitution and by-laws prohibition against the membership of Negro workers to set such constitution and by-laws aside during the period of the emergency, so as to permit fairness in the matter of employment in the nation's defense industries.

JUL 9 1941

The millions of Negroes who looked longingly for such definite help from the administration can not help but feel grateful to President Roosevelt for his stand upon this matter, and we are of the opinion that the President is fully justified by the overwhelming weight of public opinion.

That the president's actions will affect in any appreciable manner the increased employment of Negro workers in the defense industries, now rest largely with the Negro workers and leaders in every community, whose responsibility it is to see that the President's executive order will not be turned into mere empty words and ignored by those labor organizations coming within its meaning.

We believe that the conditions of Negro workers in the South, not only affects our National morale, but it can be easily seen that lack of employment among the Negroes who represent nearly one-third of Southern labor, has a most serious affect upon Southern economic life.

With respect to Mississippi, where half the population are Negroes, this lack of employment, in the face of present agricultural markets and conditions, has long been a growing serious matter, and somehow we feel that now the President of the United States has spoken in such unmistable terms, those white people who have long recognized the impending evils of the situation, will welcome the opportunity to see that greater equity is done in the matter of employing Negroes in the defense industries in the State.

Says Negroes Merit More Consideration

Greater Injustice Is Said Apparent in North Than in South, Though Few Training Courses In Skilled Lines Have Been Set Up Here

By Ernest Lindley

WASHINGTON, April 23—Sidney Hillman brought into the open last week one of the most ticklish problems in defense production: the employment of Negroes.

The over-all fact is that relatively few Negroes are getting jobs in defense industries. In some localities employers are importing white workers—intensifying housing and health problems and adding to the post-war problem of population readjustment — while able-bodied Negroes who have had training or experience in in skilled work are idle, and the employment experts of the government say that a higher percentage who could be trained quickly are being left out while time is devoted to training less promising white material.

Hillman

So Hillman is urging employers to take on Negro workers, especially those in their own localities. In some respects the Negro seems to be getting less of a break in the North than in the South; and, in the South, less of a break from Northern employers than from Southerners. Excepting Ford, all the major automobile plants exclude Negroes from skilled and assembly-line jobs; and the same rigid line is drawn by many other Northern industries. It is held in the rapidly-growing aircraft industry—except for a small breach just made in one California plant.

TRAINED, NO JOBS

In Northern industrial centers Negroes are admitted to the special training courses for prospective defense workers. At first many Negroes eagerly sought this training. Then they found, in many cases, that they could not get jobs. So in most lines the number of new applicants is falling.

In the South, few training courses in skilled lines have been set up for Negroes. This is not surprising, in view of the perennial labor surplus in many parts of the South, the dual educational system, and the shortage of equipment for training in Negro schools. Moreover, the bulk of defense orders has gone to the Northeast, the Central States, and the Pacific Coast.

The Negro has an old history as an artisan in the South. Even in more recent times he has found a place in industrial work in many localities. Negro leaders complain that Negroes get lower pay than white workers for skilled work; craft union policy generally has kept Negroes in the status of helpers. Nevertheless, in shipbuilding, construction work, and many other lines, Negroes are employed in skilled and semi-skilled capacities.

MANAGERS' FEAR

OPM labor supply experts say that on the employer side one of the chief obstacles in the South is the reluctance of managers from the North to touch the race question in any way. They are afraid that if they get into it they will do something which violates local custom and bring all kinds of trouble on their heads. Therefore they often make it a rule not to employ Negroes at all in production jobs. Southern employers, knowing what custom sanctions and what it does not—and being Southern—are said to be more flexible.

When labor is scarce the Negroes usually get a chance. During World War I they won a permanent foothold in a few industries in the North, notably the packing industry. This time Negro leaders are driving with special vigor to capture a place in aircraft production. This is the most rapidly expanding of all industries, and by late 1942 or early 1943 it will employ at least as many men as the automobile industry.

ESTABLISHED POLICIES

Here Negroes have run into established policies of exclusion. Among companies adhering to this policy is the North American Aviation Company, a subsidiary of General Motors. To complicate matters, the new assembly plants for bombers in the Middle West and South are built with government money, although they are being operated by the established aircraft companies. Negro leaders and their supporters are especially hot under the collar over the announcement of an official of North American Aviation that Negroes would not be employed except for custodial duties in a new government-built assembly plant. Representations were made to William S. Knudsen by labor supply people in OPM, and it was reported that he would join Hillman in the appeal to employers to find places for Negroes. He did not do so, however.

The only breach in the color line of the aircraft industry occurred recently in California, where one company, faced with an acute labor shortage, set up a Negro unit.

EXPERIENCE CITED

Labor supply experts say that in many localities the pick of the unemployed, for industrial purposes, are to be found among Negroes. Many of them have decided aptitudes for handling machinery and tools. The better white workers with similar aptitudes have long since been employed, and a percentage of them have advanced to engineering, managerial, and other important jobs. One expert cites an earlier experience of an important Southern company making iron products. It found that it could train a selected group of Negroes in less than half the time it took to train white labor seeking the same kind of work.

Recently, in another Southern locality, contractors were arranging to import large numbers of carpenters and other skilled construction workers from the North. Government officials pointed out that experienced workers were available locally. Civic leaders in the locality promptly and energetically protested against the importation of unneeded outside labor. The local Negroes were employed instead, with benefits all around.

The defense boom and sharpening labor shortage in many sections presents an opportunity ich leaders of the Negro race erstandingly are quick to . As a matter of justice and policy, the government is obligated to make some provision for Negroes on projects built with government money. As a matter of defense, it is important that the labor resources of the nation be used in the most effective way. Despite the difficulties involved, there must be some way—or many ways—of getting the maximum value for the nation from the more capable of the Negro unemployed.

McNUTT URGES USE OF SKILLED NEGRO WORKERS

Says Defense Effort Must Not Lag for Want of Employees

"A number of defense industries are threatened with labor shortages which might be prevented if Negro skilled workers were more widely used." declared Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt in a letter sent out to State employment agencies last week.

"Availability of Negroes, both for employment and training, must be made known to vocational education authorities and to employers," he asserted. "National defense must not be permitted to lag for want of workers."

Emphasizing the need for using all America's resources as effectively as possibe, the communication called attention to the recent letter sent by Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management.

Implements OPM Policy

"The Office of Production Management," according to Mr. Hillman's letter, "expects defense contractors to utilize all available local labor resources before resorting to the recruiting of additional labor from outside their local areas."

To implement this policy of OPM, the Security agency asked the state employment offices not to recruit workers outside their localities so long as "a supply of qualified workers, locally resident, is available; and this is interpreted to include qualified Negro wokers."

In line with this policy the State employment offices, making up the nation-wide U. S. Employment Service System, have been requested to call the attention of employers to the availability of qualified colored workers.

Aircraft Co. Relaxes Jim Crow Policy

NEW YORK.—Bell Aircraft corporation has joined the ranks of those American aircraft companies who are relaxing their discriminatory hiring policies, the National Urban League announced this week on the basis of a report received from its Buffalo affiliate.

A conference held last week between officials of the Buffalo Urban League and of the Bell Aircraft corporation produced immediate jobs for 30 workers to be used in maintenance work and similar capacities in the Niagara Falls plant, with prospect of further placements in the near future in other plants and in better paid categories.

Spokesmen for the Buffalo Urban League were William L. Evans, executive secretary and Franklin O. Nichols, who was visiting Buffalo as part of a special field assignment in which he represented the National Urban League.

These spokesmen made it clear that the Negro community would not be satisfied with maintenance and unskilled jobs but will expect that the applications of Negro workers would be considered on the basis of their training and experience and that places would be made for them in skilled capacities.

Place For Colored Women Is Forecast In Defense Program

MAY 8 - 1941

Experience 90,000 Have Gained In WPA Will Make Them Useful

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(S.NS)—The wide range of training and experience gained by a yearly average of 90,000 Negro women who have been benefited by WPA projects argues well for their effective use in the National Defense Program, Alfred Edgar Smith, Staff Adviser, Federal Work Projects Administration, said today after checking on the immediate labor supply of competent women whose skills are in demand during the present emergency.

MAY 8 - 1941

"It must be remembered that during the First World War the opportunity came for Negro women to join the growing and effective army of American women engaged in defense pursuits of all kinds," the Staff Adviser commented. "In what is known as the war industries, Negro women were recruited in the making of shells, gas masks and airplane parts. The employment of these women in the manufacturing of mechanical industries alone increased by over fifty percent."

"While it is true that most war industries have undergone many technological changes since the First World War, it is also true that women as a whole have become more mechanical-minded. Many of them have studiously kept up with the many technological changes in most productive industries. In one instance, a young Negro woman holding a commercial pilot's license won the confidence and admiration of a board of education and the U. S. Civil Aeronautics Authority sponsoring ground and flight instruction classs for out-of-school students as part of a WPA Adult Education Program. Thirty-one women have been enrolled at one time in vocational education classes under the WPA Emergency Education Program. Other women have become skilled operators of smaller types of power machines used principally on WPA sewing projects.

MAY 8 - 1941

"The results of this kind of training and experience show up in the recent jobs secured by ten Negro women in the manufacturing of electrical goods." Mr. Smith emphasized. "Current employment records also show that four Negro women have jobs in metal foundries, others are optical goods workers, sheet metal workers, and press and punch-press operators. In term of the huge defense work ahead of us, these are but small beginnings in today's all-inclusive defense effort.

They indicate however, a virtually untouched labor supply that proved its worth during the world conflict of twenty-five years ago. It is a singular case, indeed, when one finds that the work training and work experience of the WPA has not directly or indirectly prepared Negro women to find an effective place in the civilian or industrial phases of the National Defense Program."

"U. S. Can't Make Us Hire Skilled Negroes" Says Consolidated Aircraft

MAY 9 - 1941

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Sworn evidence of discrimination in the Consolidated Aircraft corporation here will be read into the Congressional Record by Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, one of the backers of Senate Resolution 75, which proposes investigation of discrimination in the national defense program.

An affidavit revealing that Edgar N. Gott, publicity director and vice president of the corporation, told officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that the company "would not employ Negroes in skilled and semi-skilled jobs; that he did not believe that white skilled workers would work with Negroes in his plant, and that, as a private corporation, they hired whom they pleased, and the United States government could not make them do otherwise", was sent to Senator Capper Wednesday, April 30, by the NAACP after Gott protested an article from the New York POST by Walter White, NAACP secretary. quoting the statements was read into the record.

Gott complained it was untrue that he had made the statements which show his company's racially biased policy.

He said, "We have in the past employed Negroes in positions which they, as individuals, were capable of filling and will continue to do so."

The NAACP learned last week what positions the aircraft company considers Negroes capable of filling. There are nine Negroes employed there as lavatory janitors while the total of all employees is about 16,000.

Additional evidence of the company's anti Negro attitule is the experience of William A. Dickerson, Jr., Bakersfield, Calif. Employment was offered by Consolidated to all graduates of the Bakersfield junior college who had completed a course in aircraft metal work. Mr. Dickinson completed his course with a straight 'B' average. Six of his fellow students were given employment by Consolidated. Dickinson was curtly informed by Consolidated that "No Negroes accepted".

JOBS FOR NEGROES

It begins to dawn on some Americans, as they survey the work to be done and the dwindling surplus of skilled labor, that there are human resources here not yet fully appreciated. Negro labor may be capable of rising to greater demands than have yet been made on it. The handicap of color, like the handicap of age, may have been overestimated.

A business expert points out that, for one thing, here is a great reservoir of labor whose loyalty cannot be questioned. Our Negroes are hundred-percent Americans. But also their efficiency is probably much higher, when they are given opportunity to develop it, than has been realized. In mills and foundries and around blast furnaces they are said to stand the heat and strain as well as white men, or better. They are often surprisingly capable of operating precision machinery, because they have good muscle-coordination and sense of rhythm.

As these facts are accepted, there may be many more Negroes taken off the charity rolls and the WPA and given useful jobs helping industry and Uncle Sam, and this is what should happen.

If at First—

The employment of Negro bricklayers on the Lake City defense project is the new gain which marks the trend of events. This middle section of the United States has been opposed to Negroes working.

MAY 2 1941

Now carpenters have found work, bricklayers are starting, and the agitation by our painters is sustained, giving hope that they too will be admitted to industry. To these efforts by Negroes, defense housing will be added soon, a federal activity that already has written into it the requirement that Negroes in skilled and unskilled crafts shall be employed in proportion.

Altogether the labor outlook is brighter than at any time in years, and as the tempo of defense production steps up, employment for us will get even better. Since work will be our desire in the future the same as it is now, we should treasure for future use the steps we take, the friends we call on, and the laws that help. Speaking generally it is useless to look back. But we should see that our gains are coincident with our struggles to help ourselves. We ourselves by letting ourselves be barred from work contributed to our unemployment. We have been too ready to say that it is natural for white employers to hire white men when there was not work enough for all. That is not true. Employers hire the best men, which black men could be as well as white.

We have depended too much on our needs arousing sympathy. Skill and more skill is the worker's bid for a job. Business has its human side. Maybe employers do prefer whites, but that preference is a weak thing compared to their desire for profits. Let's hold the gains we have made and bore in until we are admitted to industry generally. Our recent experiences have shown us the way. Let's hold what we have gained and keep trying.

Negroes in Defense

Dear Sirs: No fair-minded man can object to Jonathan Daniels's complaint published in your issue of April 26 that the South is not getting its fair share of defense contracts. But the same complaint applies with even greater force to the utter failure of defense industries to provide jobs for Negroes in anything approaching their proportion of the total population. In one vitally important line of defense production, aircraft manufacturing, the companies absolutely refuse to hire Negroes. As a result of this discrimination, joblessness persists in Negro communities just as before the defense program started, and the country is deprived of the use for defense purposes of an important section of its labor force.

This situation has another terribly serious aspect. As a trade unionist I am fully aware that the life or death of organized labor on the continent of Europe depends on the outcome of the war. As a Negro I know that our struggle for genuine justice and full democratic rights irrespective of race, creed, or color will be set back a generation or more if Hitler, with his vile racial ideas of a master race and slave races, wins the war. But the failure of colored Americans to gain any jobs from the defense program has left them a prey to the propaganda of supporters of totalitarianism of all kinds—Nazism, communism, anti-Semitism.

It should be plain that the defense of democracy must be in the hands of those who truly believe in and live up to democracy. Those who practice or lightheartedly ignore race discrimination are not genuine believers in democracy. The continued presence of such people in high government positions—Mr. Knudsen, for example, who refused to see a delegation of representative Negroes protesting against job discrimination—affords a basis for the propaganda of fifth columnists among Negroes.

"Sensative Areas of Social Policy"

THERE is a well-grounded doctrine in America, especially noticeable at this time in the ranks of industrial management, labor leaders, army and navy leaders and an influential group of those in governmental control that it is better to let Negroes suffer economic disabilities and their serious consequences than to touch certain "sensitive areas of social policy." The doctrine rules in important phases of government employment, apprenticeships in industry and in defense employment whether it is controlled by private contractors or directly by the government.

It amounts to the setting up of barriers which exclude Negroes from gainful occupations. When W. D. Siemon, Personnel Manager of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company was asked by officials of the National Negro Congress why his company continued to refuse to give employment to skilled Negro workers he gave the following reasons.

"The government discriminates against Negro workers.

"It might disrupt defense production.

"White workers might not want to work with Negro workers.

"Employment of Negroes would go against the traditional policy of industrial firms in Maryland.

The aircraft company, then, does not exclude skilled Negro workers because it does not believe they can qualify from a technical point of view. The company believes that to employ them would be to invade "sensitive areas of social policy."

Where did this doctrine originate? It is inherent in human nature, but it became more conscious and assertive and more certain of application in the American economic system when the first Jim Crow laws were enacted.

The statutes enacted to separate the races on public carriers and in certain public places gave moral sanction to an unwritten law which denies the Negro an opportunity to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. If a man cannot earn a living by the sweat of his brow he cannot enjoy a satisfactory existence under the American way of life.

Sanction of Doctrine

From whence does the polite and elegant language which defines this doctrine come? The elegant phrase "sensitive areas of social policy" was used by an attorney for the railroads in arguing his side of the Mitchell case before the Supreme Court. The language had been put into the records by Mr. Justice Frankfurter, in rendering an opinion in the recent case of "Railroad Commission of Texas vs The Polk Company, Guy Thompson, etc." An order had been issued by the Texas Commission which forbade pullman porters from running in charge of sleeping cars in that state. In rendering the decision Mr. Justice Frankfurter said:

> The complaint of the pullman porters undoubtedly tendered a substantial constitutional issue. It is more than substantial. It touches a sensitive area of social policy which Federal Courts ought not to enter unless no alternative to its adjudication is open.

It is that deference on the part of lawmakers and the law interpreters to what is defined as "sensitive areas of social policy" that gives self-assurance in the exclusion of Negroes from employment to firms like the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Company and many others now engaged in the execution of defense contracts.

It is almost idle now to speak of American democracy. Security is a better word. America needs to be secure. But if that security rests upon national unity and the employment of our total human and natural resources in one great defense effort, less consideration must be given to the doctrine which excludes from the essential parts of the American way of life one-tenth of the population; less deference to a racial dogma which creates a national social policy that goes outside of the home, the school, the church, the theatre, to rule the workshop, to determine who shall learn a trade and work at it, to determine who shall be employed on a construction job, and to close the doors of gainful occupation in all branches of industry to all non-white people.

Employment of Negroes In Defense Industry Our Best Insurance Against Sabotage

JAN 17 1941

By Call Staff Writer

Now that we are going to send England planes, guns and munitions as fast as we can make them, sabotage in our defense industries is a probability we will have to reckon with.

Fifth-columnists and Nazi agents are going to infest our industrial plants. We had an example of what they can do when they blew up the munitions plant in New Jersey a few months ago.

We are more actively engaged in the war now than we were then. We are in it now in every way except making a formal declaration of war and sending man power abroad. We are already sending everything else—from warm jumpers for children to wear in bomb shelters to sight bombs.

We need not think that Hitler is going to sit idly by doing nothing while we build factories to make war supplies for England to use against Germany. Whoever thinks that the Nazis are going to limit their sabotaging to the ships that carry the munitions across the seas is not giving Hitler full credit for the use of that fiendish mind of his.

Will Strike at Industries

Hitler is not going to wait until we have completed production of war supplies before he strikes! The Nazis, through their agents in this country, will aim their fury upon our defense industries and try to prevent them from completing their orders. They will blow up the factories as they blew up the New Jersey plant and others in the east.

JAN 17 1941

Knowing the danger that lies before us as our defense program gets under way, America should take every precaution to prevent fifth columnists and Nazi agents from getting a foothold in our industries.

What can America do? She can employ in her defense industries the most loyal workers she can find.

And among the most loyal workers as well as fighters that this country has ever known are the black citizens who have never had a traitor among them.

Now, if ever, Negroes should be put to work in key spots in all of our industries. Wherever they are qualified, their services should be employed because with black or brown hands on the job, the employers can concentrate on production without having to devote a thought as to whether they are harboring a Nazi disciple.

It will be hard for employers to distinguish between John Muehler, white, who is a loyal 100 per cent American, and John Muehler, white, an immigrant with leanings toward Berlin. Of Black John Muehler there would be no doubt. Negroes have no foreign ties, no old-country allegiance. All of their interests, their hopes, their ambitions have their foundations laid in America.

This is the only country that we know. While black Americans are not satisfied with the way that our country has treated us, our dissatisfaction over injustices does not lead us to thoughts of going elsewhere.

We have no place else to go. This country is our home, the only one we have ever known. Even if we wanted to go elsewhere, we would not find another place on the face of the globe where there is greater hope for the practice of real Democracy.

America is unjust to the Negro, but not because of the basic laws and principles of this country. In countries like Germany it is with government sanction and direction that the Jews are persecuted. In this country, Negroes are mistreated in violation of our constitution. There lies a basic difference.

No, we are in America to stay and help defend America against Nazism.

We offer our services not only to the armed forces of the country but also to industry—a major part of defense.

America would do well to insure herself against sabotage by employing Negro workers. Employing black workmen is Uncle Sam's best insurance against treason.

The Negro must be given an opportunity to do everything that needs to be done in this country. Now is the time to stop measuring a man by his color and start counting him by the size of job he can do.

In the early stages of defense, Negro skilled workmen are being kept out of jobs—not because they can't qualify, but because their skins are black. That system must not prevail.

Soon two defense plants will be erected in Kansas City—one at Lake City and the other near the Fairfax airport. The airplane plant at Fairfax will create 10,000 jobs. If the plan in operation at the plane factory at Dallas, Texas, is followed here, the graduates of Aircraft schools will be given the preference of employment. This will eliminate Negroes unless something is done to lower the color bars raised at the aviation schools in this area. Unless we get this training, our lack of it will be the excuse of employers in denying us employment.

America must stop making excuses for not treating Negroes as citizens. The time has come when she must capitalize upon the Negro's loyalty for her own protection.

The employment of Negro workers is a sound investment and an insurance policy which will bring dividends.

NEGROES GET DEFENSE JOBS AT ARK. CAMP

JAN 12 1941

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 9—Negroes are now employed on various national defense jobs at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, near here. Previous to the energetic work of the Little Rock Urban League, skilled Negro workers were overlooked in favor of an entire crew of white carpenters who were being employed in large numbers by the local contractors.

Clifford E. Minton, executive secretary of the Urban League, got in touch with the St. Louis Urban League and the National Urban League and through pressure were immediately given promises by the St. Louis company and Arkansas State Employment officials to hire Negroes.

Now 50 Negro carpenters, 15 Negro concrete finishers, whose earnings are $1.25 per hour, Negro bricklayers, and a plumber are employed.

25 Men to Earn $1,306 A Week At Fort Riley

JAN 17 1941

Skilled Workmen to Be Paid at Rate of $9.50 a Day; Remove Last Obstacle In Fight for Jobs

WE DID NOT PROTEST IN VAIN!

The thousands who went to the Municipal auditorium December 8 did not protest in vain. The many conferences held and letters written since also served their purpose. Some effort of the many touched the vital key which opened up defense work to Negroes. Twenty-five men employed, something like $237.50 a day not before in Negroes' hands is the result so far, with much more hoped for.

The lesson is there plain to see—it is possible to make a way if one is not already open. With this precedent set, Negroes can look forward to getting their share of all defense work—if they do what they can to get it.

JAN 17 1941

Fifteen others were to report to work on Wednesday morning, January 15, to make a total of 25 skilled workmen on the job.

The employment of Negro carpenters at long last comes as the result of a fight begun in Kansas City many weeks ago. First one barrier and then another arose along the way to delay the progress of the group working to secure defense jobs for Negroes. Each obstacle was met in turn and each was overcome.

The carpenters are earning $9.50 a day and work five and a half days a week. Each of the 25 men will earn $52.25 a week. Together the men will earn $237.50 a day, or $1,306.25 a week.

The first handicap the carpenters had to overcome was the labor union bar. The carpenters union had always barred Negro workmen and the work at Fort Riley was being given only to union carpenters.

A series of conferences with officials of the Carpenters union resulted in the formation last Sunday, January 5, of a Negro local of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

That bar hurdled, the carpenters went to Fort Riley, expecting to be put to work, but the contractor in charge of personnel refused to employ them despite their union qualifications.

The National Defense committee and the Carpenters union officials then appealed to Washington for assistance. The defense committee wrote to Dr. Robert C. Weaver, the Negro assistant to Sidney Hillman, chairman of the labor supply division of the National Defense Commission.

Early in the stages of national defense, the National Defense Commission adopted a labor policy which said that no worker should be denied work in defense industry because of race, color or sex.

Washington intended to keep this policy. JAN 17 1941

As a direct result of the work of the Kansas City Defense Committee, Joseph D. Keenan, assistant to Sidney Hillman, wrote Edgar Rogers, personnel director at Fort Riley, on January 8, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Rogers:

"A number of complaints have been referred to me by Dr. Robert C. Weaver who represents the Urban League on the National Defense Commission regarding conditions of the Negroes at Fort Riley.

"This office has contacted the Business Agent of the carpenters in Kansas City, and we have been notified that a local union has been set up for Negroes and that they have been denied employment by the contractors.

JAN 17 1941

"As you know, it is the purpose of the National Defense Commission to employ everyone who is qualified on this construction work, regardless of race, color or creed. We realize that this question has been a serious matte rin many sections of the country, but we are endeavoring to work out some kind of satisfactory arrangement for the purpose of employing Negroes as tradesmen on these jobs.

"I would suggest that you get in touch with the business agent of the carpenters in Kansas City to determine whether or not some satisfactory plan can be effected so that these men can be employed.

Sincerely,
Joseph D. Keenan,
Assistant to Mr. Hillman,
National Defense Commission"

It was this letter, written in smooth but meaningful language that brought the order to Kansas City to send 25 carpenters down to Fort Riley at once.

The nucleus of the carpenters union was the Colored Builders Association of Kansas, composed of Negro building tradesmen of many skills.

The local union takes in carpenters from both Kansas Cities. J. L. Whitaker is the president.

Negro painters are being organized now by the Kansas City district council of painters.

Larry S. Braten, international representative of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, and J. O. Mack, carpenters' business agent, organized the carpenters local.

'MAKING DEFENSE WORK FOR ALL AMERICAN CITIZENS' THEME OF MASS MEETING

JAN 24 1941

KANSAS CITY, Kas. — (Special) —"Making National Defense Work for All American Citizens" is the theme of the national defense meeting was held Sunday, January 24, at 4 p.m. at First A.M.E. church, Eighth street and Nebraska avenue, of which the Rev. S. H. Lewis is pastor. This program was in line with the plan of the national office of the N.A.A.C.P., designating January 26 as National Defense Day.

The purpose of the committee in arranging this program is that it be not merely a mass meeting at which there will be a lot of talk and nothing else. Getting a definite line on securing definite results for Negro workers on national defense projects is the aim.

The principal speaker was the Right Reverend John A. Gregg, presiding bishop of the fourth district, a vice-president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, national office, also a world traveller, author and educator.

The WPA band furnished a concert beginning at 3:30 p. m.

R. B. Brown was re-elected president of the Kansas City, Kansas, branch of the N.A.A.C.P., at a meeting Sunday at First Christian church, the Rev. W. M. Martin, pastor. Other officers are: S. E. McClendon, vice-president; Mrs. Lizzie Buckner, secretary; Miss May McClelland, assistant; Mrs. V. H. Middlebrooks, treasurer, and the Rev. M. S. Trotter, chaplain.

Members of the executive committee will be appointed by the president.

Mr. Brown is beginning his fourth term as head of the local N.A.A.C.P. The local organization has grown by leaps and bounds under the leadership of Mr. Brown. The membership has increased steadily. This branch, under his leadership and with the co-operation of the Wyandotte County Council of Clubs, pushed the case against Lester McGrady, white, charged with attacking a 15-year-old girl.

McCrady, who took his case to the Kansas supreme court, lost out and began serving last week a 5-to-21-year stretch in the Kansas state penitentiary.

The N.A.A.C.P. also nipped in the bud the movement taken by whites in Parkwood to restrict its use to white people only.

The branch took up the local draft board fight and is active in helping to form a Citizens' Advisory council, composed of representatives from various clubs and organizations.

THE NEGRO and DEFENSE

THIS COLUMN could be filled with nothing better than the first-hand account of his experiences at Fort Riley by one of the carpenters who recently began work on the cantonments there.

Through the strenuous efforts of the Kansas City National Defense Committee, 25 Negro carpenters began work at Fort Riley last Wednesday, January 15.

One of them, writing home, said:

"We arrived here Wednesday at 6 o'clock and were on the job at 10 a. m. after clearing the Carpenters hall at Ogden, Kas.

"We have not met with obstacles of any kind since being here. Our white fellow workers have been very courteous and pleasant to us. We do not work entirely to ourselves. Whites and blacks, both carpenters and laborers, work side by side.

JAN 24 1941

"We have lost only one man (meaning that only one of the carpenters has been dropped from the job) and that was because he was too fat to do much of the getting about that is required of a carpenter. He weighed 274 pounds and was about 5 feet, 7 inches in height.

"The work is progressing nicely except for the mud. Water is from three to eight inches deep. Saturday morning it was eight degrees above zero but we worked right on.

"Now, this is quite a busy little city and when we are at work it is like a beehive on a very hot day. Saw hammers, trucks, tractors, small mills and plumbers hum a constant tune like a great army on the battlefield.

"We are about three miles from Junction City. We are working on the section called the Republican Flats."

EMPLOYMENT JUMPS .47 IN DEFENSE BOOM

United Effort By Race Against Job Jim Crow Causes Sharp Upturn

WASHINGTON — Unrelenting campaigning which established a precedent for united militancy among the Negro and which resulted in the issuance of an executive order by President Roosevelt banning discrimination in the employment of workers by government defense contract holders has borne fruit, a report made Monday by Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, indicated.

Placement of Negro workers in private industry by state employment offices throughout the country showed a gain of 47 per cent for the January-May period of 1941 over the same period of 1940.

Though part of the gain would have come about as a part of the general employment upturn, a greater portion is directly attributed to openings created through militant campaigns conducted in almost every community by Race organizations of various types ranging from conservative church congregations to extreme leftist groups.

If the present trend continues, Negro employment will probably reach an all-time high within the next few months.

Reports to the administrator by the Social Security Board indicate that placements of Negroes now appear to be increasing somewhat faster than that of other workers, in contrast with the trend heretofore. From April to May, placements of Negroes increased 15 percent, whereas placements of other persons increased 12 percent.

McNutt said that he was highly gratified by this evidence of increased hiring of qualified Negro workers by employers. "Use of this important group of American workers," he said, "will do much to reduce labor stringencies and will speed the defense program."

Although placements of colored workers increased in all industries except agriculture, forestry, and fishery, the sharp rise over 1940 was due principally to placements in construction and service industries.

Placements of colored workers in construction jobs during the first five months of 1941 more than doubled such placements during the corresponding period of 1940. In the current year, they comprised 22 percent of all placements of colored workers as contrasted with 13 percent one year ago. While jobs filled in service occupations still represented the bulk of placements of colored workers, they nevertheless comprised a smaller share than during the first five months of 1940.

In 16 states, the relative gain in placements during January-May 1941, over the same period last year, was greater for Negro workers than for white workers. These included such important defense states as Connecticut, New York, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin.

In Connecticut, for example, placements of white workers increased 77 percent, whereas placements of Negro workers almost doubled. In New York, placements of white workers increased 79 percent, placements of Negro workers 111 percent. In Pennsylvania, placements of white workers increased only 46 percent, whereas placements of Negroes more than doubled.

In all, 414,595 placements of Negroes were made from January-May 1941, 20 percent of all placements made by the state employment offices during these five months. In eight states—Georgia, South Carolina, Delaware, Mississippi, Louisiana, North Carolina, Alabama, and Virginia—and in Haiwaii and the District of Columbia, approximately 50 percent or more of all placements were of Negroes.

Trend Toward Jobs For Negroes Still Upwards, Is Report

Weaver Reveals Hopeful Picture

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Continuing the breaking down of jim-crowism in industry, the Office of Production Management adds to the report submitted two weeks ago, listing some additional organizations which have taken on Negroes and at the same time pointing out that the previously listed firms have greatly increased their Negro personnel.

Dr. Robert C. Weaver said the Curtiss Wright company at Beaver, Pa., just about ready to open will employ Negroes in all capacities. Trainees are now being taught in the schools and the same policy will be followed as is in effect in the plants at Buffalo, Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio.

The Union Switch and Signal company of Pittsburgh, has 90 Negroes, employed as moulders helpers, assistants, firemen, truckers and generally. The company plans to "up-grade" these men and hire additional Negroes. There is a definite need here for skilled men for foundry work.

TRAINED IN SHOPS

The Hartscok Machine company in Cleveland, has employed two Negroes as machine shop trainees, and the Taylor Chemical company of the same city has also two Negro machine shop trainees. Both of these are rather small companies.

The Ford Instrument company of Brooklyn, has increased its Negro employes from 7 to 17. They are engaged in skilled and semi-skilled labor.

The Republican Aviation company, Long Island, has a Negro electrician who is also a tool and die maker. Negro trainees are in the Republic school, training for aircraft work.

The Remington Arms company at Bridgeport, Conn., has 40 Negroes as machine operators and semi-skilled workers. They formerly had two Negroes employed as janitors.

250 GIVEN JOBS

At the Seneca Ammunition depot, New York, 250 Negroes, or about 20 percent of the whole staff, are engaged in construction work and many will be hired upon completion of the plant.

The Curtiss Wright plant at Columbus, Ohio, has 120 Negroes as machine tool operators fabricators, sheet metal workers and 20 more are being trained to go into the factory immediately upon completion of their courses.

It is interesting to note that in connection with this the local Urban league mantains a revolving fund, allowing each trainee to borrow $10 for tool purchase. This is returned to the league when the trainee starts work.

The Otis Elevator company at Harrison, N.J., has taken on six Negro crane operators. More are scheduled to begin work this week and the company is calling for all the skilled and sem-skilled workers it can find.

BREWSTER HIRES 22

The Brewster Aeronautic company of Newark has increased its Negro personnel from 6 to 22 of which three are machine operators and five paint sprayers. Ten Negroes are enrolled as sheet metal workers and being trained in the Bloomfield school for immediate employment in the Newark plant.

The Kelco Chemical company of Plainfield, N.J., employs 150 Negroes as process workers and more are being added to the group.

The Crucible Steel company of Harrison, N.J., has 300 Negro workers skilled and unskilled laborers. They have asked the state employment office for as many skilled Negro workers as appear on the lists of that office.

The Western Electric company of Kearney, N.J., has employed six Negroes and is asking for Negro machinists.

The Wright Aeronautical company at Cincinnati, has 23 Negroes out of 300 bench hands and plans to increase the Negro personnel to a total of 1,500.

125 WILL BE HIRED

The Kankakee Power plant at Joliet, Ill., has 17 Negroes and will increase this to 125. One of these is in training as a "laundry operator" (a highly specialized department). Upon completion of his training, his salary will be $250 per month. Other workers are receiving from 65 to 72 cents per hour.

The Carbide and Carbon Chemical company at Texas City, Texas, is constructing a new plant with less than 200 men on the payroll. Of this number 12 are Negroes, and it is hoped that the same percentage will be maintained after the plant is in operation.

On the other hand, Dr. Weaver deplores the condition in Detroit where some 900 Negro trainees will be affected by the mass layoffs in the automobile industry. The same predicament was expected in Buffalo when the Chevrolet plant closed down, but the Negro trainees were so superior to the average worker they were retained, while the older workers were let out.

Once again, Dr. Weaver pointed out the absolute necessity for Negroes to obtain the training necessary to compete with modern labor and industry and then wait for the opportunity, which according to the head of the OPM is just about to break for Negroes.

Negro Engineer Named Delegate Of FAECT

Employment of Negro technicians and engineers in defense industries and on Government jobs and the abolition of jim crow laws from American life as the only way of defeating Hitlerism and maintaining American democracy—this is a major note to be struck at the 6th National Convention of the Federation of Engineers, Architects, Chemists and Technicians, CIO, opening in October 10 at Hotel Fort Shelby, Detroit, Mich.

Resolutions reaching the International office fully endorse President Roosevelt's Executive Order banning all forms of discrimination and urge "that it be implemented by such measures as imprisonment and fine and withdrawal of defense contracts from employers who discriminate against Negroes, refusal of educational facilties to various defense training course unless they are open to Negroes and graduates therefrom are hired without any discrimination."

The New York Industrial Chapter No. 31, whose resolutions we quoted, elected as one of its six delegates Fitzgerald Bramwell, a Negro chemical engineer, who successfully passed some ten civil service examinations to be always rejected when it came to the filling of the position. Despite the small number of Negro engineers in industry, the Federation has a substantial colored membership, and several of them will participate in the Convention.

The FAECT from its very existence has been active in every section of industrial America to break down jim crow barriers.

1000 Now in Skilled Jobs, OPM Says

OCT 18 1941

(By ANP)

WASHINGTON

As a result of the continued breaking down of discrimination in industry and the increased employment in many plants, the Office of Production Management reported this week that approximately 1000 colored men are now employed in skilled jobs.

Of this number, approximately 242 have been given jobs in the past two weeks.

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, director of colored employment and training, Labor Division of OPM, said the Curtiss Wright Company at Beaver, Pa., just about ready to open, will employ colored men in all capacities.

Trainees are now being taught in the schools and the same policy will be followed as is in effect in the plants at Buffalo, Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio.

Pa. Plant Wants Workers

The Union Switch and Signal Company of Pittsburgh has 90 colored men employed as moulders, helpers, assistants, firemen, truckers and generally. The company plans to "up-grade" these men and hire more. Skilled men for foundry work are wanted.

The Hartsbok Machine Company in Cleveland has employed two machine shop trainees, and the Taylor Chemical Company of the same city has also two colored machine shop trainees. Both are small companies.

The Ford Instrument Company of Brooklyn has increased its colored skilled and semi-skilled employees from seven to seventeen.

Republic Training Men

The Republic Aviation Company, Long Island, has a colored electrician who is also a tool and die maker. Colored trainees are in the Republic school, training for aircraft work.

OCT 18 1941

The Remington Arms Company at Bridgeport, Conn., has forty colored men as machine operators and semi-skilled workers. They formerly had two.

At the Seneca Ammunition Depot, New York, 250 men, or about 20 per cent of the whole staff, are engaged in construction work and many will be hired upon completion of the plant.

Wright Hires 120

The Curtiss-Wright plant at Columbus, Ohio, has 120 men as machine tool operators, fabricators, sheet metal workers and twenty more are being trained to go into the factory.

The Columbus Urban League maintains a revolving fund, allowing each trainee to borrow $10 for tool purchase. This is returned to the league when the trainee begins work.

The Otis Elevator Company at Harrison, N.J., has taken on six colored crane operators. More are scheduled to begin work this week and the company is calling for all the skilled and semi-skilled workers it can find.

Brewster Adds 16

The Brewster Aeronautic Company of Newark has increased its colored personnel from six to twenty-two of which three are machine operators and five paint sprayers. Ten are enrolled as sheet metal workers and being trained in the Bloomfield school for immediate employment in the Newark plant.

The Kelco Chemical Company of Plainfield, N.J., employs 150 men as process workers and more are being added to the group.

The Crucible Steel Company of Harrison, N.J., has 300 colored skilled and unskilled workers. It has asked the State employment office for as many skilled colored workers as appear on the lists of that office.

Machinists Sought

The Western Electric Company at Kearney, N.J., has employed six colored men and is seeking colored machinists.

The Wright Aeronautical Company at Cincinnati has twenty-three colored out of 300 bench hands and plans to increase the colored personnel to a total of 1500.

The Kankakee Powder Plant at Joliet, Ill., has seventeen colored employees and will increase this to 125. One of these is in training as a laundry operator (a highly specialized department). The Carbide and Carbon Chemical Company at Texas City, Texas, is constructing a new plant with less than 200 men on the payroll. Of this number, twelve are colored.

Chevrolet Keeps Trainees

On the other hand, Dr. Weaver deplores the condition in Detroit, where some 900 colored trainees will be affected by the mass layoffs in the automobile industry.

OCT 18 1941

The same predicament was expected in Buffalo when the Chevrolet plant closed down, but the colored trainees were so superior to the average worker they were retained, while the older workers were let out.

Dr. Weaver again pointed out the absolute necessity for colored men to obtain the training necessary to compete in modern labor and industry and then wait for the opportunities, which, according to the head of the OPM, are continually appearing.

For All Concerned

John L. Lewis has, in our opinion, made other serious mistakes in his public career but he now is making the gravest one of all in holding out against the plea of the President of the United States that the coal strike in the captive mines be ended. Any public confidence that Lewis still commands may very quickly be destroyed, we believe, if he persists in his course.

We should think that responsible leaders in Mr. Lewis' own organization would see how its own best interests are menaced by the attitude he has taken and would be doing their utmost to bring about a prompt and favorable response to Mr. Roosevelt's appeal.

The United Mine Workers' demand for a union shop is said to be the sole issue in the strike. Whatever the merits in this demand, they certainly do not justify the stoppage of important defense work now at this critical moment in the nation's history. Whether or not this rule is to be established in the captive mines immediately obviously is a question that is secondary to whether urgent defense production shall go on without interruption.

As President Roosevelt told the UMW chieftain, "Whatever may be the issues between you and Mr. Taylor or you and Mr. Morgan, the large question of adequate fuel supply is of greater interest and import to the national welfare."

Mr. Lewis had declared that "this fight is between a labor union and a ruthless corporation — the United States Steel Corporation." He said further that J. P. Morgan, U. S. Steel director, was responsible for continuance of the dispute.

Public opinion overwhelmingly supports the appeal of President Roosevelt. It seems apparent that sentiment in Congress is developing in the direction of some kind of action that, if it comes, surely will not be in the interest of organized labor. Yesterday The Associated Press reported: "In Congress many tempers were growing short. In the restive atmosphere talk already was heard of quick legislative action to remedy the situation unless the work stoppage was ended hastily."

It is inconceivable that a serious interruption of defense production should go on indefinitely as the result of the prosecution of this issue at this time, without bringing on a growing reaction against organized labor. This newspaper earnestly and profoundly hopes that no such calamity will come. It could only bring increasing internal trouble and weakness for all the country, and not the interest of all the country, and not the interest of the strikers try when unity and strength are our declaration of Benjamin F. Colored Carpenters Work At Camp Lee

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (ANP) —Sixteen Negro carpenters, members of the newly organized A. F of L. "Colored" Union, went to work at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., Tuesday. This marks the first time that Negro carpenters have been employed in this area on such work.

Two locals were organized, on in Richmond and one in the Tidewater section around Newpo News, Va.

They are operated the same a the white unions, which refused t admit Negroes previously. Not onl did the unions refuse to admit Ne groes, they refused Negroes pe mits to work on the huge construc tion jobs underway in that sectio

While these Negroes are take on, some 200 white carpenters a being released daily. Governme officials see in this a good mar for future employment of Negro in defense construction work.

Negro Engineer Named Delegate Of FAECT

OCT 4 1941

Employment of Negro technicians and engineers in defense industries and on Government jobs and the abolition of jim crow laws from American life as the only way of defeating Hitlerism and maintaining American democracy—this is a major note to be struck at the 6th National Convention of the Federation of Engineers, Architects, Chemists and Technicians, CIO, opening in October 10 at Hotel Fort Shelby, Detroit, Mich.

Resolutions reaching the International office fully endorse President Roosevelt's Executive Order banning all forms of discrimination and urge "that it be implemented by such measures as imprisonment and fine and withdrawal of defense contracts from employers who discriminate against Negroes, refusal of educational facilties to various defense taining course unless they are open to Negroes and graduates therefrom are hired without any discrimination."

The New York Industrial Chapter No. 31, whose resolutions we quoted, elected as one of its six delegates Fitzgerald Bramwell, a Negro chemical engineer, who successfully passed some ten civil service examinations to be always rejected when it came to the filling of the position. Despite the small number of Negro engineers in industry, the Federation has a substantial colored membership, and several of them will participate in the Convention.

The FAECT from its very existence has been active in every section of industrial America to break down jim crow barriers.

1000 Now in Skilled Jobs, OPM Says

OCT 18 1941

(By ANP)

WASHINGTON

As a result of the continued breaking down of discrimination in industry and the increased employment in many plants, the Office of Production Management reported this week that approximately 1000 colored men are now employed in skilled jobs.

Of this number, approximately 242 have been given jobs in the past two weeks.

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, director of colored employment and training, Labor Division of OPM, said the Curtiss Wright Company at Beaver, Pa., just about ready to open, will employ colored men in all capacities.

Trainees are now being taught in the schools and the same policy will be followed as is in effect in the plants at Buffalo, Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio.

Pa. Plant Wants Workers

The Union Switch and Signal Company of Pittsburgh has 90 colored men employed as moulders, helpers, assistants, firemen, truckers and generally. The company plans to "up-grade" these men and hire more. Skilled men for foundry work are wanted.

The Hartsook Machine Company in Cleveland has employed two machine shop trainees, and the Taylor Chemical Company of the same city has also two colored machine shop trainees. Both are small companies.

The Ford Instrument Company of Brooklyn has increased its colored skilled and semi-skilled employees from seven to seventeen.

Republic Training Men

The Republic Aviation Company, Long Island, has a colored electrician who is also a tool and die maker. Colored trainees are in the Republic school, training in aircraft work.

OCT 18 1941

The Remington Arms Company at Bridgeport, Conn., has forty colored men as machine operators and semi-skilled workers. They formerly had two.

At the Seneca Ammunition Depot, New York, 250 men, or about 20 per cent of the whole staff, are engaged in construction work and many will be hired upon completion of the plant.

Wright Hires 120

The Curtiss-Wright plant at Columbus, Ohio, has 120 men as machine tool operators, fabricators, sheet metal workers and twenty more are being trained to go into the factory.

The Columbus Urban League maintains a revolving fund, allowing each trainee to borrow $10 for tool purchase. This is returned to the league when the trainee begins work.

The Otis Elevator Company at Harrison, N.J., has taken on six colored crane operators. More are scheduled to begin work this week and the company is calling for all the skilled and semi-skilled workers it can find.

Brewster Adds 16

The Brewster Aeronautic Company of Newark has increased its colored personnel from six to twenty-two of which three are machine operators and five paint sprayers. Ten are enrolled as sheet metal workers and being trained in the Bloomfield school for immediate employment in the Newark plant.

The Kelco Chemical Company of Plainfield, N.J., employs 150 men as process workers and more are being added to the group.

The Crucible Steel Company of Harrison, N.J., has 300 colored skilled and unskilled workers.

It has asked the State employment office for as many skilled colored workers as appear on the lists of that office.

Machinists Sought

The Western Electric Company at Kearney, N.J., has employed six colored men and is seeking colored machinists.

The Wright Aeronautical Company at Cincinnati has twenty-three colored out of 300 bench hands and plans to increase the colored personnel to a total of 1500.

The Kankakee Powder Plant at Joliet, Ill., has seventeen colored employees and will increase this to 125. One of these is in training as a laundry operator (a highly specialized department). Upon completion of his training, his salary will be $250 per month. Other workers are receiving from 65 to 72 cents per hour.

The Carbide and Carbon Chemical Company at Texas City, Texas, is constructing a new plant with less than 200 men on the payroll. Of this number, twelve are colored.

Chevrolet Keeps Trainees

On the other hand, Dr. Weaver deplores the condition in Detroit, where some 900 colored trainees will be affected by the mass layoffs in the automobile industry.

OCT 18 1941

The same predicament was expected in Buffalo when the Chevrolet plant closed down, but the colored trainees were so superior to the average worker they were retained, while the older workers were let out.

Dr. Weaver again pointed out the absolute necessity for colored men to obtain the training necessary to compete in modern labor and industry and then wait for the opportunities, which, according to the head of the OPM, are continually appearing.

For All Concerned

John L. Lewis has, in our opinion, made other serious mistakes in his public career but he now is making the gravest one of all in holding out against the plea of the President of the United States that the coal strike in the captive mines be ended. Any public confidence that Lewis still commands may very quickly be destroyed, we believe, if he persists in his course.

We should think that responsible leaders in Mr. Lewis' own organization would see how its own best interests are menaced by the attitude he has taken and would be doing their utmost to bring about a prompt and favorable response to Mr. Roosevelt's appeal.

The United Mine Workers' demand for a union shop is said to be the sole issue in the strike. Whatever the merits in this demand, they certainly do not justify the stoppage of important defense work now at this critical moment in the nation's history. Whether or not this rule is to be established in the captive mines immediately obviously is a question that is secondary to whether urgent defense production shall go on without interruption.

As President Roosevelt told the UMW chieftain, "Whatever may be the issues between you and Mr. Taylor or you and Mr. Morgan, the large question of adequate fuel supply is of greater interest and import to the national welfare."

Mr. Lewis had declared that "this fight is between a labor union and a ruthless corporation — the United States Steel Corporation." He said further that J. P. Morgan, U. S. Steel director, was responsible for continuance of the dispute.

Public opinion overwhelmingly supports the appeal of President Roosevelt. It seems apparent that sentiment in Congress is developing in the direction of some kind of action that, if it comes, surely will not be in the interest of organized labor. Yesterday The Associated Press reported: "In Congress many tempers were growing short. In the restive atmosphere talk already was heard of quick legislative action to remedy the situation unless the work stoppage was ended hastily."

It is inconceivable that a serious interruption of defense production should go on indefinitely as the result of the prosecution of this issue at this time, without bringing on a growing reaction against organized labor. This newspaper earnestly and profoundly hopes that no such calamity will come. It could only bring increasing internal trouble and weakness for all the country, and not the interest of all the country, and not the interest of the strikers at least in the interest of the strikers themselves. It is prompt and favorable response to the president's appeal, which points to the nation's overshadowing need and voices, we believe, the producing operations." Against that statement is the declaration of Benjamin F. Fairless, It stands obviously to reason, we think, that continuance of this strike could go on for an indefinite time without impairing defense pro-sary substantial reductions in our steel United States Steel president, that the corporation subsidiaries "makes necessary will curtail defense produc- tion. One course is clearly imperative in try when unity and strength are our urgent need.

'DEMOCRACY' GLORIFIED LAST SUNDAY

MAY 9 1941

But Did You Hear Who Did The Talking And Check Their Faith Against Their Works? Some Fraud, Wasn't It?

Nashville's colored citizens, and likewise a host of liberal-minded white citizens of the Athens of the South, were able to observe with pardonable derision the pharisaical pretenses of government and big industrialists that they are interested in "preserving democracy everywhere in the world" as Nashville put on a big show last Sunday when the Vultee Airplane factory was opened here.

It happens that this war industry, which virtually is subsidized by the Federal Government with a juicy contract for manufacturing airplanes and bombers, not only does not employ any Negroes in its work but has a management which has boldly stated that it does not intend to employ any Negroes except in some sort of porter work, if and when they can get around to that item.

Thousands of people were gathered here last Sunday at the "dedication" of the plant which was "dedicated" to the manufacture of instruments of death and the output of the factory virtually to be given away yto Great Britain.

There was a Britisher here for the ceremonies and he sounded off eloquently about the war aims of Great Britain, and how that nation was fighting for democracy. Britain is an imperialist nation, holding what amounts to Fascist control over millions of people in all parts of the world, most of them black people, many of whom work for only a few cents a day in factories and mines.

The chief orator of the occasion was Wendell L. Willkie, once a Socialist, next a Democrat, then a Republican, and now a Democrat, again. Mr. Willkie stirred his audience with a frantic plea for the United States to hurry, hurry, hurry manufacturing planes and bombers and send them to Britain. He left the impression that these bombers would de dropped on the head of Hitler, however he knew that the bombers will be used to kill men, women and children of his own Germany, the nation from which his ancestors came many years ago to give their children a chance to live in a better land. Mr. Willkie's idealogy is that of the other big industralists of the Eastern seaboard, who see in this war a big chance to make big money, if it can be continued by flim-flamming the plain people into believing it is a war for democracy, Christianity and other such noble purposes.

Present also at the dedication was the Hon. J. Percy Priest. No man ever went to Congress from this district whose election was more largely the result of getting a preponderance of the votes of colored citizens than did Mr. Priest. Not a word was said by Mr. Priest in favor of demonstrating that really and truly we were building here a unit of the "arsenal of democracy" and are proving that we really believe in democracy by giving employment to the black workers of this town and district at the factory being "dedicated."

Supt. W. A. Bass of the Nashville public schools may or may not have been in the great throng at the dedication. At any rate he is a fine, living example of the "democracy" black boys are being called upon to defend. Mr. Bass, unfortunately, has been given charge of $170,000 with which to conduct a school to train workers for defense industries. Not one cent of that money has been employed to train any Negro workers, and still worse is the fact that Mr. Bass, reportedly, has given Government authorities in Washington to understand that he does not intend to use any of the money to train Negro workers.

MAY 9 1941

A colored representative of the Government was here a few weeks ago and reported that he got very gruff treatment from Mr. Bass for trying to get the superintendent to make provision for training colored boys so they could be prepared for defense jobs.

And so they talked about "democracy" in shrill sentences here last Sunday. They believe in their "democracy"—these orators and their crony Mr. W. A. Bass But it is not the kind of democracy which America was founded to usher in and preserve. It is a "democracy" just like that which Great Britain has always maintained. "Democracy" that is built on a caste system, on race prejudice, for the glory of specially privileged classes and for the exploitation of those who are weak and unable to defend themselves. "Democracy" like the one Hitler runs.

O Democracy, the crimes that are committed in thy name!

Hillman Reveals Responses From Industry in His Drive for Widened Opportunity

TRAINING IN SKILL OFFERED

Curtiss-Wright, Sun Shipyards and R. C. A. Plant Report on Employment Policies

MAY 11 1941

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 10—Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, reported progress today in his drive to persuade defense contractors to employ Negroes to relieve skilled labor shortages.

The Curtiss-Wright Corporation, whic makes military aircraft, notified Mr. Hillman that it would employ Negro skilled workers and that "several Negro trainees have been enrolled in the Curtiss-Wright training school and are now receiving instructions which will lead to employment in skilled positions in the Buffalo plant."

The notification was in response to a general letter sent by Mr. Hillman to defense contractors asking them to train and employ Negroes.

MAY 11 1941

Reports Ratio of 10 Per Cent

"At the present time, 10 per cent of our employes are colored men," Mr. Pew wrote. "They are employed in the following departments: Forge and blacksmith shops, foundry, pipe fitting department, bolting and reaming, riveting, store room, yard maintenance, bending shop, garage and janitor service."

G. K. Throckmorton, president of the RCA Manufacturing Company, Camden, N. J., wrote:

"We were mindful of the matter (Negro employment) before the receipt of your letter, and under our policy we had already engaged a substantial number of Negro workers in various lines of endeavor from factory workers to salesmen."

From Montgomery, Ala., A. C. Gresson, president of the Greeson Manufacturing Corporation, wrote:

"At the present time we are using local labor entirely and our crew is about equally divided between white and Negroes. We have several positions held by skilled Negro workers and they are given every opportunity to occupy any job they are capable of handling."

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro Employment and Training Branch of OPM, cited a recent report from the Michigan State Employment Service to show that expanded activity on the part of the Bureau of Employment Security Agencies was facilitating the integration of Negroes into defense production.

Michigan Placements

The report declared that "2,360 Negro placements were made during the first quarter of this year as compared with 940 for the corresponding period last year."

"Placements of Negroes during this first quarter constitute 7.5 per cent of total placements while during that period last year they constituted only 4 per cent of all placements," it added.

"Every week placements are being made of Negroes in occupations in which we have never before been able to place them. Screw-machine operators, lathe operators, electricians, gear hobbers (machine shop), welders and skilled foundry workers such as bench, floor and hand molders as well as coremakers of all kinds. MAY 1 1 1941

"In two instances, increased hiring of Negroes has been reported. In Muskegon, a foundry and machine company is now placing colored men on some skilled jobs, although formerly they have been used only as unskilled labor. Similarly, under the stimulus of increased orders, two establishments in the Port Huron area are now hiring both colored and Mexican foundry workers."

The Negro-Baiters Still Get the Contracts

MAY 5 - 1941

• When Sidney Hillman wrote a mild letter to "defense" employers noting job discrimination against Negro workers, this newspaper warned that it was a hypocritical gesture.

MAY 5 - 1941

Now Hillman proves the charge himself.

A prominent delegation of Negro leaders, among them John P. Davis, secretary of the National Negro Congress, recently called at Hillman's offices in Washington to inform him of the persistent refusal of the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant in Baltimore to employ Negro workers, and to urge concrete action.

At first refusing to see them altogether, Hillman finally received the delegation, only to treat them with insulting contempt and to attack them as not speaking for the Negro people (although the entire Negro population is profoundly stirred against discrimination by the "defense" program). When Hillman had finished his lecture, he refused to hear the delegation. MAY 5 - 1941

Hillman's original letter to the "defense" manufacturers, as empty and deliberately ineffectual as it was, was written only because of protests from the Negro people, labor and progressive white citizens. Previously, he admitted receiving 3,000 such protest letters.

But as can be seen from his treatment of the delegation, the letter was only a stall to prevent any real action against the Hitlerism enforced by the "defense" employers. Fat contracts from the government are still going to the big corporations which deny jobs to Negroes in the name of "democracy."

The Negro people and their progressive supporters can rely solely upon their own organized strength to secure jobs and to break down the fascist practices of the President's war program.

Where this has been done, as in New York against the bus companies and in California at the Vultee plant, victories have been won. Hillman's job is to sell out the rights of the Negro people to his war masters, as he has attempted to do in the case of organized labor. That is the role of Social-Demcoracy.

Baltimore Negro Job Parley Mobilizes Widespread Fight on Glenn Martin; to Picket Hillman Offices

MAY 7 - 1941

MAY 7 - 1941

MAY 7 - 1941

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, May 6.—The conference held under the sponsorship of the National Negro Congress here last week to force "7,000 Negro jobs in the Glenn Martin Aircraft factory" in this city, has stimulated a widespread organizational drive against the Jim-Crow policy of this giant "defense" corporation.

Six hundred and sixteen delegates representing 236 organizations, including 124 CIO unions, five AFL unions, two independent unions, 79 Elk organizations, 28 youth groups, and many peace, fraternal, and church groups, from all sections of Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and New Jersey, adopted a militant program for cracking the anti-Negro citadel in Baltimore wide open.

The resolutions passed unanimously at the conference linked the struggle for Negro jobs in defense industries with the whole character of the imperialist war and called for Negro-white unity in defense of peace, civil rights and trade union progress. MAY 7 - 1941

The conference acted to send a delegation to present to the President, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of War Knox and the OPM, a demand that Glenn Martin immediately hire 7,000 Negroes. The plant now employs 18,000 workers and is engaged on government contracts approximating $350,000,000.

MILITANT PROGRAM

The conference adopted a move to mobilize a strenuous protest campaign against Sidney Hillman's reneging of his pledge that he would move to open up defense jobs for Negroes. Hillman, an associate of OPM, not only has thus far failed to carry out his promise, but has failed even to give any promise of improvement when a delegation of Negro leaders called on his office last week. The conference called for picket lines in front of his Washington office to register their protest.

MAY 7 - 1941

Despite red-baiting attacks on the conference and the National Negro Congress by the Afro-American, Negro newspaper published here, the unity of the delegates and the militancy of the conference forced the newspaper to publish a weak apology after the conference to the effect that perhaps their references to the Congress "was not true."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which had been for weeks making an empty threat to picket the defense industries not only did not do any picketing here but were conspicuous by their absence from this conference. The news release from the national office of that organization dated April 25th clearly shows why. Under the heading of "Labor Shortage May Benefit Race" they say "the increasing seriousness of the European situation and the absorption of more and more men in the army make it possible that the industrialist may be forced to seek Negro labor in the near future." MAY 7 - 1941

The able leadership of John P. Davis, national secretary of the NNC, clearly contrasts the weak policy of Walter White of the NAACP. White prefers to make backdoor negotiations with the industrialists and wait because they "may" hire Negro labor. He spends his time in the national Capitol at the jim-crow $8 per day Hays Adams house trying to buttonhole Congressmen for his bill to investigate discrimination in the defense industries and getting the good old runaround by his Congressional friends. MAY 7 - 1941

The demands and discussion of the delegates countered the empty demagogic boasts of a "march of ten thousand Negroes on Washington" by the Social Democrat Randolph, while doing his best to sabotage the demands of the Negro and white workers for unity and jobs in local communities.

The activities following this conference will more clearly expose to the Negro and white masses the role of Robert (Uncle Tom) Weaver, the Negro assistant to Sidney Hillman. This will especially be true as the mass support from both Washington and Baltimore will grow in the picketing of Sidney Hillman's office in Washington and the sending of increasing numbers of Negro job seekers to the Glenn L. Martin plant.

J.H. Kindelberger May Be Called To Testify Before U. S. Senators

Committee May Subpoena President of Aviation Company Which Says It Will Not Hire Negroes

MAR 28 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A senate sub-committee will begin its investigation of discrimination in National Defense on April 1 and J. H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation Company, may be one of the witnesses summoned to testify.

Mr. Kindelberger, from his office in Inglewood, Cal., announced last week that under no circumstances will Negroes be employed as aircraft workers or mechanics in the bomber plant being erected by the government for his company to operate in Kansas City, Kas.

For such a brazen display of prejudice, Mr. Kindelberger may be subpoenaed if he refuses to appear before the committee voluntarily.

The N. A. A. C. P., which is sponsoring Senate Resolution 75 which provides for an exhaustive investigation of discrimination in defense, has suggested to the committee that Kindelberger be called.

MAR 28 1941

"We are suggesting," said Walter White, secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., "that Mr. Kindelberger be invited, or if he does not accept the invitation, that he be subpoenaed to appear before the committee to explain his aping of Hitler in telling taxpayers and citizens that they cannot be employed because of race and color."

"We are convinced," continued Mr. White, "that if the American people only knew what is going on in the national defense program and fully understood how vicious is the discrimination the Negro is encountering, there would be country-wide indignation against those who are holding up defense because of their anti-Negro prejudices.

"The arrogance of such persons as J. H. Kindelberger, president and general manager of North American Aviation Inc., in stating 'that under no circumstances will Negroes be employed as aircraft workers or mechanics' in the North American Aviation company's plants is insufferable. When Negroes pay income, defense, or other taxes, they are paying Mr. Kindelberger's salary and building up profits for North American Aviation company's stockholders. Negro Americans and decent white Americans have got to let Mr. Kindelberger and his kind know that they cannot get away with such brazen tactics."

The hearings will be held before a sub-committee of the senate committee on education and labor.

Chairman of the sub-committee is Senator H. H. Schwartz of Wyoming. The other members of the sub-committee of five are Senators Claude Pepper of Florida, James M. Mead of New York, Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin. It will be remembered that Senator Schwartz introduced the amendment to the National Defense Act to prohibit discrimination on account of race, creed or color

According to present plans, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, will be the first witness to testify. Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the senate committee on Education and Labor, named the sub-committee Friday.

The senate sponsors of the resolution—Senators Robert F. Wagner of New York, W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, Arthur Capper of Kansas, and Prentiss Brown of Michigan—will urge speedy adoption of the resolution and will emphasize the nature and extent of the discrimination the Negro is encountering which makes such senate action necessary.

It is hoped that the sub-committee will make a speedy report after the factual material has established the need of an exhaustive senate probe of discrimination. Senator Thomas has pledged speedy action by the full senate committee on Education and Labor as soon as the sub-committee has acted.

This will bring S. R. 75 to the floor of the senate very shortly for a vote, provided it is not held up by the Senate Audit and Control committee of which Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina is chairman. Under the senate rules, all measures which provide for expenditure from the senate contingent fund must be passed on by the Audit and Control committee.

Mr. White, N.A.A.C.P secretary, who has been here most of the week working on the above steps, again urged that authentic information regarding discrimination, particularly in industrial plants filling contracts from the federal government for the defense program, be sent to the national office of the N.A A.C.P. 69 Fifth avenue, New York.

HOT POT SHOTS

By Milton H. Bledsoe

Editor's Note: This column represents the author's opinions and is not to be construed as reflecting the editorial policy of The Call.

THE entire Negro group in the middle West was startled into action on Monday, March 17, when a news story in a daily paper announced the statement of policy of the North American Aviation, Inc., by J. H. Kindelberger, president, that regardless of training Negroes would not be employed as mechanics and aircraft workers in the $10,000,000 government owned bomber assembly plant that it will operate in Fairfax in Kansas City, Kansas.

Kindelberger is no quartermaster in the army, no general or high government official. He is just a private citizen with an unusual amount of gall and, we might add, a degree of frankness that brings a fight out into the open instead of letting it linger in subterfuge and indefiniteness which we might at least thank the gentleman for.

And despite the cries of un-Americanism that went up both from Negroes and liberal-minded whites because of the statement of policy Kindelberger's announcement is only a "rule of thumb" action that permeates almost every phase of American life today, especially where employment with decent pay and chances for advancement is concerned.

Howl Against Kindelgerger

Certainly there's a howl to be made when a president of a private concern using government funds in a government building flatly says American citizens, if they be black, will be barred from skilled work.

But are not G-Men paid from government funds and we certainly have no great deal of representation in this arm of the country's machine of law enforcement.

And out of the entire system of the federal judiciary we have one lone judge and he's stuck way down behind the sun in good old Virgin Islands despite the fact that there are certainly eminent Negro lawyers who could hold down federal judgeships in these United States without causing a revolution.

When even the Supreme court can have on its roster a justice with the limited legal training of Justice Hugo Black (despite the fact that he has shown at least more than a passing amount of fair play toward minority of fair play haven of jurisprudence could be greatly enhanced by a justice of the legal ability of a Charles Houston or William Hastie.

No Negro at Any Price

This no-Negro-at-any-price attitude is evident all the way down the line. It has been more implied than stated and probably the sting has not been as great but the policy is just about the same.

We would be shocked into insensibility if our own Franklin D. Roosevelt was to state that regardless of training no Negro would ever be named to the United States Supreme court bench and yet to date, we question if the name of any Negro mentioned for this post has even gotten past the front door of the White House.

Negro diplomatic posts in government service are rare and few between. We haven't as yet heard of any career men being trained for foreign service save for a few who happen to be sent to such outposts of civilization as some of the southern islands of Liberia.

Proscription of Negroes in the United States navy is not only condoned but publicly announced and supported by the U. S. government. Unless one is interested in peeling potatoes or being a personal flunky for his white fellow-men the U. S. Navy will have none of its black citizens around.

In the entire United States armed forces at present there are only two Negro commissioned officers, both being tied up in the family of Benjamin Davis Sr., withal however, a man whose attitude through his statement reflected: "Yes, I'll take black men's money, use it as I D——n please, bar them from working and what vote out of office those who can they do about it."

For after all, those few minutes in an election booth mean the difference between the ballot and what-not. Through the ballot all U. S. citizens, regardless of race, creed or color can be made to account for their stewardship even to the black voter. One way to dispose of the men of Kindelberger's ilk in public life is to make possible the participation of this type of man in public affairs.

Taft of Ohio, and Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin. It will be remembered that Senator Schwartz introduced the amendment to the National Defense Act to prohibit discrimination on account of race, creed or color

According to present plans, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, will be the first witness to testify. Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the senate committee on Education and Labor, named the sub-committee Friday.

MAR 28 194

The senate sponsors of the resolution—Senators Robert F. Wagner of New York, W. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, Arthur Capper of Kansas, and Prentiss Brown of Michigan—will urge speedy adoption of the resolution and will emphasize the nature and extent of the discrimination the Negro is encountering which makes such senate action necessary.

It is hoped that the sub-committee will make a speedy report after the factual material has established the need of an exhaustive senate probe of discrimination. Senator Thomas has pledged speedy action by the full senate committee on Education and Labor as soon as the sub-committee has acted.

This will bring S. R. 75 to the floor of the senate very shortly for a vote, provided it is not held up by the Senate Audit and Control committee of which Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina is chairman. Under the senate rules, all measures which provide for expenditure from the senate contingent fund must be passed on by the Audit and Control committee.

Mr. White, N.A.A.C.P secretary, who has been here most of the week working on the above steps, again urged that authentic information regarding discrimination, particularly in industrial plants filling contracts from the federal government for the defense program, be sent to the national office of the N.A A.C.P. 69 Fifth avenue, New York.

HOT POT SHOTS

THE entire Negro group in the middle West was startled into action on Monday, March 17, when a news story in a daily paper announced the statement of policy of the North American Aviation, Inc., by J. H. Kindelberger, president, that regardless of training Negroes would not be employed as mechanics and aircraft workers in the $10,000,000 government owned bomber assembly plant that it will operate in Fairfax in Kansas City, Kansas.

Kindelberger is no quartermaster in the army, no general or high government official. He is just a private citizen with an unusual amount of gall and, we might add, a degree of frankness that brings a fight out into the open instead of letting it linger in subterfuge and indefiniteness which we might at least thank the gentleman for.

And despite the cries of un-Americanism that went up both from Negroes and liberal-minded whites because of the statement of policy Kindelberger's announcement is only a "rule of thumb" action that permeates almost every phase of American life today, especially where employment with decent pay and chances for advancement is concerned.

Howl Against Kindelgerger

Certainly there's a howl to be made when a president of a private concern using government funds in a government building flatly says American citizens, if they be black, will be barred from skilled work.

But are not G-Men paid from government funds and we certainly have no great deal of representation in this arm of the country's machine of law enforcement.

And out of the entire system of the federal judiciary we have one lone judge and he's stuck way down behind the sun in good old Virgin Islands despite the fact that there are certainly eminent Negro lawyers who could hold down federal judgeships in these United States without causing a revolution.

When even the Supreme court can have on its roster a justice with the limited legal training of Justice Hugo Black (despite the fact that he has shown at least more than a passing amount of fair play toward minority of fair play haven of jurisprudence could be greatly enhanced by a justice of the legal ability of a Charles Houston or William Hastie.

No Negro at Any Price

This no-Negro-at-any-price attitude is evident all the way down the line. It has been more implied than stated and probably the sting has not been as great but the policy is just about the same.

We would be shocked into insensibility if our own Franklin D. Roosevelt was to state that regardless of training no Negro would ever be named to the United States Supreme court bench and yet to date, we question if the name of any Negro mentioned for this post has even gotten past the front door of the White House.

Negro diplomatic posts in government service are rare and few between. We haven't as yet heard of any career men being trained for foreign service save for a few who happen to be sent to such outposts of civilization as some of the southern islands of Liberia.

Proscription of Negroes in the United States navy is not only condoned but publicly announced and supported by the U. S. government. Unless one is interested in peeling potatoes or being a personal flunky for his white fellow-men the U. S. Navy will have none of its black citizens around.

In the entire United States armed forces at present there are only two Negro commissioned officers, both being tied up in the family of Benjamin Davis Sr., withal however, a

Kindelberger Must Not Have His Way, Say Kansas Citians

MAR 28 1941

Kindelberger must not have his way!

This is what Kansas Citians have been saying by telegram, letter, resolution and word of mouth ever since J. H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation company, announced Monday that Negro mechanics and aircraft workers will not be used in his bomber plant at Fairfax field. MAR 28 1941

Telegrams by the hundreds were sent to President Roosevelt at the White House in Washington by individuals and organizations stirred to action by Kindelberger's statement published in The Kansas City Star Monday afternoon.

"Regardless of their training as aircraft workers, we will not employ Negroes in the North American plant," said Kindelberger and the words fell like a bombshell in the Negro community where for weeks leaders have been working with the board of education to train Nergoes for the North American jobs. MAR 28 1941

The Call's reporters picked up comments from every corner of the city this week. Some of them are printed below. The comments were so numerous that because of lack of space we cannot print them all this week. Those not appearing today will be in the next issue:

N.A.A.C.P. BRANCH

Carl R. Johnson, president of the N.A.A.C.P. branch, made this statement: MAR 28 1941

"The local branch of the N.A.A.C.P. vigorously condemns the announced policy of the North American Aviation as stated by J. H. Kindelberger, its president, in an afternoon edition of The Kansas City Star for Monday, March 17.

"We urge every well-meaning citizen to communicate his objection directly to the President of the United States and to senators and congressmen as well as to the office of production management at once.

"We doubt that there has ever been a more brazen announcement of policy during a similar period when unity is the cry of all forward thinking people.

"In the light of some suggestions locally made there is good reason to believe that this announced policy as well as the publicity given have local inspiration. If it is a challenge it should not go unheeded.

"If this announcement is a symbol of a United Democratic American maybe we should ask ourselves should the Negro love America?

"The local branch was so moved by the news announcement that it had clippings in New York and Washington Tuesday morning for the information of President Roosevelt and our national office."

DR. S. S. HILL, dentist: "We don't want to feel that we Negroes lost our best friends when Harriette Beecher Stowe died and John Brown was hung, but Mr. Kindelberger, from his statement, would have us believe that."

E. R. McFARLAND, barber: "Even if this has been the policy of the company, in this emergency, they should do away with the policy. These statements seem to be un-American for a man in his position."

DR. J. HUSTON LEWIS, dentist: "Just a little more "encouragement" from Hitler and Kindelberger and all his kind will change their minds."

MAURICE HOWARD, letter carrier: "Such a statement could be expected from a man so similar to Mr. Hitler and his subordinates."

DARWIN JONES, musician: "Regardless of what goes on in other cities, in Kansas City, where training is available, Negroes should be given a chance in industry. After Mr. Kindelberger's statement, I wonder: "Is every man created equal?'" MAR 28 1941

REV. D. A. HOLMES, minister: "It was the most outrageous and un-American act, in the light of the present emergency in this community. It should arouse united action by Negroes. Negroes should not be called up to defend the flag of this country under these circumstances."

G. L. BLANKINSHIP, drug clerk: "I can't think of anything that would adequately describe my aversion for such an un-democratic statement."

DR. P. C. TURNER, hospital superintendent: "In the presence of impending dangers and as we fight against so-called sabotage, it is quite unfair to eliminate Negroes from higher scientific jobs when they are prepared."

GUY DAVIS, hospital personnel and business manager: "It was a most undemocratic statement from the president of a company sponsored by taxpayers' money. It was a "black eye" against the individuals who voted for bonds which enabled them to build the plant.

EMMETT WALLS, police sergeant: "I'm sure Mr. Kindelberger was not thinking in terms of true Americanism in time of world strife."

BURDETTE HOCKADAY, sanitary inspector: "It is my firm conviction that Mr. Kindelberger must have been misunderstood. A company of the magnitude of North American Aviation, Inc., surely could not hope to serve America and American ideals with prejudice seemingly as a fundamental principle."

JAMES D. POUNCEY, attorney: "We pay the same taxes, the same price for food, clothing and shelter and suffer the same punishment for crime that the white man does. In times of national stress we must make the same sacrifices of home and family. Therefore, the Negro should be allowed the same training and should work in all national defense work on the same basis as the white man works—according to his ability."

EVERETT O'NEAL, tire salesman: "I think it's a——shame."

C. H. CALLOWAY, lawyer: 'It is hard to imagine that any true American would make such a bold statement as made by James H. Kindelberger, president and genreal manager of the North American Aviation company would have the audacity to make the statement attributed in the daily press to James H. Kindelberger, president of the North American Aviation company. We are all striving for unity and working towards one common goal, i. e., to preserve democracy for all people. We must have employment to sustain the inner man which will give us strength for the fight. We want a man's chance to work and aid in the defense of our country. Why not purge the list of aliens and those of subversive tendencies and permit the Negroes who are 100 per cent Americans to have the chance of showing their loyalty in preparing, fighting, and dying if need be for America and for democracy."

HAROLD F. RIDING, W P A worker: "It is much too important for me to pass over the article in the daily press in which J. H. Kindelberger is quoted as saying that Negroes will not be employed as mechanics in the North American Aviation plant in Kansas City, Kansas. And the United States is supposed to be a democracy. The Negroes are being drafted into the army to defend this great democracy. What a laugh, but also what tears Kindelberger's statement brings—tears of anger and disappointment. We Negroes are refused an equal chance of earning a living in this country, but we are expected to die in defense of it—and for what?" MAR 28 1941

ROY J. BARKER, groceryman and president of the Negro Chamber of Commerce: "Wake up, Negroes! Wake up and fight for your rights! I think Mr. Kindelberger's statement ridiculous. Negroes are not naturalized citizens, but real American citizens and the most patriotic of them all. If we are not good enough to work on the defense program, why should we be compelled to shed blood if necessary?"

J. OLIVER MORRISON, high school teacher: "Such a policy is un-American and undemocratic and should be challenged by every right-thinking citizen." Mr. Morrison has sent a telegram of protest to President Roosevelt.

THOMAS A. WEBSTER, executive secretary of the Urban league: "The policy of the North American Aviation company merely aggravates the vicious circle in which Negroes find themselves in an attempt to aid in the preparation for national defense. They cannot get training, we are told, because they have no assurance of work.

portunity to serve their country in every capacity in which they are qualified.

"R. J. JORDAN,
"Chairman, Civic Committee."

ROY DORSEY: "I think it is un-American knowing that the first American soldier who died for this country was a Negro and they tell us that we cannot work gardless of color or other extraneous circumstances."

ed to the program of defense re- They cannot get work because employers say they are not trained. I believe Negro workers with the necessary skills should be given training to the extent of their ability even though they are not being used in certain capacities in industry at present. We do not know what the picture is going to be six months from now. If stoppage of work because of strikes, sabotage and other reasons is not corrected the whole defense program will be delayed seriously. Our full work capacity should be gear-

DR. CHARLES R. HUMBERT, physician: "I wonder how many Italians and Germans are employed in Mr. Kindelberger's plants. If Kindelberger is a true American patriot, I wish he would state why he refuses to hire the most patriotic citizens in the country—Negroes—while he has no objection to possible fifth columnists. I have information that he has many foreigners working his plants. Taxpayers, both black and white, are paying for the land for the bomber plant testing field and Negroes should share in the jobs."

The Tau Gamma Rho fraternity sent the following telegram to the President of the United States:

"Be advised discrimination of Negroes by the North American Aviation Corporation, Inc., gives ample cause for protest." Edwin Frazier is president.

SYLVESTER ALLEN, 2444 Wabash: "Every Negro should feel it a duty to make a protest."

MRS. LETTIE JORDAN, Democratic committeewoman from the Fourth ward: "This is the worse thing that could have happened."

MRS. ZENOBIA H. WILSON, president of the Kansas City Association of Colored Women's clubs: "Since they are using taxpayers' money, we should be given a jo in any capacity for which we c qualify."

Protests Protect Negro Contract

APR 4 1941

Birmingham, Ala.—Prompt protest to the office of Sidney Hillman, OPM co-director, in Washington, secured the signing of a contract between the Ingalls iron works in this city and local 529 American Federation of Labor, after the management has balked at signing the contract because it guaranteed the same wages and security for Negro labor workers and whites. APR 4 1941

The dificulty was reported to the national office of the N. A. A. C. P. by Dr. E. W. Taggart, prominent dentist here and member of the national N. A. A. C. P. board of directors. The national office wired Mr. Hillman, and two representatives were sent to Birmingham. The union stood pat and the company finally signed.

In the judgment of the local negotiators, the "most far-reaching gains" for Negro labor were made in the approved contract, and its terms are expected to affect Negro workers elsewhere.

500 JOBS FOR NEGROES IF OPM ACTS ON PLAN

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., July 31—The National Urban League, in a communication addressed to Sidney Hillman this week, placed its support behind the request of the National Bronze and Aluminum Foundry Company of Cleveland for a special allotment of scrap aluminum with which the company intends to train 500 Negro workers for skilled production work in the aluminum industry.

National Bronze has employed a large number of Negro workers for the past 20 years, but in conference with officials of the Urban League of Cleveland, the company has worked out plans for training this large additional number, provided 700,000 pounds of scrap aluminum can be obtained for training purposes.

It is estimated that the company must wait from four to six months before equipment will be delivered for use in the production of castings for tanks, gun turrets, airplanes, etc. National Bronze plans to use that waiting period for training Negroes for the kind of precision castings required in the defense orders held by the company.

8,000 Copies Distributed To Employers

Workers Found Trained In Skilled Jobs

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Approximately 8,000 employers of industrial labor throughout the country, a large number of whom hold national defense contracts, have been supplied with copies of "I Can Run Your Machines," a pictorial pamphlet published by the National Urban League, which states the case for the Negro workers to employers who have never made use of their services.

Already favorable results have developed from the use of this pamphlet which has been distributed directly from the national office of the League to employers holding national defense contracts, and from the forty-five local affiliates among employers in both defense and non-defense industrial fields.

The pamphlet is a 16-page publication of convenient size, profusely illustrated and with concise narrative in bold type. It sets forth the situation of the unemployed Negro worker who is refused job opportunity because of various misconceptions held by a large number of American employers. The cover page shows a skilled Negro machinist engaged in a delicate operation. Other pictures present Negroes at work in a variety of unskilled, semi-skilled and skilled jobs.

TYPES OF JOBS

These jobs include such occupations as fire battalion chief, foundry worker, power-machine operator, multilith and drill press operators carpenters, brick mason, sandhog, grocery clerk and stenographer.

The narrative states emphatically that Negroes are trained and available for all types of skilled work, that they have worked successfully on jobs with their white fellows, that they are included in the memberships of nearly 200 major unions throughout the country, and that they have in the past made tremendous contribution to the great industries of America.

EMPLOYERS CHALLENGED

The pamphlet ends with a pointed statement referring to this nation as the "arsenal of democracy" and challenging American employers to help this country muster the man power it so obviously

The League, in announcing successful use of this pamphlet points out that the President's executive order to end discrimination in defense industry is only one of many steps that must be taken to protect industrial opportunity for Negroes. There are many non-defense employers not reached by the provisions of this order, and even in defense industry there remains a need for persistent education for employers who are inclined to balk at what they consider an "impractical administrative step."

The League considers the present defense emergency as an opportunity to make democracy effective by raising the occupational status of Negroes and insuring for them the American citizen's inalienable right to work.

Negro Women in Defense Jobs As Skilled Workers

IOWA WOMEN SEEK DEFENSE TRAINING

In response to many inquiries regarding necessary training for women as skilled workers in the national defense program, a Bystander reporter interviewed this Alma Teuchert, one of the women secretaries at the Iowa State Employment Service, who revealed that "nothing definite" had been released as yet regarding these training programs for women.

Many of the women seeking training comment that they want to be prepared to get jobs in the new plant when the rush starts and if they do not get the training early enough they will be "left out in the cold."

NEGRO WOMEN IN DEFENSE JOBS AS SKILLED WORKERS

Washington, D. C.—Negro women are playing an increasingly important part as skilled workers in the national defense program, Thelma McKelvey, Special Assistant in the Labor Supply Branch of the Office of Production Management, told the National Association of Colored Women, Inc., Tuesday evening, July 29.

Addressing the biennial convention of the Association in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Miss McKelvey also urged the assembled delegates to work through their State and local federations to increase the enrollment of Negro workers in defense training courses.

"In several communities in which the courses were open to all workers, regardless of race, creed or color," she said, "it has been found that Negro youth has failed to take advantage of these opportunities. As a result of this, many of these prospective defense workers were unable to enter local plants when OPM had altered discriminatory employment practices in these communities."

Women in Defense

Touching on the role of Negro women in defense, Miss McKelvey declared: "our program of total utilization of our human resources includes plans to increase the participation of Negro women as well as men, for they are a vital part of our labor supply."

Some progress has already been made in this direction through the work of the Negro Employment and Training Branch or OPM, the speaker pointed out.

"Through the activities of Dr. Weaver's office and other branches of the Labor Division of OPM, hundreds of Negro women have been employed during the last year as power machine operators in the garment industries of St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo., Chicago, Ill., Philadelphia, Pa., and in other urban centers.

"As of June 1, 1941, more than 400 colored women were employed as gas-mask assemblers in the Edgewood Arsenal at Baltimore, Md. One of the largest parachute maunfacturers in the country has placed Negro women on parachute assembly work in Manchester, Conn., as a result of OPM activity. And the State Employment Service offices in various communities have placed colored women in defense industries in such unusual occupations as sheet metal workers, press operators, jewelers, sign painters and electrical goods assemblers. A recent report of the Bureau of Employment Security shows that more than 117 placements of this nature in recent months, have been made.

Jobs Drive Launched Over Radio Network

Local Negro Congress Out To Save U.S. From Embarrassment

An appeal for real equality of opportunity for the Negroes of America in national defense work and private industry was made in a coast-to-coast broadcast over Station WCAU on Tuesday night by outstanding speakers under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia Council of the National Negro Congress.

Appearing on the program, which was under the direction of Miss Goldie Irvin, chairman of the council, were Dr. Nathan F. Mossell, pioneer physician and founder of the Douglass Hospital, 1530 Lombard street, who serves the council as chairman of the Jobs Campaign Committee; Russell Watson, national representative of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, CIO; and Mrs. Catherine McCabe, who as secretary of the Jobs Campaign Committee, outlined the program of the National Negro Congress in this connection.

WANTS TO FREE COUNTRY

Dr. Mossell, in his address, stated that he had accepted the chairmanship of the Jobs Committee because he "wanted to help free his country of its greatest curse—prejudice and oppression of its largest racial minority group."

We take it, he continued, as a duty and a [illegible] during the National Emergency to do all we can to correct these deplorable evils that are destined to embarrass our Government when its representatives shall set at the peace table and shall begin talking to the totalitarian governments about their treatment of the weaker nations. Many much smaller than our Negro population.

Speaking for the C.I.O. Watson declared that the excuse used by most large industries for not employing Negroes because "the unions might object" is almost as untrue as the one they used to say that "a white man will not work beside a Negro." They simply haven't tried either, and don't know whether they will work out or not without a fair trial.

TELLS OF UNION GROWTH

According to Mr. Watson, "the growth of unionism among Negro workers has taken place since the development of the C.I.O. For the first time in the history of our country the C.I.O. has established absolute equality within its organization, regardless of race, color, creed or religion."

In the firm belief that American Negroes are "of a mind to work" and that our curse is not "indolence" or "lack of ability" but rather the un-Christian like policy of excluding us from the job-life of America, the National Negro Congress has determined to secure employment for the 15 million Negroes who will pay 10 percent of taxes needed to raise money for national defense, but are still denied jobs created by the work needed for this program.

In order to accomplish this, Mrs. McCabe, in her talk, stated that the Congress has pledged itself "to promote trade unionism among Negroes; to work for the organization of Negroes into these unions on a fair basis of equality with all other trade union members; to investigate all companies having defense contracts; and to place before the Committee on Fair Labor Practices under the OPM, all evidences of discrimination."

Train For Jobs

THERE is a tremendous effort on the part of the Federal government to prepare people to work in the defense industries. Arrangements have been made to train people in public schools, in NYA training centers and in the defense industries for jobs. In many cities, including Chicago, classes continue twenty-four hours a day.

This is an age of training. More people are being trained today than in any other period of our history. They are being trained for the most part to do something with their hands as well as their minds. Millions of men are being trained in the technique of military strategy. Millions are being trained to supply fighters with the necessary food and clothing and recreation needed in their endeavors.

Colored Americans must fall in line with this new world training program or suffer the fate of being ignored in a good many aspects of the defense training program.

Many courses are being offered to prepare people to work in the defense industries but comparatively few colored persons are taking the courses. There are many reasons why they are not taking the courses. One reason is that they do not know about the details of the courses and how they may register for them. Another is their indifference toward them is due to racial discrimination in the defense industries. Other reasons range from a lack of interest to the traditional excuse of being "too busy."

There should be more publicity given to the general public as to the details of the courses and when and where persons interested in taking them may register.

As to racial discrimination it may be said that if Negroes are not qualified to fill the jobs certainly none will be hired. There are a good many industries hiring Negroes who, therefore, have not hired them. A case in point is the Western Electric, located at Cicero, which hired some 30,000 people. Until August it had never hired Negroes. Now it has Negroes working in skilled and unskilled positions throughout its plant.

The Urban League and the Chicago Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are cooperating on a program to integrate more Negroes into the defense program by encouraging workers to take courses that will qualify them for defense jobs. Such a program is certainly needed and if followed through will be responsible for the placements of many colored people in defense jobs for the reason that these organizations have the facilities to register effective protests in the event the barrier of discrimination is presented in the job program.

"Negroes Must Organize," Frank Crosswaith Says In Discussing War Industries Problem

MAR 1 51941

MAR 1 51941

By FRANK R. CROSSWAITH

During the last war large numbers of Negro workers came North and were hired by the various industries as manufacturing plants expanded to meet the needs of war production. These colored workers gained a foothold in a number of industries and localities where they had heretofore not been employed. In practically every instance they did satisfactory work and in those industries such as coal mining and the manufacture of clothing where the unions have always been progressive and active, they joined freely with their white fellow workers in the efforts made by the unions to maintain and improve conditions for the workingclass as a whole.

With the coming of the depression Negro workers suffered more in proportion than did the whites, although they both suffered severely. The traditional prejudice of many employers and some workers held full sway as millions found themselves out of work and pressing for any sort of a job. Negro workers were the first to be discharged. Sometimes this was the result of prejudice, but often it was the result of operation of seniority rights which caused those who had found jobs in the industry most recently to be laid off first when the working force had to be reduced.

With the improved conditions under the Roosevelt's administration, jobs for white and colored workers increased in number, although not sufficent to bring full employment. But again Negro workers found themselves called back to work more slowly than their fellow workers with white skins. In consequence, all throughout the land the proportion of Negroes on relief is far higher than it should be, due to deny us a fair opportunity to work. MAR 1 51941

Once again the dogs of war are unleashed in the world. The devastation which they cause will be kept from our shores, as long as the British hold back the flood of aggression by Hitler with his vile racial ideas, and by Mussolini, who conquered Ethiopia, but who now feels the heavy hand of justice as his stolen Empire is being wrested from him by the British lion and the aroused Ethiopians. Our job is to produce the essentials of war and thus enable those who are fighting against distatorship to win the day for democracy. Again, therefore, opportunity for wider employment in war industry opens up for the Negro. But this time it seems that the prejudice of employers added to the bar which has been set up by a number of short-sighted unions, is blocking our way. MAR 1 51941

Organized Negro workers must be active and determined to demand their fair share of jobs in different industries and their share of opportunity for training for such jobs. Since the industries are operating under government contracts in most cases and since much of the training is being carried out through government agencies such as the WPA and the National Youth Administration, we should use the pressure of our political power wherever we have the right to vote to demand our rights, and we can also use the power we have gained through our organized industrial strength. The efforts of such organizations as the NAACP and the Urban League to see that widespread practice of discrimination in the defense industries is ended deserve all the support which we can give to them. The efforts of the many thousands of Negro Trade Unionists to end discrimination from within the labor movement likewise deserves our sympathetic understanding and support. Luckily, within the labor movement progressive white trade unionists give support to our demands. Sidney Hillman representing labor in the Office of Production Management has promised to use his influence to end discrimination in employment by industries getting government contracts. The American Labor Party conference in New York held this past week (Monday, February 24) with delegates present from many unions in New York, both A. F. of L. and C. I. O., likewise passed unanimously a resolution calling upon the President to demand the ending of discrimination in jobs in defense industries.

We must ceaselessly demand our rights in industry and employment as well as our civil and political rights. But there is little sense or profit in complaining unless we organize to make effective our complaint against discrimination and secure our righteous demands for justice. No race or group on earth ever was "given rights". They gained strength by organizing until they were able to take their rights. Negroes must learn the power of organized thinking and organized acting in our struggle to win our full citizenship rights in American life.

JOB TRAINING IS THEME FOR NEGRO MEETING

MAR 26 1941

A massmeeting sponsored jointly by the industrial committees of the Chicago Urban league and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Bethesda Baptist church, 5301 Michigan avenue. Principal speaker will be Paul A. Mertz, district representative of Training with Industry, Office of Production Management.

"Better Training for Jobs" is the topic for discussion, and Mr. Mertz is expected to acquaint south siders with the opportunities now available. The other speakers will advise the audience how to improve themselves culturally as well as along skilled or technical lines. OCT 26 1941

A special feature of the program will be speeches by Calvin Hall, 528 East 37th street, president of the Wendell Phillips senior class, and Frank Crossley, 4552 Champlain avenue, president of the Du Sable senior class. Seats will be reserved for members of the two senior classes and their parents.

The Rev. DeWitt Turpeau of the Indiana Avenue Methodist Episcopal church is chairman of the committee which planned the massmeeting.

Jobs For Defense

MAR 23 1941

THE National Urban League is sponsoring its ninth annual Vocational Opportunity Campaign. The program is intended to aid youth in obtaining jobs and in that connection will concentrate its attention on the job opportunity offered by the national defense program. It's theme, "Let us work to defend America", characterizes the nature of a program dedicated to the task of advancing the cause of our democracy in these perilous times and in aiding colored youth in breaking through the color bar that is raised to prevent Negroes from working in the defense industries. If the Vocational Opportunity Campaign does no more than to make it possible for a few of our youth to become integrated in the jobs offered by defense industries it will have done a successful job.

The Opportunity Campaign comes on the heels of the receipt of the largest income tax returns ever filed by American citizens. Millions of small income workers who heretofore knew nothing about filing their returns had to share with Uncle Sam a portion of their salaries for the year of 1940. Included in that group were a large number of Negro workers whose incomes were more than eight hundred dollars. In addition to the four per cent demanded by Uncle Sam he also asked that ten per cent of that be added to your tax this year to help in the preparedness program. A large number of Negroes paid the defense taxes. The government, however, will not know from the returns who the colored tax payers are who paid their income. That is as it should be. There is no color line in the payment of the tax. By the same reason there should be no color line in the defense industries that have millions of dollars worth of defense orders which will be partly paid for by the taxes which Negroes have paid. If Negroes are paying their proportional share of the income tax as well as other taxes in accordance to their income it is only fair to share in whatever benefits that may be derived from the defense program in the form of jobs. MAR 23 1941

The Urban League's Campaign should be the most important one in its history. It is coming at a time when it is most needed and when considerable good can be achieved.

Wanted: Skilled Workers

MAR 22 1941

THE Office of Production Management, the Federal Security Administrator and the chairman of the Social Security Board have issued an urgent call for skilled men of all crafts to register with their state employment offices and thus make known their availability for defense construction of all kinds.

It is pointed out that there is an acute shortage of skilled mechanics in the defense industries, and that this shortage is seriously impeding preparations for national defense.

There is irony in this urgent plea for a patriotic response of skilled men to come to the defense of their country, when it is known that every day in every industry skilled men are being refused employment because their skins are brown or black.

The little detail of adjusting labor policies and race relations policies to the needs of national defense in the most perilous crisis in the nation's history seems never to have occured to many of those upon whose shoulders the main responsibility rests. MAR 22 1941

Again, it is worth repeating that America in this dark hour of danger needs all of its man-power, and needs it where it can best serve. If men can serve as skilled mechanics in the production of the articles of defense it is grossly unwise and unpatriotic to leave them idle or employed as unskilled laborers.

The supreme challenge to democracy today is the making of adjustments which will make possible the utilization of the full strength of its man-power, despite the diversity of races and creeds which characterizes this man-power.

In his stirring address Saturday night President Roosevelt said that "speed, and speed now" is the nation's vital need. MAR 22 1941

A 10 per cent dilution of democracy with the virus of totalitarianism will make it ineffective and powerless to acquire the speed necessary to make democracy safe in the present crisis.

Negro Skilled Workers And National Defense

MAR 2 0 1941

Information has come from many sources that Negro skilled workers have presented themselves for employment in the defense industries only to be refused because they were Negroes. In the face of this manifestly unfair practice, the government, through its officials, has issued a call for skilled workers, stating that there is a severe shortage of skilled labor, and that production of defense materials is retarded because of this situation.

It naturally occurs to us that the government or the industries will have to alter this situation or be convicted of being willing to see defense production fail rather than remove discrimination in the matter of employment of Negroes.

President Roosevelt says that labor strikes, short-sighted management and sabotage will not be allowed to interfere with maximum production in the scheme to make America the "arsenal of democracy." We wonder if that democracy, which we are so much concerned about, can be made to function a little bit further and guarantee that Negroes who are skilled and who are willing to work in the industries shall have that chance.

Unless this stigma can be removed and all restrictions against the employment of Negroes are removed there can be little hope that Negroes will feel elated over the idea of justice being inherent in that democracy for which we are creating an arsenal.

There are thousands of Negroes who are already trained in skilled crafts, and many more are willing to be trained if given the opportunity; they have the basic education and are otherwise fitted for the training. It is nothing more than short-sightedness, (and might easily be included in the category of sabotage) for industries, management and the government to sit idly by while these men and women are denied the chance to work purely because they are Negroes.

Wages Vary From 40-60 Cts. an Hour

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

RADFORD, Va. — Skilled colored workers are being discriminated against in construction of the $45,000,000 defense powder plant near here, and they will find barriers against them in most classifications when production begins, the AFRO-AMERICAN was informed on Friday.

Employment Manager Veal of the Hercules Powder Company, which will produce smokeless powder at the plant for the United States Army, said on Friday that he was aware of colored men at work only as laborers, semi-skilled workers, cooks, waiters, and barracks attendants.

Although Mr. Veal's office is responsible for physical examinations and fingerprinting for all employees on the project, his statement appeared at variance with one obtained by W. C. Rose and Alfred Hunter of the Roanoke NAACP.

The NAACP investigators said that Mr. Veal told them that there were a few colored carpenters, bricklayers and other skilled workers on the job with the total far under fifty.

Mr. Veal told the AFRO-AMERICAN that of the 1400 colored men employed among the 22,000 on the job there were about 1000 laborers, with the rest classified as waiters, cooks, trackmen, and other semi-skilled workers.

Pay for the laborers is 40 cents per hour, with time and a half for overtime and Sunday work. Waiters and barracks attendants receive 32 cents per hour. Semi-skilled workers receive from 44 cents to 60 cents per hour.

Investigation by the AFRO-AMERICAN in Radford, which is nine miles away from the plant, in Roanoke, Christiansburg, Wytheville and Bluefield tended to show that one sub-contractor had brought in colored bricklayers from North Carolina, and the Mason and Hanger, New York construction company, had used a few carpenters and one or two plumbers or pipefitters.

Riggers Used

Mason and Hanger also used some colored riggers. The Hercules Powder Company is serving as general contractor for the plant which it will operate for the War Department.

Some workmen at the plant insisted that a number of the drillers and blasting workers used by Hercules were colored, but Mr. Veal said that he knew nothing about them.

In Roanoke and other communities it was reported that the bricklayers' union had admitted a few colored men, but the bars were up generally against skilled workers.

MAR 2 2 1941

Mr. Veal said that his office simply was following the Hercules policy, and regarded that policy as necessary because there could be no provision for segregating workers by race on the job.

Mingle Freely

During the dedication exercises on Friday, colored and white workers from Virginia, West Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and other States mingled freely, and seemed too friendly in many instances.

MAR 2 2 1941

Workers of both races as well as officials said that there had been no exhibition of racial animosity.

The plant has two mess halls, one seating 200 and the other 600, although most men bring their lunches to the job.

Mess hall employees said that few colored workers had come there for meals, and that the few were served without discrimination except in one case, where a chauffeur ate in the kitchen after being insulted.

Segregation is the rule on the special buses and trains running to the plant except the one from Bluefield, which begins its trip in West Virginia.

MAR 2 2 1941

Persons riding even the commercial buses from Bluefield to Roanoke encounter little segregation, and white passengers are more likely to be seated in the rear than are colored passengers.

150 Carpenters Hired On Project

MAR 28 1941

Thru work of Arnold Walker, industrial Secty. of the Urban League, and Richard R. Jefferson, 150 colored carpenters are being placed on jobs this week at Fort Leonard Wood army training camp under construction near Newburgh, Mo. The men will be enrolled in the AFL Carpenters' Union on payment of $25 initiation fee. They will be paid $1 an hour and time and a half for overtime, and earn a total of about $62 a week each. In an account of their achievement, Mr. Walker told the following report.

Get Promise.

"On March 18th, by authorization of Mr. John T. Clark, Executive Secretary of the St. Louis Urban League, and the Industrial Committee of the Urban League, Richard R. Jefferson and I traveled by car 106 miles to Rolla, Mo., and from there to the entrance of the camp 36 miles farther into the Ozarks. After some red-tape, we were able to contact Mr. L. H. Huntley, Project Manager for the contractors at Fort Leonard Wood. Mr. Huntley explained thoroughly the policy of non-discrimination followed by the contractors as well as the hiring of 48 Negro carpenters by the authorization of Major Frank Reed, who is the Construction Quartermaster for the project. The following points were agreed upon:

"1) That more skilled men would be given employment if representatives from the Urban League would arrange housing accommodations.

2) That if this matter could be ironed out, the Missouri Employment Service in St. Louis would be given the preference in the number of jobs to be filled.

3) An order would be placed for carpenters first, and unskilled men at a later date as needed.

Meet Needs.

MAR 28 1941

"Later, talked with Louis Boone, Negro foreman and leader of the first carpenters placed, and Tom McFarland, business agent of the A. F. of L. carpenters union. We decided that accommodations were the problem standing in the way of employment, as the union expressed a willingness to take in all men requisitioned by the camp who are capable regardless of color, and who can meet their obligations as union men.

"Later, at Lebanon, Mo., talked with Mr. Clark Jones, principal of the Negro school; Miss Adelle Langford, teacher, and was told of a Mr. L. H. McFields in Jefferson City, who would be interested in providing accommodations for workers at Camp Leonard Wood. After a long distance call to Mr. McFields, arranging for a conference at midnight, we contacted several citizens of the community, including Rev. Warden, who explained the congested condition in which the 120 men now employed were living, as a result of having been thrust upon a population of 200 Negro families.

"In Jefferson City, made arrangements with Mr. McFields to visit his camp at Osage Beach, Mo. Discussed accommodations and cost. It was finally agreed that Mr. McFields could accommodate from 150 to 200 in his beautiful resort on the lake, if the men brought their own bedding and a cot, plus $25.00 to cover their needs until their first pay day, two weeks from the date they started work.

"Later, called Major Reed, long distance, arranging conference with him and Mr. Huntley. Carried Mr. McFields with us, and there agreed upon the following points:

"1) 150 Negro carpenters to be requisitioned at once.

2) Mr. McFields' accommodations would be the official residence of the Negro workers to be employed.

3) That a minimum of $25.00 would be required of each person hired, to defray his expenses for food and lodging, $8.00 per week; $5.00 down on union initiation fee, and the remainder for transportation.

MAR 28 1941

"Later, contacted Paul Ray, manager of the Missouri Employment Service at Rolla, and arranged for St. Louis quota of 55 carpenters out of the 150 requisitioned, leaving 50 for men on the scene, poorly housed and not working, and 45 for St. Joseph, Kansas City and outstate. Was informed 24 hours later that requisition was through, and to start sending men. All orders unfilled for St. Louis men by March 27, 1941, will be filled by outstate Negro men."

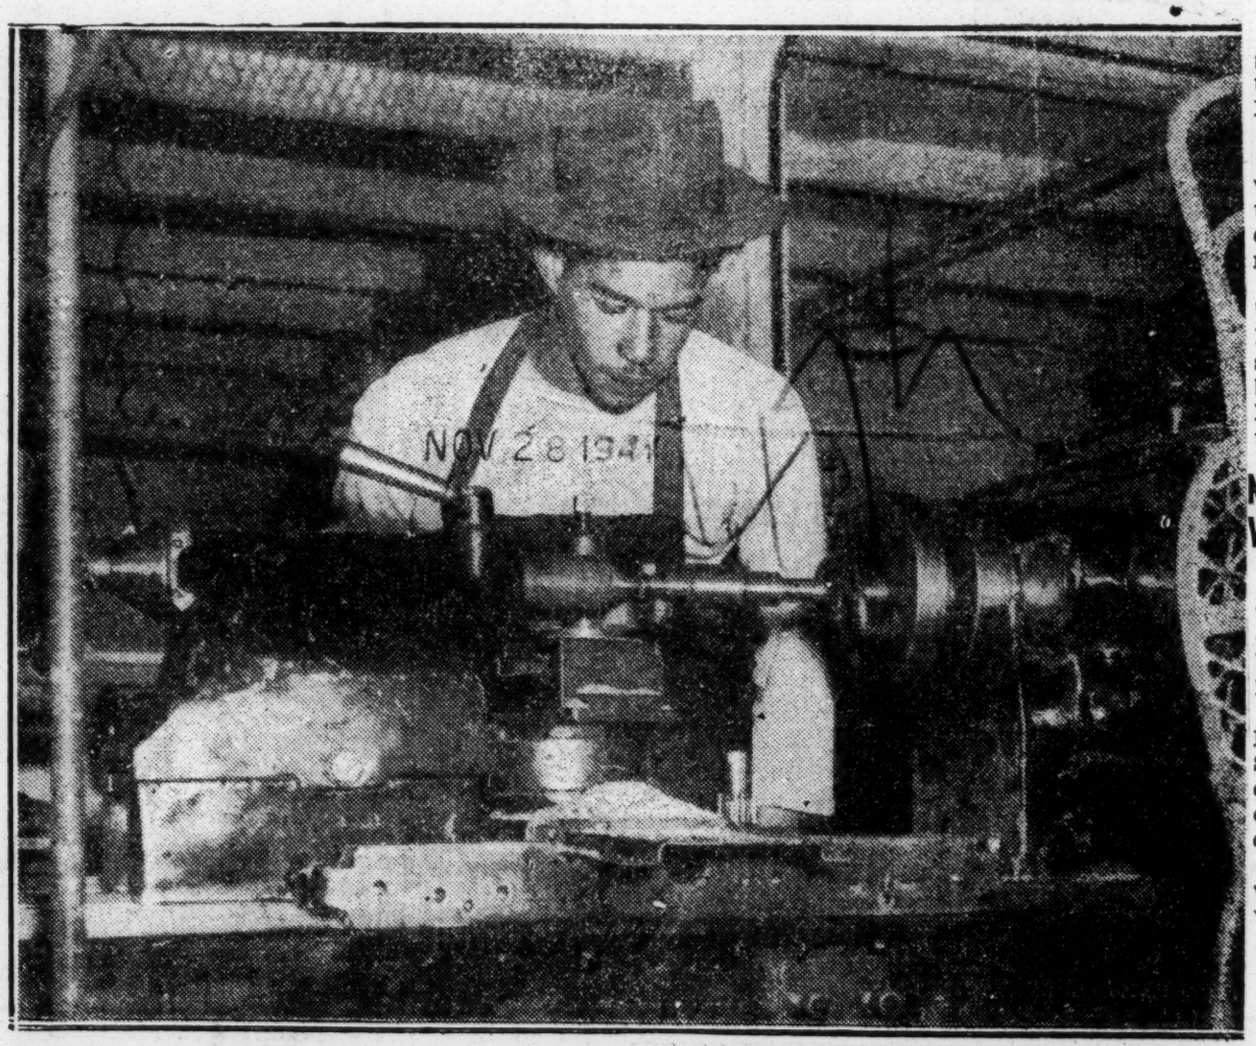
Pennsylvania NYA Shows The Way



More and more Negro youth are being employed in defense industries in Pennsylvania. This employment is largely being made possible through the efforts of the National Youth Administration to give Negro youth work experience in a machine and metal work. Pictured here is a Negro youth operating a metal lathe in the recently opened NYA Resident Defense Center at South Park, near Pittsburgh, Pa. According to Isaac C. Sutton, State Youth Administrator, plans are being made to increase the opportunities being afforded Negro youth.

NEGRO WORKERS AND THE DEFENSE PROGRAM

World War 1 and the years of 1916, 1917 and 1918 offer invaluable lessons, experiences, and maybe answers to some of the perplexing questions which face our government in its attempt to utilize all available workers for defense production.

Back in 1918, the Secretary of Labor, like Sidney Hillman has done under OPM, appointed Dr. George E. Haynes, director of Negro economics. Haynes had been a teacher of sociology and economics at Fisk university and had served as one of the secretaries of the National Urban League. Field staffs were appointed and trained to work in various parts of the country to handle problems affecting Negro workers in the war labor program.

Besides the problem of introducing large numbers of Negroes into Northern industries besides white workers for the first time, the mass movement of Negroes from the South and the inevitable maladjustment in living conditions confronting the newscomers to the North, was an added problem.

There were serious difficulties and readjustments in southern agricultural regions due to the sudden departure of thousands of tenant and farm laborers as well as the readjustments in industrial operations in the South due to the same cuases.

The records of the last war will show that Negroes responded patriotically to the cry to beat the Kaiser and his widespread submarie warfare. In shipyards under the Emergency Fleet Cooporation, in four ship building district—The Atlantic, the Gulf Coats and the Great Lakes, 24,648 Negroes were employed during the war. 20.7 per cent of them were in skilled occupations as carpenters, caulkers, chippers, blacksmiths, drillers, riveters, reamers and bolters.

Negroes worked in 46 of the 55 separate shipbuilding occupations listed during the war period. Not only did Negroe senter the skilled and semiskilled occupations during the war in large numbers, but they remained in these occupations in larger proportions than in the unskilled occupations.

NEGROES SET RECORD IN WAR INDUSTRIES

Some workers made record performances in war industries. Edward Burwell, a Negro pile-driving captain with a Negro crew of 11 men broke the world's record for driving piles in a Philadelphia shipyard.

A gang of Negro riveters working at Sparrows Point, Maryland, in the plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation broke the world's record for driving rivets. One of the gang, Charles Knight, drove 4,875 three-quarter inch rivets in a 9-hour day.

Because of the great labor shortage during the war Negro women entered industrial pursuits previously closed to them. Especially in the North, Negro women worked in arsenals and munition plants mixing chemics, loading shells, making gas masks and stitching wings and aeroplanes.

In meat packing, stockyards and tanneries Negro women were engaged in all processes except the actual slaughtering and inspection of meats. They trimmed, sorted and graded different parts of the carcasses; separated and cleaned the viscera, cured and canned the meats; and cleaned, cured and tanned the hides for leather goods. Negro women worked in government departments and in private industrial and commercial plants having contracts to make clothing for the armed forces.

In factories they made bolts, nuts, screws, and metal buckets. In rubber plants they made automobile tires, tubes, rubber boots, hot water bottles, and hospital goods. In transportation they cleaned cars, and acted as switchmen and flagmen. Negro women worked in laundries on power machines, in tobacco factories, in hotels and in clerical jobs in the government service as well as in industrial and commercial plants.

NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM

Despite increasing shortages of skilled and semi-skilled workers, many employers are still refusing to hire available Negro workers for production work. This failure to use Negro workers is not only delaying actual production but it is making it necessary for employers to recruit labor from distant points. These are the serious consequences of importing labor—an increase in an already acute housing shortage and increase in labor turnover. Vocational training facilities in some communities where there are shortages of white applicants stand idle because authorities will not train Negroes who are being refused employment.

A report, "NEGRO WORKERS AND THE NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM," issued recently by the Bureau of Employment Security, Washington, D. C., warns, "If employers hire Negroes as the defense program develops instead of waiting until a general shortage compels them to use Negro labor, it will do much to facilitate the orderly and efficient mobilization of the labor force, to speed production, and minimize the undesriable and costly effects of discrimination."

This report puts the blame for failure to use Negro labor in defense and other industries upon the employers and the traditional prejudice of workers unaccustomed to working with Negroes.

The available labor supply which can be drawn upon by industry is further reduced explains the restrictions against persons of German and Italian descent, naturalized citizens, persons of certain religious denominations, Mexicans, Orientals, aliens, and older workers.

Negroes constitute from one-third to one-half of the unemployed labor reserve in the South and from one-fourth to one-third of most employable reserve in many northern urban-industrial areas. Continued failure to hire or train Negroes for defense production is likely to intensify an increasingly serious labor problem.

Workers Back On Job After Strike

NOV 28 1941

Men Walked Out After Negro Was Hired As Skilled Worker

By BARBEE W. DURHAM

COLUMBUS, O.—(ANP) — Peace has apparently been restored at the Curtiss-Wright plant here which a week ago saw a one-day strike started by 67 tool and die workers, members of the CIO union, in protest against the employment of a Negro on a skilled job.

When the matter was brought to the attention of national CIO officials meeting in Detroit last week, the local representing Carl Copeland, organizer for the United Auto Workers whose actions precipitated the strike, was relieved of his duties. The anti-discrimination policy of the CIO was reaffirmed by both Ted Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio CIO council, and Richard F. Frankensteen, national aviation director of the UAW

Between 3,400 and 3,500 persons are employed by Curtiss-Wright. When the strike began last Tuesday only 67 tool and die makers walked but next day the number had grown to between 300 and 400.

Just prior to the initial walkout, a workers' committee and plant officials failed to come to an agreement over the controversy. It was then that J. A. Williams, general manager of the plant, read over the plant's loud speaker system, a statement of the company's policy. The statement said in part, "all citizens, regardless of race, color, or creed, or national origin can share in the defense program," and that it was government policy to see that no discrimination occurred. At the conference, Factory Manager Stanley I. Vaughn told the workers' committee that "the company would employ whom they want and intended to follow this procedure in the future."

NOV 28 1941

GIVES STAND

He further stated that anyone not wanting to working could "take his tool box and leave the plant." Immediately following his statement over the youd speaker system J. A. Williams issued a statement which recalled and reviewed President Roosevelt's executive order. He closed the statement with, "It is the policy of managemtn of the Columbus plant of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation to conform to the content of this executive order as issued."

Charging that the issue was not whether or not Negroes would be allowed to work at the plant but that how many and where they would work was the issue involved, Carl Copeland, organizer for the UAW, stated "In Washington the Negroes work in separate places, and in the army and navy they are segregated, so why not here? I have traveled all over this country and I've never seen a colored tool and dye maker."

Another speaker for the workers stated that the plant was behind in its schedule and was using the racial controversy to throw blame on labor. The workers also pointed out that they questioned the sincerity of the plant officials in regard to the President's executive order, because there are no Negro workers in the office of the plant where more than 1,200 are employed.

CONTACT FEPC

Seeing the vast implications of the situation, the militant Vanguard league very swiftly moved on to the scene of action. Within a short time after the situation became known, league officials had contacted the FEPC in Washington, requesting a field man, and the CIO convention in Detroit where Ted F. Silvey of the Ohio CIO council, was in attendance. The letter to Mr. Silvey read in part:

"The statement issued by Carl Copeland astounds us. It is totally incompetible with all the democratic principles so often referred to and espoused by the CIO during the past few years. We feel that it could only have come from an incompetent official."

Immediately upon receipt of the communication, Mr. Silvey called Frank C. Shearer, president of the Vanguard league, by long distance phone, expressing indignation over the action of Copeland, and reassuring the league of his stand on the matter. In a wire Friday morning, Richard Frankensteen stated that Copeland had expressed a policy which is inconsistent with that of the CIO. Mr. Frankensteen emphatically reiterated the CIO policy which is defenitely and explicitly against discrimination and segregation of workers on national defense or other jobs. Copeland has been stripped of all authority and has been replaced with Nicholas Dragon of Akron, Ohio, according to Frankensteen.

REAFFIRM POSITION

The CIO convention in Detroit Friday resolved "that the CIO reaffirm the position which it has consistently maintained from the beginning in opposition to any and all forms of discrimination between one worker and another based upo considerations of race, creed, color, or nationality."

Mr. Frankensteen in his wire also said: "White workers understand that racial or other discrimination has been used in the past by employers to divide workers in an attempt to weaken collective bargaining strength. The action of the Curtiss-Wright management in the first-time placement of a Negro on a job in skilled labor without consultation of the workers has precipitated an unhappy situation. This is an outstanding example of the need for consultation between management and workers through the collective bargaining, which can only be effective through labor unions."

NOV 28 1941

In connection with the Curtiss-Wright incident, many Columbus workers are questioning the recent activities of the Vanguard league in regard to the encouraging of Negroes to join labor unions. Only last week the league sponsored a meeting where 250 workers at the Timkin Roller Bearing Company joined the CIO. League officials in issuing a statement said, "We are willing to attribute the unfortunate statement issued by Copeland to incompetent leadership in the CIO. We we see no reason why our plans to encourage Negro workers to join unions cannot be continued. However, in regard to the recent incident, all of the important facts might not be known at this ime."

The Curtiss-Wright plant has placed five or six Negroes in skilled labor classification, and has about fifty others in the maintenance department. According to statements issued by company officials, all of the Negro workers continued at their assigned jobs during the walkout.

THE DEFENSE TRAINING PROGRAM

E. WASHINGTON RHODES, publisher of the Philadelphia Tribune, reports that the Pennsylvania State Temporary Commission on the Condition of the Urban Colored Population found that although 3,500 colored youths of the Keystone State began training under the defense program to prepare to take their places as workers in the skilled trades, only 106 have completed their courses. And Mr. Rhodes observes that there is something fundamentally wrong with a situation of that kind.

DEC 6 - 1941

Perhaps the following letter, forwarded us by Dr. John W. Davis of West Virginia State College, will explain in part just what is wrong with the national defense training program—

"Several months ago I, a former student and NYA resident project enrolees, completed three hundred and fifty hours of aircraft sheet metal and riveting. I received a rating card which proves that I was above the average in all phases of work and study covered. I applied for employment at the West Virginia Employment Agency, Charleston, and although many white trainees have received employment, I am still waiting . . . (signed) John A. Jones."

The reason Negro youth is no longer interested in the defense training program and are dropping out of the classes, is that they are discovering that it's almost impossible for them to get jobs working at the trades for which they are preparing. This is true not only in Pennsylvania and West Virginia but also in New York.

DEC 6 - 1941

The placement department of the various defense training schools, the labor unions which refuse to admit Negro members, as well as the defense industries which will not employ Negroes are just as much responsible for this situation as the discouraged students who drop out.

DEC 6 - 1941

Let the federal government begin its nondiscrimination policy by seeing to it that all graduates from these defense training schools be placed in jobs on the merit system, without regard to race or color, and we are sure that more of our youth will continue these courses, and others will be encouraged to take them up.

Time To Hire Negro Workers

DEC 5 - 1941

CHARLESTON, S. C. —(SNS) Brigadier - General Holmes B Spring, State director of Selective Service, speaks in praise worthy terms of the service some 120 Negroes in South Carolina and perhaps twice as many others who, since November of 1940 have given unstintingly of their time, and in some instances money, to help draftees complete and return their questionnaires. General Spring lauds the services as being of great value to the state and nation. And the Negroes have acted as all Americans should.

But it is hardly known that these Negro assistants, some 120 or 200 of them, have not received a penny for their services. The service was more or less volunteer. The paid jobs in the State Selective Service setup have been reserved for white citizens. But no explanation is given as to why Negroes are not employed.

Each year Negroes in South Carolina serve readily and support the Red Cross, the Tuberculosis Association, the Community Chest and a large number of other charitable organizations. But, almost to about four or five exceptions, these organizations steer clear of employing Negroes. So has it been with the Selective Service in the State, not a charitable institution as it is party to the biggest national expenditures in the history of the country.

There should be some Negro workers in the State Selective Service setup and the Lighthouse and Informer proposes that Mr. Seymour Carroll of Columbia, one of those who sat in on the first appointments of Negro Advisory Boards and, who conferred with General Spring the other day, take the news to headquarters. The Negroes have never once failed to respond when called upon. They will not now but they shall view with disgust and concern the reserving of the salaried spots for the white people and the "free" spots for themselves. That, in itself, is a very poor method of effecting unity and full cooperation among all people. National defense and war are not confined to any one American race. It affects all the people.

OCT 9 1941

Job Campaign Won; Management Announces Success of Plan

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.—Victory in the organization's long campaign, which began in December, 1940, to open up skilled and semi-skilled jobs for Negroes at the Glenn L. Martin aircraft factory, largest plane company in the East, has been won, officials of the National Negro Congress announced today.

The announcement was made following an official statement of the company's program for integrating Negroes in airplane production read to Congress officials over the telephone by W. D. Siemon, personnel director. Mr. Siemon revealed that the company is now employing "the first group of Negroes for work in actual aircraft production at the plant," Saul M. Purdue, Negro teacher, who formerly taught in the Baltimore Colored Vocational School, is now "employed by the company for supervision and personnel contact work," the statement said.

Although he said he did not know the number, the personnel director indicated that more than 100 Negro workers are now employed at the plant in the production department, that another group will shortly finish their training, and that more than three hundred are being interviewed by the Baltimore branch of the U. S. Embassy Service, in preparation for training.

Appreciation of the assistance rendered by the National Negro Congress in "supplying valuable information during the formulation of our plant," was expressed by President Martin.

Congress officials praised the aircraft company president for resolutely proving to other defense industrialists that the way can be opened for making use of the tremendous reserve of Negro labor power that is lying idle, waiting to be used to speed up industrial defense production.

"The Glenn L. Martin Company has plugged another big hole in our country's defense wall," they said, "by showing industrialists that thousands of willing Negro workers, are waiting to lend their great strength to increase our country's defense production and that this great bolstering arm must be put to work now, if we are to win the all-out battle against Hitler fascism."

The company official statement of its program for integrating Negro workers into the plant, said:

"The Glenn L. Martin Company today announced the employment of the first group of Negroes for work in actual aircraft production. These men were trained by the National Defense Training classes conducted in the Baltimore Vocational schools, in cooperation with the U. S. Employment Service. Some months ago the company prepared a definite program for the employment of Negroes in preparation for increased production.

"In commenting on this program, Mr. Glenn L. Martin, stated: 'I am delighted to make this announcement. It has long been my belief that such an important steps should be made. Only after a thorough study of the many problems involved, a well considered plan and program had been laid down. This we have done.

"I believe that this plan will form a firm foundation for the future, and that our care and consideration in its formation is the best guarantee of its eventual success."

Glenn Martin Changes Policy On Personnel

Director Says Baltimore Firm Will Meet Issue With Fairness

BALTIMORE (Special) —Reports that 100 Negroes have been hired by the Glenn L. Martin Company here is being hailed throughout the country as one of the most significant incidents in the vast program designed to integrate Negroes into our national defense machine. The men are said to have been put to work in the sheet metal and riveting divisions.

The Martin Company had been under fire for quite some time because of its discrimination policy, and officials of OPM have been active for the past four months trying to forced a change. The efforts gained force after President Roosevelt issued his executive order prohibiting discrimination in defense production plants in distributing jobs on a basis of race or color.

Change in its employment policy puts the Martin Company in the same class with Lockheed Vega, Curtiss-Wright, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aeronautical Corp., and some half dozen other large aircraft firms that have altered their policies through the activity of OPM and Negro organizations.

"Hiring of the first group of Negroes represents only the beginning of the expanding employment opportunities for Negroes in the Glenn Martin plant," said Robert C. Weaver of OPM. He based his statement on a letter he received from Daniel W. Siemon, personnel director of Glenn Martin on August 23. It read, in part:

"Our hope is that the thought and consideration given to the matter of our people will enable us to do a good job, and will be known as the company that met this problem squarely and with fairness to everyone.

"This employment will not be a mere gesture of calling these people production employes and actually using them as laborers. We plan to see Negroes on production jobs, working under white supervision and giving them the same opportunity for training and induction in our services as our white employes."

Setting Back Labor

The declaration by President Roosevelt in his Navy Day radio speech last Monday night that "Defense production must not be hampered by the selfish obstruction of a small but dangerous minority of labor leaders who are a menace to a true cause of labor itself, as well as to the nation as a whole" drew a vigorous applause. This statement pretty well expresses the sentiment of most Americans, including the working men, because most Americans are loyal.

Now, according to press reports, there are some 50,000 coal miners on strike in certain mines owned by the larger steel industries. They are on strike at the call of John L. Lewis, boss of the mine workers. It takes coal to make steel which is vital to our national defense and we cannot see how a strike of 50,000 workers in such an important industry can fail to endanger our national security.

As far as we can see, this strike was not called because of a difference between workers and employers over wages or working conditions, but merely over the issue of an "open" or a "closed shop". Reports state that nearly 95 percent of the miners are members of Lewis' union, but this is not enough. Lewis wants the employers to "force" non-union members to come into the union and pay their dues regularly or be discharged. This position is unreasonable and untenable. Employees should have the right to work without having to pay tribute to anyone or any union. The question of membership in a labor union should be left to the individual worker.

John L. Lewis' current strike may well prove the beginning of legislation to curb unwarranted strikes called by power-mad irresponsible labor leaders. There is already a proposal in congress to imprison labor leaders and participants in defense industry strikes called unnecessarily.

The Watchtower

By Roy Wilkins

IF we colored people are not careful, we are going to be retreating, blushing and embarrassed, in our fight for defense jobs. We have raised a great howl, and rightfullyso. We have been unjustly treated and we have protested in no uncertain terms. We have made so much noise that our lamentations have reached the inner offices of the White House and Mr. Roosevelt has been persuaded to issue various and sundry directives and suggestions looking to a correction of the major injustices.

Roy Wilkins

We want jobs in this defense whirlgig. With billion-dollar plums falling from the Washington tree, we want some prosperity to fall on us.

But the blunt truth is that we have not at present the trained persons to fill the jobs that are already available.

In New Jersey, according to dispatches to the Amsterdam Star-News, there is a great shortage of Negro skilled workmen. Several of the large aviation plants there have changed their policies and called for skilled Negro workmen. Bendix, Curtiss-Wright, and United Aircraft are asking for men.

Negroes Getting Breaks

Repoits from Connecticut and Massachusetts are the same. Plants which formerly passed over Negroes are now willing to hire them. For four jobs in the Springfield, Mass., armory, a Negro agency had to send to Boston for men to fill them.

These plants, in effect, are now calling the bluff of Negroes on defense employment. We said we wanted jobs. We said we had men who were capable of filling them. We said the only reason they could not get jobs was race prejudice. Some of the bars have been let down. It is now up to us.

Of course the bars are not all the way down. Of course all plants have not changed their policies. There are still many places where a black man, no matter how well-equipped, cannot get a job. But the steel ring is loosening. Some openings are being made. We are being called upon to deliver.

In this state of affairs we find a curious circumstance among many of our potential skilled workers. They won't take the training courses offered them. All the way from New York to Denver and return this writer found some disturbing angles to the situation. In Pittsburgh I was told very few Negroes could be persuaded to try and enter the training courses. In St. Louis and Kansas City the story was the same. In Denver there was rejoicing because the machine gun bullet plant about to open had stated in advance that there would be no discrimination on account of color.

It would be a mistake to give the impression that all training courses are open to Negroes. The state directors of WPA in both New Jersey and Oklahoma have come out with bold statements that they are restricting the training of Negroes in their defense classes because industry will not hire them. In Detroit there is the situation where they have been trained, but are still finding it difficult to get jobs.

Negroes ought to realize that this emergency is a heaven-sent opportunity to get training in skills that they never had access to before. It is not merely a question of getting training to get a job now or next year. It is a question of getting training which will be good long after Hitler is defeated. If our race does as it should do we will have several hundred thousand skilled workers trained in this emergency—perhaps a million. The demand for workers now is just a part of what it will be when factories reach their peak production in 1942.

The President has done about as much as he can do. The door has been cracked. Some industries have opened up. We can now lay the foundation for fifty years of greater progress and economic security. The question is: Will we have sense enough to do so?

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

WHAT MEASURES?

Now that a third appeal from the President of the United States has been met only by arrogant chest-thumping on the part of John L. Lewis, the American people are awake.

OCT 29 1941

It is not enough, however, to simply shout for action, as has Senator Byrd who says that the President can end strikes in defense industries by "taking firm measures."

What firm measures?

Here is a serious problem, one which must be handled with skill and foresight.

On the street corner in Montgomery or on the floor of the U. S. Senate, it is simple enough to say, "Stand the so-and-so up against a wall and shoot him." Or to keep shouting for "action."

Now is the time to consider specific measures which will eliminate the possibility of a single individual stopping the production of steel at a time when the future of this nation is dependent upon steel.

First of all it must be realized that there is no law which covers the refusal of John L. Lewis to call off a strike in the captive coal mines; nor is there any law which can force him to cooperate in the nation's defense effort.

Nor is there any law under which men can be forced to dig coal.

In Birmingham the striking miners are even foregoing the formality of a picket line, so thoroughly is the U. M. W. A. controlled by the hierarchy of officialdom which is answerable to Lewis. The so-called "guarantee of a man's right to work" would be meaningless under present circumstances. Moreover, in the commercial mines, and to almost the same extent in the captive mines, any member can be fined and disciplined—and even denied the opportunity to work—under a duly-signed contract.

Perhaps Senator Byrd has in mind calling out the U. S. Army to operate the nation's mines. At times The Advertiser has thought the solution as simple as that. Easy as it seems on paper, such a remedy is not realistic.

OCT 29 1941

Any solution must take into account, not only the immediate situation, but the affect upon the nation as a whole. Obviously to operate the nation's defense productive system under Army orders and Army bayonets would be a colossal flop. The morale of the American workman is an intangible, but vital concern. Workmen can be forced to stand at machines, but they cannot be forced to maximum production, as the experience of Germany has proved.

Practical minds will try to foresee what effects Senator Byrd's "firm measures" will have upon the labor movement in this country. What immediate affects would it have, for instance, upon the C. I. O. convention scheduled to be held in November?

There are some 5,000,000 men who are members of the C. I. O. At the convention there will be a contest between those who are supporting the course of Sidney Hillman, who has put aside all personal interests, to support the nation's interests, and the forces of John L. Lewis, whose personal interests and personal hatreds, are more important than the nation's interests.

To make a martyr of John L. Lewis on the eve of the C. I. O. convention would be like throwing the rabbit in the briar patch. The reaction would be a wave of sympathy which would return Lewis to his position as the most powerful labor leader in the nation.

There are those who would dismiss the importance of the C. I. O. with a wave of the hand. But 5,000,000 workmen cannot be dismissed that simply.

OCT 29 1941

Finally, any solution must be one which will be satisfactory, and work, for the duration of the emergency. No nation which was forced to the expediency of using its army to force the operation of its plants can present a unified, effective front to the world.

There are measures which have been suggested that might be effective. They will not satisfy those who think that halting strikes is as simple as shouting for "firm measures" without having any clear idea of what they are talking about.

There is, for instance, the system in effect in Canada. There, before going out on any strike in a defense industry, employes in a plant participate in a government-sponsored secret ballot. A majority must vote for the strike before it can be called.

It is certainly a fair thing to ask that no strike be called unless supported voluntarily by a majority vote. In many instances no such opportunity is given the workmen in American plants today.

It has been suggested also that Congress pass a measure forbidding the requirement of union membership in any defense industry as a preliminary to employment. Such a measure would certainly frighten the wits out of those labor leaders who, having failed to get voluntary membership, demand a closed shop as a guarantee of union membership.

Another suggestion is compulsory arbitration of labor disputes. Government-sponsored systems of arbitration have been successful in such countries as Australia.

Perhaps a solution may be found in one or more of these measures, or in plans that have not yet been widely publicized. At any rate the important thing is that now that public sentiment is aroused, attention must be turned to specific measures. Mere rage cannot solve any problem.

Every American, regardless of his personal interests, must realize that where steel production can be stopped, a minority group has the veto power over any foreign policy that might be agreed upon by the majority.

CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES IN U. S. NAVY YARDS

DEC 27 1941

A RELEASE from Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro employment and training branch of the Labor Division of the OPM, calls attention to the fact that there is now a total of 13,401 Negro technical, skilled and unskilled workers employed in Unied States Navy Yards, as of September 30, 1941, representing an increase of more than 100 percent of the previous year. Dr. Weaver points out that the percentage of Negro workers increased from 6.03 percent in 1940 to 8.08 percent in September of this year. Most of the Negroes employed in government Navy Yards are in the Norfolk Navy Yard at Portsmouth, Va., in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the Philadelphia Navy Yard, the Washington Navy Yard and at the Charleston, S. C., Navy Yard.

An analysis of the occupational distribution of Negro workers in the United States Navy Yards revealed an increase in clerical and technical workers from 118 to 205; skilled workers from 1,003 to 1,839; helpers and classified laborers from 4,153 to 10,822; and apprentices from 103 to 205. Common laborers decreased from 557 to 330 during the twelve months period.

While these are commendable gains for the year, the figures given cannot tell the whole story except by comparing them with the percentage of increases of all labor in these yards for the same period. Unless the Negro gains are in the same ratio as those of the whole group. We have nothing to brag about.

And until the Navy Department changes its policy with regards to Negro recruits to the fighting personnel, we still think that this department of our government is handicapping itself by a hidebound and reactionary policy.

Kindelberger Yields, But We—

There is need for an awakening. Our group whose opportunity has been limited, still crouches in the resignation of defeat, though its shackles are broken and it is free to hitch its wagon to a star. Some Moses must inspire us to turn our backs on the fleshpots and set out for the promised land, or we will be buried under an avalanche of shame and deemed unfit for opportunity.

NOV 28 1941

Within the week three men have come to this community. One of them, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, made the plan that resulted in the President's executive order that industries producing defense products must not discriminate. The other two, Messrs. Milton P. Webster and Earl B. Dickerson, are members of the Fair Employment Practices committee, directly charged with informing employers of this order and seeing how it is obeyed.

Before these two FEP members of ours came Kindelberger, the once defiant president of North American Aviation who said that he would not employ Negroes in making aircraft even if they were skilled. But how changed with time! Kindelberger promised the FEPC in the hearing on the West Coast that he would obey the order. Better still, he has already started! Negroes are being employed at North American's plant in Kansas City, Kansas!

With that the picture, these three men come to Kansas City, to us who turned out by the thousands to make a demand for work. When Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, New York took a holiday and millions greeted him to celebrate it. This drive that opened up work for Negroes is a greater feat than flying the Atlantic. By uniting that way, Negroes did the impossible. But with countless jobs now awaiting our asking, the community lets the required training go begging and the jobs be lost.

We starve in a land of plenty, and it is our fault. Those older folk who made up the truly marvelous crowd that assembled in the Municipal Auditorium on the Missouri side and in Memorial Hall on the Kansas side, have done only part of their work. They must loose another drive, this time to make our youth prepare and go to defense training schools, then go after the jobs which are theirs when trained. The idea of young men working for the customary Negro wage of $10 a week, when with the least effort they can make as much in a day is a shame!

It is our shame! If we do not do better, it will be said that we do not try because we are afraid!

Curtiss-Wright To Hire More Negroes

DEC 17 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (ANP) — Qualified Negro workers will be integrated into all divisions of the Columbus, O., plant of the Curtiss-Wright corporation including the clerical and engineering staffs, it was revealed here this week, as a result of the settlement of a November 18 walkout in that aircraft factory.

The terms of the settlement of the walkout, which occurred after a Negro youth had been employed in the tool and die department, were reported to Sidney Hillman, associate director general of OPM, by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro employment and training branch of the labor division of OPM.

According to Dr. Weaver, agreement on the following points were reached in conferences between management, a committee representing Curtiss-Wright workers and a representative of the labor relations branch of OPM.

The Negro youth was employed in the tool and die division of the Columbus plant on Nov. 18 following a committment made earlier by management to OPM. Shortly after the assignment was made, 67 white workers walked out. Approximately 300 additional workers did not report for duty on the next shift.

The labor relations branch of OPM immediately dispatched C. W. Mitzel, special representative for Columbus, to confer with management and representatives of workers in the plant. As a result of these conferences, the strikers returned to work and the Negro youth was retained at his job in the tool and die department.

Representative Reiterates Company's Policy to Hire Only "Caucasians"—Turns Down Skilled Ex-Soldier—Illinois Emergency Service Aids Unfair Policy.

DEC 1 3 1941

CHICAGO, Dec. 11—(ANP)—The Boeing Aircraft company, Seattle, holders of extensive contracts to manufacture aircraft for the Army and Navy, "has no place for Negro workers" in its plant, Saturday, their representative sent here to interview workers because of a scarcity of available labor in the Northwest, flatly refused the application of Robert L. Weaver, a qualified engineering draftsman of this city, because of his color, or because of his race for Mr. Weaver is quite as light in complexion as the swarthy Boeing representative who turned him down.

Weaver, who completed his year's enlistment with the 184th field artillery November 24, receiving a transfer to inactive service, was advised by the Michigan Employment service to whom he applied for work that Boeing was in need of men and was sending a representative to Chicago December 4, to hire all available skilled men. Weaver's discharge papers cite the fact that he is a draftsman and grade him as excellent.

ONLY CAUCASIANS COULD BE HIRED

When Weaver kept an appointment made with the Boeing representative, whose name was Jones, at the Illinois Employment service offices at 20 North Wacker Drive, Jones was quite cordial until he asked Weaver his race and was told "American Negro." Jones reddened and then produced a book which said that "only Caucasians could be hired."

DEC 1 3 1941

Much criticism has been heard in Illinois because Director of Illinois Department of Labor Murphy and Director of Illinois Employment service, Peter Swanish, have consistently accepted the orders of concerns holding defense contracts which specify race instead of refusing them as the New York Employment service does. Critics contend this state and federal agency thus makes itself a party to the discrimination practices of the Boeing company.

Weaver went to the office of Ald. Earl Dickerson, a member of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, and registered his complaint. However, thus far in the Chicago area, few results have been noticed as a result of this procedure.

GENERAL RULES FOR ALL MESS ATTENDANTS

1. Bathe daily and keep clean at all times.
2. Wash your hands with soap and water before preparing or serving any food, before handling dishes or silverware, and before putting ice in water cooler, or in any glass, or service dish. Use hand brush for cleaning finger-nails. Keep nails clean.
3. Dry your hands, not on a dish towel, but on clean hand towel provided for that purpose.
4. Wear clean, white jackets or "jumpers" (when either blue or white is uniform of the day) when serving at table or standing watch.
5. Do no loud talking in or about pantry or mess room.
6. Do not lounge or loaf about in pantry or mess room.
7. Never carry a dish towel or dishcloth about your neck, over your shoulder, in your pocket, or anywhere else about your person. Never take dish towels from pantry except to wash them, dry them, or sun them.
8. If the bell rings when both watch boy and relief boy are absent from pantry, any boy there should answer the bell and will be expected to do so at once. If more than one boy is present, the one whose turn at standing watch comes earliest shall answer the bell.
9. All mess attendants except the watch boy actually on watch shall wash paint-work and shine bright work at the required times.
10. All mess attendants except watch boy and relief boy (then on duty) will help set tables and will clear tables for each meal.
11. All mess attendants aboard, except pantry boy, will serve the table at all meals and will be in the mess room during the entire meal.

MEN AREN'T FREE IF THEY CAN'T CHANGE THE RULES WHEN THEY CHANGE THEIR MINDS

By Robert Ouillen

Since the New Deal has made organized labor the greatest unofficial power in America, the laws that sanction or regulate it have become the legitimate concern of every person in the country. Any power that can affect everybody is everybody's business.

One mystery that baffles and disturbs the innocent bystander is the failure of officials to reveal the life expectancy of a bargaining agent. Is it immortal, or does something happen to it?

Consider, for example, the recent trouble at Kearny and the happenings that preceded it.

In February of last year the Kearny shipbuilding yard employed a little over 6,000 men. These held an election, as the law provided, to choose a bargaining agent, and the CIO got a majority of the votes cast. Thus the CIO union, or its officers, obtained power to make contracts for all of the workers.

But a few months later, defense orders began to pour in and the Kearny plant expanded and employed 12,000 more men. Then arose the question: "If the CIO was chosen as bargaining agent by a majority of the 6,000 workers, and that was lawful and fair, is it also agent for these 12,000 who had no voice in selecting it? If law and custom sanction majority rule, can 6,000 rule 12,000?"

The question was answered in August of this year. Although the workers had a new government-engineered contract, which gave them a pay increase and bound them not to strike for two years, the CIO members met and voted to strike. This time they demanded a contract which would bind their employer to fire any union man who tried to drop out or failed to pay his dues.

The decision to strike was made by voice vote, in a theater having a seating capacity of 4,000. Maybe there were 2,000 standees. In any case, the union claimed only 6,000 members, and these made the decision. A majority of the 6,000 decided that 12,000 others should quit their jobs—like it or not—and the decision was binding and according to law, for the CIO members are still the legal bargaining agent for all who work at the shipyard.

Now the question is this. Does the CIO, once the majority but now a minority, remain the bargaining agent forever? If the union loses all but three members, do these three men continue to be the bargaining agent, with power to make contracts for the other 17,997?

The law does not require another election when conditions and opinions change. Is it the intent of the law to elect a bargaining agent once for all, and maintain it in power whether it represents the majority or a minority?

TNT Plant W[illegible]chmen

Dr. N. B. Callier Discusses Type of Men Who Should Be Used

To the Editor of The Chattanooga Times:

Chattanooga is considered one of the most beautiful cities in America and is envied by most cities for its scenery and history; it is blessed with its Lookout Mountain which holds communion with the clouds, and its Tennessee River which makes its tortuous and winding way around the foot of it that gives us the beautiful Moccasin Bend which delights the hearts of those who are fortunate enough to visit here; it is also blessed with the historic Missionary Ridge and charming Cameron Hill and thrilling Ruby Falls; it is a city that furnishes information to the readers of American history where the battles above the clouds were fought and the men of blue and gray bedecked and enriched its soil by human blood.

So just as Chattanooga has already made history she is again about to make history by the building of this herculean TNT plant. It is said that this huge plant that will be built near Chattanooga will have many watchtowers with watchmen placed in them so as to detect anyone who comes to do harm to this National Defense Project which is so indispensable to our City, to our State, to our National Government and to our Democracy.

Until recent months America has been careless and negligent as to the type of men that it put in responsible places, so as a result of this negligence our Country has suffered no little from incendiary fires, explosions of various kinds, sabotage, acts of espionage and other subversive activities, and the ones who perpetrated these acts have not been apprehended.

Let us not be as careless in selecting ones to watch from the towers of this plant as we have been in the past in placing men whose duty it was to protect our Government. It will take men of honesty and integrity to build this huge plant and it will take men whose honesty and integrity are as good as if not better to oversee it and protect it.

I hope that Chattanooga will be a little fairer in recommending men to the Government as watchmen for this plant, if they are to be placed there by recommendations of the people of Chattanooga, than it was when it took over the Tennessee Electric Power Company and the Chattanooga Electric Power Board displaced Negro linemen who had been with the Commonwealth and Southern for a number of years, evidently giving efficient service, and putting in their place those of racial preference. It stands to reason that a company like the Commonwealth and Southern would not have kept these Negro linemen all those years that they served had they not been worthy of their hire, and it has not been proved that the change made by the Chattanooga Power Board has been an advantageous one.

Many times when we are seeking efficiency it cannot always be determined by the color of the skin nor the texture of the hair. Ever since 1619 when the Dutch man-o'-war brought African slaves to America to be sold we have not found Negroes disloyal and unfair to their Government. My father, who was 96 years of age when he passed, and my mother, who lived the same number of years, used to delight my heart when I was a child by telling me the thrilling stories of slavery.

My father told me the duties that were assigned to him when a young man in his twenties to safeguard the home of his master, his wife and family while his master was fighting at the front to keep him in fetters and chains. He told the story many times how he fought the Yankees who were trying to free them because of their attempt to invade his master's home. My father and other Negroes served as a watchdog for their masters' homes and some of them gave their lives in defense of it. The Negro has always proved himself a true American, despite the injustices and maltreatment to which he is victim. He has never faltered in the performance of his duty to his Government that has been shown in every State or National crisis where he has been called upon to serve. He has always said like the good servant Job said of his master, "though he slays me, yet will I trust him."

I listened to Mr. Martin Dies from my state of Texas in his eloquent speech on un-Americanism and un-American activities and how profuse he was in praise of the Negro who he said was seldom obsessed nor victimized by the ones who are engaged in subversive activities against our American Government. I also listened to him when he mentioned how many people of other races and nationalities in the high brackets of social, intellectual, national and financial prominence who supported these agents whose purpose it was to destroy the very foundation stone upon which our Government rests.

Our Government, our State, our City and all concerned would not make a mistake during these days of stress and strain in seeking the most honest and truest American to be placed wherever our American life is endangered. Denying the Negro a share of these places will never show you his intrinsic worth to his Government. George Washington Carver, of Tuskegee, who has found more than 100 by-products from the humble peanut could never have done this had not someone given him a chance. And who knows that if some Negro boy had been given a chance in the military and naval service and in many other places from which he is barred he would not have discovered as many things to destroy the Axis Powers and all concerned as Carver has found in the peanut to conserve and preserve human life.

Nineteen Negro Carpenters Get Work On Tulsa Bomber Plant After Long Fight

TULSA, Okla.—Nineteen Negro carpenters are now working at $1.25 an hour on the construction of the Douglas Aircraft bomber plant here as a direct result of nearly a year's fight in their behalf by the Tulsa branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Attorney Amos T. Hall, president of the branch, took the initiative in the fight.

Before they could get the jobs, the carpenters had to form a separate union because they were barred from membership in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Local 943, A. F. of L., on account of their race. They were granted a charter for Local 816 in January of this year and admitted to all the rights and privileges of members of the general body.

But they still had to meet the racial prejudice in the company's employment policy. On August 13 the carpenters applied for work at the plant and were told to return on August 18. When they appeared on that date, D. D. Layton, employment manager, told them their union cards were not good. Later the same day when they reappeared with their charter, Layton said that because of the difference in intiation fees between the white and colored locals, the members of Local 816 could not be put to work.

But the regional organizer of the union ruled that the reason was not a valid one, and complaints were made to the construction company and the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice. After an investigation by the FEPC, the company hired the men who started to work last week. Mr. Hall, local NAACP branch president also announced that Negroes are being trained to do all types of work in the bomber plant and that the Spartan Aircraft company also located here. Spartan stated that it has no objection to hiring Negroes if they are qualified.

Discrimination and Negroes

Times-Dispatch, Richmond, Va.
[Roanoke Times]

THE RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH declares that although an average of around 300 white carpenters are employed continuously on the construction of the Army supply depot on the Bellwood tract below Richmond, "not one Negro carpenter has been employed there." Since the work has been in progress for more than two months, having been started the middle of September, it is impossible to escape the conclusion that Negro carpenters are not wanted on that particular job and that none are going to be employed.

According to THE TIMES-DISPATCH, there are 41 Negro carpenters in the recently organized Negro carpenters' union in Richmond who are available at any time for work on the Bellwood project. The fact that none but white carpenters have been given employment on the project, despite the availability of more than twoscore Negro carpenters, indicates that the Army is not following the policy inaugurated by the OPM, at the President's behest, of seeing that Negro labor receives its due share of work on defense projects.

Somebody might do well to ask the President about this at one of his press conferences when he returns to the White House from his vacation trip to Georgia. Presumably the evident discrimination against Negro labor on the Army project at Bellwood is not in accordance with the President's expressed wishes that Negro workmen be given proper opportunity for jobs on defense projects.

Col. Gourdin Heads 372nd Inf. Regiment

DEC 20 1941

FT. DIX, N.J.—Lt. Col. Ned Gourdin, former assistant district attorney of Boston and one-time Harvard University athlete, assumed command of the 372nd Infantry Regiment here on Monday replacing Col. Howard C. Gilbert in a shakeup which affected five other persons.

Col. Gilbert has been temporarily transferred to the division headquarters. Others moved with him are Lt. Col. Alexander Davis, executive officer; Capt. St. Elmo Henderson, adjutant, and Capt. James Burrell. DEC 20 1941

Major E. Barrow was named executive officer to Lt. Col. Gourdin. The orders for change were issued on Saturday by the Second Army Corps.

AFRO Predicted Shift

In an AFRO story under date of November 29, it was predicted that Lieutenant Colonel Gourdin would be appointed commander of the post to succeed Col. Gilbert, who is expected to retire in the near future because he is several years over the active age limit.

Under normal military procedure, Lt. Col. Davis would have received the commander's post, but, as the AFRO story pointed out three weeks ago, this procedure was not followed.

Col. Davis was a corporal during the World War. He joined the Massachusetts unit when still a youth and rose through the ranks, being elevated to his present rank following his graduation from the Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The new commander of the 372nd, Lieutenant Colonel Gourdin, is a colorful figure in athletics and public life, and was former world's broad-jumping champion and Olympic star.

13,401 of Race Found In Yards

DEC 20 1941

Survey Is Made Public By Dr. R. C. Weaver

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Negro civilian employment in United States Navy yards increased by more than one-hundred per cent during the year ending September 30, 1941, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro employment and Training Branch of the Labor Division of O. P. M., announced last week.

According to survey made public by Dr. Weaver, a total of 13,401 Negro technical, skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers were employed in United States Navy Yards on September 30, 1941, as compared to 5,934 such workers on September 30, 1940. During the same period, the percentage of Negro workers in these yards increased from 6.03 per cent to 8.08 per cent of the total employment figures.

Dr. Weaver revealed the Navy Yard employment figures in urging Negro youths to enroll in national defense training classes as a means of obtaining skilled employment.

DEFENSE TRAINING GRADUATES HIRED

"Navy Yards throughout the country," he said, "are hiring thousands of defense training graduates as helpers in various skilled categories. These trainees, who are chosen without regard to race, creed, color or national origin, are given credit for six months experience and are hired at starting wages of $4.72 to $5.12 a day. These youths are then upgraded as rapidly as possible into skilled mechanics." DEC 20 1941

The greatest increase in Negro employment occurred in two Southern navy yards, the survey indicated. The Charleston Navy Yard at Charleston, South Carolina increased its number of Negro employees from 453 to 1,802 during the one year period, with the percentage to the total number of employees rising from 9.8 per cent to 17.7 per cent.

At the same time, Negro employment in the Norfolk Navy Yard at Portsmouth, Virginia increased from 2,111 in September, 1940 to 5,426 on September 30, 1941. Officials at the Norfolk Navy Yard stated in November that their Negro employees now exceed 6,000 and comprise more than twenty-three per cent of total employment.

TO HIRE 250 EACH MONTH

"Scores of the Negro youths now employed in this yard are graduates of defense training courses," Dr. Weaver stated. "Officials there have indicated that they will employ an estimated 250 additional Negro workers each month for the next year. They have also indicated that defense training graduates in all categories will be given every consideration."

Applications for employment as "trainee helpers" in any United States Navy Yard may be obtained at any first or second class post office. Defense training graduates should file a certificate of training, obtained from their training center, with their applications. DEC 20 1941

Dr. Weaver pointed out that Negroes are employed in a variety of skills in the navy yards. The survey revealed, for instance, that Negroes are employed in thirty-seven different crafts in both the Philadelphia and Norfolk Navy Yards. Negroes are now working in twenty-eight different crafts in the New York Navy Yard and eighteen separate categories in the Washington Navy Yard. Twenty-three Negro machinists were working on September 30, 1941 at the Norfolk Navy Yard, nineteen at New York, seventeen at Washington, and sixteen in the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

An analysis of the occupational distribution of Negro workers in the United States Navy Yards revealed an increase in clerical and technical workers from 118 to 205; skilled workers, 1,003 to 1,839; helpers and classified laborers, 4,153 to 10,822, and apprentices, 103 to 205. Negro common laborers decreased from 557 to 330 during the twelve month period.

OUR SOLDIERS IN DUTCH GUIANA; TEXAS RANGERS IN TRINIDAD

The Navy Department, faced with labor riots in Trinidad, B.W.I., where it is erecting an air and naval base, has recruited fifteen Texas Rangers.

The trouble arises because United States wages are so much higher than local scales on the islands that the competition is terrific. DEC 13 1941

The navy has sent down Texas Rangers on the theory that they know how to handle colored people.

The same idea was in the minds of the War Department when it sent all white troops to occupy Dutch Guiana in order to protect United States mines there.

Nobody asked us, but we can give both War and Navy Departments some sound advice.

They will get along better with colored people in South America and the British West Indies if colored Americans are sent to deal with them.

In Trinidad, all the natives are colored. Of Dutch Guiana's 180,000 inhabitants, 17,000 are Africans, 3,000 Indians, 66,000 are colored, 42,000 East Indians, 34,000 Malayans or Javanese, and 2,000 are white.

Sending the average white trooper into a colored country is as diplomatic as sending a German army into a Jewish colony, and as effective.

How Pitifully Blind We Are

DEC 19 1941

A year ago there were about fifty Negro workers employed in aircraft manufacture. Today there are more than two thousand. Today with Japan attacking, it is as certain as anything on earth that every man capable of doing anything toward plane construction will be used. Yet, out in California where the Washington authorities made special provision for 200 of us to be trained, only 79 responded. Here in Kansas City where training was opened long ago and some Negro trainees have been given defense jobs, our young men do not avail themselves of what is theirs freely. DEC 19 1941

Had we not seen how rumor demoralized the peoples of northern Europe and made them easy victims of Nazi invaders, we would feel more keenly the stupid hopelessness that Negroes are showing in this day of unprecedented industrial opportunity.

100% Increase Noted In Navy Yard Jobs For Race

DEC 17 1941

Negro Carpenters Wait

ALTHOUGH an average of around 300 white carpenters are employed continuously on the construction of the Army supply depot on the Bellwood tract below Richmond, not one Negro carpenter has been employed there. Work has been in progress since the middle of September, and there still seems to be no immediate prospect that colored carpenters will get any consideration on this important job.

The large construction projects at Camp Lee have been completed, and while an average of 20 carpenters finally got a total of five weeks' work there, this is to be compared with the 1,800 white carpenters who were on the job at Camp Lee for many months.

There are 41 Negro carpenters in the recently organized Negro carpenters' union here who are available at any time for work on the Bellwood project. Yet they are not given jobs there, and as months go by, prospects of their getting work seem to be fading. Since this is an Army contract, it is not under the control of OPM, which has special machinery for seeing that Negro labor gets its due share of work on defense projects. Why aren't there similar regulations covering Army contracts?

A Negro bricklayers' union has just been chartered in Richmond, with the hope on the part of the membership that it will be given a share in the widespread construction work now going forward in connection with the armament program. Will the colored bricklayers be treated any more justly than the colored carpenters?

U. S. CAMP CONTRACTOR HIRES SIXTY WORKERS

MAR 8 1941

ATLANTA, Ga., March 6.—Sixty families in Atlanta are receiving $480 a day as the result of a recent investigation of employment conditions at Camp Gordon located at Chamblee, Ga., by representatives of the Atlanta Urban League and the Division of Labor Supply, National Defense Advisory Commission.

The investigation was started after numerous complaints were received by the League stating that Negro skilled workers were not being employed on a fair basis at the Camp. While more than 1400 white carpenters, not a single Negro carpenter had been hired. This was due in part to the unwillingness of white union carpenters to allow Negro union men to work on the job. Similarly, Negro painters and bricklayers were unable to secure work in spite of all their attempts.

MAR 8 1941

CONTRACTOR CONSENTS

A meeting was called by the Urban League on February 10, for the purpose of airing these grievances and a visit was made to the Camp the following day by Clarence R. Johnson, consultant to the Division of Labor Supply, W. Y. Bell, executive secretary of the League, and Miss Almita Robinson, assistant to the Executive.

The conference with Camp officials was arranged during which the contractor stated that he had no desire to discriminate but had not hired Negro workers because they were not referred by the white unions. He agreed to hire 40 Negro carpenters immediately and said that he could take on between 10 and 15 painters.

The following Monday, February 17, forty carpenters appeared at the camp, and were employed. Another call was made for 10 additional carptenters. Nine Negro painter were hired during the same week. The rate of pay is $1.00 an hour, with time and half for overtime.

One difficulty met in attempting to meet the number of skilled workers which the Camp requires is the fact that so few skilled Negro workers are in the union movement and thus are not employed.

Atlanta Urban League Gets Defense Jobs For Negroes At Camp Gordon

Skilled Negroes Are Not In Union

MAR 8 1941

ATLANTA.—(ANP)—Sixty Negro families in Atlanta are receiving $480 a day as the result of a recent investigation of employment conditions at Camp Gordon located at Chamblee, Ga., by representatives of the Atlanta Urban League and the division of labor supply, National Defense Advisory committee.

The investigation was started after numerous complaints were received by the league stating that Negro skilled workers were not being employed on a fair basis at the camp. While more than 1,400 white carpenters were working, not a single Negro carpenter had been hired. This was due in part to the unwillingness of white union carpenters to allow Negro union men to work on the job. He agreed to hire 40 Negro carpenters immediately and said that he could take on between 10 and 15 painters.

The following Monday, Feb. 17, 0 carpenters appeared at the amp and were employed. Another all was made for 10 aadditional arpenters. Nine Negro painters were hired during the same week. The rate of pay is $1 per hour, ith time and half for overtime.

One difficulty met in attempting to meet the number of skilled workers which the camp requires is the fact that so few skilled Negro workers are in the union movement and thus are not employed. Since most of the work at the camp requires carpenters, it was estimated that a larger number of Negro skilled workers could be placed if they were available.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that as a result of the work of the Atlanta Urban league the Negro community will receive in three weeks more than $7,000 in the form of wages, an amount larger than the league's total budget for the entire year. On a strictly financial basis, therefore, it is estimated that the league will more than have justified its yearly budget within this three week's space and it is estimated that the work at the camp will continue for several months, returning many thousands of dollars to the Negroes of Atlanta.

RACE MAY GET MORE DEFENSE POSITIONS

MAR 8 1941

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6—(ANP)—The appointment of several Negroes to important posts in the near future, to do with the problems of placement and training in national defense, is reported in the plans of the advisory commission to the Council of National Defense, following the urging of such a group of appointments by persons close to the administration.

Throughout the long series of discussions and meetings on what the Negro could do and how he could best serve the country in the crisis, was the ever present bugaboo of the economic setup, whereby the Negro would not benefit through the vast amount of money being expended for defense projects.

Although the plan is as yet nebulous, there is every reason to believe that in the very near future there will be several appointments made whereby Negroes in various States where there is a heavy labor problem will have representation to work out their problems and see that they receive fair play.

RACE PREJUDICE AND CLASS HATRED SHOULD NOT EXIST IN BUILDING A STRONG NATIONAL DEFENSE: GOVERNMENT'S ATTITUDE TOWARD LABOR UNIONS WEAKENING MORALE.

AUG

Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt gave America a very sound piece of advice when he told the leaders of industry and labor in a meeting at Philadelphia this week to "Let racial prejudice fly out of the window in tackling the job of building America's defense."

AS I SEE IT despite the seriousness of the World's crisis which is threatening the very existence of democracy in the World including America, there is more class and race prejudice in this country today than at any time in its history.

America must practice tolerance more than any other nation if she is to remain the arsenal of democracy. It was race and class prejudice in Germany that started this mighty world conflict. A study will show that Hitler first started a campaign of race hatred against the Jews. In his speeches and writings he denounced them. As he gained power laws were passed depriving the Jews of their property rights and privileges such as holding offices and voting. Job discrimination was practiced against them. They were not permitted to do certain types of work. The Jews were driven from their businesses. Educators were driven from universities and laboratories.

After Hitler's attack on the Jews, he started hatred against the Czechs, Poles, Norwegians, French, Greeks and English. Now he is pouring out his venom of hate on the Russians with the most ruthless slaughter witnessed by civilized man. Pretty soon his hate will come to America and to all in the Western Hemisphere who will not bow to his submission.

At one time in America the Negro was practically the only citizen deprived of his rights and privileges because of racial prejudice. But now, a great majority of white citizens in the southern states are denied the right of suffrage through the poll tax system which was originally instituted to disfranchise the Negro.

LABOR UNIONS first started discriminatory practices against the Negro on account of race. They barred Negroes from vocational training and guidance for fear they would become competitors of white workers. Now, these same unions have practically taken control of American industries and white workers can't work unless they get permission from the unions, not even in national defense.

Unions constitute the greatest threat to American democracy. They are America's number one problem. Despite the cries from our government and from abroad for more war equipment, planes, guns, tanks, more food and clothes to save democracy, labor unions are turning a deaf ear to these appeals and closing factories one after another, with strikes and violence.

The Negro, who has been most loyal to his government in every crisis, is denied a chance to work on account of color. White workers too are feeling this iron hand of tyranny. Honest workers are victims of racketeering, union disputes and government regualtions which give the unions power to operate. Many little and big businesses will soon have to close their doors because of unreasonable demands.

Employers have lost their privilege of saying who shall work and who shall not work in their industries. Everywhere there is hate and prejudice between employers and employes. Unions are holding meetings daily denouncing employers with rancor and bitterness. Likewise, some employers are expressing dislike for a certain type of labor leader. All of this spread from prejudice toward one group of people.

AS I SEE IT, race hatred is spreading almost as rapidly in America as it is in Europe. There is hate existing between the rich and poor. Anti-Jewish sentiment is increasing fast in this country. Hate for a certain class of Germans and Italians is on the increase.

If America fails in its practice of tolerance and the true practice of democracy, AS I SEE IT, we might as well tear up our National Defense program as a medium of safety. Tolerance is the very corner-stone upon which America rests.

AS I SEE IT, our government is much to blame for the weakening of the morale of its people. It has in a large measure, encouraged class hatred. Men rose to power in politics in the present administration by preaching class hatred, prejudicing labor against capital, enacting laws and regulations for the benefit of labor against the security in industries. Now labor is giving the government a headache with strikes in defense industries. Workers who are earning sometimes as much as $21 per day are permitted to strike and tie up defense industries while other men are drafted into the army as soldiers for $21 per month. If these men were let out of the army to enter private life, they could not return to the jobs they once held, or get work in defense industries unless they were able to secure a permit from a union, a private organization.

The slowfulness of our President and Congress in correcting these evils is weakening the morale of the citizens. They are losing confidence in the government to protect them against graft and greed.

In speaking or race prejudice, the Negro can do a lot in America to curb this evil. They are too quick to believe their shortcomings, hardships and besetments are due to race prejudice. Too many leaders are capitalizing on this idea among our people. Too many Negroes in this country are prejudiced to the extent that they sometimes carelessly remark "it does not matter if Hitler wins." Those who say this are wrong. What hurts America will certainly affect the Negro.

AUG 1941

AS I SEE IT, the following poem, author unknown, is applicable to the Hitler campaign for World domination and to those who practice Race Prejudice and Class Hatred:

RACE PREJUDICE

I am RACE PREJUDICE, that's my name;
I deceived and killed to achieve my fame.
I have drunk the blood of innocent souls,
I have buried men's bones beneath fertile soil.
I tie the hands of cowardly men,
I clip the tongues of would-be-friends,
I close men's ears to humanity's cry,
I shut their eyes as truth passes by.
I am the demon that devours mankind,
I have no scruples, I'm always unkind.
I advocate hate and I stir up strife,
I rob human beings of the beauty of life.
I am race prejudice and I am proud,
I have my army which cries aloud.
I trample right beneath my feet,
I am RACE PREJUDICE and will not retreat.

N.Y. Governor Holds Review of 369th CA

AUG 2 1941

FORT ONTARIO, N. Y. — New York's Governor Lehman recently made his fourteenth yearly visit to his favorite National Guard organization now federalized as the 369th Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft Regiment and stationed here.

The all-colored 369th was assigned to this post on January 22, and is made up of 1,641 men, seventy-one officers, and one warrant officer, largely from the State of New York. More than 75 per cent of them are high school graduates.

Former Inf. Regiment

Converted from infantry to an anti-aircraft regiment on August 1, 1940, the regiment's commanding officer is Colonel C. M. Hooper, New York attorney and a Fordham graduate.

A provisional battalion commanded by Lieut. Col. M. D. Moses saluted the Governor with four rifles and nineteen guns. His inspection followed to the accompaniment of "The General's March."

Following the review, Colonel Hooper learned that the regiment had been ordered to Pine Camp, Watertown, Conn., for bivouac and general inspection.

Fort Begun in 1722

The oldest garrisoned fort in the United States and one from which no shot has been fired at an enemy, erection of Fort Ontario was begun in 1722 at the direction of the governor of the colony of New York and completed by the English in 1755. A service unit of 200 white soldiers is permanently stationed here.

Transformation Of 349th One Of Army's Outstanding Jobs

MAR 15 1941

Soldiers At Fort Sill, Okla., Learning New Technical Methods of Warfare—Progress Hailed by U. S. Army Officials.

FORT SILL, Okla., Mar. 13—When the Army started cleaning house about two years ago, one of the first regiments to get a good going over was the 349th Field Artillery, stationed at Fort Sill, Okla. Using their effective military broom, Army officials started at the very bottom and cleaned up and threw out all of the old antique debris left over from the last war. Today the 349th is taking on a new luster and stands out as one of the finest units in Uncle Sam's big defense machine.

The transformation of the 349th Field Artillery is a fascinating story of Army efficiency. For in less than no time at all, the famous Negro regiment that used to operate the old French 75's in the last war, has become a modern, up-to-date unit, groomed under expert direction and tutoring for that which may soon come—the blitzkrieg!

When and if this potential enemy appears on the horizon, it will be greeted this time by the 155-millimeter gun . . manned by sharpshooting Negro troops of the 349th. Mention of this highly technical gun is significant, in that it exemplifies the advance of U. S. Army technique probably better than anything else, insofar as Negro soldiers are concerned. Manning such technical isntruments in the past by Negro troops has been taboo.

MAR 15 1941

The fact that the Army has released some of the strings which once bound Negro troops to a life of hard, uninteresting manual labor, and is permitting its darker-hued fighters to take a fling in the technical divisions, is bringing exceptional results. And, while the job at Fort Sill is far from completion, the Army is already confident that if the "big test" should come soon, the 349th will hold its own against any invading force.

Last August, Fort Sill came to life once again when hundreds of raw, ambitious young recruits began pouring in for training under the famous 349th Field Artillery banner. Military experts agreed that it takes at least a year in which to train recruits for the strenuous army life. However, the progress made by the majority of these recruits indicates that the experts may be extending the time limit considerably. According to Col. A. L. P. Sands, commanding officer, the 349th has proven to be an exceptional regiment.

The most important duty of an artillery unit in modern war is accuracy under fire. The 349th spends a great part of its time learning how to hit targets at distant points. The new 155-mm hurls a shell a distance of ten miles. The men operating these guns must know what they are doing.

All phases of drill in artillery teamwork have been covered at Fort Sill, under the direction of experts. Everything from single gun squads and their simple movements to the complicated operations of the regiment as an entire unit has been stressed. Fitting into these complex movements is the important job. Teamwork is necessary to efficiently accomplish these highly difficult operations of modern warfare. Accuracy and speed come only after long hours of patient and intense drill. As the men understand the fundamentals, more and more of the operations are combined, until finally there is complete unity.

This new technique of speed and complete unity, designed to cope with the famed blitzkrieg, is the most important part of the 349th's transformation. It is, in fact, what the Army deems necessary for the desired results. And it is the notable difference between the training given at Fort Sill before the first war and the one threatening.

While members of the 349th are learning this new technique of army theory, they manage to squeeze in a little recreation activity durnig off-hours. The 349th has its own theater, poolroom and other recreational facilities.

Race Youth Seems Headed For Better Days In Navy

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (SNS)— Chance for the colored man to advance in the United States Navy received new emphasis here this week when it was learned that in one of the few instances recorded anywhere in the country, a colored man is serving as a recruiting officer for the U. S. Naval forces.

The U. S. Navy Recruiting Substation here (main post office building, Madison and Front), has disclosed that a Memphis colored youth, M. L. Stewart, is now stationed at the local office, and is serving in the capacity of a member of the recruiting personnel.

Young Stewart received the distinction of being one of the first colored men to receive such a position last November, when he went to Nashville, to re-enlist in the Navy. He had just completed a five-year period in the Navy, but the lure of the salt water drew him back. It was while seeking this re-enlistment that he was detailed to aid in the recruiting of other colored boys in the Memphis area.

High in his enthusiasm for his new work, Stewart was equally enthusiastic in his praise of life in the Navy. He pointed out that he had received definite and useful training which would be of use to him in civilian life. He also pointed out the advantages of travel which he has enjoyed, naming such places as France, Italy, Cuba, Gibraltar, Malta, the Philippines, other far places of the earth which he has visited.

When asked what is his reaction now that the Navy is bearing the brunt of the work in the current war, young Stewart replied that 'since every American will be expected to do his duty in the present war, no greater opportunity for doing a great service can be found than that offered in the Navy..it provides a great chance for colored men to show that they are fit to serve in any branch of the service that may call for them."

Stewart, and his brother, Joseph, both enlisted in the Navy when recruiting first began here. Joseph has since been drafted into the Army, after he left the Navy. They are native Memphians, and have made their homes with their parents at 1701 Karr Avenue. Stewart joined the Navy in 1932, and his brother in 1938. They are both well-known in the Binghamton community.

DISCHARGED FROM NAVY FOR PROTEST

Philadelphian Refuses To Retain Position As Mess Attendant

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Because he protested being placed in the messmen division of the U. S. Navy, David Wooten, 21, of this city was discharged from service, it was reported to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People this week.

Wooten reported to Atty. Theodore Spaulding, president of the Philadelphia N.A.A.C.P., that he enlisted in the navy June 18 at Crockett, Texas.

Wooten claims he wanted to get into the aviation mechanical department and was told by the enlisting officer that he could get into any department and would be permitted to take 16 weeks scholastic training. He advised the officer, Wooten says, that he understood Negroes were taken only as mess attendants, but he was assured this was not true.

In spite of his, the Philadelphia youth states that he was placed as a third class mess attendant. He protested, and after three weeks of service, according to the report, he was asked if he was dissatisfied.

When he stated that he was, an officer is said to have told him that "they did not want anyone in the navy who was dissatisfied, and the only thing he could do would be to give him a discharge."

Wooten's discharge was honorable and was signed by H. A. McClure.

THE NAVY AND THE DRAFT

The United States Navy, facing the greatest test in its history, is getting 4,000 less recruits each month than it needs, so Secretary Knox tells reporters that "we may have to resort to selectees."

If this becomes necessary, the Navy will have to drop its long-established jim-crow policy and assign Negroes to all branches of the service, because the Selective Service Act specifically asserts that there shall be no discrimination because of color in its administration.

If the Navy intends to take draftees and abide by the Selective Service Act, it will have to stop confining Negroes to the mess department and let them serve in any and every capacity for which they are fitted.

Of course the Navy could easily get the 4,000 more recruits it needs monthly by voluntary enlistment if it threw open enlistment in all branches of the service to all qualified Americans.

That would not only be sensible but in accordance with the ideals for which we are now fighting.

Commander Tells Negroes That 'Mess Attendant' Is Important As Other Posts

Has No Answer Why Other Posts Are Not Open; Refers Listeners to D. C.

A group of Kansas City, Kansas, citizens heard Commander Hope of the United States Navy Recruiting Office tell them about the positions of Negroes in the Navy last Sunday afternoon at the Trinity AME church. Although it has been known by all Negroes that there is no advancement in the Navy beyond that of Mess Attendant, the audience listened and asked questions that he could not answer he would write to Washington for the answers.

At the end of the Commander's talk he asked that the members of the audience ask questions concerning his talk and any other information that they wished to know.

L. M. Norwood asked the question, "Why Negro boys were not given other jobs in the Navy other than mess attendants?" He brought out the point that the reason our boys didn't consider joining the Navy was because they are not given a fare chance to make use of the other talents that they have. This question the Commander did not answer. Still more and more questions were asked by numerous persons of the audience concerning this same question, and at the end of the meeting there was still no answer for this question. Although the Commander did say that any ment "I expected to hear all of these questions. I didn't expect to come to this meeting and not be put on the spot. This is the first Negro audience that I have ever had the privilege of speaking to."

Dr. A. Porter Davis made the statement "We did not intend to put the Commander on the spot, but what we want to know is why the Negro boy is not given the same privileges that the white boy is given?" "We intend to fight this thing out to the finish and we intend to be patriotic Americans while we do it."

Mr. M. C. Spears, instructor of Commercial subjects at Sumner high school and recently named one of the committee of six to emerge on a comprehensive program of civilian defense for this city, gave the response to the Commander's talk.

Just before the end of the meeting Dr. Davis made the statement that this was a good thing for the Commander and the audience, in that the Commander had learned how the Negro felt about the treatment that he has been receiving, and that he could convey this message to Washington. Also the members of the audience had the chance to let off some of the steam that for a long time they have wanted to explode. The meeting was ended with remarks and benediction by Rev. Martin, pastor of the Trinity AME church.

Rev. James A. Moore, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist church, made this statement, "We understand that the Commander has little or no power to change these problems, but he can write to Washington and let the Government know just how the Negro feels about the way that they are deprived of their liberties."

Other persons in the audience asked numerous questions concerning the Commander's talk, some of these were: "Is the United States Navy affiliated with the American Federation of Labor?" The answer to this question was, "No". Still more and more questions were fired at the Commander, although he did not answer any of them.

Appoint Negro Assistant Naval Recruiting Officer

DEC 19 1941

Marcellus Hughes, 1031 Freeman avenue, Kansas City, Kansas, has been appointed assistant recruiting officer working out of the Naval Recruiting station at 9th and Grand in Kansas City, Missouri. The announcement of Hughes' appointment was made by Commander Holt this week.

Having spent four years in the United States Navy as a mess attendant, Hughes received his honorable discharge on January 1, 1941. He also received a good conduct medal and pin from the navy department which has proved very helpful to him in securing work at the Santa Fe Railroad where he has been employed since his discharge from the navy.

According to Hughes the duties of his office will be to enlist Negro men in the navy and give other necessary information with regard to their enlistment in this branch of the armed forces. He may be contacted at the Naval Recruiting Station or at his home, 1031 Freeman. DEC 1 1941

It is felt that this appointment may be the outgrowth of contacts and a meeting instigated by Mr. C. A. Lannagan with reference to Negroes in the naval service. At a meeting Sunday afternoon at Trinity AME church, officers from the naval recruiting station were present and spoke in regard to this phase of the service. C. A. Lannagan with the assistance of other groups and individuals called this meeting.

Navy Restricts With One Hand, Opens Door With The Other

Five Thousand Race Workers Have Found Jobs in Many Yards, According to Weaver—Apprentice System Open to Beginners.

MAR 8 1941

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6—(ANP)—One of the strangest paradoxes of the national defense program, but one which may increase the ranks of skilled Negro workers and add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the race's annual income, was uncovered here this week in connection with the U. S. Navy Department.

In an exclusive interview with Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant in the division of the labor supply of the NDAC, it was revealed.

Although the navy restricts its Negro recruits to the rank of messmen, the U. S. Navy department itself maintains no barriers to the enrollment and subsequent employment of Negro apprentices in its 10 U. S. Navy yards. In fact, its certification regulations for mechanical workers at navy yards make more difficult the practice of racial discrimination by appointing officers than do the rules established by federal and civil service commissions.

As a result of these regulations, 103 Negro apprentices were being trained in shipyard apprentice schools on October 1, 1940, and more than 5,000 Negro skilled and semi-skilled workers were employed in U. S. Navy Yards in Boston; Charleston, S. C.; Mare Island, Calif.; Brooklyn; Norfolk; Philadelphia; Portsmouth, N. H.; Puget Sound, Wash.; and Washington, D. C.

NAVY CONDUCTS SURVEY AT WEAVER'S REQUEST

The exact number of Negro employes in the U. S. Navy Yards, 118 profesional and technical workers; 1003 artisans, skilled workers; 4,153 semi-skilled workers; 557 unskilled workers and 103 apprentices was released to the ANP by Dr. Weaver from a survey which the navy department conducted at his request last September.

Pointing out that apprentices receive 36 cents per hour while in training and that the more than 5,000 Negro skilled and semi-skilled workers are receiving wages ranging from $4.42 to more than $10 a day, Dr. Weaver urged Negro youths to apply for ship yard apprentice positions at their local U. S. district Civil Service offices.

"Any youth who places high on the apprentice list in the semi-annual examinations has an excellent chance for appointment to an opening in one of the yards." Dr. Weaver said, "for the appointing officers of the apprentice schools are not permitted to choose one from the three highest. He must appoint the highest eligible."

Admiral Says Negroes Too Intelligent; Would Dominate Navy Service If Enlisted

NMA Committee Confers With Knox and Officials Secretary Says 'Putting Colored In Navy Like Putting Them In Hell'

Considers Black Marines

FEB 1 1941 FEB 1 1941

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—If Negroes were to be allowed to enlist in the navy, they would be "so superior in general to the whites who enlist that they would have to be made petty officers, and the enlisted whites would not stand for this," Admiral C. W. Nimitz told a special committee from the National Medical Association which recently met here with high rank-ing naval officers on the color bar in this branch of the armed forces.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox reiterated earlier state-ments that it would be "impracti-cal' 'to use the two races in the navy, declaring that "putting Negroes in the navy would be like putting them in hell,' 'but did promise to seriously consider using Negro marines for the new naval bases in the West Indies, leased from Great Britain.

Those taking part in the conference were Dr. Roscoe C. Giles, Chicago, chairman of the liasion committee; Dr. William McKinley Thomas, Leavenworth, Kan., chairman of the executive board; Dr. G. Hamilton Francis, Norfolk, Va., speaker for the house of delegates; Dr. W. G. Alexander, Orange, N. J., chairman, commission on public health, all of the N. M. A.; and Sec'y. Knox, Admiral Nimitz, Capt. Clark, and a captain in charge of naval enlistments, representing the U. S. Navy. Details of the conference, held on January 8, were not revealed until this week.

Dr. Giles, after calling attention to Col. Knox's statement that a Negro could be enlisted only as a messman, pointed to the race's record as gunners under Admiral Perry, Admiral Farragut and at Saratoga and Manila in the Spanish-American war. He termed the official attitude an "innovation" and said it was presented in speeches and radio broadcasts by liberal whites and Negroes, pointing to the growing sense of justice even in the South and the liberal record of the Knox newspaper, the Chicago Daily News.

In his reply, Sec'y. Knox declared, "We have our problems; we are all sufficiently intelligent to know we must be realists. If we put Negroes in the navy it would be like putting them in hell. The relationships on shipboard are such that white and colored just cannot be mixed. It has been tried and has failed."

Dr. Thomas replied: "Mr. Secretary, we have lived in hell so long we have become acclimated. That is all we have been used to for 150 years. Put us in hell and we will work our way out."

Saying he was a Texan and his children had been taught in Rhode Island by a colored teacher, Mrs. Jackson, whom they liked so well they didn't want to be promoted out of her class and that he "had no prejudices personally," Admiral Nimitz said it would be impossible to use Negroes. When a ship sailed often the crew would be depleted by being left behind or illness. Replacements are made by calling at the nearest port. Because colored and white could not be assigned together, it would be impossible to replace Negroes if they manned a ship, he opined.

"Negroes are superior generally to the whites who enlist and would therefore have to be made petty officers," he went on. "The white enlisted personnel would not stand for this."

There are also Negroes on ships as other than messmen, the admiral continued, although they are classed as messmen so they will not be made petty officers. There was one, he declared, who was a chief gunner's mate and "one of the most efficient men in the navy," but there was trouble over his rank. He was finally assigned over a number of Filipinos.

--White men will not tolerate colored petty officers, and I have heard Negroes don't like them either," the admiral concluded.

This attitude, said Dr. Thomas, probably came from the higher ranking officers and he doubted whether the enlisted personnel would object. He suggested a referendum to obtain their attitude.

When Dr. Alexander asked when did America intend to put into practice the principles of democracy this nation says she is preparing to defend, there was silence.

The issue of Negroes replacing Nazis in defense industries was raised. Dr. Giles said they were not employed at the Rock Island arsenal in Illinois, in New Jersey, munitions factories or the airplane industry generally. Col. Knox declared that at the Washington Navy yard one out of every four workers is colored, and -'this is true of all other navy yards, particularly the naval arsenals."

The secretary then promised to study fully the prospect of using Negroes on the new West Indian bases.

As the conference ended, naval representatives led by Admiral Nimitz, praised the committee and expressed surprise at knowing what the mission was, believing they had been called to discuss the possibility of colored physicians in the navy. The admiral mentioned that one of the difficulties was that 75 per cent of the navy personnel had educations from the fourth to the seventh grade, to which Dr. Thomas said that 75 per cent of his practice in Kansas was among whites with no more education [illegible]at, and since he had no difficulty he believed the navy would have none if the problem were approached with an open mind.

Navy Reaffirms Negro Ban

MAR 31 1941

(Special to the Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 30.—In a letter to Dr. J. J McClendon, Negro vice-chairman of local draft board No 3, the Navy Department has reaffirmed its anti-Negro attitude.

The letter, signed by C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, states once more "the Navy Department, for some time past, has refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch."

Mr. McClendon had written the Secretary of the Navy asking information upon application of Negro youths for training in the United States Naval Aviation Reserve. The Nimitz letter, which brazenly defends violations of Negro rights, stated:

"As you no doubt are aware, the Navy Department has, for some time past, refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch. This policy was instituted in the interest of harmony and efficiency aboard ship after many years of experience. The principles which dictated the adoption of that policy apply equally to the appointment of Negroes as officers, either in the Regular Navy or the Army Reserve. This is no reflection upon Negroes, either as a race or individually. It is simply a matter of practicability. One does not install a part in a machine, no matter how excellent that part may be in itself unless it will fit and work smoothly with the other parts. That, frankly, covers the Navy Department's attitude on this question. Negro officers aboard ship would form a small unassimilable minority which despite anything we could do would inevitably form a source of discord that would be harmful to the Service."

Colored Men Needed for Naval Service

The Navy Department in Washington announced today that voluntary enlistments are now opened for colored men in the Messman Branch of the Naval Service.

To be eligible for service in the Navy, men must be citizens of the United States, not less than 17 and under 31 years of age; to be of good character, clean habits and furnish list of former employers; be unmarried and have no police record.

Men enlisting in the Navy are sent to the Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Virginia, for training and after ten days furlough to visit their homes are sent aboard ships as well as to shore stations all over the world, including Panama, Puerto Rico, Honolulu, and other interesting countries.

All persons wishing to join this branch of the Navy are urged to apply to the nearest Navy Recruiting Station to their homes. Navy Recruiting Stations in North Carolina are located in Raleigh, New Bern, Wilmington, Greensboro, Salisbury, Charlotte and Asheville. In South Carolina: Florence, Columbia, Greenville, Spartanburg and Charleston.

Demand For Two-Ocean Navy May Let Negroes Enter U. S. Naval Academy

MAR 29 1941

Editor's Note: Last week in an editorial commenting on the "President's Great Powers" and discrimination in National Defense, The Amsterdam Star-News had this to say:

". . . Since an extreme emergency exists, the President could end Jim Crowism in the army and navy as well as on our job projects simply by proclaiming such practices a menace to our national defense program."

From Annapolis, this week, comes a report that there is a likelihood that the tall barriers that have kept Negroes out of the naval academy will be lowered. The influence of the President is in evidence in the move.

Sees World Crisis Forcing Negroes Into Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., (By Rienzi B. Lemus for ANP).—Owing to statements of fact issued here last week by naval authorities, what's happening in the U. S. Naval academy lends credence to a report out of Washington that President Roosevelt is apt to bring the prestige of his great office to bear on smashing of the "color line" tradition which has heretofore kept colored men from becoming officers in the U. S. navy.

No colored man has ever graduated from Annapolis. For two generations tradition prevented colored graduates from the West Point Military academy. Coming of the new order and Roosevelt eliminated the West Point tradition, and, as the story goes, that same new order will wipe it out in Annapolis—mostly because of the paramount needs of the navy, thus of the Nation.

Sudden and "time is of the essence" demands for more than doubling the ships of all classes in the navy have made the need of trained officers just as acute, preparation of them equally imperative. Totalitarianism's menace permits no choice. All of that left the navy department no alternative to authorizing the first class of reservists ever admitted to Annapolis. They arrived in February—700 of them, all white youth. On March 21 officials issued statements that 30 reservists have been honorably discharged because they are not physically qualified for duty as naval officers. Already 12 of them have quit, unable to make the grade academically, and the fate of "considerbly more," lies within the province of instructors who have to determine whether they may remain by how they responded to their first major tests, after a month of study under the shadow of "Tecumseh." Thus it has been clearly demonstrated that six per cent of the 700 white youths admitted to the Naval academy just a month ago can't make the Annapolis grade. And the navy needs them all.

Of course six per cent isn't so very bad in 700, insofar as percentages go. The point is, the nation has practically none to spare, and it would not be least difficult to find 42 colored youth, many wasting their time and energies at puerile race-problem huslting for lack of useful occupation, who can make the grade in Annapolis or anywhere else that calls for intellectual grasp, tactfulness, and guts. Besides, "time is of the essence" and Hitler permits no choice.

Mess Attendant Defends Lily White Navy

APR 12 1941

NEW BERN, N.C.—Citing the necessity of maximum co-operation and efficiency and minimum friction among the personnel of the navy, Alexander P. Haley mess attendant first class, U.S. Coast Guard Cutter, Pamlico, in a letter to the AFRO this week, seeks to defend the practice of discrimination in the U.S. Navy.

Messman Haley points out that naval authorities once allowed colored men to enlist in all branches of the service with results that prompted their concluding on "subjecting themselves to extensive criticism, which may upon investigation prove unfair," to preserve the efficiency of the naval department.

Navy Largely Southerners

He writes further:

"Due to the fact that a distinct majority of the men enlisted in the navy are natives of areas where prejudice is regarded as commonplace, the mass of individuals who compose the naval personnel are naturally infused, to an extent, with prejudice, though it is not so pronounced as in civilian life.

APR 12 1941

"Enlisted men are advanced by virtue of ability, training and time spent in active service. If members of the colored race were enlisted in all branches they, too, would eventually be promoted to the rank of petty officers, i.e., leaders of men in lower ranks.

"The inevitable result would be a severe lowering of efficiency in a machine vital to the welfare of an indomitable nation.

Admits Injustices

"Although I realize that many matters of rank injustice do occur that should give alert members of our race deepest concern, I, nevertheless, believe that a more detailed investigation of some complaints would result in a more mutual understanding between the colored and white races."

"This Is No Reflection Upon Negroes"

APR 3 1941

For sheer idiocy and nonsense this statement contained in a letter from C W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, regarding the enlistment of Negroes certainly takes the cake. Nimitz says:

"As you no doubt are aware, the Navy Department has, for some time past, refused to accept applications for enlistment from Negroes in any but the messman branch. This policy was instituted in the interest of harmony and efficiency aboard ship after many years of experience. The principles which dictated the adoption of that policy apply equally to the appointment of Negroes as officers, either in the Regular Navy or the Navy Reserve. This is no reflection upon Negroes, either as a race or individually. It is simply a matter of practicability. One does not install a paart in a machine, no matter how excellent that part may be in itself, unless it will fit and work smoothly with the other parts. That, frankly, covers the Navy Department's attitude on this question. Negro officers aboard ship would form a small unassimilable minority which, despite anything we could do, would inevitably forma source of discord that would be harmful to the Service."

APR 3 1941

How anyone with common sense can assume that any such policy of pure racial discrimination "is no reflection upon Negroes, either as a race or individually" is more than we are able to understand. It is nothing but the most flagrant race prejudice to make any such assumptions as are contained in this statement of policy of the Navy, and it is the rankest childishness to say that it does not reflect upon Negroes.

APR 3 1941

Moreover, if we did not know that Negroes have served with distinction in the Navy there might be some possible basis for the assumption. But even so, what right has anyone to suppose that "Negro officers aboard ship would form a small unassimilable minority which, despite anything we could do would inevitably form a source of discord that would be harmful to the Service." This could and would only be true where those of the other racial group were blinded by unreasoning prejudice, instead of being governed by the truths of democracy and Christianity. But, of course, it may be hoping for too much to suppose that some white Americans can do in the Navy what they do in many colleges and universities, on football and track teams and in many other spheres of life—to treat all men with respect and decency, regardless of race or color or creed.

Negro Men Wanted By The Navy

OCT 4 1941

The Navy Department has announced that Negro men between 17 and 36, single, of good character, can voluntarily enlist in the Naval Reserves, Class V-6, as mess attendants, third class. Pay to start at $21.00 monthly with chance for rapid promotion to officers cook or steward, and increased pay to as high as $105.00 monthly. Free clothing, medical care, travel, food, and a chance to learn at free schools while being paid is also offered by the navy.

Men enlisting in the Naval Reserve are only required to serve for four years, obligated, of course, to serve in an active capacity for the duration of the national emergency which now exists.

Vacancies are at present unlimited, and Negro men desiring to enlist in the Naval Reserve should apply to the Mess Attendant Recruting Station, which will be located in the basement of City Hall, Columbia, on Thursday, October 2, from 8:30 a. m. until 5:00 p. m.

Blame Navy For Use Of Racial Tags

NOV 1 1941

PHILADELPHIA—According to Rear Admiral A. E. Watson, Commandant of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, the order to use the letter "W" for white employes and "N" for Negro employes on identification badges at the Navy yard, came from the Navy Department at Washington. The Read Admiral made this known after a strong protest against the practice from Theodore Spaulding, president of the Philadelphia branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

But the Washington Navy Department in answer to a report on the race-labeling from the national office of the N.A.A.C.P., replied simply that it would make "appropriate inquiry." The N.A.A.C.P. letter was addressed to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and was answered by Ralph A. Bard of the office of the assistant secretary.

Negro Marines Being Considered For Island Bases

Why Bar Negroes From Enlisting In Navy Service?

FEB 1 1941

Writing in the "Mail Bag" column of the Philadelphia January 16, Major R. R. Wright, president of the Citizens and Southern Bank, of that city takes government officials to task for discrimination against Negroes in the armed forces of the nation.

There follows Major Wright's letter:

* * *

To the Editor:

A great deal is being written and said about enlisting for national defense. Billions of dollars are appropriated and spent to encourage and fit men for national defense. All citizens without regard to race, color or religious scruples are demanded to '-put up and shut up" in the interest of national defense.

Hence ,at a time like this, it does seem that the practice of the Navy Department of "not enlisting men of the colored race for general service," which, they say, has been adopted allegedly "in the interest of harmony and general ship efficiency," should be promptly annulled. The billions of dollars that are being spent for the improvement and efficiency of the navy are the dollars that must come out of the general public and should not by any means be reserved to any one race or class

We are satisfied that such a practice is not only harmful to the people excluded, but detrimental to the best service of the army. I have personally had some experience both in the Spanish-American war and the first World War. It is my understanding that the French had no trouble in incorporating colored men into the naval arm for the military service. A colored man, Mortenol, served as commander or admiral of a French battleship in the French naval service and had charge of the aerial defense of Paris during the first World War.

According to the records of the War Department, there were 1353 colored men who served as commissioned U. S. officers during the first World War. Major John R. Lynch and I were commissioned majors and paymasters in the Spanish-American war.

I paid both white and colored American troops from every section of the country and was treated and respected as an officer in the voluntary force of the United States army. Even the Georgian and South Carolinian troops never failed to salute me in the proper manner when I was engaged on official service.

Our armed forces should include all loyal Americans without regard to race, color, or previous conditions.

Says Negroes "Too Intelligent"; Would Dominate Navy If Enlisted

NMA Committee Confers With Knox and Officials—Secretary Says "Putting Colored in Navy Like Putting Them in Hell," But Considers Black Marines for Bases in West Indies.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. (ANP)—If Negroes were to be allowed to enlist in the Navy, they would be "so superior in general to the whites who enlist that they would have to be made petty officers, and the enlisted whites would not stand for this," Admiral C. W. Nimitz told a special committee from the National Medical Association which recently met here with high ranking naval officers on the color bar in this branch of the armed forces.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox reiterated earlier statements that it would be "impractical" to use the two races in the navy, declaring that "putting Negroes in the navy would be like putting them in hell," but did promise to seriously consider using Negro marines for the new naval bases in the West Indies leased from Great Britain.

Those taking part in the conference were Dr. Roscoe C. Giles, Chicago, chairman of the liasion committee; Dr. William McKinley Thomas, Leavenworth, Kan., chairman of the executive board; Dr. G. Hamilton Francis, Norfolk, Va., speaker for the house of delegates; Dr. W. G. Alexander, Orange, N. J., chairman commission on public health, all of the N. M. A.; and Secretary Knox, Admiral Nimitz, Captain Clark and a captain in charge of naval enlistments, representing the U. S. Navy. Details of the conference, held on January 8, were not revealed until this week.

OFFICIAL ATTITUDE TERMED 'INNOVATION'

Dr. Giles, after calling attention to Col. Knox's statement that a Negro could be enlisted only as a messman, pointed to the race's record as gunners under Admiral Perry, Admiral Farragut and at Saratoga and Manila in the Spanish American war. He termed the official attitude an "innovation" and said it was resented in speeches and radio broadcasts by liberal whites and Negroes, pointed to the growing sense of justice even in the South and the liberal record of the Knox newspaper, the Chicago Daily News.

In his reply, Secy. Knox declared, "We have our problems; we are all sufficiently intelligent to know we must be realists. If we put Negroes in the navy it would be like puting them in hell. The relationships on shipboard are such that white and colred just cannot be mixed. It has been tried and has failed."

Dr. Thomas replied: "Mr. Secretary, we have lived in hell so long we have become acclimated. That is all we have been used to for 150 years. Put us in hell and we will work our way out."

Saying he was a Texan and his children had been taught in Rhode Island by a colored teacher, Mrs. Jackson, whom they liked so well they didn't want to be promoted out of her class and that he "had no prejudices personally," Admiral Nimitz said it would be impossible to use Negroes. When a ship sailed often the crew would be depleted by being left behind or illness. Replacements are made by calling at the nearest port. Because colored and white could not be assigned together, it would be imposible to replace Negroes if they manned a ship, he opined.

ADMITS NEGROES SUPERIOR GENERALLY

"Negroes are superior generally to the whites who enlist and would therefore have to be made petty officers," he went on. The white enlisted personnel would not stand for this."

There are also Negroes on ships as other than messmen, the admiral continued, although they are classed as messmen so they will not be made petty officers. There was one, he declared, who was a chief gunner's mate and "one of the most efficient men in the navy," but there was trouble over his rank. He was finally assigned over a number of Filipinos.

White men will not tolerate colored petty officers, and I have heard Negroes don't like them either," the admiral concluded.

This attiude, said Dr. Thomas, probably came from the higher ranking officers and he doubted whether the enlisted personnel would object. He suggested a referendum to obtain their attitude.

DR. ALEXANDER SPEAKS AND THERE IS SILENCE

When Dr. Alexander asked when did America intend to put into practice the principles of democracy this nation says she is preparing to defend, there was silence.

The issue of Negroes replacing Nazis in defense industries was raised. Dr. Giles said they were not employed at the Rock Isrand arsenal in Illinois, in New Jersey, munitions factories or the airplane industry generally. Col. Knox declared that at the Washington Navy yard one out of every four workers is colored, and "this is true of all other navy yards, particularly the naval arsenals."

The secretary then promised to study fully the prospect of using Negroes on the new West Indian bases.

Navy Plane Flies Negro To Mother's Funeral

AUG 28 1941

In the Navy a fellow doesn't have to be an admiral to receive sympathetic understanding. He doesn't have to be an old-timer, either. Or, for that matter, a white man.

George Albert Thomas, negro of Route Two, Ramer, can vouch for that.

He enlisted in the Navy July 20 and was sent to Norfolk, Va., for training and duty.

Soon afterwards his mother, Estelle, became ill and Monday of last week, she died.

AUG 28 1941

George's father, Ang Thomas, wired his son of her passing. George showed it to his commanding officer who took immediate action to have him rushed to Montgomery by plane.

The ship landed at Maxwell Field Tuesday, well in time for the negro to attend the funeral.

Then "Democracy" Is Impractical?

FEB 8 1941

SECRETARY of the Navy Frank Knox's statement, uttered at a recent committee conference at Washington, has caused much comment throughout the nation. Said the Navy secretary when asked about the discrimination leveled at Negroes in the United States Navy, "We have our problems; we are all sufficiently intelligent to know we must be realists. If we put Negroes in the Navy it would be like putting them in hell . . ."

"Negroes are superior generally to the whites who enlist and would, therefore, have to be made petty officers. The white enlisted personnel would not stand for this," stated another high-ranking official of the Navy at the same meeting. Both officials agreed that to place Negroes in the Navy on an equal footing with others would be impractical.

If this is true, then it becomes necessary that we all view the problem confronting us realistically. The Navy is one branch of America's armed forces, and a very important one at that. Millions of dollars are used each year for its upkeep, money which comes from taxpayers' pockets. There are no markings on these taxes which prohibit Negro taxpayers' money from going for the upkeep of the Navy. Proportionately all groups in America contribute toward this end—none excepted.

When the draft bill was passed, making military training compulsory for American citizens, there was no clause in it which excluded Negroes because of what may be the attitudes of certain groups. All must do their part. When this country finds it necessary to go to war, Negroes and all will be called.

The principles of our democratic government say that all citizens are entitled to the same rights and opportunities; that ours is a government of the people and for the people; and that none shall be discriminated against because of color or race If, however, we have reached the point where it is impractical to apply democratic principle, then we must be realists enough to admit that this type of democracy is impractical

Navy Needs Mechanics— Only White Need Apply

NOV 1 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Although the Navy is seeking an unlimited number of mechanics, including all classes of aeronautical technicians from engine workers to instrument specialists, for immediate service with the air arm of the two-ocean fleet, only white persons need apply.

Qualified white mechanics may enlist at immediate ratings up to petty officers, first class, and at pay grades consistent with their civilian experience, but colored men may enlist in the messman branch only and in the rating of mess attendant, third class.

Both white mechanics and colored messmen must be American citizens between the ages of 17 and 50.

Illiteracy Next As 8,922 Seek To Enlist Here; 1,749 Accepted

In the Birmingham district during the first six months of the fiscal year 1941, applications for enlistment in the U. S. Navy totaled 8,922, it was announced at the Navy Recruiting Station here.

During the period, the announcement said, 1,749 persons were accepted for enlistment.

Medical officers gave 5,096 physical examinations during the first six months of the fiscal year with 3,440 rejections for physical causes. Rejections for other reasons totaled 3,456.

Teeth conditions were cited as the principal reason for physical rejections. Lack of education was a major factor for rejections other than physical.

Under the classification of rejections other than physical, this lack of education was said to have caused 37.8 per cent of rejections for white applicants and 44 per cent for Negro applicants.

The announcement said that the January quota for the Birmingham district is 406 first enlistments and since no waiting list exists, only a short time will elapse between applications and action on the applications.

Negroes In the Navy

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—The average American naval commissioned officer is finely, technically, and highly trained. He is supremely loyal to the flag, respectful to his superiors and considerate to the men under him. His training gives him patience and poise and he hasn't a one-track mind. One of the finest officers I knew was from New Orleans, La. He was a gentleman in every respect and seemingly oblivious to race prejudice.

It is the power delegated to the commissioned officers which determines the efficiency of the Navy. The enlisted men must obey their orders implicitly. These facts should be kept in mind in answering the question whether the Negro should be given an opportunity in all branches of naval service. The Negro's work in the Navy is called the messman branch.

Let me state here for the benefit of my landsmen of the Negro press that this work should not be scorned or underestimated in worth. The pay of a third class messman is equal or more than an ordinary seaman, and the Negro cooks and stewards are paid as much, and sometimes more, than a chief petty officer—depending on the length of service. This same work in the Navy of other countries is done by their own men. To be fair to this Government, it has tried to hold a place for the Negro in the Navy. It is true there is no promotion higher than a steward, but a Negro steward in a captain's mess or in an admiral's mess has a job that is envied by some white petty officers.

The American Navy is more liberal to the Negro even than the British Navy, which is lily-white, or the German or French Navy, although France is the most liberal of all nations to the Negro. The work of the Negro is clean. He works under deck and is not exposed to rough weather as the seaman is. He is drilled and trained, and it must not be overlooked that when the ship is cleared for action, he is at his battle station ready to fight and die for the flag of his country.

What I have said does not justify the Navy in keeping the Negro out of the seamen branch, but is an argument for it.

I entered the Navy during the administration of President William H. Taft and finished under President Woodrow Wilson. I found that there were many colored petty officers serving in 1912. Several were on my ship. These men had enlisted as ordinary seamen and compassers, and had been promoted to their respective ratings. The Navy promotes men on a merit system. The number of merits indicate the efficiency of a man and determines his rating, and no fair naval officers will keep a man from his rating on account of color.

The late Theodore Roosevelt refused to bar the Negro. Colored petty officers worked beside the whites, amiable and efficient. A first class Negro petty officer named Meyer worked in the engine room with his white mates, and his superior officers spoke well of him. He slept beside them, ate at the same table, and no one lost any sleep or had the indigestion because of him. It was from him that I learned about other colored petty officers. It was the policy of the Navy Department to give a colored man shore duty when his merits entitled him to promotion to chief petty officer. I was told that one colored man was made a warrant officer, but given shore duty immediately.

An important reason for the barring of Negro seamen is that Southerners who hate the Negro are in control in the naval affairs in Washington. Their prejudice was shown in 1916, during the review of the fleet in New York by the President and secretary of the Navy. An order came from Washington to the admiral which made every Negro in the Navy ashamed and bitter. We were ordered below deck while the President passed in review. All white sailors were dressed in full dress and stood at attention on the upper deck of every ship.

The statement that Negro petty officers and seamen will lower the efficiency of the Navy is contradictory to facts, untrue and false, and only in the minds of the political heads of the Navy Department who are more willing to risk the defense of the country than to give the Negro a chance.

U.S. Secretary Says Ban Is to Continue

CHICAGO—(ANP)— Because of the present world crisis and the necessity for making the navy ready for instant service, it is now "too dangerous" to assign colored men to that branch of the service, Secretary Knox told Representative Charles Jenkins of Chicago.

The secretary's statement follows:

"I am charged, in a very grave moment of national danger, with making ready for instant service the United States Navy. My greatest possible responsibility is to see that the ships now in the navy and those rapidly being built are manned by efficient crews. Our national safety may depend on this.

Would Provoke Discord

"To introduce into this situation a change in the present rules regarding the assignment of colored men for service aboard ship so that there would be a mingling of the white and black races in the confined quarters of the ships would be sure to provoke discord and demoralization. Unfortunately, there are still far too many people in the navy and out of it who would resent such an innovation.

"Under the circumstances, I cannot propose to support such a change in the regulations while the country is in danger. I hope and firmly believe that some way will eventually be found to provide the American Negroes with the chance they desire to serve their country as members of the crew of combatant ships in time of war, but the present would be an inauspicious and dangerous time to undertake this."

AFRO Says He Is Prejudiced or Ignorant

Editorial

Secretary Knox is either ignorant or prejudiced.

Colored seamen have always served the U.S. Navy in every war, from the Revolutionary through the Spanish American War.

The "innovation" is the illegal and unpatriotic limitation of colored men on ships to cooks and waiters. If colored cooks and waiters can serve the ships, why can't colored seamen?

The greatest danger to the U.S. is that with ignorant and prejudiced men in command of armed forces and defense, our country shall not be able to oppose Hitler without a united front.

Secretary Knox is owner of the Chicago Daily News.

It is significant that two great newspapers, the New York Times and the Chicago Tribune, 75 years ago campaigned against the Federal Equal Rights Bill. They called it the Social Rights Bill.

If Mr. Knox is an example, Chicago newspapers haven't made much progress in 75 years.

REFUSES TO ACT IN CASE OF 13 BOYS ON S. S. PHILADELPHIA

Youths Will Remain "Dishonorably Discharged"—Department Defends Segregation Policy and Lists "Opportunities."

MAR 29 1941

WASHINGTON, March 27.—According to Navy officials, undesirable discharges given thirteen messmen aboard the U.S.S. Philadelphia and bad conduct discharges given two others for writing a letter to The Pittsburgh Courier protesting against racial discrimination in the Navy are legal and no action can be taken to change their character.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, explained that "undesirable discharges are issued to rid the service of men who are considered undesirable for further retention, and it is an administrative act.

"Where an undesirable discharge is legal, and regular in all respects, is issued for cause by competent authority, and becomes the record of an accomplished fact," his bureau, "in the absence of fraud, or clear mistake of fact, is not empowered to revoke such discharges and to substitute therefor an honorable discharge."

He maintains that the undesirable discharges issued to the thirteen mess attendants of the U.S.S. Philadelphia and the bad conduct discharges issued to the other two mess attendants "were correct and legal in all respects."

The undesirable discharges, he says, "were issued for cause by competent authority," while the bad conduct discharges "were issued in accordance with the sentences of legally constituted courts-martials."

COMMANDER SHONERD REVIEWS CASE HISTORY

In their letter to The Courier, the fifteen messmen charged that they were discriminated against because no ratings other than mess attendant are open to colored men in the Navy. They also charged that they had been "ridden" by Lieutenant Commander Humbert W. Ziroli, executive officer of the U.S.S. Philadelphia.

Commander H. G. Shonerd, retired, in a memorandum reviewing the facts, states:

"Every enlisted man in the U.S. Navy has the privilege at any time of talking with his commanding officer or executive officer concerning any conditions on the ship with which he is not satisfied.

"The mess attendants, at that time serving in the U.S.S. Philadelphia, did not avail themselves of this privilege, and, entirely unbeknown to the officers and other personnel serving in the U.S.S. Philadelphia, the mess attendants involved, signed and caused to be published in public papers, an article attempting to bring discredit on the Navy, and to spread discontent among Negro mess attendants.

"This action was in violation of the articles for the government of the Navy, which prohibits persons in the Navy from joining or abetting any combination to weaken the lawful authority or, or lessen the respect due to, commanding officers.

"Because of this activity instigated by these men, definitely demonstrating by their own actions that they must be classed as malcontents, and as such, not considered desirable material for further retention in the naval service, the Department directed that the men involved be discharged as undesirable, because of unfitness.

DEFENDS EXCLUSION POLICY NOW IN FORCE

"The Bureau makes every effort to maintain a high standard for its enlisted personnel, and to that end refuses to enlist, retain, or reenlist men who do not meet the Navy requirements. An undesirable discharge is issued to terminate a contract of enlistment where the man concerned has demonstrated his undesirability for further retention in the naval service.

"The undesirable discharges in thirteen of the cases, and the bad conduct discharges in the other two, severed these men's connection with the naval service, and there is no authority of law by which their reinstatement can be effected.

"After many years of experience the policy of not enlitsing men of the colored race for the seaman, and other branches of the naval service, except the messman branch, was adopted to meet the best interest of general ship efficiency.

"Experience in former years has shown clearly that men of the colored race, if enlisted in the seaman branch and promoted to the position of petty officers, cannot maintain discipline among the men of the white race over whom they may be placed by reason of their rating, and that as a result teamwork, harmony and ship efficiency are seriously handicapped.

LISTS "OPPORTUNITIES" FOR RACE IN NAVY

"The whole training and distribution system of the Navy makes it essential that men of any particular rating be available for any duty required of that rating throughout the Navy.

"In the messman branch of the service there are many opportunities offered mess attendants depending on the conduct and ability of the man concerned, namely, advancement in rating from mess attedant, third-class, to officers' stewards, first-class, or officers' cooks, first-class, with basic salaries beginning at $21 a month and ranging up to $84 a month; and to the man who proves worthy, an opportunity after a certain number of years to transfer to the Fleet Reserve, or to retire.

"In general, the Navy holds out to those men who desire to follow it as a career, steady increases in pay, and a certain present and an assured future.

"These cases have been appealed and the Bureau of Navigation has carefully reviewed them, and nothing can be found in these cases which would alter the legal conclusion reached in each and every instance."

NAVY STANDS BY ITS JIM CROW POLICY

Six National Groups Get Nowhere In Making Protest

WASHINGTON. — Representatives of six national organizations financed and officered by white people got "exactly nowhere" in a recent interview with representatives of the United States Navy when they lodged a strong protest against the virtual exclusion of Negro Americans from the Navy.

The delegation, which called upon both Army and Navy officials, was composed of representatives of the Union for Democratic Action, Friends of Democracy, Council for Democracy, Student Defenders of Democracy, and the Committee to Defend America By Aiding the Allies.

Not represented in person, but 100 per cent in support of the protest, was the Fight for Freedom Committee. The Navy interview is reported as follows:

"Compared with the satisfactory and friendly character of the interview with representatives of the War department, our interview with the representatives of the Navy department got exactly nowhere.

"They admitted the existence of discrimination, defended it, and insisted that they would continue the policy. Despite a long and sometimes slightly heated interview, the only thing we could get from them was a grudging statement that they might reconsider their policy in view of the President's proclamation against discrimination in employment in defense industries.

"We pointed out specifically that continuation of discrimination in the Navy meant that the President, as commander-in-chief of the Navy was setting a bad example to the employers in the defense industries, but even that argument did not change their attitude."

Youth May Join Navy At YMCA

For the convenience of colored youths who desire to enlist in the United States Navy, George L. Cahall, U. S. Navy Recruiter, has opened a Navy Recruiting Station at the Butler Street YMCA, 22 Butler Street, N.E. Boys may make applications from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily.

Applicants must be not less than 17 and under 31 years of age, be of good character, clean habits, unmarried and furnish list of former employers or references from at least three responsible persons; have no juvenile, police record, reform school or prison record (except for minor infractions not including moral turpitude), be not less than five feet and four inches in height and of proportionate weight to age and height, and pass a rigid physical examination.

Applicants 18 years or over at time of enlistment are enlisted for years; those 17 and under 18 years, for minority, that is until they reach 21. Pay ranges from $21 to $84, base pay. Additions to base pay are possible. After enlistment men are transferred to the Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Va., for a course of instruction in the Mess Attendants School, upon completion of which they are transferred to general service. Advancements are routine.

CLIFFORD D. HENRY

APR 12 1941

By H. C. WRIGHT

NORFOLK, Va.—Hard at work checking his stock and poring over his accounts, Mr. Henry, who has served for 32 years in the United States Navy, asked to what he attributed his success as a naval officer, replied: "Hope and hard work, I guess."

Mr. Henry enlisted in the navy as a mess attendant at the Norfolk Naval Training Station, July 5, 1917, was later transferred to New Orleans for duty aboard the U.S.S. Bridgeport, was advanced to mess attendant first class, spent two years in France during World War No. 1, and returned to America in December, 1919.

Gets His First "Break"

APR 12 1941

He got his first real chance after his return from overseas when he was permitted to change his rating from cabin cook first class to storekeeper first class and he was made storekeeper in charge of the general stock on board the destroyer tender Brideport.

From 1923 to 1927, he served in the Panama Canal Zone, went through the canal fifty-two times; served on the U.S.S. Sapella, 1928-29, at Portsmouth, N.H. Navy Yard, 1930-31, and in 1932 to 1933 was stationed on board the U.S.S. Raleigh as assistant payroll storekeeper.

He requested leave to go to Fleet Naval Reserve after sixteen years' service, July, 1933, and journeyed to his home in Salisbury, Md. During his short period of retirement, he bought a home and operated a successful restaurant business.

During this period, Mr. Henry became headwaiter at the Wicomico Hotel (white), Salisbury, Md., held it until the partial emergency was declared, voluntarily returned to naval service and is stationed at the Norfolk Training Station.

Coast Guard Defense of a Lily-White Navy

APR 12 1941

The most pitiful people in the United States a hundred years ago were the black slave decoys.

They were colored men, slaves, used by their masters to hunt and betray other slaves fleeing the South by way of the Underground Railroad.

APR 12 1941

An equally doleful sound comes from the Coast Guard Cutter Pamlico at Newbern, N.C., addressed to the AFRO and signed by Alexander P. Haley, mess attendant, "first class" (?). Mr. Haley is colored.

He defends naval officials who say the navy is for white men only. Here is Haley's defense. He says:

1. It is the navy's job to defend our country.
2. Navy efficiency and co-operation are at a maximum when there is no friction.
3. Best way to eliminate friction is to keep all colored people out of the navy except as cooks and waiters.

If Haley's views were sound, they should apply not only to the navy, but also to the army, to civil service, and to private industry.

* * * *

Here is what the navy itself says on the same subject. The Secretary of this lily-white section of our defense forces has been under hot fire recently and he defends the policy in this wise:

After many years of experience, the policy of not enlisting men of the colored race for any branch except messmen was adopted to meet the best interests of general ship efficiency.

The bureau endeavors to furnish naval vessels with crews consisting of men best qualified to meet the requirements of the special rating and branch to which they are assigned.

This policy not only serves the best interests of the navy and country, but serves as well the best interests of the men themselves.

Whose best interests? APR 12 1941

* * * *

It can't be said to be in the best interests of a democratic country to discriminate between citizens on the ground of color.

It can't be in the best interests of the navy to choose men on the basis of color rather than efficiency.

It can't be in the best interests of white men who, in all activities of civilian life, work and live among colored neighbors.

It certainly is not in the best interests of colored citizens who are taxed to support national defense that seeks to stamp them as non-citizens.

Whose best interests are served by the navy jim crow?

Is there anywhere argument more feeble, illogical and deceitful? APR 12 1941

Can shallow, quibbling men, either in the navy or coast guard, be depended upon as the first line of defense for a liberty-loving people?

Secretary Knox Again Draws the Color Line

While the United States' active participation in the European war becomes only a matter of days, the naval department is still adamant on its policy that Negroes cannot be used as members of crews on combatant ships. This is Secretary Knox's latest answer to the plea of 13,000,000 Negro citizens to be inducted into every phase of the defense program.

The complete statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox made to Representative Jenkins of Chicago, regarding the Negro's status in the navy, is as follows:

'I am charged in a very grave moment of national danger, with making ready for instant service in the United States navy. My greatest responsibility is to see that the ships now in the navy and those being rapidly built are manned by efficient crews. Our national safety may depend on this.

"To introduce into this situation a change in the present rules regarding the assignment of the white and black races in confined quarters of the ships would be sure to provoke discord and demoralization. Unfortunately, there are still far too many people in the navy and out of it who would resent such an innovation.

"Under the circumstances, I cannot propose to support such a change in the regulations while the country is in danger. I hope and firmly believe that some way will eventually be found to provide the American Negroes with the chance they desire to serve their country as members of the crew of combatant ships in time of war, but the present would be an inauspicious and dangerous time to undertake this."

Again and again, Secretary Knox has given this feeble excuse for the navy's discriminatory practices against Negroes. He points at the grave conditions of today to cover up this ruthless segregation which has been practiced by the navy over a period of years. He attempts to place the fear of racial strife as more important than the rights of one of the most loyal groups in the United States.

If it is a fact that these are times "too dangerous" to risk the Negro's induction into the navy, how does, or can Secretary Knox explain the Negro's unwelcome reception at Annapolis, U. S. Naval school, in years past? Why are Negroes readily placed in the messman's branch of the navy?

I disagree with Secretary Knox's policy at the outset. I feel that it is during this time that our greatest danger lies in failing to assign Negroes to naval duty. The assertion that whites and blacks cannot be trusted to work side by side in defense of our liberties shows that we could never withstand an enemy without, for the cankerous race prejudice has already undermined our pillars of democracy.

Abraham Lincoln once said in pleading for the union of the states, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Secretary Knox has already made public the admission of division in our country. He has by declaration, sown a hot bed for the breeding of un-American activities.

NEGROES "TOO BRILLIANT"
FOR SERVICE IN NAVY

New York,N.Y.--In a recent interview with a committee composed of representatives of interventionist organizations, largely white, Admiral Nimitz, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, repeated once more his statement of some months ago that Negroes are "extremely brilliant" and would win promotion so fast in the Navy that they would cause resentment and discord among white sailors.

The remarks, made in a conference in Washington on June 30 is reported by H.M.Finck, Director of the American League for Tolerance Committee, as follows:

7/25/41

"Negroes are extremely brilliant and in the very short space of a year are able to rise to the rank of chief petty officer and that is very much resented by white sailors, causing much discord within the ranks."

More Men Wanted

For many years now this country has followed a policy of maintaining two cadets in training on our merchant ships so that there would always be a sufficient number of qualified seamen to man the vessels. During peacetime when our shipping has operated on a normal scale this system proved to be entirely satisfactory. In the past few months as ship after ship has slipped down the ways to become a part of our rapidly growing merchant marine, we find ourselves woefully short of men, which explains why the radios and newspapers have been busy sending out appeals for able-bodied men between the ages of 18 and 25 years of age.

Under the peacetime system one cadet is assigned to the deck force and the other to the engine force. Their period of training is three years during which time they receive $65 a month. The cadet on the deck force may become a ship's master, while the one assigned to the engine force may become a chief engineer.

There must be a lot of able-bodied young Negroes who are interested in this kind of career. If so they are urged to contact the U. S. Maritime Commission at Washington.

Secretary Knox Again Draws the Color Line

While the United States' active participation in the European war becomes only a matter of days, the naval department is still adamant on its policy that Negroes cannot be used as members of crews on combatant ships. This is Secretary Knox's latest answer to the plea of 13,000,000 Negro citizens to be inducted into every phase of the defense program.

The complete statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox made to Representative Jenkins of Chicago, regarding the Negro's status in the navy, is as follows:

'I am charged in a very grave moment of national danger, with making ready for instant service in the United States navy. My greatest responsibility is to see that the ships now in the navy and those being rapidly built are manned by efficient crews. Our national safety may depend on this.

"To introduce into this situation a change in the present rules regarding the assignment of the white and black races in confined quarters of the ships would be sure to provoke discord and demoralization. Unfortunately, there are still far too many people in the navy and out of it who would resent such an innovation.

"Under the circumstances, I cannot propose to support such a change in the regulations while the country is in danger. I hope and firmly believe that some way will eventually be found to provide the American Negroes with the chance they desire to serve their country as members of the crew of combatant ships in time of war, but the present would be an inauspicious and dangerous time to undertake this."

Again and again, Secretary Knox has given this feeble excuse for the navy's discriminatory practices against Negroes. He points at the grave conditions of today to cover up this ruthless segregation which has been practiced by the navy over a period of years. He attempts to place the fear of racial strife as more important than the rights of one of the most loyal groups in the United States.

If it is a fact that these are times "too dangerous" to risk the Negro's induction into the navy, how does, or can Secretary Knox explain the Negro's unwelcome reception at Annapolis, U. S. Naval school, in years past? Why are Negroes readily placed in the messman's branch of the navy?

I disagree with Secretary Knox's policy at the outset. I feel that it is during this time that our greatest danger lies in failing to assign Negroes to naval duty. The assertion that whites and blacks cannot be trusted to work side by side in defense of our liberties shows that we could never withstand an enemy without, for the cankerous race prejudice has already undermined our pillars of democracy.

Abraham Lincoln once said in pleading for the union of the states, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Secretary Knox has already made public the admission of division in our country. He has by declaration, sown a hot bed for the breeding of un-American activities.

England previously barred black pilots from the Royal Air Force. But long before some of the Nazi's worst blitz had struck at England's defenses, the countrymen decided bombs know no color line and that the might of all citizens, regardless of color, must be used in defense against the enemy. The bars in the Royal Air Force are lowered. England gladly accepts both black and white fliers.

Must America too, feel the tread of the invader ere she is awakened?

NIMITZ AGAIN DECLARES
NEGROES "TOO BRILLIANT" FOR SERVICE IN NAVY

7/25/41

New York,N.Y.--In a recent interview with a committee composed of representatives of interventionist organizations, largely white, Admiral Nimitz, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, repeated once more his statement of some months ago that Negroes are "extremely brilliant" and would win promotion so fast in the Navy that they would cause resentment and discord among white sailors.

The remarks, made in a conference in Washington on June 30 is reported by H.M.Finck, Director of the American League for Tolerance Committee, as follows:

7/25/41

"Negroes are extremely brilliant and in the very short space of a year are able to rise to the rank of chief petty officer and that is very much resented by white sailors, causing much discord within the ranks."

Navy Department Remains Firm In Barring Negroes

Interview With Officials Gets Exactly Nowhere

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Representatives of six national organizations financed and officered by white people get "exactly nowhere" in a recent interview with representatives of the United States Navy when the lodged a strong protest against the virtual exclusion of Negro Americans from the Navy.

JUL 25 1941

The delegation which called upon both Army and Navy officials, was composed of representatives of the Union for Democratic Action, Friends of Democracy, Council for Democracy, Student Defenders of Democracy, and the Committee to Defend America By Aiding the Allies. Not represented in person, but 100 percent in support of the protest was the Fight for Freedom Committee.

The Navy interview reported as follows:

"Compared with the satisfactory and friendly character of the interview with representatives of the War department, our interview with the representatives of the Navy department got exactly nowhere.

They admitted the existence of discrimination, defended it, and insisted that they would continue the policy. Despite a long and sometimes slightly heated interview, the only thing we could get from them was a grudging statement that they might reconsider their policy in view of the President's proclamation against discrimination in employment in the defense industries.

We pointed out specifically that continuation of discrimination in the Navy meant that the President, as commander-in-chief of the Navy was setting a bad example to the employers in the defense industries, but even that argument did not change their attitude."

More Men Wanted

For many years now this country has followed a policy of maintaining two cadets in training on our merchant ships so that there would always be a sufficient number of qualified seamen to man the vessels. During peacetime when our shipping has operated on a normal scale this system proved to be entirely satisfactory. In the past few months as ship after ship has slipped down the ways to become a part of our rapidly growing merchant marine, we find ourselves woefully short of men, which explains why the radios and newspapers have been busy sending out appeals for able-bodied men between the ages of 18 and 25 years of age.

Louis Still Under Fire For Role of Navy Good Samaritan

NOV 29 1941 NOV 29 1941

Depicted on posters used in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The same Jim Crow Navy which recently issued "colored" and "white" identification badges for its service men, has come up with a brand new angle of ridiculing black folk—a caricature of a colored man shooting craps with a slogan urging a speedup in production.

This twist in Naval thinking in regards to colored citizens—not alone those the Navy uses solely as flunkies, cooks, shoe shine boys and waiters on the ships that go to sea, but to every person with a dram of African blood in his veins—is only corroborating evidence of what every thinking member of Louis' race has known all along that the Navy has no intention of changing its stripes just because Louis has been deliberately misguided into thinking his gesture in risking his title for nothing will bring about a new day in Naval regard for colored citizens. It regards him as a crapshooter along with every other colored citizen.

Sneering Challenge

The posters in the Navy Yard in Brooklyn, plastered on the walls of the buildings there even while the controversy of the wisdom of the Louis move still rages, constitutes a deliberate, sneering challenge to Louis, John Roxborough and Julian Black. "Who said we will change?" All those pipe dream statements issued by Roxborough and Mike Jacobs to the effect that Louis is establishing himself as the nation's outstanding American is only so much unadulterated bunk and hocus pocus designed to suck unthinking colored people into Madison Square Garden on the night of Jan. 9 and to betray them further into making their position in this country more ridiculous by supporting institutions that have not the slightest regard for them and their's.

The Navy Relief Society of which Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Commandant of the Third Naval District, is head, gets all the proceeds from the charity fight except about $8,000 which Louis will require as actual training expenses, and the 20 percent that Buddy Baer will draw as the challenger's end.

Baer Will Get His

As pointed out in a foregoing article, Baer, who is white and also belongs to a minority group, isn't magnanimous at all when it comes to the money end of the matter. He won't come out of the fight broke. Instead, the hulking Californian who knocked Louis out of the ring in their first contest in Washington last Summer and who may be regarded as definitely dangerous and capable of scoring an upset, may come out with a 20 percent cut out of the money taken in, plus Louis' prized heavyweight title.

The Brown Bomber will then be in the unenviable position every colored person knows—on the outside looking in. He'll be minus the most highly prized possession of sportsdom; minus his legitimate share of a rich gate, and minus an opportunity to enlist in the Navy for which he gave his all, in any capacity except the most abject of menials—doomed to serve his four years cooking pork chops for some cracker brass hat from the depths of Georgia, or from Florida, a State Westbrook Pegler once described as being strangely barbarian or something, after they had lynched one of Louis' people.

What "Spot" Is Navy On?

Many colored "leaders," burdened down with degrees and befuddled completely on the race question in America, especially in light of the present national emergency in which there should be no question of color, creed or religion, are "hailing" the champion's "unselfish motive" and "fine display of loyal Americanism" as a new high in something. They even talk about the Louis gesture "putting the Navy on the spot with its prejudiced treatment" of colored folk. The only "spot" the Navy can be placed on would be the "spot" where it will collect the dollars Louis will hand over to it after the fight Jan. 9, dollars that would be welcomed by the very N. A. A. C. P. which will try to force the Jim Crow Navy to remove those posters of a black man shooting craps in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Mike Jacobs, who may be licking his lips in anticipation of the Navy Club Ball following the fight—can afford to donate his services to promotion of the charity fight. Such regard from the heel-clicking, sabre-rattling brass hats of the Navy would give him social status not frowned on by any of the boys along Jacobs' Beach. Jacobs was quoted as being "thoroughly aroused at reports that some colored people disapproved" of the fight "because young colored men are restricted to the mess department of the Navy and completely barred from service in the U. S. Marine Corps."

And Jacobs "Deplores It"

The promoter was quoted as saying: "How can we talk about discrimination in the Navy and the Marine Corps when we are trying to bring help to the mothers, fathers and wives of the men who are giving their lives for the defense of their country? I am just as much against racial discrimination as anyone in America. I deplore it and have constantly worked to improve interracial relations ever since I started to promote fights. There is no discrimination at the 20th Century Sporting Club."

NOV 29 1941

Jacobs said nothing about Baer protecting himself in a purely financial transaction by going on record that he wants to be paid for his services. Baer and Jacobs, both members of a minority group as are Louis and his managers, present a strange paradox. Jacobs evidently hopes to gain social prestige from promoting the fight and giving Louis' money to an institution that thinks he's a crapshooter like the rest of his people; Baer hopes the gate will be tremendous so his 20 percent challenger's share will make a nice nest egg for his family.

Not a Single One!

Jacobs' assertion that he has "constantly worked to improve interracial relations" and "there is no discrimination at the 20th Century Sporting Club" is laughable to persons who know what's going on. There's not a black face in the headquarters of the 20th Century Sporting Club at 1619 Broadway, not even a porter in the House that Joe Louis and Henry Armstrong built so that Jacobs' people might swarm all over it; sell tickets, write publicity; run errands; sit behind desks and smoke cigars on bounty black hands provide. Jacobs' name does not appear on any stationery of worthwhile colored organizations fighting for equal rights and opportunity to live as American citizens. Neither is Jacobs noted for donating any part of the proceeds from the fights to the several worthy Harlem charities or any charity institutions, for that matter. to which he is almost assured of an invitation—an invitation Louis, Black and Roxborough by no stretch of the imagination will get dealing with the plight of Louis' people.

Jim Crow by Omission

There is no discrimination at the 20th Century Sporting Club in the sense that a canvas curtain separates white and black ticket buyers like the curtain that separates the redneck "Tobacco Roaders" and the colored college graduates on southern railway lines. The discrimination at the 20th Century, instead, is "discrimination by omission," since you can't discriminate against a person unless he's there to be discriminated against. In this case, there's not a single member of Louis' race in the club to be discriminated against.

Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, speaking for the Navy, was quoted as saying this week: 'I believe I am speaking for the Navy as a whole, in expressing our appreciation of Joe Louis' magnanimous gesture in 'laying his title on the line' to help us continue the good offices of the Navy Relief Society, on behalf of the underprivileged relatives of the men who so urgently need our aid and sympathy in times of emergency. I can say from personal knowledge that since he became champion, there has been widespread interest in Louis' career among Navy personnel of both races."

Says Nothing New

The Admiral has yet to say anything about the attitude of the Navy toward Joe's people, the young men who would like careers as sailors, fighting for their country. The Admiral has nothing to say about the Navy's attitude toward colored citizens after the fight has been held and after the Navy has pocketed Joe's money, shook his hand, called him a "good Negro," and closed the incident. The Admiral also has nothing to say about whether Louis would be welcome in the Navy as an able-bodied seaman with every chance for advancement now exclusively reserved for the sons of the cracker folk who run for a rope and a bucket of tar at the sight of a dark face.

There is nothing to commend Louis in his program of aiding an institution that regards him as a crap shooter and which officially takes notice of him only because he is in a position to give it plenty of money it couldn't get even from Gene Tunney, the former heavyweight champion that it made a reserve officer in the Fleet. Buddy Baer, white and able to enlist as a man in the Navy, not a flunky, is frugally demanding his 20 percent of the take, has shown in this instance what he thinks of charity: IT BEGINS AT HOME.

Meanwhile, members of Louis' race are getting ready for the old, old "Uncle Tom" sellout, planning to attend the fight in droves to "show the white folks that all Negroes aren't alike." "Leading Negroes" are thumping the drums as a rallying call to Louis' people to again fall in line and march to the altar of racial sacrifice and betrayal of every unborn Negro son in further pushing the race back into the ignominy of a subject people whose very education teaches them not only to be happy and content with segregation, but to aid its spread by spending their money to help it.

Louis' gesture is like throwing "pearls before swine," like trying to fill the ocean with an eye-dropper; it means absolutely nothing insofar as changing the official attitude of the Jim Crow Navy's brass hats toward the "proper place" for "all likes as he."

Negroes, Although Able to Meet Any Requirement of the U.S. Navy, and Willing to Serve, Are Denied Opportunity at Time When Nation Is in Peril.

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11—An announcement just made by Secretary Frank Knox of the U. S. Navy Department challenges the attention of the Negro people of the United States. Their reaction to the announcement will be different from that of the usual citizen of the land.

The hustling, bustling Secretary has just declared that the Navy department may be "forced" at an early date, "for the first time in its history" to draft fighting seamen for the Nation's ships. The lag in voluntary enlistment is responsible for this contemplated action.

Emmett Scott

Paul Mallon, nationally - known columnist, writes that the clique of Admirals running the Navy department has hastened forward with the declaration that it is planned to use "more attractive advertising in the newspapers," and to "relax health restrictions" to lure volunteers.

To use words of mildness and great restraint, this is a shameful, disgraceful situation in the light of attendant facts. The Navy, for many months, through radio appeals and newspaper advertising, and also by elaborate, vari-colored posters, plastering walls throughout the country, has sought to advertise the advantages offered young men of the country by Navy enlistment, including travel to all parts of the world; training as metalsmiths, ordnance men, radio men, electricians, signalmen, carpenters, painters, ship-fitters, pattern-making, molders, printers, and many other trades and advertised advantages.

It may, or may not, shock the average citizen to learn that, under its traditional policy of exclusion, the Navy department restricts Negro enlistments to mess-men, servitors, flunkies, alone.

More than 76 years have passed since, by arbitrament of arms, supporting Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, the Negro people were freed from the bondages of slavery in the United States. They were afterward clothed with all of the privileges of American citizenship. They have made progress in educational, religious, material and cultural directions.

NEGROES ABLE TO MEET REQUIREMENTS

They are able to supply men "not less than 17 and under 31 years of age," capable of meeting the initial requirements for entry into practically every category of Navy service. By standards of education and character, they will favorably compare with the average enlistee.

These people, this group of loyal American citizens, are stigmatized and refused entry into an armed service of the Government of which they are a part at the very moment when all that we hold near and dear is imperilled by the near approach of shooting-war-activity on a world-wide scale.

It is all but criminal negligence to have ships rolling down the ways, at the cost of millions and billions of dollars, while failing to have an adequate personnel to man such ships, especially when the men are available and willing to enlist in the service of their country.

It is un-American, the antithesis of democracy, of everything that we call fair, decent and just, for a great department of the Government to lend itself to the perpetuation of an intolerant policy which engenders race hate and bigotry, and menaces the morale of a people, who after long-suffering, and many injustices in the past, are no longer willing to bear such treatment without loud and vigorous protest.

NEGRO MARTYRS ON RUEBEN JAMES

Three Negro mess-men, martyrs of the Rueben James, went gallantly to watery graves when the ship was torpedoed. The loyalty, the efficiency, the patriotism of thousands of other Negroes just as willing will be laid on the altar of our country's need if only tradition, unreasoning blindness, and petty racial hates, may be buried here in America while we prepare our War Machine to liberate the rest of the world from the same kind of baneful intolerances.

Even a fundamental conception of morality should, by now, impress our Navy primadonnas that while they are breaking with traditional requirements so as to secure increased enlistment, it is a good time now to forego its prejudices against Negroes, and consolidate the loyalties, the sympathies, and the willing cooperation and support of every element of our American population.

Since Navy volunteers now number only 9,000 a month against a need of 15,000 a month, the Negro reservoir can supply the deficiencies now harassing Secretary Knox, Admiral Nimitz, and other Navy officials.

Negro seamen, if enlisted and given that same free and equal opportunity offered other enlistees, will not disappoint the Navy department, even with its rigorous exactions; the Administration, nor the American people.

As the Council for Democracy has declared: * * . "The contribution in work and intelligence of one-tenth of the population of our country cannot be thrust aside in a time of total warfare without seriously compromising the future of our Nation."

No change has been announced in the Navy's policy of restricting Race seamen to the menial tasks of messmen.

Navy Drops Standards For Recruits

DEC 13 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In an effort to increase enrollments, the Navy on Saturday relaxed its physical standards for recruits.

Under a new policy men with certain minor ailments heretofore considered a bar to enlistment will be accepted and, when necessary, the defects will be corrected.

Defects which no longer will disqualify a prospective recruit include hydrocele, hernia, varicicele, provided the applicant has an intelligence quotient of 75 or better, nasal deformity and seasonal hay fever, provided it is not complicated.

Naval Discipline

MAY 4 - 1941

AN example of a tail wagging a dog is found in the answer released by a Navy department official regarding the status of Negroes in his department. He did not bite his tongue in explaining that Negro sailors were not to become officers. He explained that:

"Colored men are now enlisted in the Navy for the messman branch and in that branch they are given every opportunity for advancement to cooks and stewards, which while not petty officer ratings, receive the pay and allowances of such ratings. Experience of many years in the Navy has shown clearly that men of the colored race, if enlisted in any other branch then the messman branch, and promoted to the position of petty officer cannot maintain discipline among men of the white race over whom they may be placed by reason of their rating. As a result, teamwork, harmony and ship efficiency are seriously handicapped."

MAY 4 - 1941

Of course, the naval official cited no cases in point. He had none, we suspect. He would, no doubt, be enlightened to know that in the 15th century and long before Negroes have been officers on ships and were able to maintain discipline. As a matter of fact, no one ever thought of that one. Columbus, in 1492, made the most important voyage this world has known. If he had used the argument our Navy is now using perhaps America would not have been discovered at that time and thus, would not have been the great country that it is. One of Columbus' ships was piloted by Pedro Alonzo, a Negro. That was about the most important voyage this country knows anything about. That was its birth or discovery. Now we are entering into the next most important stage of our history. It is our continuity as a democracy. This time things are a little different. "Discipline" is the word that thwarts democracy.

The whole nation is afraid that a few white boys might resent Negro officers, the navy would have us believe. What

MAN SHORTAGE IN THE NAVY

Officials of the U. S. Navy from Secretary Frank Knox down to neighborhood recruiting officers have been so adamant about enlisting American citizens of our group for any position except dishwasher that we had the impression the Navy was crowded.

Last week there came a frantic call for 31,000 more enlistments before June 30, to complete the remainder of the 35,000 quota necessary to man the new warships and auxiliaries.

The drive for white boys so far having netted but 4,000 and with talk of assigning selectees to the Navy, we would like to ask Secretary Knox, Admiral Nimitz and their associates why the colored youth of this country cannot get a chance to man these warships.

We have thousands and thousands of bright, healthy young men, eager and willing to enlist in the Navy if there is hope of jobs better than those now available.

Why not stop this foolishness about inability of white and colored youths to get along together or to take orders from each other, and abolish the color bar.

Young white men and young colored men will do whatever they are told to do by any superior officer or noncommissioned officer who tells them to do it, and they will do it quickly.

If they can work together in the postal service and take orders from each other, they can also do it in the naval service.

The big naval officials, including Mr. Knox, say it cannot be done, but significantly enough they refuse to try it, basing their refusal on some obscure incident that happened thirty years ago.

Even the South has moved forward in racial thinking in 30 years.

Mr. Knox, isn't it time the Navy bigwigs brought our first line of defense fully up to date by abolishing the color line?

If white boys won't fill up the Navy, colored boys will eagerly do so.

KNOX BLASTS HOPE; JIMCROW POLICY STANDS

MAY 18 1941

Change Would Cause 'Discord'

Negroes, eyeing the United States Navy as an avenue in which they may offer their services to their country, this week awoke to the stark realization that hopes of allying themselves with this branch of the nation's armed forces on a basis of equality, were vain.

There is no place there for them, unless they are content to accept the menial status of messmen. There is no hope for further advancement

Such was made plain this week when a letter from Colonel Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, Colonel Knox was replying to a query as to the Negroes' status in the United States Navy, put to him by Representative Charles J. Jenkins of the Illinois General Assembly at a Washington, D. C. conference last week.

Colonel Knox' letter, which is printed in its entirety in this article, stated in emphatic terms that to admit Negroes in any capacity in the Navy, other than messmen would endanger national safety.

"To introduce ... a change in the present rules regarding the assignment of Negroes for service aboard ship so that there would be a mingling of the white and black races in the confined quarters of the ships would be sure to provoke discord and demoralization," he states.

"Unfortunately, there are still far too many people in the Navy and out of it who would resent such an innovation."

Last week Representative Jenkins and two other members of the Illinois State Legislature conferred in Washington with high officials and presented Illinois' protest of the present discrimination of Negroes in the national defense program.

They conferred with Secretary of War Patterson, congressmen and Sidney Hillman of the Office of Production Management, outlining discriminations which occurred in Illinois in the employment of Negroes in industries holding defense contracts, and cited barriers raised in all phases of the national defense setup.

The congressmen were unanimous in endorsing the program of eliminating the color bar in national defense. Patterson told of the army's policy of integration of Negroes on equal footing in all branches of the nation's armed services, and the establishment within the last two weeks of a tank battalion and anti-tank battalion to be manned by Negroes.

Thousands Of Negroes Needed For Navy

OCT 16 1941

Thousands of Negroes are needed for service in the Navy. The age limit is between 17 and 31. They may enlist in the regular Navy for six years or in the Naval Reserve for four years and be released from active duty after the national emergency.

Negro boys between 17 and 18 may enlist for minority and be discharged when they become 21 years of age—unless they prefer the Naval Reserve and want to be released from active duty when the emergency ends.

Negroes enlist for the messmen branch of the Navy. That is, they cook and serve food. This gives them splendid training which may benefit them in civil life should they choose to work in hotels or dining cars.

And it is also to be remembered that when the guns are fired, the Negroes take part in that, too.

Alabama has consistently led in recruiting Negroes for the Navy, but more and more are needed. The quota is unlimited.

Negroes are urged to see the Navy Editor of this paper, or apply at the Navy Recruiting Station in the Lee County Courthouse, Opelika, Alabama.

Hugh Mulzac, Who Captained the S.S. Yarmouth for Marcus Garvey, Feels Lucky to Hold a Job as Chief Steward on Ship Carrying Munitions to Great Britain

By MORGEN S. JENSEN
(Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 3—Hugh Mulzac, holder of a master mariner's certificate from the United States Department of Commerce and a former captain of one of Marcus Garvey's ocean-going liners, has been denied the opportunity to work at his profession on account of his color, his wife revealed last week.

Mulzac completed the course in navigation at the Training School of the Recruiting Service of the United States Shipping Board, Baltimore, Md. His certificate was signed at Boston, Mass., December 24, 1918, by Henry Howard, director of Recruiting Service.

Mulzac then received his Master's certificate from the United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, stating "he can safely be intrusted with the duties and responsibilities of Master of Steam and Motor Vessels of any gross tons, upon the waters of any ocean." He has renewed the Master's certificates at the conclusion of every five-year period, his current one being dated January 21, 1941.

Armed with his credentials, Captain Mulzac set forth to land a job at his chosen profession. However, bitter disillusionment was in store for him. He quickly learned that ship owners regarded Captains as white men. Negroes in maritime circles, were considered only for menial positions. He applied at several private shipping concerns for a job as Captain, but always received the same answers—"Fill out your application and possibly you'll hear from us." But, he never heard!

Learning of Captain Mulzac's plight, the Brooklyn Council of the National Negro Congress on May 14, 1941, drafted a cemmunication to Admiral E. Land, Chairman, U. S. Maritime Commission, Washington, D. C., outlining Mulzac's qualifications and requesting that the Captain be placed in a position befitting his training.

The Council supplemented this community on May 31, 1941, with a letter to President Roosevelt, enclosing a copy of the draft to Admiral E. Land. The President was told how Mulzac had been refused employment as a captain, despite the fact that there wa sa shortage of trained men at the time. The Chief Executive was asked to used the power of his office to abolish any racial discriminatory policies which might be responsible for Mulzac's unemployment by Federal agencies.

A reply dated June 9, 1941, from John W. Martyn, Administrative Assistant, War Department, Washington, D. C., concluded with the sentence: "The character of appointment desired by Captain Mulzac is not within the jurisdiction of the War Department."

Admiral E. S. Land, Chairman, United States Maritime Commission, Washington, D. C., concluded as follows in a reply dated June 18, 1941: "The Commission regrets that it has nothing to add to its letter of May 21, 1941, which could possibly assist Mr. Mulzac in obtaining the position aboard ship he desires. We again, therefore, advise you of our inability to be of any assistance to Mr. Mulzac

Captain Mulzac was born in the British West Indies. When home, the 55-year-old mariner resides at 536 Dean street, Brooklyn, N. Y., with his understanding wife, Mrs. Ada Mulzac; three charming daughters, Joyce, 20; Una, 18; Claire, 15, and a splendid son, Hugh, 10.

Although Mr. Mulzac has held a Master Navigator's certificate for the past 20 years, only once was he able to serve as a Captain. For two years he served as Master of the S. S. Yarmouth of Marcus Garvey's Black Star Line, saliing between New York and the West Indies.

Ironically enough, even though Captain Mulzac can safely be intrusted with the duties and responsibilities of Master of Steam and Motor Vessels of any gross tons, upon the waters of any ocean," today—well, he feels that he's lucky to be holding down a job as Chief Steward on the Amreican-Hawaiian Line S. S. Mantania, somewhere in the war zone carrying ammunition for Great Britain.

HERE WE ARE, ADMIRAL!

There are still tremendous hurdles to be jumped, seas of discrimination to be crossed, mountains of prejudice to be scaled—but at last the goal is in sight, and it is no mirage.

This is a victory of the colored citizens of the United States who, to the amazement of the opposition, showed an unprecedented and iron-shod unanimity.

If we are as resolute and determined in fighting against jim crowism in the armed forces, we shall be equally successful.

Last week Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, begged Congress to violate the Government's contract with its naval enlisted men by holding them in the service, regardless of the expiration of their six-year enlistment periods, for "as long as the national interest is imperiled."

His reason is that "the best men for the Navy are those serving now."

When Senator Johnson of California criticized this proposal as an infringement upon personal rights, the doughty Admiral replied, "where the interests of the individual and the government come into conflict, the government's interest must prevail."

Well, we seem to have gone a long way from the Constitution in the last few years, but what interests us is the Admiral's views about what the Government can force the sailors to do in this instance as contrasted with his frightened attitude toward what the Government cannot do in the case of Negro sailors.

Admiral Nimitz says in one breath that Uncle Sam can and should break its contract with a sailor and compel him to stay in the Navy indefinitely, while in the next breath he says that this all-powerful government cannot compel a white sailor to work and sleep alongside a colored sailor or take orders from a colored petty officer "because it will make trouble!"

If there is such difficulty in getting good men for the Navy, why does not Admiral Nimitz stop his jim crow policies and enlist colored citizens for all branches of the naval service!

Here we are, Admiral, hundreds of thousands of us, ready and willing to serve; and you have yourself stated that young Negroes are so smart that many of them would "have to be" promoted.

Are we maintaining the Navy to defend the nation, Admiral, or to perpetuate the color caste system?

Atlanta Youth Is On U. S. Battleship In Pearl Harbor

DEC 9 1941

Mrs. Arnita Thrasher, of 865 Thurmond Street, N. W., is deeply concerned about the news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, T. H.

Her son, Eddie Thrasher Jr., enlisted in the navy voluntarily in July 1940, was sent to Virginia, thence to California and finally to Pearl Harbor.

When heard from last week, young Thrasher was serving on one of Uncle Sam's battleships regularly stationed at Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. Thrasher and daughters are asking the prayers of their friends that all is well with the Atlantan.

A number of Atlanta youths are in service or on their way for service at Pearl Harbor having replaced Japanese classified laborers and mess men.

Messmen Not Sailors to Whites at Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (ANP).—Not only are they barred from all other branches of the navy, but some 300 members of the mess department here are not even regarded as part of the navy by white sailors, who insist that they be called mess attendants or messmen, rather than sailors.

This practice is followed not only by the officers and petty officers, but the entire white enlisted personnel.

The ranking colored naval attache here is a machinist's mate—a petty officer—who has a 28-year service record and would have been retired several months ago except for the existing emergency.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gives Formula For Fighting Naval Discrimination

SEP 13 1941

Color discrimination in the United States Navy ought to be wiped out and can be wiped out through merit and pressure, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, stated at a press conference held here Thursday in connection with a day-long visit to federal projects in the Pittsburgh area.

"Yes, I do," Mrs. Roosevelt replied sympathetically when she was asked if she knew that the United States' Navy had a policy of blunt discrimination against the Negro.

She then discussed at some length steps which the Negro and others might take to remove restrictions in the Navy.

MAY COMMAND "E" BOATS

SEP 13 1941

She expressed the view that the Navy itself might make a start by using Negroes to man the small coastwise naval vessels which are being placed in service.

"I think that is a practical approach," she stated.

"So far as the larger, ocean-going vessels are concerned," she continued, "I am not so sure. The Navy insists that it would face a problem in manning these vessels at sea because of the necessity of keeping seamen stationed at many different points for ship replacements."

This point of view has been expressed by naval officials. Plainly, it means that bases are maintained at widely-scattered points where ships are manned and re-to confront those who are prejudiced against him, or skeptical of his ability, with continual examples of his achievements and to keep up the pressure against those agencies, including the Navy, which erect barriers against him.

She spoke warmly of the experiments in aviation being conducted at Tuskegee.

"That is the type of thing I mean," she said. "If Negroes admitted to the United States Army Air Corps do all they can to make good, if they have the success of such a unit to back up their pressure, they can fight discrimination in other quarters more effectively."

Throughout the interview, Mrs. Roosevelt took it for granted that Negroes would continue to press against discrimination in the Navy and elsewhere.

In response to other questions, she deplored the lack of job opportunities for Negro youth and expressed the hope that Negro and white youth might work together for national defense.

NAVY OFFERS UNLIMITED OPPORTUNITIES TO NEGROES.

Unlimited opportunities in the Navy await Negro men and boys between 17 and 31 years of age.

White people can be of great service to the Negroes by informing them of the opportunities in the Navy.

Negroes may apply in person or write a postal card to the Navy Recruiting Officer in any one of the following towns in Alabama and Florida:

In Alabama; Andalusia, Anniston, Birmingham, Decatur, Demopolis, Dothan, Florence, Gadsden, Huntsville, Mobile, Montgomery, Opelika, Selma, Tuscaloosa, and Jasper.

In Florida; Marianna, Panama City and Pensacola.

IS THE NAVY WAKING UP?

News that the U. S. Navy is studying ways and means of extending Negroes' service beyond the galley indicates that perhaps our most obdurately Negrophobic branch of the government is waking up.

But frankly, what is there for the Navy bigwigs to study?

All they have to do is to open all branches of naval service to Negroes and then enforce order and discipline, which is what they are paid to do.

If there is objection on the part of white sailors to serving with black sailors, then let the white sailors take the consequences.

But the trouble all along has not been with the white sailors but with the white officers and the Naval officials in Washington.

The day that the Navy moguls open all branches of the service to Negroes and issue specific orders to all officers to rigidly, but justly, enforce discipline, the problem will be entirely solved.

As long as rampant racialism dominates our Navy, what is the point in fighting Hitler?

Navy Looks Askance At Negro Designer

OCT 25 1941

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—(ANP)—Navy officers and employes in the bureau of ships, navy department, down on Independence avenue raised their eyebrows and looked askance as a young Negro walked in to take a position certified by the civil service commission as a "designer". The chap, Irvin C. Jackson of Philadelphia, is a graduate of Pennsylvania State college and of the University of Pennsylvania School of Engineering.

OCT 25 1941

Mr. Jackson worked for several years with the Philadelphia Transportation company and had been on the civil service lists for some time. His predicament came to the attention of some folks who could help him and in view of the President's executive order, he was immediately called, certified and placed in a position for which he was qualified. The design section of the ship bureau is one of the highest technical divisions of the navy department.

Negroes Needed For Service in Navy As Messmen

Thousands of Negroes are needed for service in the Navy. The age limit is between 17 and 31. They may enlist in the regular Navy for six years or in the Naval Reserve for four years and be released from active duty after the national emergency.

Negro boys between 17 and 18 may enlist for minority and be discharged when they become 21 years of age—unless they prefer the Naval Reserve and want to be released from active duty when the emergency ends.

Negroes enlist for the messmen branch of the Navy. That is, they cook and serve food. This gives them splendid training which may benefit them in civil life should they choose to work in hotels or dining cars.

The Navy Department of our Government under the leadership of Secretary Frank Knox, an erstwhile Republican, has been calling for 500 Negro mess mates to work in the Navy and 200 white employees to boss or control the 500 Negro mess mates. In the United States Navy Negroes are not allowed to fill any position above that of mess mate. The duties of a mess mate, is to scrub the floors, wash the dishes, cook and do other dining room services under a white man, who does not know as much about the duties of the mess mates, as they do themselves. A colored man who has been used to washing pots, rubbing brass, peeling potatoes and washing other vegetables, knows much more about it than a white man who has only seen these things when they were cooked and prepared by black hands on the table ready for him to eat. But Mr. Knox who ran for Vice President on the Republican ticket in 1936, knows but little about the duties of a Navy Chief and in order to hide his ignorance of his duties, he is giving the Negro less opportunity than his democratic predecessors did. But like the average Negro who seeks hard to make the white man believe he is better than any other Negro; Secretary Knox is going out of his way to make the President believe he is the best secretary he has. And the Secertary like the average white southern politician believes the best way to prove his loyalty and efficiency, is to do something mean or discriminate against the Colored man.

Navy Changes Mind After Bid To Race Pilots

Hampton Students Later Told That Mistake Was Made

NOV 13 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—(SNS)—Student pilots in Hampton Institute's civilian pilot training program had a faint glimmer of hope recently that at last they would be able to put their flying talents to use in defending America with the U. S. Navy.

But the joy was short living and the students found that they were merely the victims of another Navy "boner."

It all started when the Hampton undergraduates in the Civilian Aeronautics Administration sponsored flying courses received letters from Lieut. Clark Bucknam, USNR, of the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board at Anacostia, D.C., asking that they immediately seek appointment as aviation cadets. Searching through the enclosed application form and two pages of rules and regulations, the young men found no mention of racial discrimination and thought that at least they would be given an opportunity to fight for their country with the U. S. Navy.

NOV 13 1941

Two of the student pilots, Richard W. Hall of Albany, Ga., and Edward A. Gibbs, of New York City, immediately wrote Lieut. Bucknam to verify this assumption and told him that they were colored.

His point-blank answer, which stilled the hopes of Hampton students that the Navy had at last accepted democracy, stated that the Navy accepted "applications from Negroes in none by the messman branch."

Continuing, Lieutenant Bucknam said that "this policy was instituted in the interest of harmony and efficiency aboard ship."

And while the Navy continues its urgent appeal for flyers, many hundreds of experienced Negro pilots all over the nation continue to train for the day that they may serve in the defense of America.

Atlanta Youth To Finish West Point

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Congressman Arthur Mitchell's first appointee to the West Point Military academy graduates with the June class and with honors, much to the gratification of the congressman who has fought for the Negro youth's admission to both the military and naval academies. This year's grad who will receive his commission as second lieutenant in the infantry is James D. Fowler, a Washington lad, graduate of Dunbar high school. He was born in Atlanta.

Cadet Fowler was named on May 13, 1937, and was admitted to the academy in July, 1937, according to custom. Having passed his mental and physical tests with a high degree average, Cadet Fowler was not required to take the examination on entering the academy.

Fowler may be assigned to either the 24th and 25th and not to one of the new outfits.

In West Point at present is another Mitchell appointee, Robert B. Treswell, son of a Warrant officer stationed at Ft. Benning, Ga. Young Treswell was admitted to the academy in July, 1939, hailing from Chicago.

Another appointee ready to enter the academy, having been qualified and awaiting the entering class in July, is H. Martin Francis of Washington.

Congressman Mitchell's appointees have thus far maintained an excellent record and have more than justified his appointments.

Should the latter two finish the Academy, the regular army will then have just about the largest number of line officers it has ever had from the Negro race. At present, Cadet Fowler and Capt. Benj. Davis are two, and with the two additional officers coming in 1942 and 1946, the total will be four regulars, unless other colored lads have been named elsewhere and succeed.

TWO NOMINATED FOR WEST POINT

PHILADELPHIA. —Two local youths, Lemuel L. Tucker of 2044 Turner Street and Alphonso Williams of 2032 Turner Street, both sophomores at Lincoln University, were nominated on Friday by Congressman John E. Sheridan for appointment to West Point Military Academy.

The two, graduates of Central High School, will take the mental and physical examinations on June 16 for entrance to the academy on July 1. Both, it was learned, have high scholastic ratings at Lincoln.

First in State's History

Tucker, it is reported, has been designated as the Congressman's first choice, with Williams a an alternate.

The nomination of the youths marks the first time that colored residents of this state have been residents of this state have been recommended by a Pennsylvania Congressman for entrance ito the academy.

Neither Congressman Sheridan, Mr. Knox, nor the two nominees could be reached for a statement on the appointment. Robert Tresville, a former student of the Germantown High School and Pennsylvania State College, is a cadet at the academy.

MORE CHAPLAINS NEEDED

Judging from the information coming from many of the selectees who visit St. Louis we are forced to the conclusion that there is a need, yes, a serious need, for more chaplains in the army. We are particularly interested in the need of spiritual guidance among the Negro youth, who, by the thousands, are being inducted into service. And while it is true that the citizens, as well as the army officials are doing much to look after the welfare of the soldiers when they visit the cities, yet we think that the chaplain in the camp who sees the soldier daily and to whom the soldier may appeal daily for advice and encouragement, is the greater need.

Speaking of spiritual guidance, the President of the United States recently said:

"As Commander-in-Chief I take pleasure in commending the reading of the Bible to all who serve in the armed forces of the United States. Throughout the centuries men of many faiths and diverse origins have found in the Sacred Book words of wisdom, counsel and inspiration. It is a fountain of strength and now, as always, an aid in attaining the highest aspirations of the human soul."

A statement from the Chief of Chaplains:

"Look up your chaplain at the first opportunity. Your welfare is his first concern, and you will find him friendly and helpful at all times. His counsel and advice will guide you in avoiding or overcoming difficulties. In many ways you can help him in his services for others. A close friendship between a chaplain and his men preserves and promotes a fine spirit in any service unit."

More chaplains among the soldiers will pay a large dividend which dollars and cents cannot approximate.

"Race Army Officers Out Of Proportion To Whites"--Scott

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 7.—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, released some figures a few days ago with great satisfaction to himself, and evidently with the complacent thought that the Negro people of the United States would be so happy their hats would be thrown in the air, while smiles besmeared their lips and countenances.

The Secretary announced, with becoming impressiveness, at his Press Conference that: There are 69 633 Negro officers and men on active duty in the various Army corps, and emphasized the figures "because", as he said,, "of the criticisms which sometimes come that we are not using them enough."

Probably Negroes should be happy that after the many torrid months they have labored to break down War Department discriminations they have been able to achive even this small recognition.

VOLUNTEER ENLISTMENTS DISCOURAGED

Few readers will fail to recall the first intentions of the War Department when the Defense Program began to get underway. The four Regular Negro Army units—the 24th and 25th Infantry, and the 9th and 10th Cavalry, after being skeletonized and broken up into small, dispersed units over a period of the some 20 years since World War 1 were brought to sizable proportions, but volunteer enlistment by Negroes in all other units of the Army Corps were sedulously discouraged. And then came the Selective Service Act.

Before induction processes are concluded, we shall probably have that forced representation of 92,345 so far authorized, but in other respects the same old rigidities will operate, particularly with respect to Negro-officer personnel in the units which have been apportioned to us—an officer personnel almost and relatively unimportant.

Take these figures so impressively released by Mr. Stimson: After all these years, since Emancipation in 1865, there are only 2 Colored Regular Army Officers with Troop Units and 1 Colored Regular Army Officer with the Inspector General's Office, along with 3 Regular Army Chaplains, despite the fact that these 4 Regular Negro Army Units were established by a Consolidation Act passed by Congress on March 3, 1869—more than 72 years ago.

DISPARITY OF RATIO

Also, there are now in service 227 Negro National Guard Officers, and 23 Negro Reserve Officers, that is, a ratio of 266 men to each Negro officer.

Now look at this picture: There are 1,428,267 white men and officers, with a ratio of about 1 officer to every 13 men.

How in the name of all good reason, while Secretary Stimson is bragging of the "recognition" being given Negroes in the Armed Services, can the War Department justify this disparity of ratio?

The tradition of the War Department is to "play down" the capability of Colored officers. This is a well-recognized fact. Why should it expect Colored officers, then, whom it seeks to discredit, to capably meet the exacting requirements of training their men while handicapped with such a disproportionate ratio of responsibility.

FAIR-PLAY NOT BEING OBSERVED

One other thing: Why should Secretary Stimson seek to satisfy militant public opinion by issuing a Release calculated to convey the notion that fair-play and justice are being regarded and observed in the treatment of Negro soldiers, calling special attention thereto, when even a casual review of his own statement exposes the marked and traditional attitude of War Department hostility when it comes to according Negroes that even-handed justice to which they are entitled?

Their courage, their ever-loyal support of Government and country in all the Wars of the Republic—none of these, it seems, can break down the patronizing spirit of the War Department.

The evasions and wrongs and the hurts the War Department have done us and seeks still to do us, as we have consistently sought to serve our country, without flinching or disloyalty of any kind whatsoever, still do not discourage us. Is there a more loyal group in the United States?

ELIGIBLE OFFICERS NOT BEING CALLED

It may be of interest to the Secretary of War to know that, on May 15 last, there were 377 Colored Reserve Officers eligible for active duty, not counting the ROTC graduates of the current year, who are eligible.

It is well-known that many white Reserve Officers are on duty with Colored Units. These could be replaced with Colored Reserve Officers. The unjustifiable ratio of 1 Colored officer to each 266 men, with 1 white officer to 13 men only should speedily be adjusted.

Also, it may not be amiss to remind the Secretary of War that his estimated Army strength as of June 30, 1941, of 1,497,900 officers and men to be provided should include a total of 149,790 Colored officers and men instead of 92,345 as authorized—a difference of 57,445, if he wishes, in all fairness ,to give us our percentage total of the whole.

A Press Conference Release by Mr. Stimson at an early date acknowledging and rectifying this situation will be joyously welcomed by all lovers of fair-play, white and black alike.

Edgar Brown And Rev. Jernagin Ask House Group For Training Camp For Race Officers

DEC 6 1941

Appropriations Committee Asked to Sarmark 20 Million Dollars for Separate Facilities—Plan Previously Rejected By 50 Race Leaders, Organizations.

DEC 6 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 4—Edgar Brown, president of the United Government Employes, Inc., appearing before the House of Representative's Appropriations Committee last week, appealed for the earmarking of 20 million dollars for "separate training facilities for Negro officers," a plan which has been repudiated by fifty leading Negro citizens throughout the country and by practically every prominent race organization. He was joined in his appeal by the Rev. Dr. W. H. Jernagin, president of the National Sunday School and BTU Congress. Both men were heard as the Committee continued its hearing on the new 6 billion dollar appropriation for the armed forces of the nation.

DEC 6 1941

Opposition and ignorance to the discriminatory policies of the War Department was voiced by Congressman Lambertson of Kansas who stated that the Negro people of Kansas and everywhere else "to his knowledge" had complained about the present Army setup. In reply, Mr. Brown stated that Lambertson had not contacted Negro publications or such publications as PM, and other great metropolitan newspapers and magazines, which have continually opposed discriminatory Army tactics.

DEC 6 1941

In Dr. Jernagin's appeal, he stated, "Many of the young Negroes cannot understand why they should defend a democracy abroad that is not practised at home. One of these practices is the failure to fully integrate Negro officers into the armed forces."

The earmarking of $20,000,000 for the training of additional Negro officers would result in the establishment of a Negro Officers Training Camp, such as was constructed at Des Moines, Iowa, during the World War. A few weeks ago, when race leaders heard that Brown had requested separate training facilities through the War Department, they issued an emphatic repudiation of the plan and demanded the use of present facilities for the training of both Negroes and whites.

PHILADELPHIANS FETE CADETS AT ARMY-NAVY SPECTACLE

Two Race West Pointers at Game With Family and Friends As Guests—Third Cadet on Sick List.

DEC 6 1941

By RANDY DIXON
Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—Eighteen hundred nattily-arrayed U.S. Military Academy cadets marched straight and true, precision formation, into Municipal Stadium here Saturday—amid the spirit of pageantry and gaudy trimming with which the Army-Navy game, greatest of all football spectacles, is decked, but none marched more straight nor true than Cadets Robert Tressville, a second-term man, and Cadet Minton Francis, a fourth termer.

In full dress and with the regulation $5 in their pockets (fun funds) like their fellow-cadets, "Mister" Tressville and "Mister" Francis were the cynosures of the eyes of thousands of on-lookers as they alighted from the special trains bearing the cadets to the railroad siding adjacent to the stadium into which they filed to see the Navy, eventually, defeat the Army, 14 to 6.

CADET ENTERTAINED GUESTS AT GAME

Particular emphasis was directed today at our future army leaders, because of the stress of the times, and particular emphasis was placed on "Mister" Tressville and "Mister" Francis because it is they who represent the future outstanding leaders of our race in Uncle Sam's khaki forces.

DEC 6 1941

And Philadelphia took extra particular pride in both cadets because Tressville was reared and educated in Philadelphia and Francis, while a native of Washington, D.C., attended the University of Pennsylvania here last year, and was a member of the freshman 150-pound crew.

Tressville, a handsome youth, 21 years, 6-foot 1-inch and 172 pounds, had as his guests at the game, his uncle, Walter Tressville Sr., of 5502 Magnolia avenue, Germantown; his cousin, Virmetta Tressville, 12, and his "extra special guest," Miss Claire Pratt, a beautiful Baltimorean, and a recent graduate of Smith college in New England.

Immediately after the game Tressville went to the home of his uncle where he divided the few hours allotted the cadets before retraining again for West Point at 9:40 p.m., between greeting friends and neighbors, and sharing in a fullsome turkey dinner with members of his immediate family.

Seated around the festive board were: Mr. Tressville, the uncle and his wife, Virginia; Mrs. Tressville's mother, Mrs. Annie Nelson; Mrs. Bessie Tressville, another aunt of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Mary Richardson, of New York City; the Tressville children: Ma-Chare, 16; Vermetta, 12, and Walter Jr., 11; Miss Pratt and Thomas Watkins, a buddy, whose home is in Charlotte, N.C., and who is a student in the U. of Pennsylvania Dental School.

MEMBER OF TRACK TEAM

Tressville is the son of an army officer stationed at Fort Benning, Ga. He made his home, however, with his uncle and attended Germantown high school here where he was an outstanding athlete.

After spending one year at Penn State college he was appointed to the U. S. Military Academy by Congressman Arthur T. Mitchell of Chicago. His record there is considered a brilliant one. In a class of 491, he stands within the first group at present. He has one more year before completing his course, and is a member of the varsity track, cross country and tennis team.

Francis is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John Francis and the nephew of Dr. Henry M. Minton, medical head of Mercy hospital, after whom he was named.

Dr. Minton and his wife, Edith, attended the game as his guests along with his mother and father. Also present were his sister, Mrs. Betty Francis West; Col. Harry Atwood and Miss Doris Hall, the girl-friend, all of Washington, D.C.

THIRD CADET ON SICK LIST

After the game the group ate dinner at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Minton, 1130 South 18th street.

A third cadet, Clarence M. Davenport, a second-termer like Tressville, was unable to attend the game. An infected tooth, it was learned, had placed him in the Military Academy hospital. Davenport is a native of Detroit, Mich.

ASKS TRAINING EXPENSES OF $20,000,000

NOV 28 1941

Faces House Appropriation Committee

47K

WASHINGTON — (SNS) —In a fervent plea before the House appropriations committee Monday, Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employes, Inc., and director of the National Negro Council, asked that $20,000,000 of the six billion-dollar additional war department appropriation for 1941 be earmarked to train Negro commissioned officers and air pilots for the 100,000 race soldiers in the army.

Declaring that there are no traitors to the cause of democracy in the colored race today and that there have been none in American history, Brown called upon the committee "to right a great injustice which continues to be the lot of these soldiers because of their race and color." Brown reminded that "no amount of money or organization can ever make fighting men if you kill their spirit of patriotism and loyalty."

WARNS CONGRESSMEN

"Let us not forget Dunkirk and bleeding France. It must not happen here," Brown warned the congressmen, pointing to the U. S. Army record of keeping most of the 100,000 Negro soldiers "stymied in the category of first class privates without important exception."

NOV 28 1941

"The severity of the discrimination many of these colored soldiers has been branded as "Hitlerism" by many Negro leaders in protest meetings here in the nation's capital," Brown told the committee. "Hundreds of Negro newspapers have joined in the opposition and thousands of Negro ministers have denounced these practices from pulpits. This committee should know, that the present policy to say the least and in all candor, has led to a rather complete denial of the same rights to thousands of Negro soldiers in the matter of promotional preference based on merit which has been cheerfully and freely bestowed upon all other soldiers. It does not savor of true democracy and constitutional justice. It is like a cancer eating at the very vitals of all our National Defense."

NOV 28 1941

"DUE SOMETHING"

Brown said the War Department has made it all but impossible for eligible and qualified Negro soldiers to be trained as commissioned numbers to serve as second and first lieutenants for thousands of strictly Negro units in the army.

"Something must be done and speedily if the Negro citizenry, one tenth of our total population, is not to be deceived," Brown warned.

NOV 28 1941

The Council director called attention to the "astounding official revelation that only 20 Negro soldiers out of 100,000 have been selected under present army regulations for specialized training leading to a possible officer's commission during the past year, despite the thousands of Negro college graduates and regular army soldiers of long experience not in camp speaks for itself. The fact that the four regular Negro army regiments, the 9th and 10th Cavalry and the 24th and 25th Infantry, are officered throughout by white Junior and Senior Commissioned officers highlights the inconsistency and vicious injustice of the present policy in its discrimination against the Negro soldier despite his long and patriotic service to God and country."

Brown submitted excerpts from of leading Negro newspapers, including th Atlanta Daily World, which he said "reveal as a result of painstaking surveys of the devastating effect on the morale of the Negro soldier and Negro people of these most unfair and short sighted actions.

In conclusion, Brown told the committee that "the times demand" that it earmark $20,000,000 of this 6 billion-dollar fund specifically to train Negro officers and air pilots and that "the congress could do nothing which would be a more genuine contribution to all out preparedness regardless of race."

Colored Officers In Army Burdened With Disproportionate Ratio Of Responsibility

By Emmett J. Scott

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, released some figures a few days ago with great satisfaction to himself, and evidently with the complacent thought that the Negro people of the United States would be so pleased their hats would be thrown in air, while smiles besmeared their lips and countenances.

The Secretary announced, wither respects the same old rigidi- becoming impressiveness, at his ties will operate, particularly Press Conference that: There are now 69,633 Negro officers and men on active duty in the various Army corps and emphasized the figures "because", as he said, "of the criticisms which sometimes come that we are not using them enough".

Probably Negroes should be happy that after the many torrid months they have labored to break down War Department discriminations they have been able to achieve even this small recognition.

Negro Volunteer Enlistments Discouraged

Few readers will fail to recall the first intentions of the War Department when the Defense Program began to get underway The four Regular Negro Army units—the 24th and 25th Infantry, and the 9th and 10th Cavalry, after being skeletonized and broken up into small, dispersed units over a period of the years with 3 Regular Army Chaplains, brought to sizable proportions, but volunteer enlistment by Negroes in all other units of the Army Corps were sedulously discouraged. And then came the Selective Service Act.

Before induction processes are concluded, we shall probably have that forced representation of 92,345 so far authorized, but in other respects the same old rigidities will operate, particularly with respect to Negro-officer personnel in the units which have been apporioned to us—an officer-personnel almost and relatively unimportant.

Take these figures so impressively released by Mr. Stimson: After all these years, since Emancipation in 1865, there are only 2 Colored Regular Army Officers with Troop Units and 1 Colored RegularArmy Officer with the Inspector General's Office, along with 3 Regular Army Chaplains, despite the fact that these 4 Regular Negro Army Units were established by Consolidation Act passed by Congress on March 3 1869 -- more than 72 years ago.

Disparity of Ratio

Also, there are now in service 227 Negro National Guard Officers, and 23 Negro Reserve Officers, that is, a ratio of 226 men to each Negro officer.

Now look at this picture: There are 1,428,267 white men and officers, with a ratio of about 1 officer to every 13 men

How in the name of all good reason, while Secretary Stimson is bragging of the "recognition" being given Negroes in the Armed Services, can the War Department justify this disparity of ratio?

The tradition of the War Department is to "play down" the capability of Colored officers This is a well-recognized fact. Why should it expect Colored officers, then, whom it seeks to discredit, to capably meet the exacting requirements of training their men while handicapped with such a disproportionate ratio of responsibility.

Fair-play Not Being Observed

One other thing: Why should Secretary Stimson seek to satisfy militant public opinion by issuing a release calculated to convey the notion that fair-play and justice are being regarded and observed in the treatment of Negro soldiers calling special attention thereto, when even a casual review of his own statement exposes the marked and traditional attitude of War Department hostility when it comes to according Negroes that even-handed justice to which they are entitled?

Their courage, their ever-loyal support of government and country in all the Wars of the Republic—all of these it seems, can break down the patronizing spirit of the War Department.

The evasions and wrongs, and the hurts the War Department have done us and seeks still to do us, as we have consistently sought to serve our country, without flinching or disloyaity of any kind whatsoever, still do not discourage us. Is there a more loyal group in the United States?

Eligible Colored Reserve Officers Not Being Called

It may be of interest to the Secretary of War to know that, on May 15 last, there were 377 Colored Reserve Officers. The unjustifiable ratio of 1 colored officer to each 266 men, with one white officer to 13 men only should speedily be adjusted.

Also, it may not be amiss to remind the Secretary of War that his estimated army strength as of June 30, 1941 of 1,497,900 officers and men to be provided should include a total of 149,790 colored officers and men instead of 92,945 as authorized—a difference of 57,445, if he wishes,in all fairness, to give us our percentage total of the whole.

A press conference release by Mr. Stimson at an early date acknowledging and rectifying this situation will be joyously welcomed by all lovers of fair-play, white and back alike.

Negro Carpenters To Share In Little Rock Defense Housing Jobs; Union Charter Given

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—The Urban League of Greater Little Rock, announced this week that a union charter has been granted to Negro carpenters of Little Rock by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America ,A. F. of L. The new Negro carpenters' Local 276 was formally presented with charter by H. M. Thackery, secretary-treasurer of the Arkansas Federation of Labor, on July 17th in a meeting held at Urban League headquarters. Presentation of the charter and election and installation of officers for Local 276 brought to successful conclusion strenuous efforts which began thirteen months ago.

The Little Rock Urban League had the cooperation of many civic and labor organizations in arousing the interest of Negro carpenters, organizing them for union affiliation and pressing vigorously their application for a charter before local union officials and heads of the United Brotherhood itself. The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance of Greater Little Rock, Rev. G. W. Blakley, president, and Rev. P. H. Kelley, secretary, played an important role in the movement.

The assistance of the National Urban League was provided when Lester B. Granger assistant executive secretary, made a visit to Indianapolis to place the case of the Little Rock Carpenters before William L. Hutcheson, general president. The charter was granted after strong opposition developed among Little Rock white trade unionists who were unwilling to share with Negro carpenters the jobs on defense and low-cost housing projects. Negro concrete finishers and bricklayers had secured employment on one USHA project which is now about completed, but Negro carpenters, representing the race's largest group of skilled workers in the building trades, were excluded because of their non-union status.

Not discouraged by early opposition, the corporation kept their organization and pushed their case so vigorously that opposition of local leadership was finally broken down, after President Hutcheson had inquired into the merits of the case.

Gen. Benjamin O. Davis On Tour Of Inspection

CAMP DAVIS, N. C. — Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, only colored soldier in the history of the Army to rise to the rank of a general officer, was at Camp Davis for informal inspection of colored regiments.

The 19th Coast Artillery Training Group, under the command of Col. R. D. Brown, staged a review for General Davis, who represents the Inspector General's department. The 19th Group consists of the 99th and 100th C. A., colored anti-aircraft regiments.

General Davis' visit was devoted to a study of the manner in which colored trainees are received, assigned and trained, as well as general living conditions relating to clothing, equipment, housing, welfare, morale and state of discipline.

After leaving Camp Davis, General Davis went to Fort Bragg for a similar inspection. The inspections are informal and do not require any formations or interruption of normal training activities, General Davis pointed out.

It was in 1898 that General Davis enlisted in the Army, being assigned to the Infantry. He rose swiftly from private to sergeant and in 1901 was commissioned a lieutenant. He was made a colonel in 1930, a brigadier general in 1940.

Not Enough Nurses

There were not enough nurses. The fourteen colored nurses can not care for all the wards; so white nurses are used—some working in the wards under colored doctors.

All the nurses are second lieutenants. They are signed up for one year, and may extend their army service at the end of this time if they find the army to their liking. They get a thirty-day vacation during the year, and are allowed a five-day emergency leave. Three years in the army makes one a regular army nurse.

They cannot be married and, in camp, cannot associate with the enlisted men. Nurses here have practically no social life. They spend their leisure time playing cards, tossing darts, talking or sleeping.

A Dull Life

Transportation to and from Fayetteville is so undesirable that they remain in camp unless a trip to town is absolutely necessary. A recreation hall is now being built, but until its completion, they have no place to relax but in their quarters.

Miss Della H. Raney, senior nurse of the staff, has the distinction of being the first colored nurse in our big new army. She was on duty just a few hours before the first nurse went to work at Camp Livingston, La. A native of Suffolk, Va., Miss Raney attended Virginia State College and received her nurse training at Lincoln Hospital, Durham, N.C.

Other nurses are:

Misses Emmie Perkins, of Chicago, Lincoln Hospital, N.Y.; Ruth Briggs, Buffalo, Lincoln Hospital, N.Y.; Margarette Ivory, Atlanta, Brewster Hospital, Jacksonville; Gladys Giles, Bainbridge, Ga., Grady Hospital, Atlanta; Louise Jacobs, New York City, Lincoln Hospital, N.Y.; Maria August, Atlanta, Spelman School of Nursing, Atlanta;

Lillie Emory, Knoxville, Grady Hospital; Inez Holmes, Norfolk, Piedmont Sanitarium; Margaret Kendrick, Athens, Ga., University Hospital, Augusta; Esther Stewart, Richmond, Ind., Provident Hospital, Chicago; Hanna Barfield, Goldsboro, N.C., Lincoln Hospital, Durham; Suzanne Davis, Chicago, Provident Hospital, Chicago; Rose Elliott, Philadelphia, Mercy Hospital, Philadelphia.

COMMISSION SOUGHT FOR JOE IN ARMY

Move Would Bolster Morale Of Troops In Army Camps

By JAMES EDMOND BOYACK
Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—Announcement last week that Joe Louis has been placed in classification 1-A by his draft board and therefore subject to immediate call, has led to widespread speculation concerning the role which the heavyweight champion will play in the service of his country.

Nationally prominent citizens of both races are agreed that the induction of the modest boy who came out of Alabama's cotton fields to become an internationally known figure of the sports world, presents the War Department with a unique opportunity to cement more cordial interracial relations in army camps and between Negro troops and the civilian population.

WOULD BOLSTER MORALE

It is suggested that the promotion of Louis to the rank of commissioned officer in the Morale Division would go far to bolster the morale of thousands of Negro troops still suffering from the shock of recent unwarranted attacks on their colored brothers in arms at Camp Robinson, Ark.; Fort Bragg, N. C., and other camps.

The international publicity resulting from this appointment would certainly have a most salutary political effect, especially in South America, where Nazi propagandists have been spreading lurid reports of brutal treatment of Negroes in the United States.

Furthermore it would be wholely in keeping with the spirit of President Roosevelt's order last week to all government departments and independent agencies, as well as to defense contractors, that they "take immediate steps to eliminate racial discrimbination, particularly against colored people."

On the other hand those who are eminently qualified to know, insist that the appointment of the idol of the Negro race to a rank far inferior to the prestige of his position in civilian life might be construed as an insult to all his people and result in completely demoralizing colored troops now in training to defend their country.

PRESTIGE DESERVES COMMISSION RANK

It is pointed out that regardless of the outcome of the champion's defense of his title against Lou Nova at the Polo Grounds here on September 29th, his prestige as a public figure could not be higher. His record as champion far surpasses that of any previous holder of the title and very likely never will be equalled. Because of his good sportsmanship and impeccable conduct both inside, and outside the ring, Joe Louis is credited with bringing the boxing game out of the morass into which it fell after the "Golden Age" of boxing when Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney were champions, to the position of dignity and public confidence which it now possesses.

Only recently, it is recalled, Lieutenant Commander Tunney, now in charge of Navy morale and physical training, publicly declared:

"It is a source of great pride to me to be able to think of Joe Louis as champion, for he combines all the important qualities that bring the title the highest prestige.

"I think that his deportment has brought credit, not only to the colored race, but to the boxing profession.

"He has worn the mantle of champion with dignity and respect."

Louis' story is a saga of the American way of life. Few Americans ever started with more limitations and fewer opportunities. Yet by almost superhuman efforts he fought his way to the top of what has been described as the toughest profession of them all. Moreover neither riches nor international acclaim have changed this young man's inherently fine character. He has been subjected to all the temptations which have ruined the careers of so many boxers. But as Joe eagerly looks forward to service in his country's uniform he has yet to smoke a cigarette, take a drink or spend a night in a night club.

No wonder that the heavyweight champion of the world is an inspiration to the nation's youth and universally respected by both black and white alike, in every walk of life. They realize that Joe Louis is not the British, French, Italian or German champion. HE IS THE AMERICAN HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION OF THE WORLD.

One question being asked this week is: "What could Joe do as morale officer in Uncle Sam's service?

JOE WILLING TO SERVE

To find out, the writer called at his training camp at Greenwood Lake, N. Y. John Roxborough said:

"Joe Louis is ready and willing to enter any branch of the service in any capacity to which he is assigned. Joe does not consider himself any different from any other young man being drafted to serve his country and for this reason he will neither expect nor ask for any special favors. However, you may quote me as saying that I am sure he will make a good soldier in any circumstances. He came up the hard way. I am confident that Uncle Sam will have reason to be proud of him.

"We know nothing of the demand by interested citizens that the champion be commissioned in the morale division. All I can tell you is that Joe Louis will never allow his name to be associated with such a move. And that goes double for Mr. Black and myself.

"However, you may be sure that Joe will be only too glad to do everything possible to help the morale of our colored boys wherever he may be assigned."

It is the opinion of the writer that Joe's promotion to a commission in the morale division would in itself have an excellent effect on the morale of the members of his race in uniform. It would give them a considerable "lift" to know that "Joe is now one of us." All would be looking forward to seeing him.

WOULD BE POPULAR ATTRACTION

If Brigadier General Frederick H. Osborne, Chief Morale Officer of the army decided to make the champion available to camps with motion pictures of his fights the demand for his appearance would be so widespread that it would probably take him nearly a year to cover the nine corps areas.

Again Joe could do an outstanding job by merely going around camps where colored soldiers are stationed to talk to them.

He would, of course, be a top-flight attraction giving boxing exhibitions at the various camps and refereeing bouts being presented by the soldiers themselves.

Under General Osborne, each corps area has a morale officer under whom the morale officers at the various posts in the area work. All kinds of entertainment, recreation and athletics are now being organized under this set-up.

Co-operating in the program is the United Service Organization of which Thomas E. Dewey is chairman and the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, of which Thomas J. Watson is chairman. Joe Louis' services would admirably fit into this civilian program.

Should the War Department decide to commission the heavyweight champion he would first have to spend 90 days in an officers' training camp.

NEGRO MEDICAL OFFICERS WILL BE CALLED TO ACTIVE SERVICE

FEB 8 194

The War Department announced today that about 110 Negro medical officers and nurses would be called to active service within the next sixty days. It is planned to assign them as follows:

Organization	Doctors	Dentists	Nurses	Medical Officers Sanitary Companies
Regimental Officers for the 366th Infantry, Fort Devens, Mass.	8	2	—	—
Members of Station Hospital Staff, Fort Bragg, N. C.	17	2	28	3
Members of Station Hospital Staff, Camp Livingston, La.	17	2	28	3
TOTALS	42	6	56	6

In addition to the immediate plans, it is anticipated that the three Negro National Guard Regiments will require a small number of Negro doctors and dentists to bring their medical staffs to full strength. It also is anticipated that a number of Negro Medical officers and nurses will be authorized soon for assignment to other regiments and station hospitals where there are Negro troops.

In the large general Army hospitals, it is not planned to use Negro professionals, although Negro patients will be accommodated without discrimination, receiving the same treatment and facilities as other patients.

FEB 8 1941

As Negro officers are called from the Medical Reserve, additional Reserve appointments will be made to fill vacancies. Recommendations of the National Medical Association and the National Dental Association will be considered for such personnel. Nurses will be procured through the Americn Red Cross.

The present available Negro Medical Reserve includes 55 doctors and 10 dentists, most of them either captains or first lieutenants.

General Praises Black Soldiers

JAN 5 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—The war department is not as anti-Negro as generally believed, if an article written by Major General ison E. Ely, which appeared in the Infantry Journal, December 1940, is to be taken as indication of the way one official feels. He writes:

"At Soissons there was put between the 1st and 2nd divisions, the Moroccan division which was one of the best French divisions. It included the Foreign Legion. It was composed of men all the way from white to black.

We have in this country to a large extent a sort of antipathy against other races, but after you have been in a few serious battles, that feeling goes away, you don't care whether a man is black, chocolate or white; all you ask is that he will fight and when you are banking on him on this flank you can know that he generally is going to be there.

"The Ist and IInd divisions were glad to have that Moroccan division in between them in the fight at Soissons.

"They didn't care what their previous history was; all they asked was that they fight and do their part, because when it comes to getting killed, all men's lives are to them alike. After a hearty dinner and with our normal faculties, in discussing these things we say we want this or that; but go back in history and see what your real reactions in time of battle will be; you don't care what color a man is, and if he is good enough to show he can command other men, beyond what the ordinary man can do, he goes just as high as anybody and his soldiers will carry on under him.

"It isn't a question then of what somebody that will prevent their they like, but whether they have being sent to the hereafter before their time."

Reporter Predicts Former 369th Commander May Get Cool Reception

JAN 4 1941

FORT RILEY, Kan., (By La Zetta LiDrazzah for ANP)—If recently promoted Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis is assigned to duty with the 9th and 10th cavalry in this area, he may look forward to an unhappy time. Most of the older soldiers and the non-commissioned officers have stated they prefer white officers and currently are "faring a hundred times better under white officers than we would under Gen. Davis."

To understand the reasoning back of this strange psychology, one must understand the mental makeup of the soldiers and non-commisisoned officers who are members of these regular army units. I know, for I served in the 9th cavalry for 12 years and left it only last summer.

For almost two decades, the 9th and 10th cavalrymen were little more than uniformed chambermaids, bootblacks, stablehands and flunkies for white officers and units, the 9th being restored to active duty status only last August. During the intervening years, white commissioned officers carefully selected and cultivated a mob of semi-illiterate colored non-commissioned officers who received special privileges in return for depriving other Negro soldiers of the few favorable advantages granted the race by the war department. These men, and the privates who have also gone along with them to obtain special favors, are the ones who are opposed to Gen. Davis as their commanding officer.

These "old soldiers", struggling along at the ranks of private and corporal, despite more than 20 years of service, begin to predict a formidable end to their freedom and privileges. Some contended that the rank of B. O. Davis would inspire him to treat them worse than any white commanding officer under whom they have served. These old soldiers were the leaders of the mob, which comprised approximately 95 percent of the soldiers of the 9th cavalry, that opposed the late Major Monroe S. Caver, their chaplain, in everything he planned during his last days in which he devoted his spare moments to documents which was meant to aid those interested in the recognition of the rights of Negro soldiers.

Near the close of November, grapevine rumors suggested that Gen. Davis had declined a chance to serve with the 9th and 10th cavalries. This, according to the Uncle Toms, of the white officered 9th and 10th, was the best news that they had heard in years. Nevertheles, having served 12 years as a private of the 9th cavalry, the writer has observed the introduction of enough acts of segregation, imposed upon Negro soldiers and civilians of Ft. Leavenworth and Ft. Riley to declare:

The suggestions of such Negro non-commissioned officers, are one of the main reasons why young, intelligent, progressive-minded Negroes are most always kicked out of the army and given dishonorable discharges. Those who are fortunate enough to get an honorable discharge find them mutilated with black marks of some description, which make it impossible for them to re-enlist should they desire to do so. Levi Pierce, one of the most brilliant and efficient young men to serve with the 9th and 10th. was doomed in such a way.

It is also interesting to note that despite the fact that the 9th cavalry was restored to duty, today Negroes in uniform in Ft. Riley are still washing dishes, polishing boots, scrubbing bathtubs, dumping garbage, grooming horses, flunkeying and doing other menial chores for the families of white commissioned officers.

Assign Colored Officers To Ft. Sill

MAR 8 1941

FORT CUSTER, Mich.—(ANP)—Acting under advices from higher headquarters, Lt. Col. Oscar Randall, commander of Chicago's 184th Field Artillery regiment, issued orders Saturday which will result in the assignment of two officers and 10 enlisted men to Fort Sill, Okla., on March 10. MAR 8 1941

The two officers selected are Lt. Orion Page and Lt. Hardy B. Ruffin, both natives of Chicago. Lt. Page, graduate of the University of Chicago law school, has been a member of the regiment for less than thre years. Lt. Ruffin has about one year of service and is a graduate of DuSable High School, where he was a cadet lieutenant colonel in charge of the ROTC.

The full quota of enlisted men will not be announced until later. At present careful tests are being in order that only the best privates and non-commissioned officers represent the regiment at Fort Sill. All officers and men selected will be required to take the regular three-month artillery course at the school.

NEGRO OFFICERS

APR 26 1941

There will soon be nearly 100,000 Negro youths under arms in various parts of the country but Negro commissioned officers are extremely rare.

There are only two such officers in the regular army and less than 150 in federalized National Guard regiments.

We have heard nothing about an officers' training school to train young Negroes to command troops, although thousands are capable and willing. APR 26 1941

We would like to hear something from Washington about this.

Officers in the Army

The army is a business, a huge enterprise using many skills because tons of materiel are necessary for the proper equipment of each enlisted man. For that reason its offer to train enlisted men for officers is of great importance to Negroes. It is at once the way up to knowledge and experience. It has immediate value. It is preparation for civilian opportunities afterward.

Our young men need no longer bewail the barrier that has kept them from their ambition. The army offers them training and a place to use it, with pay thrown in to boot! The requirement that they be enlisted for six months is no handicap. They are subject to the draft anyhow.

MAY 23 1941

In other days before the policy of the army was to incorporate Negroes into all its branches, enlistment meant only infantry or cavalry. Today the aspiring can be chemist or accountant, according to liking. Several heads of great businesses once were officers in the army. The same training is to be offered Negroes and they should take it. Even the ones not yet drafted can volunteer and after six months of service make application for officer training. The only prerequisite, a reasonable one, is that they have qualities of leadership.

MAY 23 1941

Except for the general policy of opening up the many branches of army service, this offer to train enlisted men, Negroes included, is the most forward step for them in this rapidly changing America. Only a few years ago commissioned office in the army was not to be thought of. Here it is wholesale.

The New York regiment of the National Guard which has been renamed the 369th Anti-aircraft regiment of artillery, a Negro outfit from top to bottom, has the supreme honor of the most firsts of all the U. S. regiments that served in the other World war. It hardly seems possible that so much distinction could come to it. The explanation made by one who knows the regiment is that it had to be good, because it had in it the largest percentage of college trained men. In like manner many well prepared Negroes today who want civilian opportunities will find the army's new plan of officer training the short cut to their desires.

DUE TO RETIRE JULY 1st, UNLESS..

JUN 7 1941

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 5 — The Pittsburgh Courier this week will ask the War Department of the United States and its Commander-in-Chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, not to retire Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro officer, from active service.

General Davis, now in command of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry Regiments, stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas, reaches the retirement age of 64 on July 1.

This means that on or about June 15, he may be ordered to his home for retirement.

Army law requires that Brigadier General Davis be retired, BUT it is believed to be within the province of the War Department to order him to active duty during an emergency.

The retirement law, The Pittsburgh Courier believes, was passed to open the way for advancement of younger officers.

But Brigadier General Davis is the highest ranking Negro officer in the Army. There is no one else to take his place. To 13,000,000 Negro citizens, he represents an achievement. . . the heights to which a Negro can advance in the Army.

Inside information has reached The Courier that the mere knowledge of Brigadier General Davis' presence at Fort Riley has caused a complete halt to the evil practices oftimes practiced against the enlisted men.

The Pittsburgh Courier is also requesting that civic organizations, fraternal groups, sororities and individuals write or wire the War Department.

EDITORIAL

NEGRO CITIZENS ASK A FAVOR OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT

Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, now in command of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry regiments at Fort Riley, Kans., will reach the retirement age for general officers this month. He has been assigned to Fort Riley until July 1. What may happen to him after July 1 can only be conjectured by those outside the War Department.

The law states that general officers must be retired at the age of 64. The law is JUN 7 1941 The law was put on the books to open the way for the advancement of younger officers. We have no complaint with the intent and aim of the law.

But Negro citizens of this country do not want to see General Davis taken out of active service. He is a symbol to the thirteen million American Negroes. He stands alone to represent the pinnacle of achievement for Negro citizens in the United States Army. He stands in the way of nobody because there isn't likely to be another Negro to qualify for general officer status for a good many years to come.

The War Department has taken considerable pains to provide for and to advance the Negro soldier within the limits of the separation policy pronounced by the President. It has shown itself to be considerate of Negro public opinion. We dare to believe that the War Department, convinced that it has the moral support of American Negroes, will go to some pains to retain General Davis in active service.

It has been the policy of the Department to recall into active non-combatant service retired general officers at reduced grade or rank. It may be necessary to do this with General Davis.

Then, again, it may not be. The present law was intended to remove the obstructions caused by seniority as they affect white officers. We don't believe there is a white general officer in the Army who would want the place now occupied by General Davis if he felt that by forcing General Davis out he destroyed the symbol and the inspiration of thirteen million Americans. The statute could be modified to cover the instance of retention of General Davis if those persons who shape Army policy were persuaded of the importance to a large group of citizens of such modification and if they would present the matter to the Congress.

We don't believe there is a member of the Congress, from the North or South, who would object to this gesture of good will toward Negro citizens. We hope the War Department will act and act quickly.

As a favor to Negro citizens we want the War Department to keep General Davis on the job—in active service, combatant or non-combatant, but don't retire him and don't give him a job that does not mean anything.

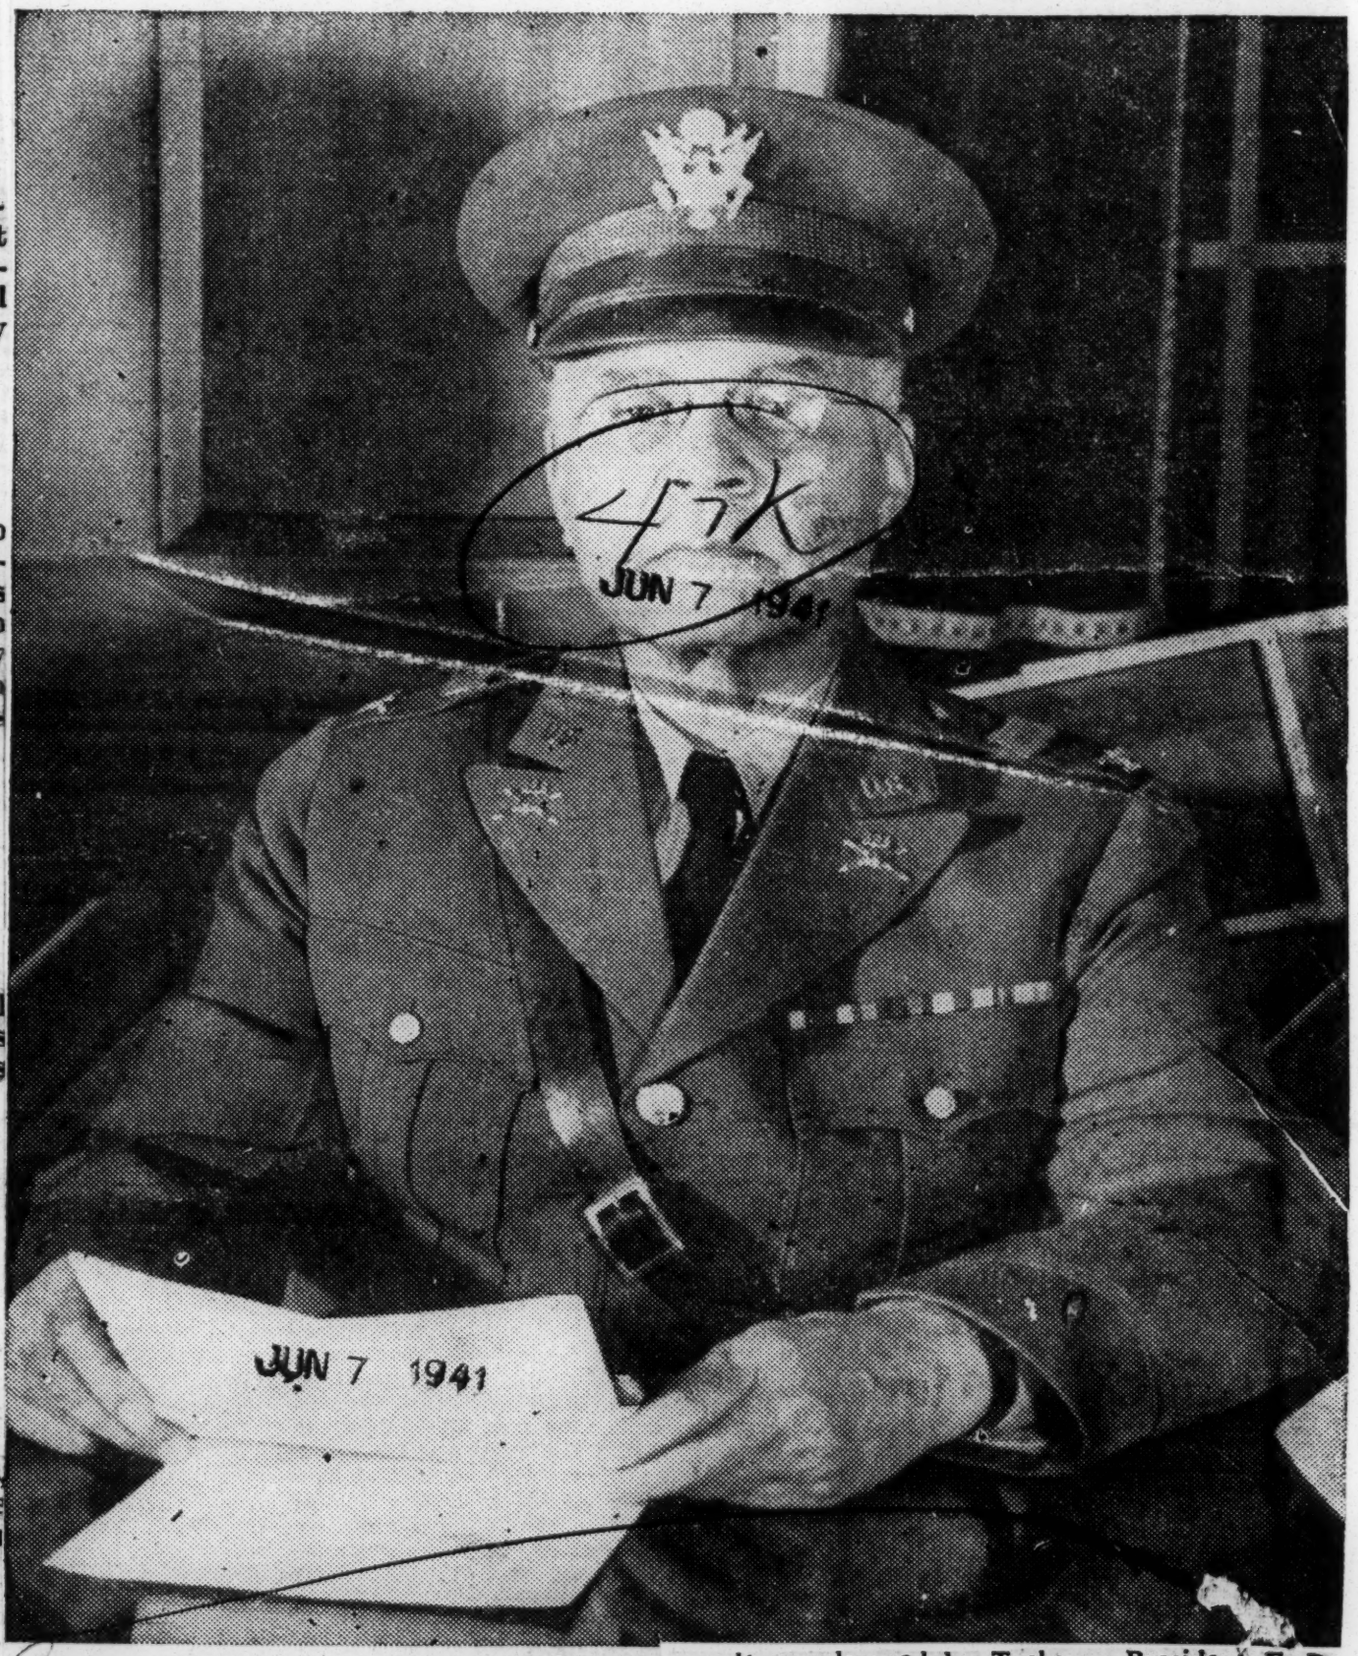
Army To Defer Gen. Davis' Retirement



WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis will not be retired July 1 when he reaches the age limit of 64, but contrary to custom, he will be retained in armed service.

It was learned by Tuskegee President F. D. Patterson after a visit to the war department Thursday that Gen. Davis will be ordered to Washington attached to the general staff and commissioned to visit and inspect cantonments housing colored groups. JUN 7 1941 present he commands the Fourth brigade at Fort Riley composed of the 9th and 10th cavalry regiments.

Bishop Turner Was First Chaplain in U. S. Army

Retired Veteran Recalls Many Facts About Pioneer Officers in American Armed Forces

By DAVID W. ADAMS

Because many of our youth are now engaged in military training, they should know something of the careers of outstanding colored soldiers of the past—those pioneer officers in America's armed forces.

The late Bishop Henry McNeal Turner of the Sixth Episcopal District, AME Church, is the trail-blazer of this article.

Among the few scores of our men who were commissioned officers in Union forces during the War of the Rebellion, Turner was the only one to receive a permanent commission in the regular army upon its reorganization at the close of the war.

Born in South Carolina in 1834 of free parents, he migrated as far North as Baltimore, where he was tutored at old Trinity College. He joined the Methodist Church, South, and was ordained a minister.

Work Outstanding

On August 1, 1863, while he was pastor of Shiloh Church in Washington, D.C., President Lincoln commissioned him a chaplain and assigned him to the First Regiment, U.S. colored troops mobilized at Washington, D.C., in March of that year.

When his regiment was demobilized in 1865, he was honorably discharged from his commission but so outstanding had been his work, he was recalled almost immediately and given a permanent appointment as chaplain and was ordered to Atlanta, Ga., to aid in the functioning of the Freedmen's Bureau.

Finding his position as an officer in the army untenable, among the rebels of Georgia, he resigned after about a year's service and affiliated himself with the AME Church in Georgia.

LIEUT. DAVID W. ADAMS, retired officer of the U.S. Regular Army, who recalled many historical facts about trail blazers in the armed forces for AFRO readers.

As a politician, he was postmaster at Macon, Ga., and went to the State Legislature. He died in Atlanta in 1915.

Flipper First Cadet

Under the orbit of Georgia's Turner came Henry Ossian Flipper, who in 1878 was appointed to the U.S. Military Academy by a Georgia Congressman.

Upon graduation in 1877 Flipper became the first colored commissioned line officer. He was appointed second lieutenant and assigned to the Ninth Cavalry. His service was brief with the army.

Upon his return to civil pursiuts, he became a noted civil engineer in Venezuela, Mexico and Central America. During President Harding's administration, he was recalled to the U.S. Government service to serve as an engineer official of the U.S.-Alaskan Railroad.

Lieutenant John Shanks Alexander, second colored West Point cadet and line commissioned officer, was a native of Arkansas, but was appointed to the military academy from Ohio in 1883. He was graduated with honors in 1887.

Lieutenant Alexander was the first preceptor of military education in our schools and served as professor of military science and tactics at Wilberforce University, which was the first school to offer such training to colored youth. His career was cut short by death in 1894.

Captain Davis, who was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, in the upper division of his class earned the right to join any branch of the army he selected.

He is known to have been interested in aviation for some time It is significant that young Davis was sent to Maxwell field as it is located near Tuskegee institute where the 99th pursuit air squadron will be located.

It is possible that Captain Davis was sent to Maxwell Field for training which will equip him to serve in a top position with the air squadron.

Two hundred or more young Negroes now are in training at Chanute Field, Ill., to become the ground crew or mechanics for the 99th squadron. Pilot training will begin later at Tuskegee.

James Fowler Makes Excellent Record at Military Academy

Mitchell Appointee Second to Complete Course in Recent Years; Captain B. O. Davis Was First

JUN 13 1941

WEST POINT, N. Y.—A Negro youth, James D. Fowler of Washington, was graduated with honors from the United States Military Academy here Wednesday morning, June 11.

Fowler, the first West Point appointee of Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, is the second Negro to be graduated from the military academy in recent years. The first was Captain Benjamin O. Davis Jr., who was graduated in 1936. Like other West Point graduates, young Fowler received his commission as second lieutenant. It is expected that he will be assigned either to the Twenty-fourth or Twenty-fifth infantry, not to one of the newly created army units.

JUN 13 1941

Cadet Fowler was appointed by Congressman Mitchell on May 13, 1937, and was admitted to the academy in July, 1937, according to custom. Having passed his mental and physical test with a high average, he was not required to take an examination upon entering the academy.

Fowler leaves two other Negro youths entered at West Point. One is Robert B. Treswell, son of a warrant officer stationed at Fort Benning, Ga. Treswell was appointed by Congressman Mitchell in July, 1939.

JUN 13 1941

Another appointee ready to enter the academy in July, having been qualified, is H. Martin Francis of Washington.

Fowler is the third Negro commissioned officer in the regular army today. The other two are Brig.-General B. O. Davis, commander of the Fourth Cavalry brigade at Camp Funston, Kas., and his son, Captain B. O. Davis Jr., now stationed at Maxwell field, Montgomery, Ala.

WASHINGTONIAN FIFTH OF RACE TO GRADUATE

Leaves Brilliant Record For His Successors At Military Academy

WEST POINT, N. Y.—(ANP)—With real war more imminent than ever, James D. Fowler, only Negro in the 1941 graduating class of the United States military academy, was handed his credentials and became a second lieutenant here on Wednesday, with the Secretary of War, Henry D. Stimson, delivering the commencement address.

JUN 14 1941

A class of 425 witnessed the historic ceremonies which gave to Uncle Sam needed new army officers for his rapidly growing regiments, but all eyes were on Fowler as he stood out—West Pointed, but also representative of a race that has had a hard time in the nation's service schools, and symbol of the national unity there must be if democracy is to save itself.

Behind Fowler, although he himself did not tell it, were four years of not only keeping up with lessons, but being on the qui vive so that nothing would happen to make his suspension necessary or possible; there were years, too, of trying to make it easier for other Negroes to follow.

Lieutenant Fowler is a graduate of Howard university and of Dunbar high school of Washington at both of which institutions he was outstanding in military science and in scholastic activities.

At Dunbar, he was a major in the cadet corps and president of the National Honor society. At Howard he filled the offices of president of the student council, vice president of the Kappa Mu Honor society, and major in the R.O.T.C. He was a member of the football team and was graduated from the college of liberal arts magna cum laude.

Taking up official residence in Chicago, Fowler was first named to the United States Naval academy by Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, but he was a few months beyond the age limit, and was later named to West Point.

Due to his high scholastic rank, he was admitted to the military academy without taking the usual mental tests. He passed the army's strict physical examinations with a high average.

JUN 14 1941

Lieutenant Fowler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Fowler, and was born in Atlanta, going to Washington when he was quite young. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity and in 1937 was voted its Achievement award for outstanding scholarship as an undergraduate.

The young lieutenant will follow the army as a career, his father says, and expects to serve in the infantry where his training best fits him.

Because of the war situation, Lieutenant Fowler will probably see active duty at once and will not have to live the passive life of an "instructor in military science and tactics" in one of the colored schools.

JUN 14 1941

Preceding Fowler in West Point was Capt. Benjamin O Davis, son of Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, of Fort Riley, Kans. The younger Davis became an "instructor" at Tuskegee where his father was also once professor of military science and tactics. Since the emergency, however, he has been activated, first as aide to his father, and now has been detailed with the 99th Pursuit Squadron.

An Open Letter To Wm. E. Hastie

Can't The U. S. Army Find Something For Brig. Gen. Davis To Do?

JAN 11 1941

HON. WILLIAM E. HASTIE,
CIVILIAN AIDE TO SECRETARY OF WAR
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DEAR MR. HASTIE:

We understand that the War Department the Army have done exactly zero per cent nothing to use of the service of Brigadier-General Benjamin O. D despite reports to the contrary.

Work, Monroe N Tuskegee Institute Exc

* * *

We know for a fact that his West Point ained son is wasting his time, talent and training at Tuskegee with scarcely three hours of rudimentary work a day.

* * *

We know that it is impossible for you to fight single-handedly the vast amount of wickedness, arrogance and racial prejudice ingrained in Army policy and practice.

* * *

Can you tell us, before we take this matter further, whether the War Department, in pursuit of the President's policy of complete use of all our resources, intends to employ to the fullest the services of these two trained Negro officers?

Yours Very Truly,
THE PITTSBURGH COURIER.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WHERE ARE THE NEGRO OFFICERS?

So far the War Department has lived up to our worst expectations with reference to Negro officers.

Where are the Negro officers?

There are two in the Regular Army and a few score in the National Guard, but where else are Negro officers to be found?

The simple fact is that there are none, and the War Department is making no effort to get any.

A very clever move was made recently in suddenly opening C.C.C. commands to Negro reserve officers.

The real purpose it would seem was to shunt these Negro reserve officers into the C.C.C. and away from possible command of troops.

FEB 8 1941

The War Department has always been adept in "burying" Negro officers in Tuskegee, Wilberforce and Liberia, and thus reducing "embarrassment" to a minimum.

There will soon be over 80,000 Negro troops under arms, organized into separate Negro units, but largely commanded by white officers.

We cannot agree that white officers should command Negro troops unless Negro officers are permitted to command white troops.

If there is to be a continuation and expansion of the traditional Army policy of Negro segregation, then we want all Negro units commanded by Negroes.

But there will be no Negroes to command Negro units unless the present policy of not training Negroes for commissions is discontinued.

The time for officers' training camps is at hand.

There should be one in every area and Negroes should be admitted on merit, well trained, and commissioned after three or four months.

General Davis Gets Month's Leave from Duty at Fort Riley

Fourth Cavalry Brigade Has Not Been Formed; Son to Remain in Tuskegee For Month

JAN 24 1941

FORT RILEY, Kas.—Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, assigned here to command the fourth cavalry brigade, has requested and been granted a month's leave from duty.

The general cablegrammed his request for a leave last week shortly after his assignment here. here. The request was approved by General Robert B. Rogers, commandin officer at the Fort.

It had been expected that General Davis would arrive here this week to become the first Negro officer in charge of the famous Ninth and Tenth cavalries.

Captain Benjamin O. Davis Jr., son of the brigadier general, also has been orderel here to serve under his father with the cavalry brigade. Young Davis probably will remain at Tuskegee institute, where he is now stationed, until his father's leave is up.

So far, General Davis and his son are the only Negro officers known to be assigned to the fourth brigade. It is expected that several Negro reserve officers will be given assignments in the regular army.

In calling attention to this noncompliance the statement continued, "The Frederick Douglass project is one of nine similar developments planned for the district—seven of which are for occupancy by Negroes.

His Son, Captain Davis To Be Aide

FEB 9 - 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Branding false all statements to the contrary, Brig. Gen. Benjamin C. Davis, spending a few days in Washington, declared he was on his way to Ft. Riley, Kans., where he would take command of the brigade of cavalry regiments there this week.

Calling Gen. Davis' attention to an article appearing in the current issue of News-Week which states:

"Gen. Davis, due to retire next June after 43 years service, is now on leave and rumors at Fort Riley have hinted that he may never actually take over the command".

The General said he was travelling leisurely, but he was supposed to report to the new command at the end of the past week.

Many stories concerning General Davis have appeared since his promotion and appointment but for the most part, he has ignored all of them, particularly those with reference to the ill feeling of Negro soldiers toward him.

At the time of his command of the 369th regiment in New York, Gen. Davis was one of the most popular men ever to officiate in that capacity and many of the members of the crack regiment freely expressed themselves as saying they had never soldiered, although they had been members of the outfit for a number of years, until the colored colonel took over the command. There was no ill-feeling among the enlisted men concerning Col. Davis and they felt that the regiment had been bettered.

In this particular regiment, Col. Davis had the cooperation and full support of an entire staff of Negro officers, whereas in his new assignment as Gen. Davis he will have only one colored officer and that will be his son. The new command is to be known as the Fourth Cavalry brigade, composed of Negro troops with white officers, excepting of course, his son and personal aide, Capt. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr.

'Dog Robber' Days Over For 9th, 10th Cavalries

FORT RILEY, Kas. — The "dog-robber" days are over for the Ninth and Tenth Cavalries.

"Dog-robber" is the term given to a soldier who performs the duty of a servant on any army reservation.

For 10 years, the Ninth Cavalry at the Cavalry school here and the Tenth Cavalry at the Officers' school in Leavenworth, at Fort Myer, Va., and West Point, N. Y., have been no more than flunkies for white officers.

Instead of drilling and studying military tactics, they emptied the garbage, shined the boots, cleaned the homes of white officers, took their children for walks and taught them how to ride.

But those days are gone—maybe not forever, but at least for a long time—as long as this country is in danger.

To Combat Duty

The Ninth and Tenth Cavalries have been restored to combat duty. They are no longer servants, but soldiers. The work is being done by detachments organized for the purpose of doing the labor necessary to keep the army going.

As soon as the facilities have been completed here, the Tenth Cavalry will be transferred to Fort Riley and the two Cavalry regiments—famed in America's military history—will make up the fourth cavalry brigade. The brigade commander will be Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis.

Two Regiments

It takes two regiments to make a brigade. Two brigades make up a division. Four divisions compose an army corps. General Davis' fourth cavalry brigade and a brigade of white cavalrymen will make up the second Cavalry division.

The Ninth and Tenth Cavalries, when they are completely activated, will consist of nine troops each. Each cavalry regiment will have its own regimental commander who will be directly under Brigadier-General Davis.

Col. Duncan C. Richart is the present regimental commander of the Ninth Cavalry.

Only Reserve Officers in Army Are at Fort Devens

By OLLIE STEWART

FORT DEVENS, Mass. — I learned that the officers here are the only group of colored reserve officers now in active service. National Guard officers are being used at the three other camps which, I am told, have colored officers— Dix, Custer and Ontario.

From eating in the officers' mess hall, I had the unforgettable experience of watching a regimental table make food disappear while problems of strategy were being discussed. Col. West A. Hamilton sat in the center, with the heads of the various regimental departments flanking him.

There were Capt. Walter H. Dabney—S-2, which is intelligence; and S-3, which is training, headed by Capt. Hyman Y. Chase; and S-4, which is suppy, with Lieut. Harold E. Johnson in charge; and the medical, under Major Norman E. Robinson; Capt C. C. Burke, adjutant; and Lieut. Andrew L. Johnson, chaplain.

Have a Charge to Keep

All these men are well trained, hard working and very efficient in their various types of work. They are, in addition, splendid officers, and fully aware that the results they obtain will have a large and decided bearing upon the selection of additional colored officers for colored units in other camps.

COL. R. D. BROWN, commanding officer, Nineteenth Training Group, and his personal secretary, Sgt. Lewis Miller.

CAMP DAVIS, N.C.—The only colored soldier working in headquarters of the Nineteenth Training Group is Sgt. Lewis H. Miller —personal secretary to Col. R. D. Brown, commanding officer. Miller has been in the army less than three months. He volunteered in June, 1941, and became the Colonel's secretary shortly after. His is another instance of rapid advancement for a young man with outstanding ability.

Prior to coming into the army, Sgt. Miller was senior leader in a nearby CCC camp. Last winter he was sent to this camp (which is about two miles from Davis) as a member of the cadre of eighteen men who established the camp. He attended high school in his home town and took his college work at Tuskegee Institute.

366th Has Five White Officers

FORT DEVENS, Mass. — Contrary to general belief, all officers of the 366th Infantry stationed here are not colored, the AFRO was informed this week. While the three thousand enlisted men and the greater part of the officers of the regiment are colored, there are five white officers attached to the unit whose assignments are as follows:

Col. Edmund R. Andrews, commanding officer; Lt. Col. Oliver A. Hess, executive officer; Lt. Col. E. W. Bondy, commanding First Battalion; Lt. Col. J. P. Moore, commanding Second Battalion; Lt. Col. R. H. Bishop, commanding Third Battalion.

Colored Commanders

Colored field officers are assigned as follows:

Col. West A. Hamilton, second in command, assistant to the commanding officer; Lt. Col. H. D. Queen, assistant to the executive officer; Major A. G. Ferguson, assistant battalion commander, First Battalion;

Major E. L. Pollard, executive, First Battalion; Major Ernest Welch, assistant battalion commander, Second Battalion; Major W. H. Bowers, assistant battalion commander, Third Battalion; Major J. H. Cooper, unassigned.

During the recent Sixth Army Corps maneuvers, the regiment was commanded by Col Hamilton with an all-colored staff.

Officers Still Needed in Army

WASHINGTON.

The shortage of 4,864 colored commissioned officers in the U.S. Army, pointed out six weeks ago by the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers, still exists, a recent check-up reveals.

With 74,309 colored enlisted men, it was pointed out then that there were only 337 commissioned officers available, a ratio of 1-222, while with 1,497,691 white enlisted men, there were 102,163 officers, or a ratio of one to fourteen.

There are only six colored commissioned officers in the entire regular army and only three of these are line officers, yet, to date there has been no indication that the War Department has done a thing to relieve the shortage.

Commanders Hesitant

Corps area commanders have been hesitant to commit themselves regarding their attitude toward selecting enlisted personnel to attend some of the various officer - training schools which the army conducts.

While various reserve and national guard officers have been sent to officer training schools there has been no evidence that enlisted men have been given any opportunity for promotion to commissioned officer rank.

At Camp Lee, Va., fifteen white candidates for the Quartermaster School were recently announced, but there is no word regarding the selection of any colored soldiers for [illegible]tion. In some [illegible], some commanders have let it be known that they are "in favor" of recommending "qualified men."

Some 264 of the 337 colored officers are assigned to camps in Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey where there are fewer than 7,000 enlisted men.

The Sixth Area where the former Illinois National Guard (184th) is in camp has 51 colored officers and 3844 men. For the 53,465 men in the six remaining areas, there are only 22 colored officers. These are chaplains and medical officers.

Negro Officers' Training Urged

A letter has been addressed to President Roosevelt urging the establishment of a Negro officers' training camp at Des Moines, Iowa, Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council and president of the United States Government Employees announced yesterday.

Only 20 Negro soldiers during the past year have been admitted to the hundreds of officers' schools, Brown stated in the letter, pointing out that there are nearly 70,000 Negros in the Army at present.

A plea was also presented asking the President to provide scholarships for at least 50 Negro soldiers to the United States Military Academy.

Brig. Gen. Chamberlin Commands 4th Brigade, Second Cavalry Division

Successor to Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis

Has Served With 9th, 10th Regiments; Foremost Authority on Horsemanship

Camp Funston, Kas.—(Special)—When Brig. Gen. Harry D. Chamberlin assumes command of the Fourth Brigade, Second Cavalry Division at Camp Funston Oct. 30, it will "not be as a stranger," he commented Friday. The 54-year-old present Commander of the Cavalry Replacement Training Center explained that he has served with both the Ninth and Tenth (Colored) Cavalry Regiments which comprise the brigade.

"I was on duty with the Ninth when I was at the Cavalry school," General Chamberlin recalled, "and with the Tenth when I was at West Point. I will be glad to be back with the regiments."

General Chamberlin in fact has served with every regiment in the Second Cavalry division. He commanded the Second Cavalry at Camp Funston before his appointment last April as commanding officer of the Cavalry Replacement Training center. Units under his cammand have had the reputation of being of the highest caliber.

Probably the army's foremost authority on horsemanship, and an author of a number of books on the subject, General Chamberlin was a member of several Olympic riding teams. He was born in Elgin, Ill. and is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, the Army War college, and the command and General Staff school.

Blame War Department For Failure To Train Officers

Second Lieutenants Are Being 'Busted' and Made Sergeants

WASHINGTON BUREAU
ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS

WASHINGTON, D.C.—(A N P)—The war department cannot hide its fact and point to the Negro officers who failed to make the grade in the recent maneuvers up in Massachusetts and say all Negro officers are failures.

Because of a lack of training in basic fundamentals of warfare, the Negro officers, given a test under war conditions to move men, feed them and handle equipment, made a horrible mess, so much that it is reported off the record and by members of the outfit involved that second lieutenants are being "busted out" ad given the suggestion that they enlist in the regular army as sergeants!

This disgraceful turn of affairs ruining the morale of the men is one of the reasons certain Negro regiments were not used in the big maneuvers, it is reliably reported.

OFFICERS INEPT

It is no fault of the Negro, this particular part, say the soldiers but what the men are kicking about is the attitude of the inept officers, who cannot forget they are officers. White regiments have ample food, while the Negroes suffered because their field kitchens were "captured."

On long hikes, white officers made provisions for the men to have portable canteens with cigarettes and such for the soldiers. At first, the whites are reported to have shared their supplies with the Negroes but when it became evident that the supply was running low, this was stopped and the Negroes told to ask their officers why they didn't make arrangements to take care of the boys.

"It was a common thing for our men to have to drive 1 2and 14 hours on a stretch, while white officers took delight in relieving their chauffeurs when they were fatigued and worn out. Not so with us," reported this sailor, who was "fed up" on his officers.

Gen. Davis, rushed to the camps to find out what was going on, did his best and is said to have questioned numbers of men as to the actual happings.

LACK TRAINING

Colored officers, it is reported made good drill and parade showings, but when it came down to the actual tactical side of the maneuvers, they just weren't there, which is easily traceable to the war departments callous attidude toward their training.

White officers are said to have replaced colored officers in actual command of their regiments, with the Negro officers relegated to "looking on."

Some 10,000 Negro troops participated in these little maneuvers, the report has it, and with them some 500 officers. Among the other inconveniencies suffered by Negroes was the lack of pay during the time the war games were going on. The men were in training for three weeks, and when they returned to their bases, there was no pay for them, in contrast to what is reported was happening to white soldiers.

If these charges are true, and the morale of the army is at a low ebb because of them then the blame is squarely at the door of the war department, which refuses to do anything constructive for the colored officers who need the training.

ASKS SEPARATE TRAINING UNITS FOR OFFICERS

Even War Department Rebels At Changing Present System

NEW YORK.— Edgar G. Brown, and two organizations of which he is the founder and head — The National Negro Council and the United Government Employes — were attacked this week for requesting that a jim crow officers training school be established.

The attack was made by a distinguished array of churchmen, editors, lawyers, business and professional leaders throughout the country.

Brown, who has on previous occasions advocated racial segregation, once when he suggested that a black Annapolis be established in the Virgin Islands, was disowned in a statement made public this week.

The statement repudiated Brown's suggestion and branded it as a "backward step."

Proposes Segregation

Brown's proposal sent to President Roosevelt and to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, set forth that only 20 out of 70,000 Negro soldiers have been given an opportunity in the past year to receive instructions leading to commissions in the army at any of the officers' training schools.

Brown's letter also pointed out there are no provisions for more than two Negroes to graduate in the next three years from the U. S. military academy at West Point, though there is an imperative need for additional Negroes with training such as only West Point can give.

The suggestion is then made to the President that a school similar to the one at Des Moines, Iowa, in World War I be established to train thousands of Negro officers for service.

The letter to Mr. Stimson follows the same general trend only it is longer and goes more into detail over the situation.

As significant, however, was the reply Brown received from the War department to his written request for a change in the present plan of training army officers.

Under the signature of the adjutant general, the letter declared:

War Department Replies

"I am directed by the secretary of war to acknowledge your letter of October 15, 1941, relative to the admission of Negro soldiers into officers' training schools.

"You may be assured that the War department will spare no efforts to avoid discrimination to any American soldier because of his color.

"Negro soldiers are enabled to compete with other soldiers under identical conditions, for admission to officer candidate schools."

It is significant that during the last war, or World War I as it is usually called, there were 1,200 Negro officers.

The statement came after a check-up on a broadcast by Newscaster Fulton Lewis Jr., on October 20 over the Mutual Broadcasting system, during which he said:

"A large group of the most responsible Negro leaders in the country has appealed to President Roosevelt in a formal, official letter opposing the present policy of the army whereby Negro officers are being trained in the same schools as white officers."

Text of Statement

The newscaster's assistant, David Stick, in answer to an inquiry from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People about the source of his information, replied: "Information from Edgar G. Brown, president, United Government Employees," and others.

Anti-Negro forces in Washington and particularly in the War department are reported to be delighted at the request of Brown for jim crow officers' training camps since it permits them to justify segregation on the ground that Negroes themselves have asked for it.

The statement opposing separate officers' training schools reads: "We repudiate any and all requests that the present successful method of training white and Negro officers in the same camps be changed and that Negro officers be sent to segregated officers' training schools.

"Segregation has always led to discrimination and widening of the chasm between races which menaces our country in this hour of peril. We petition you as commander-in-chief of the army and navy to resist any backward step and to push forward in the national defense program toward the truest democracy without distinction of race, creed, color or national origin."

Columbus And Colored Military Police

The Columbus World and all right thinking people, regardless of race and color, believe in law and order. Without it civilization crumbles. The people have set up through their various governments, different types of police authorities to protect them from the criminal element that is found among all people.

Locally, Sheriff Poole, County Chief Satterfield, and City Police Chief Newberry are doing an excellent job with forces far smaller than the local situation requires. The government knowing the inability of civilian law agencies to cope with the situation here, because of the 50,000 or more soldiers, has its own well-trained police to handle troops. We frankly believe that the soldiers in Columbus are the best behaved group (white and colored) in the country.

The government in its policy of having the military police to aid in keeping order in town among the soldiers, set up a colored unit of the Military Police here. The men were selected carefully from among the different units at Fort Benning and put through careful and rigid training, to make them competent policemen. They were assigned beats in exclusive Negro sections, and among Negro troops. White soldiers were forbidden to go down in the sections that Negro soldiers frequent. Recently, an unfortunate incident occurred in this section, in which an M. P. shot and instantly killed a civilian waiter in a cafe, allegedly in self-defense, and in line of duty. The waiter, it is said, had a cocked revolver in his hand when the M. P. shot him, but at a preliminary hearing in Judge Lynch's Recorder's Court, there was a confliction of evidence offered. Some said the waiter had no gun, and others said he did have a gun. Judge Lynch had no alternative but to commit the M. P. over to Superior Court on a manslaughter charge. One way or another, somebody has committed perjury in this court. The soldier either is guilty or not guilty. He either shot in self-defense or he didn't and the eye witnesses saw only what happened, and there was no necessity for two different stories as to what occurred.

There is now currently rumored that some county officials have suggested to the government to remove the Negro M. Ps. They say "Negroes themselves, don't want them". Members of the World's staff have searched carefully and diligently for one of these Negroes, and have failed to find one, but on the contrary, have found that the Negroes are proud of the Negro M. Ps., and feel that the Negro officers are very competent in keeping order among their own folk and suggest Tulsa, Okla.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Dallas and Houston, Texas; Charlotte, N. C.; New York City, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Baltimore, Maryland; Washington, D. C., Detroit, Michigan; Chicago, Illinois; and many other cities as examples of Negro Police efficiency.

The colored Press all over the country is vigorously fighting for Negro M. Ps. among Negroes in cities adjacent with large Negro populations, and Fort Benning was among the first to set up a Negro unit and according to the Military Authorities at the Post, they are doing a good job and there is a decided improvement in order and morale since they have been on duty here.

It is our honest and sincere opinion that a grave mistake will be committed if Colored Military Police are removed from Columbus Negro sections, and it would have a most unpleasant repercussion all over the country among colored people, who are giving their all, including life itself, if necessary, to defeat Hitlerism, and preserve the American way of living, and the World respectfully appeals to the authorities, that should they have such a movement in mind, to reconsider same.

Let us put our collective shoulders together, white and black, and fight Hitler—A REAL MENACE to America.

SHALL WE HAVE ANOTHER SEPARATE OFFICERS' TRAINING CAMP?

Fulton Lewis, white radio commentator, speaking over the Mutual System from Washington, reported that a large group of responsible colored leaders is advocating a separate officers' training camp such as we had in World War I at Fort Des Moines.

This raises the question: should colored officers need a separate training camp?

At present, all officers, colored and white, are being trained together in schools from Pennsylvania through Virginia to Georgia, and as far as we know there is no friction or complaint.

This system has many advantages. We have no time now to erect buildings for a separate school and secure a faculty. Present schools specializing in artillery, medicine, infantry, anti-aircraft and flying are running full blast and our soldiers are studying in them.

It is also quite important that army officers who are to work together in the field should study together in the schools where they may become acquainted and each comes to respect the other's ability.

The AFRO opposed a separate colored officers' school in 1917 and it opposes the movement to organize another today.

What we do want and what the army needs are more colored officers. Figures published in these columns two months ago showed that the army is short of 4,308 colored officers.

For every fifteen enlisted white soldiers there is a white officer, but there are 220 enlisted colored soldiers for every colored officer.

Ollie Stewart's exclusive AFRO stories on the army camps show how vicious is the present system and how resentful the recruits are because they are denied promotion and the association with superiors of their own race.

Fort Bragg, the largest U.S. colored training camp has a few colored chaplains and medical officers.

Fort Huachuca in Arizona, the only all-colored camp in the country, has no colored officers.

At Fort Knox, probably the worst army camp, there are not even colored corporals and sergeants.

In this situation, what leaders of every shade of opinion must do is apparent.

The War Department and the President must be asked to direct corps area commanders to certify without delay colored men to existing officers' schools as rapidly as they qualify.

24th, 72 Years Old, Still Has White Officers

FT. BENNING, Ga. — Despite its unbroken period of service, the 24th Infantry Regiment, which celebrated its seventy-second anniversary on November 2, is still under the command of white officers.

A highlight in the regiment's career—its participation in the capture of San Juan Hill during the 1898 Santiago campaign—is symbolized on the regimental insignia, reproduced herewith. The unit's service has included:

Fought Indians

Skirmishes with the Indians and Mexican bandits along the border (Time of organization until 1897);

Spanish-American War and nursing of yellow-fever victims (1898);

Cuban native uprisings (1899-1902);

Pershing's punitive expedition into Mexico (1916);

Suppression of Villista forces in Juarex, Mexico (1919).

Anniversary Program

On organization day, all duties except the necessary guard details were suspended for the anniversary celebration, which included:

Organization Day program in the post theatre, anniversary dinner, horse show by the Service Company, Organization Day dance for members of the regiment and their guests, a silent tribute to members who have died during the past year and an athletic exhibition.

51 Reserve Officers to Fort Devens

FEB 22 1941

Fifty-one reserve officers of the Third Corps Area have received their notices to report to Fort Devens, Mass., on March 3, to staff the 366th Infantry, Lieutenant Colonel Theodore Arter announced here on Thursday.

The list includes two majors, three captains, twenty-eight first lieutenants, and eighteen second lieutenants. Of the fifty-one men called, forty-eight are from the District of Columbia, and the other three from Arlington and Alexandria, Va., and Pittsburgh, Pa.

To Fill Other Posts

The posts of colonel, two lieutenant colonels, one major, and six more captains, which were listed in the original announcement several months ago, will probably be filled by reserve officers from another corps area, Colonel Arter told the AFRO.

It was said that these men may be drawn from either the First Corps Area which embraces Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut and Rhode Island, of the Second Corps Area, covering New York, New Jersey, and Delaware.

LACK OF OFFICERS NEARLY COST RACE 366th COMMAND

Insufficient Lieutenant Colonels Almost Cost Colonel Hamilton His Command of Race Unit—Pressure On War Department Altered Shift.

MAR 15 1941

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—(ANP)—Lack of enough Negro Lieutenant Colonels to serve under him almost cost Col. West A. Hamilton command of the 366th Infantry, the Associated Negro Press learned this week. But pressure exerted on the War Department caused army officials to go through with their original plans of having an all-Negro Army staff.

At the same time, it was learned efforts are being made to have colored units incorporated into a division under a fair-minded General, so that if war does start Negro soldiers will not be handicapped as they were in the first world conflict.

MAR 15 1941

Originally, Col. Hamilton was scheduled to command the 366th which goes into training this month at Fort Devens, Mass. But an investigation by the war department failed to find enough qualified Negro Lieutenant Colonels to serve under Col. Hamilton. Since the army policy does not permit colored men to command white men or let any reserve officer command any regular army officer of any grade, the War Department announced that the 366th would be commanded by Col. Edmund Andrews in order to use five white Lieutenant Colonels, with all other oficers and troops being colored.

MAR 15 1941

PLAN COORDINATED UNIT

When pressure was brought to bear against this plan, the army decided to use Col. Hamilton along with those Negro Lieutenant Colonels available even though they might be insufficient in number. At the same time it was deemed advisable by the War Department to waive some of the rejected ones' disqualifications such as over age or overweight.

The desire to have the 366th put into a division with other troops after training springs from the belief that a team, to be effective, should practice as such. In the event of actual war, colored units will be put into a division and expected to function expertly just as do white regiments which have had such practice as a team. In World War 1, Negro units met for the first time after they got on the battlefield but nevertheless were expected to work smoothly together.

Negro units would also like to meet in peace time the general who would comand them in war, since in peace there is a chance of getting rid of a prejudiced commander while in war the possibility of changing divisional commanders is considered small.

Many Negro officers of 1917 remember that Gen. Ballou was their commander. Gen. Ballou was charged with berating and belittling colored officers and soldiers at every opportunity but he remained commander despite protests because the nation was at war.

NEGRO IN NEW COMMAND

JAN 14 1941

Brig. Gen. Davis Assigned to Head Cavalry Brigade

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, the highest ranking Negro in the Army and the first ever to attain the grade of general, has been assigned to command the Fourth Cavalry Brigade, colored, at Fort Riley, Kansas. The brigade will be composed of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry Regiments.

General Davis is now in command of the 369th Coast Artillery Regiment of the New York National Guard, an anti-aircraft unit recruited largely in the Harlem section of New York City.

He became a second lieutenant of cavalry in the Regular Army in 1901, being raised from the ranks after having served as a first lieutenant of volunteers in the Spanish-American War. He has done much duty as professor of military science in Negro educational institutions and was for three years military attaché at Monrovia, Liberia.

"Hat-In-Hand" Negro Soldiers Not Representative Of Rank And File

JAN 9 1941

A FLUNKEY is a flunkey and there is nothing anybody can do about it. There are still colored people who believe that "a hat-in-hand" attitude will solve their problems.

The only thing a man with a handkerchief around his head gets is a "handout." That is all he deserves.

President Roosevelt wisely stated that "You can not tame a tiger by stroking his back and hoping that he will become a kitten."

Those who believe that American racial prejudice can be appeased by soft words and acceptance of its injustices while hoping for a change are more stupid than those who attempt to appease a tiger with kitten-like strokes.

American colored citizens with courage and vision have advocated a frontal attack on prejudice and discrimination, not because they believed that these two arch enemies of decency could be overthrown overnight, but because they understand that to accept an inferior status without a protest would finally reach the point where nothing could be done about it; and those who enforced the injustices would reach the conclusion that colored citizens did not have sense enough to protest.

All of this is proved by the attitude of some of the members of the 9th and 10th cavalry who object to colored commanding officers. These flunkeys should not be judged too harshly for they still have the psychology of a slave. They love to show their teeth as they polish the boots of their masters.

It is these types of colored people who are responsible for the unfavorable status of colored Americans. They smile and grin at insults which real men would resent with a kick in the pants.

And the commanding officers have reached the conclusion that colored people are only fit to shine shoes and dump garbage because of the hat-in-hand attitude of the flunkeys with whom they come in contact.

Regardless of these types of colored citizens, those who understand the significance of supine meekness must redouble their efforts to convince America that while they may be too weak at the moment to prevent insults and injustices, they have sufficient intelligence and courage to protest against unfair treatment.

The attitude of the 9th and 10th cavalry is not that of the rank and file of American colored citizens.

Medals for General Davis—One or Two?

JAN 11 1941

The Omega Psi Phi Fraternity last week awarded its 1940 medal to Brigadier General B. O. Davis, for outstanding achievement in national defense.

General Davis may be a remarkable soldier of the U.S. Army and administrator, but he has been unable to prove it conclusively. He did not get into the Spanish-American War combat zones, except for short shifts in Liberia, Mexico and the Philippines.

Instead, for forty years he has been shunted from one college to another as military adviser and commandant of cadets in order to prevent his location with regular troops.

Not even during the World War was he assigned to combat troops.

However, he has been able to remain in the regular army and has risen from the ranks to the highest position any of us has ever held.

Just to submit to separation and indignity for two score years in silence is an achievement of merit. General Davis has done more. He has educated his son, so that between the two of them they hold the only two commissions in the U.S. combat regulars.

One medal is not enough for such a martyr. He should have two.

Are They Men or Mice?

JAN 5 1941

NEWS come to us that Negro soldiers stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas, prefer white officers for their superiors in preference to Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis who was recently elevated to his present rank. This strange psychological reaction may find its explanation in the fact that these soldiers who make up the 9th and 10th cavalries have for a long period of time been within an environment that extracts from them all the manhood that a soldier should possess and replaces therein a slave-like attitude and they are thus convinced that only the white can rule. They act like servants, not men. They are the flunkeys for white officers and their families. They shine their shoes, wash their dishes and act as stable hands. Except for the short time that the 9th cavalry has been restored to active duty this has been the character of the activities of these two cavalries for nearly two decades.

JAN 5 1941

Brigadier General Davis would treat the men as soldiers and not as servants. Obviously they do not want to be treated as such. Likewise, at the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation there were Negro slaves who preferred to remain in slavery. It is a peculiar trend of thought that forces one to resent change to a higher level and we are exceedingly surprised to learn that such an attitude exists in a cavalry where men are trained to be courageous.

JAN 5 1941

No words can be harsh enough and no expression caustic enough to fairly condemn the attitude of a group of soldiers who resent the presence of a Negro officer as their superior simply because he is a Negro. In the case of white soldiers we would call it the expression of their un-American trait. In the case of colored soldiers we must term it the belated reaction of the spirit of Uncle Tom that should find more appropriate expression in the cotton fields of the South in the days of slavery. It has no place in the United States Army.

JAN 5 1941

We, however are comforted by the fact that their kind is rapidly expiring and in their places are emerging courageous men of stamina and fortitude who need offer no apologies for the assumption of roles in their manhood status. We are thankful of the fact that the present, and we hope the future, is producing more men and less mice.

We Want Davis!

What is to be our part in the inaugural parade? No announcement has yet been made of any plans which concern our participation, though choice of Constitution Hall for the concert on January 19 has made it clear that no colored artist is to be a participant in that gala event.

The high school cadets are expected to be in the line of march in accordance with long-standing custom. Usually there are also colored soldiers from the regular army outfits. In this connection an interested citizen has suggested that Brigadier-General Ollie Davis participate in the parade.

This is both timely and appropriate. General Davis becomes of retirement age in July. His service in his new rank is thus definitely limited, with the inaugural parade offering a rare opportunity for his official participation in an event of national importance. Promotion of Davis on the eve of election, when Candidate Willkie's forthright pronouncement of policy on racial matters had the effect of putting Mr. Roosevelt "on the spot," was a gesture of political expediency. But, be that as it may, the colored citizens of the United States have a right to expect that the first colored man promoted to brigadier-general be given some place in the inaugural festivities commensurate with his rank. His elevation was intended to reflect honor upon his race. Because of the way in which it was done, columnists and commentators joined Mr. Average Colored American in concluding that the honor was more empty than real.

The 1941 inaugural parade will be unique as the first parade which has ever honored a President elected to a third term. Participation of the first colored soldier ever promoted to the rank of brigadier-general would give the event added significance.

Let our Democratic leaders and New Deal enthusiasts and our organizations of all kinds take up this suggestion.

We want Brigadier-General Ollie Davis in the inaugural parade!

General Davis To Have Son As Aide At Fort

JAN 16 1941

(Cpecial to The Tribune)

WASHINGTON—Although a brigadier general since October, General Benjamin O. Davis was given his new assignment only on Monday when the War Department announced that he would command the Fourth Cavalry Brigade at Fort Riley, Kansas, composed of the Ninth and Tenth Regiments. At present General Davis is on duty with the 369th Coast Artillery (anti-aircraft) New York National Guard.

It is also reliably reported here, that General Davis has been granted his request to have his son, Captain B. O. Davis, assigned as his aide at Fort Riley. Captain Davis, a West Point graduate, is now professor of military science and tactics at Tuskegee Institute.

AWAIT ACTION ON APPEAL IN DAWSON CASE

JAN 19 1941

Delays Randall's Appointment

Colonel Julian Dawson's refusal to accept the disability findings of the army medical examining board, and resign as commander of the 184th field artillery regiment, was cited this week as the reason Lieut. Col. Oscar Randall's appointment as Colonel of the regiment on its induction last Monday, had not yet been confirmed.

Colonel Dawson, it was disclosed, has filed an appeal from the board's findings with the War Department. Because Randall still held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel when the regiment moved out Wednesday morning for Fort Custer, Mich., rumors were rife on the South Side as to the disposition of the War Department in the appointment of a Negro colonel in command of the regiment.

Fears Termed "Groundless"

These rumors were expressed in the conjecture that the 184th would undergo the year's military training at Fort Custer under a white commanding officer. They were this week termed "groundless", however by Assistant Civilian Aid to the Secretary of War Truman K. Gibson, Jr., in a telegram from Washington late Tuesday.

Gibson followed the telegram with a letter which explained the situation in detail. The telegram and letter were in reply to a communication sent him by the Chicago Bee, when it was rumored here that the failure to confirm the appointment of Lieut. Col. Randall as the regiment's Colonel-in-Command might lead to the appointment of a white colonel to lead the 184th into Fort Custer. The 184th is the only Negro field artillery unit in the armed service.

900 Entrain Wednesday A. M.

The main contingent of approximately 900 officers and men entrained from the Illinois Central station at 7:30 Wednesday morning. They followed by six days a detachment of 120 which left Friday.

Lieut. Col. Randall led the main battalions to camp. Gibson's telegram was followed by a letter which explained the delay in naming him colonel of the regiment. It stated, in part, that "Lieut. Col. Oscar Randall could not at the present time be designated colonel in command of the regiment because the rank of colonel is still occupied by Colonel Julian Dawson."

Colonel Dawson was named to succeed Colonel William J Warfield, for five years commander of the 184th (formerl ythe 8th infantry), who resigned to devote full time to his duties as Representative from the 5th senatorial district, Illinois General Assembly.

Upon the regiment's induction last Monday, Colonel Dawson was replaced by Lieut. Col. Randall, because of a physical disability. He has filed with the adjutant general of the United States army an appeal from the finding of the Medical Examination Board. "Until this appeal is disposed of," Gibson's letter stated, "there is no appointment to the rank of Colonel."

The medical examining board found Colonel Dawson suffering from a heart ailment, and recommended that he be replaced.

Copies of the letter referred to by Secretary of War Civilian Aid Gibson were also sent to the President of the United States; Edgar G. Brown, Civilian Conservation Corps Adviser; Aubrey Williams, Administration, NYA, and Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt.

A telegram requesting the intervention of Mrs. Mary MLeod Bethune, Adviser on Negro Affairs, NYA, was also dispatched. Mrs. Bethune's reply stated the telegram had been referred to officials of the War Department, and "I have personally taken the matter up with them."

GEN. DAVIS HEADS REGULARS

JAN 18 1941

WASHINGTON — War Department orders this week assigned Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis to command the 4th Cavalry Brigade with headquarters at Fort Riley, Kansas.

The brigade is composed of the famous Ninth and Tenth Cavalry, regular army units with long and brilliant records. Gen. Davis's assignment returns him to troops and officers by whom he is well known because for years he had served as private to officer with the Tenth Cavalry both at home and in the Philippine Islands.

Davis is not a West Pointer. He began army life as a private and rose from the ranks by study and hard work. He is regarded as an able officer.

For the past two years he was colonel and instructor of the 369 Infantry, New York National Guard, which under the defense program was converted to the 369th Coast Artillery, an anti-aircraft regiment. Last October President Roosevelt appointed Col. Davis as a brigadier general, the first colored general ever in the United States army. His transfer from command of the 369th was announced Monday by the War Department.

1. 69th is leaving New York next week for a year's training at Fort Ontario, N. Y. it numbers now 76 officers and more than 1400 men under the command Col. Chauncey M. Hooper but will be increased to the full strength of 1800 by the addition of selectees from New York City and suburbs.

184th Regiment Command Goes to Col. Randall

JAN 18 1941

CHICAGO.—(ANP) — Oscar Randall, former commander of a machine gun company in the old Eighth Infantry Regiment, has been appointed head of the 184th Field Artillery Regiment, and has been commissioned a colonel.

He will leave with the recently inducted national guard unit for Camp Custer some time this month.

Col. Randall succeeds Col. Julian Dawson, head surgeon at Provident hospital who was relieved of his command and was given the rank of brigadier-general on January 5, by acting Governor Stelle when he failed to qualify physically.

Second Recent Change

Dawson was named December 17 to succeed Col. William J. Warfield, now a brigadier-general, retired, who resigned to devote more time to his duties as a member of the Illinois General Assembly.

Col. Randall is a graduate of the University of Illinois and is a teacher at Du Sable high school. He is 44 years old and is married. Before he began teaching, ten years ago, he was employed as an engineer for the sanitary district. He enlisted in the old Eighth as a private in 1924 and reached the grade of captain in 1930.

Crack Harlem Unit Men Being Examined

Staff Correspondence

NEW YORK—The War Department's long awaited order, transferring General B. O. Davis, Sr., to the command of a brigade of cavalry at Fort Riley, Kan., has finally arrived.

The news was given out Monday night at the armory of the 369th Coast Artillery Regmient as that unit was being reactivated into the federal service.

The order detaches General Davis from his present post as senior commander of the crack Harlem outfit. The release will take effect January 21 and will coincide with the date of departure of the regiment, which has also been ordered to Fort Ontario, near Oswego, N. Y., for a year of military service. Prior to his promotion, General Davis was commander of the regiment.

EXAMS GIVEN

Physical examinations for members of the regiment began immediately after the oath of allegiance had been administered, over 200 men qualified the first day out of a total enrollment of 1,450.

Col. Chauncey M. Hooper, successor to General Davis, hazarded a guess that rejections would total less than five per cent of those turned down. So far, a large number were excused because they were heads of large families.

Members of the regiment are now permanently in uniform and are confined strictly to the armory unless excused on passes issued by company commanders.

Those receiving passes may sleep and eat at home, but must be present at the regiment every morning at 6 o'clock for the sounding of revielle.

General Davis's command, the 4th Cavalry Brigade at Fort Riley, will be composed of the famous 9th and 10th Regiments of cavalry, colored units.

Units of the Tenth Cavalry stationed at Fort Myer, Va., West Point, N. Y., and Fort Leavenworth, Kan., have been ordered to join the Ninth Cavalry at Fort Riley for their new assignment.

The scattering of the famous Tenth and asisgnment of its veteran members to menial duties has occasioned frequent protests and criticism.

NOTED CAREER

General Davis in 1938 became instructor and commanding officer of the 369th Infantry, which was converted recently into the 369th Coast Artillery, an anti-aircraft regiment of the New York National Guard.

A native of Washington, D. C., he entered military servcie as a first lieutenant of infantry during the War with Spain; was mustered out in March, 1899; three months later enlisted as a private in the regular army; and was commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry in the regular army in February, 1901.

General Davis' early service included a four-year tour as professor of military science at Wilberforce University and three years as military attache at Monrovia, Liberia. After border patrol duty in 1915 he returned to Wilberforce. During the World War he served as supply officer of the 9th Cavalry in the Philippine Islands.

Following the war, General Davis served four years at Tuskegee Institute, then five years as an instructor with the Ohio National Guard.

His post-war activities included several trips to Europe on duty with the Pilgrimage of War Mothers and Widows. For this work he received formal commendation from the Secretary of War and the Quartermaster General.

Says Fort Riley Prefers White Officers

By LAZETTA LIDRAZZAH

FORT RILEY, Kans.—(ANP)—If recently promoted Brigadier General B. O. Davis is assigned to duty with the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry in this area, he may look forward to an unhappy time. Most of the older soldiers and the non-commissioned officers have stated they prefer white officers and currently are "faring a hundred times better under white officers than we would under General Davis."

JAN 3 1941

To understand the reasoning back of this strange psychology, one must understand the mental makeup of the soldiers and non-commissioned officers who are members of these regular army units. I know, for I served in the Ninth Cavalry for 12 years and left is only last summer.

For almost two decades, the 9th and 10th cavalrymen were little more than uniformed chambermaids, bootblacks, stablehands and flunkies for white officers and units, the 9th being restored to active duty status only last August. During the intervening years, white commissioned officers carefully selected and cultivated a mob of semi-illiterate colored non commissioned officers who received special privileges in return for depriving other Negro soldiers of the few favorable advantages granted the race by the war department. These men, and the privates who have also gone along with them to obtain special favors, are the ones who are opposed to General Davis as their commanding officer.

These "old soldiers", struggling along at the ranks of private and corporal, despite more than 20 years of service, begin to predict a formidable end to their freedom and privileges. Some contended that the rank of B. O. Davis would inspire him to treat them worse than any white commanding officer under they have served. These old soldiers were the leaders of the mob, which comprised approximately 95 per cent of the soldiers of the 9th Covalry, that opposed the late Major Monroe S. Caver, their chaplain), in everything he planned during his last days in which he devoted his spare moments to documents which were meant to aid those interested in the recognition of the rights of Negro soldiers.

Near the close of November, grapevine rumors suggested that General Davis had declined a chance to serve with the 9th and 10th cavalries. This, according to the Uncle Toms, of the white officered 9th and 10th, was the best news that they had heard in years. Nevertheless, having served 12 years as a private of the 9th cavalry, the writer has observed the introduction of enough acts of segregation, imposed upon Negro soldiers and civilians of Fort Leavenworth and Fort Riley to declare:

The suggestions of such Negro noncommissioned officers, are one of the main reasons why young, intelligent, progressive-minded Negroes are most always kicked out of the army and given dishonorable discharges. Those who are fortunate enough to get an honorable discharge find them mutilated with black marks of some description, which make it impossible for them to reinlist should they desire to do so. Levi Pierce, one of the most brilliant and efficent young men to serve with the 9th and 10th, was doomed in such a way.

It is also interesting to note that despite the fact that the 9th cavalry was restored to duty, today Negroes in uniform in Fort Riley art still washing dishes, polishing boots, scrubbing bathtubs, dumping garbage, grooming horses, flunkeying and doing other menial chores for the families of white commissioned officers. This means that the "progressive step" of the 9th cavalry is merely an appeaser for the eyes of the Negro press and its supporters.

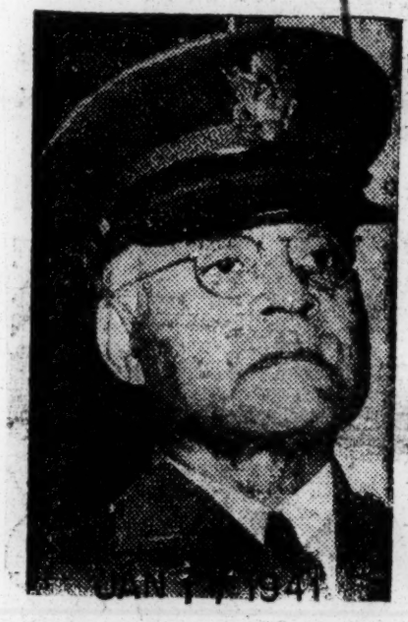
TO COMMAND 4TH BRIGADE OF CAVALRY

JAN 17 1941

First Negro General to Be In Charge of Ninth and Tenth Regiments

Our First General



BRIG. GEN. B. O. DAVIS

Editor's Note: When Benjamin O. Davis was elevated to brigadier general last November, the Negro citizens saw his appointment as a "political move" since it came only a few days before the election. Whether or not it was an election-eve thought of President Roosevelt, no longer is important. The significant fact now is that we have a Negro general. The Call welcomes General Davis to the Midwest and wishes him every success in his new command.

FORT RILEY, Kas. — Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis is expected to arrive here sometime this week to assume command of the fourth Cavalry brigade, composed of the Ninth and Tenth cavalry regiments.

General Davis is the first Negro ever to climb to the rank of general in the United States army and when he arrives here he will be the first Negro ever to command the famous cavalry regiments which have gone down in history for their bravery, courage and military ability.

From Colonel to General

General Davis was expected here on January 15. He was promoted from colonel to general by President Roosevelt in November. As colonel, he was serving with the 369th national guard of New York, recently converted into an artillery unit.

General Davis rose to the colonelship through the ranks, one of the few Negroes in the army to be commissioned officers on their merit. He and his son, Captain B. O. Davis Jr., are the only Negro commissioned officers in the regular army at the present time. Other Negroes with the rank of colonel are serving with National Guard units.

Fort Riley Expanding

When he arrives here, General Davis will find Fort Riley in the process of expansion. Barracks are being erected to house the fourth cavalry brigade. Up to now, the larger part of the Tenth Cavalry has been stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. The entire Tenth is under orders to come to Fort Riley, the home of the Ninth. Fort Riley, already the largest Cavalry school in the army, is to become even a larger Cavalry center.

A report published generally in the Negro press (except The Call) last week to the effect that the Negro soldiers here do not want to serve under General Davis has been found unfounded.

The Call did not publish the syndicated release about Negro soldiers not wanting to serve under General Davis because the editor recognized the article as having no basis of truth.

The majority of the soldiers in the Ninth Cavalry are looking forward eagerly to the coming of their first Negro commanding officer.

Until the coming of General Davis, all officers of both the Ninth and Tenth Cavalries have been white. There was some discussion following the appointment of the general as to how the subordinate white officers would react to a Negro general.

The answer to such speculation is that the men at Fort Riley are "in the army" and soldiers respect their superior officers.

It is freely predicted by those in a position to know that the white officers of the Ninth and Tenth will serve under General Davis without the least bit of friction.

It is hoped, however, by many of the soldiers that Negro officers eventually will be in command of the entire brigade.

ARMY-NAVY Y.M.C.A. FOR NEGRO SOLDIERS

On Sunday afternoon a large crowd attended ground-breaking exercises on the site of the projected Army-Navy Y. M. C. A. for negroes.

The construction of this building is one of the main projects undertaken under the program launched by the Columbus Defense Service Committee to provide recreation for the enlisted personnel of Fort Benning.

It was the first public demonstration of the work planned by the committee, a number of officials of the defense service group attending the exercises.

Leading negro citizens are cooperating with the committee and Fort Benning authorities in planning for the operation of the Army-Navy Y. M. C. A., which will be situated on Fifth avenue near Ninth street.

The plan for the erection of the building is one of the many phases of the program that is being carried out by the Columbus Defense Committee. That the project will be an outstanding success has been made certain by the great interest and enthusiasm of those who are taking part in the movement to provide increased recreational facilities for the negro soldiers.

The Bottleneck In Appointment Of Negro Youths

MAY 8 - 1941

By MACK C. NANCE

PHOENIX, Ariz.—(SNS)—IF WE, THE NEGROES, continue to follow the line of least resistence, by admitting that we cannot graudate one of our youths from Annapolis or West Point we are also admitting the inferiority of the Negro race as a whole. This is the precise position of a defeatist. Such a position forms a bottleneck to the forward movement of Negro youth in every walk of life.

My observations have convinced me, that the Negro, if given a chance, will measure up, should-to shoulder, with any race that ever breathed. If Chinese, Phillipinos, Moros and races of South and Central America can graduate from the institutions, why is it that the Negro cannot make the grade? Remember, there is no doubt on the part of those responsible for admittance to these institutions, that the Negro cannot make the grade; but there is a grave fear that if given equal opportunity, the Negro youth will excell in the art of Naval and military science.

Strong proof of this has been exposed, wherever the Negro is given equal opportunity to compete against the other fellow. Since we know the other fellow's weakness, let us work on that weakness, by giving Negro youth, with the basic qualities, (regardless of the position of his mother or father) a chance to not only compete but to excel in this specal line of service.

I have mentioned what seems to be an inferior complex of Negro parents in obtaining appointments to these two institutions. This is bottleneck No., 1. The second bottleneck is the material we pick as applicants to Annapolis and West Point. No effeminate cream puff, sissie, no mental interrogatives, no physical derelicts, regardless of race, need apply for entrance to Annapolis or West Point. One must be an all he-man to remain a student in either of these institutions.

MAY 8 - 1941

To make an appointment, because of the suburban political status of father or mother is not sufficient proof or basical military requirements. It is my firm belief that for military adaptability, one must be born to command, but encouraged to expect and look forward to a sergeancy only. It was the custom in Napoleon's army to commission men from certain walks of life, such as nobility, the rich, the sons of political leaders, etc., Napoleon, on closer observation, saw natural born military leaders in the rank and file of his great army. He, therefore, had published a bulletin as follows: "Every Man In my army carries within his knapsack the baton of a field marshal".

In our army the above is applicable to the white race only. If we, the Negro, are stupid enough to except and follow this line of thought, that our youth is only fitted for sergeancy in the military branch of service, then, we may just as well take low, an inferior complex status and call for another deal. For some reason, I cannot retain the idea, that Negroes of the Southwest will accept a position of an inferior.

Some where in the southwest there are Negro boys, well educated, possessing a natural born inclination to the art of military science. These boys should be given a chance to follow their natural inclination.

MAY 8 - 1941

This, in total disregard of the social of POLITICAL STATUS OF PARENTS. We must then cease picking appointees of the basis of spiritual, political or the social status of parents. A sergeant, warrant officer or a commissioned officer may produce a moron or an imbecile, which is certainly not a basic requirement for entance to either of these institutions. So far, it would seem, that we get milliner mixed with military, in that many Negro applicants to Annapolis or West Point, are best fitted for a millinery shop rather than military service. Therefore, be it resolved, that we as a race, get behind an outstanding physical and intellectual he-man, a youth that does not flinch. A youth that feels that he is not only as good, but that he is superior to any and all of his competitors.

We want a youth that is not satisfied with doing as well as others, but one that will excell. A cry-baby may pick cotton but never possess the qualities required for entrance to these institutions. Our aspirant must be broad of shoulders and of mind. He must be able to give and take. It must be remembered that the education and training obtained is well worth the discomforts, insults, inconveniences confronting the student. The Negro must be determined to go through hell if necessary, to accomplish graduation. If we have such youth, I would love to hear from them at once. Again, what others have accomplished, we also can accomplish, only, better.

47k

WEST POINT, N. Y., (ANP)—Congressman Arthur Mitchell's first appointee to the U. S. Military Academy was graduated today Wednesday) with honors, much to the gratification of the congressman who has fought for the Negro youth's admission to both the military and naval academies. This year's graduate who received his commission as second lieutenant in the infantry is James D. Fowler of Washington, graduate of Dunbar High School and Howard University.

JUN 1 2 1941

Cadet Fowler was named on May 13, 1937, and was admitted to the academy in July, 1937, according to custom. Having passed his physical tests with high average, Cadet Fowler was not required to take the examination on entering the academy because of his brilliance in college.

Fowler may be assigned to either the 24th or 25th and not to one of the new outfits, it is said.

TWO OTHER CADETS

In West Point at present are two other Negro cadets, Robert B. Treswell, son of a warrant officer stationed at Ft. Benning, Ga., who was admitted to the academy in July, 1939, and Clarence Davenport of Chicago. Treswell, a Philadelphian, is a graduate of Penn State; Davenport a graduate of Detroit University.

Another appointee is ready to enter the academy, having been qualified and awaiting the entering class in July is H. Martin Francis of Washington.

Congressman Mitchell's appointees have thus far maintained an excellent record and have more than justified his appointments.

Should the latter two finish the Academy, the regular army will then have just about the largest number of line officers it has ever had from the Negro race. At present Cadet Fowler and Capt. Benj Davis are two, and with the two additional officers coming in 1942 and 1946, the total will be four regulars.

NOV 1 2 1941

MAJOR IN R. O. T. C.

Lieutenant Fowler was born in Atlanta, Ga., but was taken to Washington as a youngster. He made the National Honor Society in high school, and was graduated magna cum laude at Howard. In the university he was president of the Student Council, a major in the R. O. T. C., and a member of the football team.

In 1937 he was voted the Achievement Medal of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, of which he is a member, for his outstanding scholarship as an undergraduate.

Lieutenant Fowler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Fowler of 1507 Sixth street, Washington, and he hopes to make the Army a career, preferably the infantry, according to his father.

Several members of the Fowler family were here for the commencement exercises and heard the Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson, remind the cadets they are entering a "democratic service." Mr. Stimson also told them their duty to defeat the Axis powers.

We Do Not Want This!

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 12—(ANP)—Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis will not be retired July 1 when he reaches the age limit of 64, but contrary to custom, he will be retained in army service.

It was learned by Tuskegee President F. D. Patterson after a visit to the war department Thursday that Gen. Davis will be ordered to Washington attached to the general staff and commissioned to visit and inspect cantonments housing colored groups. At present he commands the Fourth brigade at Fort Riley composed of the 9th and 10th cavalry regiments.

Two Nominated for West Point

PHILADELPHIA

Two local youths, Lemuel L. Tucker of 2044 Turner Street and Alphonso Williams of 2032 Turner Street, both sophomores at Lincoln University, were nominated on Friday by Congressman John E. Sheridan for appointment to West Point Military Academy.

The two, graduates of Central High School, will take the mental and physical examinations on June 16 for entrance to the academy on July 1. Both, it was learned, have high scholastic ratings at Lincoln.

First in State's History

Tucker, it is reported, has been designated as the Congressman's first choice, with Williams as an alternate.

The nomination of the youths marks the first time that colored residents of this State have been recommended by a Pennsylvania Congressman for entrance into the academy.

Congressman Sheridan is said to have requested that the names of qualified colored youths be submitted to him for consideration. The names of Tucker and Williams were presented by Ralph Knox, a committeeman of the Thirty-second Ward and employee of the city treasurer's office.

Neither Congressman Sheridan, Mr. Knox, nor the two nominees could be reached for a statement on the appointment. Robert Tresville, a former student of the Germantown High School and Pennsylvania State College, is a cadet at the academy.

General Leaves Ft. Riley

FORT RILEY, Kas. — Brig.-General Benjamin O. Davis has been ordered to leave Camp Funston and to report to Washington, D. C., for duty immediately.

General Davis, the first Negro general ever to serve in the U. S. army will leave the Fort Friday, on his way East. He will go by motor accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Sadie Davis, and her niece.

The order for the transfer of General Davis from Fort Riley to Washington came suddenly. It had not been expected that he would leave before the end of July.

The general will reach retirement age of 64 on July 1.

It is certain now that the general will not be retired but he will be relieved of duty as the commanding general of the Fourth Cavalry brigade, which is made up of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalaries and of a white artillery brigade.

What the duties of General Davis will be have not yet been disclosed by the war department at Washington.

It was reported last week that General Davis would be attached to the general staff in Washington and would make inspections of army cantonments.

In a telegram to The Call last week, William H. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, said that although the retention of General Davis on active duty was contemplated, the war department had not yet disclosed his specific duties.

Thomas Gay Claims Raw Treatment Given Him By Students

DETROIT — Thomas Lee Gay, 20, of 1017 Hendrie street, who was appointed to West Point by Congressman Clarence J. McLeod upon the recommendation of Atty. Charles Mahoney and Onslow Parrish, has resigned after two weeks in the academy, it was learned this week.

According to a letter received by John C. Dancy of the Urban league who arranged for the youth's finances, young Gay had been subjected to harsh treatment at the military school. Gay complained that he was forced to undergo certain indignities which he attributed to racial prejudice.

In his letter the youth stated that he was forced to take baths after all other boys had finished and that he was the only freshman without a roommate. He wrote that an officer had told him that he was in the wrong place and that West Point was not a school for Negroes. Gay stated also that he was forbidden to speak to anyone and that all other students were ordered not to speak to him.

Despite these indignities however, it is a matter of record that several Negroes have finished West Point and two other Negro students are there now. One youth finished this past year and Ambrose Nutt, also of Detroit, is expected to finish next year.

GENERAL DAVIS TO BE RETAINED

SCHEDULED FOR RETIREMANT next month because he will reach the age of 64, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro in the United States Army, was notified last week that he would be retained in active service for another year at least. It was reported that General Davis will be transferred from command of the Fourth Brigade at Fort Riley, Kan., and stationed in Washington as liaison officer between the War Department and the Negro draftees. This will come as reassuring news to Negroes, who have felt that General Davis' promotion last Fall was a political gesture and that he would never be given authority commensurate with his rank.

The desire of the Negro to retain General Davis in active service resulted in a campaign in which the services of Republican National Committeeman Perry W. Howard of Mississippi were enlisted, and he in turn put the matter before United States Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, who introduced a bill in Congress to extend General Davis' tenure of active service for one year.

In thinking of General Davis, one naturally wonders what the War Department is doing about the training of Negro officers for the Negro draftees. Except for physicians and dentists, very few Negro reserve officers have been called to active duty because of this fact, it appears that white officers will be in command of the bulk of the Negro soldiers.

During the last war, there was an officers training camp at Des Moines, Iowa, which gave many Negroes the opportunity to become commissioned officers. Is the War Department less liberal today than it was twenty-three years ago? From its policy to date, it certainly appears so.

SGT. WEARE HONORED BY GEN. B. O. DAVIS

Warrant Officer Of 4th Cavalry Brigade Is Called Colorful

CAMP FUNSTON, Kans.—One of the most colorful characters in the Fourth Cavalry brigade is Master Sgt. William H. Weare. He has the distinction of being the first non-commissioned officer ever to receive a warrant from Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis. This soldier, although a comparatively young man brought to the Fourth Brigade a wealth of variegated experiences.

Sergeant Weare, a native of Oklahoma, manipulated sloops in the alcoves of Lake Cayuga at Cornell university, burned the midnight oil for a semester at Columbia university, served as a first lieutenant with the 367th and 369th infantry in France, as an enlisted man with the Twenty-fourth infantry in the Philippines and Old Mexico, the Twenty-fifth infantry on the Mexican border, and the Ninth cavalry in all grades from buck private to first sergeant from 1935 until the organization of the Fourth Cavalry brigade.

He is a horseman extraordinary, master of the machine gun and pistol. Among numerous medals and citations, he received the Croix de Guerre for exploits in the Argonne Forest. With the activation of Special Weapons troop Ninth cavalry on January 15, 1941, Sergeant Weare became first sergeant of that organization. The incipient Fourth Cavalry brigade, at that time on a provisional status, had Sergeant Weare detailed on special duty from Special Weapons troop, Ninth cavalry as its acting sergeant major. Upon the activation of the Fourth Cavalry brigade on February 21, 1941, Sergeant Weare was transferred to the brigade as a member of the initial cadre from the Ninth cavalry.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis assumed command of the Fourth brigade on February 25. Master Sergeant Weare received his warrant as master sergeant from the first sergeantcommissioned officer ever to receive a warrant from a Negro general.

Jim Crow Officers Training?

If the President of the United States has half as much trouble with white folk as with black, his life must be one of misery. Just a few weeks ago, at the insistent demand of a large group of Negroes, the president issued an order banning segregation, as practiced in the various departments at Washington. It must be said to the credit of President Roosevelt that he and his wife, since entering the White House, have kept their ears to the ground, and they have, both sought earnestly to secure for black citizens more of emolument and privilege than any other occupants of the White House since emancipation.

But while the president is at the front door issuing executive orders which carry out the wishes of many Negoes who rightly feel that segregation should be discarded in the various federal bureaus, at the back door arrives another group asking for segregation.

This latest group, headed by Edgar G. Brown (the man who wants Negroes to finance him with a million dimes in a national lobby effort) are reported by Fulton Lewis, news forecaster over the Mutual Broadcasting system, as asking for a Jim Crow officer's training school, similar to the one maintained at Camp Dodge during World War 1.

None of the responsible leadership knew of Edgar Brown's singular request until Fulton Lewis broadcast a statement that "a large group of most responsible Negro leaders" had appealed to President Roosevelt to set up a Jim Crow officer's training school.

The position of the Black Dispatch on this question is well known. We oppose always and everywhere any attempt to maintain Jim Crow and segregation in any public or governmental way. The proponents of Jim Crow and segregation suggest this type of social organization based upon the stupid assumption that one race of human beings is better than another. There is nothing in the drug store that will get a man well, so far as the Black Dispatch is concerned, when he starts talking about segregation. For a quarter of a century this writer has in his daily life refused to participate in any private affairs where Jim Crow appears and when we publicly sumbit to Jim Crow we cannot help ourselves.

It can be readily seen that when Walter White telegraphed the other day asking if our name could be attached to a telegram to the president denouncing the position taken by Edgar Brown we telegraphed back:

"Sign my name two times."

We are not going to impugn the motives of Edgar Brown and his associates. They may feel they are acting in the interest of Negroes, but we think that sincerity in this instance is worse than demogoguery. A hypocrite in the last analysis is a negative quantity, while the positive nature of sincerity has never been questioned. If Edgar Brown is sincere he looms as the most dangerous black man in America. We are glad now that we resisted with all of our strength, efforts of Edgar Brown to secure the endorsement of the National Negro Business League of his plans for a national lobby. Negroes do not need Jim Crow leadership.

To our way of seeing it there are too many Edgar Browns in the Negro group. Too many Negroes in an academic way will oppose Edgar Brown's proposal for a Negro unit in officer's training, and they will gallop right off to an opera, a prize fight or a ball game and take a "reserved seat." Too many Negroes will hold meetings of their own and "reserve seats" for white folk.

Another group, who allege they are opposed to Jim Crow and segregation, will leap to their feet in a minute opposing the entry of a white business man into the Negro district. They are quick to arise and announce, "I don't think whites should have the right to do business in our neighborhood."

And there is still another Jim Crow Negro who would not purchase anything from a Negro business place regardless to how capably, how efficiently it measured up to approved standards. Such folk have an idea, and sincerely believe, that the ice a white man sells is colder than that peddled on the wagon of a Negro driver. All of this attitude smacks of a Jim Crow spirit.

What we're attempting to say, before everyone gets too warm with Edgar Brown, is that the average Negro lives in a confused, muddled and bewildered atmosphere where seemingly he does not realize when he is for or against separation of the races.

This writer has always argued that a white business man has as much right in the Negro neighborhood to do business as we think Negroes have the right to operate business on Main street. In the fight against Jim Crow we must demand freedom of movement for everybody.

On the other hand, we have shown aversion for, and opposition to all forms of Jim Crow by refusing to attend or have anything to do with affairs where white people provide "seats for the scornful." Several years ago we announced in this column opposition to a Roland Hayes concert, when the Negro management decided to arrange "special seats" for whites.

All we have said here imposes the thought that Edgar Brown has a following among Negroes and they are Negroes who do not believe in democracy, for Jim Crow does not in any sense give equal rights to all; it is racial autocracy in which all types of "Hitlerism" is spawned.

It is true that during the World War twenty years ago, Negroes had an officer's training school at Des Moines and hundreds of Negroes on the college level were trained as commanding officers of combat units of the American army. Ask yourself this question: how many of those specially trained officers were retained in the army after the war? We started a special training school and we gave them special status. We gave them special dismissal.

On the other hand all Negroes trained in the formal way as has General Davis and others remained in the American army and have steadily risen and it was because of his seniority rights General Davis has reached the highest military level of any Negro in American history.

It should be easily seen that those asking now for some sort of synthetic type of military training are heading the Negroes toward the same precipice Jim Crow training carried Negro officers 20 years ago. Then Negro officers were given special induction and special dismissal.

Negroes having clarity of vision will continue to insist that West Point and Annapolis be opened to all American youth; that every branch of the American army be opened to American youth; that Negroes be integrated into state guards and the federal combat units without regard to racial origin, and that the only standard and qualification set up for citizen-soldiers in the United States shall be loyalty to the Stars and Stripes.

It can be readily seen that when Walter White telegraphed the other day asking if our name could be attached to a telegram to the president denouncing the position taken by Edgar Brown we telegraphed back:

"Sign my name two times."

We are not going to impugn the motives of Edgar Brown and his associates. They may feel they are acting in the interest of Negroes, but we think that sincerity in this instance is worse than demogoguery. A hypocrite in the last analysis is a negative quantity, while the positive nature of sincerity has never been questioned. If Edgar Brown is sincere he looms as the most dangerous black man in America. We are glad now that we resisted with all of our strength, efforts of Edgar Brown to secure the endorsement of the National Negro Business League of his plans for a national lobby. Negroes do not need Jim Crow leadership.

To our way of seeing it there are too many Edgar Browns in the Negro group. Too many Negroes in an academic way will oppose Edgar Brown's proposal for a Negro unit in officer's training, and they will gallop right off to an opera, a prize fight or a ball game and take a "reserved seat." Too many Negroes will hold meetings of their own and "reserve seats" for white folk.

Another group, who allege they are opposed to Jim Crow and segregation, will leap to their feet in a minute opposing the entry of a white business man into the Negro district. They are quick to arise and announce, "I don't think whites should have the right to do business in our neighborhood."

And there is still another Jim Crow Negro who would not purchase anything from a Negro business place regardless to how capably, how efficiently it measured up to approved standards. Such folk have an idea, and sincerely believe, that the ice a white man sells is colder than that peddled on the wagon of a Negro driver. All of this attitude smacks of a Jim Crow spirit.

What we're attempting to say, before everyone gets too warm with Edgar Brown, is that the average Negro lives in a confused, muddled and bewildered atmosphere where seemingly he does not realize when he is for or against separation of the races.

This writer has always argued that a white business man has as much right in the Negro neighborhood to do business as we think Negroes have the right to operate business on Main street. In the fight against Jim Crow we must demand freedom of movement for everybody.

On the other hand, we have shown aversion for, and opposition to all forms of Jim Crow by refusing to attend or have anything to do with affairs where white people provide "seats for the scornful." Several years ago we announced in this column opposition to a Roland Hayes concert, when the Negro management decided to arrange "special seats" for whites.

All we have said here imposes the thought that Edgar Brown has a following among Negroes and they are Negroes who do not believe in democracy, for Jim Crow does not in any sense give equal rights to all; it is racial autocracy in which all types of "Hitlerism" is spawned.

It is true that during the World War twenty years ago, Negroes had an officer's training school at Des Moines and hundreds of Negroes on the college level were trained as commanding officers of combat units of the American army. Ask yourself this question: how many of those specially trained officers were retained in the army after the war? We started a special training school and we gave them special status. We gave them special dismissal.

On the other hand all Negroes trained in the formal way as has General Davis and others remained in the American army and have steadily risen and it was because of his seniority rights General Davis has reached the highest military level of any Negro in American history.

It should be easily seen that those asking now for some sort of synthetic type of military training are heading the Negroes toward the same precipice Jim Crow training carried Negro officers 20 years ago. Then Negro officers were given special induction and special dismissal.

Negroes having clarity of vision will continue to insist that West Point and Annapolis be opened to all American youth; that every branch of the American army be opened to American youth; that Negroes be integrated into state guards and the federal combat units without regard to racial origin, and that the only standard and qualification set up for citizen-soldiers in the United States shall be loyalty to the Stars and Stripes.

COL. LOUIS CARTER, RETIRED CHAPLAIN OF U. S. ARMY, DIES

Had Served 30 Years As Spiritual Advisor of Negro Regiments

FORT HUACHUCA, ARIZ.—Flags at half mast, last military rites for Colonel Louis A. Carter, retired Chaplain, were held at Fort Huachuca, this afternoon, where he last served the army from which he retired in February, 1940.

The funeral services were conducted by Chaplan A. DeVeaux, who succeeded Chaplain Carter at this post.

The entire 25th Infantry, which Chaplain Carter twice served with, from 1921 to 1931, and then again from 1935 until his retirement at Fort Huachuca, attended the services, and formed the funeral procession, under the command of Colonel Lee D. Davis.

A firing squad from the 1st Platoon, Company "A", 25th Infantry fired a salute as the last tribute to the man who for thirty years had served the men of the Army.

Active pallbearers, selected by the family of the late Colonel Carter were 1st Sergeant Johnson, Sgt. Wilden, Sgt. O. C. Marshall, Sgt. Gaston, Sgt. Armstrong and Sgt. E. R. Peters; and Honorary pallbearers representing the regiment were Lt. Col. W. A. McMajor Henry Fisher, Major John W. Childs, Major W. L. Loyd, and Captain J. M. Lovell.

Colonel William [illegible] Robinson, Jr., Quarter-General for the Eighth Corps Area, former commandier of the 25th Infantry, came from San Antonio for the last rites.

Colonel Louis A. Carter was born February 20, 1870, at Auburn, Alabama, and was ordained a minister of the Baptist Church in 1899. He attended Tuskegee Institute, Selma University, and Virginia Union University where he graduated with a degree of Bachelor of Divinity in 1904.

He attended the Chaplain's School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and held Honorary Degrees of Doctor of Divinity from Guadalupe College, Texas, 1907, and Western University, Kansas, in 1926.

He entered the military service as a Chaplain in 1910, and in his thirty years of service, had served all four of the regular Colored regiments of the army, the 24th Infantry at Sacket Harbor, Madison Barrocks, N. Y.; the 10th Calvary at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont and this post; the 9th Calvary, at Camp Harry J. Jone, Douglas, Arizona and Stotsenberg, Pampanga, P. I.; and the 25th Infantry, at Stephen D. Little, Nogales, and at Fort Huachuca.

He retired from active service, February 29, 1940, and had been living in Los Angeles, California, until recently, when he returned to Tucson with his widow, Mary M. Carter, who recently appointed hostess at this post, who survives him. Shortly after arriving at Tucson he became ill, and passed away at the Veterans Hospital there, June 16th.

1ST DRAFTED DOCTOR IS GIVEN COMMISSION

FORT DIX, N. J.—(ANP)—The first colored physician to be drafted, Pvt. Herbert Bernard Henderson, has received his commission in the army of the United States and will soon report for duty with the 372nd infantry which is stationed at Fort Dix.

Pvt. Henderson will be discharged from the army on July 31 and will then report to Fort Dix for extended active duty as a first lieutenant in the medical corps reserve.

After receiving a bachelor of arts degree from Johnson C. Smith university in 1931, he studied medicine at Howard university in Washington, graduating in 1935.

Pvt. Henderson spent his first year of interneship at Freedmen's hospital, Washington, and his second year with the Harlem hospital in New York City.

He started private practice, in medicine and surgery, in Charlotte N. C. in 1937 and 1938—continued in New York City until March 11 when he was drafted under the Selective Service act.

ARMY LIMITS USE OF RACE DOCTORS

CAMP LIVINGSTON, La., Aug. 7—A visit to the Station hospital at Camp Livingston and observation of its operation and the work of Negro officers there impels one to ask the question: "What is the War Department's idea in using Negro doctors?"

Except for National Guard units in northern states, Negro doctors are practically restricted to two camps, Fort Bragg and Camp Livingston.

Why not at Fort Benning?
Why not at Camp Davis?
Why not at Camp Croft?
Why not at Camp Blanding?
Why not at Camp Wheeler?
Why not at Camp Shelby?
Why not, of all places, at Fort Huachuca?

Why not at Camp Bowie, Camp Wolters, Camp Riley, Fort Sill, Fort Leonard Wood and other camps where there are large contingents of Negro troops.

Why are Negro doctors and dentists ignored in the dispensary setups for most Negro troops?

SERVICES RESTRICTED

All the Negro troops in southern camps are in segregated areas? Almost every unit has a Negro chaplain. Why could not each unit have a Negro doctor. Why are there so few Negro dentists?

Negro doctors in the Army are not complaining about the pay, although many of them have made a financial sacrifice to place themselves at the use of their country, but some of them do complain because of restricted opportunity for service. They say they are steered away from major operations even on Negro soldiers.

Highest praise is given Lieutenant John Manley at Fort Bragg as a surgeon by his fellow officers. Lieutenant Manley himself has not complained, but some of his friends have insisted that Manley has not been given the chance to show what he can do.

Another physician and surgeon about whom there has been talk, is Lieutenant Ira Cowan of New York City. He is at Camp Livingston.

Some of these men who have had considerable hospital experience are inclined to feel that they are wasting their time. When they came into the Army, they thought they were going to have the same opportunities for practice that they had enjoyed in civilian life.

It can be assumed that the War Department is responsible for the failure to place Negro doctors in more camps.

Many of the complaints which the doctors in service now make, however, can be charged up to the surgeon in charge of the hospital.

The executive officer at the Station hospital in Camp Livingston, a Pennsylvanian, made little effort to be co-operative when your correspondent visited that institution. Only a captain, he was too busy with other, more important matters.

NO JIM CROW AT BENNING

He was much different from the officer in charge of the Station hospital at Camp Wolters, Texas, Col. Blessing. This officer took two hours of his time to explain every detail of the institution to your reporter. There is that difference between captains and some colonels.

In every hospital visited in a southern camp, Negro patients were segregated to themselves except the hospital annex at Fort Benning. There Negro and white patients were indiscriminately mixed and nothing happened. The commanding officer, Col. Rheinhardt, didn't think anything could happen. But, there again, Fort Benning has no Negro doctors or nurses.

Gen. Davis Willing to Stay in Army

MAY 10 1941

By Special Correspondent

FORT RILEY, Kans.—Despite his forty-three years service, Brigadier-General Benjamin O. Davis may remain in the army after reaching the retirement age, 64, in June.

His willingness to remain active, in case the War Department so desires, was expressed before he took command of the Fourth Cavalry Brigade here in February. There is no indication, in face of the cordial nature of his acceptance here, that he is any less willing today.

Soldiers Enthusiastic

Rumors that unwillingness of the enlisted men and their white commissioned officers to serve under him might hinder the success of his command have been completely dispelled.

Interviews with non-commissioned members of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry Regiments, which make up the Fourth Brigade, have reflected great enthusiasm on the part of a vast majority of the 3,000 soldiers under him.

Has Whites' Respect

Nor has the attitude of the white commissioned officers who carry out his orders been any less conducive to his success. He has both their respect and admiration.

MAY 10 1941

One white officer, who had served with General Davis in the Philippines, has openly expressed regret that he was not assigned as the general's aide-de-camp, a post assigned to his son, Captain B. O. Davis, Jr., West Point graduate, who was transferred here from Tuskegee.

MAY 10

Only One Superior

General Davis's only superior here is General Rogers, commandant of the reservation, headquarters of the Second Cavalry Division, which comprises the Fourth Brigade and a white brigade.

Immediately under him are Colonel Duncan C. Richart and Lieutenant-Colonel Paul R. Davidson, white regimental commanders, respectively, of the Ninth and Tenth Regiments, who have retained the commands they held before the two regiments were activated.

MAY 10 194

General Davis and his wife live in a commodious home at 5 Barry Street, in the same block with General Rogers and Brigadier-General Allen, commandant of the white brigade.

The son, Captain Davis, and his wife live in an apartment building for married captains, all the rest of whom are white.

Negroes Being Taken in Army's Regular Schools

MAY 4 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(A N P)—The fact that Negro officers already in the armed services are being taken into the established regular army schools for special training in specialized courses is a highly gratifying sign, Judge William Hastie, civilian aide to the secretary of war says, and according to the judge, it bodes well for the future welfare of Negro officers.

Throughout the country these men are being taken in groups to various training centers and given the benefit of the latest in modern warfare.

MAY 4 1941

When asked if there would be an officers training school, similar to that of the last war, Judge Hastie said he believes there will be opportunities for young colored trainees who have had six months training to enter the established camps, which are located as follows:

Infantry at Fort Benning, Ga.; artillery at Ft. Sill, Okla.; coast artillery corps at Fort Monroe, Va.; cavalry at Fort Riley, Kan.; engineers at Fort Belvoir, Va.; signal corps at Ft. Monmouth, N. J.; ordnance corps at Aberdeen, Md.; armed tanks at Ft. Knox, Ky.

Not all of the reserve officers have been called to the service, said Judge Hastie, and there is a general check-up being made to determine just how many more of the 350 listed are still available for duty. When they will be called is problematical.

MAY 4 1941

The training schools for officers will start the first of July and it is anticipated there will be a number of recruits from the colored troops asking for opportunities to obtain commissions in their respective tanks. No new recruits will be assigned to the training schools, until they have had at least six months course of preliminary work.

GENERAL DAVIS IS CALLED TO D.C.

Missouri Senator Introduces Bill to Retain Davis on Active Duty.

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 26—Although Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis has been ordered here for duty in the office of the Inspector General, War Department, The Pittsburgh Courier carried on its fight to have him continued for another year on active duty with combat troops.

JUN 28 1941

Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, chairman of the special committee investigating the national defense program, introduced in the Senate last Friday the Courier's bill to authorize the Secretary of War to retain General Davis on active duty with combat troops until he attains the age of 65 years.

GOES TO COMMITTEE

The bill is a companion measure to a bill offered in the House recently by Representative U. S. Guyer, Republican, of Kansas. It was introduced by Senator Truman at the request of Dr. William J. Thompkins, the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia.

JUN 28 1941

Special significance is attached to the introduction of the bill by Senator Truman. He is a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. Although he is busy conducting an investigation of the national defense program, Senator Truman is in position to push the bill.

The measure was referred to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

At the War Department it was learned last Saturday that General Davis is on his way here. Just what his new duties will be in the office of the Inspector General were not disclosed. A statement was promised later.

TO BE RECALLED

General Davis served as commander of the Fourth Cavalry Brigade, composed of the 9th and 10th Cavalry regiments at Fort Riley from January 13 last. He will be 64 years of age on July 1 and will be due for retirement.

Unless the Courier's bill is passed relieving him from the provisions of existing law or the President acts under his emergency powers, retirement of General Davis on July 1 will be mandatory. His orders to report here indicate that he will be recalled immediately for active duty, if he is retired under existing law.

MEMBER OF ARMY GENERAL STAFF, REPORT

Set Two Interpretations On Significance Of Rumored Action

GEN. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS

JUN 7 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Agitation for the waiving of an army regulation requiring the retirement of officers at the age of 64, was believed won this week when from unofficial though reliable sources it was learned that Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis will be recalled to the capital and attached to the army general staff.

Though it is understood his function will be merely to visit and inspect contonments housing Negro troops, it could not be ascertained whether or not he would be actually a member of the army general staff.

The army general staff is the highest military authority in the country and it is supposed that the President, as commander in chief, under emergencies such as this, is guided largely in his decisions by members of the staff, who are experts in various phases of military science.

If General Davis is to become a full-fledged member of the staff, his elevation is significant, not only because it establishes a precedent, but because he will have a voice in determining army policy which at present is unquestionably undemocratic and definitely unsatisfactory to Negroes and liberal whites.

General Davis was slated to be retired in July when he will observe his sixty-fourth birthday. At present he is in command of the fourth brigade at Fort Riley, Kans., composed of the Ninth and Tenth cavalries.

However, the possibility exists that the reported assignment of General Davis may not carry with it the authority hoped for. The report that he is to visit and inspect camps where Negro troops are housed has been interpreted by certain observers as a gesture designed to bolster morale among Negro troops very conscious of civilian criticism of army policy regarding the Race.

The continuation in active service of a Negro general is expected to have a wholesome psychological effect not only upon Negro army personnel but upon the civilian population as well.

The reported new assignment of General Davis is expected to become effective in July when he was slated for retirement.

BRAGG MAY GET COLORED MPs ON GEN. DAVIS OKAY

SEP 20 1941

FORT BRAGG, N. C., Sept. 18. (ANP)—In the usual manner, Negro troops stationed here were paid the fifth of the month, which was exactly a month from the tragic incident involving the death of heroic Pvt. Ned Turman, who was shot down by a white M.P. in the Fort Bragg bus. Only two large Negro units were on the post payday, Sept. 5, these were the 16th Battalion, Field Artillery Replacement Center, and the 76th Coast Artillery (AA). The others were out on maneuvers and firing problems.

In a plan to attempt to halt public criticism "temporary Negro military policemen" were selected to serve during the payday season. These temporary M.P.'s were stationed in the badlands where Negroes are settled heavily but none were seen in or around the bus station where a large percentage of trouble usually brews.

MAY GET REGULAR M.P.'S

In an impromptu poll with the Negro M.P.'s, it was noted that there was very little trouble paynight or afterwards. The Negro M.P.'s are not given the training as the whites are given and are usually told indirectly or directly to not arrest white soldiers. In the recent inspection tour of Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, it is believed that fully trained regular Negro military men for all time M.P. duty would be recommended.

The Fayetteville city police authorities have just about cleaned up prostitutes who were operating in Fayetteville's notorious "Little Harlem." Women who are seen soliciting are arrested and taken to jail and are examined by public health authorities. If the examination proves these women have any of the various social diseases, they are sentenced to terms of from 3 to 12 months at the state women's prison in Raleigh.

Sunday night, taxicab owners and cafe operators were not near as busy as they had been in the past four weeks. There were numerous arrests made also of cab drivers who were caught contacting women for soldiers and "pad" operators. These "pads," as soldiers term them, are the ragged houses where usually five or six women are located and operate chiefly for the convenience of entertaining "sex hungry" soldiers. At this time, there are very few Negro or white protestitutes seen on Fayetteville strees.

The Negro Serves In Defense

The Editor of The LaFayette Sun and others have protested recently against the way crime among our Negro population is being taken lightly, or even in some places ignored.

The majority of Negroes desire to be law-abiding, and it is unfair to this majority for our officers and our courts to let the criminal element run amuck.

Let us remember, however, that the greatest breeder of crime, among white and black alike, is bad environment—a life of hunger, rags, disease and ignorance. Crime will flourish where these are whether the law be administered or not.

In the present national crisis it is more important than ever that all segments of American life shall know the justice and the good life of democracy. Knowing the good fruits of democracy, men of all races and faith will stand rock-like in the national defense.

Judge John D. Petree, director of the Department of Industrial Relations, reported this week that "Negroes are being called in large numbers to take a definite place in the national defense program in Alabama . . . Reports received from local offices of the Alabama State Employment Service indicate that negroes are being recruited for national defense jobs in many sections of Alabama. Between January 1 and May 31 the Alabama State Employment Service found jobs for 11,850 negroes. This is 48.9 per cent of all placements made by the service in Alabama during the first five months of 1941. In the nation during the same period 20.4 per cent of the placements were negro workers."

It is interesting to recall that Paul McNutt, high defense official, reported recently that discrimination against the Negro is less in the South than in the North. This is a deserved tribute to the advancing spirit of anti-Hitlerism in the South.

Officers End Investigation At Fort Bragg

SEP 27 1941

Recommendation On Roosevelt's Desk; War Dep't Also Studies Data

WASHINGTON (Special).—Possibility that Negro military police units may be established in the South as a means of curtailing terror and violence in Army camps in that section was seen this week as the War Department and the White House began studying the 600 page report of General B. O. Davis, who has just handed in the result of his investigation of conditions at Ft. Bragg.

General Davis was ordered to make the investigation following the slaying of two M. P.'s, one colored and one white during a virtual reign of terror participated in by white and Negro troops and civilians early last month.

In his report the general, who was accompanied by Lt. Col. R. L. Hunter of the investigation division and Col. Edward Hanford of the chief inspector's division, made certain recommendations, among them being:

"The dispatching of an experienced officer trained in police work, to be provost marshal at the camp and to train and organize a force of white and Colored military police.

SEP 27 1941

"The establishment of a military police headquarters in the city of Fayettesville, separate and distinct from the civilian police.

"A large number of military officers to supervise the military police in the city.

"And a unified force of military police to be established with white and Negro personnel, with the men having equal equipment and equal authority."

Persons close to the department have hinted that the general recommendations are much broader than had been anticipated, and that if they are adopted and the officers placed in command are given complete official backing, it is quite likely that the situation that has kept the entire country on edge for the past three months might be cleared up.

SEP 27 1941

One of the chief complaints about conditions in the Southern camps and in nearby towns has been that Negroes have not been allowed to serve regularly as military police and that on occasion when they have served they were armed only with sticks and were not permitted to arrest or interfere with white soldiers. General Davis' investigating committee specifically recommends that Negro and white military police have equal equipment and equal authority.

Early this week President Roosevelt was reported to be considering the possibility of issuing an executive order affecting Army conditions.

West Pointers Quit Hard Studies, Says Pierson

NEWARK, N.J. — Failure of two West Point cadets to remain at the Military Academy was charged to their dislike for hard studies, last week, by Lieut.-Col. Frank J. Pierson of the Second Corps Area.

The officer, in an interview with the AFRO, made the assertion in support of his contention that race prejudice plays no part in the estimated shortage of 4,600 colored officers in the U.S. Army.

Blames Congressmen, Citizens

The War Department, he said, has no control over the fact that there are only six in the regular army, since these officers are trained at West Point, and it is up to the citizens to see that their Congressmen nominate colored youths for appointment to the academy and that the appointees stay there and finish.

Last year, according to Lieutenant Colonel Pierson, there were three or four colored youths at West Point; two of them quit and were called to the commandant's office for questioning as to why.

Both, he said, denied the existence of race prejudice at the academy and said they were leaving because the studies were too hard.

ROTC Not Involved

Emphasizing that he referred to the regular army and not to the national guard and selectees, he continued:

"The ROTC has done a good job in training colored officers, but regular army officers are trained at West Point and not at Tuskegee. No colored man would be refused promotion in the army merely because of color. Promotions are based entirely on qualifications."

When told that the proportion of white officers to men is 1 to 14, and that of colored officers to men, 1 to 222, Colonel Pierson said these figures are about right, but that the army is not responsible.

If more colored boys would enter West Point, the proportion of officers to men would be different, he pointed out.

"I have been in the regular army twenty-five years," he said, "and have soldiered with colored men whom I regard as the highest type in the army. Take, for instance, the 24th and 25th Infantry, the 10th and 11th Cavalry —they are the finest in the service."

Shake-ups Hinted In Colored Units As General Makes Tour

By T. W. GRAHAM

FORT DIX, N. J.—Even as Brig.-General Benjamin O. Davis arrived here to make an inspection trip of Fort Dix with special attention to the 372nd Regiment stationed here, rumors came from Washington of an impending shake-up in many of the colored regiments.

The General had very little to say about anything, explaining his tour as "routine", but Capital sources said that soon the higher-ups in the various colored outfits would feel the sting of the War Department's lash.

Failure of some of the units on manuevers, general dissatisfaction with the ability and conduct of individual officers were given as reason for the changes. It was pointed out that such moves would be in keeping with the general policy of the War Department which is cutting down many high-ranking white officers whom it feels are not up to scratch.

Nothing To Say

As far as talking about this Gen. Davis had little to say. He arrived Tuesday night and spent most of the day talking with post command officers and leaders of the 372nd Regiment.

Colonel Howard C. Gilbert was away from the post when the General made his unexpected call but hopped a plane and arrived a few hours after hearing of General Davis' arrival.

What talking the general did was for the most part directed towards the "press." He charged that through incompetent reporting and the spread of misinformation Negro papers are giving colored readers a poor idea of the Army.

Denies Big Report

He made a categorical denial that a 600-page report had been made by him to the War Department on the Fort Bragg incidents and also charged that most of the 'inside' information released in the various newspapers had been "guessed at" and was entirely unauthentic.

But outside of that he had little to say. He insisted his inspection tour was routine and wouldn't say a kind or bad word about the Negro soldiers stationed here. He wouldn't say anything.

According to one white officer General Davis' words carry much weight in the War Department and a few from him would get a lot done.

Need More Officers

From sources other than the official ones it was reported that the officers' list of the 372nd Regiment was not up to the required mark.

This condition had been felt in many other regiments, Negro officer personnel being almost non-existent. Most of the officers are National Guard men or have come through the ranks. The 372nd is badly in need of more junior officers.

Rebuttal To Stimson: Race Officers In Army Still Hit By War Lords' Prejudice

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, released some figures a few days ago with great satisfaction to himself, and evidently with the complacent thought that the Negro people of the United States would be so happy their hats would be thrown in air, while smiles besmeared their lips and countenances.

The secretary announced, with becoming impressiveness, at his press conference that: There are now 39,633 Negro officers and men on active duty in the various Army corps, and emphasized the figures "because," as he said, "of the criticisms which sometimes come that we are not using them enough.

Probably Negroes should be happy that after the many torrid months they have labored to break down War Department discriminations they have been able to achieve even this small recognition.

VOLUNTEERS DISCOURAGED

Few readers will fail to recall the first intentions of the War Department when the defense program beganto get underway. The four Regular Negro Army units—the 24th and 25th Infantry, and the 9th and 10th Cavalry, after being skeletonized and broken up into small, dispersed units over a period of some 20 years since World War I were brought to sizable proportions, but volunteer enlistment by Negroes in all other units of the Army Corps were sedulously discouraged. And then came the Selective Service Act.

Before induction processes are concluded, we shall probably have that forced representation of 92,345 so far authorized, but in other respects the same old rigidities will operate, particularly with respect to Negro-officer personnel in the units which have been apportioned to us—an officer-personnel almost and relatively unimportant.

Take these figures so impressively released by Mr. Stimson: After all these years, since Emancipation in 1865, there are only 2 colored Regular Army officers with troop units and one colored regular army officer with the Inspector General's Office, along with three Regular Army chaplains, despite the fact that these 4 Regular Army Negro Units were established by a Consolidation Act passed by Congress on March 3, 1869—more than 72 years ago.

DISPARITY OF RATIO

Also, there are now in service 227 Negro National Guard officers, and 23 Negro reserve officers, that is, a ration of 266 men to each officer.

Now look at this picture: There are 1,428,267 white men and officers, with a ration of about 1 officer to every 13 men.

How in the name of all good reason, while Secretary Stimson is bragging of the "recognition" being given Negroes in the Armed Services, can the War Department justify this disparity of ratio?

The tradition of the War Department is to "play down" the capability of colored officers. This is a well recognized fact. Why should it expect colored officers, then, whom it seeks to discredit, to capably meet the exacting requirements of training their men, if handicapped with such a disproportionate ratio of responsibility.

NOT REALLY FAIR-PLAY

One other thing: Why should Secretary Stimson seek to satisfy militant public opinion by issuing a release calculated to convey the notioin that fair play and justice are being regarded and observed in the treament of Negro soldiers, calling special attention thereto, when even a casual review of his own statement exposes the marked and traditional attitude of War Department hostility when it comes to according Negroes that even-handed justice to which they are entitled?

Their courage, their ever-loyal support of Government and country in all the wars of the Republic—none of these, it seems, can break down the patronizing spirit of the War Department.

The evasions and wrongs, and the hurts the War Department have done us and seeks still to do us, as we have consistently sought to serve our country, without flinching or disloyalty of any kind whatsoever, still do not discourage us. Is there a more loyal group in the United States?

NOT BEING CALLED

It may be of interest to the Secretary of War to know that, on May 15, last, there were 377 colored reserve officers eligible for active duty, not counting the ROTC graduates of the current year, who are eligible.

It is well known that many white reserve officers are on duty with colored units. These could be replaced with colored reserve officers. The unjustifiable ratio of 1 colored officer to each 266 men, with 1 white officer to 13 men should speedily be adjusted.

Also, it may not be amiss to remind the Secretary of War that his estimated Army strength as of June 30, 1941, of 1,497,900 officers and men to be provided should include a total of 149,790 colored officers and men instead of 92,345 as authorized—a difference of 57,445, if he wishes, in all fairness, to give us our percentage total of the whole.

Another press conference by Mr. Stimson at an early date acknowledging and rectifying this situation will be joyously welcomed by all lovers of fair-play, white and black alike.

Only 6 Officers in Entire Regular Army

By OLLIE STEWART

There are only six colored officers in the whole of the Regular Army, according to the latest issue of the army and navy register!

Three of these are chaplains, and three are line officers—and none of the six has a command. Brig.-Gen. B. O. Davis is working in Washington; his son, Capt. B. O. Davis, Jr., is teaching military tactics to flying cadets at Tuskegee, and Second Lieut. James D. Fowler has been out of West Point for only two months. The chaplains preach, rather than give orders.

Something Wrong

To dismiss the situation as being shameful is a mild understatement. Awful is the word. And somehting is radically wrong.

It is planned to use 92,846 officers and men in the regular army and national guard units—but latest figures show that 69,633 officers and men are on duty in all of the nine corps area, serving in 12 branches of the army, including the air corps.

Of the officers, the regular army has 6, and is making use of 3 reserve officers. Total reserve officers number 23; national guard officers total 227—for a total of 259.

15 in Nurses' Corps

Warrant officers in the regular army number 8, and 3 others are in the national guard. The army nurses' corps has 15.

There are 26,888 enlisted men in the regular army. The national guard has 1,585, and there are 213 reserves.

A total of 39,015 trainees has been assigned to regular army units, and 1,647 have been assigned to national guard units. Colored officers are attending service schools in all arms and services. The air corps has a separate school at Tuskegee Institute.

COLORED MEN NOW SERVE IN 12 BRANCHES OF THE ARMY

Colored enlisted men are now serving in twelve branches of the Army, including the Air Corps, the War Department announced today.

Latest figures show that 69,633 officers and men are on duty in all of the nine Corps Areas. Of the officers, nine, including three Reserve officers, are in the Regular Army. There are 227 National Guard officers and 23 Reserve officers—a total of 259.

There are 8 warrant officers in the Regular Army and 3 in the National Guard. There are 15 in the Army Nurse Corps.

The enlisted men in the Regular Army number 26,888. In addition, there are 1,585 National Guardsmen and 213 Reserves.

There are 39,015 trainees assigned to Regular Army units and 1,647 assigned to National Guard units.

Major units organized with colored troops include:

Infantry

Six regiments.

Chemical Warfare Service

Two chemical companies (decontamination).

Engineers

Two regiments, general service; one to be activated in August.

Eight separate battalions.

Two light pontoon companies.

Two dump truck companies.

Air Corps

One pursuit squadron.

Nine service squadrons.

Armored Force

One light tank battalion.

Cavalry

Two regiments.

Coast Artillery

Six regiments; five of which are Anti-aircraft and one 155-mm gun.

Field Artillery

Ordnance

Ten ammunition companies.

Quartermaster Corps

Seven truck regiments, four railhead companies, four salvage companies, three service battalions, two pack troops.

Signal Corps

One separate construction company.

Medical

Two sanitary companies, detachments assigned to all regiments and separate battalions.

Colored officers are attending service schools in all arms and services. In the Air Corps a separate school has been created at Tuskegee, Alabama.

All colored selectees and all colored recruits are given the basic training of the arm or service to which they are assigned. In the Signal Corps this training is given in units. In all other arms and services it is given in replacement training centers.

Negro Officers In Army Burdened With Disproportionate Ratio Of Responsibility; White Officers Being Used With Negro Units

We Despise 'Em

Puck was right! "What fools these mortals be!"—at times. We confess we are disgusted—twice. Once because three Negroes in a row when asked their thought about the employment of a member of their race answered that a Negro in authority would play favorites, and for that reason advised against it.

47k JAN 17 1941

Our second ire is against those race papers that published the story that Negroes in the ranks did not want General Benjamin O. Davis.

Let's take these two up in their order. It is because white men in office have the habit of giving the preference to whites in the conferring of benefits that Negroes make the heavens ring with their complaints. There is no disputing that fact. Then how comes it that these three know-it-alls have been so fairly treated by whites and so universally mistreated by their own that they know it would not do to see one of their own put in a position of authority? It's sour grapes! Crawfish, not real people, pull one another back.

In the second case, the story is a foul lie, and every Negro newspaper that published the statement was for the moment more interested in being sensational than truthful. When Col. Charles Young of sainted memory was captain of Troop I at Ft. D. A. Russell, Wyoming, his men said of themselves that they were the "best unit in the army" and that he made them best. They idolized him and responded to his hard discipline. General Davis will understand complainers. The few who delight in the soft berth of flunky he will rout out of their ease. But most Negroes in this man's army are average Americans. For every lazy one there are ten Negro enlisted men who will take pleasure in making General Davis' command a crack unit. Furthermore, if that story were true, this newspaper now and always will find such defeatist stuff "no news." Our job is to make our race and all mankind better, not to turn over chips to see what bugs are under them.

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

UEGRO OFFICERS

JAN 9 1941

The Bystander published a story last week — and we think it found its way into many Negro papers because it was released by the Associated Negro Press — which stated that Negro soldiers in Fort Riley, Kansas, did not want Brigadier General B. O. Davis as a commander — in fact they did not want Negro officers in their regiments.

To those unacquainted with the situation, the revelation was startling; to those who know the history, it was no surprise. As a matter of fact to the latter group, the only regret came by furtner acquainting the public with the fact that Negro leadership is attempted to be discredited.

the editor of The Bystander was one of the first men enrolled in the Seventh Provisional (officer) Regiment at Fort Des Moines in 1917, was commissioned a lieutenant and assigned to the 366th Infantry at Camp Dodge. He went to France with his regiment, attended a corps school, served at the front both as a company officer and battalion intelligence and scout officer. During all this time he served with a large number of former noncommissioned officers of the 9th and 10th Cavalry and the 24th and 25th Infantry who had service records of from 10 to 30 years, many of whom were commissioned officers. Most of the complaints now come from high ranking non commissioned officers who have had from 10 to 20 years service in the regular army.

We cite this history to acquaint the reader with our intimate knowledge of this rather startling revelation.

From experience, we find that all of this complaint is not leveled at the Negro officer as such; it is leveled at all officers who are not products of West Point. Brigadier General Davis is not a West Point man. The regular army is ruled by West Point men and any officer who comes up from the ranks does not fare so well and that sentiment is passed on to the enlisted men.

Then, too, our regular army is opposed to Negro officers. That opposition is based upon the fact that the rank places the Negro on the same plane with white men; it gives him too much pay; it tends to establish social equality; the jobs are too good for Negroes. Then, too, the army is pretty well dominated by southerners and they never lose a chance to help push the Negro down.

Generally speaking the army does not get a very highly educated enlisted personnel in peace time. Jealous officers know that. In the Negro regiments, many officers carry on a campaign against Negro officers and because of their position, influence Negro soldiers against Negro officers. It is the so called Uncle Tom Negro who from plantation days thrived on dissention among the group and does their bidding.. We found it in 1917 and 1918. The dirty work has not ceased.

This opposition to Negro officers by some white people is bad enough; it is far worse when it comes from the Negro race. However, we shall continue to have traitors among us, so it remains for those who know what is fair and what can be done successfully to insist that the decisions on questions of policy for the Negro group be based on the testimony of his friends rather than his enemies. And the Bystander knows that they are few and far between in the official staffs of our standing army.

Davis Heads 9th and 10th Regiments

JAN 18 1941

WASHINGTON

The War Department announced January 13 the assignment of Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis of Washington, D.C., to the 4th Cavalry Brigade at Fort Riley, Kansas.

His brigade will be composed of the 9th and 10th Regiments of Cavalry. He is at present on duty with the National Guard in New York City.

General Davis in 1938 became instructor and commanding officer of the 369th Infantry, which was converted recently into the 369th Coast Artillery, an antiaircraft regiment of the New York National Guard.

So far as is known no colored officers have been detailed to serve with him.

The department also directed the transfer of seven white army captains, six white first lieutenants and three white second lieutenants to the 9th and 10th Cavalry to serve under General Davis.

Four white lieutenant colonels were ordered to the newly organized 368th Infantry of colored troops at Fort Huachuca, Arizona

Two white lieutenant colonels and two white captains were directed to join the 367th Colored Regiment at Camp Claiborne, Louisiana.

Army Calls 56 Reserve Officers

BALTIMORE — Fifty-six members of the officers' reserve corps will be called to report for active duty with the 366th Infantry stationed at Camp Devens, Mass., on February 15, Col. Theodore Arter, of the Third Corps Area announced Friday.

Included in the list will be 1 colonel, 2 lieutenant colonels, 3 majors, 9 captains, 25 first lieutenants, and 18 second lieutenants, it was learned. Among the group, and probably rated as first lieutenants, will be a medical and a dental officer.

In order that all of the new regiments may be officered by colored men, some provision must be made for the establishment of an officer training camp, similar to the ones established during the World War and in the present instance by the marine corps.

All told, there are only about 353 reserve officers, it is said, and two or three regiments would eat this number up — especially when the men eliminated by virtue of physical defects, etc., are taken into consideration.

This means the assigning of white officers to most of the new regiments, which will include artillery, anti-aircraft regiments, and others in which colored officers have had little if any experience.

However, a clause in the Selective Service Training Act provides for this so that after nine months' of service in the army, a draftee may take the remainder of his three months' service training for the job of being an officer.

Only Two ROTC Colleges

This lack of reserve officers is due to the lack of ROTC camps in the colored colleges. There are only two in the country which give senior training leading to a commission. They are at Howard University and at Wilberforce.

The others, which have student cadet corps, have only junior courses and do not give their graduates commissions. Hampton, West Virginia State and other institutions made efforts to get full qualified courses, but were refused.

OPEN PROBE INTO CAUSE OF MYSTERY FIRE

Col. Hooper Hits Rumor Of Sabotage; Blames Defective Boiler

FEB 1 — 1941

OSWEGO, N. Y.—Fourteen soldiers of Harlem's 369th anti-aircraft regiment were burned or injured Sunday, Jan. 26, when fire reduced the supplying wing of the administration building at Fort Ontario to smoking ruins. Early Tuesday the loss had not been determined.

Rumors that the fire was the work of saboteurs was given some credence when the government placed guards around the ruins pending investigation. Colonel Chauncey Hooper, regimental commander, discounted the rumors and stated that investigation would show the fire was caused by a boiler explosion.

Colonel Hooper said all the supply and payroll records were lost, along with considerable rifle and small arm ammunition.

The men were injured attempting to save the records and a new set of colors. Most seriously injured was Private Benjamin Franklin who suffered internal injuries and burns about the face. Among those suffering second degree burns and minor injuries are Privates Charles Jones, Robert Burke; William Price, Labert Alnoca, William Green, Harry Sutton, Harold James, William Beckham, Joseph Thompson, John Clenn, William Eubank, Henry Williams and Sgt. Nevil Martin. No one was injured by the exploding ammunition.

An east wind and a bucket brigade formed by the soldiers saved the new $500,000 65-building cantonment completed at the fort just last week.

This is the second time in the history of Fort Ontario that Race troops have trained here. Twenty-nine years ago another unit was stationed here.

The strength of the present troops is 1,350 enlisted men, to which will be added 1,800 men in the near future. At present there are 55 officers.

A Deplorable Omission

A gigantic parade was held in Atlanta Tuesday, marking the twenty-third anniversary of the signing of the Armistice. It was a parade that combined veterans of past wars, young men who are being trained now to defend the country, and young high school boys, who no doubt, will be soldiers of the future.

NOV 1 2 1941

Thousands of Negro citizens lined the streets to watch the spectacle and after staring for more than an hour at marching men, left sorely disappointed. Judging from the representation they received in Atlanta's 1941 Armistice parade not a single black man has served his nation, none are now enlisted in the army, and there are no young Negroes worthy of recognition as a part of America's armed forces.

Negroes know that this is not true. Records show that numerically Georgia Negroes led all other states in freely sacrificing their blood for the cause of democracy back in those turbulent days almost a quarter of a century ago. Yet not a single black veteran in a community where thousands reside was invited to participate in this exercise commemorating the establishment of a peace that Europe has not kept.

Regiments coming all the way from Fort McClellan at Anniston, Ala., made an impressive showing in the parade. They came at the invitation of those who made plans for the celebration. Two of the largest Negro units in the United States Army are stationed at Fort Benning, a post almost equally distant from Atlanta, were completely overlooked.

This failure to remember that Negroes, who compose virtually one-third of Atlanta's population, too are American, that they are called upon to make the same sacrifices that all other Americans are making in the present crisis, is certainly not conducive to the national unity so urgently desired by the President.

NOV 1 2 1941

Significant was the address made by DeLacy Allen, of Albany, national vice commander of the American Legion, an organization which bars Negro veterans in Georgia. Speaking at the City Auditorium following the parade, Mr. Allen said: "We must pray for the spiritual unification of our nation that our high resolve aid our morale be maintained through the dark days to come that we may emerge from the abyss of this world conflict of arms and ideology truly victors over self and selfishness as well as in arms."

Even if Atlanta's white patriotic organizations forgea, Mr. Allen no doubt knows that there is no unification when one-third of the population segment is excluded on those occasions when a display of unity should be the keynote.

An "all-out" effort toward national unity will be necessary if America is to emerge victorious. The Armistice Day parade as held in Atlanta is certainly not a step in this direction.

Negroes Pledge Lives to Crush Hitler

OCT 29 1941

Total Action Now, Is Program of Washington Parley

OCT 29 1941

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. — Four hundred delegates of Washington Negro groups at a conference on Sunday pledged their whole-hearted support to President Roosevelt and urged "that every possible aid should be extended to every nation that is fighting Hitlerism."

Stating that "the Hitler menace is of vital concern to the Negro people," the program of action adopted by the conference called for repeal of the Neutrality Act, all-out to Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China and the people of Ethiopia, and "all other steps that may be necessary to guarantee the defeat of Hitler—NOW!"

Eighty-four organizations, representing the majority of the Negro population of Washington, were present at the conference. Churches, schools, labor unions, veterans' groups and clubs were among the organizations which sent delegates.

Rev. William H. Jernagin, pastor of the Mount Carmel Baptist Church, presided over the meeting which was addressed by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Dr. F. J. Anderson of Howard University, Mrs. Thelma Williams of the Civic Associations and other speakers.

Mrs. Bethune, who is an official of the National Youth Administration, told the delegates that the fight against Hitlerism is a fight to the finish and that "for the Negro, it must be 'all out' or it's 'all over.'"

"An America under direct Hitler dominance would mean our return to slavery, would mean the loss of what gains we have made, would mean closing tightly shut the now partly open doors that lead into the lighted halls of freedom and opportunity."

OCT 29 1941

FLAYS FASCISTS HERE

Pointing to the discrimination against Negroes in the armed forces and in defense jobs, Mrs. Bethune stated that "we must defeat Hitler—yes—and defeat the forces of fascism in this country that would shackle us to the past, deny us opportunity, stifle our progress, and create disunity."

"We must give our voices, our strength, our skills, yes even our lives to defend the national independence and sovereignty of the U. S. against Hitler and his lust for world conquest, not so much for what America is, but for what America can be."

A continuations committee made up of representatives of 25 organizations was set up by the conference with the task of calling a mass meeting within the next two weeks to mobilize the entire Negro population of Washington in the fight against Hitlerism.

OCT 29 1941

STOP TOKIO, SAYS PROGRAM

The program of action adopted by the delegates stated firmly that "Japanese aggression must be stopped in the Pacific," and that "the total resources of our nation be thrown immediately into action against the Hitler menace."

GOOD SHEPHERD CENTER TO HAVE SOLDIERS REST

NOV 2 1941

Soldiers on leave will find a place of welcome on the South Side when the New Defense Center opens at Good Shepherd Community Center, 5120 South Parkway, around Thanksgiving. Revelation that plans are underway to open such an establishment in the vicinity came from Mrs. Mildred Davis, well known recreational leader, who has been appointed director.

Sponsored by the South Central Defense Committee, the Center will receive the support of the United Service Organization and the Work Projects Administration Labor for rehabilitation of the building which will house the center will be supplied by the United Service Organization while the Work Projects Administration will supervise the program, Mrs. Davis stated.

Eighteen spacious rooms in a three-floor building have been provided by Good Shepherd Community Center. Some attractive features planned are reception rooms, lounges, library, arts and crafts studio and showers. Provision will be made also to serve refreshments but large dancing parties will be held in Good Shepherd Community Center's spacious social room.

"All social, civic, business and religious groups; public and private agencies are requested to cooperate in making the new Defense Center a success," Mrs. Davis said.

Inspiring Loyalty

The action of the Morris L. Slaughter Post of the American Legion of this city in voting unanimously to give 100 per cent. support to the Nation's war effort was not surprising, but it came as a striking demonstration of the patriotic loyalty of our Negro Americans generally.

The spirit manifested by the Winston-Salem Negro Legionnaires is typical of that which animated the faithful colored men and women of the South during the War Between the States. It reveals that our country is united, not only in the geographical sense, but in the common patriotism and loyalty of its racial groups.

Especially fine has been the spirit of loyalty, community patriotism and inter-racial co-operation in Winston-Salem during the past several years. Both the races here have come to appreciate the fact that in the larger fundamental sense we are one people who have a common purpose and a common destiny.

Today all of us are enlisted for the duration in a fight to protect our country from insidious and deadly enemies from without and thereby preserve our right and opportunity to continue our efforts to advance social justice and equality of opportunity within our borders.

In this fight we can count upon the intelligence, patriotism and co-operative spirit of our fine Negro American citizens. They have been tried and tested before and have not been found wanting. They will meet every demand of patriotism in this, America's most trying hour.

Unite to Crush Hitler--Or Be Lost, Negro Youth Told

By Ben Davis, Jr.
(Special to the Sunday Worker)

NOV 16 1941

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—In an evening of eloquent and brilliant addresses urging all-out unity of the Negro people to crush Hitler and Hitlerism the National Conference of Negro Youth opened its three-day sessions here last night.

The meeting taking place in the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R. St., N. W., was one of the most enthusiastic ever held in the city. Fully 2,000 people crowded into the balcony and main floor of the church's huge auditorium. Before the session began there was standing room only and hundreds of youth milled about the church outside hoping to get in.

The main speech of the evening was delivered by the Hon. Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago Negro leader and a member of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practice Committee now engaged in an Administration campaign against job discrimination against Negro and other minorities in defense industries.

The surprise guest speaker of the evening was the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, Jr., pastor of the Harlem Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem and recently the first Negro ever to be elected to the City Council in New York. Rev. Powell, who delivered a brief address, in which he brought greetings from the Negro people in Harlem, was given a rousing ovation.

The conference, the first of its kind to be held in the last years, was welcomed by Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, of the Washington National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, by the Rev. Haskins, by Miss Dorothy Height of the Phyllis Wheatley branch of the Y. W. C. A., and by Ray Dundee, of the Howard University Student Body and by other prominent local figures. Participation at the conference was of broad character.

Delivering the keynote address of the Conference, Miss An Daniels of the NAACP student chapter at Fisk University of Nashville, Tenn., started the evening's wave of applause when she declared:

MUST DESTROY HITLER

"Without the military destruction of Hitler, there can't be any further progress by my people or any other people anywhere in the world."

Applause again interrupted when she complimented the "courageous youth of the Soviet Union and the winged fighters of Britain" who are dying that America might live as a nation. "American youth must answer their call," Miss Daniels said, "for there is only one issue today, the defeat of Hitler. Negro youth are taking their stand today for the destruction of Hitlerism because they want to wipe it out from America, and prevent Hitler and his friends in America from returning us to a worse slavery than that we have already endured."

Several times Mr. Dickerson drew cheers from the audience. "Negro youth must insist on taking their places beside their fellow youth in the face of the national crisis confronting America."

ASSAILS LINDBERGH

"There can be no compromise with Hitlerism," he asserted, "Either Hitlerism is defeated or we perish." Mr. Dickerson attacked the Lindbergh appeasers, and race haters who would threaten the unity of the country by lynching and jim-crowism and he pledged the Fair Employment Practices Committee to do everything within its power to help eliminate the barriers against Negro workers in defense industries.

One of the highlights of the evening came when he pointed out that white youth in the country is beginning to realize its common cause with Negro youth in the fight against Hitlerism. To deafening cheers and applause he commended the white college students in the South who have protested the Ku Kluxism of Gov. Talmadge.

"Just as in our war against Hitler abroad, the white youth are realizing that the fight for the equal rights of the Negro in America is their cause."

Mr. Dickerson warned the nation against the lessons of France where the appeasers won out and permitted the great French people to be saddled with the Hitler yoke. He urged full support of the President's foreign policy. To the Negro people he declared such a splendid meeting as this could not be held in Hitler Germany.

Nazism, he continued, is a threat to the very existence of the most conservative Negro leaders and organizations and makes it necessary for all sections of the Negro people to unite against it.

The sole discordant note introduced into the session was by Lester B. Granger, assistant national Secretary of the National Urban League. Attempting to sever the unity of the youth delegates and of the Negroes, he indulged in red-baiting and tried to throw a damper on the whole conference and its anti-Hitler cause. He met a cool reception from the audience which, later on, applauded vigorously the replies which various speakers made to Granger's attempt at demoralization of the conference.

Rev. Powell, receiving tremendous applause, pointed out that the Negro people were "ninety eight per cent working class" and their interests lay with the rest of the workers against Hitler to build a better world.

NOV 16 1941

Delegates came to the conference from as far west as California and as far South as Alabama. A cultural feast was provided by the 50-voice A-Capella choir of students led by Prof. J. Harold Montague of Virginia State College. Sessions will be held tomorrow, the conference closing on Sunday with the election of officers for a permanent organization in line with its official call for a nation-wide anti-Hitler movement among the Negro people.

Negro 'Stop Hitler' Group Launches Drive

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The growing Negro Stop-Hitler movement was well on its way to its goal of becoming a "virile, active force in the nation" today after a rally of more than 1,500 persons here at DuSable High School heard nationally-prominent speakers join in outlining a battle plan against Hitlerism.

Sponsored by the National Negro Stop-Hitler Committee, the meeting was an impressive demonstration of the determination of the Negro people to attain two aims, as stated by the leading speaker Judge William Hastie, civilian aide to War Secretary Stimson.

Hastie declared: "We have two jobs: winning full citizenship for the Negro at home and fighting off the dangers of Hitlerism from abroad. We can and will do both jobs and do them well."

NOV 13 1941

SMASH HITLER THEME

Chairman Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago Alderman and member of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Committee, stressed that the purposes of the Stop-Hitler Committee was to "go into every home of Negro people in the nation to show what Hitlerism means.

Dickerson pleaded for genuine national unity giving the Negro full rights of democracy in the battle against Nazism.

Grand Exalted Ruler of the Colored Elks, J. Finley Wilson, moved the audience when he sharply declared: "I hate Hitler because he hates me. I believe in reciprocity. We can't stop Hitler unless we close ranks and we've got to do it now.

"This is your battle," he told the applauding crowd. "We have got to win this battle or black people are lost."

NOV 13 1941

Bishop James Bray, president of the Interdenominational Council of Chicago Negro Churches, spoke despite illness and urged Negroes to join in saving "America as it ought to be."

"Hitler will never come back from Russia," declared the prominent churchman. "Hitler's day is done."

The Bishop condemned the political bosses of the south but said: "I'd be willing to fight at the side of the Bilbos and Cottonhead Smiths against Hitler, but as soon as it's over I'd tell them we got a lot to settle between us."

Harlem Center for Service Men Is First One in City's Negro Community

By Eugene Gordon

Soldiers and sailors in town on leave now have a house of their own in the uptown area. It is at 2348 Seventh Ave., has a stucco finish and is five stories high. The famous Vincent Sanitorium once occupied the structure; so, renovated and newly decorated, it is better than most buildings of that neighborhood. It is now the kind of clubhouse a soldier or sailor—especially a Negro soldier or sailor, because he seldom has such things—dreams about when away from home.

It was opened, with ceremonies on Saturday. Mayor LaGuardia was among notables invited. They included also Mrs. Franklin D. Rocsevelt and heavyweight champion Joe Louis.

DEC 1 - 1941

The Harlem Center for Men in Active Service is open to all our boys but is intended specifically to take care of Negro soldiers and sailors. Such young Americans, although dressed in uniforms which indicate the wearers' readiness to fight to the death against Hitler and Hitlerism, are discouraged from dropping in freely on any of the clubs or centers maintained downtown allegedly for all men in the U.S. fighting forces. These Negro soldiers and sailors, until now, have had to depend on the already overtaxed Harlem YMCA.

"But, get this," said Samuel A. Allen, yesterday. "We welcome all soldiers and sailors in active service, no matter what their race, nationality or color."

Mr. Allen is chairman of the Harlem Committee of the New York City Defense Recreation Committee.

DEC 1 - 1941

The Negro people as a whole are serious about this matter of defeating fascism. They want it defeated both on the battlefield—and they are preparing for that—and in the social structure of their country. Although they see everywhere examples of Negro discrimination, they, as genuine lovers of democracy, will discriminate against nobody who is in this war against Hitler.

American Legion Auxiliary Met Friday Afternoon.

The American Legion Auxiliary met with Mrs. H. C. Jennings, Friday afternoon, February 7th. Assistant hostesses were Mrs. Frank Beard, Mrs. L. H. White, Mrs. A. K. Weldon, Mrs. Gary Woodham, Mrs. W. M. Turbeville, and Mrs. J. K. Heriot. The president, Mrs. T. M. Cathcart, presided.

The salute to the flag was led by the Americanism Chairman, Mrs. L. F. Montgomery. The Preamble was repeated, followed by the singing of the "National Anthem," and prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. J. T. Littlejohn. Mrs. L. F. Montgomery, Jr., was program leader. The subject was "National Defense." Mrs. Montgomery introduced Rev. J. T. Littlejohn who gave many practical and helpful suggestions on National Defense. Mrs. Montgomery read an interesting article, "Woman's Place In National Defense." The President's Bulletin and treasurer's report were read by the secretary. The Historian, Miss Gertrude Woodham, asked the cooperation of the unit in filling out record blanks. She stated that only two volumes had been completed. The Americanism Chairman stressed the study of the Constitution and stated that the leaflet on the flag had been placed in all of the white schools of the county and that a sufficient number were on hand for all of the negro schools. Mrs. Griffin explained the special reading program, which the unit is sponsoring. It was decided to ask the cooperation of the other patriotic organizations in planning a tea.

The Membership Chairman, Mrs. H. C. Jennings, stated that we lack one of reading our quota. The Community Service Chairman, Mrs. D. L. Reames, read letter from Housekeepers Aid, thanking the unit for the $5 donation. The Rehabilitation Chairman, Mrs. John Rhame, reminded each one to make locker covers. It was decided to order "The National News" for the Junior Leader. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

Probate Judge Charles Pace Is Legion Auxiliary Speaker

Speaking on "National Defense" Probate Judge Charles M. Pace yesterday afternoon told the American Legion auxiliary that training for defense starts with the youth of the country.

Mrs. LaMotte Shores, president, was in charge of the meeting which opened with advancing of flags by Mrs. Joe Calus and Mrs. W. W. Holland. Thirty seconds of silence was observed in honor of the war dead while "Taps" was played. The meeting was held at the Legion home.

A musical program was presented by a double quartet from Wofford college, with Bernard Cannon as student director. The program was: "Grant Us to Do With Zeal", "Song of the Marines", "Two Negro Spirituals", "The Creation".

During a business meeting the treasurer's report was read. A total of $55 has been paid this month to cover half of the costs for blinds at the tuberculosis sanitarium. The hospital board is also paying half.

Mrs. Dudley Cudd, community service chairman, reported on many activities of her group. Mrs. Cudd will represent the auxiliary in city-wide conference to arrange for entertainment for Camp Croft soldiers.

Mrs. Joe Calus, rehabilitation chairman, reported assistance given soldiers in veterans' hospitals.

Mrs. John Kirby reported a number of children assisted by the child welfare group.

A new high in membership was reported. Mrs. C. L. Crow announced that the membership totals 492 members.

Mrs. R. T. Thomason announced a dinner to be served by her committee on Friday night for the Forty and Eight and their wives.

A birthday party for the Legion will be given about March 15.

Further plans were made for the tea to be given for army officers' wives around March 1. Mrs. Joe Calus is chairman.

A social hour was enjoyed after the meeting. Hostesses were: Mrs. T. W. Woodworth, Mrs. T. G. Wright, Mrs. H. Trimmier and Mrs. Paul Tysinger.

Legion Post for Negroes

When a recent call was made for ex-service men to register for active duty in the Home Defense Corps 122 Macon Negroes came forward. MAR 9 - 1941

Without organization of any kind, these Negroes volunteered in greater numbers than their white friends.

This good work, this practical expression of a patriotism which was never doubted, was due, in large measure, to a colored minister, the Rev. J. C. Cunningham, and now he is following up with a movement to organize a Negro post of the American Legion in Macon.

The Legion itself is so thoroughly identified with every patriotic service that it is not surprising to find its members lending cordial aid to this effort.

Charles L. Lanier, vice president of the Americanism committee of the Georgia department of the American Legion, who has given so abundantly of his time and energy towards this work, is actively assisted by two outstanding Macon veterans, John J. McCrary and Joel Bragg. Within a few days they will announce definite steps towards cooperating with the Rev. Cunningham in the organization of this Negro post of the Legion. MAR 9 - 1941

The Negro minister who has dedicated his efforts to this work is held in the highest esteem by all who know him. He was born here in middle Georgia. He was a top sergeant in the World War and made a gallant record in service overseas.

On his return to the United States he entered the ministry. He is a former pastor of Olivet church and has had important pastorates in Chicago and Savannah. He did good work as corresponding secretary of the National Baptist Benefit Board. MAR 9 - 1941

With the National Guard absorbed in the regular army we must build up our Home Defense Corps and coincident with it nothing could be finer than the organization of this unit of the American Legion for ex-service men among the colored citizens of Macon.

Wealthy Colored Woman To Finance $15,000 Building, the First of Its Kind In the Country—Soldiers Participate In Ground-breaking Ceremonies.

MAR 22 1941

By BILLY ROWE
(Staff Correspondent)

COLUMBUS, Ga., Mar. 20—Rich in history and tradition since it was established as a frontier trading station in the early days of the Georgia Colony, this city, situated on the banks of the Chattahoochee river, saw a different kind of history started last week when its population, white and colored, stood elbow to elbow and witnessed the ground-breaking ceremonies preliminary to erecting the first Army and Navy YMCA in America for Negro soldiers.

Brought about by the pressing demands of the great body of colored soldiers, now stationed and yet to come to Fort Benning, nine miles from this city, the present project is the direct result of the great efforts of E. E. Farley who for 15 years has served as executive secretary of a non-equipment Army and Navy 'Y' at Fort Benning. The only colored man in the employ of the Army and Navy Department of the National Council YMCA. Mr. Farley was aided in his efforts to secure a building by First Lieut. Louis J. Beasley, Chaplain of the 24th and its only colored commissioned officer.

BUILDING TO COST $15,000

The ground-breaking ceremonies was made impressive by more than 300 soldiers and the 24th Infantry band, several thousand white and colored spectators, high ranking military and city and county officials. Rev. T. W. Smith, leading colored minister, was handed the first spade by Col. James M. Locket, commanding officer of the 24th, and shoveled the first spade of dirt from the site that will house the building.

The building, estimated to cost more than $15,000, will be financed by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Lunsford, wealthy local colored business woman. It will be 70 by 70 feet and will contain offices, rest rooms, canteen, library, social rooms and adequate facilities for dances, games, religious, educational and recreational activities sorely needed by the 5,000 or more Negro soldiers to be stationed at Fort Benning.

Funds for its operation will be furnished by the Columbus Defense Service Committee and the Army and Navy Department of the YMCA. Money for the equipment of the building will be raised entirely by local colored people.

The Columbus Defense Service Committee is headed by Walter Richards, white civic leader. Its sub-committee on work with Negro troops is headed by Maynard R. Ashworth, publisher of the daily newspaper. The race committee working with them is chaired by Dr. T. H. Brewer, physician and civic worker. The manner in which white and colored are enthusiastically working together in this undertaking in the deep south was given as an example by visiting Washington officials as a step towards racial co-operation and good-will that should claim the interest of the entire country. This is a type of work that the Defense Service Committees throughout the nation should adopt, it was stated.

The Colored Veterans of the World War are holding a second district conference in Ocala today. The conference opened at 11 a. m. at Howard Academy, with Rev. R. H. Lee, district vice-commander, presiding.

Ia was expected that during the day 250 delegates from twelve counties would be in session.

The morning session at Howard Academy was convened with the singing of "America," and an invocation by Rev. J. W. Burno. Prof. E. D. Smith of the Ocala school welcomed the visiting members of the veterans organization.

Addressed By Curtis

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the conference was addressed by Vice-Commander Carl Curtis of Marion County Post No. 27 of the American Legion, who reminded the colored veterans of their duties as Americans in the present national emergency.

Vice-Commander Curtis appealed to the colored veterans to be on guard at all times against propaganda spread by enemies of the United States among the negro people.

The veterans of the second district had a dinner at noon.

CLUB PROVIDED FOR COLORED VETERANS

Enlisted Men and CCC Also to Use Quarters.

The colored veteran organizations composed of the Corporal Brown Camp No. 11, Department of the Potomac, United Spanish War Veterans, the Vance Allison Port No. 2933, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and Colonel Young Post No. 1, Veterans of America, Inc., are now preparing a place to be used as a club for the members of the ex-service organizations and general headquarters for the colored enlisted men who will be stationed in this vicinity and also for the men of the Civillian Conservation Corps who spend their off duty time here.

The Club will be in the colored Masonic building, 517 West Gwininett street. The veterans have taken upon themselves quite an expensive task and will be grateful to any persons or organizations who are willing to donate or lend them any chairs, tables, writing desks and other equipment for use in the recreation rooms. A typewriter and desk are greatly needed.

Registration Of Veterans Begins Today

Registration of all veterans in Richland county will begin at 3 o'clock this afternoon and will continue through 6 o'clock.

The purpose of the registration is to assemble data on veterans to be used in the event of a national emergency and will also include facts as to where a veteran is best suited to serve. The registration will continue through tomorrow and into the early part of next week, according to Lane L. Bonner, chairman of the American Legion post No. 6, American Legion, which is sponsoring the registration in co-operation with national headquarters of the Legion. The registration applies to both white and Negro veterans. Registration in this case, it was explained, was not compulsory and was not connected with the selective service of the draft.

Veterans may register at the registration office, 1724 Main street; Knox's cafe, 1200 Lady street; the chamber of commerce, and the Jefferson, Columbia and Wade Hampton hotels. Registration will also be accepted at Wardlaw junior high school, Olympia high, Columbia and Dreher high as well as in 12 white county schools and all Negro county schools. Laurens A. Hamilton, state service officer, will accept registrations at his office, 307 Richland county courthouse.

Schools in Richland county will not be open Saturday, so those planning to register at the schoolhouses are requested to do so. Other registration places will be open today and tomorrow.

With the co-operation of the Gray Ladies, Mrs. A. G. Fleming, president, arrangements have been made to take the registrations of veterans at the Veterans' hospital here. These will be forwarded to their respective posts by Robert T. Fairey, state adjutant.

Special arrangements have also been made to take registrations of all veterans employed at Fort Jackson. The construction superintendent for the Jones Construction company, W. V. Appen, will distribute the blanks at the pay window on Saturday. The men may turn these in at any of the above named registration places.

Mr. Bonner said last night that he and his committee wished to express their appreciation for the co-operation of school officials and of members of the auxiliary and all other branches of the Legion.

In the event a veteran is not contacted and he wishes to register he may do so by calling 6423 and asking that a blank be sent to him.

Mayor Endorses Registration of Local Veterans

Woodworth Commends Legion's Interest in National Defense

Full endorsement of the American Legion nationwide plan to register all legionnaires and World war veterans generally on a Volunteer basis, for any possible future national defense service, was given today by Mayor T. W. Woodworth.

The local registration will be conducted by the Spartanburg post No. 28, of the American Legion. National Commander Milo J. Warner has issued a proclamation designating Saturday, February 22, the 209th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, as the official American Legion national defense registration day.

Commander Robert H. Lawrence of the local post already has started the machinery for the local registration into motion. He has announced the appointment of Dr. E. I. Johnson as chairman of a special national defense registration committee of the local post.

"Our nation, state and community always have looked upon the American Legion as their first line of defense. For more than 20 years the American Legion has been almost singlehanded the foremost champion of all patriotic endeavors, and has been rendering a high type of community service.

"It is inspiring to find the American Legion in this hour of national emergency, mobilizing all its assets for the good of the country. The American Legion constitutes a huge backlog of manpower, experience, training and devotion in our national defense.

"To catalog these qualities so that they may be readily available to our government authorities in preparing our nation for total defense, is not only a wise and practical measure, but it is also another great demonstration of the American Legion's devotion to God and Country.

"It is my hope that all World war veterans in our community will register."

Veterans living in the city of Spartanburg will register at the Spartanburg high school, where legionnaires and assistants will be prepared to register all the white veterans. Negro veterans will register at the Carrier St. high school. Prof. C. C. Woodson, with assistants will register the negro veterans. Commander Weeks of the Pacolet post, announced the veterans of that community will register at the community house and legion headquarters. The commander of the Chesnee post, stated that all veterans of that community will register at the high school there. It is expected that the other county posts will do likewise.

Negro Veterans Register

Negro World war veterans and members of the Givens-Freeman-Davis Post 171, American Legion, are urged to register before Saturday at the headquarters, 309 East Ninth street, for home service in the national defense program.

Jesse Julius Barrom, post adjutant, said yesterday, that more than seventy-five veterans have been recorded, "so far," but asked that they not "wait until Saturday, the last day for such registration, when the office machinery will likely be swamped." Barrom also stated that the women's auxiliary of the post will be on duty to help in the matter of filling out applications, Saturday.

Sixty-eight various jobs and vocations are open to the ex-service men, and "whether employed or unemployed, there is need for registration as a part of the national program of the government and the American Legion," he asserted.

A movement is on foot to organize in Macon a Negro Post of the American Legion. Negroes as a race or individually never waver when the call of patriotism comes. They gave a fine account of themselves in the World War. They identify themselves with every patriotic service, and their loyalty is voluntary and practical. In a recent call in Macon for ex-service men to register for active duty in the home defense corps, negroes volunteered in greater numbers than did their white friends. With the National Guard now in the regular army attention must be fixed on an adequate and practical home defense corps.

Negro Legion Asks Equality In Air, Navy And Industries

F. J. Carnage Of Raleigh Elected Vice Commander Of Division B—Woman's Auxiliary Takes Intense Interest In Welfare Programs

Division B of the North Carolina American Legion, concluding its 24th annual convention yesterday, elected the following officers: F. J. Carnage of Raleigh, vice commander; Charles G. Irving of Raleigh, adjutant; and H. L. Middleton of Faison, chaplain.

The Negro division passed resolutions endorsing the national defense program and the proposal to raise a fund to send an ambulance plane to Great Britain as a gift of the State of North Carolina.

Other resolutions asked for elimination of discrimination against Negroes in aeronautics and naval fields and in defense industries.

The Women's Auxiliary of this division also had a large representation from all parts of the State, and manifested a great deal of interest in the child welfare program, aid to veterans in various hospitals and aid to the families of veterans.

Among the reports was on relative to the denial of hospitalization to Negroes at the Veterans Hospital at Fayetteville. A final report on this matter will be made at a Post Officers Conference to be held later after further study can be made.

The principal speaker of the session was W. W. McGee of Winston-Salem.

The resolutions passed were as follows:

1. We heartily endorse the program on child welfare, national defence and civilian defense organizations.

2. Be it further resolved that more attention be paid to the employment of persons in the various types of industry upon which our national defense programs depend for full speed ahead, so as to curtail possible sabotage; and that the Negro, as a loyal 100 per cent American be given an opportunity to prepare himself to fit into the situations in the field of skilled labor, and highly technical positions.

3. Be it further resolved that discrimination in aeronautics, naval and other highly technical fields because of color, be eliminated from all national defense projects.

4. Be it resolved that the Negro women who have been working beside the men in Division B be duly chartered and officially recognized as an auxiliary to Division B, American Legion, State of North Carolina.

5. Be it also resolved that the sons and daughters of disabled Negro veterans and deceased comrades be given due consideration in the administration of the scholarship fund, and that Division B be given committees where the good of the Legion proper is effected. Further, that the experiment in the boys' world be extended to Division B youths, and that every effort be made to prepare Negro youths to take their places in the new order of American Democracy.

6. That Division B unanimously endorsed the recommendation coming from the Honorable J. Melville Broughton, Governor, through W. R. Johnson, consultant on Negro affairs, Department of Public Welfare, to cooperate in the effort to purchase an ambulance plane to be given to Great Britain by the State of North Carolina. And that the Department B pledges its full cooperation in the program of the President of the United States of America in aid to fight for democracy.

Erection Of 23 USO Units Is Approved

Buildings To Be Located Mainly in South

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Approval for the erection of 24 units designed to meet the needs of colored troops to be manned by the USO has been announced by the Federal Administrator John W. Carmody, through his assistant, William A. Trent.

Mr. Trent says there will be 13 recreational centers; eight schools and additions to schools and two hospitals, one of the latter being an addition to an institution already functioning.

Constructed at a cost of nearly $2,000,000, these will be located mainly in the south, although one is assigned for Battle Creek, Mich., and another for a spot in New Jersey.

They are being built in cities adjacent to military establishments for soldiers' use and to be operated by the newly appointed staff of the USO. Money raised by the USO is not to be used for this construction, but is for the purpose of running the institutions.

A combination of circumstances seemingly complicated enters into the construction of these units; all recreation centers are to be built by the division of defense public works, FWA; to be leased to the United Service organizations for operation; must be approved by Federal Security agency prior to an allotment of funds (this outfit being under Mark A. McCloskey); and must be also approved by the war department.

Hospitals must be approved by the public health service, which is a department of the Federal Security agency; and schools erected for the use of the soldiers must be

Legion Selects New Orleans for 1942; May Split

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (ANP) — The designation of New Orleans as the site of the 1942 American Legion Convention has caused dissatisfaction among colored members that may lead to a split in the organization's ranks next year.

According to expressions voiced here near the close of the convention last week, letters of imprecation are to be sent to the newly-elected national commander, Lynn U. Stambaugh of Fargo, N.D., demanding that the Louisiana committee on arrangements assure colored delegates they will receive every courtesy.

The letters will also ask that the color line be broken to permit all legionnaires to sit with their State delegations and that every precaution be taken to safeguard the lives of colored delegates attending the meet.

No Posts in Louisiana

Louisiana has no colored posts and the State commander has repeatedly refused to grant charters for their formation; hence, there will be no host organization to assure colored delegates the usual round of entertainment.

It has been rumored that in the event the national commander refuses to grant the requests of the colored membership, veterans who have already threatened to sever relationship with the legion because they fear the discriminatory policies of the southern posts will hold a grand reunion in Atlantic City, N.J., opening on the same day as the New Orleans convention.

Speaker Attacks Prejudices

In addressing 3,000 legionnaires of both races at Borchet Field here during the recent convention, Euclid L. Taylor, president of the National Bar Association, flayed the prejudices of the southern white man and likened him unto Hitler. He asked why the color bar should not be broken for the good of all concerned.

The Congress For Democracy in South Carolina Organized

OCT 4 1941

The Congress for Democrary in South Carolina, a voluntary defense organization recently set up in this state, has issued through its executive committee an official statement of purpose and plan of organization and operation. The purpose of the Congress for Democracy in South Carolina is:

1—To bring about unity of all our people in support of the National and Home Defense program.

2. To unite the people of this state in a concerted effort to strengthen democracy wherever it may be functioning unsatisfactorily.

OCT 4 1941

3. To improve economic conditions in this sate by increasing the state's income.

4. To develop a greater spirit of self reliance and initiative.

5. To create a permanent program for the development and guidance of democracy.

The plan of action that has been officially adopted by the executive committee is as follows:

1. The Congress will be composed of representatives of all institutions, clubs, organizations in the state willing to cooperate.

2. The Congress will maintain committees in all the fields of interest and activity in our state, such as agriculture, education, health, labor, etc.

3. These committees will undertake to obtain factual evidence, ascertain needs, and with facts and needs in mind, attempt to The chairmen of these special work committees, together with the officers of the Congress, make up the executive committee as fol lows:

General Chairman, Maxie C. Collins, Batesburg; Vice-Chairman, Mrs. James C. Derieux, Columbia. 2nd Vice-Chairman, Mrs. John Morral, Beaufort; Secretary W. H. Ward, Columbia; Treasurer C. E Strange, Spartanburg.

Committee Chairmen

Plans are under way to prepare a program to be held in Columbia within the next few months, to which every church, club, institution, and organization in the state interested in the promotion of Democratic ideals will be invited to send a representative. Mr evolve a program of action to meet the needs in the field under consideration.

4. The facts needs and proposed program of action will be submitted to the people of the state through the various clubs institutions, and organizations cooperating with the Congress, and such other means as may be found to be practical.

5. The Congress is non-political and nonpartisan.

6. The Congress is interested in helping make this a better state, and will endeavor to bring about better conditions for all the people of the state so that each individual may be aided in becoming the best citizen he is capable of being.

The Congress has already set up seventeen committees in various fields of interest, the membership of which totals more than two hundred men and women who because of training, position and influence are especially fitted for work with the committees to which they have been assigned. Collins stated that while the executive committee was not ready to announce a definite program, that efforts are being made to secure several speakers of national interest. Definite announcement will be made regarding the program within a few weeks.

The Executive committee has emphasized that the Congress is not intended to duplicate the efforts of already functioning organizations, nor to replace them, but rather to afford a statewide opportunity for all organizations to cooperate for the welfare of the state.

'Stop Hitler Rally' Set For October 12

CHICAGO—(ANP)—Opening of a vast national campaign to mobilize America's Negroes into the signaled at a big Negro Stop Hitler rally at the DuSable High School Sunday afternoon, Oct. 12.

Leading southside community leaders joined in the National Negro Stop-Hitler committee have summoned the meeting, which will be addressed by nationally-known speakers. Iivitations to speak have already been accepted by J. Finley Wilson, Elk ruler, and Belford V. Lawson, president of the New Negro alliance with offices in Washington.

OCT 6 1941

Integration of the Negro people into President Roosevelt's national unity effort will be the key theme of the rally. Churches, unions and neighborhood groups are active in the committee, which was initiated by Ald. Earl B. Dickerson, a member of President Roosevelt's Committee on Fair Employment, and other distinguished local notables.

YOUTH TAKE PART

Negro youth will participate in the Stop-Hitler meeting by burning an effigy of Hitler at 35th street and South Parkway near the grave of a Negro soldier killed in World War 1. After hearing a talk by Willa B. Brown, noted aviatrix, the assembled crowd will march to the DuSable High school meeting.

In calling for a big trunout by the South Side, Ald. Dickerson, who was elected chairman of the committee, declared. "Lindbergh's recent speech attacking racial minority brings home to Negroes the danger of the appeasement doctrine.

Army Men Not Getting Fair Part of Centers

By ALVIN E. WHITE
(for ANP)

NOV 1 1941

WASHINGTON

Colored soldiers are not sharing in the erection of recreation centers to the full extent and according to the interpretation of Public Law 137, under which these centers are being constructed.

The law clearly states that "need shall be the determining factor in erection of these facilities." To date, some thirty-one recreation centers have been approved by the President for colored.

"Not Halg Enough"

Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employees, has stated that this number is "not half enough." He points out that at Jacksonville, Fla., forty miles from Camp Blanding where 4,000 colored troops are stationed, the need for additional facilities is urgent.

This town, he states, has two projects for whites, one costing $80,000 and another $45,000. At Starke, Fla., twelve miles from Camp Blanding, there are facilities for whites costing $80,000 while there are none for colored.

Out of 16 Million Dollars

The total appropriated thus far for colored centers amounts to $1,325,905 out of $16,000,000 earmarked for recreation centers in the $150,000,000 appropriated for this work.

The thirty-one buildings approved by the President and their costs are to be erected as follows:

$34,000 Negro USO Clubhouse Approved by FDR

No Advice Given Concerning Fate of White Club Plans

While no statement had been made up to noon today concerning the barrier which was placed in the path of the construction of a frame United Service Organizations' service club on North Church street, due to the location of the structure in Spartanburg's fire district, an announcement by John M. Carmody, federal works administrator in Washington, revealed that President Roosevelt had approved the allotment of $34,000 for the erection of a negro USO clubhouse on Caulder avenue here.

Yesterday the president approved the appropriation of $93,720 for the white clubhouse as one of 42 defense recreation projects for which the federal government is paying $18,545,542.

The negro project was one of 79 defense public works projects to cost $8,283,319, which received presidential sanction.

Difficulty arose yesterday when government and USO officials came before Mayor Thompson with plans to put up the frame building. Regulations of the fire department prohibit the construction of large frame buildings in mid-Spartanburg and the mayor said that he could not approve the plans.

When first presented, the mayor pointed out, building plans called for construction of a brick, mortar and steel building on the North Church street site, which was in accordance with the policy covering the business area.

Federal works administration authorities in Atlanta were advised of the snag met by the building plans and were reviewing the situation yesterday and today. At the same time, it was learned, representatives of the government were to visit the South Carolina state fire underwriters for consideration of the frame building plans. Should the underwriters sanction the plans, the city will probably react favorably, the mayor said.

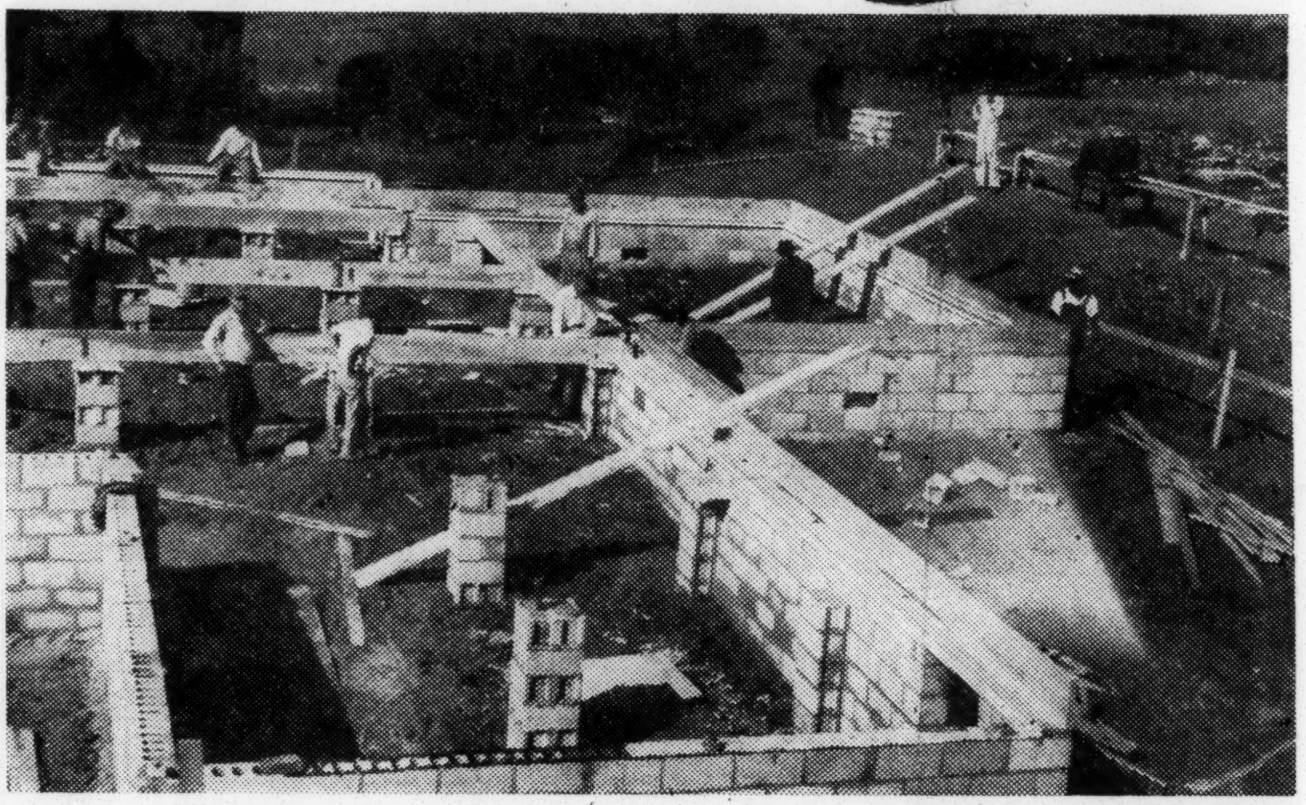
Foundation Laid for Negro USO Building



—Journal Photos by Irvin Cribb.

Work has been launched on the proposed negro United Service Organization building on the east side of South Liberty street near Caulder avenue by R. S. Cecil, general contractor. The recreation building, a one-story frame structure with asbestos shingle siding and composition roof, is being built at a cost of approximately $24,000. Floors will be of hardwood and asbestos tile construction. Heat will be provided by a hot air steam plant. The building will be ventilated. According to the general contractor, the structure will be ready for occupancy by Dec. 15. Fay Foster is superintendent of the crew of men constructing the recreation plant.

U. S. O. Appreciates Richburg's Help

The U. S. O. has the following to say about Richburg's splendid co-operation.

Richburg, although only a town numbering 200 people, has done more than its share in co-operating with the U. S. O. in providing for the recreation of our soldiers. Under the able leadership of Mr. W. B. Roddey, chairman of the local Defense Recreation Committee, two comfortable soldier's centers have been equipped with writing tables, drinking facilities, radio, ping pong tables, lounging chairs, games, etc. Not satisfied with these alone Richburg has taken steps to provide for full use of all its facilities. Last Sunday a band concert was held on the lawn with refreshments served afterward to 250 soldiers. With the assistance of Mr. George Hallowitz, U. S. O. Field Director, Richburg is actively planning the following for the soldiers, a concert by a local Negro choir, a dance to which girls from the surrounding community will be invited, a community sing and regular Sunday church services.

Last week 1,200 soldiers, 6 times the population of Richburg, attended the two centers.

Mr. Thomas Weiler, U. S. O. coordinator, has spoken to hundreds of the soldiers who have enjoyed Richburg's hospitality. Mr. Weiler reports that they are unanimous in praising the program and facilities provided by this small but willing town. Typical of Richburg's spirit is a plan whereby different women will take turns mending the socks and clothes of the boys at the center. Keep up the good work, Richburg!

GOV. NEELY WANTS NEGRO BATTALION IN WEST VIRGINIA

JAN 25 1941

New Governor Asks War Department to Organize Negro Battalion With Part of $18,000 Provided By State for that Purpose.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 23.—Immediate organization of West Virginia's first Negro battalion appeared almost certain today with favorable reaction of the new state administration, headed by Gov. M. M. Neely, and "full pressure" of prominent state Negroes, including T. G. Nutter, state N. A. A. C. P. president, and Dr. William Hall, president of the Charleston Business and Professional Association.

The War Department has been requested by Gov. Neely, former U. S. Senator, to authorize at once a battalion of Negro troops.

In a telegram to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Neely stated:

"The statute of the state of West Virginia authorizes the governor to organize a regiment of infantry composed of Negro troops, such regiment to be organized in accordance with the provisions of the United States army regulations governing same.

"I hereby respectfully request your authorization to organize one battalion of this regiment at once."

In 1935, West Virginia's legislature made provision for the colored unit and the 1937 and 1939 legislatures each set aside $18,000 from the adjutant general's funds for its formation and maintenance, "when and if a Negro unit is authorized by the War Department."

Delegation after delegation of Negro citizens have waited upon former Governors Homer A. Holt and Herman Guy Krump, urging the organization of the regiment, Mr. Nutter recalled.

"Both of the former governors, (Holt and Kump), seemed sympathetic but stated that they could not get the co-operation of the War Department," the N. A. A. C. P. official remarked. "Negro citizens of West Virginia have petitioned the War Department, also the President of the United States to make it possible for the provisions of the act governing the proposed battalion formation to organize the one battalion of this regiment at once."

Mr. Hall said there are 7,035 young Negro men eligible for the National Guard in West Virginia and the battalion would be a "patriotic incentive to all young Negroes as they themselves want the unit organization."

Hall added:

"The Negro is an American citizen and as such should participate in all defenses of his country. His loyalty to the U. S. is unquestionable as there are no Negro fifth columnists. The Negro is a valuable fighter, for he has proven this fact in all previous wars.

"The Negro needs training, which is offered to guardsmen and most of the thoughtful citizens think it would be a good thing for the state and nation."

Negroes of West Virginia have been insistent upon the direction that the governor organize and equip a regiment composed of Negro troops because "they are good American citizens and feel that there should be no discrimination in any arm of the government," Nutter said.

"Thousands upon thousands of them volunteered in the World War with the hope that America would be a better place in which to live," Nutter stated. "Negroes feel because of their service to the government in every hour of peril that they should receive the same treatment that other American citizens receive. If he can be drafted as he has been, then he sees no reason why he should not be a part of the National Guard of the nation. The legislature has appropriated funds for the organization of this regiment and the Negroes feel that great injustice has been done them in the failure to carry out the direct mandate to the governor to organize a regiment of Negro troops."

TEXAS BUSINESS MEN OPPOSE COLORED TROOPS

APR 26 1941

GALVESTON, Tex.—Colored troops will be moved from Camp Wallace on the complaint of "leading Galveston business men," it was revealed in headline stories of the Texas Informer news chain last week.

"The presence of colored soldiers being trained to defend 'Democracy' would create a difficult situation when the beach is crowded with white Texans and Oklahomans in the summer," is the asserted claim of the local business men. Reports indicate the troops will be moved in spite of militant opposition by Texas colored citizens.

MacDill Field Will Have Battalion of Negro Engineers

Announcement was made at MacDill field yesterday that a battalion of 630 negro engineers will be formed here about July 1. Work will start immediately on 15 buildings to accommodate the unit.

At the same time a Washington dispatch said authority had been granted for 19 buildings to cost $141,744 for the engineering unit.

The MacDill public relations office said details of the unit had not yet been received, but that it probably will be made up of men already in the army, who will be transferred to the new battalion.

It was said by one officer to be the first negro aviation battalion ever organized.

Maj. Reynolds J. Burt, constructing quartermaster, said he would start work soon on seven barracks buildings, two mess halls, two day rooms and two store rooms for the unit, and that construction should be completed by July 15. They will be built by WPA labor.

The war department authorized nine barracks buildings, three supply rooms, three day rooms, three mess halls, an administration building and utilities.

Major Burt said he would advertise for bids this month to construct five more buildings at the Orlando base at an estimated cost of $52,000. They will include a postoffice, warehouse, flight surgeon's unit, recreation building and officers' mess.

Soldiers Shot Protesting M.P.'s Use Of Word "N...r"

Wild Scene In Tampa, Fla. Attracts Crowd

TAMPA, Fla. — (ANP) — Because a soldier objected to being called "nigger" by a white M. P. (military policeman) two Negro selectees were shot and placed under arrest in a melee at the corner of Scott and Central Sts., Tuesday night as a crowd looked on.

When an English subject, here on a boat, called "don't fight among yourselves, fight the Germans and Italians" he was arrested but later released.

The soldier was sitting at a bar when the M. P. entered and ordered:

"Nigger, get up from there."

When he objected to the epithet, he was placed under arrest. Another soldier asked the M. P. not to strike the first soldier and he was likewise arrested.

As a crowd gathered, still other uniformed men came up and were told what had happened. One approached the M. P. and questioned him about the "nigger" statement.

Two policemen were standing by looking on. An argument developed between this uniformed man and the M. P., during which the soldier drew a knife. The M. P. reached for his gun and another M. P. came up. In the resultant tussle this soldier was shot.

Meantime another soldier leaped on the second M. P., seizing him around the throat. He also was shot, but ran through the crowd as far as the vicinity of Bethel Bapt. church where he collapsed. Back in the crowd the selectee with the knife was finally overpowered. The M. P.'s then held the crowd at bay with their guns as they removed their prisoners.

Historic 71-Year Old 24th Regiment To Get New Colors

FEB 14 1941

FORT BENNING, Ga.—(SNS)—More than 900 Selective Service men are swelling the ranks of the 24th Infantry Regular Army Regiment stationed at Fort Benning Ga., to build it from a peace to a war strength basis. It is expected to reach a strength of 2,500 in a short while. It is commanded by Colonel James M. Lockett, Infantry, who is the 40th in a historic line of commanders of the 71-year old Negro regiment.

For a number of years the 24th Infantry was a two-battalion peace strength regiment with less than 900 men. Now, filled with volunteers and selective service men, it is a three-battalion regiment, the newly activated Third Battalion being virtually a selective service battalion. Commanding this battalion is Lieutenant Colonel Hiram S. Fry.

TO PRESENT COLORS

Battalion colors and company standards will be presented to the battalion at formal ceremonies on the regimental parade at 3:00 P. M., next Friday, February 14th. Following the ceremony, there will be a regimental review.

The regiment, which has been at Fort Benning since 1922, occupies a unit of one of the large quadrangles of permanent barracks When the full strength of the regiment is reached, however, two thirds of its men must be quartered elsewhere, as the permanent barracks will be overcrowded. New cantonment type barracks are now under construction for two battalions.

To Pass In Formal Review Friday at Three

FEB 14 1941

The 24th has its own recreational facilities, consisting of a theater, a branch of the Past Exchange, a Community House, tennis courts, baseball field, gymnasium, and club for non-commissioned officers.

HAVE 60-PIECE BAND

A sixty piece band, one of the most famous in the army, has as its leader, Warrant Officer Robert B. Tresville, who studied under Frank and Walter Damrosch. The band includes also a drum and bugle corps of 24 additional pieces.

The regiment was organized November 1, 1869, and recently celebrated its 71st birthday. Thirty years of that time it served against hostile Indians.

Indian fighting ended when the regiment went to Cuba as a part of the first contingent sent there at the start of the Spanish-American War. Its action in the attack on San Juan Hill is said to have made possible the successful occupation of the Spanish position by the American forces.

Later, when yellow fever struck the army and medical attendants were unable to handle he large number of sick, about 500 men of the regiment volunteered for duty as nurses, cooks and attendants Only 24 of these escaped the sickness themselves. This was in the Yellow Fever camp at Siboney.

WENT TO PHILLIPINES

The regiment sailed for duty in the Phillippines in 1899, and participated there in more than thirty engagements. It returned to the United States in 1902. Another trip to the Phillippines was hade in 1906-1908, during which time it fought fourteen engagements.

It took part in Pershing's expedition into Mexico in 1916, after service on the Mexican border. In 1919 it suffered casualties in an engagement with Villistas at Juarez, across the river from El Paso Texas. In 1922, it came to its present home at Fort Benning.

Negro Church Strife Mediated By Judge

FEB 9 1941

With Circuit Judge E. M. Creel acting as mediator, troubles of the Trinity (Negro) Baptist Church apparently had been smoothed over Thursday to the satisfaction of both factions in the congregation.

The strife, mostly financial, among the brothers and sisters of the church at 526 Fourth Court, North, was brought before the court through an injunction petition filed by W. H. Perry, pastor, who came here in 1938 from La Grange, Ga.

On presentation of the petition, Judge Creel issued a temporary injunction writ against 36 members of the congregation, restraining them from interfering with the pastor, from withdrawing church funds from a downtown bank and from taking church records in the possession of John Hardy, church secretary. The pastor charged an attempt was being made to oust him without sufficient notice.

When a hearing on the injunction petition was called Wednesday, the pastor agreed to sever his connection with the church on payment of $250. He was permitted to remain in the church parsonage until next month.

No Negro Troops Will Be Shipped To Hawaiian Shores

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Protests from Hawaii against a reported plan by the War Department to send a colored labor battalion to the islands were answered Tuesday, May 6, when Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. Sadler, chief of the labor section of the War Department stated that there has been no announcement of plans to send troops to Hawaii.

Savannah Journal

The officer told the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that when the War Department finds it necessary to use labor battalions to accomplish work connected with training, administration and other army operations, the troops are used solely on army projects and would not be in competition with civilian labor.

Atlantans Make High Marks At Ft. Benning

MAR 20 1941

FORT BENNING, Ga.—Rufus Appleby of 450 Irwin St., graduate of Morris Brown College and Arthur P. Stokes, formerly Field Agent for the Atlanta Daily World were the only two Negroes to make first class out of 133 taking the Army Intelligence Test Friday at Fort Benning, Georgia. It has been reported that Appleby, a volunteer and Stokes, a draftee were among the very few who have ever received first class ratings at Fort Benning.

All Selective Service men are given an intelligence test at Fort Benning for the purpose of classification. The classes are listed as first, second and third. First class ratings are listed as superior intelligence. Those from Atlanta receiving second class ratings were Ernest Lindsey, 333 Pine St., Lawerence Godwin, 291 Harris St.; James Williams, 638 Pulliam St., and Theodore Russell, 388 Mitchell Street.

Fifty-five Selective Service Trainees made up the group who entrained from Atlanta on March 13. Nine of this group have been officially rejected to date.

Fort Benning is the induction station for the Fourth Corps Area. From this point hundreds of Negroes are distributed to various points all over the country. It is reported that the Atlanta draftees will be sent to Virginia or Fort Bragg, in N.C.

MAR 20 1941

Among the Atlanta inductees who have made creditable advancement at Fort Benning are: John Paul Jones, 865 Beckwith St., a graduate of Morehouse and chief clerk of the receiving station in the Reception Center at Fort Benning; Charles F. Ama, 228 Hilliard St., Asst. Clerk of the Checking Station of the Reception Center; Doris H. Conkle, 1047 Mayson-Turner Ave., Clerk in the Checking Station of the Reception Center.

All of these inductees volunteered for service in the Army February of thi. vear. They were advanced by Major Hunt to the position of Clerk.

Praise for Record Marks 77th CA Regiment's 1st Anniversary

By PVT. THOMAS E. WATSON
(Btry B, 77th CA, AA)

WINDY HILL, S.C. — "The future success of colored soldiers in anti-aircraft units is assured by the history-making record firing you performed recently in knocking the target from the sky." In those words Lieut. Col. Riley M. McGarraugh on August 10 complimented the 77th Coast Artillery Regiment, celebrating its first anniversary Organization Day on Atlantic Beach, S.C.

Conduct Praised

Lieutenant Colonel McGarraugh, commanding officer of the regiment, expressed his great pride in commanding such a fine group of soldiers, who have not only proved themselves capable of mastering the subject of anti-aircraft, but whose general conduct is beyond reproach."

Speaking of the progress of the 77th since its organization August 10, 1940, the commanding officer lauded the unit for its sustained progressive record in spite of several major handicaps encountered during the year.

Many Transferred

"Beginning with only three officers and 108 men," he said, "we tackled the difficult subject of anti-aircraft, the men having had no previous experience in this field.

"Later, we began training 425 selectees, only a small number of whom were to remain with us throughout the year. Many of them were assigned to other organizations at Rantoul, Ill., Fort Monroe, Va., and Camp Davis, N.C.

"The men with us on this first anniversary who are making such an exceptional showing have an average enlistment period of three months. This is evidence that willingness to do cannot be bought. With the prevailing spirit among us, we will be equal to any task."

Cautioning the officers and soldiers to maintain the high standards already set by the organization, the commanding officer said:

"No matter what progress you have made, it can be lost by one serious blunder through carelessness. Safeguard all the labor and progress we have established. Continue as you have, and your success is assured in anti-aircraft."

Near the conclusion of his address, the commanding officer quoted the following comment made by Captain Brakke, formerly an officer of the 77th.

"I never really appreciated the quality of the 77th until I compared it to other anti-aircraft units.'"

3,000 Visitors Present

Anniversary congratulations were received from Brig. Gen. Claude M. Thiele, commanding officer of the 34th Brigade, of which the 77th is a part. General Thiele's message expressed an optimistic outlook for the 77th.

Nearly 3,000 visitors heard the speech and took part in the vesper services conducted by Lieut. H. A. Robinson, chaplain of the regiment.

43 NEGRO SOLDIERS A.W.O.L. IN SOUTH

Midwesterners of 77th Battalion Over Friction With Near-by Townfolk in Arkansas

SOME CAUGHT BY POLICE

To Be Returned to Their Unit, Which Is Moved to a New Location in Woods

PRESCOTT, Ark., Aug. 17 (AP)—Unauthorized departure of forty-three Negro soldiers from a Southern manoeuvre area after a series of incidents involving them with police and civilians has been disclosed by Army authorities.

Major Gen. Robert C. Richardson Jr., commanding the Seventh Corps, said the forty-three out of 1,000 men in the Ninety-fourth Engineer Battalion, with a Negro enlisted personnel drawn largely from Detroit and Chicago, were absent without leave.

"The racial difficulties between the Ninety-fourth Battalion Engineers (Negro) and the inhabitants of Gurdon, Ark., which occurred last Tuesday night have been settled satisfactorily," the General said in a statement, adding:

"But some of these Northern Negroes, not understanding the attitude of the Southerner and apparently to avoid further trouble have left their command and are reported absent without leave, returning to their former station (Fort Custer, Mich.). Instructions have been sent to military police to apprehend them and return them to their command."

Police at Little Rock, Ark., and Poplar Bluff, Mo., announced they had picked up a score of Negro soldiers, headed North, some of whom identified themselves as members of the Ninety-fourth.

The battalion, arriving in the manoeuvre early last week, was originally assigned a field bivouac at Bierne, Ark., on the outskirts of Gurdon. Following reported friction between townspeople at Gurdon and members of the unit, the battalion was moved two days ago to a densely wooded area on the little Missouri River north of Prescott.

Subsequently the Army announced that as a result of a conference with State police officers "an agreement was made that will obviate any difficulties due to the present of Negro troops in this vicinity."

Pershing's Praise of Our Soldiers Recalled on Air

The high esteem in which colored troops are held by General John J. Pershing was recalled Saturday night by Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, in an address during "The Negro and the Army" radio program, broadcast over NBC.

The general, in a letter to the War Department, wrote:

"I am pleased to state that my own experience with colored troops has left with me a favorable impression of their soldierly qualities and efficiency. The old 10th Cavalry, a colored regiment with which I served in Cuba, acquitted itself with distinction, and our colored troops in France during the World War gave a good account of themselves and contributed to the success of the A.E.F.

"The following extract from a cablegram I sent the War Department in June, 1918, testifies to the splendid spirit found prevalent among them:

" 'Exploit of two colored infantrymen some weeks ago in repelling much larger German patrol, killing and wounding several Germans and winning Croix de Guerre by their gallantry, has roused fine spirit of emulation among the colored troops, all of whom are looking forward to more active service. Only regret expressed by colored troops is that they are not given more dangerous work to do.' "

10th CAVALRY OBSERVES THEIR 75th BIRTHDAY

Members of the regiment rode past their commanding officer, Col. Paul R. Davison at 9 o'clock to formally start the day's festivities. Then an assembly was held at the "Buffalo Stomp Grounds" where Col Davison warned the troops that "the future may hold a good deal for this regiment."

He said that the streamers of the regimental standard may have the reading of Africa, China, South America, Mexico or almost any place in the world embroidered on them in a very short time.

"That is the reason I have been pouring the training on this regiment," Col. Davison went on to say. "When we have to fight an enemy we want to be so tough, so hard and so well trained that we can talk about it afterwards."

Col. Davison said that at a meeting of the troops some time ago, he had been introduced to the troops by a "fine old soldier of the 10th" as the father of the regiment.

"I want to tell you that I am proud to have that title. I feel that in this regiment, in this group of men, there is a possibility of a magnificent regiment of cavalry.

"Right now we are green, and are still trying to learn to be finished soldiers. But every man that is standing here should intend making himself the best soldier in the regiment, and making this the best regiment in the cavalry. And if this is the best regiment in the cavalry, it is the best regiment in the army."

Corp. White gets Shipp Medal

The Shipp Memorial medal was presented to Corp. John White, special weapons troop, for outstanding work in the regiment. Corp. White's home is in Perry, Iowa. The Shipp award was given the regiment by Mrs. Margaret Busbee Shipp, in memory of her husband, Lieut. William Ewen Shipp. Lieut. Shipp was killed in action while leading a platoon of the 10th cavalry up San Juan hill in the Spanish-American war. Mrs. Shipp also had a son who served in the regiment. He was Capt. Fabius Busbee Shipp, killed while playing polo at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., in 1925.

In presenting the medal to Corp. White, Col. Davison said, "Corp. White, on behalf of Lieut. Shipp, who died while leading his platoon, and on behalf of the members of his family, I take great pleasure in presenting you the Shipp Memorial award. As you stand in front of your regiment, there is no question but that you have earned this medal, and earned it well.

"I want to caution you that winning the medal is the first step, but the wearing of the medal is just as important. I know that when I pin this medal on you, you will justify its wearing."

Organized in 1866

The regiment was organized July 28, 1866, at Fort Leavenworth. In 1867, the 10th consisted of a headquarters and 12 troops, all recruited. It was assigned to guarding the railroad extending westward, from hostile Indians.

The first battle of the regiment occurred near Fort Hays, Kans., when a small detachment was attacked by a force of 300 Indians. The troops were compelled to withdraw after inflicting heavy losses on the Indians

That battle began an era of Indian warfare in Kansas and the West which lasted for 26 years. The regiment was known to the Indians as the "buffalo fighters" because the buffalo had been adopted as the regimental crest.

The 10th cavalry took an active part in the Spanish-American war and was complimented by the President for its part in the campaign in Cuba.

In 1916 the regiment took part in the punitive expedition into Mexico after Pancho Villa, the notorious Mexican. The 10th was on border patrol during the World War.

Now Part of 2nd Cavalry

The regiment was reassembled at Fort Leavenworth, February 1, 1941, and came to Fort Riley to become part of the Second Cavalry division March 14.

A baseball game in the afternoon between the 9th and 10th cavalries was won by the 9th 8 to 1.

An amateur show, with talent coming in from Kansas City, brought the day's celebration to a close. Special meals were served at noon and in the evening. The mess lunch at night was even topped off with beer.

Under Secretary Of War Patterson Praises Part Negro Soldiers Are Playing In United States Army

Speaking over the N. B. C. blue network radio broadcast of "The Negro in the Army," Tuesday evening, August 12, from 10 to 10:45 p. m., Under Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson read a message from General Pershing praising the Negro soldier and lauded the records which Negro soldiers are making in every branch of the armed forces.

Speaking on the subject "The Negro and National Defense," Mr. Patterson said:

"This is every American's emergency. It is no more particular than a hurricane or a blizzard. There is nothing exclusive about it. There is nothing exclusive about the war that is flaming in three continents. Let me remind you that an aerial bomb draws no color line.

"On June 25th President Roosevelt issued an executive order declaring (and I quote) it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin.'

"Let us look for a moment at the Negro's contribution to the defense effort. There are 70,000 Negroes in the Army, more than 400 commissioned officers. Fifty-six nursesare now being selected for the Army Nurse Corps.

The Armys Chief of Staff General Marshall, enjoys the confidence of these soldiers as he does of all our soldiers, and I can assure you that he reciprocates that confidence. For the first time in American history there is a Negro brigadier general, General Benjamin O. Davis. Negro officers are being assigned to the 99th Pursuit Squadron of the Air Corps. That squadron, comprising 45 officers and 390 enlisted men, now in training at Chanute Field. Illinois, will have an air base near Tuskegee, Alabama, which has been designed by a Negro architect and is being constructed by a Negro contractor. The Tuskegee base, 1,700 acres in extent, will be the home field of the only tactical Air Corps unit stationed in Alabama. We also have a Negro unit with the tanks. And we have Negro units in every branch of the service. units which are making a fine record and of which every American white or colored, may well be proud.

"This is a national crisis. America needs every element of her population and every element of her population needs America. This is a moment when our common danger is of so much more importance than any differences among us that all of our thoughts and all of our actions must be concentrated on the national necessity.

"I want to emphasize the great opportunity—yes, the duty—which the emergency affords the average citizen, white or colored, of getting acquainted with our new Army. The army itself is made up largely of average citizens. Everyone can help to make life more pleasant for the men who constitute it, particularly when they are on leave, or in passing through the larger cities. The civilian population of the South and Southwest can be especially helpful in such a collaboration, since the preponderance of our military population is in that area.

Negro's Loyalty Unquestioned

"No one dare question the Negro citizens loyalty, and none dare question his courage—such courage as in 1918 took Private John Baker with two fingers of his right hand shot off, through three hundred yards of heavy machine-gun fire to deliver an urgent message to his commanding officer; such courage as impelled Private Arthur Johnson, struck by a shell fragment, to carry a more grievously wounded comrade a mile on his back to a first aid station; such courage as led Private Bruce Stoney two-hundred yards out into No Mans Land under heavy fire to rescue a wounded officer lying there; such courage as drew Corporal Sandy Jones, company clerk. up to the front line when he learned that all his officers had become casualties, where he took command of the scattered elements of his unit and reorganized them. Each of these is an authentic instance of officially recorded valor by a Negro soldier. They have been chosen at random from the list of awards of the Distinguished Service Cross during the World War, and there are many more.

"There are less spectacular, but just as genuine, examples of courage today. Sergeant Samuel F. Baker, stationed at Fort Huachuca. Arizona, kept a fire hose playing on drums bulging with hot oil and ready to explode, during a recent fire at that post. He approached within fifteen feet of the death-laden containers and stood his ground despite the danger and the raging heat until he brought the fire under control.' 10th CAVALRY OBSERVES THEIR 75th BIRTHDAY

Members of the regiment rode past their commanding officer, Col. Paul R. Davison at 9 o'clock to formally start the day's festivities. Then an assembly was held at the "Buffalo Stomp Grounds" where Col Davison warned the troops that "the future may hold a good deal for this regiment."

He said that the streamers of the regimental standard may have the reading of Africa, China, South America, Mexico or almost any place in the world embroidered on them in a very short time.

"That is the reason I have been pouring the training on this regiment," Col. Davison went on to say. "When we have to fight an enemy we want to be so tough, so hard and so well trained that we can talk about it afterwards."

Col. Davison said that at a meeting of the troops some time ago, he had been introduced to the troops by as "fine old soldier of the 10th" as the father of the regiment.

"I want to tell you that I am proud to have that title. I feel that in this regiment, in this group of men, there is a possibility of a magnificent regiment of cavalry.

"Right now we are green, and are still trying to learn to be finished soldiers. But every man that is standing here should intend making himself the best soldier in the regiment, and making this the best regiment in the cavalry. And if this is the best regiment in the cavalry, it is the best regiment in the army."

Corp. White gets Shipp Medal

The Shipp Memorial medal was presented to Corp. John White, special weapons troop, for outstanding work in the regiment. Corp. White's home is in Perry, Iowa. The Shipp award was given the regiment by Mrs. Margaret Busbee Shipp, in memory of her husband, Lieut. William Ewen Shipp. Lieut. Shipp was killed in action while leading a platoon of the 10th cavalry up San Juan hill in the Spanish-American war. Mrs. Shipp also had a son who served in the regiment. He was Capt. Fabius Busbee Shipp, killed while playing polo at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., in 1925.

In presenting the medal to Corp. White, Col. Davison said, "Corp. White, on behalf of Lieut. Shipp, who died while leading his platoon, and on behalf of the members of his family, I take great pleasure in presenting you the Shipp Memorial award. As you stand in front of your regiment, there is no question but that you have earned this medal, and earned it well.

"I want to caution you that winning the medal is the first step, but the wearing of the medal is just as important. I know that when I pin this medal on you, you will justify its wearing."

Organized in 1866

The regiment was organized July 28, 1866, at Fort Leavenworth. In 1867, the 10th consisted of a headquarters and 12 troops, all recruited. It was assigned to guarding the railroad extending westward, from hostile Indians.

The first battle of the regiment occurred near Fort Hays, Kans., when a small detachment was attacked by a force of 300 Indians. The troops were compelled to withdraw after inflicting heavy losses on the Indians

That battle began an era of Indian warfare in Kansas and the West which lasted for 26 years. The regiment was known to the Indians as the "buffalo fighters" because the buffalo had been adopted as the regimental crest.

The 10th cavalry took an active part in the Spanish-American war and was complimented by the President for its part in the campaign in Cuba.

In 1916 the regiment took part in the punitive expedition into Mexico after Pancho Villa, the notorious Mexican. The 10th was on border patrol during the World War.

Now Part of 2nd Cavalry

The regiment was reassembled at Fort Leavenworth, February 1, 1941, and came to Fort Riley to become part of the Second Cavalry division March 14.

A baseball game in the afternoon between the 9th and 10th cavalries was won by the 9th 8 to 1.

An amateur show, with talent coming in from Kansas City, brought the day's celebration to a close. Special meals were served at noon and in the evening. The box lunch at night was even topped off with beer.

Under Secretary Of War Patterson Praises Part Negro Soldiers Are Playing In United States Army

Speaking over the N. B. C. blue network radio broadcast of "The Negro in the Army," Tuesday evening, August 12, from 10 to 10:45 p. m., Under Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson read a message from General Pershing praising the Negro soldier and lauded the records which Negro soldiers are making in every branch of the armed forces.

Speaking on the subject "The Negro and National Defense," Mr. Patterson said:

"This is every American's emergency. It is no more particular than a hurricane or a blizzard. There is nothing exclusive about it. There is nothing exclusive about the war that is flaming in three continents. Let me remind you that an aerial bomb draws no color line.

"On June 25th President Roosevelt issued an executive order declaring (and I quote) it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin.'

"Let us look for a moment at the Negro's contribution to the defense effort. There are 70,000 Negroes in the Army, more than 400 commissioned officers. Fifty-six nursesare now being selected for the Army Nurse Corps.

The Armys Chief of Staff General Marshall, enjoys the confidence of these soldiers as he does of all our soldiers, and I can assure you that he reciprocates that confidence. For the first time in American history there is a Negro brigadier general, General Benjamin O. Davis. Negro officers are being assigned to the 99th Pursuit Squadron of the Air Corps. That squadron, comprising 45 officers and 390 enlisted men, now in training at Chanute Field. Illinois, will have an air base near Tuskegee, Alabama, which has been designed by a Negro architect and is being constructed by a Negro contractor. The Tuskegee base, 1,700 acres in extent, will be the home field of the only tactical Air Corps unit stationed in Alabama. We also have a Negro unit with the tanks. And we have Negro units in every branch of the service. units which are making a fine record and of which every American white or colored, may well be proud.

"This is a national crisis. America needs every element of her population and every element of her population needs America. This is a moment when our common danger is of so much more importance than any differences among us that all of our thoughts and all of our actions must be concentrated on the national necessity.

"I want to emphasize the great opportunity—yes, the duty—which the emergency affords the average citizen, white or colored, of getting acquainted with our new Army. The army itself is made up largely of average citizens. Everyone can help to make life more pleasant for the men who constitute it, particularly when they are on leave, or in passing through the larger cities. The civilian population of the South and Southwest can be especially helpful in such a collaboration, since the preponderance of our military population is in that area.

Negro's Loyalty Unquestioned

"No one dare question the Negro citizens loyalty, and none dare question his courage—such courage as in 1918 took Private John Baker with two fingers of his right hand shot off, through three hundred yards of heavy machine-gun fire to deliver an urgent message to his commanding officer; such courage as impelled Private Arthur Johnson, struck by a shell fragment, to carry a more grievously wounded comrade a mile on his back to a first aid station; such courage as led Private Bruce Stoney two-hundred yards out into No Mans Land under heavy fire to rescue a wounded officer lying there; such courage as drew Corporal Sandy Jones, company clerk. up to the front line when he learned that all his officers had become casualties, where he took command of the scattered elements of his unit and reorganized them. Each of these is an authentic instance of officially recorded valor by a Negro soldier. They have been chosen at random from the list of awards of the Distinguished Service Cross during the World War, and there are many more.

"There are less spectacular, but just as genuine, examples of courage today. Sergeant Samuel F. Baker, stationed at Fort Huachuca. Arizona, kept a fire hose playing on drums bulging with hot oil and ready to explode, during a recent fire at that post. He approached within fifteen feet of the death-laden containers and stood his ground despite the danger and the raging heat until he brought the fire under control.' For this gallant exploit he received the Soldiers Medal. Private Robert Mobley, stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri. swam out into the deep water of Big Piney River to rescue a drowning, and for this feat his commanding officer has recommended him for the Soldier's Medal. Negro soldiers are making a fine record in everything else and who may and efficiency. The Old 10th Cavalry, colored regiment with which I served in Cuba, acquitted itself with distinction, and our colored troops in France during the World War gave a good account of themselves and contributed to the success of the A. E. F.

General Pershing Writes

"I am pleased to state that my own experience with Negro troops left with me a favorable impression of their soldierly qualities efficiency and safety in the handling of live shells in our ordnance depots.

"It is my privilege this evening to bring you a message from General Pershing, who will celebrate his eighty-first birthday next month, but who still puts the safety and security of his country be-

Ex-Howard Grid Star Commands Sanitary Unit

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — The 701st Sanitation Company is one of the two all-colored army units of its kind in the country.

The commanding officer is Lt. George D. (Bulldog) Williams, former star football player at Howard University. His assistant and dispensary surgeon is Lt. Richard A. Wilson. Lt. James P. Ramsey, transferred on August 23 to Tuskegee, was the third commissioned officer. In operation since March 4, the 701st Company works on a 24-hour shift—operating all the ambulances for the three station hospitals, furnishing enlisted men for hospital duty and drivers for the medical supply department.

Lt. Williams

"We do everything pertaining to hospitalization," according to Technical Sergeant Walter C. Fullford, "from handling supplies to getting food to taking dead men to their graves."

The 10-man cadre for this unit came from the 369th regiment in New York. It includes, besides Tech. Sgt. Fullford, Staff Sgt. James E. Anderson, Staff Sgt. Elliott L. Greene, Staff Sgt. Robert H. Taylor, Sgt. Douglas J. Huggins, Sgt. Amos H. Dillahunt, Sgt. James W. Murray, Corp. Bruce Kirkwood and Corp. Theodore J. Lothridge.

The 102 selectees assigned to the 701st Company were not selected for this particular type of work. About 15 per cent of them could not even read or write. Night schools were established for them. But in two weeks the company was functioning and is now one of the most efficient units on the post. The selectees are almost entirely from Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Many Specialists in 372 Anti-Tank Unit

FORT DIX, N.J.—The Anti-Tank Company of the 372nd Infantry, which is commanded by Captain George J. Cole of New Jersey, saw its birth on April 10 of this year, at which time fifty-seven men from all parts of the regiment were transferred to form the nucleus of the organization.

Three months later, its full strength was realized when seventy men came in from Camp Wheeler, Ga.

As anything to do with big guns requires trained men, adept in map reading, radio operating and motor maintenance, a great many of the enlisted personnel, as well as the officers, are graduates of various specialists' schools at Fort Benning, Ga.

Two Benning Graduates

Captain Cole and Lieut. Clifford Moore of New Jersey have both graduated from the Infantry School, while the company's third officer, Lieut. Rupert Leonard, of Boston, is now at Benning.

The following enlisted men have attended various courses:

Sergt. Nathaniel Maddox, Camden, N.J.; Privates John Williams, Columbus, Ohio, and John Waites, New York City, who recently returned from Miller Field, New York.

Reconnaissance Sergt. William J. Smith, Camden, N.J., has been ordered to the radio school and Transportation Corp. Arthur Guy of Boston, to the motor mechanics course.

Two Finish Radio School

In actual warfare this company, often called the "Colonel's Own," is under the direct supervision of the regimental commander.

Taking care of the administrative duties of this unit is First Sergeant Eugene Kennedy, who has as his assistant Corporal Philip A. Thomas, company clerk. Both are from Boston.

Unity Of Races Asked By Noted Negro Jurist

Revealing that nearly 100,000 negro men are enrolled in the United States Army, serving in virtually every unit of the force, William Hastie, nationally-famous negro attorney presently serving as a civilian aide to the secretary of war, Sunday afternoon told 2,000 Wilmingtonians and Camp Davis colored soldiers that above all else, petty racial differences must be subjugated to the greater task of a unified nation.

Judge Hastie, who for several years prior to his recall to Washington to assist in the defense program presided over the U. S. district court in the Virgin Islands, spoke at a public meeting at Williston High school. His address was the feature of a patriotic assembly paying honor to the negro soldier, and particularly, to the 5,000 colored men of Camp Davis, and was participated in by high civil and military officials.

"It is hard for us here on a peaceful Sunday afternoon to realize how urgently, how desperately, America needs strong and powerful fighting forces. But, we must make ourselves realize that fact," Judge Hastie declared.

"Our cities have not been bombed, our shores have not been invaded. We have no personal experience in the horrors of modern military aggression, so it is difficult to describe our peril in terms of things familiar to us," the former jurist said, citing the urgency for a nation unified in purpose, coordinated in effort irrespective of race, creed or color.

"Would we sit by, unconcernedly, if a raging fire, a mighty hurricane were bearing down upon us, upon our homes? I say to you that something more dreadful than fire, more terrific than a hurricane, more awful than a deadly epidemic is sweeping toward us, is threatening us with destruction. We cannot sit idly by. We have created this army of men in the armed forces and men and women in defense industries to defend ourselves. And we must stand together," Judge Hastie emphasized.

Democracy, Judge Hastie told his listeners, must be made to mean as much to the American citizen as does fascism to the German Nazi.

Pursuing his theme of unity, Judge Hastie pointed out that fully 10 per cent of the population of the United States is negro.

"The negro must feel that he is a wanted, needed and respected part of our American struggle for survival against things and ideals repugnant to all Americans," the speaker said.

Before he concluded his address, Judge Hastie reviewed several outstanding incidents in War department records in which negro troops have played important roles. The colored soldier is a good soldier and is doing, Judge Hastie said, an excellent job in a multitude of tasks assigned by the Army.

The judge said that he had visited Camp Davis and was particularly impressed with what is being done and planned for the negro soldier. He mentioned the colored service hut and predicted that shortly construction would begin in Wilmington on a $60,000 USO hut for negro soldiers.

Judge Hastie was introduced to the audience by Prof. C. H. McDonald, Williston principal. Dr. Foster Burnett, negro physician, was chairman of the program, introducing Cols. R. D. Brown and Oscar Warner of Camp Davis, and Addison Hewlett, Sr., chairman of the county board of commissioners, and E. M. Butler, president of the Citizens' League, all of whom spoke briefly on phases of the defense program in relation to this area.

A varied musical program was presented during the afternoon by bands, bugle and drum corps and vocal choruses of the 54th, 99th and 100th regiments of Camp Davis, all negro unit

Negro, Whites 'All Pals' at Army Games

By Harry Raymond
(Daily Worker Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE FIRST ARMY IN SOUTH CAROLINA, Oct. 17.—Along a line running in a bow from North to South, in the area of Great Falls, we watched the Blue Army of the First Corps establish a line of security, concentrating on the defense of the Nitrolee Power Dam in the second phase of Rirst Army maneuvers.

OCT 18 1941

To the west Red troops of the Corps, who had been Blues in the first exercise, had thrown their hcse-mechanized Cavalry across the Broad River. Cavalry patrols have been contacted by Blue reconnaissance troops. They report the road bridging the Broad River are full of mechanized troops.

Knowing it would be another day before the Blues could be attacked, we moved up and down the Blue lines of communications, visited command posts and strategic outposts.

CAMOUFLAGE POSITION

We slipped in through a heavy woods, piled brush over our car to keep enemy planes from discovering the Blue position and visited the 30th Division Command Post.

Colonel Richard Gleaves, division intelligence officer, was busy checking phone and radio messages and plotting on his map the approximate enemy position.

He sent us off for lunch. We ate hot hamburg, Army bread and butter and washed it down with big cups of orange juice. We sat under huge trees, protected from the peering eyes of reconnaissance agencies, like Robin Hood's band in Sherwood Forest.

Here we learned that white soldiers are making great strides in breaking down Jim Crow barriers in the South and in the Army.

NEGRO-WHITE FRATERNITY

We talked to Corporal Phillip James, Co. E, 28th Quartermaster Regiment, a young Negro non-commissioner officer from Bolgie, Ala. He was having mess with Pvt. Abbert Yadkinville, N. C., a white trooper.

Another soldier joined the group. He was Pvt. David Burke, Negro, of Selma, Ala. There was no Jim Crow there. They were all buddies in the same Army for the same reason—training to fight the Hitler menace.

"I'm so glad I'm here," said Corporal James. "People of my race are working hard in these maneuvers. But we've got to work hard and well if we're going to make good soldiers out of ourselves and be ready to beat the Nazis."

Private Burke, the other Negro, and Private Abbert, the white soldier, were busy eating and had little to say to us except to ask for copies of pictures we had taken of them.

OCT 18 1941

We left Corps Headquarters and went over along the Catawbra River where the Blues were securing defenses against threatened tank, cavalry and parachute attacks.

Company A of the 39th Infantry Regiment had organized the grounds before the Nitrolee Dam. This outfit was operating with .30 calibre light machine guns and .60 mm. mortars. Artillery was within call if needed.

Theirs was a good position for two reasons. First, it commanded the approaches to the dam and was well concealed. Secondly, it was within a stone's throw of D. G. Norris' country store and service station.

Just for the sake of some light amusement, the company sent out a scout now and then to the store with a handful of nickels for the juke box that reposed in the corner.

OCT 18 1941

Norris, being an ingenious storekeeper, put up a loud speaker outside his store and attached it to the music box.

So the boys of Company A lolled away their time in the cool grass across the road awaiting the enemy and dreaming of the folks back home to the tune of "Those Blue Eyes Don't Sparkle Any More."

U.S. APPROVES SIX PROJECTS FOR SOLDIERS

OCT 11 1941

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—Presidential approval of six additional defense public works projects to provide community facilities and services for Negro civilian defense workers and military personnel was announced last week by Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody. These six new projects, with a total estimated cost of $206,635, are distributed over five states.

Included among the latest projects announced are recreation centers at the following places—Manhattan, Kans., $45,000; Louisville, Ky., (renovation and remodeling) $31,935; Lebanon, Mo., $45,000; Brownwood, Tex., $42,700 and Alexandria, Va., $42,000. In addition, a project has been approved for Junction City, Kansas for recreation facilities for Negro soldiers, and hospital beds for Negroes are provided in a 100-bed hospital at Tallahassee, Fla. The local authority sponsoring this hospital will bear part of the total cost.

for him, as Eddie turns the key in the lock, pushes open the door and walks in. For the first time in a month of days he feels like himself, good fellow Ed Rodney, husband to Addie the sweetest kid in a million. He marches about the litle place. His chest out and a twinkle in his eye. He pencils in his mind all the things he's going to do for Addie as soon as—. He gets in the kitchen and flings off his coat. He opens the cupboards reconnoitering. . . Addie likes spaghetti such as he makes. On goes his coat; he makes a trip to the store. He buys flowers along with his other purchases. . . He sticks the flowers about in the ludricous fashion of men with posies. He cooks. . . He sings lustily, pleasingly.

Then Addie comes.

Hours afterwards, they still sit on the davenport. Addie's left hand is upturned beneath Ed's big palm and his right arm is flung around her shoulder; her right hand toys with his fingers. She recalls something. . .

"My contract ends Monday, and the sponsors think, I should have ot partner, a baritone, Ed. They say it'll add zest to my program, give it body, give it color to turn into a team. . . They'll take me on a long time contract with a baritone. Make good and well—there's places to go. . ." She looks up at Eddie. Eddie looks down at her thinking: Gee, she's a treasure. . .

Addie says: "Please help; want to? We've got to be a team Ed, or else I'll lose out."

Eddie's look turns wholly masculine, wholly devouring; wholly adoring. He says: "Sure honey, I'll do it, haven't I always told you, just that, no woman gets along without her man. . . .

Here. . . here. . . they're on. Some great little old song team, hey?

Refusal of the War Department to release him has forced cancellation of the proposed appointment of Truman K. Gibson (above), assistant to Judge William Hastie, as assistant to Executive Secretary Lawrence Cramer of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, it was learned in Washington this week. Gibson will remain with Judge Hastie in the War Department and the FEPC post, it is believed, will go to Law Professor George E. Johnson, of Howard University.

Colored Troops Did Well In Maneuvers-Lear

MEMPHIS, Oct., 16 (ANP) Gen Ben Lear, commanding general of the second army, declined to comment on the widely read article by Hanson Baldwin published recently in the New York Times in which Baldwin spoke critically and disparagingly of Negro troops as combat soldiers, when queried by the Associated Negro Press recently, saying that he did not feel it was "within his province to discuss publicly the relative merits of American soldiers, white or Negro or whatever their racial derivation might be."

It was pointed out however, that Negro troops on maneuvers last month in Louisiana and Arkansas, had conducted themselves well in proportion to their state of training, discipline and experience."

Gen. Lear it was emphasized, had specially complimented the Second Calvary division for its successful operation in the maneuvers, and an entire brigade of the division was composed of Negro troops, the 9th and 10th cavalry regiments.

Reports that Gen. Lear had bitterly upraided members of the 94th engineers, the ill fated soldiers who ran afoul of Arkansas whites at Gurden, were declared "due to misinformation." The commanding general said he did not "castigate the 94th engineers." He said he did require, however, that they "conduct themselves as well trained soldiers under any and all conditions which they might face. The well trained soldier is always a credit to his uniform, whether he is white or black.

NEGRO DIVISION BY SPRING OF 1942, GEN. MARSHALL SAYS

DEC 13 1941 ——— DEC 13 1941

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 11—Challenged and occupied though he was by Japan's declaration of war, General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army, appeared before a representative conference of Negro newspaper editors Monday morning and notified them that not only have plans been worked out for the activation of a Negro Division in the Spring of 1942, but that Senior ROTC Units for the training of Negro officers are to be set up in three Negro schools in the near future.

DEC 13 1941

GEN. MARSHALL TALKS ON WAR

The conference of editors was called by the office of Judge William H. Hastie, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, and was held in the Munitions Building.

In his short statement to the conference, General Marshall, visibly moved by the turn events took Sunday with Japan's action, stated:

"I had in mind a much different talk to make to you this morning, as many of you know. When you left home, the Nation was at peace. When you reached here, you found it in the middle of war. But I believe your visit should be helpful to the Government and helpful to you.

"As a democracy, we have suffered violent attack without notice or declaration, after the manner of those nations which operate by force.

"The problem of the War Department has been to organize in the shortest possible time an effective body of troops. We have tried to do that efficiently and expeditiously.

DEC 13 1941

NEGROES IN ALL SERVICE UNITS

"From now on, our procedure will be easier because everybody will understand what they didn't understand before. We have lived so far from Europe and Asia that we have not been able to understand what was happening in other parts of the world. We have failed to understand the stern requirements of the world in which we live.

"I am pleased to report to you that we now have Negroes in every branch of the service. They have not been inducted and advanced as fast as they wished, but I can tell you that the money has been secured and the plans perfected for the activation of a Negro Division in the Spring and that we are planning the organization of three Senior ROTC Units for the training of Negro officers in Negro institutions."

RAISE ISSUE OF SEGREGATION

Concluding his speech, Gen. Marshall paid a warm tribute to Judge Hastie and to Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis.

Bluntly projected into the conference at an early stage was the issue of segregation in the Army by E. Washington Rhodes, of the Philadelphia Tribune.

Col. E. R. Householder, chief of the Miscellaneous section of the Adjutant General's Office, directed attention to the issue by noting that the War Department's job was to build an efficient army, that it could not serve as a sociological laboratory, that it had to meet the fixed opinions, even prejudices of the people, as it found them. "You can't change them by fiat, decree or order," he stated. It was this statement which members of the conference vigorously attacked.

Roy Wilkins, editor of the Crisis, directing attention to the importance of the issue—called upon Judge Hastie to set time apart for special discussion of it later in the day.

"This is the vital issue we have come here to challenge," asserted Wilkins.

DAVIS PRAISES ARMY FAIRNESS

Other speakers at the morning session were: Brig. Gen. Davis, of the Inspector General's office, Col. E. H. Draper, executive officer of the morale section, Col. Quincey Scott of the morale section and Col. William Dupuy, of the public relations branch.

General Davis gave a detailed description of the work in his office and the part he has played.

He charged, at one time in his talk, that he believed that many of the selectees had been tampered with by outside agencies before they entered the Army.

He praised the fairness and the thoroughness with which his department conducted investigations and stated that he was pleased to learn that some fairness existed.

tainment of a full life in Hawaii. The 1933 census gives their population as 103,467 citizens, and 43,523 aliens. Thus one sees that many have sworn allegiance to the United States, but not all. Many are law-abiding citizens as well as soldiers in the United States Militia.

But now with the crisis, what will be the reaction? Although America has taught these people the principles of democracy, and the English language, still the Japanese government and institutions see to it that simultaneously they learn Japanese history, tradi ions and language.

Georgia Negro Troops Seize Tampa Air Field in Blackout

DEC 3 - 1941

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Owl-eyed Negro troops from Georgia, who can see through the darkest blackout, "captured" MacDill Field in a sneak attack that kept the field on the alert constantly during the second day of maneuvers to test the base's defenses.

While enemy aircraft made their first night raid shortly before 10 o'clock the invaders "landed" from the bay, pushed through a gas barrage and smoke screen in utter darkness, and had infiltrated the field before they were discovered.

47m DEC 3 - 1941

In thick blackness they were unseen until they reached the vital hangar area. Then the field's floodlights illuminated a fierce hand-to-hand "battle" in which hand grenades (of wood) were flung fiercely and rifles were used for clubs.

One War, One Aim--Negro People Ready to Give All to Destroy Axis

DEC 11 1941

By James W. Ford

The foremost task of all Americans is to defend the nation.

Through a rain of bombs and shells the Japanese government let loose unprovoked war on our country.

This treacherous act of aggression stems from the barbarous plans of the Rome-Berlin-Tokio military alliance to conquer the world and to throw every nation and people back into the slavery of the dark ages.

The Negro people stand solidly and patriotically behind our government together with all the American people to defend the United States and all of its territory, to crush the Japanese militarists and to militarily destroy the Rome - Berlin - Tokio Nazi - fascists once and for all time.

THIS IS ONE WAR

This is one war. It is the war of all democratic and liberty-loving people, black and white, yellow and brown, to exterminate fascist slavery which seeks to envelop every continent. It is the war of the Soviet Union, now heroically engaging the Hitler invaders on a 2,000-mile battlefront — at Leningrad, Moscow and Rostov; it is a war of the British people against the Nazi bandits; it is the war of the Chinese people against the murderous Japanese militarists; it is the war of the peoples in the occupied countries to break the Nazi yoke; it is the war of our own country against the Japanese government and the whole infamous Rome-Berlin-Tokio Axis. To maintain the national independence and security of our nation.

No section of the American people would be more brutally persecuted than Negro Americans should a Japanese victory take place.

It would mean for the Negro population unbridled lynching and torture, such as Mussolini's armed hordes visited upon Ethiopia; such as has been heaped upon the Jewish people, upon Frenchmen, upon the heroic people of Central Europe who are fighting against the Nazi hangmen.

It would mean setting back for centuries the whole struggle of the Negro people for their liberation from oppression and discrimination.

DEC 11 1941

THE NEGRO'S FUTURE

The future of the Negro people as with all mankind lies in achieving a smashing military victory over the Rome-Berlin Tokio axis forces of murder, rapine and plunder.

The Japanese fascists have for some time attempted to divide the unity of the American nation. They have insulted the Negro people by pretending to be the "champion of the darker races of the world. They claim to be fighting against Chinese "imperialists" for a "co-prosperity sphere" in China and Thailand. If that is so, they why did the Japanese militarists attack Guam, Hawaii and the Philippines?

It comes from the lips of the Japanese military which has been engaged for ten years in a most horrible slaughter of the heroic Chinese people, one of the most peaceful and liberty-loving people.

This hideous lie that Japan is the "champion of the darker races" comes from the lips of a gang of fascists who betrayed Ethiopia and took their places beside Mussolini and his wholesale murder of this peaceful Negro nation in Africa.

A GLORIOUS RECORD

The Japanese government is the ally and collaborator of the worst enemy of colored and other peoples that the world has ever seen. Hitler has declared both in words and deeds that the Negro people are "latent brutes." It is this system of barbarism which Hitler and his collaborator, the Japanese militarists, now seek to force upon our country and the world.

The Negro people, with their glorious record of patriotism and bravery in 1775, in 1861 and throughout the history of this country, stand ready to give their last drop of blood to defend their country and to crush the arrogant Japanese aggressors, and their Hitler master. They will stand beside the great trade union movement of our country, and beside every patriotic citizen, to rally all power and strength to this cause. They join with the entire American people in urging the strongest possible armed forces for our country, and they support these forces to the last man, woman and child.

Negroes, like all other Americans, will respond in every way to defend our country. The Negro people unconditionally support the entire war effort and urge that the barriers of discrimination and Jim-Crowism existing against them in the industries and in other phases of national defense be done away with so that the entire manpower of the nation is put into winning the war.

The industries today need the all-out contributions of the Negro people so that more tanks, planes and munitions can be produced against Japan and the Axis.

Lynching should be outlawed and the lynchers given the limit of the law as enemies of national defense and of the utmost participation of all our human resources in this life and death struggle for America's existence.

A full military alliance between the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Great Britain is the hope and desire of the Negro people as it is of all Americans.

The whole Negro people will stand with all Americans in this grave hour to achieve the maximum national unity to defeat the Japanese aggressors, the entire Nazi-fascist axis, and its satellites. Everything for national unity, for our armed forces, for the battle of production. Everything for victory over international fascist gangsterism through the unbreakable unity of Negro and white.

The Eighth Of December

DEC 10 1941

Those of this generation have witnessed one of the critical dates in American history. The date of the formal declaration of war on Japan. From here it is possible that we may begin the long and perilous journey toward our common objective. There was another foreign war within the memory of this generation. That war was started by certain European powers, who not only were unable to finish it but could not pay for it.

This time the Yellow Peril seeks assertion. That peril will be met and the challenge will be answered by millions of strong men.

Franklin D. Roosevelt in choice and economic phraseology has called the nation to arms. In strong language he has assured the American people of excellent leadership. He thusly becomes one of our great war Presidents. He has the confidence of the American people and behind him they stand in a solid phalanx to carry out the program of national defense.

DEC 10 1941

Our people know what a war on the continent means. It will carry with it not only the loss of life and wealth but sacrifice. Only through sacrifice and strict devotion can we hope to achieve victory.

Above all things we must have a national morale. This must come from the generator of tolerance, fair play and political equality. Ours is a great country, harboring a great ideal. That ideal has saved the civilized world in the present crisis. It cannot in anywise now in this crucial hour fail itself.

We will march together as one man. The fight of this nation shall be our fight, with set before us that noble watchword: "Thy people shall be my people."

Senator Fish Prefers Service with Negroes

DEC 12 1941

WASHINGTON.— Speaking before Congress Monday afternoon in support of the President's request for a declaration of a state of war, Senator Hamilton Fish of New York said he would volunteer his services in the armed forces as he did in the last war.

He will serve "preferably with colored troops," the senator said in his stirring speech, which was broadcast throughout the nation. A colonel in the army reserve corps, Fish served a month last summer with two colored regiments of anti-aircraft coast artillery. Col. Fish served with Negro troops in France during the World War.

Negro a Victim on Submarine O-9 When It Sank Off Maine

BOSTON. — (ANP) — In a special communication from Lieut.-Commander R. M. Peacher, comander of submarine division 11, U.S.S. O-2, Flagship, stationed at New London, Conn., it was learned that of the 33 officers and men who lost their lives aboard the O-9 when she sank off the Isle of Shoals, Maine, during a test dive on Friday, June 20, one was a Negro.

He was J. H. Edwards, mess attendant, third class, whose home was in Itta Bena, Miss.

Salvage and rescue work was abandoned because of the 440-foot depth where the sunken submarine rested.

On Sunday, June 22, Naval Secretary Frank Knox gave the lost men the navy's blessings as he stood with bowed head on the deck of the submarine Triton while more than 1,000 sailors and officers stood at attention on the decks of a circle of 12 ships. The booming of 21 guns and the throwing of flowers on the watery grave marked the end of the impressive naval rites.

THE ARMY HAS A NAME FOR IT.

The State's rumorgraph has recorded, since soldiers came to Fort Jackson, 167 rumors, more or less, and counting old rumors rerumored. Perhaps the most frequent of these rumorgraph readings concerns the Thirtieth Division's imminent move to the tropics. Many times, the rumorgraph shows, officers of that division have received orders to equip themselves with white uniforms, cork helmets and other tropical trappings; and several times there have been absolutely straight tips, obtained by way of a soldier whose sister's brother-in-law works for the government as a clerk in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and knows, therefore all about the secret plans of the army's general staff.

Another rumor, of more recent recordings, but persistent, pertains to race riots at Fort Jackson. The rumorgraph showed this one after a fight between CCC boys and Negro soldiers one Sunday afternoon. The fight itself, by the way, did not show on the rumorgraph. It actually took place; and immediately afterwards, came to shudderings of the rumorgraph. First, 60 Negro soldiers had been killed. The newspapers were suppressing that story because the army would not give out the facts, and also, it was hinted, because editors and generals collaborate. The dead soldiers—what became of them? The State shook the rumorgraph, tinkered with it, coaxed it, oiled it, but not a clue as to how the bodies were disposed of. The next time this rumor appeared, the number of dead Negroes was down to six. Something had happened to the zero, but the truth would have been served if the zero had remained, and the six had disappeared.

Other rumors recorded include these:

A spy, yessir a spy, was seen by a guard just as he was about to dump a bottle of deadly poison into the water tank from which the soldiers get their water. The guard shot him off the top of the tank, and he fell, kerplunk, to the earth. This rumor had a nice run, but finally began to fade as people learned that there is no water tank where this spy was shot off of one.

Again—this one was all over town and set the rumorgraph wild a few weeks ago—a huge shipment of cheese had been received at Fort Jackson, and every pound of it contained steel wool. Some fifth columnist had, somehow, got inside the cheese factories, with tons of steel wool in his pockets, and when no employees were looking, he managed, deftly, to distribute that steel wool throughout the many thousand hunks of cheese destined for army use.

And still again—but that's enough for one day's reading.

ONLY NEGRO TANK UNIT PROMOTES 16 PRIVATES

FORT KNOX, Ky. — Uncle Sam's only Negro tank unit, the 758th reserve tank batallion of the Armored Force, made its first step towards a 100 per cent Negro enlisted personnel recently when it effected a series of promotions of recently inducted selectee soldiers.

The new non-commissioned officers will be able to take over the work previously done by a cadre of white officers assisting in the training and administrative work.

Sixteen privates, most of them with only four months' service in the Armored Force, were promoted to the rank of corporal and were personally presented warrants of promotion by Lt. Colonel Leroy W. Nichols, commanding officer. The ceremonies were attended by the entire battalion.

The names follow:

William R. Berry, Philadelphia, Pa.; Gerald A. Brown, Springfield, Ill.; Raymond L. Brooks, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Henry Page Dumas, Natchez, Miss.;

James Morrison, Alexandria, Va.; Albert S. Parks, Evanston, Ill.; Luther M. McGee, LaGrange, Ill.; Baltimore Payne, Evanston, Ill.; Lewis Felton Rhodes, Chicago, Ill.; Edward D. Stewart, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Men of the new organization are rapidly completing basic training in the fundamentals of a tank battalion. Working hours each day on the drill field and with the equipment, the men have fallen into their niches as soldiers in the Armored Force and are each day moving closer to their goal of a well drilled unit, complete in every detail, with skilled tank drivers and accurate marksmen, ready for any task assigned them.

The battalion is now making its temporary home at Ft. Knox, pending completion of its permanent site at Camp Claiborne, La. Readiness of the new station and the consequent movement is expected within the next 60 days.

HAVE DUG DITCHES, BUILT ROADS AND OPERATED MILLS

FORT BENNING., Ga., July 10—You'll almost cry if you stand off at a distance and watch the members and former members of the 24th Infantry regiment trying to retain and maintain "tradition." They have a tradition as some of Uncle Sam's finest fighting soldiers.

They have sought to maintain the tradition of being soldiers and drillmasters although they nave been given a terrific mauling during the past 20 years. They have managed to keep together enough of their former experience and their old habit to make a definite impression on newcomers, but they know better than anybody else that when, during ten years at Benning, they built roads, dug ditches and operated saw mills, they lost something they should have had.

But they never lost sight of what the 24th meant and means as a symbol. They are not releasing their grasp on that inspiration today although the present 24th is not what it used to be and never will be. It will take another 20 years to build a 24th like the one we used to know.

INFANTRY HAS ABOUT 100 OF OLD REGULARS

The 24th Infantry regliment now at Fort Benning has scarcely more than a hundred of the men who up until the present emergency shared its burdens and glories. The regiment has been "cadred" to death. Every new unit of Negro soldiers set up by the War department has had to have its cadre of men from the 24th, fifty here, a hundred there.

No one would question the necessity of using 24th Infantry members to help whip the new units into shape. The fact that they had to be used is a tribute to the excellence of the men as soldiers. The extended shadow of the old 24th will be found in the perfected colored units in Uncle Sam's new Army.

But just the same, one can hardly keep from shedding a tear when it is realized that the old 24th is gone, that the new 24th is nothing but an old name attached to a new body of new soldiers. Maybe the hallowed past will lay its hand on these new men and breathe into them something of the spirit and aims of the men of the old 24th. But that will take time.

In the meantime, colored America must pause in tribute to a distinguished, herioc fighting unit which, in the face of necessity, has been cadred to death.

"And the --- ---- Engineers"

Into the wooded, gullied fields around Polly Ray Mountain at Fort Bragg, N.C., 18,000 troops of the Ninth Division moved for maneuvers. Everything was set for a nice little black & white war-game. Infantrymen and artillerymen were to attack the hill. The defenders were Lieut. Colonel John Elliott Wood's 41st Engineers, the first regiment of Negro engineers in the new Army.

The 41st decided to make an offensive defense. Hell and "Smoky Joe" Wood's black, grinning engineers broke loose at the same time. Out of the scrub, up from concealing gullies roared an avalanche of darky-driven trucks. Because the 41st still lacked combat equipment, like most of the Army, the trucks represented a battalion of tanks. After the make-believe tanks came more trucks, acting as troop carriers. Through and around the enemy whites' artillery, anti-tank defenses, infantry positions and supply lines the black Panzers darted. Only comfort for the surprised, outflanked troops of the Ninth was the providential presence of a protecting swamp in the engineers' path. The black -------s would certainly mire in the muck!

The assaulting trucks drove right to the swamp. "Smoky Joe's" engineers quickly cut pine and scrub oak trees, in 25 minutes laid a corduroy road across the bog, swept into the astounded 39th (white) Infantry on the Ninth's southern flank. Again the engineers wove through and around the enemy lines, ran some of their truck-tanks clear to the division command post (but caught no generals; they had fled). Before the games ended, in horrid confusion, the 41st was credited with halting the Ninth Division's planned attack for at least a day, perhaps disrupting it completely.

Black Watch. To civilians who think of Army engineers as pick-&-shovel soldiers, the performance of the 41st might have seemed surprisingly belligerent. But not to soldiers: combat engineers fight with guns as well as shovels, often lead attacking troops into battle when enemy fortifications, tank-traps, etc. have to be demolished. Lieut. Colonel Wood's use of simulated tanks was something extra, just to show what Negro engineers could do in a pinch.

White, North Carolina-born Joe Wood was a major at the War College in Washington when the Corps of Engineers decided to establish a Negro regiment last summer. All of his officers are white; all of them are 30 or younger. (In the U.S. Army, Negro regiments get picked officers, and officers generally vie for assignment to them.) His 1,250 privates and non-coms are Negroes, mostly from the South. Together they have made the 41st a slambang outfit which has supplied the training cadres for 14 other engineer regiments. In all, some 3,300 Negro recruits have gone through Joe Wood's mill.

Understanding and sharing his Negroes' love for foofaraw, Lieut. Colonel Wood has gone the limit to give the 41st splash and dash. His companies are organized by sizes: all the men in any company are within an inch of the same height (Company A's men are five feet, eleven inches and over; Company F's, five feet six and under). When the 41st was born, it had no band and wanted one badly. A Negro sergeant collected some battered drums and bugles, made them do until the regiment got a real band. Now the band leads the men of the 41st out to drill each morning, at retreat always plays hymns (The Son of God Goes Forth to War, Abide With Me, God of Our Fathers).

Often the dark stalwarts of the 41st sing while marching at attention. In regimental reviews, they like to sweep past at the double-quick, their faces ashine with sweat and pride. As working engineers, they built three swimming pools, also six concrete bomb shelters for artillery observers at Fort Bragg. They also created a 25-acre lake and use it for landing exercises and practice in assault boats. A kibitzer at this drill last week was New York's Congressman (and Reserve Colonel) Hamilton Fish Jr., who was an officer in a Negro regiment in World War I.

When engineers of the 41st go to other outfits, they carry their spirit with them. The 41st tells the story of a Negro engineer who was transferred to Fort Belvoir, Va. While the engineer was on guard duty, a white general summoned him: "Boy, come here." The engineer obeyed, saluted, said: "Suh, I'm not a boy. I'm a soldier." Said the general: "Soldier, I'm well rebuked."

More Negro Units Will Be Activated In June For Fort

With activation of three additional Negro outfits at Fort Jackson, besides the three already at the post, there will be 1,205 colored troops in training, post officials said today.

The Negro units are being stationed in the southwestern part of the old 8th Division area where a permanent camp is being built. Twenty barracks are being erected for these troops, along with a post exchange, headquarters, recreation building and a theater to be built later.

Already activated at the fort are the post quartermaster detachment, the service company and companies "E" and "G" of the 2nd Battalion, 28th Quartermaster regiment. The battalion headquarters and Company "F" will be activated.

Also activated is the post quartermaster detachment with 114 men and the service company with 362 men. Three Negro outfits to be activated in June are Company D, 240th Quartermaster Battalion with 240 men; the 91st Quartermaster company with 102 men and the 67th Quartermaster Troop with 71 men.

Harlem Regiment Encamped in Midst Of Historic French and Indian Country

BY THE GUARDSMAN

FORT ONTARIO, OSWEGO, N .Y.—Entrenched here in the midst of the historic French and Indian War country ,the pride of Harlem's soldiery, the 369th Coast Artillery regiment has settled down for a year of training. Housed in newly complete barracks with greatly improved facilities of all sorts, the regiment unanimously voiced vigorous approval of the camp site on arrival and has plunged enthusiastically into the job of making itself at home.

Situated about 324 miles by rail from New York City on the shores of Lake Ontario—jokingly called the "Hall of Winds"—Fort Ontario has been equipped with warm air heat and ventilation in the barracks, clean showers, washrooms and sanitary latrines.

Wash basins, bathtubs, clean bedding—two sheets and two blankets per man—which are changed weekly and many other homelike touches help to remove most of the privations generally associated with camp life.

Officers are provided with separate quarters, each man in his own room with his own bed and, in addition to the furnishing mentioned for the rank and file one or two extra items of furniture.

The regiment, marching briskly from the armory to Park Ave. and 156th St., embarked at the New York Central railroad yards there in four sections. The first left the city at 9:10 p. m. Tuesday, arriving here at 5:35 a. m. Wednesday. The last section entrained at 1:10 a. m. in the city, arrived here at 10:10 a. m. Wednesday. The men used Pullmans, were served lunch and hot coffee en route.

Although the weather here has been extremely favorable since arrival of the regiment, every precaution is being exercised. Each man is advised to dress properly, wear overshoes and winter caps and a minimum of illness is anticipated.

For such illness as may occur a modern and well-staffed hospital with more than enough room for any eventualities is located on the post with skilled physicians, nurses and orderlies working in close co-operation with the medical detachment of the regiment.

The little merchandise needs of the men are met either by provisions from the army direct-ly or with supplies which may be purchased extra, and very reasonably, at any one of several Post exchanges.

The Y.M.C.A. has sent George Falling to Oswego to take charge of recreational activities for the men and the local armory is placed at the disposal of the regiment during certain hours. Already planned schedules for inter-company competition in basketball, track and other sports have been drawn up.

For those men with other interests or definite skills, hobby groups, craft classes and such activities are being organized also, in conformity with a wide program of keeping the men happily engaged during their free hour.

FEB 8 1941

General morale of the outfit is at a high pitch, with the men enthusiastically endorsing the leadership of Col. Chauncey Hooper and his staff and the general watchword around the camp is "Carry on, Soldier."

Chaplain Ben Richardson preached his first sermon Sunday to the Protestants at the Post Theatre where services had to be held in two sections because of the overflow. The Catholics worshipped at St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church in Oswego.

Credit for being first to discover the blaze which ruined the Supply Wing is going to Lt. Hewitt and Staff Sergeant Liscombe, both members of the "Mighty First." Despite unfavorable weather, rebuilding on the damaged wing is already in progress.

The regiment went on its first night hike Wednesday night, travelled about four miles in spite of a cold night and discipline reached a high point, everybody acquitting themselves with honors.

Will Be First Such Unit Of Negro Enlistees In U. S. Army

MAR 8 - 1941

The War Department announced Tuesday that the 46th Field Artillery Brigade, the first such brigade of Negro entlisted men ever formed in the United States Army, is being activated this month at Camp Livingston, La.

The brigade consists of the 350th Field Artillery, 351st Field Artillery and the 353rd Field Artillery Regiments.

This brigade is being formed from cadres furnished by the 349th Field Artillery, a Negro unit now at Fort Sills, Okla.

The 349th Field Artillery and the 184th Field Artillery were formerly the only Negro field artillery units in the Army. The 184th Field Artillery, a National Guard regiment from Chicago, Ill., is now in training at Fort Custer, Mich.

MAR 8 - 1941

The acting commanding officer of the 46th Field Artillery Brigade is Col. George H. Paine, Field Artillery, who is the regimental commander of the 351st Field Artillery. The 350th Field Artillery is commanded by Col. Thomas G. M. Oliphant, Field Artillery, and the 353rd Field Artillery by Lieut. Col. Orva E. Beezley, Field Artillery.

COLORED NON-COMS GET MODERN HOMES AT FT. HUACHUCA

MAR 28 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Negro non-commissioned officers attached to the 25th and 368th Infantry Regiments at Fort Huachuca, Arizona are now occupying the newly completed defense housing at that Army reservation, John M. Carmody Federal Works Administrator announced this week through William J. Trent, Jr., Racial Relations Officer in the Personnel Office of the Federal Works Agency.

First of the defense housing projects to be fully completed by the Public Buildings Administration under direction of Commissioner W. E. Reynolds, this $94,000 project provides homes for 30 families. Meeting the demand for speed, it was completed on February 27, the contract having been awarded on November 14, 1940.

Designed in accordance with the prevailing Pueblo architecture of the region, the project consists of 15 one-story buildings, each housing two families. Of masonry construction, the project was developed for permanent use. Rough shutters, pitched roofs and overhanging eaves carry out the characteristics of the architecture of the southwest. All the buildings are termite proof and insulated to provide protection against the cold weather of the mile elevation of Fort Huachuca.

Eleven of the buildings contain units of two bedrooms, living room, kitchen-dinette, and bath. The units in the other four buildings will contain three bedrooms. Kitchen and plumbing fixtures are modern.

MAR 28 1941

A total of 5,292 Negro troops are stationed at the Fort Huachuca Army Reservation about 78 miles from Tucson. The 368th, a new regiment, was scheduled to be activized on February 10. The 25th, an old Regular Army outfit, has long been stationed at Fort Huachuca.

Parade In Virginia Negro Troops

MAY 24 1941

FORT BELVOIR, Va.—(ANP)—The full complement of Negro troops encamped in this engineer training camp took part in the full dress parade staged Saturday morning in honor of the new commanding office, Brig. Gen. E. H. Marks. Three battalions of the colored troops in the parade had had only three weeks of training. But to the average observer, the new men appeared just as polished as the two regular army battlions leading the review. Fully 13,000 men were in the mass event of which some 4,000 were colored.

Following the review, Gen. Marks commented: "These men are better than the draftees I commanded during the World war." Hundreds of cars lined the Richmond-Washington highway to watch the review in addition to those parked in the alloted spaces. The colored troops received special praise from the onlookers as they swept through the maneouvers without a single hitch in their formations.

SOLDIERS PRAISED BY WHITE COLONEL

Fair-Minded Officer Pleads for Unity During Present Emergency.

By P. L. PRATTIS

WILMINGTON, N. C., June 5—Northern Negroes have so many apprehensions about Southern whites and Southern whites are so apprehensive of Northern Negroes that it is difficult to present an understandable picture in words of Tennessee-born Lieut. Col. Robert D. Brown who, when this is read, will be the commanding officer of the 99th and 122th Coast Artillery regiment, Anti-Aircraft, both colored.

It is easy to denounce a man for an audience which expects to hear him denounced. It is easy to praise a man for those who wish to see him lauded. It is almost impossible to "sell" a man to readers who have condemned his kind in advance.

You may sell a Northern Negro to a white Southerner, but not without reservations which take time to wear away. I'd rather try to make a sparrow stand still than to try to sell a Southern white man to Negroes.

But Col. Brown is a bill of goods on the hands of this writer and he must be disposed above.

A LAUDABLE CHARACTER

I present him in the light of other minority, to be thinking of itself. All must think of their country. Fighting among ourselves, we will all lose."

Not once, not twice, but many times, this inspired fighter uttered words of caution for the benefit of the writer and the newspaper he represents. He appealed, rather than warned.

CAUTIONS AGAINST INFLAMING ARTICLES

"Mr. Prattis, your people have an organ in your newspaper which may do much good or much harm," he commented. "I beg you to devote it to the service of your country. I know what Negroes have to suffer. But as there's a God in Heaven, this is not the time to wage any fight that will weaken the nation."

Reminded of prejudices, South and North, which keep us from playing our full part in industry, the Army and the Navy, he acknowledged the existence of these prejudices, but insisted that American Negro leadership do everything it could to gird American Negroes for the struggle which lies ahead to save the nation.

"Mr. Prattis, this is no time to fight among ourselves," he repeated over and over again.

ADMIRES GEN. DAVIS

Before Col. Brown went to Europe as a military observer in the present war, he was attached to the 369th Infantry regiment of the New York National Guard as instructor. He therefore knew Col. Benjamin O. Davis, now General Davis, well. He also knew and admired the present commanding officer of that regiment, Col. Chauncey Hooper, with equal intimacy.

Col. Brown told us some things which we hope were not in confidence. He described his admriation of these and other men with the a[illegible] outfit and of their admiration for him. He described those tense and uncertain days when it was bruited about that the 369th might be federalized.

General Davis, then a colonel, was tired, a bit discouraged. Why go further, he asked himself? He was toying with the idea of getting out. It was Col. Brown who talked with him, tried to dissuade him. He even colluded with Mrs. Davis to keep Col. Davis actively looking toward the future.

"You know, Colonel, I have hunches," Col. Brown quotes himself as saying to Col. Davis. "You know I have had them before."

Col. Davis, listening intently and thoughtfully, is described as shaking his head in affirmation.

Then Col. Brown, without knowing, told Col. Davis of his conviction that prejudice would not stand in the way of his advancement, that the promotion which was his due would come to him.

It did.

SUPPORTED NEGRO OFFICER

When Col. Davis was promoted and it was known that a new commanding officer for the 369th would be found, Davis, Hooper, Brown and others were all perplexed. Who would be the man? Would he be white or colored?

Davis and Hooper, then a lieutenant colonel, fearful that a colored man would not be named, were eager to suggest the name of Col. Brown. They knew they could be sure of him. If a white man were to be appointed, Brown, they felt, should be the man.

But Col. Brown argued against them. He would have been delighted with the job. He confesses his ambition. But he knew better than to yearn for such a command.

"That command was a symbol," he explains, "a symbol of the colored race's capacity and belief in itself. No white man should have that command."

For that reason, he gave what support he could to win the appointment of a colored commanding officer. He [illegible] wordy in his praise of Col. Hooper.

PLEADS FOR UNITY

Tall, slender, handsome and spiritual, he might fit your conception of a Methodist or Presbyterian minister. Sensitive, scholarly, widely-experienced, words which convey sparkling, charged ideas and passion for doing are tasty morsels upon which he gorges himself.

"I'm a fantatic, I know," he apologizes as he sets himself for a new preachment on American unity.

"Mr. Prattis, we've got to have unity. No group or minority which is a part of the American population can be overlooked. America will not live if such a minority is left out. We can't win without the help of fifteen million American Negroes. I know because I have been over there and I have seen. Every man, woman and child in America must give all he or she has.

"We have got to cast aside those irritations which beset us. This is no time for the Negro, the Jew, the Italian, the German, or any his usefulness to America in these trying days. I present him as a type of four-square, new deal American as rarely found in the North as in the South. I present him, not as a Southerner, not as a white man, not as a partisan, but as a great American in the service of America.

The picture I present of Col Brown is for the benefit of not only mothers and fathers and friends of soldiers who may disturb themselves over the baffling evils of racial prejudice and disunity at a time like this, but as well for the men who [illegible] to learn to be soldiers under him. These soldiers should know that they have a leader who believes in them and their utmost possibilities as men and Americans. They should be the first to know that this passionate advocate of fair play has cleaned his heart, mind and soul of all that means and denotes difference between any Americans and that he pregnantly realizes that without their help America cannot be saved.

ON FRONT LINES OF PRESENT WAR

Col. Brown belongs to a family of soldiers. His forbears fought in the Confederate Army. He has been a soldier himself for more than thirty years. He has served in the Army and Navy. He has given distinguished service as soldier and diplomat.

He has seen war as given to few men in America to see it. He was in the World War. In this war, he has been where the fighting was thickest. He was with the Germans when they marched through Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and France. He was in France after the Germans arrived. He has seen the bloody slaughter from both sides. In spite of the slaghter and destruction he has witnessed, he remains a soldier.

PRAISES BLACK TROOPS

No one knows better than Col. Brown the heights to which black men can rise in defense of what they love. His natural eloquence halts for words when he attempts to describe the superb heroism of these men. But recently he met another man who told him even more than he knew.

"I was surprised that I had not heard," narrated Col. Brown, "but he told me of an instance of the heroism of American troops in France in the last war. He told of how he had come upon a battlefield in Flanders. Nearly four hundred Negroes lay cold in death upon that field. This man wandered among the fallen heroes. Every bayonet, clutched in the hand of a dead black soldier, pointed toward Germany. Not a man had flinched. Not a man had turned. To me this sacrifice had in it the elements of all that is grand and sublime."

Soldiers Set For Battle Of Tennessee

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(SNS) American troops, thousands of them will be on the march before the week is out, to take part in the Battle of Tennessee in June, the largest peace-time war maneuvers in the United States thus far this year.

MAY 23 1941

The 5th Division from Fort Custer, Michigan, starts for the battle ground early this week because it has the greatest distance to march, 500 miles. The 30th Division from Fort Jackson, South Carolina, will move out 18,000 strong, next week, and the 27th Division from Fort McClellan, Alabama, follows in the week.

The three infantry divisions will be in the 600 square-mile battle ground by May 30th to open the first major war games of the year. Before the 1941 Battle of Tennessee has progressed very far, more than 77,000 American troops will be engaged in battle.

The Second Armored Division from Fort Benning, Georgia, consisting of 612 offices and 12,000 men moves into the war games later in June.

More than four thousand troops are already in the battle area, preparing lines of communication, setting up headquarters and supply depots for the war games. Tiny hamlets and villages in the heart of Tennessee have seen more military activity in the past week than has taken place since the War between the States. Troop Movements by the day and night have kept roads clogged that only a few weeks ago were quiet and deserted. New roads have sprung up over night and have gone into use immediately as heavy army transport trucks and Signal Corps equipment have rolled over them and out into the fields and hills where the 1941 Battle of Tennessee will be fought in June.

Major General Joseph M. Cummins, commander of the 5th Division announced that he and his Division would take to the road on May 20, and that it would require approximately [illegible] days for his command of 18,000 men and hundreds of vehicles to reach the Tennessee maneuvers area.

This maneuver, the High Command of the Second Army announced in its Memphis headquarters, will give American troops their first taste of major divisional movements in 1941. It is infrequent that as many as four Divisions engage in maneuvers at one time. It will serve to train the men in the field with such obstacles as stream crossings and road blocks and how to overcome them in actual battle.

It will acquaint troops with what part the armored force plays in modern warfare. It will be the first time in the United States Military history that a modern tank division operates with and against such large infantry forces as a complete war strength Division. It will also teach the 1941 troops how to break camp in a hurry and move from position to position daily and nightly.

Staff Officers of Second Army expressed t as a preliminary examination of what the troops have learned since they mobilized early in the year. They have learned the elementary lessons in combat, how to shoot, how to keep their equipment in first class shape, how to keep physically fit, and the basic lesson of hygiene. Now we'll find out if the soldier can follow through on all the while he is living under rigid field conditions.

Artillery Unit Moved When Whites Protest

GALVESTON, Tex., May 22—Announcement has been received here that the 54th Coast Artillery, an all-Negro Regiment, was ordered transferred from Camp Wallace in this State to Camp Davis, located near Wilmington, N. C., last Thursday. Made up of a personnel of nearly 1,700 officers and enlisted men, the 54th regiment was organized in Texas last February and stationed at Camp Wallace.

The move is believed to be the result of a recent protest filed with the War Department by a group of prominent socialites and local officials, who stated that the close proximity of the Negro camp to the Galveston beaches would jeopardise their tourist trade.

Galveston is known as the "Playground of the South" and yearly draws large numbers of Northerners to its miles of gulf coast beaches.

Capt C C Wood Given Command Of Negro Troops

Capt Clyde C Wood, Quartermaster Corps, yesterday was designated commanding officer of Company F, 34th quartermaster regiment, at the Tallahassee airbase.

This unit is a truck company and is comprised of colored soldiers. Sgt Walter McGriff, quartermaster corps, is first sergeant, who was recently transferred to the base from MacDill field.

Eugene Warren, formerly of Daytona Beach, also assumed his duties yesterday as chef instructor for the organization.

Captain Wood advises he is attempting to build up a library for his company and will undertake the job of collecting magazines for it. He said the troops naturally like magazines for men—no "sissy stuff"—and they want up-to-date literature, magazines while they are still fresh, and not those dragged out of attics. They'll take books, too, and all should be left in care of E W Spearman at the colored recreation center, 433 W St Augustine St.

MacDill Field Will Have Battalion of Negro Engineers

Announcement was made at MacDill field yesterday that a battalion of 630 negro engineers will be formed here about July 1. Work will start immediately on 15 buildings to accommodate the unit.

At the same time a Washington dispatch said authority had been granted for 19 buildings to cost $141,744 for the engineering unit.

The MacDill public relations office said details of the unit had not yet been received, but that it probably will be made up of men already in the army, who will be transferred to the new battalion.

It was said by one officer to be the first negro aviation battalion ever organized.

Maj. Reynolds J. Burt, constructing quartermaster, said he would start work soon on seven barracks buildings, two mess halls, two day rooms and two store rooms for the unit, and that construction should be completed by July 15. They will be built by WPA labor.

The war department authorized nine barracks buildings, three supply rooms, three day rooms, three mess halls, an administration building and utilities.

Major Burt said he would advertise for bids this month to construct five more buildings at the Orlando base at an estimated cost of $52,000. They will include a postoffice, warehouse, flight surgeon's unit, recreation building and officers' mess.

WHITES TRAINED AS COMBAT SOLDIERS; NEGROES DO WORK

CAMP BLANDING, Fla., July 17—All work and no real soldiering makes Johnson, James (the way they call it in the Army), a somewhat disgruntled boy, especially if he happens to be colored. Colored soldiers at this camp don't mind the work, but they want some soldiering, too. They want to drill and to get the feel of a rifle in their hands.

Assigned to quartermaster and Corps Area service commands, they feel like the soldiers at Fort Jackson, S. C., who are unhappy because they are given nothing but work today.

NO NEGROES TRAINED AS COMBAT SOLDIERS

There are thousands of whites in the camp who are being trained as combat soldiers. There are no Negroes being trained as combat soldiers.

When a review of the soldiers in Camp was held on Army day, the Negroes were left out. They thought they were being discriminated against. The fact was they had not been taught how to drill.

They don't have guns. But the spirit of drilling has so caught them that I saw them going through mock drills with shovels.

That was the unhappy lot of the 500 or more colored non-combatant soldiers found at Camp Blanding early in May.

THEY DO ALL THE DIRTY WORK IN CAMP

Their chief jobs were to maintain the motor pool, or truck headquarters, to drive all the trucks for the camp headquarters, to work as section hands on the camp railroad and to do heavy duty at the camp warehouses. There was also a detail attached to the signal corps for laboring purposes. White boys do some work of this type, too, but most of them are being trained as combat soldiers.

One reason this type of service is irksome to thec olored boys is the factt hat most of the time they seem to be taking the work off the shoulders of whites, to bed oing the heavy work for whites who havee nlisted or have been selected just like thy have.

However, most of the white are organized into large units which have some military integrity.

In actual practice, the organization of Negro units has not made much progress. Hundreds of Negroes therefore are being split up into service detachments or quartermaster detachments.

In most camps you will find a company or two of the 48th Quartermaster regiment or the 28th Quartermaster regiment.

The feeling among the colored soldiers at Camp Blanding was expected to improve however, when plans called for the placement of a regiment of colored engineers, consisting of 1176 men, and a battalion of colored engineers, consisting of 1100 men at the camp.

But it must not be forgotten that the term "engineers" in the Army may or may not be a euphemism used to cover up something dirty.

At Fort Bragg, Negroes have a real engineering outfit in the 41st Engineers under Col. Wood. Another engineering unit under another commander might be so similar to a service regiment that you would not be able to distinguish between the two.

Negroes can be sure that if the number of engineering units among colored troops increases rapidly that thousands of their selected young men are being given jobs as simple day laborers. That trend will have to be watched.

We will probably visit Camp Blanding again to see what these new engineers are doing.

Officers Of 184th Artillery Regiment Qualify At Ft. Sill

Chicago Officers Make Short Work of Artillery Mathematics—Praised By Commanding Officer—More to Take Course.

JAN 4 - 1941

FORT SILL, Okla., Jan. 2—Stating that he had no criticism to offer, and that the 10 Illinois officers had efficiently conducted their first firing problem, Col. A. L. P Sands, commanding officer of the 349th U. S. Army Field Artillery regiment (himself a veteran artillery officer) brought down the curtain on what has proved to be another historica event in the history of Chicago's old 8th regiment.

The 10 Negro officers from the 184th Field artillery (formerly the 8th Illinois infantry) had not only proved that they were qualified to handle the mathematical calculations involved in big gun firing, but also that they were excellently capable of directing the firing of those guns in accordance with previously determined computations.

The 10 officers, sent here as an experiment, were Major Anderson F. Pitts, Captain Homer Lewis, Captain Oscar Randall, Captain Wendell T. Derricks, Captain Marcus H. Ray, First Lieutenant Raymond Watkins, First Lieutenant Joseph Francois, First Lieutenant Edward Wimp, First Lieutenant George Rose and Second Lieutenant Orion Page.

On arrival here the the officers were assigned to duty with the 349th 155MM gun regiment, a regular army field artillery organization. Their mornings were devoted to field training, while in the afternoon they studied in classrooms. Evenings (many times until past midnight) they studied mathematical functions, taught by one of their group, Captain Oscar Randall, a civil engineer.

After eight days of study and practice the group was ordered to the firing range to actually conduct a firing problem. The four captains directed the fire by telephone at a distance of five miles from the gun emplacements. Major Pitts superintended the correction directives of the whole problem. Lieutenant Page and Lieutenant Francois had charge of the gun firing crew. The remainder of the officers were observers. Forty projectiles costing about $100 each, were fired. The successful result of the work prompted the commanding officer here to indicate that other officers to take the same course should be selected from the 184th.

Here's Where U.S. Army Will Put Soldiers

JAN 18 1941

WASHINGTON.

Under the tentative plans of the War Department, colored citizens will participate in the following branches of the government's military affairs:

Engineers	15,714
Cavalry	2,456
Coast Artillery	10,219
Field Artillery	7,101
Infantry	16,836
Ordnance	1,720
Air Corps	2,250
Medical Detachment	400
Chemical Warfare	220
Total	56,896

Other branches of the service to be used include the signal corps, with figures unavailable, and the replacement units in several instances, which in all probability will bring the total number up to approximately the 80,000 expected to be inducted into the service.

Will Serve on Ground

In the various units, the soldiers will be given the same type of service duties as other soldiers. In the air corps, they will be used exclusively at present as ground crews, not as mechanics nor as maintenance men, but merely to service the stations.

Distribution will be as follows:

Engineers: Fort Bragg, N.C.; Camp Shelby, Miss.; Fort Custer, Mich.; Camp Blanding, Fla.; Fort Belvoir, Va.; Fort McClellan, Ala.; Camp Claiborne, La.

Coast Artillery Corps: Fort Bragg, N.C.; Galveston, Texas; Fort Eustis Va.

Field Artillery: Fort Sill, Okla.; Camp Langston, La.

Infantry: Fort Benning, Ga.; Fort Huachuca, Ariz.; Fort Devens, Mass.; Camp Claiborne, La.; Macon, Ga.; Camp Walters, Texas.

Ordnance: Savannah, Ill.; MacDill Field, Fla.; Aberdeen, Md.

Replacements: Camp Lee, Va.; Fort Warner, Wyo.

Signal Corps (distributed).

Air Corps: Langley Field, Va.; Augusta, Ga.; Barksdale Field, La.; Jackson, Miss.; MacDill Field, Fla.; Maxwell Field, Ala. New Orleans; Savannah, Ga.;

Medical Detachment: Camp Lee, Va.; West Point, N.Y.; Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Chemical Warfare Dept.: Langley Field; Edgewood Arsenal, Md.

Cavalry Fort Riley, Kans.

Figures Tentative

These encampments and figures are tentative and are the increments expected in the various camps through the draft. Changes will occur frequently, it is reported, but this is the figure on which the government expects to work out its plans for military defense. Assignments to the quartermaster corps and other service units as well, also take up a portion of the difference in the figures given and the total men expected to be called.

Regiment Activated at Leavenworth; To Be At War-Time Strength Soon

FEB 7 1941

Better Day Dawning for Negro Soldiers at Army Post; Men Anxious to Serve Under General B. O. Davis

FEB 7 1941

By Joseph January Jr.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kas. — For the first time since the World War, the nine existing troops of the Tenth Cavalry assembled last Saturday at the Fort Leavenworth garrison as the entire regiment was activated under the command of Lieut. Col. Paul R. Davidson. Ceremonies were held Saturday morning in the lower riding and the regiment was inspected and addressed by Brig.-Gen. Edmund L. Gruber, commandant.

It was a second celebration here for the Negro cavalry regiment as more than seventy-four years ago, on July 28, 1866, the tenth cavalry first was formed at this garrison. The regiment has participated in 28 engagements — against hostile Indians, in the Cuban campaign, in Philippine service and the expedition into Mexico in 1916.

To Riley in June

As three troops had been placed on the inactive list at the close of the World war, the units Saturday were re-organized. In 13 weeks, however, it is to be at full strength and ready to move into the field for extended maneuvers.

Officials do not expect the regiment to move to Ft. Riley until June as quarters are not ready for them and extended field service is scheduled before reporting to that garrison. FEB 7 1941

And with the activation, machinery was set in motion to raise the regiment from its present strength of approximately 330 men to a war strength of 1,378 men. Under present plans, Colonel Davison said yesterday, the regiment will reach war strength by the end of March with the addition of selective service trainees to be called to the colors during February and March.

To Ship in Horses

So the picture at the recruit reception center, Fort Leavenworth, will change somewhat in the coming two months. Instead of processing all of the trainees and sending them out after about five days' stay at the garrison, a large number of the colored trainees will be processed and sent immediately to the command of the tenth cavalry for their year's service.

And in addition to the increase in men necessary to bring the regiment to full strength, a large number of animals will be needed to equip the organization. Between 800 and 1,000 horses will be brought to Fort Leavenworth during the coming week from the army remount depot at Fort Robinson, Neb. The shipments—10 cars of 20 horses each—began arriving at 48-hour intervals starting Wednesday.

Arrived From West Point

The skeletonized second squadron and a machine-gun troop of the tenth cavalry, for several years on detached service at the U. S. Army Military academy, West Point, N. Y., have already arrived at Fort Leavenworth by train. Many families are arriving daily in motor cars. Troop F, stationed at Fort Myer, Va., since 1931, is expected to join the remainder of the regiment within a few days. Many families are expected to join the soldiers soon also.

Negro Soldiers Assume Fire Department Duty

APR 20 1941

Final civilian-operated service at Camp Wheeler—the fire department—was taken over by the Army yesterday as the construction work practically ended.

Under orders of Major W. P. Kennard, constructing quartermaster, several hundred construction employes were laid off last night and only a small group will be retained to complete odd jobs.

The white civilian firemen also were released and 63 Negro soldiers were installed in the three fire stations.

BEING TRAINED

It is understood that Negro soldiers will man the fire departments of other military camps in Georgia soon.

The soldiers were chosen from a service detachment which arrived here several days ago from Fort Benning and they are being trained by the white fire departments heads, picked for the jobs by the civil service boards several weeks ago.

APR 20 1941

Capt. Barney L. Bickley of the constructing quartermaster's staff left yesterday for Augusta where he will go on duty at an airport project. Many of the other officers of the constructing quartermaster have left for other posts recently and Major Kennard is expecting a transfer order soon.

During the construction period three shifts of firemen were employed, each shift working eight hours daily.

Under the Army plan there will be only two shifts with firemen being on duty for 24 hours and off duty for 24 hours. During the peak of construction a total of about 125 firemen was employed.

PEEL LEAVES

The permanent plan calls for a fire chief, two assistants, eight inspectors and 61 firemen. The firemen have ratings from first class private to staff sergeant, with pay ranging around $70 per month.

Chief John T. Peel, who headed the department during the construction period left yesterday for his home in Atlanta.

Chief J. B. Bruner is the permanent chief, having been appointed by the civil service board. The two assistants are A. D. Maynard and Homer Price. In addition to the chiefs there are six white fire inspectors. Also there are two Negro fire inspectors.

During the construction period an unusual record was established for fire safety. During the entire time of construction of the $10,000,000 Army camp there was no fire insurance claim. The blazes were inconsequential.

ARRANGE DANCE SATURDAY FOR NEGRO SOLDIERS

OCT 26 1941

"A Night for Soldiers" ball will be sponsored by Ald. Earl B. Dickerson [2d] Saturday evening in the 8th regiment armory, 35th street and Giles avenue. The purpose, said the alderman, is "to express the interest of local citizens in the welfare of the Negro boys in camp in the Chicago area."

Five thousand are expected to attend the show. Admission will be a pack of cigarets, a tube of tooth paste, a tooth brush, or a box of stationery. These contributions will be sent to Negroes at Fort Custer and camps at Chanute, Rantoul, Savannah, and Proving Ground, Ill. Five hundred soldiers from these camps will be present.

OCT 26 1941

Hostesses will be 300 local young women who have volunteered their services. Making arrangements for the program is the South Central Recreation committee, headed by W. Ellis Stewart, chairman; John Johnson, and Joseph Jefferson. For the patriotic ceremony, music will be supplied by Giles post of the American Legion, of which Ald. Dickerson is first commander, and the colors will be posted by a local Boy Scout troop.

Seeing Them At Camp Wheeler

MAY 1 - 1941

While it is generally known from the fame and fame of the old 24th Infantry and the 9th Cavalry that the colored group is widely represented at Fort Benning, the largest infantry school in the world, it is not so plain that there are some seven hundred ored soldiers quartered at Camp Wheeler near Macon, Ga.

Here is a rousing, lusty set. Fine stalwart young men from every quarter of the country. Many of them betray excellent educational opportunities, while there are those whose language and general presentments will tell you that they have known and felt every sting of poverty, privation and illiteracy.

MAY 1 - 1941

War today is not the crude bush war of yesterday. No more can a group or groups of men be gathered from the ranks, drilled in a few commands, given a little skill in marksmanship and turned into the ranks as finished soldiers. War has taken on a mechanization, calling for skill, learning and the keen flexibility for modern adjustments. These are not forthcoming where men are thusly gathered without the rudiments of skill or practical education.

It is costing the government billions in an attempt to begin so far down the scale for approaching the technique of modern army training.

These boys after receiving the training the camp will afford will not only strengthen the nation's defense but will be better citizens when their retirement is completed.

4,000 Negro Soldiers In Parade At Fort Belvoir

MAY 1 1 1941

FORT BELVOIR, Va.—(ANP)—The full complement of Negro troops encamped in this engineer training camp took part in the full dress parade staged Saturday morning in honor of the new commanding officer, Brig. Gen. E. H. Marks.

Three battalions of the colored troops in the parade had had only three weeks of training. But to the average observer, the new men appeared as polished as the two regular army battalions leading the review. Fully 13,000 men were in the mass event of which some 4,000 were colored.

Following the review, Gen. Marks commented: "These men are better than the draftees I commanded during the World war." Hundreds of cars lined the Richmond-Washington highway to watch the review in addition to those parked in the alloted spaces.

The colored troops received special praise from the onlookers as they swept through the maneuvers without a single hitch in their formations.

War Dep't Aide Assails Bigotry at Negro Parley

NOV 18 1941

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Brig. General Frederick H. Osborn, Chief of the War Department's Morale Division, urged unity of all racial and religious groups in an informal talk before a special meeting of the Board of the National Negro Congress which concluded here yesterday.

General Osborn was one of a More than 200 persons, including number of Administration officials government officials and leaders in and leaders invited to sit in on the community life from several states meeting, regarded by officials of the attend the meeting.

Congress as the most important in Sixty-two Congress officials in- the history of the organization, cluding Board members, from nine states and the District of Columbia came to Washington for the all-day session, which was held at the Twelfth Street YMCA. They came from Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Virginia, Illinois and Texas.

The purpose of the meeting was to express their full support of a new national policy formulated by the organization's National Board, the crux of which was stated in a telegram ordered sent to President Roosevelt which said: "We pledge full support to your foreign policy and our government's program of National Defense, and will give every effort to support the fight to preserve our country's independence even if it means giving our lives."

The informal talk made by General Osborn was an unscheduled speech that came in the midst of the morning session of the Board meeting.

Making it clear that he did not speak as a government official, but as "a fellow citizen," Osborn said:

"I appreciated the offer to be allowed to speak because I am moved to speak for a special reason. That reason is: Like other officials of the government I was invited to sit in with you on your deliberations at this Board meeting in order to listen and help you to help us get done the job we have to do. Because I did not accept your kind invitation, I can now speak to you as a fellow citizen.

URGES NATIONAL UNITY

"One of the things that moved me as I sat in this meeting is the thought that in all of Europe we could not hold such a meeting as this, where fellow citizens may discuss our own lives, our future.

"Our enemies say our country must be divided because it is made up of Jews, Catholics, Methodists and other religious groups. They say we should be divided because we are made up of Indians, Negroes and members of various foreign-born groups. Our enemies are very wrong when they say these things because as this meeting shows, the very difference of these groups is our greatest source of strength."

Pointing out that the development of opportunity for religious and racial groups was a step toward development of higher national unity, Gen. Osborn said:

"But racial or religious groups are not the last steps in this development. The larger and more important step is to become a part of the whole group, the nation. The final group that I want you to understand that we are striving for today to keep is all humanity."

"I am glad that I came and that I feel a part, with you, of this great thing that you are trying to do here today. This is the thing that all of us must do if we are to save our country."

John P. Davis, Secretary of the National Negro Congress, summed up the policy of the Congress in the light of the changed international situation in his administrative report. This report said in part:

"The Anglo-American mission to the Soviet Union, with the practical consequences flowing from this mission; the repeal of our Neutrality law; the Lend-Lease Act; the development of America's military defense program; the organization of the civilian life of America and the gearing of our great industrial machine to the defense needs of our country—are all vital and necessary answers to the menace of the Hitler tyranny which must have the support of all Americans.

"This is our government's plan for the destruction of the menace to American security. We may seek to see that plan strengthened, or more firmly administered, but to fail to give it our full support would be treason. And it is in the light of the word (treason) that we must view the words and deeds of the appeaser groups in this country headed by the America First Committee, who look on a Hitler victory as an accomplished and welcome fact.

"The Negro people, like other Americans, have a deep stake in the defeat of Hitler and Hitlerism. Indeed the compelling motives which bring us into this struggle are even sterner and stronger than those which impel any other section of America. The reasons for this are plain and clear. Our very survival as a people . . . is threatened by the enslaving force of Hitlerism. We are in a fight for our lives."

Expressing the deep feeling of unity behind the government's program for defending America, Dr. Max Yergan President of the Congress, concluded the meeting with these words:

"This meeting marks a new day in the history of the National Negro Congress. We have committed ourselves to the national welfare, to the principle of developing through this, the welfare of our people. We are determined to live up to these commitments and to play the historic role which it is ours to play in the history of our people, in the history of our nation."

Administration officials who attended the meeting in addition to General Osborn included: Addison Walker, representing Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Ralph Bard; Major J. R. Smith, representing Under Secretary of War, Robert Patterson; Captain Rankin Boone, and Lt. William Wagoner, both of the received definite promises from Britain and the United States to defend the Burma Road.

"The whole trend of United States ministration; Alfred E. Smith, Fedand British policy has been mani- eral Works Projects Administration; fest in some of their recent actions," Harry McAlpin, representing Mrs. he said. "I do not think we need to Mary McCleod Bethune, of the Nadraw underline and underscore them." tional Youth Administration.

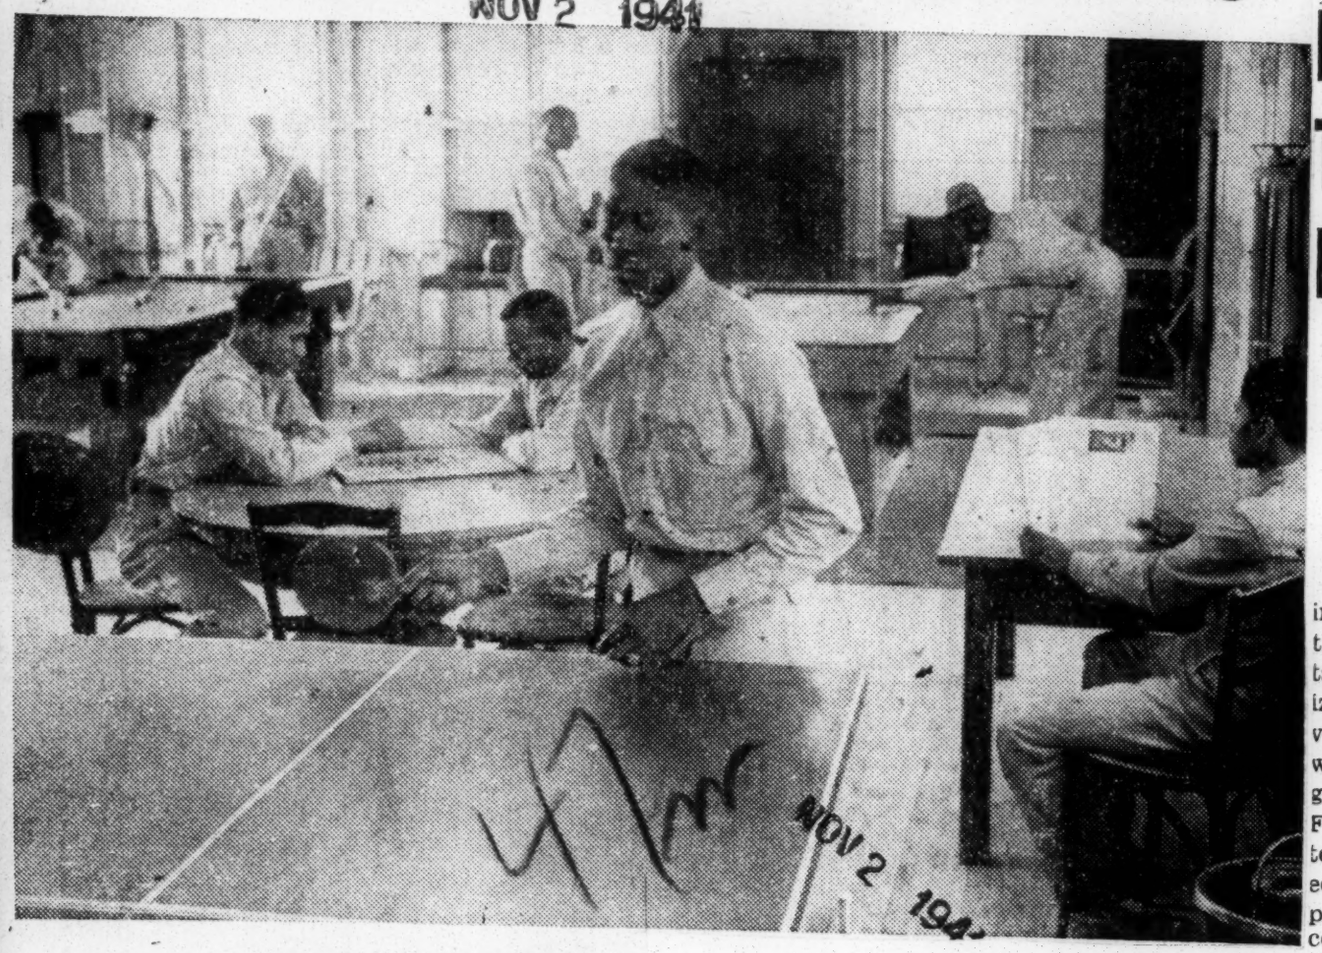
They're Enjoying Recreation At Benning

NOV 2 1941



A wide variety of recreational facilities are offered soldiers at Fort Benning, Ga., during their off hours. The picture shows one of the recreation rooms of the 24th Infantry Regiment. At the time the photographer snapped this shot, two soldiers were playing ping-pong, two were engaged in a game of Chinese checkers, four were playing billiards, and one was reading the latest issue of a national magazine. Outdoor athletic facilities are available for nearly every type of sport, including baseball soft ball, basketball, track, volleyball, boxing and swimming.—(Photo by 161st Signal Photographic Company.)

High Morale of 184th FA Attributed to Hard Work

DEC 6 - 1941

FORT CUSTER, Mich.—Credit for the high morale of members of the 184th Field Artillery Regiment stationed here was attributed to months of application and hard work far beyond normal requirements by Col. Anderson F. Pitts, commanding officer of the unit, this week.

The priceless heritage left the unit by the old 8th Illinois National Guard and the regiment's approach to the problem of full opportunity for colored in all things military, being based on efficiency, have been the motivating forces, he said.

Make Own Fun

There being no facilities for the entertainment in nearby Battle Creek, the members of the unit built their own Service Club there that they now maintain without being a burden to civil authorities.

DEC 6 - 1941

Col. Pitts has pointed out that such incidents as occurred at Fort Bragg and as have been reported at other camps do not and will not occur at Fort Custer because non-military details which are behind such are worked out carefully beforehand.

Men Given a Charge

"When our battalion went South on maneuvers, every man was told that the military future of fifteen million colored Americans depended on what he did in the South. Each man was charged with the responsibility of proving that colored troops under colored leadership make the best colored units in the army," Col. Pitts stated.

The unit made a splendid record while functioning with the Fifth Division, Sixth Division, Seventh Corps, Sixth Corps and Second Army.

New MP Force To Be One Of Finest, He Says

Commander Is Interviewed By Private

NOV 29 1941

By PVT. WALTER J. McLEAN

FORT BRAGG, N. C.—Following the official announcement that a permanent colored military police force is being organized here, I was granted an interview with Brigadier General Edwin P. Parker, Jr., commanding general of Fort Bragg and the Field Artillery Replacement Center. General Parker was appointed by President Roosevelt to his present rank, from the rank of colonel, only a few days before this interview.

General Parker, a plain-spoken but modest native of Virginia, has been an officer in the artillery since 1911. He is recognized as an outstanding authority on the organization and management of replacement centers.

In his first official statement on the new colored MP force at Fort Bragg, the commanding officer said that the force would consist of all colored units. New recruits at the Reception Center here will be interviewed to find whether they have had experience in that field in civilian life.

He said that the selection would be somewhat slow, in order to insure a competent force. He further stated that the new MP force would be one of the best in the Army when it is completely organized.

The men will be trained to keep peace with a minimum of force In a recent address to a combined group of white and colored MP's, General Parker said, "My policy is to try first to handle men in a diplomatic and courteous manner, with a minimum of force. If that doesn't work, then use force. I think the entire Military Police force here can get fine results by using that policy."

COLORED TROOPS COMPLIMENTED

NOV 29 194

When asked his opinion of the efficiency and training spirit of the colored troops at Fort Bragg, the General was enthusiastic in stating that he was very well pleased with the spirit shown by the colored soldiers.

"In particular, I would like to compliment the 16th Battalion for having a minimum of trouble," he said. "They show the results of good training. A minimum of discipline has been needed in this unit."

The General continued with reference to recent improvements in the 16th Battalion of the Field Artillery Replacement Center. The major project in that area, he pointed out, is the construction of a gigantic all-purpose athletic field.

Contrary to usual military routine—the officer making suggestions to the enlisted man—the writer, a private, was asked for suggestions on how to improve conditions for the colored troops of Fort Bragg.

NOV 29 194

SUGGESTIONS OFFERED

The following suggestions were offered: (1) the appointment of students, recommended by the bureau of Fayetteville State Teachers College, to manage and operate the 16th Battalion's post exchange, replacing the present white staff; (2) the addition of colored attendants to the staff of the South Theatre, which serves troops of both races; and (3) the purchase of a bus for use of the 16th Battalion troops for more prompt transportation.

General Parker said that he had conferred with the post exchange officer, advising similar provisions be employed. He would accept the second suggestion immediately, he said, and would add several colored soldiers to the staff of the theater. He is personally investigating the transportation problem, he said. The idea of purchasing busses has been considered and is expected to materialize soon.

NOV 29 1941

General Parker, who has been given temporary command of Fort Bragg in addition to the command of the Field Artillery Replacement Center, is a popular figure here among the FARC's colored trainees, since he has had closer contact with them than with the other colored units of the post.

He has been lauded by President Roosevelt for his job in converting the once desert-like terrain into the present ultra-modern encampment.

SOUTH OBJECTS TO REGIMENT BEING STATIONED NEAR RESORT

Information Hints that Galveston Whites Used Influence to Have 54th Coast Artillery Unit Transferred to North Carolina.

BULLETIN!
APR 26 1941

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 24—The War Department, acting through Judge William Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary, is investigating the reports from The Courier's Texas correspondent that pressure of Galveston whites forced the moving of colored troops stationed at Camp Wallace to Camp Davis in North Carolina.

GALVESTON, Tex., April 24.—War Department orders have been issued transferring the 54th Coast Artillery Regiment of colored troops stationed at Camp Wallace, Hitchcock, Tex., to Camp Davis, Hollyridge, N.C. The announcement of the transfer is causing much discussion because of the "jim-crow" issue raised in certain circles which reports that the War Office submitted to pressure from Galveston city officials and socialites.

It is claimed the whites asked for the removal of the race troops because they were a menace to the beaches and the social prestige of this Southern resort mecca that annually attracts hundreds of the South's social leaders during the summer months.

The apparent capitulation of the War Department to race prejudice raises a serious issue and civic leaders are planning a national protest if the charges are substantiated. APR 26 1941

Camp Wallace, with some 2,000 colored troops, offered many unusual advantages for the training of an artillery unit. Its mild weather and nearness to the Gulf of Mexico offered ideal practice facilities for year-round training.

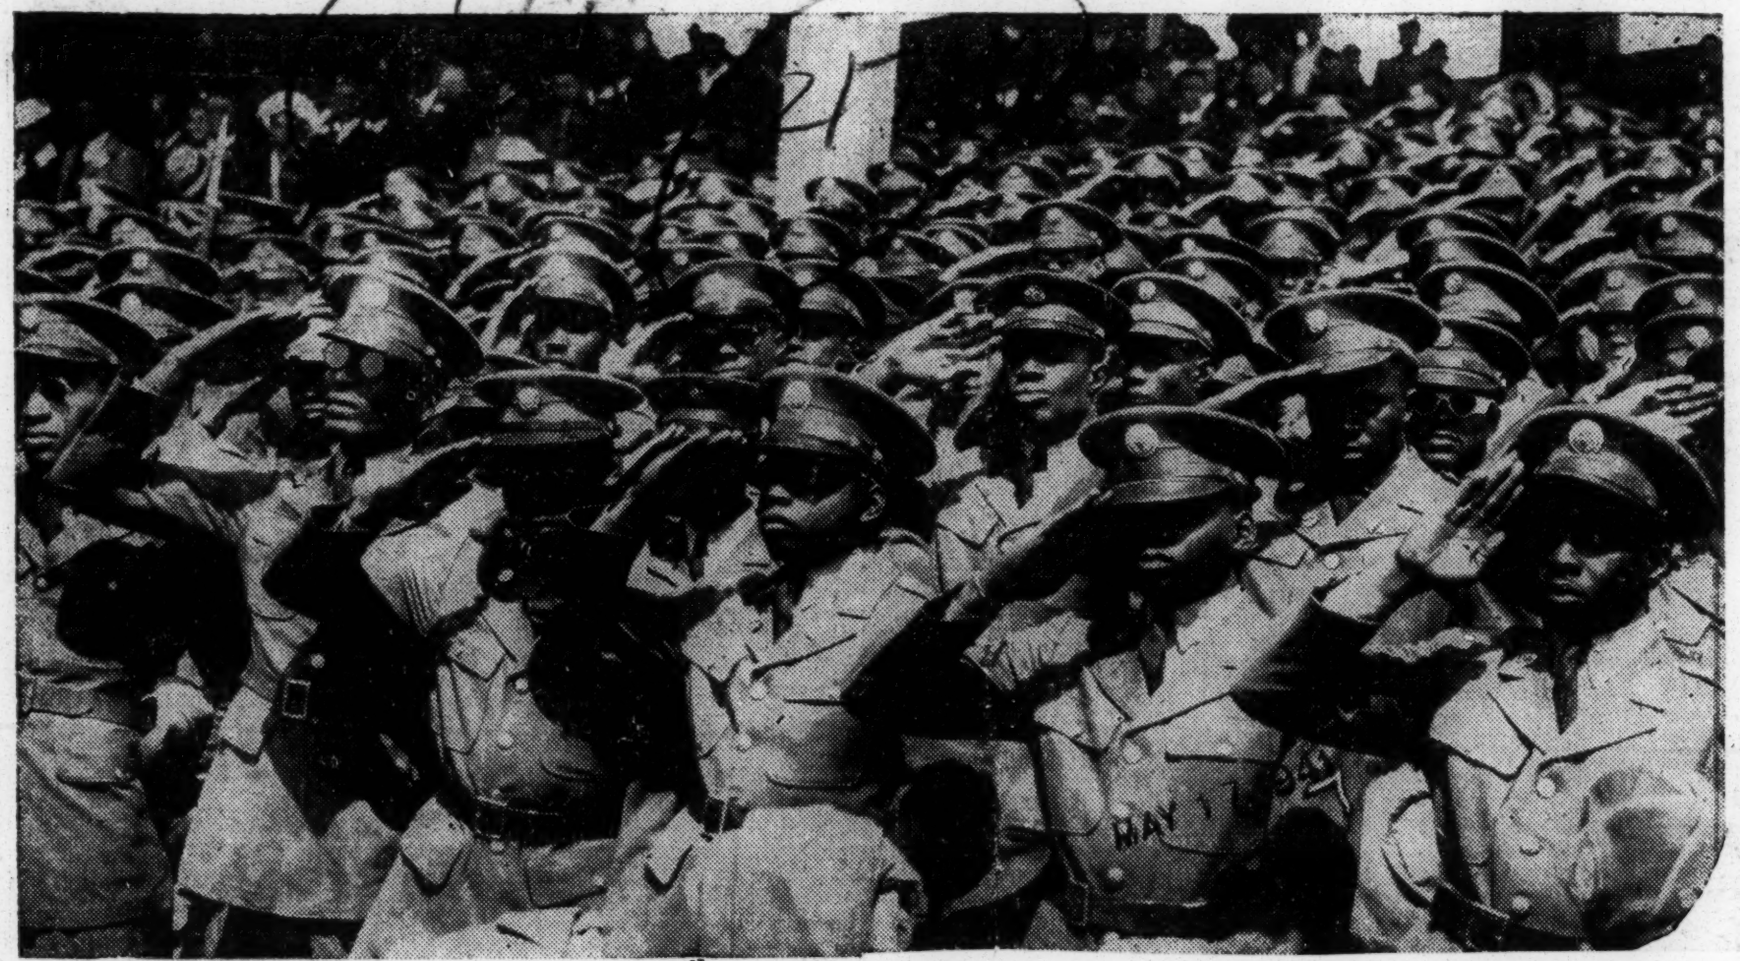
They're In Uncle Sam's Army For Defense And Proud, Too!



A patriotic picture was made in Newark, N. J., recently when members of the 372nd Infantry, Fort Dix, snapped to salute during the flag ceremony of the opening game of the Negro National Baseball League. The soldiers attended the game en masse as guests of the management and saw the Cuban Stars defeat the Newark Eagles, 10-7. Increasingly, throughout the country such scenes as the above can be duplicated by brave and faithful black sons of American, proud and ready to defend the "land of the free and the home of the brave" of which we so proudly boast.—(Newark Star-Ledger Photos.)

RACE ISSUE SCORED IN HAWAII STEVEDORE PLAN

Savannah Journal - Savannah Ga.

APR 26 1941

General Short Blamed For Raising Question

NEW YORK CITY—(S N S)—A protest against the injection of the race issue into a plan by the War department to send a labor battalion to Honolulu, T.H., was voiced in a letter to Secretary of War Stimson by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP protested against a statement of Lt. General Walter Short which seemed to emphasize and express regret for the proposed plan of the War department to send 600 members of a Negro labor battalion to Honolulu to handle Army and Navy cargo.

The NAACP cited clippings from Honolulu newspapers indicating that civic organizations had taken the cue from Lt. General Short and had filed protests on the basis of race.

APR 26 1941

Union labor representatives in Honolulu, however, were reported in Honolulu papers as issuing the following statement:

"It should be clear that we resent the explanation of Lt. General Walter Short, commanding the Hawaiian department of the Army, for its implications that our protest is because Negro laborers are the soldiers involved. Our protest has no racial connotation whatsoever; it is against all forced or militarized labd. The general seems to say that he is sorry it is necessary to bring Negro workers. If workers are needed we would welcome Negroes as we would all races, creeds and colors."

The NAACP letter to Secretary Stimson also protested the sending of military labor battalions to compete with civilian labor unless it is demonstrated that there is a shortage of labor in the area concerned.

Seven New Buildings To Go Up For 366th At Fort Devens

Theatre, Chapel and Hostess House Included in Construction

FORT DEVENS, Mass.—(SNS)—Construction of seven new buildings for the 366th Infantry at an approximate cost of $167,000 has been authorized by the War Department, it was announced today by Major L. Warner, construction quartermaster.

The buildings authorized include: Theatre, 143x56 feet, seating 600, to cost $59,000; Hostess House, 43 x42 feet, room for 7 guests to cost $6,000; Officers' Club, 120 x 37 feet, estimated cost $23,000; Enlisted Mens' Club, 120 x 37 feet, estimated cost $38,000; Chapel, 95 x 37 feet, seating 300, to cost $23,000; Motor Repair Shop, 84 x 37 feet, to cost $10,000 and 2 -500 Gallon capacity Gasoline Pumps, to cost $8,000.

These new buildings are part of the more than 50 buildings to be constructed at Fort Devins under an $870,000 program recently announced by Lieut. Colonel S. W. McIlwain, chief of all quartermaster construction in the New England states. Construction will start in June and all except the Chapel completed in September. The chapel will be completed in October. The contracts for the construction of all buildings will be let on a limp sum basis.

ENLISTEDM EN IN CHARGS OF THEATRE

Five enlisted men wer selected to assist in the opration of th 366th Infantry Theatre, officially designated as Theatre No. 5, on May 7th.

On May 16, Master Sergeant Purvis, took over duties as theatre manager. Master Sergeant Purvis, and Sergeant Payne came to the 366th Infantry from the 24th Infantry while the other enlisted men are from the group of selectees who recently arrived here.

A janitor and an usher are yet to be selected. For performing these extra duties they will receive extra pay varying from $11 down to $3 per week according to the responsibility o the duties performen.

The general public, particularly lovers of singing, are cordially invited to attend the community song service at Friendship Baptist Church tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock, which will be conducted by Prof. W. Laurence James, well known faculty member of Spelman College's music department.

This service has been a monthly feature of the church's program, which is proving its merit by the growing attendance each month The program will consist of familiar sacred songs, spirituals and other appropriate selections. Perhaps Prof. James will talk briefly or present a surprise number, as he has done at times in the past.

The public is cordially invited to this service. Dr. E. R. Carter is the pastor of the church.

TO TRANSFER TROOPS OUT OF CAMP WALLACE

MAY 10 1941

War Secretary Stimson Bows Before Demands Of Texas Jim Crow

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The greater part of the Negro troops stationed at Camp Wallace, Hitchcock will be transferred shortly to other sections of the country.

The removal of the Negro troops from the training center will be undertaken because of the complaint of a leading Galveston businessman.

Decision to move the Negro troops was "reluctant," Secretary of War Henry Stimson told an interested Texas Congressman, it was learned.

The complainant said that "our beach front is small and quite heavily populated during the summer months with Texas and Oklahoma people" and that the "addition of a large number of Negroes would create a difficult situation."

Stimson's Views

To this, Secretary Stimson replied: "I have looked into the matter of the assignment of Negro troops to Camp Wallace. In view of the exceptional conditions which exist in the Galveston area, the War Department is now planning to move the greater part of those troops elsewhere. Frankly, we have been reluctant to take this action, not only because of the additional expense which must be incurred, but also because our problems in connection with the utilization of Negro manpower are become acute.

"The Selective Training and Service Act necessitates the acceptance of men for training without regard to race or color. Other provisions therein require the acceptance of volunteers irrespective of race or color.

MAY 10 1941

"The current policies of the War Department for handling its Negro personnel have been gradually involved over a period of many years and represent the considered judgment of many officials . . . . One of these policies requires that there be Negro units in each major arm or service.

"Situations comparable to that at Camp Wallace exist through the south. On the whole, the War Department is receiving from officials of all the southern states wholehearted co-operation in arriving at a solution to this very perplexing problem. The personal feelings of practically all concerned have been submerged to the greater needs of national defense.

MAY 10 1941

"The reasons for originally placing Negro troops at Camp Wallace may be summarized as follows:

"A camp in southern Texas permits year round training under favorable weather conditions.

"The 54th Coast Artillery is designated to function tactically as a mobile coast defense organization. It is armed with 155 millimeter guns having a range greater than 18,000 yards. To carry out its main mission, that of firing at naval targets, it must be given practice at firing over water at long ranges. This can only be done with safety in areas where shipping will not be endangered. Camp Wallace is ideally situated for this purpose."

41st Engineers In First Anniversary

FORT BRAGG, N. C.—(ANP) Forty-first Engineer regiment, the first colored engineer organization to be activated under the present emergency expansion program, celebrated its first anniversary Friday with a full day's program of activities.

The "Singing Engineers", a name given them by those who have witnessed them singing as they march, started the day with a review before Maj. Gen Jacob L. Devers, who is leaving Fort Bragg to take over his new duties at Fort Knox, as chief of the nation's armored forces. After the review recognition was given the organizations within the regiment which have excelled in various phases of training, including internal economy, rifle marksmanship, combat efficiency, engineer efficiency, and athletics.

A highlight of the review was the presentation of commissions to honorary officers who have shown much interest in the growth of the 41st Engineers during the past year. Lt. Col. John E. Wood, commanding officer since its activation last August 1, presented commissions of honorary colonel to Maj. Gen. Devers and Col. Hamilton Fish, who spent much time with the regiment on his recent tour of duty at Fort Bragg.

Commissions of honorary major were presented to Ben Dixon MacNeill, Raleigh newspaperman, T. T. Betts, district engineer of the state highway and public works commission, and Maj. John Murphy, post executive of Fort Bragg.

The remainder of the day was spent with athletic contests, a picnic and regimental dance, with guests from all over North Carolina in attendance.

5,000 SOLDIERS IN THREE REGIMENTS HANDLE BIG GUNS

CAMP LIVINGSTON, La., Aug. 7—In training under the command of Brigadier General George H. Paine, the 46th Field Artillery Brigade is the largest single unit of Negro soldiers in the United States Army. The only other brigade of Negro soldiers at the present time is the Fourth Cavalry Brigade at Fort Riley. It is appreciably smaller than the 46th, consisting of two regiments as compared with the three regiments in the artillery unit.

There are 5,000 soldiers in the 46th Brigade. The three regiments which compose it are the 350th, the 351st and the 353rd.

TRAINING SOLDIERS TO HANDLE BIG GUNS

These soldiers are being trained to handle the big guns in the United States army, consisting of 155 millimeter howitzers and 155 millimeter guns. There are also given some training in the handling of 75's.

Loosely, there are about 25 millimeters to the inch. That means that a shell for a 155 millimeter howitzer or gun is about six inches in diameter. It weighs 96 pounds.

The difference between the howitzer and the gun of the same caliber is a difference in barrel length and use. The howitzer has a short barrel, probably not more than six feet in length. It is what is called an enfilading weapon; that is, one which you can place behind a hill and use to "lobe" shells over the hill and drop them on the enemy in the valley below. The 155 millimeter gun, with a barrel about 16 feet long is used for distance. The howitzer is effective at about seven and one-half miles. The gun of the same caliber is effective at twelve miles. The gun shoots straight and the howitzer shoots up in the air, if necessary, covers a sharply arched trajectory, and drops on the foe.

The 350th Regiment, commanded by Col. G. T. M. Oliphant, and the 358th Regiment, commanded by Lt. Col. S. E. Kiser, are being trained to handle howitzers. The 353rd Regiment, commanded by Lt. Col. Orva E. Beezley, is being trained in the use of guns.

ARTILLERY BRIGADE IS A TACTICAL UNIT

The 46th Field Artillery Brigade is a tactical unit, as are the regimental units of which it is composed. That is to say, they are permanently organized units which train for war. There are several thousand Negro soldiers in battalions in artillery replacement centers. These men are trained to fill gaps in existing artillery tactical units or to form new tactical units.

Negroes have complained because, in past wars, few of them were assigned to artillery units. There was the suspicion that somebody thought that artillery training was too difficult for Negroes. Of course, that was a slander. It doesn't take a West Point graduate to handle the big guns efficiently, not even a college graduate.

The average soldiers needs no more to learn how to operate a six-inch cannon than he does to operate a 10-wheel drive truck.

TAKES ONE GUN AND ONE PROBLEM

Let's, if we can, see how it's done and what the boys of the 46th Brigade are doing. For purposes of illustration, we'll take one gun and one problem.

The commander of a howitzer unit will tell a subordinate officer in charge of a battery that he wants hell knocked out of a point beyond a hill about six miles distant. The battery commander, who is a commissioned officer, will detail the job of actual firing to a gun section commander, usually a lieutenant.

A scout, usually a commissioned officer, is sent ahead to a point where he can see the target. He is called a fire observer. He selects another point some distance from the target to form the base of a triangle of which the gun itself forms the apex.

This triangle then becomes a segment in a circle and the base of the triangle an arc on the circumference of a circle. There are 360 degrees in a circle, but the army doesn't use degrees. It uses mils. It divides the circle into 6400 mils, based on horizontal or azimuth range. This may read all technical, but it really isn't. The battery commander, if he needs one, is supplied with a book of tables in which the sighting of the big guns is worked out for all ranges, with due allowance made for atmospheric conditions and wind stress.

The first thing the battery commander does is to take a trial shot, called finding the range. He usually misses. The observer, some distance ahead, tells him how far he has missed, whether he has shot to the right or left of the target or before it or beyond it.

If he has shot beyong the target, the battery commander lowers the elevation of the gun muzzle by so many degrees. If he has shot to the right or to the left, he changes the range so many mills. This is kept up until the target is hit. He may consult his book to find what changes he should make or he may simply use his common sense.

The job is no different from that of firing a rifle. If a rifleman shoots too high, he lowers his sight and keeps on trying until he hits the target.

WHITES GIVE ORDERS; NEGROES DO THE WORK!

The battery commander or the man who conducts the firing is usually a captain. His orders are given to a telephone operator, who is just an ordinary colored soldier trained in the use of the field telephone. This telephone operator transmits the order to the central telephone exchange of the unit and from there it is transmitted to the telephone operator working with the special gun section denoted, under the command of a lieutenant. The gun section commander gives the orders to the members of the gun crew. Their job is to adjust the gun according to orders, to load it and to fire it.

The men who give the orders are the commissioned officers. In the 46th Brigade, the officers are all white. The men who do the work, carry out the orders, are the soldiers, privates and non-commissioned officers. They carry out the orders and do the work. There are ordinarily 11 men who work with the gun, exclusive of telephone operators.

One colonel, commenting on the claim that it was necessary for artillerymen to have considerable scholastic training, said: "I don't give a damn whether they can read or write. If they can understand orders and if they'll stick by their guns, that's enough for me."

In the language of the street, this colonel had something. The colored boys in the 46th Brigade and other artillery units noted, relish their work with the big guns. Far from being afraid of them, they take up the work eagerly and enthusiastically. They are gluttons for orders to be carried out. They give one the impression that although the officers giving the orders may be telephone distance away when the enemy attempts to put their gun out of action, they are going to stick as long as the gun lasts although they can't see the result of their work over the hill.

In years past, the infantry has found cause to complain that the artillery did not keep up with it.

But you can bet your bottom dollar that if an area is plotted for the fire of the 46th Brigade or any gun section in it, both the enemy and the infantry will know that hell has broken loose and there'll be no freezing until the orders come from headquarters.

Kansas Boys in 67th Batalion at Camp Wolters Bring in Top Honors

CAMP WOLTERS, TEXAS.—Company A, 67th battalion, has completed its seventh week of training at this Infantry Training center and now will start on the eighth week in which, the firing, tactics and nomenclature of the 81-millimeter mortar undergo its tests. In the past seven weeks we have studied and fired the Springfield rifle, Garand semi-automatic rifle, Browning automatic rifle, .45-cal. automatic pistol, the 30-cal. Browning machine gun and use of the bayonet and hand grenade.

The 67th battalion is a heavy weapons group whose work is to fire the heavier weapons, such as the 30-cal. machine gun, the 50-cal. machine gun, which is used to fire on tanks and other armored vehicles, as this gun's bullets are armor-piercing. The 81-millimeter mortar is a weapon that fires a shell over hills and places that a flat trajetory weapon cannot. The 45-cal. pistol is the side arm of the heavy weapons unit.

The first platoon is the only group of boys here from Kansas in the colored area. These boys have brought in top honors in nearly all phases of this training. They have won acclaim as being the leading platoon in Company A. The company as a whole won praise as ebing the best company in the 67th battalion. The 67th battalion won first place in the parade for the commanding general of the infantry. General Simpson, competing against 12 white battalions of the camp. Three weeks ago Paramount Newsreels took pictures of the 67th on parade, dubbing the 67th as "the singing 67th." Our parading song is: "God Bless America" and our marching song is, "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah."

The boys who have received promotions are: Leo D. Logan, from Leavenworth, who was appointed acting sergeant; Jack H. White, John O. Jones, Gilbert R. Moore and Henry Wiley Jr., who were appointed acting corporals until their traniing period is up, when they can be officially appointed regular non-coms. Cooks are: Ira C. Macdonald, Robert A. Williams, Leonard P. Butler, Cephas Glover.

Office clerks are: Merritt Gordon, Melvin Robinson, and George A. Russell. Riley J. Butler was appointed assistant supply sergeant and Sylvester P. Janis as company mechanic. James Tarrant was appointed softball captain.

Pistol marksmen are: Sylvester Whitmire, Cephas Glover, Leanord P. Butler, Floyd Smith, Edward McClelland, Gilbert R. Moore and Leroy Smith.

6 Recreation Areas For Negro Soldiers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Expansion of the permanent type United States Army Recreational Camps to provide week-end accommodations for an additional 3,300 service men, gives the Army capacity to care for 26,300 men at 39 permanent areas, the War Department announced this week.

The expansion program provides 11 new permanent areas, five of them for Negro troops. In addition, the number of recreational areas for day use only was inceased to four. Three months ago the only day-use area was at Poponesset Beach, Massachusetts.

The Army Recreation Areas for Negroes and the permanent capacity of each follows:

Anacostia Park, D. C., 500; Lincoln Beach, Louisiana, 500; Manhatan Beach, Fla. 500; Raleigh, N. C., 500; Kansas City, Mo., 300; St. Louis, Mo., 500.

Famed Cavalry Regiment Played Conspicuous Part in Many Campaigns—Commander Praises Troops.

FORT RILEY, Kas., Aug. 7. (ANP)—The crack 10th calvary, famous colored regiment now a part of the 2nd Calvary division at Camp Funston, observed its 75th anniversary Monday with a day's activity, which ranged from a mounted parade in the morning to a stage show at night.

Members of the regiment rode past their commanding officer, Col. Paul R. Davison at 9 o'clock to formally start the day's festivities. Then an assembly was held at the "Buffalo Stomp Grounds" where Col. Davison warned the troops that "the future may hold a good deal for this regiment."

He said that the streamers of the regimental standard may have the reading Africa, China, South America, Mexico or almost any place in the world embroidered on them in a very short time.

"That is the reason I have been pouring the training on this regiment," Col. Davison went on to say. "When we have to fight an enemy we want to be so tough, so hard and so well trained that we can talk about it afterwards."

The Shipp memorial medal was presented to Corporal John White, special weapon troop, for outstanding work in the regiment. Corporal White's home is in Perry, Iowa. The Shipp award was given the regiment by Mrs. Margaret Busbee Shipp, in memory of her husband, Lt. William Ewen Shipp. Lt. Shipp was killed in action while leading a platoon of the Tenth Calvary up San Juan hill in the Spanish-American war.

ORGANIZED IN 1866

The regiment was organized July 28, 1866, at Fort Leavenworth. In 1867, the Tenth consisted of a headquarters and 12 troops, all recruited. It was assigned to guarding the railroad extending westward, from hostile Indians.

The first battle of the regiment occurred near Ft. Mays, Kans., when a small detachment was attacked by a force of Indians. The troops were compelled to withdraw after inflicting heavy losses on the Indians.

The battle began an era of Indian warfare in Kansas and the west which lasted for 26 years. The regiment was known to the Indians as the "buffalo fighters" because the buffalo had been adopted as the regimental crest.

The Tenth cavalry took an active part in the Spanish-American war and was complimented by the President for its part in the campaign in Cuba.

In 1916 the regiment took part in the punitive expedition into Mexico after Pancho Villa, the notorious Mexican. The Tenth was on border patrol during the World War.

The regiment was reassembled at Ft. Leavenworth, February 1, 1941, and came to Fort Riley to become part of the Second Cavalry division March 14.

TROOPS WIN PRAISE IN OPELOUSA

OPELOUSA, La., Sept. 25 — (ANP)—The part of the newly formed 367th regiment stationed at the north end of the city for the month of September has won the unstinted admiration of Opelousa's white citizenry. Not one report of disturbance has been made by the citizens.

It can be accounted for when it it remembered that these troops, known as the 367th infantry which gained fame in France during the first World War as part of the 92nd division, harken to the tradition of the old regiment. The regiment's war time commander was the late Col. James A. Moss, former Lafayette, La., resident, who was killed in an auto accident in New York a few weeks after the reactivation of his old regiment. The regular army unit is now under command of Col. Ralph C. Holliday, former commandant of the Citadel, in Charleston, S. C., and is composed mostly of southern citizens.

The regiment was presented with its colors Saturday—the same as those carried during wartime by the old 367th. The regimental flag has two battle streamers for participation in the battles of Lorraine and in the Meuse-Argonne.

The Watchtower

By Roy Wilkins

EVERYONE and his brother is talking about the Negro in national defense and about employment, particularly. Every organization, from the Thursday Afternoon Social Club on up to the National Association for the advancement of Colored People, is talking about the same thing. Millions of words, like these, have been written about the topic. Most of us (and I believe rightly) have concerned ourselves with yelling about how we are treated. I do not think we ought to stop yelling, but I do think some attention should be given to just what must be done to get jobs.

Mr. Wilkins

There is no magic formula on getting a job. There is no trick to beating prejudice. It is an old story: Preparation for the job, nerve enough to apply for it, persistence in the face of refusal, and stubborn fighting, over and over again, until the barricades are beaten down and the job is won.

DEC 13 1941

All Negroes now concerned with national defense jobs should take heart from the story from Tulsa, Okla., revealed in the Amsterdam Star-News last week. The full story of Tulsa was not told. Today it is announced that 19 Negro carpenters are working on the construction of a new bomber plant there, and that Negroes are being trained in defense classes on the promise that they will be employed by the new plant when it opens, and by another airplane factory in the town.

But the story began more than a year ago—began with discouragement and insult. Oklahomans were told a few janitors would be employed, and maybe a truck driver or two. Defense training classes were shut tightly against the race. The great branch airplanes factories to be built in the Middle West to get them away from our vulnerable Pacific Coast were to be built by white labor.

Tulsa Folk Busy

In the face of this, Tulsa people got busy. They wrote, they interviewed, and they protested all last winter and spring. They battled on all fronts, against unions, against politicians, against employers, against traitorous Negroes. They took their case to Washington. They used diplomacy and they used slugging.

Last summer they helped Negro carpenters organize a union. When jobs were still refused, they fought on until last week when they finally got jobs for 19 men.

DEC 13 1941

At the same time they succeeded in opening up defense classes. They got a promise that Negroes will be employed in the plants. Now, when time comes to employ men it is quite likely that new obstacles will arise, but, as in the case of the carpenters, the Tulsa people will fight on until our men are actually on the job.

Only Two Negroes at Signal Corps Post Interested in Chemical Warfare

FORT MONMOUTH, RED BANK, N. J.—Although there are only two Negro soldiers stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J., the only signal corps post, both are non-commissioned officers and both are interested in chemical warfare.

Sgt. Theodore Espy, who comes from Fort Pierce, Fla., joined the army in December, 1940. A graduate of Lincoln university with an A.B. degree, he had been teaching sciences in Albany, Ga., up to the time he entered the army. Formerly attached to the 25th infantry, Fort Huachuca, Ariz., he came to Fort Monmouth June 30 and is now attached to the headquarters company, 15th signal service battalion. Sergeant Espy expects to be assigned to the chemical warfare school.

Corp. Toussaint L'O. Jennings, 27 years old, of Los Angeles, Cal., is a graduate of the Gas Defense school for non-commissioned officers, Fort Ord, Cal. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Smith C. Jennings, 2250 1-2 Cotner avenue, Sawtelle, Cal., he is a graduate of the Los Angeles City college where he majored in business administration.

Corporal Jennings, prior to enlisting on October 15, 1940, was a soloist at the San Pedro high school and surrounding churches. He was formerly heard on the Mutual-Don Lee network with the Fort Ord radio show and was manager and soloist of the 47th Quartermaster regiment, first battalion choir, Fort Ord, Cal.

Corp Jennings says he is now considering enlisting for three years as he likes the army very much and believes that in the expanding army his opportunities for advancement are good.

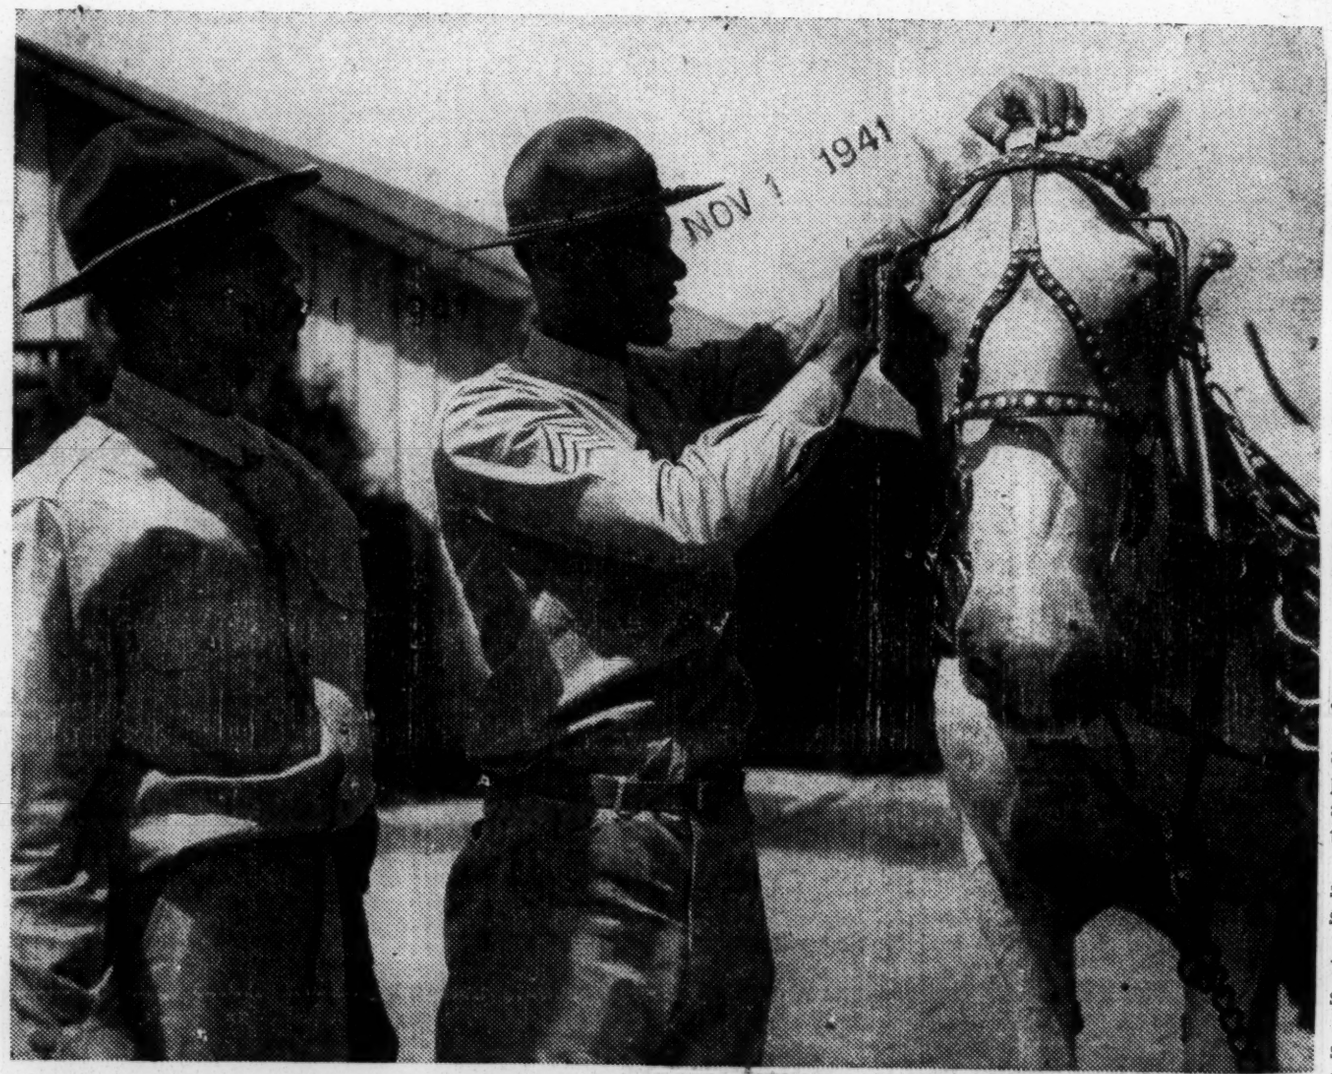
Horses Still Important In The Army



That horses are still useful and important in Uncle Sam's Army is shown by this picture taken at the Infantry School Stables, Fort Benning, Ga., where 300 draft and riding horses are kept. Soldiers, specially qualified by experience, operate the fine stables and train others in trades such as blacksmithing and leather working. When students become proficient in these trades, specialists' ratings are awarded, carrying extra pay. In this picture, Sgt. 200 NEGRO TROOPS JAILED AFTER ROW

BROWNWOOD, Tex., Nov. 2—(AP)—Two hundred Negro soldiers from Camp Bowie were jailed Saturday night after part of their number fought two officers who sought to quiet a disturbance in Brownwood's Negro section.

One Negro soldier was shot in the foot. Army authorities said the shooting was accidental. Peace officers said the soldiers took a pistol away from Constable Wayne Weems and injured him slightly.

Soldiers from the camp patroled the district after the disturbance was under control.

War Unites All U.S. to Crush Japs

With the entire nation united in an all-out war against the Japanese Empire, following that nation's "murder by surprise" attack on Hawaii and the Philippines, the seriousness of the job ahead becomes of paramount importance to colored Americans.

A large number of colored sailors were assigned to ships said to have been hit by Japanese bombs, namely the Oklahoma, West Virginia, an unnamed destroyer and an aircraft carrier.

There are also some colored sailors who left several months ago for duty with the naval reserve corps in what is now the war area. It will be quite some time before the Navy Department will be able to release a list of casualties and survivors.

Here at home, colored members of the various State Home Guards have been ordered to duty and air wardens have been ordered to be on the alert for drills and service twenty-four hours a day.

Heroes Against The Axis

DEC 13 1941

• On the long list of American military heroes—those famous and those little known—goes the name of Captain Colin Kelly, Jr., of Florida. It is he who gave his life as he dealt the 29,000 ton battleship Haruna a deadly blow by dumping his cargo of bombs into the ship at suicidal range.

Other airmen from the United States and several Filipino airmen have also distinguished themselves in the violent fighting off the coast of the Island of Luzon.

Tribute must be paid too to the gallant marines who, holding the island of Wake against fierce attacks, sunk a light cruiser and a destroyer belonging to the enemy.

American soldiers and sailors have displayed their valor in every past war. There is already evidence that the glorious feats of other years will even be surpassed in this war to annihilate fascism.

Negro Regiment First To Fire Big Weapons

NOV 16 1941

CAMP DAVIS, N. C.—(ANP)—The distinction of being the first anti-aircraft regiment to undertake the actual firing of the three-inch anti-aircraft guns went to the 100th Coast artillery regiment here Nov 3. Although they were the last of anti-aircraft regiments to receive their artillery, they were first to begin actual firing problems. Negro artillery regiments constitute about one-fourth of the troops stationed at this anti-aircraft artillery center.

Under the supervision of Sgt. Cutts, gun commander of the first crew to fire, Battery B Arrived at Sears landing, the firing point, and began firing about 11 a.m. Inspecting operations were Col. R. D. Brown, commanding the 19th Coast Artillery Training group, which consists of the 99th and the 100th; Lt. Col. James D. McMullen, commanding the 100th; and other regimental and battery officers.

The 19th Coast Artillery Training group was organized last spring and has consistentiy made rapid progress in training under Col. Brown's leadership The physical condition of the men has reached a stage where a 25-mile hike on a single day is a routine operation.

Relieve Gilbert Of Dix Command

DEC 22 1941

FORT DIX, N. J.—(ANP)—Following an unexpected field training inexpection of the 372nd Infantry regiment here last Saturday by high army officials, four top-ranking colored officers of the regiment were relieved of their assignments and Lt Colonel Edward O. Gourdin, of Olympic athletic fame, was made acting regimental commander.

Relieved from duty were Col. Howard C. Gilbert, Columbus, O., regimental commander; Lt. Col. Alexander R. Davis, Cambridge, Mass., executive officer; Capt. John F. Burrell, Columbus, O., regimental supply officer, and Capt. St. Elmo P. Henderson, Boston, regimental adjutant,—all of whom were placed on detached service at post headquarters.

The sudden change came about immediately after a group of white officers from the Second Corps area headquarters at Wilmington, Del., had arrived in camp. The present acting commander is a former Harvard university track star, holder of the world's record for broad jumping and intercollegiate and olympic champion in that event.

What Will Happen To The Negro If Hitler Wins?

DEC 13 1941

Editor's Note: The series of articles under the above caption, of which this is the first installment, was written prior to the United States' entry into the war with Japan. The attack upon our country by Japan, however, does not alter their meaning or purpose, since Hitler is the arch conspirator in the present world revolution, into which the United States has finally been forcibly drawn. The question posed by Mr. Owen is as pertinent today as it was prior to Japan's sudden and unprovoked attack.

By CHANDLER OWEN

WHEREVER Negroes assemble today a discussion of the war takes place. Who is winning? Who will eventually win? Whom do they prefer to see victors? Why the preference? Will the United States get into the war? When? If the answer is yes. And why not? if the answer is, no.

How will either course affect the Negro? What will be the Negro's status during the war? What will that status be following the war? What will it be, if the allies win? What will it be, if Hitler wins?

On these questions few are neutral, and few feel they are unprepared to give some answer. The average or mass group Negro is almost pro-Nazi. I don't know why I'm so cautious because he will frequently tell you, "Hitler is going to win and I wouldn't care if he came to America tomorrow." He says England is a promulgator of color prejudice. He says the United States shuts him out of the defense work, Jim-Crows him in the army, lynches him at will, disfranchises three-fourths of his race, discriminates against him on railroad trains in the South and bars him from most places of public amusement and accommodation—North and South — merely because of his color. Like the Irish, he doesn't care who beats Britain!

MORE BALANCED THINKING

The intelligent Negro is more balanced in his thinking. One group has a definite admiration for German efficiency, just like the American whites. It doesn't want to see Hitler win but it would like to see the two great white groups weaken each other by the fighting, just as many white persons would like, a la Hoover, to see Naziism and Communism destroy each other.

The more intelligent colored group, like the more intelligent Irish group, weighs the situation with poise and even temper. This group looks clearly at segregation, lynching, disfranchisement, denial of economic chance and wanton narrowing of opportunity. It says with the meliorist, "Conditions are bad, but they could be much worse,"—and it denies the thesis of the pessimist who says, "Things couldn't be any worse under Hitler."

It is to this group that the writer belongs and in the following article I shall very frankly examine the probable, or certain, consequences of a Hitler victory, as that triumph would affect the Negro in America and throughout the world.

THE NEGRO WORKER

Let us start with the Negro worker since the great majority of Negroes are working people with only a small capitalistic minority. For the most part the Negro is also an unskilled, unorganized worker, with a growing minority of organized workers. Under Hitler what would happen to those people, both organized and unorganized?

DEC 13 1941

Since all Negroes will readily agree that a white race has more chance under Hitler than the Negro, it is illuminating to observe what Hitler's regime did to the Czechs, a progressive, frugal, competent and enterprising white nationality.

Their labor unions were suppressed. Strikes were prohibited. The union treasuries were seized and expropriated. The utmost the Czech unions can do today is to make proposals about food and clothing, while those now dominated by Nazis, are primarily employed to suppress workers' movements for higher wages and better working conditions.

This means that the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the tens of thousands of Negroes in the United Mine Workers of America, the Negroes in the automobile, steel, rubber, packing, needle trades, janitors and transportation unions would be reduced to economic impotence.

WOULD TAKE 900,000 FARMS

The Negro business men and farmers would fare no better than the Negro workers. In the case of white nations invaded, Hitler has in the first hours of occupation seized the reserves of gold, foreign bills and currencies in the national banks. Then there follows a systematic confiscation of factories, banks and farms. In Czechoslovakia the Nazis have confiscated hundreds of thousands of acres of land, including country estates, forestries, saw-mills, distilleries, breweries, sugar factories, and other agricultural industries.

In America Hitler would take from Negroes their 900,000 farms of 41,000,000 acres (one-fourth the area of Germany) valued at more than one billion, six-hundred million dollars. The two million Negroes engaged in agriculture would be reduced to the same or a worse kind of slavery than that to which Czechs, Poles, Frenchmen, Dutch, Norwegians and Belgians have been subjected. The Negro Business League would be abolished. The funds of Negro insurance companies would be seized. Negro banks would be confiscated. In cities where Negroes have beautiful homes on fine boulevards, undesirable ghetto-like areas would be substituted in place of their better homes from which they would be driven

As for education in the United States, there are about 100 universities and colleges devoted exclusively to Negro education. In addition, hundreds of Negroes of means go to the finest American universities like Harvard, Columbia, Yale, Chicago and California. As to what the Negro status in the field of education would be can best be emphasized by quoting Hitler's own words in Mein Kampf.

HITLER'S OPINION OF THE NEGRO

Says he: "From time to time it is demonstrated to the German petty Bourgeois in illustrated periodicals that for the first time here or there, a Negro has become a lawyer, teacher, even clergyman, or even a leading opera tenor or something of that kind . . . The Jew knows very slyly how to construe from this a new proof of the correctness of his theory of the equality of men. It does not dawn upon this depraved bourgeois world that here one has actually to do with a sin against all reason: that it is a criminal absurdity to train a born half-ape until one believes a lawyer has been made of him; that it is a sin against the will of the Eternal Creator to let hundreds of thousands of His most talented beings degenerate in the proletarian swamp of today, while Hottentots and Zulu Kaffirs are trained for intellectual vocations. For it is training, exactly as that of a poodle, and not a scientific education. The same trouble and care applied to intelligent races, would fit each individual a thousand times better for the same achievements."

To my Negro readers let me emphasize that you re-read this excerpt from pages 639 and 640 of Hitler's Mein Kampf. You think Mississippi, South Carolina, Alabama and Georgia are bad, but Hitler would abolish education for Negroes entirely maintaining that it is as wasteful as having schools for "poodles" and "born half-apes." While holding no brief for Mississippi, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, those tates do provide hundreds of schools for Negroes and together they have about 30 universities and colleges for Negroes.

CLARK STRESSES NEGRO LOYALTY

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 22 — Dr. Felton G. Clark, appointed to co-ordinate work among Negroes in the state in connection with the United States civilian defense program, has called upon all Negro citizens of Louisiana to "play their usual part of loyalty in the present crisis."

"Governor Sam H. Jones and Mr. Roland Cocreham, who are respectively, generally and immediately responsible for the program of civilian defense in Louisiana, are anxious that it be known that the state is appreciative of the contribution which can be made by its Negro civilians," said Dr. Clark.

"The Louisiana civilian defense council is now making plans for an all-out effort to prepare for any emergency. Not only because a large percentage of the state's population is composed of Negroes, but because Negroes want to continue their record of outstanding loyalty to America, they are expected to perform a great service during the present emergency.

"The Negro is most proud of his record of loyalty to his country. He remembers that the first American to sacrifice a life in the Revolutionary war was Crispus Attucks, one of his racial brothers. Since that time, he has fought and distinguished himself in every major conflift where the Stars and Stripes was defended. Negro troops were signalled out by General Pershing during the last World war, being among the bravest and best disciplined to be found anywhere. At the same time, Negro civilians were doing their duty. In Louisiana, Negroes bought thousands of dollars worth of Liberty bonds. One of them purchased bonds at a single time amounting to a hundred thousand dollars. Others left at home distinguished themselves by keeping the fires burning, on the farms, in industry, in the schoolroom, in offices and churches. One of their greatest contributions was to keep alive high morale among members of their own group."

As state co-ordinator for Negro civilian defense activities of the Louisiana defense council, Dr. Clark urged "all Negro citizens to rally now as they did before."

"No better argument for a better integration of the Negro into the opportunities of American life and democracy can be given than the record of serving his country in a crucial hour as the present one," he added. "Moreover, the Negro will have the satisfaction of doing his part in wiping out the Nazi idealism, which is anti-liberal, anti-Negro, anti-Jewish, and anti-freedom. The Negro's only hope for a full life is democracy. Not only does Hitler not believe in democracy, but he is opposed to the Negro. Participation in the civilian defense program gives one opportunity to fight Hitlerism at home as our armed forces are fighting abroad. Thus, Louisiana's 700,000 Negro citizens are called upon to work and public buildings, and in labor with state and local civilian de-ing in some civilian defense ca- fense, actively familiarizing them-pacity so as to keep our armed selves with the program by the forces doing the job which the preparation for blackouts, acting Axis powers have forced upon in connection with the signalling them. system, with aircraft warning service, with air-raid warden service, with air-raid precaution services, with the air-raid warning system, in protecting its plants

Mobile's Genuine Patriotism

Mobile was treated yesterday to two most inspiring examples of the real meaning of patriotism.

Members of Yo Tappa Keys Fraternity of Murphy High School showed up at probate court with two huge truckloads of old automobile license plates and literally thousands of razor blades they had collected for the steel salvage program sponsored by the national government.

Probate Judge Norvelle R. Leigh, Jr., was duly impressed with the contribution of the youngsters to national defense and was warm in his praise of them and their faculty director, Mrs. M. Chancellor. Through the hard work of the students and Mrs. Chancellor, Mobile County was spared the shame of having to admit it had no steel to help build tanks, guns and various other armaments needed to make America safe from her enemies, for there had been little or no response from citizens in general to appeals to contribute old license plates and razor blades to the salvage program.

And then there is Ernest Clarke, a humble negro worker in the officers' mess at Brookley Field. Ernest is the head of a family of 14 and owns a small farm up in Clarke County, about 15 acres of which are tillable. When Ernest received a letter from Secretary Wickard recommending the planting of certain foodstuffs needed in connection with the nation's war efforts he misunderstood; he thought he was being asked by the government to make a gift of his farm produce for defense, and here is what he wrote the secretary:

> "Dear Sir: I am glad to help my country to raise the foodstuff for the war. I's very glad to help raise food to feed the soldier boys. I give one acre oats, one acre peanuts, one acre hay, one sow hog, one acre corn, one acre potatoes. Ernest Clarke."

Doesn't that warm the heart and make some of us just a little bit ashamed of our own feeble professions of loyalty to our country? Here was this negro, head of a family of 14, willing not to sell, but to give better than one-third of the produce of his little farm to the nation. Nor does it detract one whit from a classic example of patriotism that Ernest was laboring under a misapprehension until he showed the reply he had addressed to the secretary of agriculture to a mess officer at Brookley Field and was put straight. His was the spirit that made our nation what it is today.

These are two real examples of patriotism, for they contain the very essence of that ennobling passion—a willingness to work and make personal sacrifices for the sake of our country.

Too many Americans, we fear, have come to believe that the sacred duty of patriotism can be discharged by lip service, flag waving and the like. There is more to it than that. But thank God genuine patriotism still fires Americans to action in behalf of their country and smothers out natural impulses of selfishness. Mobile had two fine reminders of that yesterday.

Ready To Serve

Taking them by and large, up and down, through thick and thin, or in any other way you elect, we will back our Georgia Negroes as compared with any other segment of the national population for unquestioning patriotism and for cheerful acceptance of the obligations of duty.

Not so long ago we chronicled the case of the colored man who had received a questionnaire from his draft board up in Elbert county. He was quite unable to make heads or tails of the document with its many spaces for answers to questions which he could not decipher, so he wrote sprawlingly across the face of it these words: "I is reddy when you is." That, we think, belongs among the great utterances of loyalty.

But the attitude of the Elbert county Negro was not different from that of thousands of his brethren in Georgia. Take a look, for example, at a front page article in the Cobb County Times. The draft board had called 12 Negroes for induction into the service. Sixteen showed up. Four of them were not on the list. They explained that they wanted to volunteer. Under the regulations, volunteers have to be accepted first. So the 12 registrants were asked, who, if any, desired to be deferred until the next call. No one said yes. All 12 expressed eagerness for immediate service. The matter was resolved by deferring the four with the highest numbers.

The Marietta newspaper also reports the interesting fact that of the 5,218 men registered in Cobb county, only five have disappeared from view. It is believed the percentage, 99.84, is as high as in any county in Georgia or, for that matter, in any State in the Union.

Georgia, black and white, takes its duty to the Government seriously.—Atlanta Journal.

We've had no occasion to check the patriotism of the Lownes county Negro and neither have we any reason to doubt it. We believe the instances mentioned above are typical of the Georgia Negroes. Their loyalty is most commendable considering the little Americanism taught them and the lack of attention given their organizations by the whites.

Let's Don't Run A Damn Step!

These Are Times That Try Men's Souls—These Are Times When We Must Show The Stuff We Are Made Of

By ROBERT DURR

Weekly Review, Birmingham, Ala.

Yes, the world is on fire. And we are all in the world. We can't get out. Justifiable as it may seem this is indeed no time for disunity.

America will win this conflict, but it is going to take the best there is in all of us wherever we are—on the farm, mill, mines, in high and lo wplaces.

To achieve unity, there is no safer guide than the golden rule. Every American's life is at stake. Our rights are no longer more important than the necessity of defending our opportunity to live on, in order that we may have the opportunity to fight for and mold a better social order.

This is the showdown. And he who would save his life must lose it for the better life.

None of us want to live under Hitler. We are not going to submit to Hitler. We will die first. That's why I say, we are going to win. And in winning we are going to win more than just a continuation of life as it is today. We are going to rebuil dthe world on the basis of the golden rule, for we are now convinced that nothing short of that will prevent the world catching on fire again and again.

The Negro has always played his full part in all of America's struggles and they will do no less this time—on the battle fronts, in mills, mines, farm and homes.

We are not going to run a damned step, today or ever, from anything we ought to do. If other Americans will do likewise, we will have that voluntary unity which will make victory ours in the end and lead civilization to where He will place the feet of men on higher ground.

Attack On Nation Believed Certain To End Disunity

Colored Citizens, Aware Of Danger To Homes And Loved Ones, Ready For Any Sacrifice Needed To Gain Victory Over Enemies Of United States

The apathy toward war that was generally manifest among colored citizens here as well as among members of the race in all parts of the United States has disappeared and instead, there is now a cool determination among all classes of the population to see the nation through to a glorious victory, whatever the cost and however long it takes to do so.

There is no news to relate with regard to what colored men and women, young and old here think of the war, now that it has been brought home to them. It would be a big item of news to find a member of the race here who is indifferent as to the outcome of the war—to find a man or woman who does not realize and agree that he or she is in the war and must give full support to the nation's purpose to defeat any and every attempt to invade the United States of the Western Hemisphere.

When the Japanese struck so unexpectedly and devastatingly at the nation's strongest outpost of defense in the Hawaiian Islands last Sunday, the first thing brought home to thousands of colored men and women in Nashville was that the attack was likewise made upon scores of young men, who are working on American ships in that area. Without a full report of the casualties, it is very generally believed that any number of fine young colored boys have died from the murderous attack Japan made on the harbor.

The zeal to avenge the deaths of these young men is as great a motive as any other that inspires Negroes here to do their bit in the war that has been forced upon the nation. There can be no compromise with Japan or any of the other enemies of the United States, it is declared, when they bring war to the United States and unexpectedly kill thousands of the flower of the nation's young manhood.

Discussions among colored citizens here do not center around why we are in war, or whether we should have gotten into it. It centers around how soon it can be fought to victory, with the feeling that this nation, whatever it has been, and is yet to be for all of its citizens, must be surrendered unless the war is won.

Only a half-hearted fight had been made by Negroes here for a full participation in the nation's defense effort up to last Sunday. Now there is to be an all-out battle for inclusion of Negroes in the armed forces, at the work benches and in every line of endeavor that is decided upon as necessary to win the war.

The large majority of citizens who opposed war as long as it seemed to be one among foreigners and on foreign soil, now know it has become a war where attacks are being made on the United States and which means that the bombing of cities, killing women and children is to be the nation's fate as certainly as it has been the fate of the people of Ethiopia, of Spain and all of the European countries that have been attacked.

Colored citizens do not believe this nation can have an adequate force to repel invasion and the conquering of this country unless Negroes are fully included in the defensive forces of the counrty. They want their assignment in all of these forces.

They want and expect politicians to suppress, for the time being, their talks about this being "a white man's country." This is denied with bitter resentment. Colored men and women who thrill to the deathless word's of Abraham Lincoln that "Our forefathers brought forth upon this continent a NEW NATION insist that THEY and their children belong to this NEW NATION—the AMERICAN NATION. They want all of the blessings htis nation gives its people and they insist upon the privilege of enduring all of the hardships necessary to preserve it against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

Nothing is more precious to Negroes than their record of loyalty ti this nation in its every crisis and the accomplishments of the members of the race in every kind of work assigned to them in the years the United States has been advancing to its position of the greatest nation on earth.

Negroes may complain about rebuffs, discriminations and hardships in times of peace. But Negroes are unanimous in holding that America is the best nation in the world and the place where their race has made its greatest progress. They do not want their country destroyed or seriously injured.

They believe that WORKING and FIGHTING are the things to be done to win for this nation a glorious triumph over its enemies.

Negroes in Nashville, any truthful appraisal of their attitude in the present crisis will disclose, are excelled by no other class of citizens in the enthusiasm with which they will enter a defensive war for the United States and the cool confidence they have in ultimate victory.

25th Infantry Detachment In Island Defense

Cruel Japanese Airmen Leave City in Flames

NEW YORK—(SNS)— Columbia Broadcasting System in a coast-to-coast broadcast Saturday revealed that a detachment of the famous 25th Infantry was defending the southern approach to the "open city" of Manila which was bombed and set on fire Saturday by scores of Japanese planes.

The 25th Infantry is said to be the only portion of the regular United States Army aiding the Philippine soldiers in the defense of the southern section of the island.

FOUGHT IN CUBA

The 25th Infantry fought with the 24th Infantry in the Spanish-American war in Cuba under Teddy Roosevelt, and in the Mexican campaign under General John Pershing. Both outfits received equal distinction for outstanding services rendered in World War No. 1.

It was also recalled that Negro troops, members of the 24th and 25th infantries and the 9th and 10th cavalries which gave distinguished service in the initial capture of the Philippines during the Spanish-American war.

The 24th is now stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia

After the war for almost a score of years the Tenth Cavalry was the only regular United States Army troops stationed at Manila and manned the main garrison. The black soldiers of this crack outfit were returned to the United States after America agreed to the demands of the Filipinos for their independence.

RESISTING INVADERS

According to the CBS report, the 25th detachment are putting up a great battle against the Japanese invaders

Waiting until Manila's anti-aircraft guns were hauled away and her defense stripped under an open city declaration, Japanese airmen swooped down on the city Saturday and left the capital in flames.

Scores of people were killed, many of them nuns, government workers and firemen. Streets were covered with blood, buildings wrecked, and historic churches and schools destroyed.

Close to 100 were reported dead as a result of the bombing attack.

SWOOP OVER CITY

According to one report, close to 50 Japanese bombers flew low over the city and emptied machine guns on fleeing citizens

The attack on the city was said to have lasted over three hours.

Meanwhile, Japanese land troops were reported within 80 miles of the city.

The attack came one day after Manila had been declared an open city to spare its 600,000 residents.

The invading Japanese planes struck at the harbor first and then flew over the city, dropping bombs. Another group of planes flew over the city later in the day but did not open fire.

HULL IS ANGERED

Secretary of State Hull, after hearing of the attack on Manila said Japan wes practicing the same barbaric methods of cruelty and inhumanity that Hitler had been using in Europe.

"We will show them no mercy," Mr. Hull declared

Race Soldiers Unloaded At Freight Depot In Oklahoma City

DEC 13 1941

OKLAHOMA CITY— (ANP) — Despite protests lodged with city government and military authorities by Oklahoma City Negro Chamber of Commerce and local leaders, over 800 members of the 31st battalion were unloaded at Frisco freight depot here Thursday by army officials and routed over side streets to the Negro district. Requests had been made that the soldiers be unloaded at the Frisco passenger depot and marched through the business section of the town.

First news of the unwillingness of authorities to allow white citizens to see Negro units marching was disclosed when F. D. Moon, supervising principal of Douglass High School here, announced early Wednesday morning that he had received many calls from both white and colored over the city desirous of knowing the line of march.

He contacted President J. W. Sanford, of the Negro chamber of commerce, who learned from police department and city hall officials that the line of march would not be through the downtown district. Arrangements, Sanford said, had been made by authorities at Fort Sill.

Contact with a representative of the Friscoe Railway was established and he stated that all arrangements for transportation of soldiers had been made with him by a Capt. Tighlman.

However, despite the fact that the troops were not allowed to parade in the downtown district, scores of whites parked their cars along the outlying route and cheered as the long lines of uniformed soldiers marched by.

Fine Response

Response to calls for registration for civilian defense have been fine, officials say. The number of persons needed for most civilian defense jobs, including air raid wardens and auxiliary policemen, is very nearly adequate.

DEC 1 8 1941

Some more auxiliary policemen are needed.

But the greatest personnel need right now is for auxiliary firemen. Persons desiring to register for this vitally important task (remember London's heroic battles against incendiary bombs?) are requested by civilian defense officials to go to their local fire stations, not to civilian defense headquarters. Headquarters, it is stated, has been so busy handling the gratifying number of persons offering their services that, actually, civilian defense workers have not had enough time for completing organization of those registered.

Just now a number of Negro volunteers are needed. Negroes desiring to offer their services are urged to go to registration centers at the Negro Y. W. C. A. at Eighth Avenue and Mortimer Street and the NYA center at Slossfield in Acipco.

Blackout rumors are unfounded, civilian defense officials say. If there is to be a test blackout, there will be a three-day warning. If any immediate blackout is ordered, then citizens may rest assured that the threat is serious, according to Mayor Cooper Green.

The situation regarding funds for carrying on civilian defense work, in contrast to the response to registration calls, has not been so gratifying. As much as funds are needed for this work, civilian defense leaders recognize the terrific pressure right now on all persons for various contributions. But the fact remains that money must be obtained.

It appears increasingly likely that it may be necessary to ask Gov. Dixon to call a special session of the Legislature for making an appropriation for civilian defense. Gov. Olson, of California, has already asked for a special session of the California Legislature. He is to request an appropriation of more than $50,000,000. Alabama's need, of course, will not be so great, financially, as California's, but Alabama's importance as a defense production state is high.

Thus it appears that for our civilian defense there are, particularly, two great needs now: money and auxiliary firemen. Surely, having done as much as we have already, we will not fail to meet these two needs.

Navy Announces Death Of James Mark Lewis In Hawaii Attack

James Mark Lewis, who had planned to join the U. S. Navy since he was 14, is one of the Birmingham district's first white fatalities to be reported following declaration of war by the United States against Japan, Germany and Italy.

The following telegram from Rear Admi. C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, was in the hands of the seaman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malden D. Lewis, of near Tarrant, Wednesday:

"The Navy Department deeply regrets to inform you that your son, James Mark Lewis, seaman second class, wa slost in action in the performance of his duty in the service of his country.

"The department extends to you its sincerest sympathy in your great loss.

"To prevent possible aid to our enemies, please do not divulge the name of his ship . . ."

DEC 18 1941

Notice of Lewis' death in the performance of his duty followed that of Julius Elssberry, Negro, mess attendant first class, who lived at 707 North 44th Street.

James Mark Lewis, 21, enlisted at the Birmingham Recruiting Station Sept. 14, 1940. Acquaintances said he had been an outstanding youth worker at the Birmingham Gospel Tabernacle and left for sea, hoping some day to become a chaplain in the navy.

Members of his family said he first talked of joining the navy when he was 14—then a student at Phillips High School.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother, Rogers Lewis, of Tarrant, and by two sisters, Mrs. Eloise Jackson, of 1214 South 15th Street, and Mrs. Myrtle Clark, of Springfield, Tenn.

Leaders Of Race Pledge Support As War Comes

DEC 13 1941

Negro leaders Monday pledged their support in the American war effort against Japan and urged all other members of the race to follow suit and combat the menace to national safety uncovered Sunday in the lightning attack against United States island possessions.

Among those voicing sentiments in a survey compiled by the Associated Negro Press was Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee institute, who declared:

"Negroes share with the rest of the American people the conviction that Japan's action must be met with a complete all-out war effort. The patriotism of the Negro people may be counted on in full measure. It is hoped that their participation in both a civic and military way may be not only permitted but encouraged in keeping with the true democratic principles we go out to defend."

Lester B. Granger, executive secretary, National Urban league:

"America's war with Japan is the war of every Negro regardless of dissatisfaction with existing conditions or that part previously accorded Negroes in the national defense program. Without relaxing one bit our insistence upon the right to participate in every phase of defense we must at the same time throw ourselves wholeheartedly in the efforts of the United States to defend this country from any foreign invasion. The National Urban league has today pledged to President Roosevelt and to Mayor LaGuardia, civilian defense head. the unfaltering support of our nation-wide organization."

Mary McLeod Bethune, president, National Council of Negro Women, Inc.:

DEC 13 1941

"In behalf of the womanhood of the country and particularly the Negro womanhood we hereby dedicate ourselves unreservedly to the service of America in defending its freedom and integrity. We voice again at this point that it must be all out or it's all over. The National Council of Negro Women submerges any obstacles that would come between us and an all out effort of America toward final victory.

"I know that at a time like this every Negro man, woman and child will stand straight up without reservation to his responsibility to his country. No blood more red, more loyal penetrates the veins of mankind than that which flows through the body of the Negro. America can depend upon us."

Dr. Emmett J. Scott of the Republican publicity department:

"The basic feeling of every Negro through the country is one of complete loyalty to our country. There is and can be no question of the full support of our nation in this hour of tragic emergency by the 13,000,000 Negro people of the United States. On this question there is complete unanimity as Japan, Germany and Italy will find out as the war proceeds.

DEC 13 1941

"It is hoped that those questions which disturb and distress Negroes will be fairly considered and decisively disposed of by the war department so that the morale of this group shall be in no way depressed but instead heightened that victory shall follow our present efforts."

Dr. Malcolm S. McLean, president, Hampton institute:

"I have just sent this message to President Roosevelt: 'As president of Negro Land Grant colleges and as president of Hampton institute, one of America's many loyal Negro colleges. I assure you of our all-out support for congress' declaration of war today against Japan. We ask that in our united effort you make use of the skilled hand, the trained mind and loyal heart of all Negro Americans in this fight to wipe out the treacheries and slaveries of dictatorship. As we fight to defend our rights to democracy, let us learn in this bitter hour how to unite at home to improve our process of democracy'."

Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman from Mississippi:

DEC 13 1941

"Now that Japan has attacked our nation I regard it as a duty of every American Negro to stand with and behind our country one hundred percent and our policy should be 'My country. right or wrong.'"

Walter White, executive secretary of the N.A.A.C.P.:

"Though 13 million American Negroes have more often than not been denied democracy, they are American citizens and will as in every war give unqualified support to the protection of their country. At the same time we shall not abate one iota our struggle for full citizenship rights here in the United States. We will fight but we demand the right to fight as equals in every branch of the military, naval and aviation services."

12 NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS SANCTION MEET

DEC 20 1941

Approximately 20 Groups Will Participate To Formulate Policies

NEW YORK.—Representatives of 12 national organizations devoted to the interests of Negroes met at the offices of the National Urban League and approved plans for a conference of their organizations on problems facing Negro citizens in a world at war.

The conference will be called in New York City January 10, 1942 and representatives from approximately 20 national organizations will be invited.

Hubert T. Delany, commissioner of taxes for New York City and board member of the National Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, presided. He declared that "the purpose of the conference will be to obtain common agreement among representative organizations concerned with the welfare of Negroes on the fundamental problems that face them; of wise methods of attacking these problems and of ways of coordinating and strengthening favorable and intelligent programs in the Negro's behalf."

DEC 20 1941

Previous endorsement of the conference had already been given by such organizations as the National Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Negro Business League, the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, the Associated Negro Press, the National Medical association, the National Dental association, the National Hospital association and the Negro Labor committee.

In addition to the groups attending, invitations will be issued to other organizations operating in certain fields of Negro welfare with effective techniques for obtaining action in these fields and equipped with staff and other machinery for carrying out their programs. The fields listed by the planning committee were: employment and labor security, guidance and character training, recreation, education, health, housing, and civil liberties. The conference will be a one-day affair.

Suicide Squadron Being Organized by Harlemites

DEC 13 1941

An all-colored "Suicide Squadron," formed for the purpose of going anywhere in the world to face any danger involved in the defense. of America, was being organized here this week by Col. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian and a group of doctors working with him. to determine the physical fitness of volunteers who apply.

"That's our answer to democracy's call," Col. Julian told the Star-News, "and that means that for the duration we are forgetting our old complaint about Army and Navy Jim Crow. Anyway, America is faced with bullets and bombs right now and there's no discrimination when it comes to that."

Headquarters for the fighting unit will be located at Hotel Theresa, Julian said, and single men (from 18 to 28) are invited to register with the veteran aviator personally.

"I talked to the White House Wednesday about this," Col. Julian revealed, "and the War Department is well acquainted with the plans I have in mind."

Snipers, parachute jumpers and men capable of performing any military task required, with reckless abandon, will be accepted. "In other words," said Julian, "we don't want to be flunkies, we want to fight."

Dr. Perry Cheney, it was also learned, will head the list of doctors examining prospective soldiers for the new unit.

Negroes Eagerly Accept War Challenge

DEC 1 1941

SAVANNAH, [AP]—Dr. Benjamin F. Hubert, president of the Georgia Industrial College and developer of the Log Cabin community in Hancock county, declared Tuesday that "Negroes everywhere gladly and willingly accept the challenge to fight for our country."

"Japan's treacherous, unannounced attack at a time when conferees representing both countries were attempting amicable adjustments of national differences should unite all Americans regardless of race, creed or color in the fight to abolish forever this type of leadership in world affairs," he said.

DEC 1 1 1941

"Negroes rejoice that we have opportunity in the front ranks, in the rear ranks, in the shops and factories, and on the farms to demonstrate their capacity, their ability and their loyalty. The same spirit of loyalty to the flag that has characterized our group in every crisis will be in evidence now."

Colored Soldiers Contributing Full Share Of Service In War

By. BRIG. GEN. B. O. DAVIS

It is a privilege for me, on this Sunday before Christmas, to greet the soldiers of my race now serving with the colors of the United States Army. In this first month of World War 2, over 100,000 of you are serving in every branch of the Army, serving to defend our nation against the tyrannical forces now attempting to destroy the freedom, democracy and the liberty we so dearly love.

Rendezvous With Destiny

It is significant that you, America's colored soldiers, representing almost ten per cent of our armed forces, should take up arms for this purpose. The ambition of our race always has been to extend—rather than to destroy—the privileges of democracy. No peoples are most acutely aware of the pains of bondage than our own. Today, we join with all other Americans in answering the call to battle, confident that this rendezvous with destiny shall end victoriously for our cause.

Have Rich Heritage

I know that many Americans may not yet realize that colored soldiers of the United States are contributing their full share of service in this war. Fewer realize that we have a noble heritage to carry on—a heritage that reaches back to the days prior to the Revolutionary War, when Crispus Attucks led the host of colonists on the Boston Common against the forces of tyranny.

Fought With Distinction

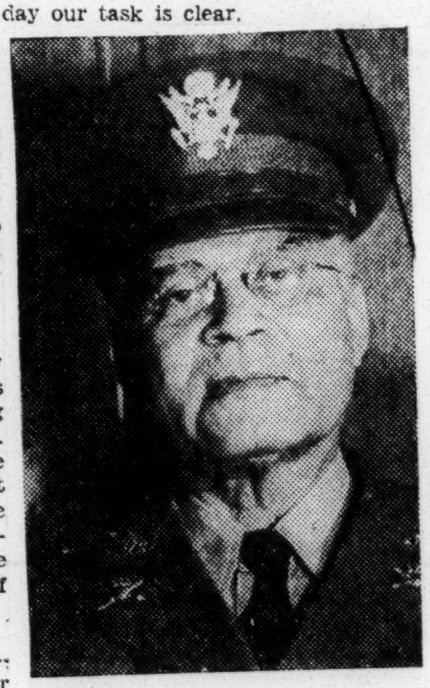
Men of our race served in the Revolutionary War and in all the major wars since in which American troops have participated. Well do I recall the military service of over 400,000 colored soldiers in 1917 and 1918. Often, I have returned to the military records and found inspiration in the service of colored men who distinguished themselves by heroism far beyond the call of duty. Sixty colored officers and enlisted men of the 92nd and 93rd Divisions alone received the Distinguished Service Cross during the last World War. Many more received the French Croix de Guerre and many others were officially cited in military reports. The record of all colored soldiers who preceded you is now your heritage—and this you must carry on nobly.

It is your predetermined duty to your race, to those who died valiantly in past wars, and above all to your nation in its present war.

Colored American Ready

If the sentiment of our people can be judged by the reactions of leading colored newspaper editors and publishers who attended a War Department conference in Washington the day after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, I can say without hesitation that colored Americans are completely united behind you, with full confidence in the ability of you—their sons and brothers—to serve honorably in any situation.

Enemy propaganda designed to promote disunity among us—both in the military service and without—will meet with indominatable resistance and wil lfail. We are Americans. Today our task is clear.



GENERAL BENJAMIN O. DAVIS was born in Washington, D. C., on June, 1877. He entered the military service on July 13, 1898, during the War with Spain, as a first lieutenant of the 8th United States Infantry. He was mustered out on March 6, 1899 and on June 14, 1899, he enlisted as a private in Troop I, 9th Cavalry of the Regular Army. He was promoted to corporal and squadron sergeant-major, and on February 2, 1901, was commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry in the Regular Army.

General Davis was promoted to first lieutenant on March 30, 1905; to captain on December 4, 1915; to major (temporary) on August 5, 1917; and to lieutenant-colonel (temporay) on May 1,1918. He reverted to his regular Army rank on August 14, 1919, and was promoted to lieutenant-colonel on July 1, 1920; to colonel on February 13, 1930; and to brigadier-general (temporary) on October 25, 1940.

Nation's Best Soldiers

Perhaps the best summation of your soldierly qualities was made by Colonel E. R. Householder, of the Adjutant General's Department, who attended the War Department meeting of colored newspaper representatives. Colonel Householder, whom many of you may remember as the Commanding Officer of a company and a battalion of the 25th United States Infantry, said of the colored soldier—and I quote: "He does not want to be coddled. He expects fairness and justice; harbors no resentment when disciplined for neglect or failure. * * * I know of no soldier of any race who has a higher esprit or who is more cheerful under adverse circumstances than the Negro."

As an old officer of the Army, as Assistant to the Inspector General, I know this confidence in your ability is well founded. As a member of your race, I am naturally gratified that it be so. On this Sunday before Christmas, I am, therefore, pleased to have this privilege of serving as spokesman for the Army and for all loyal Americans in extending to you, America's colored soldiers, our wish for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year that shall bring glory to you in your service to our Republic.

The speaker this Sunday morning (December 28) on "Wings Over Jordan" will be Rev. Clarence A. Burrell, pastor of the Mt. Ararat Baptist Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., who will speak from Station WGAR, Cleveland.

Negroes Must Fight For Rights As Well As For Their Country

By E. WASHINGTON RHODES,
Publisher, The Philadelphia Tribune

"We say.....that loyalty to one's Government in war is an American duty, and freedom to criticize one's Government, even in war, is an American right."

"If we have not that right, if every American citizen has not that right, what are we fighting for? Shall we take the four freedoms to the far corners of the earth, confer them on other people, by force if necessary, and forget that they belonged first to us?"

The foregoing is quoted from an editorial in the Saturday Evening Post under date of December 20th, 1941. It states concisely the position which colored Americans should take in the present crisis.

During this period when the freedom of all Americans is threatened, loyalty to one's Government is the most sacred duty. But all citizens must be loyal in their efforts to protect the freedom and liberty of all other citizens for only in this way can the unity of action necessary to the successful prosecution of the war be assured.

Must Not Give Up

It is not necessary to abandon our fight for freedom at home while we fight to assure freedom for others. While we engage in a great struggle to defend our freedom, let us work to broaden that freedom so as to include all people.

There has been much talk by the War and Navy departments about the "pattern" under which these departments operate. In other words the "pattern" is segregation and exclusion in so far as colored citizens are concerned. These officials want to keep it that way. They argue that they are faced with an actual condition and it is not their business to change conditions even admitting those conditions to be wrong.

World Is Changing

The entire world is changing. Many patterns as old as human history are being re-cut. And when the present war is over old customs will be shot full of holes.

Injustices are wrong and a war does not make them right. Unity is needed in America. Tremendous sacrifices are being made. If men and women are willing to give their property, their money and their lives to protect America, it is nonsense to say they are not able to forego their prejudices.

Any form of waste at the present time is unpatriotic. There are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of well-prepared colored men who are denied the opportunity to work for their country. Young Douglass C. Watson, a trained aeronautical engineer, was denied an opportunity to use his skill for the benefit of his country. For months this young man sought an opportunity to secure employment. And all the time there was a demand for men with his abilities. But this young man was denied work because of his color.

Got Job In This City

After many weary months he finally secured work with AGA Aviation Corporation on Easton Road near Philadelphia. He has rendered excellent service participating in finishing a job in five weeks which ordinarily would have taken six months.

There is a crying need for airplanes to defend America. Any Government which refuses to use its available manpower when its loyalty can not be questioned is practicing sabotage on itself. And private business which permits prejudice to interfere with production is certainly working in the interest of the enemy.

Of course if it is more important to the United States to maintain the present pattern of dealing with racial groups than it is to crush Hitlerism, nothing should be done about it. However, the democracies are fighting for freedom and liberty and those who do not have freedom and liberty at home must be as zealous about securing it for themselves as they are to have it bestowed upon people who do not want it.

Colored Americans should not stop protesting against injustice. They should strive aggressively to be included in everything which has to do with the defense of America. And most certainly they should not permit themselves to be treated unfairly by those who are preaching the equality of man; by those who say they are fighting to make men free.

Not Docile Acceptance

Loyalty to Government does not mean the docile acceptance of injustices by any segment of the population with their toil, their wealth, their time. To accept injustices during times like these is unpatriotic. Colored citizens are determined to bemarch forward to victory under the free American citizens in fact as well as in name.

In every war from Bunker Hill to Flanders Field the blood-stained fields of France, who love liberty, justice and equality colored Americans have given the full measure of their devotion. Now as always their loyalty can not be questioned.

It is their duty to defend America with their lives, their wealth, their American right to pursuit of happiness. It is their own freedom as they crush the apostles of hate, who seek to destroy the nations of the world for all men.

All Out for Victory

A united America is the only answer that can and should be made to Japan's attack. Regardless of differences about domestic questions, we are now one about national policy. It is for us each to consider how best he can hasten victory over the foreign enemy.

Japan is in league with Germany, a nation frankly bent on establishing mastery over all other peoples. How the Japanese reconcile that alliance with their own nationalistic ambitions is beyond our understanding. There can be no "Asia for Asiatics" if Germany is to be the master race which Hitler declares to be his objective. But it is the facts not the logic with which we must deal now that a shooting war has begun. We must fight till we win over Japan, Germany and whoever else is against us.

One thing the entry of Japan into the war does. It will make whites in Britain and America see where "master race" thinking leads.

Unfortunate as war is, yet only its fierce heat can cleanse mankind of the selfishness which underlies the economic and political injustices which the strong conflict on the weak. Our smaller task is to whip our enemies. Then comes the big job of getting ourselves on the sound basis of respect for others as we wish it for ourselves, which is the prerequisite of lasting peace.

Negro Press Comments On America At War

(Pittsburgh Courier) DEC 20 1941

Colored America, among the most loyal segment of this heterogeneous population which is America, stands solidly phalanxed, hands joined in this titantic struggle to defeat a common enemy.

We are American, too! From 1619 to the present day, we've worked to make America ours. Our sweat and our blood, our hopes and our ambitions, our successes and our failures, are intangibly wrapped up in these forty-eight States which today present a united front . . . The United States of America!

(Philadelphia Tribune)

This is war and all partisan and racial differences must be stifled — NOW. The nation itself is periled and every loyal American must inevitably support to the utmost the policies of our Commander-in-Chief.

(Chicago Defender)

America needs today as never before the full support, the unstinted cooperation of all her sons in order to meet triumphantly the challenge of her powerful adversaries. She needs more than ever the loyalty and courage of her citizens to face the enemy without fear of compromise or defeat. SHE NEEDS THE FAITH AND LOVE OF HER PEOPLE TO SUSTAIN HER IN THIS HOUR OF TRIAL. SO FAR AS THE NEGRO CITIZENS ARE CONCERNED, AMERICA SHALL BE GIVEN NO CAUSE FOR APPRENHENSION.

DEC 20 1941

(N. Y. Amsterdam Star-News)

But to win we will need our all. To make sure of this, our Navy, Army and war industry are now literally crying for men. Let us welcome into these ranks all loyal Americans regardless of race, creed or color.

America is at war. This is no time for superficial distinctions based upon skin-color. This is no time for subversive race prejudice. We will show those Japs and Nazis that as one nation indivisible, we fight the battle for democracy. We fight to win!

(St. Louis American)

The war everyone knew was coming, came Sunday with a bang. Japan struck hard—other totalitarian nations will join Japan.

Every citizen of the United States has but one course, one cause, one allegiance, and that to defend and sustain this country. All citizens, all groups . . . . even that part of the South that regards Gene Talmadge as an ideal . . . . is now an indivisible one against the common enemies.

There can be no question of the loyalty of the Negro Americans. They only want to share in the full responsibility . . . . working, fighting, dying in all possible services. To wish for less and to be denied less is to betray the fullest strength of this great nation.

American Negroes are teetotally ready to serve their country. They only ask to be accorded the same tretaments, the same opportunities, the same hardships and the same advantage all other loyal Americans are accorded.

(St. Louis Argus) DEC 20 1941

Of course, we as Negroes, and as American citizens, are ready and willing to do our bit in the defense of this country in times of national peril, but it is galling to our sense of right and justice when we are denied the rights and privileges to serve our country in any branch of the armed forces, just as other Americans do.

Therefore, we hope that this initiative incident of our actual participation in this great world war will serve to open the eyes of such men as Colonel Knox so they may see and understand that success in a conflict does not necessarily depend upon the color of the skin of those who participate.

FDR Lauds Negroes For War Support

DEC 21 1941

Deeply Appreciative of Unity Pledge, Letter to Yergan Says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Appreciation of the wholehearted, active support which the National Negro Congress—in the name of the Negro people—has pledged to the President in building a solid national unity for the defense of our country against the Hitler-dominated Axis powers, was expressed by the nation's Chief Executive in a letter to Max Yergan, president of the organization, and made public here today.

The President made known his deep feeling through his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre. The letter was a reply to a telegram sent to Mr. Roosevelt last week by the Negro Congress leader, which said in part: "We know that we express the unshakeable determination of the Negro people to give everything we have to our nation to the end that our country will triumph over all its enemies." The text of the President's letter follows:

"Permit me, in the President's name, to thank you and the members of your Congress for your telegram. The pledges of patriotic support which have been received from the many, many local citizens in all parts of the country have given the President strength and courage to carry out the will of the American people.

RACE TROOPS GUARD THIRD LARGEST CITY

Soldiers of 76th Coast Artillery Cheered As They March Into Philadelphia to Guard City's Defenses.

By RANDY DIXON
(Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 18—Protection from attack by axis aircraft, for three million residents of the Philadelphia area, and of vital munitions factories and shipyards here, is vested in the skill and military ability of 1700 Negro soldiers comprising the 76th Coast Artillery. Philadelphia is the third largest city in the nation.

Numbering three fully equipped regiments, commanded by 80 white officers, the doughty soldiers have attracted much attention since their arrival here this week from Fort Bragg, N. C.

As they move about the city, cheering crowds gather on the sidewalks and wave to them. The regiment's anti-aircraft batteries were speedily set up at strategic spots around the city's vital spots.

A 24-hour vigil is being maintained and strict censorship prevails on conversations with the men. Photographers are shooed away unless they carry official army permits.

Many of the men are bivouaced at various points, but at intervals they exchange these quarters for others at a mid-city armory.

Their equipment consists of three inch .75 mm. AA guns, 37 mm. rapid fire guns and Sweedish Boford-type pom poms, powerful sky sweeping searchlights, .50 calibre machine guns, range finders and sound detectors.

They arrived in the city in a column of 800 vehicles, 10 miles long. Most of the trucks carrying the equipment were covered by brown tarpaulins. The regiments were ordered here as a part of an integrated, previously prepared plan to protect this area in which are located the country's largest navy yard, the Quartermaster's depot, the Government Ordnance Baldwin Locomotive Works, where tanks are being built; the Bendix Airplane factory, Edward Budd biggest producer of medium-sized shells and bombs; the Midvale and Pencoyd Steel Works, builders of big guns; Needs and Northrup manufacturers of precision instruments used by both Army and Navy; Fort Mifflin, where munitions are stored; oil refineries for six leading companies; exclusive outlet for the upper eastern seaboard; the New York, Cramps, Pusey and Jones and Sun shipbuilding yards and numerous other defense industries.

It has been pointed out repeatedly the vulnerability of Philadelphia to an Axis air attack. Warnings were issued this week in full solemnity, that the city can expect panic and token bombings from suicide squadrons of long range Axis planes.

Seaman Is Decorated By King

(By Our London Correspondent)

LONDON — (Censored) — Negro Seaman Adolphus Gibson from the West Indies was a proud man today. Just back from shaking hands with King George who decorated him for bravery while serving as a fireman on His Majesty's Transport Dorien Rose, Gibson was showing all his mates—white and colored—the Distinguished Service Medal the King pinned on his breast.

Dressed in a pair of white tennis shoes, an old trilby hat and a weather-beaten overcoat, the proud Gibson. accompanied by high army and naval officers, went to Buckingham Palace to receive the congratulations of his King-Emperor for saving the lives of troops and behaving with conspicuous bravery when his ship was attacked by enemy U-boats in the Atlantic.

Since the war, Gibson and hundreds of other colored men from the West Indies, Africa and India, now serving in the Merchant Navy have risked their lives to bring supplies to this country from all parts of the Empire and the United States.

Hair Did It!

Saves Man From Firing Squad

RALEIGH, N. C. — (ANP)— Julius Caesar Falkner, 58-year-old Navy recruiter, is happy because his "kinky" hair recently saved him from being shot as a Japanese spy. Falkner was arrested in full uniform when he stepped off a bus in Reidsville, N. C., recently, on suspicion of being a spy. The sailor was on a recruiting mission for the naval recruiting officer here.

Taken to the police station, frisked and subjected to a grilling, he was asked if he was a Japanese agent, to which he replied, "Well, if I am, I've been a spy a mighty long time."

However, in the grilling Falkner says that his kinky hair was the main factor in proving his innocence.

After 38 years service in the Navy, the sailor, who has had a ship sunk under him near Charleston has seen action on battleships, destroyers and cruisers, was one of the first to enlist in a suicide squad which cleared the North sea of mines in the first World war, says he never thought the time would come when his hair would be the difference between further service to his country and a shot through the heart.

He joined the Navy in Boston in March, 1903, at the age of 19 years, starting off as a mess attendant, third class. After 20 years active service, he was retired into the naval reserve, attaining the rank of ship's cook, frist class. He had been working just 26 days when the Reidsville officer picked him up. Although he makes $94 a month and has a comfortable home, he expressed his desire to be in Hawaii where the fighting is taking place, but says the Navy won't let him go because of his age and health.

NO TIME FOR QUIBBLING

The United States is now at war with the greatest aggregation of military power in the history of mankind and the outcome is, to say the least, uncertain.

In this, the greatest crisis of American civilization, we contend that it is close to treason to hamper total defense by quibbling over the minutae of racial distinction; to jeopardize national unity by trying to maintain the color bar in the face of stern necessity.

When Col. E. R. Householder of the Adjutant General's office seeks to excuse the senseless continuance of the color bar in the U.S. Army by declaring that it is not the Army's business to serve as a "sociological laboratory," and that prejudices cannot be changed "by fiat, decree or order," he is quibbling.

The President of the United States in war-time has power to order or decree anything he deems necessary for the successful prosecution of the war, and if he orders an end to segregation and discrimination based on a fallacious color bar in the Army and Navy, that order will be obeyed.

This talk on the part of certain great corporations that they cannot or will not employ Negroes on defense work, in defiance of the President's order, is dangerous quibbling when the nation's future is at stake.

The United States will need all the brain and brawn she can command from any source, regardless of creed or color, in order to escape defeat and dismemberment, and when corporation executives turn down any available brains and brawn because of color, they are helping to that extent to defeat their country.

When certain labor unions persist in maintaining archaic constitutional or ritualistic provisions that bar Negroes from working and helping the nation to defend itself, it is mere quibbling for them to defend this outrageous condition by asserting that some members are opposed to granting Negroes equality of opportunity.

If the race-crazy Nazis and Fascists can join with the brown Japanese in their demoniac war effort, then certainly white America can, and must, join with brown America in its democratic war effort.

To take any other position at this time is dangerous quibbling that may lead to tragedy.

This is no time for such quibbling and the nation must have no patience with it.

3,000 TROOPS KEEP ON ALERT FOR SABOTEURS

Col. Gourdin Heads Soldiers Upon Whom Rests City's Fate

DEC 27 1941

By MAURICE DANCER
(Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK. — Headed by Col. Edward O. Gourdin, former Harvard university athlete, the 372nd Infantry of the regular army, comprised of some three thousand men converged on New York City Wednesday to take up strategic points against possible sabotage.

The regiment formerly part of the Massachusetts National Guard was moved here from Ford Dix, N. J., on assignment by President Roosevelt, following a conference several days ago with Mayor Fiorella La Guardia, who heads the Office of Civilian Defense.

The soldiers have been assigned to the critical points about the city, to help the police keep guard. These assignments have been worked out by Commissioner of Police Lewis J. Valentine and Major General Irving J. Phillipson, commander of the Second Corps Area.

The Mayor said the guarded areas will include the waterfront, Federal property and the water supply system.

The 372nd is composed mainly of men from New Jersey, Maryland, and Ohio, and commanded by Colonel Gourdin, a Boston lawyer, who, 20 years ago, was one of the country's outstanding athletes.

Forty-four years old, a veteran of the Massachusetts National Guard, he came up through the ranks from private.

As a Harvard university athlete, Colonel Gourdin set a world record for the running broad jump in 1921 with a leap of 25 feet 3 inches. The same year he was National A.A.U. and IC-4A champion in that event.

In 1921 and 1922 he was national pentathlon champion, and in 1924, at the Olympic games in France he placed second in the broad jump.

Arriving in New York, the regiment was split up into three sections, taking up quarters in New York National Guard armories. One section is housed in the 165th Infantry Armory, Lexington and East Twenty-sixth street, another at the 245th Coast Artillery Armory, Sumner and Jefferson avenues, Brooklyn, and the third at the home of the old 15th, the 369th Coast Artillery Armory, Fifth avenue and West 143rd street.

Mans Machine Gun in Fight Against Japs

Sailor on S. S. Arizona Uses Weapon in Expert Form, Says Report

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii. —At long last the delayed news reached the United States this week that during the disastrous attack upon Hawaii and the American fleet, December 7, the first colored American hero of World War II, unheralded, unsung and undecorated played his part most valiantly by leaving the messroom where he was employed and the first time before a machine gun, manned it from the bridge of the U. S. S. Arizona until the ammunition was exhausted.

Although reports failed to mention the name of the [illegible] hero, who sprang to the [illegible] tion taking the place of the [illegible] white gunner as the [illegible] was listing for the last time, the colored messman fired at the surrounding enemy craft until his ship plunged beneath the oily and heated waters of Pearl Harbor.

Unlike his white heroic shipmates, who have been lauded and medaled, this colored messman displayed the same gallantry that brought. Lt. Colin Kelly and Admiral Kidd the fame that they gained as being numbered among the first heroes of this war.

From unconfirmed reports the Star-News learned that the messman was responsible for downing some attacking Japanese planes that approached the Arizona strafing her decks with machine gun bullets.

Filled with the spirit of patriotism and daring, the messman it was said dashed to the machine gun when his comrade and his captain fell mortally wounded in order to avenge their deaths and defend his country.

In a long distance telephone conversation with officials of the Navy Department in Washington yesterday, the Star-News was informed that no names of heroes of the Pearl Harbor disaster have been released as yet.

It was stated that when the complete list is compiled it will then be ready for publication. The name of Admiral Kidd was said to be publicized because he was killed in action.

Capital Negro Group to Act On Defense

DEC 16 1941

Call Conference to Defend City Against Danger of Enemy Attack

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15. — Negro organizations here were called to an emergency working conference next Friday "to plan a program for the defense of our homes."

The call was issued by Dr. Edward F. Harris, president of the Federation of Civic Associations and the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, chairman of the Negro Committee for United Action to Defeat Hitler and Hitlerism. Both groups represent more than 400 organizations.

To be held at the Shiloh Baptist Church, the conference will offer cooperation to the Columbia Council on Defense. Col. Harry Atwood, recently appointed assistant chief air-raid warden will outline defense council plans for protection of the city against enemy attacks.

The call for the conference declared that "our nation is under attack by the most vicious forces the world has even seen."

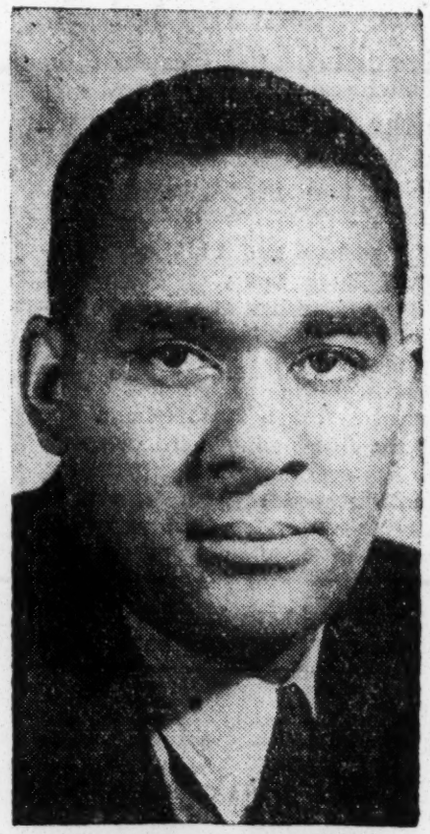
'Negro People Will Join Fight Against Axis,' Says Richard Wright Revising 'Native Son'

Chicago, Ill.

Dear Editor: DEC 1 3 1941

Actors are not people who live in a vacuum, and when events have occurred in the political arena that need the nation behind them, the actors have always been called on to give their services.

The actors of "Native Son," Negro and white, have been united in their fight to bring the message of racial equality to America through their play. They want to bring about real democracy in America to strengthen the fight against fascism all over the world. To that end the company has contributed 100 per cent to Red Cross Relief and Russian War Relief, and 13 of us have signed a telegram to the President asking for the freedom of Earl Browder.



RICHARD WRIGHT

Sure, we disagree on a lot of questions, but those actions of ours indicate that there are many things that Americans can agree upon.

The Negro people constitute 12,000,000 of our population. They helped to build this country as much as any other group of people. Yet they've suffered under the blows of Jim Crowism and when called upon to defend their country against fascists who preach race hatred, they have a right to ask their government to put a halt to the same evils existent here—even in the Army and Navy.

While they cry out for equality, the Negro people realize that they must continue to fight and fight hard against fascism—because should Hitler or Japan succeed in conquering the world even their right to cry out will be destroyed with the rights of all peoples who love liberty and freedom.

What I have to say now I hope will be printed as a lesson in race unity and a sample of the deep understanding that a great Negro author has of the stake that his people have in this war to the death against Fascism wherever it exists.

"Native Son," playing in Chicago with its New York cast, was not caught napping when the war between Japan and the United States broke out. That same night John Berry, Orson Welles' assistant, wired Richard

The next day, Wright telegraphed additions to "Native Son's" appeal for full political and civil rights for America's 12,000,000 Negroes. DEC 1 3 1941

To a speech condemning the Jim Crow character of the Army and Navy, Mr. Wright added after the speech ending . . . "even when we send him (Bigger Thomas, the Negro boy sentenced to die) to war to die, it's black against white." (Insert.) "Even so, these Bigger Thomases are heroic fighters—time and again they have shed their blood in our wars and, if the nation calls, they are willing to do so again."

Then to an additional portion of the same speech: "Give us an opportunity to build again—to laugh again—to sing again—to work and live again—to fight and die if need be—to defend our nation's soil—can we ignore this cry?"

The same day, four hours after this change was made—Dec. 8—John Berry, who plays Lawyer Max, memorized the new lines and inserted them in his part during that evening's performance.

"Native Son" has been received enthusiastically in its tour of America, and here in Chicago, where there had been talk of censorship and lack of audience interest in serious dramatic plays, it has been so cordially welcomed that it is starting its fifth week and is staying for an indefinite run.

With anti-fascist greetings,

We Must Forget Racial Lines

We are in the war now. It had long been predicted by news analysts and commentators. However, the blow came and caught America off guard. As the President stated, "It came without warning." We are in for a long time. Before it is over many lives will have been lost and many billions of dollars will have been spent, but whatever the cost, we should be willing to pay the price for the preservation or this great country of ours.

DEC 12 1941

Every American has been called upon to give his full support to the cause. Regardless of race, color or creed, we are Americans. In the time of this emergency, we must forget all differences and racial discrimination and unite for the cause of America.

15,000,000 Negroes Ready, Rep. Mitchell Tells U. S. Congress

Comment of Leaders Show Complete Unity Of Race in Fight Against Nipponese

Colored Americans from all walks of life and possessing all shades of opinions were united this week in this country's fight to crush the enemy following an attack by Japanese bombers on Pearl Harbor in the Pacific Ocean, and the subsequent declaration of war by the United States on the Empire of Japan.

Leaders rushed telegrams to President Roosevelt pledging anew the loyalty of the Negro and thousands of younger men stormed recruiting stations offering themselves for services in the armed forces of the nation. There appeared one aim and one purpose . . . to wage was to the bitter end against the aggressors from across the sea.

Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell rose in the House of Representatives shortly after the President asked for a declaration of war Monday and pledged his loyalty, that of his district and of the 15,000,000 Negroes in America. Said the congressman:

"Mr. Speaker, this is undoubtedly the gravest and most serious question that has come before the Congress during the seven years I have served in this body. The request that the President has made comes after an unwarranted and deadly assault has been made upon the citizens of this Government by Japan. There is only one sensible position for this Congress to take: We must accept the challenge which comes from Japan in the form of the most brutal attack that has been made upon this Government during the existance of our country. This attack is a part of the program of the totalitarian powers in their combined effort to wipe out the possibility

Harlem Turns Out For Air Raid Work

DEC 11 1941

Jam Police Stations to Volunteer for Raid Protection Activity

The Negro people are volunteering "1,000 per cent" as air raid wardens and for other tasks in Civilian Defense and demands for enrollment having been so heavy Tuesday that at least one police station ran out of forms for signing up the volunteers.

This information, with slight variation, was given by men and women in charge of signing up volunteers at the 25th, the 28th and the 32nd precinct stations, located respectively at 126th St. and Lexington Ave., 229 W. 123rd St., and 250 W. 125th St. in Harlem, where civilians worked under direction of police officers.

Each of these stations was crowded throughout most of Tuesday and yesterday, air raid alarms in the early afternoon Tuesday and earlier in the day yesterday having caused an unprecedented turnout, according to reports. Hundreds of Negro air raid wardens reported for duty at previously designated stations.

Most of the volunteers were apparently women, their ages ranging from that of high school students to grandmothers. They seemed also to represent all stations of life. Asked why they were volunteering, they invariably replied that they wished to help their country.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

All of Us Are Important

Until there is constructive criticism of the administration, the American people will be either slavish, supporting whatever President Roosevelt asks, or knavish, opposing the same. We talk of democracy and prepare to defend freedom, but not zealously and to a man as we would if we realized fully that freedom and democracy are the individual's principal business in these critical times.

DEC 12 1941

Partners in a commercial enterprise talk back and forth when they assemble to determine policies. Because they have a common objective, their criticism of each other's ideas is helpful, eliminating weaknesses without paying the price of experience.

Our President is handling sums of money greater than were ever known before. He faces complications that are world wide. Only if he were infallible could he do without the least of us. Any let-George-do-it attitude cuts down the loyal citizen's contribution to defense, and leaves the nation's business to the selfish. No wonder defense costs have multiplied over the estimates.

The citizen who counts himself a cog necessary to the whole machine, may find Franklin D. Roosevelt impatient of interference, but that does not matter. He is the pilot. Let him steer. It helps for the man at the oar to put his head and his heart into his work. Details of defense, the part of the work that is divided among us all, must be done well or the whole job suffers.

Already critics of the administration like Senator Byrd of Virginia are saying our defense is not making the speed it could and should. Workers are getting fancy wages. Manufacturers have new plants built for them at government expense. Producers of the necessities raise prices. But our soldiers are training with wooden guns and the fighting forces abroad for whom we have taxed ourselves to give lease lend aid have only part of the supplies we might have sent them.

The need of constructive criticism is evident. We had better treat the administration's program as our own, for which we both work and worry, or we will wake up too late like France and the other conquered nations. It is more important that we help America make ready its defense of freedom and democracy than swell the throng who trade adulation of Roosevelt for fat contracts and big jobs.

We Must Forget Racial Lines

We are in the war now. It had long been predicted by news analysts and commentators. However, the blow came and caught America off guard. As the President stated, "It came without warning." We are in for a long time. Before it is over many lives will have been lost and many billions of dollars will have been spent, but whatever the cost, we should be willing to pay the price for the preservation or this great country of ours.

DEC 12 1941

Every American has been called upon to give his full support to the cause. Regardless of race, color or creed, we are Americans. In the time of this emergency, we must forget all differences and racial discrimination and unite for the cause of America.

15,000,000 Negroes Ready, Rep. Mitchell Tells U. S. Congress

Colored Americans from all walks of life and possessing all shades of opinions were united this week in this country's fight to crush the enemy following an attack by Japanese bombers on Pearl Harbor in the Pacific Ocean, and the subsequent declaration of war by the United States on the Empire of Japan.

Leaders rushed telegrams to President Roosevelt pledging anew the loyalty of the Negro and thousands of younger men stormed recruiting stations offering themselves for services in the armed forces of the nation. There appeared one aim and one purpose . . . to wage was to the bitter end against the aggressors from across the sea.

Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell rose in the House of Representatives shortly after the President asked for a declaration of war Monday and pledged his loyalty, that of his district and of the 15,000,000 Negroes in America. Said the congressman:

"Mr. Speaker, this is undoubtedly the gravest and most serious question that has come before the Congress during the seven years I have served in this body. The request that the President has made comes after an unwarranted and deadly assault has been made upon the citizens of this Government by Japan. There is only one sensible position for this Congress to take: We must accept the challenge which comes from Japan in the form of the most brutal attack that has been made upon this Government during the existance of our country. This attack is a part of the program of the totalitarian powers in their combined effort to wipe out the possibility

DEC 11 1941

Jam Police Stations to Volunteer for Raid Protection Activity

The Negro people are volunteering "1,000 per cent" as air raid wardens and for other tasks in Civilian Defense and demands for enrollment having been so heavy Tuesday that at least one police station ran out of forms for signing up the volunteers.

This information, with slight variation, was given by men and women in charge of signing up volunteers at the 25th, the 28th and the 32nd precinct stations, located respectively at 126th St. and Lexington Ave., 229 W. 123rd St., and 250 W. 125th St. in Harlem, where civilians worked under direction of police officers.

Each of these stations was crowded throughout most of Tuesday and yesterday, air raid alarms in the early afternoon Tuesday and earlier in the day yesterday having caused an unprecedented turnout, according to reports. Hundreds of Negro air raid wardens reported for duty at previously designated stations.

Most of the volunteers were apparently women, their ages ranging from that of high school students to grandmothers. They seemed also to represent all stations of life. Asked why they were volunteering, they invariably replied that they wished to help their country.

All of Us Are Important

Until there is constructive criticism of the administration, the American people will be either slavish, supporting whatever President Roosevelt asks, or knavish, opposing the same. We talk of democracy and prepare to defend freedom, but not zealously and to a man as we would if we realized fully that freedom and democracy are the individual's principal business in these critical times.

Partners in a commercial enterprise talk back and forth when they assemble to determine policies. Because they have a common objective, their criticism of each other's ideas is helpful, eliminating weaknesses without paying the price of experience.

Our President is handling sums of money greater than were ever known before. He faces complications that are world wide. Only if he were infallible could he do without the least of us. Any let-George-do-it attitude cuts down the loyal citizen's contribution to defense, and leaves the nation's business to the selfish. No wonder defense costs have multiplied over the estimates.

The citizen who counts himself a cog necessary to the whole machine, may find Franklin D. Roosevelt impatient of interference, but that does not matter. He is the pilot. Let him steer. It helps for the man at the oar to put his head and his heart into his work. Details of defense, the part of the work that is divided among us all, must be done well or the whole job suffers.

Already critics of the administration like Senator Byrd of Virginia are saying our defense is not making the speed it could and should. Workers are getting fancy wages. Manufacturers have new plants built for them at government expense. Producers of the necessities raise prices. But our soldiers are training with wooden guns and the fighting forces abroad for whom we have taxed ourselves to give lease lend aid have only part of the supplies we might have sent them.

The need of constructive criticism is evident. We had better treat the administration's program as our own, for which we both work and worry, or we will wake up too late like France and the other conquered nations. It is more important that we help America make ready its defense of freedom and democracy than swell the throng who trade adulation of Roosevelt for fat contracts and big jobs.

Negro Mother Leads Air Raid Wardens in Her Zone in Harlem

By Eugene Gordon

Mrs. Nora Sanders, of 2 E. 127th St., a Negro mother, is alternate warden for the sector in that zone which takes in blocks of buildings from 124th St. and Madison Ave. north to 142nd St., then across to Fifth Ave. back to 124th St. Her's is Sector M.

It is populated chiefly by Negro, Finnish and Italian families. It is Mrs. Sander's business to work with these men and women in a way to serve the best interests of themselves, their community and their city.

"I consider it a privilege for women—and especially Negro women—to be able to take part in this demonstration of preparedness against attacks from enemy aircraft," Mrs. Sanders said yesterday.

She is a handsome young woman whose profession is typist. She speaks in quick, decisive tones, and it is easy, observing her, to see that she is personified efficiency.

DEC 17 1941

ACTIVE CIVIC WORKER

Her living room seemed small and crowded, owing to the size and solidity of its furnishings. A baby grand piano loomed across nearly half of one end of the room. A portrait of Beethoven hung on the wall flanking one side of the French doors. On the other side were the complacent and beautiful features of Mozart. The French doors were closed and against them stood a table with a typewriter. Beside the machine lay sheets of yellow copy paper with two vertical columns of names and addresses of air raid wardens under Mrs. Sanders' supervision.

Fastened on the back of the closed doors were three framed documents identifying Mrs. Sanders with the President's Birthday Party for infantile paralysis victims. One was a letter from the head of a committee in charge of arranging such a party. Another showed her to be an active civic worker.

The police officer at the 25th Precinct Station, 126th Street, east of Lexington Ave., had spoken of Mrs. Sanders as "a very fine lady who knows how to get along with people." In directing me to her home he had averred that she liked and understood people.

PROUD OF SERVICE

"We Negro women are proud to be in a position to aid those who may suffer injury from bomb explosions and fires," Mrs. Sanders said.

She hoped Negro women would take advantage of this chance to learn what is being taught air raid wardens. If the time ever comes when this knowledge will be put to a test, she wanted the Negro women to meet that test with honor.

DEC 17 1941

"What kind of cooperation do you get, Mrs. Sanders from the white and the Negro wardens under you?"

"One hundred per cent. Positively 100 per cent."

She added that the cooperation from the police officers in charge of Air Raid Precaution at the 25th Precinct was "all one could hope for." She named Captain Zimmer, Sergeant Burns and Patrolman Talbot as being "fair" and, evidently, eager to show that race or nationality "doesn't count with them."

DEC 17 1941

NEGROES JOIN SERVICE

In Sector M men outnumber women. Negro men outnumber white men. Thus far, she declared, the Negro women have been "more prompt" than whites in volunteering. Some of the whites, she explained, have relatives and friends in enemy countries and they feel that it might go against them some time if they allowed themselves to be fingerprinted.

Women post wardens will not work later than 10 P. M., unless a sudden emergency should occur.

Women post wardens will patrol their beats in one-hour shifts, going round and round their four-square blocks. They will generally patrol in pairs. Thus walking, they will take note of street lights, fire hydrants and the like, watching for signs of unusual activity of any kind in the vicinity of such places.

Their duties, in short, will resemble closely those of soldiers on post or guard duty in camp, "keeping always on the alert" for any unusual sight or sound and immediately reporting to their police station anything which seems to be out of the way.

"Scared? Of course not! In times like these the women are supposed to be as brave as the men."

DEC 17 1941

TRAINED IN FIRST AID

All air raid wardens have been trained in first aid. They have learned also how to distinguish various types of bombs. As alternate sector wardens for Sector M Mrs. Sanders will oversee the patrols in her area and make sure that all Air Raid Precaution workers are at their posts. She will regularly receive reports from the air raid wardens.

"We Negro women want to perform the same services as white women. Defending our homeland and our homes is our cause as well as theirs. Our men and their men will be fighting Hitler and the Japanese and Italian fascists right along with their men. Our place is beside them, whether at home or in the hospital or on the battlefield. We have no fear."

She said she believed the status of Negro women would revert to one worse than slavery if the fascists won.

"I feel that the Negro woman—all women, but especially the Negro woman—would never again in our lifetime find a place in the civic or any other part of our common life, if we had to live under the flag of Nazism or fascism."

She added quietly:

"We will not retreat! They must not win!"

War—And National Unity At Last

DEC 13 1941

THIS Nation was shocked last Sunday afternoon by the dreadful reality that war had descended upon us. The shock served to unite as one the people of the United States. The leaders of those groups which had opposed our participation in the European conflict as a defensive measure were quick to voice an instant change of mind and announce their readiness to throw everything they have into an all-out defense of America.

Japan's sudden attack upon our Pacific possessions — Hawaii, Guam, Wake Island and the Philipines — was as unprecedented in our history, as it was infamous in its character. It brought home to us in grim tragedy the war tactics of the Dictator nations: attack first and declare war afterwards. In sheer treachery the Japanese method of launching their war upon the United States equalled, if it did not surpass, anything the Germans have done. While their special ambassadors were actually pretending to negotiate a peace satisfactory to both nations, the final outcome of which negotiations it was supposed would have been awaited, the Japs were actually bringing up their submarines and planes stealthily and treacherously, for an unsuspected attack upon this Nation's main defense outpost, at a moment predetermined when the special diplomat left his shores. It is clear, as Secretary of State Hull said, that the whole mission of Kurusu, special emissary, in colaboration with Ambassador Nomura, was characterized by mendacity and fraud.

The United States is now in this war, and all its people, without regard to any notions formerly held concerning the correctness of our foreign policy, or our domestic policies, are determined not only to defend their country with their lives and all of their resources, but they are determined that the Japanese, the German and the Italian aggressors must be destroyed.

Whatever considerations Japan might have been entitled to in the processes of military and naval warfare have been forfeited by its uncivilized manner of opening her war upon the United States, plus her unholy alliance with Hitler and Mussolini. The American armed forces and the American people will remember this.

In this hour of grave crisis the United States can, as has always been true, depend upon the absolute loyalty and devotion of our 12,000,000 Negro-Americans. Always, in every crisis through which the Nation has passed, our people have contributed their lives and their labor without stint or limit. They will do so in this crisis. We crave the opportunity to serve — and we do not crave to serve in the softest places. We want to defend our country in whatever manner it needs to be defended, and wherever we are called upon to go. Like all minority groups we have our just grievances. As a special racial group used to repression we have grievances over and beyond the average minority, but we are now at war; we are realistic enough to know that what liberties we do enjoy are now at stake; that the dreadful thing that today challenges the United States and all of the democracies is more dangerous, more devastating, than anything that could happen under our present way of life. We therefore close ranks, and join with fervent patriotism in this battle for America, a battle that must end in complete victory for America and her allies, no matter what the cost.

Chicago, Illinois

MAN AND WOMAN POWER.

With from 7½ to 10 million men to be drawn for the armed forces of the country at a time when there is going to be a demand for all the goods our industry can turn out it will be necessary to find new labor for the factories. Some of the necessary man power will be provided by the demobilization of WPA and the other agencies which were set up to create jobs when there was widespread unemployment. Other applicants will now be found to be suitable who were previously regarded as too old. Also, when there is a labor shortage, the discriminations against jobseekers based upon color, race, or religion will disappear.

DEC 17 1941

Probably the greatest source of new labor, however, will be found among women. In the United States in 1940 there were 12,846,565 women with gainful occupations. This was an increase of 20.3 per cent since 1930, of 50.3 per cent since 1920, and 59.1 per cent since 1910, while the number of working males in those periods was increasing by 5.5 per cent, 21.0 per cent, and 32.9 per cent.

However, altho the number of employed women has been increasing more rapidly than the number of employed men, the ladies still make up only 24.3 per cent of the total labor force of the country. In Germany, as early as 1907, more than one-third of the women had jobs, and in South Africa in 1911 the proportion was 47.6 per cent. The Fascists in both Italy and Germany have insisted that the woman's place is in the home, giving birth to children as often as possible and caring for the growing broods. Their proportion to total employment had been going down. But withdrawals from the labor force for military service, while industry in Germany has been at a peak, forced the Nazis to put the hausfraus to work in the factories. Three hundred thousand women are in the compulsory labor service in Germany. Households may not have servants without special permits.

The soviets did not place the emphasis upon breeding which the Fascists did, and the employment of women in industries in Russia has increased rapidly under the present r[illegible]ne. U[illegible]der the second five year plan the announced intention was to draw 33.9 per cent of the working forces from the ranks of women.

Last spring the British government was "calling all girls"—for registration for war work. Three million registered, a million have been interviewed and classified, and 750,000 who formerly did no work are now employed in munitions factories.

DEC 17 1941

In this country girls have been taking over more and more of the boys' jobs in the last two years—notably as messengers and clerks. They will no doubt soon be seen as elevator operators, and may even be employed to operate the buses and the taxicabs. There will also be some shifts by women from one kind of work to another. For some time housemaids and waitresses have been giving up their jobs to work in the factories. There will be more of such changes as successive draft calls take young men from the factories. This very fact will tend to decrease the number of married women who might return to the clerical and professional jobs they had while single, for milady will have to take over the duties in the kitchen when Bridget takes a job on the assembly line. Later it may be found necessary to adopt the British system of child "minders" to release mothers for war work.

THAT NEGRO DIVISION

DEC 20 1941

In creating a Negro division the War Department is not establishing a new policy.

DEC 20 1941

There were two Negro divisions in 1918, but they were partially officered by Negroes while the new Negro division will for a long time be chiefly officered by whites, especially above the rank of first lieutenant.

Even though the proposed Negro officers' training schools turn out several hundred subalterns, the administrative and tactical units above the company section will be commanded by whites.

DEC 20 1941

This logically follows from the Army's long peacetime policy severely restricting officer training for Negroes. We have few R.O.T.C. field officers.

Of course, if the goal is segregation rather than democracy, the formation of the Negro division is a step in advance; but it is neither the one nor the other at present and will not be for a long time to come.

If we are to have a democratic army, dividing the selectees according to so-called race is scarcely the way to have it.

DEC 20 1941

If we are to have a segregated army, then the Negro units should be commanded by Negroes, and even though this cannot be done now and efficiency be maintained, it ought to be clearly stated and understood that this IS the ultimate goal, and we should all work sincerely toward it.

The Army has been vague, hesitant and indefinite in its handling of the Negro, trying to satisfy at the same time the Negrophobes and the Negroes, the reactionaries and the liberals.

We think the brass hats in Washington should now establish a clean-cut policy one way or the other and have the courage to carry it out.

Negro Congress Head Urges Unity for War

DEC 9 - 1941

DEC 9 - 1941

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Denouncing Japan's declaration of war against the United States as an unprovoked act of aggression coming "at the very moment our government was seeking means to maintain peace," Dr. Max Yergan, president of the National Negro Congress issued a statement today on behalf of the organization which emphasized "the united active support of the Negro people for whatever steps the President and our Government may take to defend our nation and our people" against Hitler and his Axis satellites.

DEC 9 - 1941

At the same time the Negro Congress president revealed that an emergency meeting of the organization's national administrative committee has been called here tomorrow because of the grave situation facing the country. Dr. Yergan's statement, which was issued from Indianapolis, Indiana, yesterday was made public by officials of the Congress here.

The text of the statement follows:

DEC 9 - 1941

"True to the treacherous Axis line laid down by Hitler, Japan has attacked the United States, bombing our bases in Hawaii and the Phillipines, even at the very moment the President and our Government were seeking a means of maintaining peace. This new grave situation facing our country calls for united action of all our people. The Negro people, together with the rest of the American people stand ready to give united support to whatever steps the President and our Government take to defend our country, our nation and our people in this grave hour.

"We stand ready to give our all in the fight to destroy Hitler and Hitlerism. With full realization of the gravity of this situation I have called an emergency meeting of our organization's national administrative committee to take further steps, by way of implementing our national defense efforts. The Negro people are fully aware that renewed efforts by agents of Japan and Hitler such as the America First Committee, must be combatted vigorously in the interest of fullest national unity."

Specialists Study in Same Classes with Whites; 369th Officers Take 10-Month Course in 10 Weeks

(Twenty-second in a Series of Articles on Army Camps Written Exclusively for the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers)

By OLLIE STEWART

FORT MONROE, Va.—The story of this army post, located about four miles from Hampton Institute, at Old Point Comfort, is the story of a handful of men — carefully selected, very much on the spot, but making good in spectacular fashion. All told, there have been only 107 colored soldiers stationed here at one time, with none of them draftees. The maximum number was here during the past autumn, when there were ten commissioned officers from the 369th Coast Artillery Regiment, located at Camp Edwards, Mass.; forty-two men in the Enlisted Specialists' School, who come from camps all over the nation, and fifty-five men in the ast Artillery School Detachnt, who form a permanent stat complement.

Taking them in reverse order, the C. A. School Detachment keeps things in order around the place.

This outfit furnishes firemen, janitors and carpenters for the school. It also furnishes cooks, kitchen police details for officers' mess halls, plus instructors for enlisted divisions — such as printers for field print shops, photographers and similar craftsmen.

Grouped with these men, but in camp for an entirely different reason, are the men in the Enlisted Specialists' School. Handpicked, with a high average of intelligence, and mostly noncommissioned officers, these enlisted students are studying along with white enlisted men and getting training in such subjects as the following:

DEC 13 1941

Radio communications, electrical fire control, automotive mechanics and truck masters courses, master gunners, stereo observers and electricity. The electrical course has the largest enrollment — including 22 men.

But all the enlisted men's courses offered at the Coast Artillery School have at least one colored student, I was told, and white and colored attend classes together.

These students remain here at Ft. Monroe (or Fortress Monroe—a letter addressed either way will reach its destination) for a period of twelve weeks, then they go back to their home regiments or battalions.

The commissioned officers who were here from the 369th were also in school at the Coast Artillery School, officers' division. They began a refresher course (anti-aircraft) on August 23, and were scheduled to remain here until November 1. Other colored artillery officers probably will be sent here.

A look at their schedule, however, makes it plain that what they really were doing was taking a ten-month course in ten weeks.

DEC 13 1941

"Today, for instance," one officer told me, "we had a four-year course in electricity in one hour!"

These ten officers had a two-story building all to themselves on officers' row, along the seawall, and later were quartered in a smaller new building. And in this respect their color gave them an advantage — for the white officers taking courses with them always are jammed and packed together like sardines.

Work Highly Technical

Chatting with Col. Chauncey M. Hooper, section leader and commanding officer of the 369th, I learned that coast artillery work, especially anti-aircraft, is highly technical and constantly improving.

Every time the Germans or British or what-not win a battle in Europe with a new device or new tactical maneuver, our experts try to improve on it and pass it along to our training units.

A thorough knowledge of higher mathematics is invaluable in anti-aircraft work—for even though our new army uses mechanical aids for range finding and plane detection and altitudes, the men who fire the anti-aircraft guns have to be skilled enough to calculate on weather conditions, wind velocity, angles, etc.

The 369th was converted from an infantry regiment to a coast artillery regiment August 1, 1940, but the regiment did not know about the conversion until August 8. The change didn't work any hardships on the outfit, however, because the men and officers were such good soldiers they could make rapid adjustments in a very short time.

Equipment Came Late

However, the 369th did all of its coast artillery work out of books until January of this year. The regiment had one demonstration with a few borrowed guns last fall. Now it is fairly well equipped with 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, 37 mm. (mobile) guns, 50-calibre machine-guns, searchlights and sound detectors.

Other 369th officers here with Colonel Hooper were: Lt. Col. Wilmer F. Lucas, Capt. Cato L. Baskervill, Capt. Percy E. Daniels, First Lt. Thomas D. Davis, Second Lt. Rupert V. Frazier, Capt. Jesse R. Harper, Major Vernon C. Riddick, Capt. Alonzo S. Ward and Second Lt. Otho Van Exel.

All-White Until May

The first colored men to ever attend school here, or be stationed here, arrived on May 1, 1941, and in this group was First Sgt. Eldridge T. Anglin, of Chicago. Sergeant Anglin is an enlisted man with a little over a year of service behind him. He came here from Fort Bragg, N.C.

The mess sergeant for the detachment is Sgt. James Lynch, formerly of the 25th Infantry at Fort Huachuca. He has been in the army only twenty-two years.

Among those in the enlisted men's school are four New Yorkers, of the 369th. They are Master Sergeant William L. Magee, Staff Sgt. Charles Saunders, Tech. Sgt. Richmond Manhertz, and Pcf. Wilfred Hutchinson.

What Leaders Think Of War In Pacific

By LUCIUS JONES

The consensus of opinion among Negro leaders of Atlanta seews definitely to be that the United States has no alternative but to take immediate counteraction against Japan, following reported sinking of two American warships and Japanese air attacks on the U. S. naval stronghold at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and on defense facilities at Manila Sunday.

DEC 8 - 1941

In commenting on the latest attack by Japanese forces, John Wesley Dobbs, president of the Atlanta Civic and Political League who is also Grandmaster of Prince Hall Masosn of Georgia, said:

"We have no alternative but to defend ourselves. If Japan, or another power, for that matter, fires upon us, I feel of the unalterable opinion that all of us, all true Americans, should rally to the defense of this nation. We should stand firmly behind President Roosevelt.'

If clarification, official apology or satisfactory explanation from Japanese officials at Toyo cannot be established imediately, the United States has no choice bu to enter into immediate warfare, observed Prof. C. L. Harper, principal of Booker T Washington Hi School. He said Japan . is definitely obligated to explain this unexpected air attack on the American naval stronghold.

General Manager C. A. Scott of the Atlanta Daily WORLD, had the folowing comment to make:

"The Japanese attack will cause immediate war.

"It is the duty of every American, regardless of race, to follow his Commander-in-Chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in defending this nation".

Prof. C. A Bacote, instructor of history at Atlanta University and Morehouse College said that, if reports are reliable, Toyo's official position in the matter has been unmistakably declared — and we are already virtually at war.

DEC 8 - 1941

"Japan seems determined to force a showdown", the educator said, "and the United States cannot well be expected to sit by and see such acts of aggregation go unpenalized. We simply cannot back down. We must save our national honor".

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, had an interesting observation to make.

"As far as I know", the educator said, "no formal declaration of the official position of the Japanese government at Toyo has beei ese government at Tokyo has beer that Honolulu has been attacked. Undoubtedly, the United States should stand ready to defend the rights of this country.

"On the other hand, I would like to see what the government in Tokyo has to say. The specific course of action taken by the United States should depend upon the attitude of Japanese government officials".

A number of other leading Atlantans were sought for a statement of their reaction to the latest Japanese aggregation, but they were either out of city or could not be reached by telephone.

A young Negro, a mess attendant, first class, in the United States Navy, was the first Birmingham man to be reported killed since Japan's attack on this country. To Julius Ellsberry, formerly an ordinary drug store delivery boy before his enlistment in 1939, went the honor of being Birmingham's first known to have given the "last, full measure of devotion."

Julius Ellsberry's death will, of course, sadden his relatives and friends, both in the service and those he left behind here in Birmingham. not all. Besides, there is an imperishable sense of his love for his country and the cause which this nation holds high.

The city has begun its efforts to morial Park. Apparently there is still discussion, however, about park. Would it not be appropriate to consider calling it Ellsberry Park?

A thorough knowledge of higher mathematics is invaluable in anti-aircraft work— for even though our new army uses mechanical aids for range finding and plane detection and altitudes, the men who fire the anti-aircraft guns have to be skilled enough to calculate on weather conditions, wind velocity, angles, etc.

The 369th was converted from an infantry regiment to a coast artillery regiment August 1, 1940, but the regiment did not know about the conversion until August 8. The change didn't work any hardships on the outfit, however, because the men and officers were such good soldiers they could make rapid adjustments in a very short time.

Equipment Came Late

However, the 369th did all of its coast artillery work out of books until January of this year. The regiment had one demonstration with a few borrowed guns last fall. Now it is fairly well equipped with 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, 37 mm. (mobile) guns, 50-calibre machine-guns, searchlights and sound detectors.

All-White Until May

The first colored men to ever attend school here, or be stationed here, arrived on May 1, 1941, and in this group was First Sgt. Eldridge T. Anglin, of Chicago. Sergeant Anglin is an enlisted man with a little over a year of service behind him. He came here from Fort Bragg, N.C.

The mess sergeant for the detachment is Sgt. James Lynch, formerly of the 25th Infantry at Fort Huachuca. He has been in the army only twenty-two years.

Among those in the enlisted men's school are four New Yorkers, of the 369th. They are Master Sergeant William L. Magee, Staff Sgt. Charles Saunders, Tech. Sgt. Richmond Manhertz, and Pcf. Wilfred Hutchinson.

What Leaders Think Of War In Pacific

By LUCIUS JONES

The consensus of opinion among Negro leaders of Atlanta seems definitely to be that the United States has no alternative but to take immediate counteraction against Japan, following reported sinking of two American warships and Japanese air attacks on the U. S. naval stronghold at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and on defense facilities at Manila Sunday.

In commenting on the latest attack by Japanese forces, John Wesley Dobbs, president of the Atlanta Civic and Political League who is also Grandmaster of Prince Hall Masosn of Georgia, said:

"We have no alternative but to defend ourselves. If Japan, or another power, for that matter, fires upon us, I feel of the unalterable opinion that all of us, all true Americans, should rally to the defense of this nation. We should stand firmly behind President Roosevelt.'

If clarification, official apology or satisfactory explanation from Japanese officials at Toyo cannot be established imediately, the United States has no choice bu to enter into immediate warfare, observed Prof. C. L. Harper, principal of Booker T Washington Hi School. He said Japan . is definitely obligated to explain this unexpected air attack on the American naval stronghold.

General Manager C. A. Scott of the Atlanta Daily WORLD, had the folowing comment to make:

"The Japanese attack will cause immediate war.

"It is the duty of every American, regardless of race, to follow his Commander-in-Chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in defending this nation".

Prof. C. A Bacote, instructor of history at Atlanta University and Morehouse College said that, if reports are reliable, Toyo's official position in the matter has been unmistakably declared — and we are already virtually at war.

"Japan seems determined to force a showdown", the educator said, "and the United States cannot well be expected to sit by and see such acts of aggregation go unpenalized. We simply cannot back down. We must save our national honor".

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, had an interesting observation to make.

"As far as I know", the educator said, "no formal declaration of the official position of the Japanese government at Toyo has been that Honolulu has been attacked. Undoubtedly, the United States should stand ready to defend the rights of this country.

"On the other hand, I would like to see what the government in Tokyo has to say. The specific course of action taken by the United States should depend upon the attitude of Japanese government officials".

A number of other leading Atlantans were sought for a statement of their reaction to the latest Japanese aggregation, but they were either out of city or could not be reached by telephone.

A Negro First

A young Negro, a mess attendant, first class, in the United States Navy, was the first Birmingham man to be reported killed since Japan's attack on this country. To Julius Ellsberry, formerly an ordinary drug store delivery boy before his enlistment in 1939, went the honor of being Birmingham's first known to have given the "last, full measure of devotion."

Julius Ellsberry's death will, of course, sadden his relatives and his friends, both in the service and here in Birmingham. But in a greater way, he left behind the sadness is of that park will be the Colored Me-not all. Besides, there is an imperishable sense of his love for his country and the cause which this nation holds high.

The city has begun its efforts to morial Park. Apparently there is still some discussion, however, about ing the park. Would it not be appropriate to consider calling it Ellsberry Park?

OPINION

MR. PRESIDENT, COUNT ON US

WE ARE AT WAR DEC 13 1941

Japan, in a surprise attack upon United States' possessions, began hostilities in the early morning hours of Sunday. Congress, on Monday, answered Japan's stab in the back by its own formal declaration that the conflict is on.

Two things which we dreaded have occurred:

First: We must fight on two fronts. We must battle Hitler in the Atlantic and Nippon in the Pacific.

Second: We are unprepared. Not only this year and last, but for many years we have pleaded with our countrymen to give us a patriot's chance to learn how to defend our country and ourselves.

Today we have fewer than 100,000 men in the army. We have no colored men prepared to fly and none trained as seamen for the big two-ocean navy our country needs so desperately.

We have said before and we say now that we colored people are Americans, and as Americans who have as much stake in this our land as any other citizens, we will do our share to defend it, and to maintain its freedom and independence. These are ours as much as any other Americans'. DEC 13 1941

But we cannot defend America with a dust brush, a mop and a white apron.

We cannot march against enemy planes and tanks, and challenge warships armed only with a whiskbroom and a wide grin.

Now with the enemy at our door, we say again to our fellow Americans: Open recruiting stations in every branch of the armed services to all Americans before it is too late. Take down the color bar.

Compel defense industries to accept any American who can handle a wrench or a screwdriver.

Erase the color line.

Recruit the nurse, the doctor, the laborer, the chaplain, the skilled worker, the business man.

Don't ask their color, ask only whether they love America enough to fight for her, and if need be, to die for her.

Twelve million colored people, without bitterness for what has happened in the past, offer themselves to the Chief Executive in this crisis and say, "Mr. President, you can count on us."

Negroes 'Ready' Says Committee for Allies

DEC 13 1941

Calls for Unity Against Axis, Aid to Allies; Maps Civilian Program

The Negro people of America "stand ready" to give their services against "the ruling military clique of Japan upon whose members Hitler has conferred the disgusting and insulting title of 'Honorary Aryan,'" declared a statement issued yesterday by the newly-formed Negro Committee for American-Allied Victory.

The statement also declared that while the Negroes have only respect for the Japanese people, the destruction of Tokio's fascist-military oligarchy is essential to "keep the pathway to freedom open." It called for continued aid to the "anti-Axis forces—Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China and Ethiopia."

The committee has temporary offices at 2384 Seventh Ave. Dr. Arnold Donawa, executive secretary, and Dr. Vernon H. Dubois, director.

"America must remove the shackles from its Negro citizens and tear down jim crow barriers now standing in the way of full participation in the war effort," the statement announced.

DEC 13 1941

NEGROES STIRRED

"The attack by Hitler's Axis partner, Japan, on the United States should stir every Negro to action, as it does every other patriotic American," it began.

"Our watchword should be 'Every Negro man, woman and child united for national defense'."

The statement declares that Japan's "treacherous and lightning thrusts at United States defenses" were based neither on "aggressive measures" by the United States nor on "the interests of the Japanese people." The "forces of the 'New Order' of slavery are bent on making the world their private slave pen and making Nazi racism the law of society, and not one Negro should be fooled into believing otherwise," the statement adds.

Dr. Donovan said the committee hoped to coordinate the activities of various other groups having the same general aims. It stands firmly behind Mayor LaGuardia as chief of civilian defense efforts.

OUTLINE CIVILIAN AIMS

Some of the immediate tasks outlined at yesterday's conference were: To persuade the Red Cross to open a 10-week course in Harlem for its Volunteer Drivers and Motor Corps Division; to have established in Harlem a Volunteer Service, which would include social work for families of service men; to see that the Negro people are represented on the board proposed by President Roosevelt to adjust differences between industry and labor.

The Committee will hold its first public meeting next Wednesday evening in the Little Theatre of the Harlem YMCA, 135th St., near Seventh Ave.

Rev. James H. Robinson, pastor of the Church of the Master, 86 Morningside Ave., is chairman of the Negro Committee for American-Allied Victory. Vice chairman are Ferdinand C. Smith, National Secretary of the National Maritime Union, Dr. Cyril H. Dolly, member of the Manhattan Central Medical Wilfred E. Lewin, Ethiopian World Society and of the Draft Board, Federation, and Archbishop William Ernest.

Sentenced For Evading Draft

DEC 17 1941

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—A sentence of from one to three years for falsifying his draft questionaire was imposed on Dallas Thompson, 21, here last week by Federal Judge J. Leroy Adair of the southern district of Illinois on temporary assignments in the district.

"The army doesn't need a fellow like you. You wouldn't be much use to the army. The service wants only the best boys of America. I can't have much sympathy for you", the judge said in passing sentence.

District Director of Selective service William E. Leahy expressed complete satisfaction when notified of the sentence, saying it would serve as a warning to young men attempting to evade their duty in the war emergency.

Thompson was indicted on a charge of making false statements concerning his ability to read and write.

Negroes Here 'Ready to Go'

Atlanta's big Negro population displayed patriotic unity as word of the Japanese aggression spread Sunday night into such sections as Forrest Avenue and Decatur Street.

The following are typical statements by Negro citizens soon after they had heard of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor:

Sergeant Arthur Green, Fort Benning: "The colored soldier and the colored citizen will act as quick as any group of Americans in defending their country."

S. H. Truitt, 43, a machine gun sergeant in World War I: "There's nothing to the Japs. They are messing with the wrong folks now. The colored people are ready to fight for their country."

Ozel Stimson, 21: "The young people of our race and the older people, too, are ready to render their services to their country when needed."

Thomas Sheffield, 27: "I feel like we are all Americans, and we will be fighting together to protect our country against anybody who attacks it."

Thomas Taylor, 28: "We're ready to fight to protect our country."

Otis Brundage, 18: "When they're ready to call me, I'm ready. The Japs have done the wrong thing and they are going to get a good whipping for it."

James Howard, 17: "If they want me to fight, I'm ready. I'm not scared of the yellow men."

America Needs Negroes

DEC 2 1 1941

LAST week we read that three Negro boys, out of their deep loyalty to their country spurred and stimulated by an unprecedented crisis, went to the recruiting office to volunteer their services in the fighting forces of the country. We read that there were other volunteers from many racial and religious groups who, too, had read of the Japanese attack on America and hurried to offer their lives, if need be, to the cause of American democracy. We read that among this group was even a Filipino volunteer who wanted to do something to help America to win against Axis aggression.

We also read that the colored vounteers were turned down. They were told that the government had no place for them at the present. They were pushed aside just as the Montgomery Ward and company would tell a Negro applicant for the position of a stenographer that it was hiring no Negroes. They were pushed aside just as the southern election judges would push aside a qualified colored voter at an election.

We view with alarm such a situation. It is intensified by the fact that it happened in Chicago. It is intensified by the fact that it occured in the state of Illinois—the home of Lincoln. It was intensified by the fact that these boys of color had felt the urge to offer their all to help America in the great hour that had come. They had heard and read the day before how Japan had come out of the Hawaiian skies to snuff out the lives of innocent men and women who were citizens of the United States. They had heard that without warning and while in the course of ostensible peace negotiations the Nipponese government had stabbed us in the back. So, they thought, the country would be glad to accept the offer of their services to stop the menace of the Rising Sun.

These boys were American born and American reared. No doubt several generations of their forefathers have toiled to make America the country that it is and have given their lives and labor to make for a greater democracy. On the other hand it is reasonable to surmise that some of the other volunteers at the recruiting office could not boast of a generation on American soil. But still they were taken, the Negroes were refused.

We say to America that now is not the time to work out policies of petty foolishness; to permit prejudice to creep into the policies of the country to sabotage national defense. America needs everybody that she can get to make for a real defense. She especially needs its most loyal citizens for this is no time to experiment with those whose loyalties have not been proved. She needs those whose patriotism to the colors has been shown by several generations of unstinted devotion to the cause of the principles of this country. She NEEDS NEGROES.

She needs Negroes in the navy. She needs them in the Army Air Corps. She needs them in the army. She needs them in the Marine corps.

She needs Negroes because they are fearless. She needs them because they have proved themselves to be made of the stuff that assures loyalty and devotion. She needs them because they can see better in the dark; have better coordination of body and mind; and because they are in many respects physically superior to members of other racial groups. America needs them to win and she should not make the mistake of discouraging the patriotism, the loyalty and the love of its citizens who know no other home and have no other ties. America needs Negroes.

A NEGRO LEADER SPEAKS

To the Editor The News:

DEC 1 4 1941

I am convinced that there is greater need for our sticking together here at home now than ever. I think there is a possibility of shifting emphasis from slowing down strikes to slowing down by saboteurs—wittingly and maliciously as well as unwittingly.

I don't want the white people to get off on the wrong track in their thinking by those who will circulate among them that which will lead them in our fight against the Japs to grow in hate against the Negro because he belongs to the darker group in so far as color is concerned. This is not a racial war we are engaged in. It is a war between totalitarianism and democracy. And the Negro is batting on the same team of democracy.

You see, for years and years I have heard radical and race-hating people express the hope that Japan would attack us, hoping that by such, darker people would be further liberated. I don't know how far that got around. If it did get around to any great extent the fact that it is dark people who have been attacked and against whom the Japs are directing their war in Haiti and many other small countries to the South, may change that adverse thinking.

I think our war is a war of ideas and morale as much as anything else. And that while we are fighting for life itself, we are or we must make our fight a fight for ideals we love and can love more than mere life itself.

Upon the basis of these ideals, whatever they must be, there must be at the bottom of all this, unity on the battle front as well as on the home front.

DEC 1 4 1941

To that end my paper is directing its full strength, because I don't think the white man and the black man can afford disunity while the world is on fire.

And here in Birmingham, one of the most dangerously located cities in respect of being a war objective, I think in all lines of defense, we will, in the interest of that which is best for the safety of all, make all our defense programs all-inclusive.

You have great power insofar as public thinking is concerned and I pray that you think on these things. I think they are very vital. We can't afford to be caught undressed at any point now.

DEC 1 4 1941

And, too, Russia may be with us today, but none of us can tell where anybody will be tomorrow. And while we may play ball with Russia in this emergency, we still do not want to swallow Russia hook, line and sinker. Not knowing what tomorrow may bring, I think we ought to make sure that we do everything possible to achieve voluntary unity here at home. If that is done, we can't lose.

Unity and wholehearted cooperation all along the line is very important now. I think we are in worse shape than most people seem to realize. Don't let your white people fail to remember these things. I'll do my best among my people, lest they forget.

No finer example of the unity of all Americans, now actual war has come, has been given than the voluntary adjournment of party politics, made by leaders of both democratic and republican parties.

Today such divisions among Americans are taboo, the rivalries of politics and factions being of such minor importance, compared to the big job on hand, they fade into comparative insignificance.

DEC 1 4 1941

The one great fact has emerged during this past week. That is, first and foremost, regardless of all else, we are all Americans. Differences of political allegiance, of religious belief, of race, of section mean nothing any more. We stand together, shoulder to shoulder, having gotten down to the final, basic fundamental of our life's faith—the belief in, loyalty to and pride of Americanism.

DEC 1 4 1941

After the crisis has passed, after the victory has been won, we shall, of course, return to the differences of free opinion that make a free country.

In the meantime, however, no internal dissension is to be permitted to weaken, in one iota, the strength of the united nation against our foes around the world.

Tenn. Youth First War Casualty

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER
By Staff Correspondent

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 18 — Ben Edward Holt, 21, mess attendant, first-class, in the U.S. Navy, was the first casualty from Tennessee at the Bombing of Pearl Harbor last Sunday, his relatives were informed Saturday.

DEC 20 1941

Holt is supposedly the first Tennesseean to die for his country in the current war.

Holt, a graduate of Pearl High School and a former student of A. and I. College, here, enlisted in the navy two years ago after he and several college mates decided "war was coming on."

He was the son of Elder R. E. Holt, Sr., minister of the Church of Christ in Springfield, Tenn.

The telegram received by Elder Holt was signed by Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, in charge of the Bureau of Navigation. It read:

"The navy deeply regrets to inform you that your son, Ben Edward Holt, Mess attendant, first class, U. S. N., lost his life in action in the performance of his duty and in the service of his country.

"The department extends to you its sincere sympathy in your great loss. To prevent possible aid to the enemy, please do not divulge the name of the ship or station. If the remains are recovered, they will be interred temporarily in the locality where the death occurred and you will be notified accordingly."

DEC 20 1941

Holt's sister, Mrs. Inez Stewart, received a letter Saturday from Holt, in which the youth wrote that he was all right.

He told his sister in the letter that he was ordering two tons of coal from a Nashville dealer as a Christmas present for their father.

(The Nashville coal dealer S. N. Allen, announced he had received the order, was delivering the coal to the father and was returning the money paid by young Holt.)

Holt is survived by his parents; four brother, Mack, R. E., Jr., Homer and Hawthorne; his sister, Mrs. Stewart, and his grandmother, Mrs. Missouri Oliver, all of Nashville.

'Pearl Harbor!' Is Battle Cry Of Current War

Slogan Born Week Ago Destined To Live in History.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—"Remember Pearl Harbor!"

Born last Sunday in Japan's treacherous, peace-shattering attack on the great American naval base in Hawaii, the phrase overnight became the battlecry and the by-word of the nation.

As such, it ranges itself beside such other famous expressions in American history as "Taxation without representation is tyranny," "Dam the torpedoes—full speed ahead," "Don't give up the ship," "Lafayette, we are here," and those two others dealing with poignant memories: "Remember the Maine," and "Remember the Alamo."

Prior to December 7, 1941, described by President Roosevelt as "a date which will live in infamy," Pearl Harbor meant relatively little to the average American.

Phrase Coiner Unindentified.

Today, all that is changed. Who was first to coin the phrase may never be known. It is not known now for certain who first said, "Remember the Maine." The library of congress says it came to life in a New York city barroom, shortly after the battleship Maine was sunk in Havana Harbor in 1898. An unknown man raised his glass high and said it as a toast. It became the battlecry of the Spanish-American war.

"Remember the Alamo," was voiced by General Sam Houston preceding the battle of San Jacinto in 1836 when Texas gained its independence from Mexico. The Alamo was a former Franciscan mission where a band of gallant Texas soldiers died at the hands of overwhelming Mexican forces.

Curiously, the World War seems to have had for Americans, at least, one one battlecry to ring discordantly on the ears of the foe. The tribute to LaFayette, who aided this nation in the revolution, was paid by Colonel C. E. Stanton before the Frenchman's grave.

"Make the world safe for democracy," has been credited both to H. G. Wells, the English author, and to President Woodrow Wilson. History shows President Wilson told the house in 1917 "the world must be made safe for democracy."

"Damn the torpedoes—full speed ahead" came from Admiral David Farragut in the Battle of Mobile in 1864.

"Don't give up the ship," was an order from Captain James Lawrence in the War of 1812. "Keep the guns going," he said. "Fight until she strikes or sinks. Don't give up the ship."

The famous Revolutionary War taxation slogan came prior to the nation's fight for independence. It is attributed to Patrick Henry.

Countless others were originated during the wars in which the nation took part, some famous only as local sayings, while others spread over the country for varying periods of time.

The latest, however, looks good for the duration—and then some. "Remember Pearl Harbor!"

Killed In Action

Six Jefferson Youths In U. S. Armed Forces Reported Lost

Reported deaths of members of the nation's armed forces in the Pacific war zone from Jefferson County since Japan's attack totaled six Thursday, and three Alabamians from other sections of the state, also were listed as lost in action.

Jefferson County's fatality total was increased with announcement that Charles Harvey and Clayton Jones had been killed.

Clayton Jones is the brother of Leslie Jones, 1560 Martin Avenue, Belview Heights.

Previously reported lost in action from this county were Quentin Guy McKee, of near Wylam, James Mark Lewis, of near Tarrant, Wallace Dee Hicks, of the Toadvine community, about 20 miles west of Bessemer, and Julius Ellsberry, Negro of 707 North 44th Street, Birmingham.

Meanwhile reported fatalities of men in the armed forces from other sections of the state included Edward Parker, of near Vernon, Lamar County, and a brother of Mrs. John D. Tate, 126 North 65th Place, Birmingham; Clinton Lee Hibbs, of Sardis, Etowah County, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Hibbs, and Marvin Lee Ferguson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin L. Ferguson, Sr., of Townley.

But as the fatality list increased, word was received by their families that other persons in the war zone were safe. Those listed as safe included:

Lt. Floyd Lambert, pilot in the Army Air Corps, son of Mrs. E. M. Sivley, 1220 South 15th Street; Edward Cain, son of Mrs. Lela Cain, 118 Elyton Court; Sgt. L. C. Kirkpatrick, of Route 2, Springville; Bernis Swindal, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Y. Swindal, 4116 49th Terrace, North; Ensign Lamar Andrews, son of Circuit Clerk Osa L. Andrews; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Lawson, of Ensley; J. F. Tidwell, Jr., son of J. F. Tidwell, 630 Second Avenue, North; and Earl Lloyd Fancher, brother of Mrs. R. B. Kinman, 605 14th Street, Southwest.

Two young marines, former telegraph messenger boys in Birmingham, who enlisted at the same time, were reported safe in word received Thursday from the director of an army and navy Y. M. C. A. unit in the Pacific. They are Benny A. Allison, son of Mrs. Hazel Allison, 1316 North 20th Street, and James M. Holt, 1419 North 25th Street.

JULIUS ELLSBERRY, 21, PEARL HARBOR VICTIM

DEC 20 1941

By EMORY O. JACKSON

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(SNS)—Twenty- one--old Julius Ellsberry, of 707 North 4th 4th Street, became to Birmingham what Crispus Attucks is to the nation, when it was reported that he was the first member of the nation's armed forces killed in action during Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Ellsberry "was lost in action in the performance of his duty and in the service of his country," the notification said.

He was mess attendant first class, U. S Navy, enlisting in 1939. He might have ranked higher, but in the U. S. Navy colored boys can go only so high, and in some places they can't go at all. Yet, in reality, Ellisberry has risen to a height which cannot be measured by titles or rank. No man not even an admiral can give more to his country than his life.

Rear Admi. C. M. Mimitz, of the Bureau of Navigation, Washington, notified Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ellisberry of the Death of their son. The telegram said in part: "....the department extends to you its sincerest sympathy in your great loss. To prevent possible aid to our enemies please do not divulge the name of his ship or station."

Mr. Ellsberry, the father, works at the Stockham Pipe Fitting Co.

BORN IN MONTGOMERY

Born in Montgomery, August 22, 1921, Julius was brought to Birmingham by his parents. He was president of the junior usher board at the Harmony Street Baptist church, pastored by the Rev. N. W. Whitt before joining the Navy in 1939. Finishing high school at the age of 16, he worked as delivery boy until he decided upon a sea life.

Survivors are four brothers—James, 17; Edward, 15; David, 13; Daniel 10; two sisters, Louise, 5; Mrs. Willie Mae Rutledge; mother, Mrs. Florence Ellsberry; father, J. W. Ellsberry.

Several other Birmingham boys are stationed at Pearl Harbor. Among them are Walter Cunningham, 19, and Thomas Terry, 19, of Hueytown, and Willie Watson, of Spaulding. DEC 20 1941

WRITES MOTHER

December 4, Julius wrote to his mother:

"I am still getting along fine and hope you all are the same.

"Christmas is near again and that makes two straight that I've been away. I certainly wish that I could be with you but I can't

"I am sending money order for $45. I hope you will be able to get around to all of the family with it. I don't have the time to buy presents for everybody. It is just now and then that I can get to town before the stores are closed.

"I hope that you all will have a very lovely holiday season.

"Give my love to all,

'Bubber.'"

This letter was written three days before the attack on Pearl Harbor which news came to America early Sunday morning, Dec. 7...."a date that will live in infamy." DEC 20 1941

STUDIED HERE

Ellsberry came up through the Birmingham public school system, graduating from Parker High School May 13, 1938. As can be remembered, this was the "short term" year when Birmingham public schools closed out minus a full nine-month school year.

His school record shows that he was at the Kingston school from 1927 to 1931 and at the Thomas School from 1932 to 1934. He entered Parker in 1934 and came out in 1938. DEC 20 1941

At Parker he was a member of the Parker band, which in recent years has won great applause in the Elks' national parade and in the bowl game parade in Birmingham last year. Too, he was a member of the Red Cross committee at Parker.

Principal W. B. Johnson of Parker when interviewed Thursday noted with pride after evaluating Ellsberry's scholastic work that the Navy hero "became more serious about his work as he advanced in school." His grades for the past two semesters showed marks of A, B, A, A, B,. In conduct he was "excellent."

Speaking generally of the military hero Mr. Johnson pointed out that Ellsberry "was a good boy" but he "was no flash." Talking on the principal said "we hardly knew he was here." DEC 20 1941

While at Parker Ellsberry studied upholstering under Prof. Peter Whatley. His eyes sparkling with joy, Mr. Whatley related that the Birmingham hero was "good natured," "easy to handle," "one of the best in the class," "no slacker," and "when he started a job would not stop until it was completed."

DIGGING UP SOME ROOTS THAT SPROUTED THIS PRESENT WAR

THE TOTAL NUMBER of human beings alive today is about 1,700,000,000. Of this number 550,000,000 are white, while 1,150,000,000 are colored. By comparative figures the colored races outnumber the whites more than two to one. The colored group is divided into four primary categories: yellows, browns, blacks and reds.

Labeling it by continents, Europe, North America to the Rio Grande, the southern portion of South America, the Siberian part of Asia, and Australasia constitute the real white world; while the bulk of Asia, virtually the whole of Africa, and most of Central and South America form the colored world. The whites occupy in this range of land, 22,000,000 square miles, and the colored races stretch over 31,000,000 square miles.

The yellows are the most numerous of the colored races, numbering over 500,000,000 and they thrive in eastern Asia. Much more widespread are the browns, numbering some 450,000,000 dwelling from the Pacific ocean westward across southern Asia and northern Africa to the Atlantic ocean. The blacks total about 150,000,000 and their center is Africa south of the Sahara desert, with black outposts across southern Asia to the Pacific and in the Americas. Least numerous are the reds, the Indians, of the western hemisphere. They total about 40,000,000 and are mostly located south of the Rio Grande in Latin America. DEC 20 1941

LOTHROP STODDARD in his book, "The Rising Tide of Color," published twenty years ago, had this to say regarding the growth of the colored races: "There can be no doubt that at present the colored races are increasing very much faster than the white. Treating the primary race-stocks as units, it would appear that whites tend to double in 80 years, yellows and browns in 60 years, blacks in forty years. The whites are thus the slowest breeders, and they will undoubtedly become slower still, since section after section of the white race is revealing that lowered birthrate which in France has reached the extreme of a stationary population. On the other hand, none of the colored races shows perceptible signs of declining birthrate, all tending to breed up to the limits of available subsistence . . . in fact, even those colored countries which have maintained their independence, such as China and Japan, are alopting the white man's life-conserving methods and are experiencing the same accelerated increase of population."

Mr. Stoddard continues to inform us that "the greater part of the colored world is today under white political control . . . wherever the white man goes he attempts to impose the bases of his ordered civilization . . . now what must be the inevitable result of all this? It can mean on'y one thing: a tremendous and steadily augmenting outward thrust of surplus colored men from overcrowded colored homelands. Remember that these homelands are already populated up to the available limits of subsistence . . . Japan is increasing its population at the rate of 800,000 per year, and China, at the Japanese rate, would be 6,000,000 a year."

In area Japan proper is about the size of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio combined. The Japanese empire has a total area of 260,644 square miles, and a population, including Manchukuo (formerly Manchuria, which it captured from China) of 97,697,556. It is tremendously overcrowded and must expand and that is the main reason why her guns are active today. And here, Mr. Stoddard supplies the reason for Japan's present activities thusly:

"WHERE, then, should the congested colored world tend to pour its accumulating human surplus, inexorably condemned to emigrate or starve? The answer is: into those emptier regions of the earth under white political control. But many of these relatively empty lands have been definitely set aside by the white man as his own special heritage. The upshot is that the rising flood of color finds itself walled in by white dikes debarring it from many a promised land which it would fain deluge with its dusky waves . . . thus the colored world, long restive under white political domination, is being welded by the most fundamental of instincts—the instinct of self-preservation, into a common solidarity of feeling against the dominant white man . . . "

Let us go back to the record and see what the Japanese have to say about this "walled in' position, and how long they have been thinking over the problem. On July 1913 the American Review of Reviews quoted on page 107 from the great Japanese scholar, Prof. Ryutaro Nagai, the following: "The world was not made for the white races, but for the other races as well. In Australia, South Africa, Canada, and the United States, there are vast tracts of unoccupied territory awaiting settlement, and although the citizens of the ruling Powers refuse to take up the land, no yellow people are permitted to enter. Thus, the white races seem ready to commit to the savage birds and beasts what they refuse to intrust to their brethren of the yellow race. Surely the arrogance and avarice of the nobility in apportioning to themselves the most and the best of the land in certain countries is as nothing compared with the attitude of the white races toward those of a different hue." Japan, while allied with two white groups—Germany and Italy—seems to be using its present associates quite conveniently in its program of expansion. History shows that Japan harbors the same race hatreds against its present allies but the cunning militarists that now pilot Japan's destiny see wisdom of launching its "color war against the white man when he

NAACP PLEDGES U. S. LOYALTY FOR 13,000,000 LOYAL NEGRO AMERICANS

STATEMENT OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE:

Though thirteen million American Negroes have, more often than not, been denied democracy, we are American citizens and will, as in every war, give unqualified support to the protection of our country. At the same time, we shall not abate one iota our struggle for full citizenship rights here in the United States. We will fight for our country, but at the same time, demand the right to fight as equals in every branch of our country's military, naval and aviation service.

WALTER WHITE
EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

Time
Chicago, Illinois
Black Division

DEC 29 1941

For the first time in World War II, Negro soldiers will have a division of their own. At Fort Huachuca, near Phoenix, Ariz., where 6,500 black troops of the 25th and 368th infantry regiments are stationed, plans are being made to accommodate an extra 11,300 soldiers. The new division, which will be six months in formation, will be set up along triangular lines, include three infantry regiments, quartermaster, medical and engineering battalions, artillery and service units. It will probably be staffed by white officers, as most Negro outfits are today. Since there is no Negro officer* with the major general's rank that is required to head a division, its commander will certainly be white.

DEC 29 1941

Many a Negro was hopeful that the new division would be given a better chance to show its stuff than regular black units were given in World War I. Only a few Negro regulars were sent to France. Most of the men of the 92nd and 93rd Divisions—the only two Negro divisions of World War I—were National Guardsmen and draftees.

The new division, 17,000 strong, will include more blacks than there were in the whole Army at the outset of World War II. But it will take in barely one-sixth of the 115,197 Negroes in the Army. The blacks are expected soon to have as many men in khaki as they had in World War I, when their top strength was 415,000.

DEC 29 1941

Already many Negro troops have been given World War II assignments. One regiment is busy guarding New York City; another contingent is patrolling railroad property in Connecticut; and Negro Coast Artillery men are watching over Philadelphia.

* Ranking Negro officer is 64-year-old Brigadier General Benjamin Oliver Davis who, although past retirement age, has been kept in service by Franklin Roosevelt because he is an able soldier and a fine good-will ambassador for 13,000,000 U.S. Negroes.

Spaulding Says We Will Profit in This War

DEC 20 1941

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — "We are going to have an opportunity to fight more for our rights in this war," C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, Durham, stated in an address before the State Grand Lodge of Masons here on Tuesday.

"I am not surprised that we are in the war," the speaker stated, "for ever since that last war the races have been getting further apart. But this time, it will mean something very tangible for us to send our sons to fight for democracy, and we must succeed in view of all the discrimination we have faced.

Too Many Churches

"As a race, we must get to our places. We have too many churches and we are too little inclined to save. We must wake up and come to our senses. Horse sense went out with horses; what we need now is to get some automobile sense," the speaker averred.

DEC 20 1941

Lauding Governor Broughton of North Carolina as a broad-minded individual, Mr. Spaulding pointed out that he is glorified when compared with the tyrannical Governor Talmadge of Georgia.

Need More Training

A capacity audience heard the insurance executive as he concluded his remarks by stating that colored Americans must give more attention to the doctrines of Booker T. Washington and devote more time and effort to vocational training.

Text Of Roosevelt's Speech

The sudden criminal attacks perpetrated by the Japanese in the Pacific provide the climax of a decade of international immorality.

Powerful and resourceful gangsters have banded together to make war upon the whole human race. Their challenge has now been flung at the United States of America. The Japanese have treacherously violated the longstanding peace between us. Many American soldiers and sailors have been killed by enemy action. American ships have been sunk. American airplanes have been destroyed.

DEC 10 1941

The Congress and the people of the United States have accepted that challenge.

U. S. Battling For Freedom

Together with other free peoples, we are now fighting to maintain our right to live among our world neighbors in freedom and in common decency, without fear of assault.

I have prepared the full record of our past relations with Japan, and it will be submitted to the Congress. It begins with the visit of Commodore Perry to Japan eighty-eight years ago. It ends with the visit of two Japanese emissaries to the secretary of state last Sunday, an hour after Japanese forces had loosed their bombs and machine guns against our flag, our forces and our citizens.

I can say with utmost confidence that no Americans today or a thousand years hence, need feel anything but pride in our patience and our efforts through all the years toward achieving a peace in the Pacific which would be fair and honorable to every nation, large or small. And no honest person, today or a thousand years hence, will be able to suppress a sense of indignation and horror at the treachery committed by the military dictators of Japan, under the very shadow of the flag of peace borne by their special envoys in our midst.

All World A Battlefield

The course that Japan has followed for the past ten years in Asia has paralleled the course of Hitler and Mussolini in Europe and Africa. Today, it has become far more than a parallel. It is collaboration so well calculated that all the continents of the world, and all the oceans, are now considered by the Axis strategists as one gigantic battlefield.

In 1931, Japan invaded Manchukuo—without warning.
In 1935, Italy invaded Ethiopia—without warning.
In 1938, Hitler occupied Austria—without warning.
In 1939, Hitler invaded Czechoslovakia—without warning.
Later in 1939, Hitler invaded Poland—without warning.
In 1940, Hitler invaded Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—without warning.
In 1940, Italy attacked France and later Greece—without warning.
In 1941, the Axis powers attacked Jugoslavia and Greece and they dominated the Balkans—without warning.
In 1941, Hitler invaded Russia—without warning.
And now has attacked Malaya and Thailand—and the United States—without warning.
It is all of one pattern.

All Citizens Are Partners

We are now in this war. We are all in it—all the way. Every single man, woman and child is a partner in the most tremendous undertaking of our American history. We must share together the bad news and the good news, the defeats and the victories—the changing fortunes of war.

So far, the news has all been bad. We have suffered a serious set-back in Hawaii. Our forces in the Philippines, which include the brave people of that commonwealth, are taking punishment, but are defending themselves vigorously. The reports from Guam and Wake and Midway Islands are still confused, but we must be prepared for the announcement that all these three outposts have been seized.

The casualty lists of these first few days will undoubtedly be large. I deeply feel the anxiety of all families of the men in our armed forces and the relatives of people in cities which have been bombed. I can only give them my solemn promise that they will get news just as quickly as possible.

DEC 10 1941

Public To Be Given Facts

This government will put its trust in the stamina of the American people, and will give the facts to the public as soon as two conditions have been fulfilled; first, that the information has been definitely and officially confirmed; and, second, that the release of the information at the time it is received will not prove valuable to the enemy directly or indirectly.

Most earnestly I urge my countrymen to reject all rumors. These ugly little hints of complete disaster fly thick and fast in war-time. They have to be examined and appraised.

As an example, I can tell you frankly that until further surveys are made, I have not sufficient information to state the exact damage which has been done to our naval vessels at Pearl Harbor. Admittedly the damage is serious. But no one can say how serious, until we know how much of this damage can be repaired and how quickly the necessary repairs can be made.

I cite as another example a statement made on Sunday night that a Japanese carrier had been located and sunk off the Canal Zone. And when you hear statements that are attributed to what they call "an authoritative source," you can be reasonably sure that under these war circumstances the "authoritative source" was not any person in authority.

Enemy Starts Rumors

Many rumors and reports which we now hear originate with enemy sources. For instance, today the Japanese are claiming that as a result of their one action against Hawaii they have gained naval supremacy in the Pacific. This is an old trick of propaganda which has been used innumerable times by the Nazis. The purposes of such fantastic claims are, of course, to spread fear and confusion among us, and to goad us into revealing military information which our enemies are desperately anxious to obtain.

Our government will not be caught in this obvious trap—and neither will our people.

It must be remembered by each and every one of us that our free and rapid communication must be greatly restricted in war-time. It is not possible to receive full, speedy, accurate reports from distant areas of combat. This is particularly true where naval operations are concerned. For in these days of the marvels of radio is it often impossible for the commanders of various units to report their activities by radio, for the very simple reason that this information would become available to the enemy, and would disclose their position and their plan of defense or attack.

DEC 10 1941

Information May Be Delayed

Of necessity there will be delays in officially confirming or denying reports of operations but we will not hide facts from the country if we know the facts and if the enemy will not be aided by their disclosure.

To all newspapers and radio stations—all those who reach the eyes and ears of the American people—I say this: You have a most grave responsibility to the nation now and for the duration of this war.

If you feel that your government is not disclosing enough of the truth, you have every right to say so. But—in the absence of all the facts, as revealed by official sources—you have no right to deal out unconfirmed reports in such a way as to make people believe they are gospel truth.

Every citizen, in every walk of life, shares this same responsibility. The lives of our soldiers and sailors—the whole future of this nation—depend upon the manner in which each and every one of us fulfills his obligation to our country.

U. S. Speeds Rearming

Now a word about the recent past—and the future. A year and a half has elapsed since the fall of France, when the whole world first realized the mechanized might which the Axis nations had been building for so many years. America has used that year and a half to great advantage. Knowing that the attack might reach us in all too short a time, we immediately began greatly to increase our industrial strength and our capacity to meet the demands of modern warfare.

DEC 10 1941

Precious months were gained by sending vast quantities of our war material to the nations of the world still able to resist Axis aggression. Our policy rested on the fundamental truth that the defense of any country resisting Hitler or Japan was in the long run the defense of our own country. That policy has been justified. It has given us time, invaluable time, to build our American asesmbly lines of production.

Assembly lines are now in operation. Others are being rushed to completion. A steady stream of tanks and planes, of guns and ships, of shells and equipment—that is what these eighteen months have given us.

But it is all only a beginning of what has to be done. We must be set to face a long war against crafty and powerful bandits. The attack at Pearl Harbor can be repeated at any one of many points in both oceans and along both our coast lines and against all the rest of the hemisphere.

War Will Be Long And Hard

It will not only be a long war, it will be a hard war. That is the basis on which we now lay all our plans. That is the yardstick by which we measure what we shall need and demand; money, materials, doubled and quadrupled production—ever-increasing. The production must be not only for our own army and navy and air forces. It must reinforce the other armies and navies and air forces fighting the Nazis and the war lords of Japan throughout the Americas and the world.

I have been working today on the subject of production. Your government has decided on two broad policies.

The first is to speed up all existing production by working on a seven-day week basis in every war industry, including the production of essential raw materials.

The second policy, now being put into form, is to rush additions to the capacity of production by building more new plants, by adding to old plants, and by using the many smaller plants for war needs.

Production Now Well Organized

Over the hard road of the past months, we have at times met obstacles and difficulties, divisions and disputes, indifference and callousness. That is now all past—and, I am sure, forgotten.

DEC 10 1941

The fact is that the country now has an organization in Washington built around men and women who are recognized experts in their own fields. I think the country knows that the people who are actually responsible in each and every one of these many fields are pulling together with a teamwork that has never before been excelled.

On the road ahead there lies hard work — gruelling work—day and night, every hour and every minute.

I was about to add that ahead there lies sacrifice for all of us.

But it is not correct to use that word. The United States does not consider it a sacrifice to do all one can, to give one's best to our nation, when the nation is fighting for its existence and its future life.

Not A Sacrifice To Join Army

It is not a sacrifice for any man, old or young, to be in the Army or the Navy of the United States. Rather it is a privilege.

It is not a sacrifice to do without many things to which we are accustomed if the national defense calls for doing so.

A review this morning leads me to the conclusion that at present we shall not have to curtail the normal articles of food. There is enough food for all of us and enough left over to send to those who are fighting on the side with us.

There will be a clear and definite shortage of metals which during the past year have gone into articles for civilian use. We shall have to give up many things entirely.

I am sure that the people in every part of the nation are prepared in their individual living to win this war. I am sure they will cheerfully help to pay a large part of its financial cost while it goes on. I am sure they will cheerfully give up those material things of many kinds for civilian use, for the very good reason that in our increased program we shall need for war purposes more than half of that portion of the principal

I am sure that they will retain all those

DEC 10 1941

No Result But Victory!

I repeat that the United States can accept no result save victory, final and complete. Not only must the shame of Japanese treachery be wiped out, but the sources of international brutality, wherever they exist, must be absolutely and finally broken.

In my message to the Congress yesterday I said that we "will make very certain that this form of treachery shall never endanger us again." In order to achieve that certainty, we must begin the great task that is before us by abandoning once and for all the illusion that we can ever again isolate ourselves from the rest of humanity.

In these past few years—and, most violently, in the past few days—we have learned a terrible lesson.

It is our obligation to our dead—it is our sacred obligation to their children and our children—that we must never forget what we have learned.

And what we all have learned is this:

There is no such thing as security for any nation—or any individual—in a world ruled by the principles of gangsterism.

There is no such thing as impregnable defense against powerful aggressors who sneak up in the dark and strike without warning.

Distance Doesn't Mean Safety

We have learned that our ocean-girt hemisphere is not immune from severe attack—that we can not measure our safety in terms of miles on any map.

We may acknowledge that our enemies have performed a brilliant feat of deception, perfectly timed and executed with great skill. It was a thoroughly dishonorable deed, but we must face the fact that modern warfare as conducted in the Nazi manner is a dirty business. We don't like it—we didn't want to get in it—but we are in it and we're going to fight it with everything we've got.

I do not think any American has any doubt of our ability to administer proper punishment to the perpetrators of these crimes.

Your government knows that for weeks Germany has been telling Japan that if Japan did not attack the United States, Japan would not share in dividing the spoils with Germany when peace came. She was promised by Germany that if she came in she would receive the complete and perpetual control of the whole of the Pacific area—and that means not only the Far East, not only all of the islands in the Pacific, but also a stranglehold on the West Coast of North, Central and South America.

Germany, Japan Plan Jointly

We also know that Germany and Japan are conducting their military and naval operations in accordance with a joint plan. That plan considers all peoples and nations which are not helping the Axis powers as common enemies of each and every one of the Axis powers.

That is their simple and obvious grand strategy. That is why the American people must realize that it can be matched only with similar grand strategy. We must realize for example that Japanese successes against the United States in the Pacific are helpful to German operations in Libya; that any German successes against the Caucasus is inevitably an assistance to Japan in her operations against the Dutch East Indies; that a German attack against Algiers or Morocco opens the way to a German attack against South America.

On the other side of the picture, we must learn to know that guerrilla warfare against the Germans in Siberia helps us; that a successful Russian offensive against the Germans helps us; and that British successes on land or sea in any part of the world strengthen our hands.

Germany Against All America

Remember always that Germany and Italy represents. will be safe for our children. We consider themselves at war with the United States at this moment just as much as they consider themselves at war with Britain and Russia. And Germany puts all the other republics of the Americas into the category of enemies. The people of the hemisphere can be honored by that.

The true goal we seek is far above and beyond the ugly field of battle. When we resort to force, as now we must, we are determined that this force shall be directed toward ultimate good as well as against immediate evil. We Americans are not destroyers—we are builders.

We are now in the midst of a war, not for conquest, not for vengeance, but for a world in which this nation, and all that this nation represents, will b esafe for our children. We expect to eliminate the danger from Japan, but it would serve us ill if we accomplished that and found that the rest of the world was dominated by Hitler and Mussolini.

We are going to win the war and we are going to win the peace that follows.

And in the dark hours of this day—and through dark days that may be yet to come—we will know that the vast majority of the members of the human race are on our side. Many of them are fighting with us. All of gangster nations are on the rampage, that them are praying for us. For, in representing our cause, we represent theirs as well — our hope and their hope for liberty under God.
